Warehouse fire destroys flea market

Morrell's suffers possible smoke damage but is otherwise OK.

By TONY BRITT and LAURA HAMPSON

A morning fire swept through a 9,000 square foot building near Morrell's Home Furnishings on Wednesday, destroying a flea market.

The fire at Clifford's Flea Market, 835 SW Deputy Jeff Davis Drive, left only blackened and scorched tin, charred metal pieces and melted globs of indistinguishable plastic.

The building was owned by Morrell's Home Furnishings and leased to Clifford Blackmon.

Thick smoke from the fire engulfed the entrance to Morrell's, but the furniture building did not catch fire, despite rumors that circulated Wednesday.

The flea market warehouse was the original home of Morrell's Home Furnishings. No one was injured in the blaze.

Blackmon, who operated the flea market, was devastated by the loss.

"I've lost everything I own," he said as firefighters continued their work. The building and its contents were uninsured, he said.

John Norman, another vendor at the flea market, was inside when the fire began.

"I got a big dose of smoke but got out in time," he said at the scene.

His destroyed goods - including antique video games and electronics - were irreplaceable, he said.

"I had original Ataris in boxes," he said. "Things you couldn't buy at Walmart."

Paul Mabile, one of the owners of Morrell's Home Furnishings, said he was uncertain if any of their products suffered smoke damage. The store was closed when the fire occurred.

"Inside the furniture building there was some smoke but we have one of the local restoration companies in there now and they are going to hook-up some equipment to try to clean the air," he said. "Hopefully there is nothing. The smell of smoke is not real strong in there so we should be OK."

"When I was driving up I saw a big, black cloud of smoke and I figured it was pretty bad because it was a pretty big cloud," Mabile said. "About half of the building was on fire when I arrived and within five minutes the whole thing was on fire and the flames were shooting out the end of the breezeway touching the home furnishings building."

Mabile said the flea market building was a wooden structure constructed in the late 1960s.

The Columbia County Fire Department received a call about the fire at 8:32 a.m.

David Boozer, Columbia County Interim Fire Chief, said the cause of the fire is under investigation and noted two state fire marshals were on the scene as well as a representative from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives.

Clifford Blackmon, who leased the warehouse and operated a flea market inside, is pictured near the remains of his business on Wednesday.

"When the initial crews came in they made an interior survey and all the fire was up is the attic, so they backed out," Boozer said.

He said attic fires are the most dangerous kind here because there is no barrier and the fire just runs.

"We went to try to make an offensive attack but it wasn't possible, because we had a really significant wind event that kicked in," he said.

"It took anywhere from an hour and 30 minutes to two hours to control the fire," Boozer said. "It was a challenge just because of the wind."

Boozer said preliminary indications are that the fire started on the rear southwest corner of the building. Strong winds blowing to the northeast drove the fire through the building. "It began heating things up as it progressed and it was just like a chain reaction," he said.

"We went to a defensive mode and in doing so we set up protective lines to protect the building," he said.

In addition to the challenges from the wind, Boozer said at one point there was an issue with water supply.

"There was a delay in some water," he said. "I really don't know all the details, but we experienced somewhat of a delay in getting some water, but we adjusted and did what we had to do."

Firefighters spent more than seven hours at the scene, conducting mop-up operations after the initial

Dick Clark dies at 82

By LYNN ELBER

Associated Press

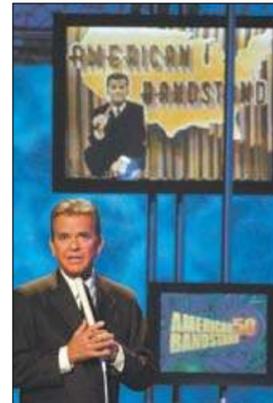

LOS ANGELES — Dick Clark, the ever-youthful television host and tireless entrepreneur who helped bring rock 'n' roll into the mainstream on "American Bandstand," and later produced and hosted a vast range of programming from game shows to the year-end countdown from Times Square on "New Year's Rockin' Eve," has died. He was 82.

Spokesman Paul Shefrin said Clark had a heart attack Wednesday morning at Saint John's hospital in Santa Monica, where he had gone the day before for an outpatient procedure.

Clark had continued performing even after he suffered a stroke in 2004 that affected his ability to speak and walk.

Townsend offers to resign as White Springs manager

By TONY BRITT

tbritt@lakecityreporter.com

WHITE SPRINGS — Robert Townsend, the town manager and public works director, has submitted his resignation, but officials have postponed their decision to accept the resignation until questions about Townsend's pension can be answered.

