Christmas lights decorated the Haven Hospice Attic Resale Store where 6-year-old Natalie spent painstaking moments glancing over the tables of toys and presents, unsure what to select for her mother, brother and sister.

To Natalie, her favorite part was that she got to pick out, by herself, toys for her siblings. The Haven Hospice Attic Resale Store fifth annual Kids' Night, held on Thursday, allowed children to select several gifts for family members free of charge. Volunteers helped the children select the gifts, then wrapped the presents with the paper of the child's choice. Santa also visited Haven Hospice Attic, where he posed for pictures with individual children and families.

"It was a great night," said Haven Hospice employee Courtney Quirie. "The kids took great care picking out the perfect gifts. They were so thoughtful. I think we'll have some Christmas trees that will have presents under them."

Children took their turn walking with Haven Hospice volunteers past the presents, glancing over the items available. Mary Kay lotion, military action figures, Christmas-themed platters, jewelry, stuffed animals — the rows of options seemed endless to many of the children trying to select the perfect gift. A young girl, Lilly, grabbed a pink clipboard labeled "#1 Mom" and

An oncologist who practiced in both Lake City and Gainesville is facing disciplinary actions unanimously approved by the Florida Board of Medicine during a meeting Dec. 6.

Paul Joseph Schilling, M.D., one of the founding members of the Community Cancer Center of North Florida, delivered doses of radiation as part of an endobronchial brachytherapy treatment to the incorrect lung of a patient, according to an administrative complaint filed by the Florida Department of Health in June, 2011.

The Florida Board of Medicine agreed to issue a letter of concern impose a $7,500 fine on Schilling. In addition, the board required he take brachytherapy quality assurance and risk management classes for a minimum of five hours each.

During a "dummy run" procedure for the treatment beginning March 9, 2011, a safety mechanism did not deliver treatment to the patient, named "W.R.," due to a kink in the catheter, the complaint said.

According to the documents, Schilling was notified about the incorrect placement of the delivery catheter in the patient's right lung. However, he instructed a member of his staff to circumvent the kink-detection safety mechanism by splicing an additional segment of catheter to the delivery catheter, the complaint said.

Two days later, high doses of radiation were directed to the right lung instead of the left lung, as originally intended,

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

Final goodbye to those who died in 2013

Both were mold-breaking former heads of state who reshaped their own countries and the world. Nelson Mandela, revered for his efforts to end apartheid in South Africa, and Margaret Thatcher, the "Iron Lady" who imposed her will on Britain's politics and economy, were among notables who died in 2013.

Mandela, who died Dec. 5 at age 95, was considered a master of forgiveness. He became South Africa's first black president after spending 27 years in prison for championing equality against the white-minority government, and he inspired the world by seeking a relatively peaceful transition of power.

As Britain's only female prime minister, Thatcher ruled for 11 years and showed an unshakable faith in the free market, leaving behind a leaner government and more prosperous nation. While she had fierce critics, praise for her leadership came in from around the world when she died in April at 87.

Political figures

Other political figures who died this year included Venezuelan leader Hugo Chavez, former Italian premier Giulio Andreotti, Poland's ex-prime minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, France's Pierre Mauroy, and Hungary's Gyula Horn, prominent mayors of New York and Beijing, Ed Koch and Chen Xitong, and former U.S. Senators Frank Lautenberg and Harry F. Byrd.

Science and technology

Also dying in 2013 was a man whose invention you may hold as you read this. Doug Engelbart, who died in July, invented the computer mouse and developed other technology that changed the way people work, play and communicate. Others from the world of science and technology who died this year included the Manhattan Project's Donald

F. Hornig, Nobel Prize winners Frederick Sanger, Robert Edwards and Kenneth Wilson, and audio pioneers Ray Dolby and Amar Bose and astronauts C. Gordon Fullerton and Scott Carpenter.

Entertainment

In the arena of arts and entertainment, this year saw the death of one who was hugely influential though not technically an entertainer at all. Roger Ebert, who died in April, was America's most popular film critic, telling audiences which movies to see or avoid with his famous thumbs-up or thumbs-down reviews.

Others from the entertainment world who died this year included actors James Gandolfini, Jane Kean, Annette Funicello, Jean Stapleton, Bonnie Franklin, Cory Monteith, Frank Thornton and Conrad Bain, as well as the swimming star Esther Williams and the Bollywood villain Pran. Musicians included George Jones, Van Cliburn, Lou Reed, Donald Byrd, Ray Manzarek, Bebo Valdes, Mindy McCready, Chrissy Amphle and Chris Kelly. Among others: writer Tom Clancy, director Nagisa Oshima and ballerina Maria Tallchief.

Grandfather grazed by bullet

WESLEY CHAPEL — Deputies say a Florida man was grazed by a bullet while driving with his 13-year-old granddaughter.

The Pasco County Sheriff's Office reports the 62-year-old grandfather was driving in Wesley Chapel Wednesday when he felt something graze his forehead above his left eye.

A preliminary investigation indicates a stray bullet entered through the man's open car window and grazed him, causing a superficial wound. The bullet then hit the passenger side window, passing near his granddaughter's head. She was not injured.

Investigators believe the bullet traveled a considerable distance and have searched the area but not found a suspect.

Malpractice rule won't be adopted

TALLAHASSE — The Supreme Court won't adopt a rule to reflect a new law that creates restrictions on doctors testifying during medical malpractice trials.

The court issued its opinion Thursday, saying the language in the bill would have a chilling effect on the ability to find expert witnesses in malpractice cases.

Groups representing doctors and lawyers are already disputing what the opinion means.

Florida Medical Association lawyer Jeff Scott said it has no impact on the law, while former Florida Justice Association president Gary Farmer said the opinion means the court struck down the law.

The opinion wasn't a response to a legal challenge to the law, but rather affirming a Florida Bar

Man jailed after losing $100

DELAND — The loser of a card game is in jail after deputies say he tried to rob and shoot the man who had just won $100.

The Daytona Beach News Journal reports 22-year-old Jeremy Addison was arrested Monday following an incident at a DeLand park. He remained in the Volusia County Jail Thursday, facing attempted first-degree murder charges.

Police say the victim told police he won $100 from Addison. Addison then quit the game, which his friends continued playing. When the victim got up to leave the pavilion, he was struck in the back of the head.

The victim told police Addison pointed a gun at him. He said Addison told him to "give me the $100 and I won't kill you." He also threatened the victim's family if he called for help.

Police arrested Addison on Monday in the same park where the incident occurred.

No attorney was listed for Addison. His bail is listed at $75,000.

Deputies fatally shoot man

ST. AUGUSTINE — A north Florida sheriff's deputy fatally shot an armed man during a disturbance at a home in St. Augustine.

Several St. Johns County Sheriff's deputies arrived at the home Wednesday afternoon after someone from inside called 911. They say 64-year-old Rodney Wayne Stevens died.

