'Fighting fire with fire'

Flames from the County Line Fire continue to consume forest land in the Pinhook Swamp area of Baker and Columbia counties.

Controlled burns push forest fire to 20,000 acres

The County Line Fire has consumed close to 20,000 acres as it continues to devour property and as firefighters continue to set strategic fires to reduce the amount of fuel feeding the flames.

Bonnie Strawser, Southern Area Type 2 Incident Management Team public information officer, said a huge portion of the acreage increase was the result of controlled burns.

"That's a result of strategically burning some of the fuels in establishing some good containment lines," she said. "We've had a lot of fire activity in the northeastern side of the fire and that northern flank is where most of the activity has been."

The fire grew from 14,000 acres on Monday.

Incident Management Team officials are expecting a wind shift today and have made plans to work on containment lines on the southeast portion of the fire.

Officials said the fire is 20-30 percent contained.

"We are basically fighting fire with fire," Strawser said, explaining the plan officials have developed to battle the blaze. "We are doing strategic burns to establish those containment lines around the fire. We are basically boxing in the fire. We hope to get a line all around the fire."

Strawser said as long as the fire stays within the box, officials will be content to let it burn itself out.

"We'll make sure we've identified any resources in there that we need to protect and we'll make sure those are protected and then we'll let it burn as long as it stays where it belongs."

Pete Kubiak, Southern Area Type 2 Incident Command Team planning operations chief, said plants and vegetation in the area are a challenge because they're offering more fuels for the fire even though they're green.

"This time of the year because of the drought conditions that we have in the area, we're getting a lot of fire behavior out of the fuels," he said. "The vegetation out there, the green fuels - palmetto, gallberry, and titi plants and things like that are burning quite well. The leafy materials on that vegetation emits a waxy substance and that becomes very volatile and flammable and it adds to the fire behavior and the Drivers use their headlights to navigate Duval Street Tuesday afternoon after wind shifts caused smoke from the County Line fire to once again blanket the area. Smoke caused limited visibility on major roadways in the Columbia County area Tuesday and the DOT placed Fog/Smoke signs on all on-ramps to Interstates 10 and 75.

Sturgeon return to Suwannee

Boaters warned to be aware of jumping fish.

From staff reports

They're back. Gulf sturgeon have begun their annual migration back into the Suwannee River.

Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission officers have reported seeing the fish jump already this year.

People have been injured in accidental collisions with the jumping sturgeon. In 2011, six boaters were hurt and 11 encounters with sturgeon were reported.

"Last season, we had quite a few people hurt, some seriously," said Maj. Roy Brown, regional law

Board lowers lifeguard age requirement

By LAURA HAMPSON
lhampson@lakecityreporter.com

Finding a job this summer could be a easier for 16-year-olds. The Columbia County School Board will vote on lowering the age requirement for aquatic complex lifeguards at a public hearing May 22. The school board approved the hearing Tuesday night.

Lowering the age requirement from 17 to 16 years old means lifeguards can potentially work two summers, said Michael Millikin, school district superintendent. Often lifeguards work one summer then leave town after graduation, he said. "They go off to college and we lose them."

Sixteen-year-old lifeguards are common in water parks and other cities, said Alex Carswell Jr., assistant superintendent of schools. Rehiring lifeguards means training is not wasted, he said. Lifeguards are still required to be lifeguard, first aid and CPR certified.

The district will hire 15 to 20 part-time, seasonal lifeguards, he said. If the lower age is approved the district will accept applications from 16-year-olds after May 22, he said. The district is already accepting applications from people 17 years and older. Job seekers can apply on the district's website, www.columbia.k12.fl.us.

In other news: The school board also approved a May 22 public hearing on revised district policies on charter schools,

Partnership planned for building purchase

By HANNAH O. BROWN
hbrown@lakecityreporter.com

The Community Redevelopment Agency is six months from establishing an official partnership with the North Florida Broadband Authority, according to City Manager Wendell Johnson.

The NFBA has asked for an acquisition grant from the CRA for the old Powers building in downtown Lake City.

The CRA has agreed to help facilitate the NFBA's migration into the building with consideration of a few caveats.

The city has recommended that the NFBA have an environmental inspection of the property conducted.

According to Johnson, the property used to be a gas station and there is a possibility of fuel contaminants in the ground. The city offered NFBA assistance in obtaining an environmental inspection.

A discussion of the specifics of the financial transaction between the two groups has yet to be formalized.

The CRA has expressed interest in offering NFBA an acquisition grant. For renovation of the building, the CRA has proposed a no-interest construction loan that will be required to be paid in full after a period of three years.

Johnson called NFBA's relocation to the downtown building a "big win for the city and county."

Real-life 'Springfield' is in Oregon

PORTLAND, Ore. – One of the best-kept secrets in television history has been revealed, with "The Simpsons" creator Matt Groening pointing to Springfield, Ore., as the inspiration for the animated hometown of Homer and his dysfunctional family.

Groening told Smithsonian magazine, published online Tuesday, that he was inspired by the television show "Father Knows Best," which took place in a place called Springfield. Springfield, Ore., is 100 miles south of Groening's hometown of Portland.

"When I grew up, I realized it was just a fictitious name," Groening told the magazine. "I also figured out that Springfield was one of the most common names for a city in the U.S."