Townsend, who has been on paid administrative leave for more than three weeks, tendered his resignation to town officials with Wednesday as the effective date.

"We had a motion to accept the resignation which was seconded, but when discussion was called there was a question from a resident about an issue relating to Townsend's pension, which we were not able to answer," said Helen Miller, White Springs mayor.

With town officials unable to fully answer the question about Townsend's pension, they unanimously voted to table the decision until a later meeting.

"We will revisit this Thursday, April 26, when we have an organizational meeting," Miller said.

During the organizational meeting next week the first order of business will be to elect a mayor and vice mayor then town officials will revisit the resignation and questions about Townsend's pension. The town council is then expected to vote.

Wednesday night's meeting was specifically called to discuss Townsend's employment with the Town of White Springs. Townsend has been the White Springs town manager for close to 13 years.

Townsend was placed on paid administrative leave after town officials learned he was under investigation by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement.

Miller said town officials have not received any additional information from FDLE regarding its inves-

California official joins network

SAN FRANCISCO – California Lt. Gov. Gavin Newsom is getting a new platform for sharing his made-in-San Francisco values – a national cable television talk show.

Current TV, the liberal-leaning cable channel co-founded by former Vice President Al Gore, announced Wednesday that it had retained the telegenic Democrat to host a weekly hour-long program during which he will chat up “notables from Silicon Valley, Hollywood and beyond.”

Newsom

“The Gavin Newsom Show” is scheduled to premiere in May during an as-yet undetermined time slot, Current spokeswoman Laura Nelson said.

Newsom, who knows both Gore and Current CEO Joel Hyatt, approached the network with the idea for the program, the lieutenant governor’s spokesman, Francisco Castillo, said. He cleared it with his lawyers to make sure it would not pose a conflict with his elected office, Castillo said.

NewsCorp suspends some non-U.S. stock voting rights

LOS ANGELES – News Corp., the owner of the Fox television network, said Wednesday that it suspended the voting rights of some stock owned by foreigners to comply with a U.S. law that restricts the foreign ownership of broadcast licenses.

The company said it discovered a potential violation as it was preparing to renew licenses for its 27 owned-and-operated TV stations.

The suspension affects half the voting rights of non-U.S. owners of News Corp.’s Class B shares, the class of stock with voting rights. The more widely traded Class A shares carry no votes in important decisions such as board member elections.

Normally, such a move would increase the voting power of CEO and founder Rupert Murdoch and his family’s trust, which holds a 39.7 percent voting stake in the company. But News Corp. said they agreed to refrain from voting shares they hold in a way that would increase their grip on the company.

Lawsuit shows ‘Bachelor’ discriminates those of color

NASHVILLE, Tenn. – Two black men are taking “The Bachelor” and “The Bachelorette” to court with a lawsuit that claims the reality shows are blocking contestants of color from starring roles.

Nathaniel Claybrooks and Christopher Johnson filed a federal lawsuit in Nashville Wednesday. It says the popular TV shows are engaged in a pattern of racial discrimination that intentionally excludes people of color.

The two men say that after 10 years and a combined total of 23 seasons of “The Bachelor” and “The Bachelorette,” neither has featured a single person of color in a central role.

The lawsuit names Michael Fleiss, the creator of the shows, as well as ABC, Warner Horizon Television, Next Entertainment and NZK Productions.

Calls and emails to Fleiss’ publicist and an email to an ABC publicist were not immediately returned.

The Nashville residents, one a small business owner and the other a teacher, applied unsuccessfully last year for the leading role in “The Bachelor.”

Lucasfilm rejects bid to restart Northern California project

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. – A company owned by George Lucas on Wednesday rejected a move by Marin County officials to persuade the filmmaker to resurrect a plan to build a massive film studio north of San Francisco.

The Board of Supervisors on Tuesday passed a resolution commending the “Star Wars” creator and calling on him to move forward with the controversial Grady Ranch project.

The panel pledged to help Lucasfilm Ltd. clear regulatory hurdles that could slow down its construction.

Nearly 30 speakers praised the studio project and contributions by Lucas to the community at the meeting, the Marin Independent Journal reported.

Judge will not dismiss ‘Desperate Housewife’ lawsuit

LOS ANGELES – A judge has refused to dismiss Nicollette Sheridan’s lawsuit over the demise of her role on “Desperate Housewives.”