Local newspapers report the deputies saw a man, who then went back inside the house.

Sheriff's Commander Chuck Mulligan says multiple deputies were at the scene and they haven't determined how many fired or how many rounds were shot. No deputies were injured.

Stevens had three outstanding warrants for grand theft auto, felony battery and tampering with a witness.

Budget peace breaks out

— after Speaker Boehner's tough talk

By DAVID ESPO

AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Battle-fatigued and suddenly bipartisan, the House voted Thursday night to ease across-the-board federal spending cuts and head off future government shutdowns, acting after Speaker John Boehner unleashed a stinging attack on tea party-aligned conservative groups campaigning for the measure's defeat.

The legislation, backed by the White House, cleared on a vote of 332-94, with lopsided majorities of Republicans and Democrats alike voting in favor. Final passage is expected next week in the Senate.

U.S. Rep. Ted Yoho (R-Gainesville) voted in favor of the bill.

"The American people are tired of Washington dysfunction," he said in a prepared statement after the vote. "Legislating from crisis to crisis has caused a trillion dollar debt and an acceptance of the status quo. This budget resolution offers a path to reduce the deficit and cut spending in a responsible way. Getting back to a regular budgeting process allows us the opportunity to cut spending and root out wasteful programs. I look forward to breaking through the partisan log-jam and doing what the American people sent us up here to do—bring back the greatness of America. While not a perfect bill, this is an important first step in bringing our nation back from fiscal calamity."

The events in the House gave a light coating of bipartisan cooperation to the end of a bruising year of divided government — memorable for a partial government shutdown, flirtation with an unprecedented Treasury default and gridlock on immigration, gun control and other items on President Barack Obama's second-term agenda.

Obama's press secretary, Jay Carney, hailed the vote, saying it "shows Washington can and should stop governing by crisis and both sides can work together to get things done."

Minutes after the budget action, the House approved a broad military policy bill that aims to curb sexual assaults, cover combat pay for U.S. forces and fund new aircraft and ships. That vote, too, was lopsided, 350-69, sending the bill to the Senate, which plans to adjourn for the year next week.

In the end, the budget debate in the House was tame by comparison with Boehner's criticism of Republican-favoring outside groups that at times have been more of an obstacle to him than Democrats.

"I think they're misleading their followers," the Republican speaker said of the groups, whom he pointedly also blamed for last fall's politically damaging partial government shutdown. "I think they're pushing our members in places where they don't want to be. And frankly, I just think that they've lost all credibility" by opposing legislation before the details are known."

He mentioned no organizations by name, although it appeared he was referring to Heritage Action and Club for Growth, both of which have sought to push the House further to the right than the Republican leadership has been willing to go.

Rep. Paul Ryan, R-Wis., a chief GOP architect of the deal, made the conservatives' case for support. The measure "reduces the deficit by $23 billion. It does not raise taxes and it cuts spending in a smarter way," said the Budget Committee's chairman, whose handiwork could well be challenged in the 2016 Republican presidential primaries.

The second-ranking Democrat, Rep. Steny Hoyer of Maryland, joined other party leaders in swinging behind the measure, even though he noted that he represents 62,000 federal workers and said future government employees will pay higher pensions costs because of the bill. "This agreement is better than the alternative" of ever deeper across-the-board cuts, he said.

The agreement, negotiated by Ryan and Democratic Sen. Patty Murray of Washington — and endorsed by the White House — would set overall spending levels for the current budget year and the one that begins on Oct. 1, 2014. That straightforward action would probably eliminate the possibility of another government shutdown and reduce the opportunity for the periodic brinkmanship of the kind that has flourished in the current three-year era of divided government.

The measure would erase $63 billion in across-the-board cuts set for January and early 2015 on domestic and defense programs, leaving about $140 billion in reductions in place. On the other side of the budget ledger, it projects savings totaling $85 billion over the coming decade, enough to show a deficit reduction of about $23 billion over the 10-year period.

The cuts would be replaced with savings generated from dozens of sources. Among them are higher airline security fees, curbs on the pension benefits of new federal workers and additional costs for corporations whose pensions are guaranteed by the federal government. The measure also would slow the annual cost-of-living increase in benefits for military retirees under the age of 62.

Scott's fee proposal picking up support

By BRANDON LARRABEE

THE NEWS SERVICE OF FLORIDA

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Rick Scott's plan to lower vehicle-registration fees by $401 million picked up steam ahead of its announcement Thursday, gaining measured support from Senate President Don Gaetz and, somewhat sarcastically, from Scott's chief rival in his bid for re-election next year.

The proposal, which Scott was set to unveil Thursday afternoon in Tampa, would roll back the fees to register a "typical automobile" by $25.05, from $71.85 to $46.80 — where they stood before a 2009 increase that was part of an effort to shore up the state's finances in the wake of the economic recession.

The initiative is part of a larger, $500 million tax-and-fee-cut package that Scott has promised in his last legislative session before facing voters in November. A white paper by Scott's office said more details on the remainder of the cuts would come later.

Meeting with reporters Thursday morning for a breakfast, Gaetz, R-Niceville, threw his support behind some form of reduction in fees for motorists. He pointed out that the Senate approved a smaller proposal last year from Senate Appropriations Chairman Joe Negron, R-Stuart.

Negron's bill promised to roll back the fees by $12 a vehicle in exchange for doing away with a tax credit for insurance companies.

The Department of Health said Schilling committed medical malpractice by failing to recognize the delivery catheter was in the right lung, failed to recognize that the delivery catheter was kinked, inappropriately directed his treatment team to circumvent kink-detection safety equipment and delivered high doses of radiation to the wrong location.

Steve Neal, the current manager of Community Cancer Center, said Schilling retired for good following the incident and has not practiced medicine since.

Community Cancer Center has offices in Gainesville and Lake City.

showed it to Haven Hospice employee Stormy Palmer-Porter. After asking about the words on the pink board, Lilly said, "Can I get this for myself?"

Even though Palmer-Porter smiled and told Lilly she could, the young girl placed the item back before selecting two gifts for her brother. While the non-profit encouraged children to select only three gifts, the volunteers never told the children they couldn't have more than three. By the end of the night, the table was still full of available presents.

"It's fun," Palmer-Porter said. "It's wonderful. Not just the little ones, but the parents too are so grateful... I go home feeling the warm-and-fuzzies. I've seen a lot of children who really want to pick something for themselves, but then counted family members. So they put that aside to make sure they get something for their mom or their brother."

Throughout the store, children munched on chocolate chip cookies while waiting to sit on Santa's lap. They all clasped their wrapped presents close, excitedly teasing siblings with hints for what would be placed under the Christmas tree.

"Don't tell me," one young boy, Christopher, said to his sister.

Persistent, she excitedly asked, "But do you like?" He cut her off before she could reveal the secret clue.