"In anticipation of the success of the show, I thought, 'This will be cool; everyone will think it's their Springfield.' And they do," he said.

Groening said he has long given fake answers when asked about the Simpsons' hometown, leaving open the possibility that his latest one is itself another fake.

The show has made a running joke of hiding the true Springfield's location. In one episode, daughter Lisa points to Springfield on a map, but the animated "camera view" is blocked by son Bart's head.

The series has been on the air for more than 20 years, becoming the longest-running American sitcom, the longest-running American animated program and a cultural phenomenon with colleges devoting courses to studying it.

Robin Gibb composed the symphonic piece with his son, Robin-John Gibb, and was scheduled to perform a new song, "Don't Cry Alone," during the premier concert at The Royal Albert Hall.

But in a message read out to the audience, Robin-John said his 62-year-old father is still in hospital.

"He sends all his love," he said ahead of the performance. "We are all praying for him and hoping he has a speedy recovery."

Robin Gibb's publicist Doug Wright said he is in stable condition in the hospital. He did not provide more details.

Gibb had intestinal surgery last month, and was hospitalized late last year for stomach and colon problems. He has not disclosed the nature of his illness, but has said a growth on his colon has been removed.

Leaked voicemails show rift between Chase, 'Community'

NEW YORK – A second voicemail message from Chevy Chase leaked online Tuesday, depicting a deep rift between the veteran comedian and the creators of his ratings-challenged NBC sitcom "Community."

The show's creator, Dan Harmon, played voicemails from Chase at a Los Angeles comedy show last year. They have since found their way on to the Internet, including a recording released Tuesday by Celebuzz.com.

In the voicemail, Chase calls "Community" a "mediocre sitcom" that "is not my kind of comedy."

"It ain't funny to me because I'm 67 years old and I've been doing this a long time," Chase says. Though the recordings left on Harmon's phone appear to have taken place during the show's second season, they reveal just how badly things have been for Chase and "Community."

Death-row inmate makes appeal to Supreme Court

TALLAHASSEE – Lawyers for Florida serial killer David Gore asked the U.S. Supreme Court on Tuesday to block his planned execution later this week.

The 58-year-old convict is scheduled to receive a lethal injection on Thursday at Florida State Prison in Starke for the 1983 rape-murder of 17-year-old Lynn Elliot in Indian River County. Gore also is serving life terms for killing five other girls or women, who were raped and dismembered.

His attorneys asked for a stay and filed an appeal based on a recent Supreme Court ruling that dealt with ineffective legal assistance.

The nation's highest court ruled last month in an Arizona case that the federal courts must hear a convict's claim of receiving ineffective legal assistance — or none at all — for appeals alleging the inmate's trial lawyers also had been ineffective.

Procedural issues cannot be used to block those appeals, the federal justices ruled in the 7-2 opinion. That decision is limited to states including Florida that do not let defendants claim ineffective counsel until after their initial appeals are resolved.

Gore contends his death sentence should be lifted because a prior appellate lawyer failed to locate a key witness for an appeal that the Florida Supreme Court ultimately denied in 2007. In that appeal, Gore had alleged his trial lawyers were negligent during the case's penalty phase.

Man rents gun, kills self at shooting range

ORLANDO – Sheriff's deputies say a man rented a handgun and shot himself to death at an Orlando gun range.

The shooting happened Monday afternoon at The Shooting Gallery. Officials say the man, who was around 60, was pronounced dead at Orlando Regional Medical Center.

The Orlando Sentinel reports the man was the only patron at the gun range when the shooting occurred.

Deputies say the man shot himself in "the upper body." No further details were immediately available and the man's name was not released.

According to the newspaper, a 24-year-old man committed suicide at the same gun range in August 2010.

Teen gets 16 years for fatal shooting of man

SARASOTA – A southwest Florida teen has been sentenced to 16 years in prison for shooting another man during a street feud.

As part of a deal with Sarasota County prosecutors, 19-year-old Marcus Moody pleaded no contest Tuesday to a reduced charge of manslaughter with a firearm. He had been facing a second-degree murder charge and possible life sentence.

Authorities say Moody fatally shot 20-year-old Willie J. Hadley last June during an ongoing feud between two groups. After Hadley's death, authorities say his brother, 18-year-old Olajuwon Butler, shot and killed one of Moody's cousins.

NTSB: Plane sat unused for 3 years before crash

DELAND – Federal investigators say a small plane that crashed into a central Florida supermarket had not been flown for about three years.

According to a preliminary report by the National Transportation Safety Board, the pilot bought the experimental plane in January.

Investigators say the plane left Illinois on April 1 for seaplane training in Florida. The pilot had intended to land in Sanford, but detoured to DeLand when the plane's transponder malfunctioned.

Investigators say the pilot was flying April 2 from DeLand to Daytona Beach to have the transponder replaced. The plane crashed shortly after takeoff. The pilot, a passenger and one customer in the store were seriously injured. Two other customers also were injured.

Witnesses told the NTSB that the plane stalled and sputtered before crashing into the nearby supermarket.

Domestic call leads cops to suspected meth lab

PALM HARBOR – A domestic violence call led Pinellas County Sheriff's deputies to what believe to be a meth lab.

Deputies responding to the 911 call about 3:45 p.m. Monday were met by a strong chemical odor as they entered a Palm Harbor home.