City News Service says Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Elizabeth Allen White urged the parties Wednesday to continue settlement talks but set a new trial for Sept. 10.

A jury deadlocked 8-4 in favor of Sheridan’s claim after a trial last month.

Sheridan sued ABC/Disney and series creator Marc Cherry for $6 Million for wrongful termination after her character, Edie Britt, was killed off in a 2008 episode. She seeks punitive damages.

Blair cautions against Mideast disengagement

WEST PALM BEACH – Former British Prime Minister Tony Blair cautioned Wednesday against disengagement in the Middle East, saying such a move would be a mistake that threatens the security of the West.

Speaking at a leadership conference at Palm Beach Atlantic University, Blair said he now recognizes even more than when he was in office the threat of radical Islam and the importance of remaining involved in the Mideast.

“If we disengage from what’s happening in the Middle East right now,” he said, “we will make a mistake.”

Blair suggested he would have been even more deeply involved in Middle East issues if he could relive his term, and he “would be even more radical” in his domestic reforms.

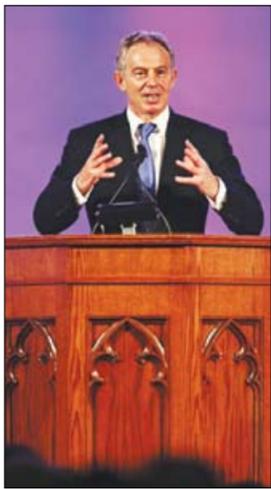

The British leader spoke to several hundred people crowded into an octagon-shaped chapel at the Christian college. Despite worldwide turmoil, Blair said he remains profoundly optimistic and believes globalization will be positive for people around the world.

“I can truly say the one disease I never caught at Downing Street was cynicism,” he said.

Burned bodies found near trail ID’d as students

ORLANDO – Authorities have identified two bodies found burned this past weekend near a popular running trail in a suburb of Orlando as students from a local high school.

The Orange County Sheriff’s Office reported Wednesday that the bodies were identified by the medical examiner as Winter Park High School students, 16-year-old Nicholas Presha and 18-year-old Jeremy Stewart.

Detectives are calling the deaths a homicide, but not releasing any other information. Investigators have been at the scene since receiving a 911 call Sunday morning reporting a small fire burning near a storage shed.

Panhandle town’s mayor fires police chief

CRESTVIEW –The Panhandle town of Crestview is looking for a new police chief.

The city’s mayor fired Police Chief Brian Mitchell on Wednesday. According to the Northwest Florida Daily News, Mayor David Cadle said an ongoing investigation of the police department by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement has eroded his confidence in Mitchell.

A former major in the department has pleaded not guilty to a charge of racketeering. The man was hired by Mitchell.

Stolen painting handed over to Jewish family

TALLAHASSEE – A nearly 500-year-old Italian painting is now back in the hands of a Jewish family that lost it during World War II.

U.S. authorities in Tallahassee on Wednesday signed paperwork to return the Baroque painting to representatives of the family of Federico Gentili di Giuseppe.

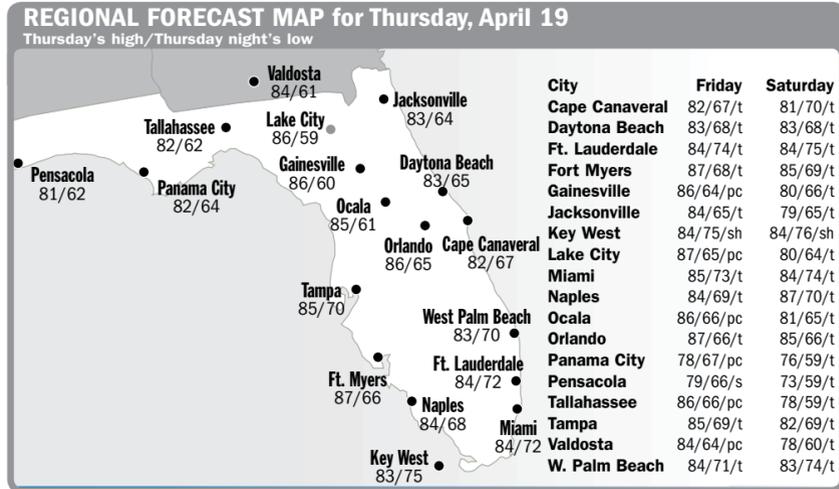

He died in 1940 shortly before the Nazis occupied France. The Vichy government later sold the painting, but the sale has been deemed illegal.