Parents and siblings waited outside while the gifts were selected so that the Christmas presents remained a surprise, said Sharon Jackson, the manager of the Haven Hospice Attic. Usually the event draws around 80 children, but this year the store saw a smaller crowd than previous years.

To ensure the non-profit has an ample number of gifts, Haven Hospice sets items aside during the year to prepare for the event, as well as accepting monetary donations specifically to support Kids' Night.

"It's nice that somebody does something for the kids," said Rachel Graddy, who brought her daughter and several nephews to the event. "No one really ever thinks about how they feel. Most people are so wrapped up in going to town and doing. It's not about the gifts. It's about showing them love."

Her daughter, Skylar, picked gifts for her younger relatives, instead of using the night to get something out for herself. Her cousins — Walker and Login — used the night instead to get their family a present, but also a little something for themselves. Login picked two gifts for his family, but decided he really wanted a hobby horse.

"I was just excited to pick them," he said.

A row of volunteers spent the night wrapping gifts, including Wellborn resident Beanie Brooks. Brooks came prepared to spend the night with excited children, donning reindeer antlers and red jingle bells.

"I love seeing the kids," Brooks said. "They walk in that room, see all those presents and their eyes are like 'whoa, look at them all.'... It teaches them a little bit about giving."

through the affiliated agencies," she said. "The distribution of these funds is well thought out with funds available for allocation distributed after two full days of Admissions and Allocations Committee meetings with each of the agencies to ensure the funds are allocated to best meet current needs. Some of our small community agencies could not keep their doors open without the support of United Way funding. Most of the agencies use these community dollars as leverage for grants, multiplying your gift many times over. Our United Way agencies utilize community support and grant funds to contribute almost $13 million in services."

Dopp said the purpose of the luncheon was to provide campaign progress and hear some of the announcements of the company campaign accomplishments.

TIMCO Aviation Services speaker, Kevin Maupin, surprised the audience with his report noting Timco has reached 90 percent of its $35,000 goal, representing a 27 percent increase over last year.

In addition Pastor Alvin Baker, chair of the Suwannee Valley Long Term Recovery Committee, spoke of the work completed since Tropical Storm Debby hit the Suwannee Valley area and noted the committee's progress and the many repairs completed. He also stated there is not enough remaining resources to help those still in need in Columbia County and then he presented a check for $1,500 from his church, New Bethel Missionary Baptist Church.

of snow for snowball fights, snow angels and rides down hills of snow.

This year's event will feature multiple snow slides, 30 tons of snow, bounce houses, obstacle courses and slides, a rock climbing wall, live entertainment and food vendors.

Attendees will be able to visit with Santa Claus from 11 a.m. - 2 p.m.

Busy Bee B&B is the title sponsor for Snow Day 2013.

The Snow Day festivities will take place from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and the Christmas parade is set to begin at 6 p.m.

Decker said Busy Bee B&B will give away prizes throughout the day including cash, game consoles, electronics and scooters.

Bob Garner, Christmas parade chairman for the Lake City Rotary Club, who is responsible for the parade, said more than 70 entries have registered for the Christmas parade.

"There is an increase this year and we're up to 78 entries," he said.

Meally Jenkins, founder of the Christmas Dream Machine, will be the parade grand marshal.

The Christmas Dream Machine serves from 367 - 1,100 children annually by providing clothing and Christmas gifts. The agency is in its 25th year.

The Lake City Rotary Club has been responsible for hosting the parade the last three years. This year's parade theme is: "Miracle on Marion."

The parade starts at 6 p.m. and line-up will begin at 5 p.m. in the open lot near the corner of North West Washington Street and North West Hilton Avenue.

The parade will start on Marion Avenue near Washington Street and head south, ending at the DOT office near Clements Street and disperse at the Farmers Furniture Parking lot.

The parade will also have a "Best Float" competition. The judges will judge from the Lake City-Columbia County Chamber of Commerce office front porch.

"The winning float will have a donation made to the Christmas Dream Machine in its name," Garner said.

With Snow Day taking place in Olustee Park in downtown Lake City, several streets will be blocked off for a majority of the day.

ANOTHER VIEW

From 30,000 feet: Can you hear me now?

This week federal regulators began the process of removing the 22-year-old prohibition on in-flight cell phone calls now that all the technical objections have been satisfied.

Federal Communications Commission chairman said the current ban is “outdated and restrictive” even though he publicly admits to qualms about lifting the ban. The public also has mixed feelings about the ban.

An Associated Press-GfK poll released Wednesday found that 48 percent of Americans oppose allowing the use of cell phones while aloft and just 19 percent support it. The opposition grows the more the respondents fly. Among those who take four or more flights a year, 78 percent want to keep the ban intact.

Passengers now freely use smart phones, notebooks and laptops, MP3 players and e-readers but these come with earpieces and don't require the user to talk to the device.

The greatest objection voiced to cell phones was being trapped next to a passenger carrying on a loud and long-winded conversation. In today's heavily booked flights there's little chance of changing seats.

Some passengers worried about fistfights at 30,000 feet when a passenger unwilling subjected to an annoying conversation reaches the breaking point, a major reason the largest union of flight attendants objects to the change.

The Wall Street Journal, in an effort to examine “in-flight phone etiquette,” suggest airlines might create “yakking and non-yakking sections” much like the old smoking and non-smoking sections.

House Transportation Committee chairman Bill Shuster, R-Pa., plans to introduce a bill prohibiting the calls and Rep. Tom Petri, R-Wis., says he will reintroduce a bill he proposed several years ago when the issue first arose, the “Halting Airplane Noise to Give Us Peace Act.”

Federal regulators are inclined to allow the airlines to make their policies on cell phone use. So far, according to AP, Delta is the only airline to state explicitly it won't allow in-flight cell phone use. The others are “studying” the issue. But the pattern has been that when one airline takes away a passenger amenity the others soon follow.

And the airlines may find the prospect of charging passengers extra to use their cell phones irresistible.

Want to be liked?

Do you sometimes think everybody loves you? Or, do you sometimes think nobody loves you? Either way, you're probably wrong! Whoever you are, there will be some who will like you, and some who don't. How is it that we come to like or dislike people, and others come to like or dislike us? Is there anything you can do about how well you're liked?

Psychologists who have researched the issues say “yes,” there are things you can do. The research generally suggests that we tend to like or dislike certain people or traits, but most of our liking for others is a learning process. Mostly, we like certain people because we learn to like them!

The primary learning process for “liking” is called classical conditioning.

Here's how it works. Classical conditioning occurs when a new or significant stimulus is paired with a positive or a pleasant thing—an object, an activity, or through our senses of sight, hearing or touch. Some of these could be a pleasant environment like the beach or a party, music we enjoy, pleasant or comfortable surroundings, or any positive circumstances.