Sheriff's spokeswoman Cecelia Barraza says a man threw chemicals at a woman in the house. The man was arrested and the woman was not injured.

The Tampa Bay Times reports one deputy was taken to the hospital after being overcome by the smell inside the home. He was later released.

Detectives believe there was a meth lab operation at the home.

The names of the man and woman were not released.

Work release fugitive captured in Lake City

From staff reports

An inmate who walked away from a local work release center in March with only five months remaining on his sentence, was captured by local and federal authorities in a Lake City home Tuesday afternoon.

Daniel L. Retherford, 24, Florida Department of Corrections, Lake City, was charged with escape. He was booked into the Columbia County Detention Center without bond.

Retherford escaped from the work release center about two weeks ago.

According to information from the Columbia County Sheriff's Office, on March 31, Retherford walked away from the Lake City Work Release Center.

Columbia County Sheriff's Office detectives believed Retherford was still in the Columbia County area and were hoping to apprehend him.

CCSO Det. John Hatcher learned of a possible location where Retherford could have been residing, 942 SW Sparrow Terrace.

Columbia County Sheriff's Office deputies along with Deputy U.S. Marshals of the Fugitive Task Force and K-9 units from the Florida Department of Corrections surrounded the home around 1:45 p.m. Tuesday.

Retherford was identified as being in the home but initially refused to surrender to authorities. After approximately 30 minutes, he was taken into custody without incident, reports said.

Retherford was serving a sentence for dealing in stolen property and had only five months remaining on his sentence before he was scheduled to be released.

Hamilton County votes on slots

JASPER — Hamilton County voters cast ballots Tuesday on whether to allow slot machines at pari-mutuel wagering facilities.

Approval in yesterday's referendum, though, may be meaningless.

That's because the Attorney General Pam Bondi says only voters in Miami-Dade and Broward counties, both in South Florida, can authorize slots.

Tuesday's referendum was sought for Hamilton Jai Alai & Poker and Hamilton Downs Race Track, which plans to offer barrel racing to qualify for slots.

Traditional quarter horse interests, though, are challenging the licensing of barrel racing, a women's rodeo event.

Two other north Florida counties have voted to allow slots at an Ebro dog track and Gretna barrel racing facility. Neither, though, has yet challenged Bondi's opinion.

Florida justices hear county term limits cases

By BILL KACZOR
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — The Florida Supreme Court heard oral arguments Tuesday on the constitutionality of term limits for county commissioners in a pair of cases that potentially could affect all 20 of the state's charter counties.

The only opposition came from Bruce Rogow, a lawyer for Rio Vista resident William Telli, who had challenged Broward's 12-year term limit. In the second case, lawyers for Sarasota County and a citizens group both argued in favor of the eight-year year limit there.

Rogow cited a 2002 Supreme Court ruling that struck down term limits for county constitutional officers: sheriffs, court clerks, supervisors of elections, tax collectors and property appraisers.

That 4-3 decision was based on the Florida Constitution's "Eight is Enough" amendment, which sets eight-year term limits for legislators, the governor, lieutenant governor and Cabinet members but does not include county officials.

"County home rule charters do not trump the constitution," Rogow told the justices. He argued it would take another constitutional amendment to add other disqualifications from office such a term limits for county commissioners.

Joni A. Coffey, a lawyer for Broward County, contended the opinion on constitutional officers' term limits does not apply to county commissioners because their positions are established by a separate constitutional provision. It makes an exception for charter counties to requirements for county governing boards that include having five or seven members serving staggered four-year terms from single-member districts redrawn after every 10-year census.

student progression plans, the curriculum, purchasing and safety belts. The policies were updated to better comply with state statutes, Millikin said.

The school board approved a $54,355 bid from Naples-based Athletic Resources Inc. to replace the gym floor at Richardson Middle School.

The board approved an agreement with the University of Florida for Certified Athletic Trainers for sports teams at Columbia and Fort White high schools.

The board also agreed to allow the Columbia County Recreation Department to use four school buses from June to August for summer camp programs. The recreation department will pay $5,500 plus any maintenance required on the buses.

lic awareness campaign to alert boaters to the risks of jumping sturgeon.

"We posted signs at each boat ramp along the Suwannee, explaining the risk of impacts with these fish," Brown said. "Our officers will be on water patrol during this period and into the summer months in a continued effort to educate boaters about these jumping fish."

What's the best course of action for avoiding a collision?

"We recommend boaters reduce their speed to reduce the risk of impact and to give people more time to react if they do encounter a jumping sturgeon," Brown said. "The FWC also recommends that all boaters wear their life jackets."

The Suwannee River appears to support the largest viable population of Gulf sturgeon. Biologists estimate the annual population at 10,000-14,000 fish, averaging approximately 40 pounds each. Adult fish spend eight to nine months each year in the river spawning and three to four of the coolest months in Gulf waters.

Biologists are unsure why sturgeon jump. Theories include that the fish jump to communicate or as a dominance display.

"I have seen these collisions referred to as 'attacks.' However, these fish are in no way attacking when they jump. They are simply doing what they have been doing for millions of years: jumping. They aren't targeting the boaters," Brown said.

Gulf sturgeon can get quite big, exceeding 8 feet and 200 pounds.

"They have five rows of rock-hard scutes along their sides, back and belly. When sturgeon and boaters collide, the results can be devastating," Brown said.