The family plans to sell the painting - “Christ Carrying the Cross” - at an auction later this year. The painting could fetch up to $3.5 million.

U.S. authorities seized the painting from a Florida museum last November after discovering the family had been seeking its return.

Community comes together to help local family

By LAURA HAMPSON
lhampson@lakecityreporter.com

Friends, neighbors and strangers are coming together to support a local family hit hard by a medical emergency.

Daniel Evans of Lake City suffered a stroke Oct. 11.

After surgery, intensive care and therapy, Evans was able to return home April 14.

However Evans' hospital bed and medical equipment take up the entire living room of the family's small, single-wide mobile home, said Cindi Diaz, family friend. "We've got to do something for him," she said. "I know our community has pulled together for a lot of things."

Evans worked for Homes of Merit for 18 years but was laid off, said his wife, Susan Evans. About six years ago the family of four, including a teenaged son and daughter, lost their home and moved into the single wide, she said.

She said because of the stroke her husband is completely paralyzed on his left side and requires constant care.

Susan Evans was a teacher at Covenant Community School, but has spent the last five months by her husband's side. "He survived for a reason," she said.

To help get the family into a larger home that is more accommodating to Evans' long-term care, Applebee's, 2893 West U.S. 90, is donating 10 percent of meals to the family on April 22 and 29. Diners must show this article or a flyer available at the restaurant to the waitress in order to donate.

On May 5 there will be a Zumba class from 9 to 10:30 a.m. at Teen Town, 533 NW DeSoto Street. The $10 class fee goes to family.

Those who wish to help can also donate to the Daniel Evans Fund at First Federal Bank of Florida.

knockdown of the fire.

Excavation equipment had to be brought in to move most of the charred debris so firefighters could spray hidden hot spots with water to prevent the fire from re-igniting.

Although Boozer did not have the final estimated value of the building, he said just the vendors' contents were estimated to be $100,000 to $130,000.

"This was a pretty extensive event," he said.

Columbia County Fire Rescue responded to the blaze with at least nine units and 50 personnel who were joined by the Lake City Fire Department which responded with two units and four personnel.

Mabile said the fire interrupted power and communications. "All of the power to that [home furnishings building] and the phones to everything is out," he said. "All of my Internet is out and of course my software runs off the Internet."

He said there were no plans to close Morrell's because of the fire.

"As soon as we get electricity back in that building we'll be up and running," he said.

"It was kind of neat all the phone calls I got from people worried us and making sure everybody was OK," he said. "It's good to know that people care."

MANAGER: Townsend offers to resign

tigation. The nature of the investigation has not been disclosed.

Townsend's resignation also impacts the town's budget, as the town may not have enough money to offer the position to another person.

"We have a loan for our wastewater treatment plant and we have a loan and the interest on that invested amount is what we've been using to pay back the loan," Miller said. "Due to the recession, the interest dividends emanating from that investment are less than they've been in the past, so we currently have a shortfall. We are now looking at how do we cut our operating expenses in the next year's budget so we can allocate more funds to a sinking fund to ensure we can pay back the loan as required."

Town Clerk Shirley Heath

will continue to serve as the interim town manager.

However, filling the spot for the public works director has not been as simple.

The town council has contracted with a licensed water operator, who is monitoring the requirements after hours from his other position. Andrew Green, who is on the town hall staff, will be taking water samples eight times a day, as required by the state Department of Environmental Protection.

"To deal with both the near term and the longer term, we're dealing with our license operator, Green, and a representative from the Rural Water Department so that we can have better understanding of what the options are for going forward," Miller said, noting officials plan to look at automated water sampling options.

Wellborn man killed in I-75 crash

From staff reports

Officials on Wednesday released the name of a Wellborn man who died Tuesday when a tire failure caused him to lose control of his vehicle.

Gary Lee Prince, 56, was ejected from his vehicle and died, according to a Florida Highway Patrol report. Officials waited to release the name until making contact with Prince's next of kin.

Prince was driving north on the inside lane of Interstate 75 in Hamilton County at 10:30 a.m. when his vehicle's left front tire came apart, according to the report.

Prince was unable to maintain control of his 1991 Ford Explorer, which began rotating and traveled across the center and right lane.

The vehicle slid across the weigh station exit ramp and into the grassy shoulder, where it overturned at least once and ejected Prince, who was not wearing his seat belt. He died at the scene.