So, when we meet or spend time with a person, all the background stimuli going on at the time tends to attach, or to become associated with, our feelings about that person.

The more good experiences, activities, or interests we come to associate with someone, the more

Robert Denny
Bob.Denny8@gmail.com

we tend to like them.

What does that mean for you? When you meet someone, or when you get together with someone you already know, it turns out that the more pleasant or positive interests you share (like pleasant music or sounds, good surroundings, and good conversation or laughter you share) the more liking there will be for each other!

Can just knowing this help you with your relationships? People want to like you! (Most of them do, that is!) I like to believe, “most folks will like you, unless you give them a reason not to.” How can you increase the chances that they will like you, and that you will like them?

- Make a good first impression. Research shows that we form a basic opinion, a like or dislike for a person, in the first seconds after meeting! Smile. Keep eye contact. Say their name. Linger a while. Show an interest in this person. Who knows? They might turn out to be a great friend, someone who may be an important part of your life!
- I find that most people can be very interesting, if you get to know them and give them a chance. Everyone has a story. Find some interests you share. Ask questions. You won't know if you don't ask!

- Did you find interests you have in common? Can you get together and share your interests, things you both like to do? Join with them.

- Be available. People tend to “grow on you.” Familiarity breeds liking. Did you know, that most people met their mates in situations where they see each other a lot, like at work, school, or a social setting? The more you see them in pleasant situations, the better. That's one reason that people with a lot of exposure, in the “lime-light,” become popular or even famous.

- Show them the appreciation and respect that you feel. Find agreement and cooperation, and also accept, understand and appreciate your differences. Instead of arguing, find common agreement. Arguing really shows that you don't respect or appreciate their attitudes or opinions. Do you really think you can win an argument and have the other person like you more?

- Give it time. Friendships and loving relationships, like fine wine, sweeten with time. For me, there's nothing better than a fine loving relationship!

Our letter to the hospital board

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is a letter sent Dec. 2 by the Lake City Reporter to the Lake Shore Hospital Authority asking the board to review its Meeting Rules and Procedures and alter them to allow the public to take photographs during public meetings, in accordance with Florida's open meetings law. To recap, the board discussed the policy at its Monday night meeting and voted unanimously to allow non-disruptive photography during meetings.

Mr. Jack Berry,
Executive Director
Dr. Waseem Khan,
Chairman of the Board
Lake Shore Hospital Authority
Lake City, Florida

Dear Mr. Berry and Dr. Kahn,

We respectfully request that you review and revise the Lake Shore Hospital Authority Meeting Rules and Procedures to omit Item 6, regarding the ban on photography during board meetings.

We understand the board's intention to eliminate disruptions and maintain a professional meeting environment, and we fully support this goal. However, photography is not an inherently disruptive activity. Under the protection of Florida's open meetings law, we have been reassured the public's right to photograph public meetings is protected.

Item 3(a) of your Meeting Rules gives the chair authority “to conduct meetings in an orderly and civil manner.” We agree that no action during a meeting should be disruptive to the board's business or the public's right to listen attentively and properly participate in a public meeting.

We hope you will agree Item 3(a) sufficiently outlines a code of conduct for your meetings. We respectfully request you review and revise your Meeting Rules and Procedures to remove the ban on photography at your public meetings, within the guidelines of civility and non-disruptive behavior you already have in place.

We appreciate your willingness to listen to our position this evening and we ask for quick action to resolve this matter.

Thank you all for your service to our community through the Lake Shore Hospital Authority.

Sincerely,
Robert Bridges
Editor

The cradle or cross?

Refuse to celebrate a Christmas without Christ.

"Thou shall call His name Jesus; for He will save His people from their sins." — Matthew 1:21b

This is the season when Christendom will stage the greatest celebration of the year. It will be to supposedly celebrate the birthday of Jesus Christ. But in the great majority of the parties and gatherings the Guest of Honor is no where to be found. Instead of honoring the advent of this Man, the present-day demonstrations of Christmas are a disgrace to the One "that came to save His people from their sins." Could it be that we have forgotten why He was born? He came to die, to give His life a ransom for our sins. The birth of Christ is not the important event in the story of this Man. His birth was necessary to prepare Him for His substitutionary death on the cross. We therefore call upon you who are Christian to rally at the cross this advent season and leave the crowd to celebrate the manger.

May the coming weeks be a time of meditation and worship at Calvary, and let us refuse to carry on with the world which is celebrating a Christmas without Christ. Let us make this Christmas season the occasion for remembering not His of Me." Again, let me say, remember His death, not His birth. It is so sad, especially in this season, that God's own children forget about Him. Experiencing the Lord's Supper this time of the year should shock us into realizing how much He loves us and how much He is willing to forgive us for our neglect.

Everything that is important to God, the devil has tried to mess up. He took the birth of Christ and changed it into a party. He took baptism and changed it into a law. He took the resurrection and made it about commercialism and Easter eggs. He took the Lord's Supper and made it a ritual. It's all about remembering His death. So I call on you, when all the family and friends are together around the tree or the table, to pause and remember the cross. Remember not the baby in the manger, but the Christ of the cross who gave His life for each of us. My hope is if enough Christians share the message of the cross in this season some will come to know Him as their personal savior.

Let's be safe and really remember the reason for the season!

One of the things churches could do this Christmas is a communion service (Lord's Supper). Many will say "we do that every Sunday anyway." I don't mean do it as a ritual, but do it as Jesus intended it to be. The Lord's Supper is intended to be a memorial that was given, not to remind us of the birth, but what an infinite cost Jesus paid for our salvation. 1st Corinthians 11:24-25 commands us to "do this in remembrance of Me." Again, let me say, remember His death, not His birth. It is so sad, especially in this season, that God's own children forget about Him. Experiencing the Lord's Supper this time of the year should shock us into realizing how much He loves us and how much He is willing to forgive us for our neglect.

Defending your faith

Peter says: Suffer for the sake of righteousness

The Christians who were living in the regions of "Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia and Bithynia" (1 Peter 1:1) in the first century were suffering various kinds of persecutions because they were followers of Christ. Peter writes to encourage them to remain faithful regardless of what they must endure. Peter tells them they are blessed if they "suffer for the sake of righteousness" (1 Peter 3:14). He possibly uses a quote from Isaiah telling them to "not fear their [persecutor's] intimidation, and do not be troubled" (1 Peter 3:14).

Peter's next statement is worth our meditation. Peter tells his readers "sanctify Christ as Lord in your hearts, always being ready to make a defense to everyone who asks you to give an account for the hope that is in you, yet with gentleness and reverence and keep a good conscience so that in the thing in which you are slandered, those who revile your good behavior in Christ may be put to shame" (1 Peter 3:15, 16).