State and federal laws protect sturgeon, just like bald eagles, panthers and sea turtles. It is illegal to harvest Gulf sturgeon.

"If anyone is involved in an incident with a jumping sturgeon, please report it to the FWC. With the data received, we can get a better overall view of where the fish are jumping and get the word out to the public," Brown said.

conditions that we've been experiencing out there."

Kubiak said the fire is also creating its own winds as it continues to consume property.

The fire remains in the Pinhook Swamp area of Baker and Columbia counties, near SR 2 and containment numbers continue to increase.

"We have those areas that were burned (Monday) last night and it's still within 24 hours since they burned, so there's probably some snags in there that are still burning and embers around so we can't say it's completely contained," Strawser said.

Kubiak said there are at least 140 personnel working in various operations to douse the blaze and he expected that number to increase to around 200 within the next few days.

While a majority of the people on the incident command team are from the southeast region of the country, Strawser said some are from as far away as Arizona, California, Colorado and Oklahoma.

"Resources have been pouring in here today (Tuesday) because this is a really important fire because it's one of those fires that if we can hold it where it is now we'll save a lot of money," she said.

respiratory emergency calls so far.

"With the smoke bank down like it is right now, if it stays like this I expect to see more and more calls from residents," he said.

With the smoke banking at such a low level, Brinkley said it's penetrating people's homes and for people who already have respiratory problems it could become a health issue.

"It makes it harder to breathe. It's just like when you're in a fire or really close to a fire," he said. "The smoke dries out your airway and makes you have a persistent cough. People need to be very aware of that."

Humidifiers are one solution to the problem for people who are indoors.

For people who are outside, Brinkley suggested wearing a mask that is capable of filtering smoke, ash and other particles from entering their lungs.

"That helps keep the clean air coming in and out the air passages," he said. "The humidifiers are a great idea, but residents need to keep out of areas where the smoke is really bad. If people start experiencing respiratory problems, they shouldn't wait until it gets too bad. They should go ahead and call 911 and let us get them to the hospital where we can stop a problem before it gets too bad."

ONE

What a way to choose a veep

We are about to embark on one of the more bizarre rituals of American politics – the selection of the presidential candidate's running mate.

President Barack Obama's choice is settled. It will be the incumbent, Joe Biden, despite the maneuverings of die-hard Hillary Clinton supporters, who still want to see her be president one day, and proposed she swap her job as secretary of State for Biden's as vice president as one way to do it.

But even by Washington standards that would have come across as too cynical.

The Founding Fathers didn't have any clear idea about the vice president, only that there should be one in case the president died or was incapacitated. For a while the Constitution directed that the vice president would be in effect the second place finisher in the presidential election; in other words, the winner's deadliest political enemy would be waiting immediately in the wings.

The Founders couldn't even find much for the vice president to do except preside over the Senate and cast tie-breaking votes, at most a couple of hours of work a year. Up until Franklin Roosevelt, the political conventions chose their parties' vice presidential candidate.

That process has been winnowed down to the choice being made by the presidential candidate, a tight inner circle of trusted aides, and perhaps his spouse.

Even though it has been shown repeatedly that a running mate can hurt a ticket a lot but help only so much, great care is placed in seeking geographical, political and personality balance. Rubio, for example, is from a key swing state and may attract back to the party the Hispanics the GOP has been assiduously driving away.

The Founding Fathers might be appalled by the process but for a change, they didn't have a better idea.

Race is still our rawest nerve

If nothing else, the killing of Trayvon Martin has many Americans openly talking about race and racism again. That is good, even though some of our talk is harsh.

But then, racism is harsh. Many white people simply want the topic to go away. Trust me when I say that most blacks also want it to disappear – but for other reasons. Trayvon Martin's killing shows that the time has come for all decent Americans to commit to earnestly acknowledging the ugly truth about race and racism and banishing the sophistry of denial.

The most powerful acknowledgment of the ugliness of race I have read comes from Sig Gissler, administrator of the Pulitzer prizes, Columbia University journalism professor, and specialist in race and media ethics. He wrote: "Race – it is America's rawest nerve and most enduring dilemma. From birth to death, race is with us, defining, dividing, distorting." I add the following to Gissler's insight: From birth to death, race is one of the most painfully personal of all human experiences.

As a black person, I live race. I am acutely aware that my race constitutes what is referred as a "master status." That is, in the eyes of whites and other non-blacks, my skin color, my most visible characteristic, is the most important piece of information about me.

This condition is inescapable. The consequences of race can be profoundly hurtful, each encounter robbing you of a piece of dignity, the degree depending on your sense of self-worth.

I vividly recall an experience of 34 years ago when as a professional I became intellectually aware of the degrading effect of

maxwell@sptimes.com

my skin color. I was an English professor at Florida Keys Community College in Key West. Wearing new khakis and a crisp button-down shirt on the first night of class, I carried my textbook, a notepad and the class roster as I walked to my classroom.

A white student walked toward me and told me I needed to "mop up the water" under the air conditioner in her classroom. I asked for the room number. It was my room. Not saying anything to her, I found the janitor's station and placed a note on the door. When I walked into my classroom, I recognized the student. She sat in the second row. Based on her startled reaction, she knew she had wrongly assumed her teacher was the janitor.

As I wrote my name on the blackboard, she walked out. I learned a few days later she had enrolled in another section of the course. Her new teacher, a white man, was one of my spear-fishing buddies. Over time, we had uneasy laughs about the incident.