ONE

Take sneak attack on Kabul as warning

In one respect, the Haqqani network's synchronized attacks in Afghanistan Sunday were a success. The Pakistani-backed Taliban affiliate, keeping a disciplined cell-phone silence, ferried fighters, weapons and ammunition from across Afghanistan to simultaneously attack multiple targets in four provinces, including two targets in Kabul.

The attacks came as a surprise that Afghan President Hamid Karzai deemed "an intelligence failure for us and especially NATO." With Karzai, the failing is never totally his.

The insurgents, using a favored tactic, occupied buildings that were vacant or under construction, and then held out tenaciously.

This was the first coordinated operation since Sept. 13, when there was an ineffective attack near the U.S. embassy and NATO headquarters.

And it proved exactly what? Only that under certain circumstances, the Taliban are capable of launching surprise attacks and willing to sustain large losses to do so. They failed to hold their gains, and they forced no major policy changes, neither the Afghans' nor ours.

The attack, however, does give those attending the NATO summit May 20-21 in Chicago food for thought. The attacks argue for a robust U.S. and NATO presence through 2013 and right up until - and maybe beyond - the planned 2014 handover to Afghan forces.

We may not be able to exit Afghanistan as quickly and abruptly as the White House would like. NATO Secretary General Anders Fogh Rasmussen perhaps went further than the Obama administration would have liked when he pledged: "We will not abandon Afghanistan after 2014. We will stay and assist. NATO is here as Afghanistan's partner."

'Obamacare' fosters that sinking feeling

President Barack Obama can't seem to get anything right, or at least no more than half right, as when he said the other day that Google and Facebook "would not exist" without government spending on basic science and research. It is true that the Internet arose out of a military project, and it is also true that one of the few places Obama is willing to cut spending is the military. Go figure.

Spending is Obama's first love, ideologically speaking. Like most everyone else of leftward bent, he thinks throwing public money at whatever looks evil will make it good, will make it shine, will render Utopia. What it will actually do is destroy America, and you would think that voters would fight back by doing some throwing themselves, as in throwing the rascals out.

Sadly, voters get led into silliness, first by the politicians and then by too many reporters looking for zing instead of substance while wasting an awful lot of breath speculating on who will win. They need to get around more to serious issues. And no, I do not mean the story about Republicans being against contraceptives that will somehow go away without the blessing of the healthcare reform law known as "Obamacare."

The GOP is not against birth control. The truth is that everyone can get contraceptives cheaply while the poor can get them for free and that insurance companies have been providing contraceptive coverage for years. The chief contraceptive innovation of Obamacare, besides achieving nothing by forcing some religions to act against their faith, is to end co-payments, thereby forcing everyone to pay more on insurance premiums.

Jay Ambrose
Speaktojay@aol.com

The provision sums up part of what Obamacare is about: interventions helping some by the most autocratic, complicated, ineffective means possible while hurting many others. But Obamacare is also about crazy spending.

If you are in doubt, meet Charles Blahous. He is a terrifically smart guy whose specialty is entitlement programs. I myself met him when he was a top economic adviser to President George W. Bush. He is now a trustee for Medicare and Social Security, appointed to the position by Obama, and has lately come out with a peer-reviewed, fact-filled analysis refuting political blather to the effect that Obamacare will actually save money.

Though Obamacare was supposed to lessen total health care spending, Blahous tells us, over the next 10 years it will boost it by some $1.15 trillion while adding somewhere between $340 billion to $530 billion to federal deficits. But, hey, what's with these straightforward calculations? Doesn't Blahous know Washington prefers to operate in the midst of numerical confusion?

For decades, the Congressional Budget Office has eased political life on both sides of the aisle by scoring the costs of some programs in a manner that says you have cut spending when you haven't. Whoopee, said the Obama administration, looking to help subsidize Obamacare medical treatments for tens of millions of people with Medicare cuts that aren't really cuts at all. They are in effect funds to be used for Medicare benefits in years to come.

Are there lifeboats for this fiscal Titanic of ours? We could go under. The debt is projected to reach $16 trillion by the end of the fiscal year, and both parties' plans would increase it by trillions more over the next 10 years. The chief Republican plan at least increases it by less and focuses on some important reduced-spending ambitions with tax reform. The Obama plan seeks big-time tax hikes without true reform, meaning you can kiss economic growth goodbye. Obama virtually ignores the icebergs of Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid.