Peter seems to be saying to his readers that, instead of being intimidated, Christians should use the situation as an opportunity to tell people why Jesus is so important to them. One wonders as to whether or not Peter's personality is coming out when he makes this statement for Christians not to be intimidated. Looking at his life in Scripture, Peter

BIBLICAL MEDITATION

was not very often made afraid because of someone's threats.

It also seems that Peter is telling his readers that they should not be afraid of the threats of their persecutors. Jesus had taught Peter and the other apostles that they should not "fear those who kill the body, but are unable to kill the soul; but rather fear Him who is able to destroy both body and soul in hell" (Matthew 10:28). Christians should not be afraid of persecution because of their faith but rather they should be willing to defend their faith.

The idea that Peter wants his readers to grasp is rather unique. Instead of being afraid of their persecutor, Peter wants the Christians to attempt to give the persecutors some reasons why they should become Christians. Peter seems to be saying that the persecutors need to know why the Christian has such a "hope" in Jesus.

Only a Peter would suggest using such an opportunity to "evangelize" another person. Sharing your reasons for your faith with your persecutors would be a strange site to see. They want to "slander" you and you are trying to do something good for them. They want to harm you and you are trying to give them reasons, which if they apply to their life, will "save" their life.

Another thing which we may need to meditate upon is how much courage it will take to obey this command from Peter. What if the persecutor thinks the Christian is being a wise guy? What if the persecutor thinks the Christian is trying to make fun of him? What if the persecutor thinks the Christian has a "holier than thou attitude"? What if the persecutor thinks the Christian is trying to show how much Bible he knows? As a result of any of these thoughts, what if the persecutor makes life even more difficult for the Christian?

Think about the confidence the Christian must have to make such a "defense" for his hope. The timid or weak in faith would not be able to make such a defense. Maybe this is the reason why Peter added the phrase "with gentleness and reverence" to this command. Remember, Peter said give this defense to "everyone" regardless of how they feel about us.

In all our trials: 'God is not dead, nor does he sleep'

On Christmas Day, 1864, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow composed the poem, "I Heard the Bells on Christmas Day." This poem later became one of our best-loved Christmas carols. The poem tells of Longfellow's experience of hearing the church bells on Christmas day as they rang out "peace on earth, good will to men" during the darkest period of the Civil War. Still months away from Lee's surrender to Grant at the Appomattox Courthouse, and grieving the tragic death of his wife Fanny and the crippling war injury of his son Charles, Longfellow penned the second stanza of the poem, "And in despair I bowed my head/There is no peace on earth I said/For hate is strong and mocks the song/Of peace on earth, good will to men."

If that were the last verse in the song, it would indeed pronounce a bleak Christmas, not unlike how many may be feeling this year. Peace on earth and good will to men doesn't seem the prevalent theme to many facing unemployment, economic downturns, families separated by miles, death or divorce, and the uncertainty of the future. Yet, it was in his despair that Longfellow then heard the bells ring

"more loud and deep" proclaiming "God is not dead, nor doth He sleep/The wrong shall fail, the right prevail/With peace on earth, good will to men."

We need to be reminded of this truth during the Christmas season and perhaps we never see more clearly that when the trimmings are stripped away. My family has joined the ranks of many this season who are "scaling back" on our Christmas shopping and giving more to those in need; and yet the simplicity of this kind of Christmas really points us back to the baby in a manger some 2000 years ago.

Angels themselves sang the carols and invited a field full of shepherds who probably smelled a tad too much like their sheep, to celebrate the very first Christmas. This baby who was foretold hundreds of years before, in the greatest of detail: "For unto us a child is born, to us a son is given and the government shall be on his shoulders and he will be called Wonderful Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace."

Isaiah 9:6 reminds us that indeed God is not dead, nor does He sleep.

He left heaven to come to earth, all because our hearts really do matter.

"For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believes in Him shall not perish, but have everlasting life."

Historic label, religion collide

By CURT ANDERSON
AP Legal Affairs Writer

SUNNY ISLES BEACH — A simple, five-paragraph historic plaque on the front portico of an Orthodox Jewish temple in south Florida honors a 2004 gathering of Holocaust survivors, but it signifies much more. It's the linchpin of a federal court battle pitting a city's powers to designate historic buildings against the free exercise of religion.

The case of Temple B'nai Zion v. City of Sunny Isles Beach and its mayor, Norman Edelcup, makes claims of religious discrimination, government harassment and interference with property rights. The temple's president, Rabbi Aaron Lankry, wants to modify the structure — formerly a Lutheran church — to more properly benefit an Orthodox Jewish congregation.

The temple's lawsuit contends that the city conjured up the historic designation as a pretext to improperly prevent any changes to the temple. And, the lawsuit contends, much of the problem stems from a personal dispute between Lankry, Edelcup and other Jewish members of the city commission who left the temple after he arrived in 2004 as it moved from Conservative to the more strictly observant Orthodox Judaism.

Caught in the middle is a separate Orthodox congregation, Beit Rambam, which also worships at the temple and has no issues with the historic designation. B'nai Zion has filed a separate lawsuit against that congregation, claiming it is violating terms of its lease.

The main case was originally dismissed by a Miami federal judge, but the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals earlier this year overturned that ruling. The appeals judges sent the case back for a decision on the temple's claim that the city historic designation was done for discriminatory reasons and interferes with the congregation's religious practices.

The case is one of several brought by religious organizations challenging local laws and ordinances around the country under a 2000 federal law known as the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act. The law bars state and local governments from imposing a "substantial burden" through land use regulations on the free exercise of religion, unless the government can show it has a compelling interest.

The U.S. Supreme Court has never defined "substantial burden" in these types of cases, leading to different rulings in different parts of the country.

In South Florida, B'nai Zion attorney Daniel Wallach said Lankry has one overarching goal in pursuing the lawsuit, originally filed in 2010.

"He wants the historic designation removed from the property. It inhibits the temple's growth. It reduces the value of the property," Wallach said. "That is a burden on his property rights."

Former Miami U.S. Attorney Kendall Coffey, who represents Sunny Isles Beach and its mayor, said rather than religious freedom, the major concern of B'nai Zion is how the historic designation affects the property's value. Coffey noted that Edelcup and several other city officials involved in the decision are also Jewish.

"They are alleging anti-Jewish discrimination on the part of public officials, the vast majority of whom are Jewish," Coffey said. "It's far-fetched, although the plaintiff (B'nai Zion) has an obvious financial motive."

Seventh-day Adventist Church celebrates 75 years of service

From staff reports

The Seventh-day Adventist Church was born out of the Great Awakening, related to the Millerite movement of the 1840s when thousands of Christians searched for greater understanding of biblical prophecy. Among these believers was a group in New England that rediscovered the seventh-day Sabbath. They chose the name "Seventh-day" which refers to the biblical Sabbath, Saturday, ordained by God at Creation. "Adventist" means we're looking for the return of Jesus Christ.