I was certain that if I had been white, the student would not have assumed I was a janitor. My colleague agreed. Her mistake was grounded in race. How else could she have overlooked my attire, my textbook and notepad?

No scholar has definitively theorized about race, at least not to my satisfaction. Fancy language cannot explain it. And the voguish genetic and anthropological reports of late – arguments that humankind is one big family – have not generated useful clarity and better race relations.

Race produces racism, and racism naturally enables discrimination from the benign to the horrific. Paradoxically, race appears to be so familiar to us as groups and individuals, we mistakenly assume that we understand it. Therefore, we take it for granted, seeing it as too tiresome a subject to discuss.

The truth, I believe, is that race confounds our understanding precisely because, besides being ever-present, it is subconsciously lived by the victim and by the perpetrator, making it a complex mix of conflicting sentiments and degrading actions, equally degrading reactions and crass evasions. Race is so familiar that many of us fail to see that just as it harms the perpetrator and the victim alike, it indicts us in the same way.

In the United States, race is inevitable, a reality that explains in part why when race comes up, even very smart people begin to either smirk, roll their eyes, sigh, protest or leave the room. Please, not race again.

While most of us view ourselves as being decent and honorable and ethical, the acknowledgment of race shames many of us, reminding us that for all of our laws and claims of believing in equality, we are creatures of racial exclusionism and abusiveness.

Like Sig Gissler, we should have the courage and honesty to acknowledge the ugly truth that race is our "rawest nerve." Only then can we begin to find answers.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Justice for all, regardless of race

To the Editor:

Everyone seems to be crying for justice for a specific murder ... Where is the cry for justice for any and all murders?

The statistics are chilling: In the United States alone, here are the number of murders: in 2006: 17,030; in 2007, 16,929; in 2008: 16,442; in 2009: 15,241 (2010 numbers not available).

Please note I have not categorized any of these: it doesn't matter if it's blacks killing whites or whites killing blacks or blacks killing blacks or whites killing whites...

The families of any and all of the murder victims cry out for justice, and rightly so. But to achieve any justice, there must be unity among all people, regardless of race or nationality.

If a member of my family were murdered, it really wouldn't make a bit of difference to me as to the race/nationality of the one committing the crime. I would simply want justice done in the right way ... in a court of law.

We still live in the United States where we are supposedly governed by laws based on Christian principles ... innocent until proven guilty in a court, by jury of our peers. My prayer is that Trayvon rests in peace, along with the 65,642+ people who have died in the past five years. May our quest for justice be tempered with love and forgiveness instead of the obvious tempers, outbursts, and hatred.

Obama's Brazilian model

President Obama hosted Brazilian President Dilma Rousseff at the White House on Monday. One syndicated news story published before the presidential parley asked, "What could Obama learn from Brazil President Dilma Rousseff?" The optimistic answer is: hopefully not much. This relationship is not in America's interest.

Ms. Rousseff is an exemplar of the anti-American hard left that is uniting in the developing world to check U.S. power. One of the main goals of her mission to Washington is to get Mr. Obama's seal of approval for Brasilia's ambition to acquire a permanent seat on the United Nations Security Council. U.S. support for this scheme would be self-destructive as Brazil would provide a reliable vote against American interests in the world body. Ms. Rousseff, a former communist guerrilla herself, is a strong supporter of anti-U.S. dictatorships such as the Castros in Cuba and Hugo Chavez in Venezuela. She has backed the Iranian mullahs' efforts to acquire nuclear capability while leading a club of nations pressing for U.S. nuclear disarmament. If the planet is divided up between those who are for us and those who are against us, Ms. Rousseff is on the wrong side.

Mr. Obama has nothing to learn from Brazil's leader on the economic front, either. Before she came to power last year, the South American giant finally seemed to be crawling into the society of serious nations. Although an old-school liberal himself, Ms. Rousseff's predecessor, former President Lula da Silva, took some big strides to improve Brazil's business climate and standing among investors by updating infrastructure, working collaboratively with international nongovernmental organizations and pushing a moderately pro-growth economic agenda. The perception of progress helped Brazil win the 2016 Olympic games and the 2014 World Cup, a crowning achievement for a soccer-mad people.

Ms. Rousseff has taken an abrupt fiscal U-turn, however, by clamping down on markets, instituting miles of new red tape and ramping up government spending. Like in Obama's America, the result has been dramatic economic decline. During the height of the Lula administration, confidence in Brazil's direction led to predictions of long-term economic growth rates of 5 percent and higher. But under the new statist direction of the governing coalition led by Ms. Rousseff's Workers' Party, the economy has tanked, with 2011's gross domestic product only growing by 2.7 percent, the lowest in South America.

Brazil is now the world's sixth-largest economy and a leader of the coalition of second-tier states looking to extract revenge for years of perceived Western "first world" imperialism. The narrative mirrors Mr. Obama's kneejerk "Blame America First" worldview. Brasilia also shows how left-wing bureaucracies mobilize to stifle dissent through censorship and confiscation of property when faced with public opposition. This week's confab between Mr. Obama and Ms. Rousseff was more than a photo-op for two leftists whispering about what the world could be if they had more power. It's about what the world is already becoming.