In 1863, the new Sabbath keepers officially organized into a denomination with 3,500 members worshipping in 125 churches. The church continued to grow and expand throughout North America. In 1938, a small group of believers began to meet, and established the first Seventh-day Adventist Church Company in Lake City.

The group of believers had a mission to evangelize the Lake City community and was officially voted by the Florida Conference of Seventh-day Adventists Executive Committee as a church on February 13, 1950. The founding members were Clarence and Melba Tice, Ms. Eula Markham, Ms. Nora Young, and Ms. Zola Blanton.

Today, the Lake City Seventh-day Adventist Church celebrates 5 years in their new location at 148 SW Seminole Terrace, Lake City, Florida 32024 and over 75 years of service in the Lake City community.

Ask about 'outsiders' — part 4 in a 5-part series

By DAVID MATTHIS
AP Religion Writer

Last week we discussed "appreciating outsiders," and how our conduct can positively or negatively persuade people about Christ. What they think about us is more important than we may understand.

Ask about outsiders

Perhaps the place where this strange concern for outsiders catches us most off guard is the grand finale of the elder qualifications in 1 Timothy 3:1-7. In verse 7, Paul echoes the first and overarching qualification ("an overseer must be above reproach," 1 Timothy 3:2; Titus 1:7) by fleshing it out like this: the elder "must be well thought of by outsiders, so that he may not fall into disgrace, into a snare of the devil" (1 Timothy 3:7). Why this unexpected charge? Philip Towner comments, "Paul's ultimate motive is missionary in thrust. . . . [I]t is the threat to the evangelistic mandate that would follow from the church falling into disgrace."

The church is right where Satan wants her when the elders are disgraced among outsiders. Why? Because the devil wants to keep outsiders from the gospel. He wants them to stay as "outsiders" by bringing reproach on the church's message through reproach on the church's leaders. Satan loves it when Christian leaders, of all people, give outsiders just cause for disgust. It's one thing to be a fool for Jesus, but it's quite another to be foolish just as much on heaven's terms as the world's.

The Lord's Supper: It's ok to cry

Rodney is from Puerto Rico. He sat several rows behind us in the assembly. The worship had gone as planned until the Lord's Supper. A few appropriate words were spoken about the sacrifice of Jesus for the sins of the world, a prayer was given for the bread and the grape juice soon to be passed and individually partaken of. All was silent except for the movement of those passing the emblems, and the soft sound of the electric piano, playing a reverent tune. Then it happened: Rodney began to cry. His heart was broken and he wept loudly and could not stop. I don't know what others thought, but I remembered the times when I quietly cried during the Supper, and maybe you remember doing the same.

Why did he cry? After the services were over, I went to him, introduced myself, and asked him what happened, although it was not hard to figure out. He said, "I was thinking of how much He suffered just for me. Jesus died for me."

We live in a time when tears and feelings are held back in church. Yes, we cry when things happen to us, like the terrible devastation of a hurricane or tornado, or wild fire that wipes out our home or family. We cry for joy over birth, and sadness at death. We all cry over different things, but how many tears are shed over the sacrifice of Jesus?

One time a mother and child went to church and during the Lord's Supper, the young child began to cry when they spoke of the death of Jesus. The young mother was embarrassed because others were looking with faces that said, "Keep your child quiet!" She leaned over and whispered to her child, "Shhh... It's ok, don't take it so seriously."

Perhaps this has been the problem all along.

Perhaps this is the reason why so many who claim to be Christians, don't reflect the life of Christ. Perhaps this is why so many non-Christians won't listen to the message of Jesus.

Matthew records how Jesus had been betrayed by Judas, deserted by his disciples, arrested and put on trial. Peter finds himself in the courtyard. A servant girl comes along and says to him,

"You also were with Jesus of Galilee" and Peter says, "I don't know what you're talking about." Then he went out to the gateway, and another girl came up and said to the people, "This fellow was with Jesus of Nazareth." Peter replies (with an oath), "I don't know the man." Then again people said, "Surely you are one of them, for your accent gives you away."

"Then he began to call down curses on himself and he swore to them, "I don't know the man!" (Matthew 26:69-74). Luke records, "Just as he was speaking, the rooster crowed. The Lord turned and looked straight at Peter. Then Peter remembered the word the Lord had spoken to him. And he went outside and wept bitterly" (Luke 22:60-62).

Lord, help us to take this more seriously.

Tigers tie Taylor County

Columbia High's Rogelio Arradilla-Sosa battles with Taylor County High's Nathan Kallschmidt for possession of the ball on Thursday.

Columbia High rallied for a 2-2 tie against Taylor County High after trailing by two goals at the half on Thursday.

After two goals by the Bulldogs in the final two minutes of the first half, the Tigers took control in the second half to pull out the tie.

Kyle Richardson scored both goals for the Tigers with Tim Bagley earning an assist.

"The first 38 minutes was about as good as we've played all year," Columbia head coach Trevor Tyler said. "A lack of energy over the final two minutes resulted in two goals, but we came back to play the best 40 minutes we have all season. Richardson played a heck of a game. He controlled the back at stopper and pushed the ball up very well."

Columbia fell, 6-1, against Leon High on Wednesday. The score was not a direct result of the Tigers' play according to Tyler.

Kaleb Rossignol scored the Tigers' goal off an assist from Caleb Carswell.

"The guys were playing hard with tons of energy," Tyler said. "The score was not indicative of their play. Leon's first two goals were very good. We put a freshman, Darren Brock, on him afterwards and were able to shut him down. We had it 2-1, but then we had an own goal and two penalty kicks. So three of their goals, they didn't do much for. On our end, we had it a bunch of times inside the 18, so it's promising what we're doing."

The Tigers travel to Lincoln High at 7 p.m. on Monday.

Trent Owens' career comes full circle as he moves to Sprint Cup as a crew chief for 2014 season

For those who were at Talladega, Ala., on May 4, 1975, the events that transpired were not to be forgotten. Even those who were just casual fans of the sport at that time were heartbroken over the death that day of 20-year-old Randy Owens.

Owens was the brother-in-law of Richard Petty. His sister, Lynda, Richard's wife, had helped raise him while their mother worked, and he was an eager member of the crew of Petty's No. 43 cars.

On Lap 141 of the Winston 500, Petty, in contention for the win, came down pit road with a fire in the left front of his car. As Owens attempted to use a pressurized water tank to help extinguish the flames, the tank exploded, sending Owens flying into the air and killing him.

Petty, who jumped from his car and attempted to get help for Owens, summed up one of the saddest aspects of the incident in his comments to reporters that day.

"He was just a kid and had those two little, bitty boys," Petty said.

Last week, the story came full circle when Trent Owens, the youngest of those little, bitty boys, was hired as crew chief of the No. 43 Ford at Richard Petty Motorsports.

The official release announcing the hiring of Owens didn't even mention that Owens is the nephew of the team's namesake. And Owens doesn't bring up the subject unless he's asked about it. But when he does talk about his family, it's clear that he's proud of the connection.

Owens said that when he was hired to crew chief the car his father once worked on, it was a special moment.

"When the opportunity came up, and then when the announcement was made, I was pretty emotional about it," said Owens, who was just four months old when his father died. His brother, Travis, now the brake specialist for the No. 31 Chevrolet at Richard Childress Racing, was two at the time.

The Owens brothers, who spent most of their younger years living in Darlington, S.C., remained close to Richard and Lynda Petty as they grew up.

They went to races at Darlington,

Rockingham and Martinsville with the Pettys. In the summertime, the Pettys would pick up the boys and take them to Daytona for the July Cup races. It was during one of those trips that young Trent Owens witnessed one of NASCAR's greatest moments.

"My aunt and uncle took us to Daytona, and we got to be there for his 200th win," Owens said, adding that he still cherished the Victory Lane photos that show him standing in front of the car holding the checkered flag.

By the time he was a teenager, Owens was spending his summers in North Carolina with the Pettys and working in the family race shop.

"I made money for school for the next year," he said.

And his Aunt Lynda told him stories of the father he never knew.

"She made me well aware of my dad's ambitions," he said.

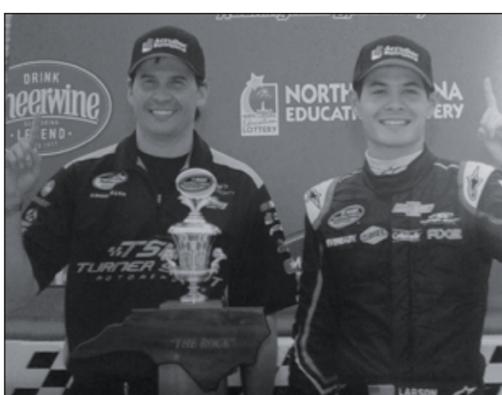

Eddie Wood, a member of the Wood Brothers racing team of Stuart, Va., was about the same age as Randy Owens and knew him back in the day. Then as now, the Woods and the Pettys were big rivals, but also great friends.

"Randy worked with [Petty Enterprises crew chief] Dale Inman, just like my brother Len and I worked with our Uncle Leonard," Wood said. "Randy was a go-getter, and from what I can tell, Trent is cut from the same cloth."

Trent Owens started his major league NASCAR career as a driver, running 12 races in the Camping World Truck Series before deciding that his true calling was on top of the pit box as a crew chief.

He's worked with a host of drivers over the years, winning five Nationwide Series races with five different drivers. He spent the past season working with Kyle Larson, and his move to the No. 43 and driver Aric Almirola is his first full-time foray into the elite Sprint Cup Series.

Owens said that his career as a crew chief has been helped by his driving experience and by working with various Sprint Cup drivers over the years.

"Having driven in the past, I can understand quicker what a driver is telling me about the car," he said. "And working with Cup drivers has taught me a lot in a hurry."

He said his goal is to try to make the No. 43 team into a consistent top-15 or top-10 outfit and to make the Chase for the Sprint Cup.

"If we can be around the top 10 by the beginning of the summer, we've got a possibility of making the Chase," he said. "And if we can run in the top five, we've got a chance to win a race."

One thing Owens knows for sure is that his new boss — his uncle — is not only NASCAR's all-time win leader as a driver — with 200 victories — but also one of the most knowledgeable people in the garage today.

"There's no fooling him," Owens said. "He's sharp when it comes to race cars and the people that work on them. And he's so good at life skills in general."

"He's a stern boss, but he's a good boss. I'm happy to get this opportunity, and I'm looking forward to seeing what I can do with it."

Owens will serve as crew chief for Aric Almirola's Sprint Cup team in 2014.

Jeff Burton's on- and off-track plans announced for 2014 season and beyond

Jeff Burton's future plans, both on and off the track, were announced last week. He'll start by running some test sessions and a limited Sprint Cup schedule for Michael Waltrip Racing, and he'll begin working with NBC Sports Group, which has signed him to a multi-year contract to be an analyst when the network begins broadcasting NASCAR races in 2015.

"Jeff Burton was always the first person we would seek out when there was breaking news or an issue that needed to be covered throughout our previous contract with NASCAR, so he was the first person we called for this role," Sam Flood, executive producer, NBC Sports and NBC Sports Network, said in announcing the hiring of Burton. "His insights, keen observations and many trophies have earned the respect of everyone involved with the sport."

Burton will begin his TV work in 2014 by contributing to NASCAR programming on NBCSN.

"This is an exciting new challenge, and I am thrilled to be joining the NBC Sports family," said Burton. "I will prepare for each race as if I were driving in it, and I look forward to sharing my experience, views and insights with all the dedicated and passionate NASCAR fans."

On the driving side, his first stint behind the wheel with his new team is set for Charlotte Motor Speedway, where he'll substitute at a test session for Brian Vickers, who is out of action because of blood clots. Burton will make his first start at Las Vegas Motor Speedway on March 9 in a No. 66 Toyota and is expected to make several more starts in 2014.

"Michael Waltrip Racing has two teams and drivers racing for the NASCAR Sprint Cup championship in 2014, and our third team will play a very important role in that pursuit," team co-owner Rob Kauffman said in announcing the addition of Burton to the team he operates with Michael Waltrip. "We were extremely fortunate to have a driver as experienced and respected as Jeff Burton come available. He will be able to have an immediate impact as we continue to strive for that last 1 percent that separates champions from contenders."

Waltrip will drive the No. 66 in the season-opening Daytona 500 on Feb. 23.

In his full-time NASCAR career, Burton made 691 Cup starts, with 21 wins, the most recent coming in 2008 when he won twice. On the Nationwide side, he has 306 career starts, with 27 wins, but none since 2007, when he won five times.

He will be joined in the NBC TV booth by new lead announcer Rick Allen, who now works as Fox Sports' race announcer for NASCAR's Camping World Truck Series and the ARCA Racing Series.

Trophies and honors abound at 2013 Sprint Cup Champion's Week in Las Vegas

Jimmie Johnson, the 2013 Sprint Cup champion and six-time Cup winner, was front and center for many of the festivities at last week's annual Sprint Cup Series Champion's Week in Las Vegas. But the driver of the No. 48 Chevrolet at Hendrick Motorsports wasn't the only one honored.

Tony Stewart received the 2013 Myers Brothers Award from the National Motorsports Press Association not only for his work as a driver, team owner and track promoter, but also for the good works he does behind the scenes.

"The stories of our winner's big heart have gotten around — much to his dismay, I'm sure," NMPA President Kenny Bruce said in announcing the Myers Brothers winner. "Trust me, they're endless."

Stewart seemed somewhat taken aback by the award from a group whose members have at times in years past found themselves at odds with him.