State Rep. Charles Chestnut, D-Gainesville, right, traces some district boundaries on an alternative Senate redistricting map proposed by Rep. Evan Jenne, D-Fort Lauderdale, left, at the House Redistricting Committee meeting Monday, March 26, at the Florida Capitol in Tallahassee, FL. Jenne withdrew his map but said he will offer it again on the House floor on Tuesday, to get the Democratic Party position on record -- for consideration when the redistricting plan reaches the Florida Supreme Court.

Legal filings pan redistricting do-over

By BILL KACZOR
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Democrats and groups that backed the Florida Constitution's new anti-gerrymandering standards took aim at lawmakers' revised Senate redistricting map in filings Tuesday with the state Supreme Court.

All say the Republican-controlled Legislature's do-over still violates the Fair Districts standards that the justices cited in kicking back the original map. They differ, though, on some of details including how minority districts should be drawn.

Preserving minority voting rights is one of the Fair Districts standards voters approved in 2010.

The Supreme Court, in a 5-2 opinion, faulted the Legislature for failing to do analyses of minority voting performance for the Senate map. The justices also ruled lawmakers violated the standards by favoring incumbents and Republicans, drawing non-compact districts and failing to follow geographic and political boundaries whenever feasible. The high court, though, unanimously upheld the House's map.

The Florida Democratic Party and a coalition of three Fair Districts groups filed separate alternative maps. The coalition is made up of the League of Women Voters of Florida, the National Council of La Raza and Florida Common Cause.

The Florida State Conference of NAACP Branches also backed Fair Districts but submitted a separate legal argument. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People contends two current black districts don't have enough minority voters in the revised Senate map to ensure they'll stay that way.

The coalition and Democrats, though, contend the Legislature's original Senate map continued to put more Democratic-leaning blacks in those districts than necessary to elect minority senators. The result, they say, would be fewer blacks in neighboring districts, which diminishes Democrats' chances of winning those seats.

"While the Florida NAACP would strongly protest the packing of black voters into super-majority districts, the Florida NAACP also opposes dismantling of black opportunity districts that are not packed, simply in the name of making them more compact and thus risking a diminished ability to elect," the conference's lawyers wrote.

The NAACP's focus is on seats currently held by Sens. Audrey Gibson, D-Jacksonville, and Chris Smith, D-Fort Lauderdale. It argues the Legislature's revised map cuts the black voting age population of those districts to 40.11 percent and 43.2 percent of the electorate that turned out in 2010.

More evidence is needed "about the extent of racially polarized voting in those regions" before a judgment can be made on whether those levels of black voting strength would be sufficient for an African-American to win, the NAACP contends.

Legislative data shows Smith's district currently has a 60.7 percent black voting age population. The Legislature's revised map would drop it to 50.1 percent, while it would be 51.2 percent on the Democratic plan and 49.1 percent on the coalition's map. Gibson's current district has a 46.9 percent black voting age population. It would drop to 43 percent on the Legislature's map, 42.4 on the Democrats' version and to 41.7 percent on the coalition plan.

The Democratic map would give Democrats, who have a slight edge in statewide voter registration, a better chance of cutting into the GOP's current 28-12 majority than the Legislature's plan.

President Barack Obama, who narrowly carried Florida in 2008, would have won in 20 of the Democratic map's districts, said Democratic Party spokeswoman Brannon Jordan. Obama would have won just 16 districts under the Legislature's map.

The Legislature hasn't yet filed a response, but GOP lawmakers said during a special redistricting session that their map fixes all flaws cited by the Supreme Court. The justices ruled eight districts and the plan's district numbering system violated the Fair Districts standards.

Smoke from the south

Indians baseball roughs up Tigers

Forget the forest, this smoke came from the south of the county.

Fort White High's baseball team beat Columbia High, 8-2, at Tiger Stadium on Tuesday to earn a split of the season series.

It is two teams going in opposite directions, despite Columbia having nailed down its district championship for the regular season.

Fort White (13-9) has won four straight games, while the Tigers (10-9) have dropped the same number.

"We played our best game of the year," Fort White head coach Mike Rizzi said. "We finally put all three phases together. They executed everything we called. I was proud of the way they approached the game. They did a great job."

Robby Howell continued his mound dominance for the Indians. He went the distance with six hits, three walks and 10 strikeouts. The two runs, though earned, were set up by a missed pop-up in the infield and a misplayed ball in the outfield. Howell retired the final seven batters to close out the game.

Howell got early help when Kevin Dupree blasted one out of the park in the first inning. Bryce Beach walked to lead off the inning and courtesy runner Kodey Owens scored ahead of Dupree. Brandon Myers had an infield hit in the inning.

The Indians added three runs in the second inning.

Kody Moniz got it started with a bad-hop single. Brandon Sharpe sacrificed and Moniz scored on an error on a ground ball by Taylor Morgan. Beach and Brady Wilkinson singled, the second one driving in Morgan. Dupree walked and that was the end of the evening for Columbia starter Jayce Barber.

Alan Espenship relieved and got out the inning, only giving up a sacrifice fly to Howell that scored Owens.

Fort White tacked on a run in the third inning. Lane Pendergrast led off with a walk and Moniz followed with a single. The runners advanced on a passed ball. With two outs, shortstop Dalton Mauldin fielded a grounder, but slipped and was unable to make the throw to first.

A bad-hop single for Dupree, followed by a hard-shot single by Howell led to two more runs for the Indians in the fourth inning. Myers bunted the runners over and Pendergrast and Sharpe added RBI-singles.

Dupree had a double in the fifth inning and Nick Butler had a pinch-hit single in the seventh.

Barber went 1½ innings with five hits, five runs (four earned), two walks and one strikeout. Espenship pitched 4½ innings with six hits, three runs (two earned), one walk, one hit batter and four strikeouts. Caleb Vaughn pitched the seventh inning with one hit and one strikeout.

Jason Plyn led off the second inning for the Tigers with a pop-up to the infield. The Indians did not make the catch and Plyn chugged into second base for a double. He advanced to third on a wild pitch and scored on a ground ball by Ryan Thomas.

Thomas had a double in the fourth inning and moved to third on an infield single by Andrew Nettles. Espenship grounded into a 5-4-3 double play as Thomas scored.

Thomas had another single in the game and Kellen Bailey and Espenship had the other hits for Columbia.

"Fort White did a good job," Columbia head coach J.T. Clark said. "They were the better team. We've got a long way to go. I've been saying it all year, but it has got to click eventually before it's too late."

Fort White hosts Taylor County High at 7 p.m. Thursday for Senior Night.

Newberry High visits CHS at 5:30 p.m. Thursday.

Petrino fired at Arkansas after 4 seasons

By KURT VOIGT
 Associated Press

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Arkansas fired coach Bobby Petrino on Tuesday, publicly dressing him down for unfairly hiring his mistress and intentionally misleading his boss about everything from their relationship to her presence at the motorcycle accident that ultimately cost him his job.

Athletic director Jeff Long announced his decision at an evening news conference and laid out a stunning laundry list of misdeeds against the man he hired away from the Atlanta Falcons four years ago.

The 51-year-old Petrino, a married father of four, had maintained an inappropriate relationship with 25-year-old Jessica Dorrell for a "significant" amount of time and at one point had given her $20,000,

Long said. He would not disclose details of the payment, but said both parties confirmed the "gift."

Dorrell, a former Razorbacks volleyball player, worked for the Razorbacks Foundation before she was hired by Petrino on March 28. Long said she was one of three finalists out of 159 applicants and got the job after a time frame Long said was "shorter than our normal affirmative action hiring process."

Petrino never disclosed his conflict of interest in hiring Dorrell or the payment, Long said.

And he ignored multiple chances to simply come clean.

"He made the decision to mislead the public, (and it) adversely affected the university and the football program," Long said, choking up at one point as he discussed telling up players that their coach was gone. There was a "pattern of misleading and manipulative behavior to deceive me."

GOLF REPORTS

Pair of aces highlight week

Scott Kishston rifled a six iron into the hole on No. 5 from 157 yards out during the Sunday blitz.

The shot produced his third career ace and, needless to say, picked up the closest to the pin prize on that hole.
 Buddy Slay overcame Kishston's eagle to take first place in the blitz at +10. Kishston (+8) was in second place, one shot ahead of Bob Randall.

Other closest to the pin winners were Randall on No. 7 and Terry Hunter on Nos. 15 and 17.

Eleven skins were divided among Slay (3), Mickey Wilcox, (2), Terry Hunter (2), Randall (2), Chad Hunter, with an eagle on No. 9, and Kishston.

Daniel Kosclow had the week's second ace. His six iron found the hole on No. 17 from 154 yards.

Players lucky enough to team with Peter Hanson won or tied for first place in all three flights of the Master's blitz.

David Pope, Scott Kishston and Jordan Hale combined their score with the Swedish pro's +13 for their wins. Terry Hunter teamed with Matt Kuchar to tie for first in A flight.

Other winners in the 47 man field with their Masters partner were:

■ A flight — third place-Tom Shelton (Phil

 ■ C flight — second place-Randy Sommers, (Mickelson), third place-Tom Wade (Henrik Stenson), fourth place (tie)-Mike Jacobs (Sergio Garcia) and Michael Yacovelli (Kuchar).

Mike McCranie and Jerry West tied for first in A flight of Wednesday's blitz with +4. Buddy Slay (+2) and Donald Roberts (+1) trailed the winners.

The B flight ended in a rare three-way tie among Tony Garcia, Dennis Hendershot and

'Bubba' now has to learn to master fame

By DOUG FERGUSON

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Bubba Watson had reason to feel like a rock star.

His playoff win at the Masters on the second extra hole stretched into early evening, and when he finally slipped on the green jacket during the trophy presentation, the flashes from so many cameras danced across his face like strobe lights.

"I'm not ready for fame," Watson said. "I don't really want to be famous or anything like that. I just want to be me and play golf."

He might not have a choice. His style of play — "Bubba golf" is what he likes to call it — already made him one of the popular figures on the PGA Tour.

In the buttoned-up sport of golf, Watson is different. He hits the ball a mile, rarely in a straight line to where he's trying to get. His driver is pink from the shaft to the head. When he's not on the course, he is posting videos of his crazy stunts on Twitter. His dream purchase was the "General Lee 01," the original car in the TV series "The Dukes of Hazard."

And now he is the Masters champion.

Tiger Woods and Phil Mickelson are the top two stars of their generation. Rory McIlroy is right behind them, carving his own niche around the world as a U.S. Open champion with the rawest skill of any player in his 20s.

And now there is Bubba, on a first-name basis everywhere he goes.