"This is crazy," Stewart said. "What an honor. It's very humbling."

Among the accomplishments cited was Stewart's work to bring a major-league NASCAR circuit back to the dirt-racing world with the inaugural Mudsummer Classic for the Camping World Truck Series at his Eldora Speedway in Ohio.

But, he said that NASCAR's senior vice president of racing operations, Steve O'Donnell, and Eldora Speedway manager Roger Slack, deserved much of the credit for the success of the event.

Dale Earnhardt Jr. was back on stage for the 11th straight year as winner of the Most Popular Driver Award. The NMPA reported that more than 1 million votes were cast, with Earnhardt taking more than 700,000 of them.

"This year we feel like we were giving them a lot to cheer for on the race track and paying them back for all the years they've voted for us to win this award," Earnhardt said.

Kasey Kahne finished second in the balloting, ahead of Jeff Gordon, Tony Stewart, Danica Patrick, Jimmie Johnson, Kevin Harvick, Matt Kenseth, Kyle Busch and Carl Edwards.

The all-time winner of the Most Popular Driver Award is Bill Elliott, who won it 16 times.

"I don't really keep track of the stats or the score, but Bill was a great driver and ambassador for the sport," Earnhardt said. "He represents the sport really well to this day, as does his son, Chase, who's coming up and carrying on the family name. But, I've always looked up to Bill as a driver, so it's pretty neat."

NASCAR drivers weren't the only ones being honored in Las Vegas.

Don Post, chairman of the March of Dimes Kansas City chapter's "Bikers for Babies" motorcycle ride, received the third annual Betty Jane France Humanitarian Award.

"Don Post is a hero, pure and simple," said Mrs. France, who is chair of the NASCAR Foundation. "We have so much respect for his accomplishments in the face of personal adversity, along with his commitment to helping children who face their own adversity."

"His story is inspiring and truly personifies what our award is all about." In 1980, Post was diagnosed with Amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, also known as Lou Gehrig's disease. He retired from his job and has spent the years since working for various charities.

A $100,000 donation from the NASCAR Foundation goes to the March of Dimes, and Post gets a 2014 Chevrolet SS.

Comedian Jay Mohr hosted the 2013 Sprint Cup Awards Banquet in Las Vegas.

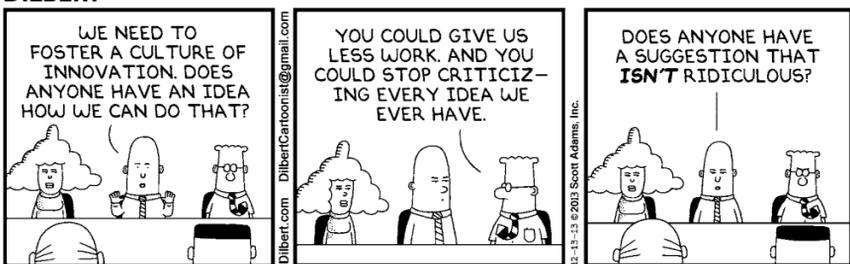

Jimmie Johnson with Miss Sprint Cup at Champion's Week in Las Vegas with his 2013 Cup trophy.

Dale Earnhardt Jr. was voted Most Popular Driver for the 11th year in a row.

HEISMAN: Winston leads finalists

Northern Illinois' Jordan Lynch, Texas A&M's Johnny Manziel, Alabama's AJ McCarron, Auburn's Tre Mason and Boston College's Andre Williams.

Six finalists invited to New York for the presentation are the most since 1994. The winner will be announced Saturday night.

Winston is the overwhelming favorite to win the award now that a sexual assault complaint against him in Tallahassee, Fla., has been closed without charges being filed.

He could also become the second freshman to win the award. Manziel was the first just last year. Famous Jameis, like Johnny Football last season, is a redshirt freshman.

While Winston was a lock to be invited, the rest of the field was muddled. Some contenders had late stumbles (Manziel and Lynch), others (Mason and Williams) made late runs.

Manziel will try to join another exclusive Heisman club by becoming the second player to win the award twice. Ohio State's Archie Griffin won the award in 1974 and '75. The Aggies' quarterback is third in the nation in total offense with 368 yards per game.

Lynch led No. 24 Northern Illinois (12-1) to within a victory of a BCS bid and has set the major college record for yards rushing for a quarterback this season with 1,815. He also tweeted that he was a finalist about five minutes before the official announcement was made on ESPN by 1996 winner Danny Wuerffel.

"NYC here I come!!

Thanks to the coaches teammates and media relation couldn't of did it wt out them!" the record-setting senior posted.

McCarron completed 67 percent of his passes for 2,676 yards and 26 touchdowns for the fourth-ranked Crimson Tide (11-1).

"This will be my first trip to New York City, and I can't put into words how much it means to me," McCarron said in a statement released by the school. "I am truly privileged to have the opportunity to represent our team at the Heisman ceremony. None of this would be possible without my coaches and teammates."

Mason helped No. 2 Auburn reach the BCS title game, running for 304 yards and four TDs in the SEC championship game. He is ninth in the country in rushing (124 ypg).

"When I heard the news, I was in disbelief," Mason said in a statement. "For me to be invited to the Heisman ceremony, I am honored and blessed. I couldn't have done it without my teammates; this is an honor for all of them also."

Williams is the nation's leading rusher at 175 yards per game and the 16th player in FBS to run for 2,000 yards in a season.

Winston's arrival as Florida State's starting quarterback was being touted as a major event in the spring and he has surpassed the hype. The Alabama native is on pace to break the NCAA record for passer efficiency rating (190.1) and has already set records for yards passing (3,820) and TD passes (38) for a freshman.

Winston's only issues have come off the field. About a month ago, a year-old sexual assault complaint against him made by a female Florida State student was given by police to the state attorney's office for a full investigation.

A woman claimed Winston raped her. Winston's lawyer said the sex was consensual. Winston continued to play, and play well, during the investigation. Last week, the state attorney announced there would be no charges filed in the case, and two days later Winston threw for three touchdown passes and ran for a score as No. 1 Florida State won the Atlantic Coast Conference championship game 45-7 against Duke and wrapped up a spot in the BCS title game.

In the latest straw poll released Monday by HeismanPundit.com, which has correctly predicted the last seven winners, Winston received seven of the 10 first-place votes and 26 points to easily outdistance Lynch (eight points and two first-place votes).

All six finalists are expected to attend the ceremony, which would match '94 for the most in Heisman history. That season Colorado tailback Rashaan Salaam won the Heisman, and Penn State's Ki-Jana Carter and Kerry Collins, along with Alcorn State's Steve McNair, Alabama's Jay Barker and Miami's Warren Sapp were finalists.

In 1989, eight players were invited to the ceremony, but only four attended. Among the missing was Houston's Andre Ware, who won the award but was preparing for a game.