Perhaps it was only fitting that during his victory speech Sunday he found one downside to winning the Masters. He has been in the members' locker room since he first showed up at Augusta National in 2008 and couldn't break 70. The next time he drives down Magnolia Lane, he will walk through a different door, up the stairs to the locker room reserved for champions.

"I heard now that I leave the locker room," Watson said. "It's going to be sad. I've been there for four years. I know all the guys. They treat me real well. So, sorry."

It's time to move on, and move up.

Watson, with his fourth career win in his last 51 starts, is now No. 4 in the world, which makes him the highest-ranked American. He is virtually a lock to be on the Ryder Cup team.

Watson lost a playoff to Martin Kaymer at the 2010 PGA Championship. He has earned more than $6 million in the last two seasons and played in the 2010 Ryder Cup.

How much better can he be?

"Major champion ... I mean, can't do any better than this," he said. "I've won four times and won a major. Who knows? That's the best part about history. We don't know what's going to happen. We don't know the future. We don't know anything. Hopefully, I keep crying. Hopefully, I keep having the passion to play golf and keep doing what I'm doing."

Watson showed his emotions at the start of the week. Someone asked him what it would mean to win, and he brought up the adoption of his first son, Caleb, two weeks ago. Watson got so choked up he walked away.

Winning the Masters? He was uncontrollable.

He sobbed on the shoulder of his mother, Molly, and hugged everyone he could find.

Watson still doesn't have a teacher.

"Why do I want somebody to tell me what to do?" he once said. "I'm still a kid. I'm hitting shots that I want to hit. I'm doing the things that I want to do. I play it my way."

Bubba golf. It's going to be fun.

Marlins suspend Guillen

Associated Press

MIAMI — Miami Marlins manager Ozzie Guillen was suspended for five games Tuesday because of his comments about Fidel Castro, and he again apologized and said he'll do whatever he can to repair relations with Cuban-Americans angered by the remarks.

The suspension by the team takes effect immediately. It was announced shortly before Guillen held a news conference to explain what he said.

The Venezuelan told Time magazine he loves Castro and respects the retired Cuban leader for staying in power so long. In response, at least two local officials said Guillen should lose his job.

At the news conference, Guillen said his comments were misinterpreted by the reporter, and he doesn't love or admire the dictator.

"I was saying I cannot believe somebody who hurt so many people over the years is still alive," Guillen told the news conference.

But Guillen took responsibility for the uproar, and said it left him sad and embarrassed. He also said he accepted the team's punishment.

"I'm very sorry about the problem, what happened," said Guillen, who is only five games into his tenure with the Marlins. "I will do everything in my power to make it better. ... I know it's going to be a very bumpy ride."

DEAR ABBY

Comments on her hair color have wild child feeling blue

Abigail Van Buren www.dearabby.com

DEAR ABBY: What's the best thing to do when someone insults me for being myself? My hair has been bright blue for the last two semesters of college. I like it. I'm young, and my family is letting me express my "wild" side while I'm in school.

Six months ago I went to meet my ex-boyfriend's mother, and the first thing she said to me was, "You're one of my son's phases, right? Boys don't actually bring girls with blue hair home to Mama." Abby, it was with my ex's encouragement that I dyed my hair this bright color.

My family, my church and most of my teachers think it's OK. Is there a social stigma attached to exotically dyed hair? And what's the best way to react when someone insults me for just being myself? - NICE PERSON IN WALLAND, TENN.

DEAR NICE PERSON: Whether there's a stigma attached to looking different depends on who is doing the looking. Some people - your ex-boyfriend's mother, for instance - find it off-putting. Did you tell her that it was with her son's encouragement that you dyed your hair blue? It would have been interesting to see her reaction. It would also be interesting to know what shade his current girlfriend's hair is.

When others comment about the unusual color of your hair, instead of treating it as an insult, smile and say, "Don't judge a book by its cover." Then change the subject.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for 26 years. I love him, but he's a terrible listener. He's not that way with everyone. When we're out socializing, he's a good conversationalist and a polite listener. It's when we are home that he never lets me finish a sentence. When we're alone, I can't express a complete opinion or thought without being interrupted halfway through a word or sentence. He just cuts me off and starts talking on the subject.

I'm an intelligent woman with valid opinions, but he would rather hear the sound of his own voice than mine. How do I get him to let me speak and not interrupt? - SILENCED IN ILLINOIS DEAR SILENCED: Is your husband controlling in other aspects of your relationship?

If not, the problem may be that you have been together so long he thinks he knows where your sentences are going, so he responds before you complete your entire thought. One way to handle this would be to interrupt HIM by saying, "Excuse me! I wasn't finished talking." Or, "You finished my sentence, but that wasn't what I was going to say. What I meant was ..."

DEAR ABBY: My sister, "Beth," and I are very close, but a constant source of contention is her boyfriend, "Brody." Beth and Brody have broken up several times, and each time it happens, she fills me in on every horrible thing he has ever done.

They always seem to get back together, and then Beth expects me to like him despite everything I know. Does the fact that she forgives and forgets mean that I have to do the same? - TOO MUCH INFO IN OHIO

DEAR TOO MUCH INFO: No, it doesn't. But you should be civil, even if you're not warm and friendly. Then cross your fingers and hope your sister recognizes less drama is healthier and the relationship ends soon.

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.