Wait - my view is just a conservative extreme, right? Wrong. Any number of reasonably moderate economic thinkers are shuddering out loud these days. The nation should pay attention, and, by the way, someone ought to tell Obama the most significant technological innovations have come from private entrepreneurs.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Christians do vote for Obama

To the Editor:

I am totally appalled that you would put an article in the paper that you have about Obama and Christians. I want you to know that I am a proud Democrat, and most definitely a Christian. I love the Lord more today than yesterday. I get up in the morning and before I begin my day, I do my devotions and prayers. The Prayer of Protection is powerful. I get more out of that than going to church and listening to all the false prophets throwing their false opinions and fear upon their congregation.

My dad, father-in-law, husband and son did their time in the military. They were and are proud of their country. When they were doing their service and showing their allegiance for our country, they were not thinking of Democrats, Republicans, or Independents. They were doing their job and praying to the Father and asking his son Jesus Christ to watch over them. They were not thinking of any of this political nonsense or hate that your writer is trying to spread. Shame on her and others.

Obama has been trying to straighten out the mess that the Republicans have put us into with their corporations and big spending. I am not trying to be as low as your writer, but get real.

Obama is looking after people that know what it is like to struggle to make ends meet. Making the mortgage payment, rent, utilities, groceries, etc. is the real challenge. I was not born with a silver spoon in my mouth. I have always had to work for everything. I have paid my dues, as well as many others in this country. I feel everyone should be given a chance, not just the selected few, who think they own the world.

There will be a surprise for you right wing Republicans when you get to heaven, if you get to heaven, there will be plenty of Democrat, liberal people smiling at you. Also, believe this, we will be praying for you, not hating you. The Bible says to love your neighbors and enemies. You need to read the scripture more instead of throwing your false innuendoes around.

When it comes time for re-election, I will vote for Obama and do it with pride, knowing that I am doing my duty to God and my country and showing the love that the Lord has placed on my heart. I refuse to carry hate around with me, or to judge others, if their opinion is different than mine. Remember we are all God's children.

Your writers opinion is the main reason I do not attend church anymore. I prefer to be around good positive people that respect people and love mankind. Your writer needs to enjoy God's wonderful blessings, instead of spreading hate, false accusations and filling your pockets while others suffer. Shame on you.

OBAMA, OBAMA, OBAMA.

ANOTHER

'Fair' elections, Obama-style

The November presidential election is shaping up as a clear choice between a vision of a smaller federal role and President Obama's view that there's no limit to what the government can do. One thing the administration won't do is ensure the choices Americans make at the ballot box are properly counted.

Attorney General Eric H. Holder Jr. has declared that widespread voter fraud "does not really exist" in the United States. That was before video guerrillas presented him with an up-close view of the problem. Earlier this month, anti-corruption activist James O'Keefe released footage showing a D.C. poll worker offering Mr. Holder's ballot to an actor on primary day. The District does not require voters to produce identification, so the actor simply provided Mr. Holder's name and address and - voila - he was handed the ballot. He declined to accept it in order to avoid actual voter fraud.

The stunt was an obvious attempt to embarrass the nation's top law enforcement officer and demonstrate how easy it is to commit fraud where voter IDs are not mandatory. Mr. Holder's defenders argue that a single incident does not mean large-scale ballot manipulation is actually happening.

Still, ballot irregularities have been cataloged across the country. In April 2011, officials for the Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now (ACORN) in Nevada pleaded guilty to running an illegal voter-registration scheme. Earlier this month, Democratic Party officials in Indiana were indicted on vote fraud charges for purportedly forging signatures on Barack Obama's 2008 primary petitions. In Virginia, 10 felons were charged with making false statements on voter registration forms.

Mr. Holder has blocked new state laws requiring voters to present government-issued IDs at polling places. In December, the Justice Department cited the 1965 Voting Rights Act in nullifying South Carolina's new voter ID law, arguing that the new provision could discourage minorities who do not have an ID from voting. In March, Justice also blocked Texas from enforcing its statute.

The Pew Center on the States issued a report in February titled "Inaccurate, Costly and Inefficient," which found about 24 million voter registrations, or 13 percent of the nation's total, are invalid or contain major inaccuracies. As many as 2.75 million persons are registered in more than one state, and 1.8 million deceased individuals are still listed on voter rolls.

President Obama's winning margin in the 2008 presidential election was less than 10 million, and George W. Bush's in 2004 was just 3 million. With such a large number of registration inaccuracies, fraudulent ballots could determine the winner in a tight presidential contest.

Fair elections are a precondition for democratic governance. The Obama administration's refusal to recognize the fundamental importance of an honest count only strengthens the growing notion that it seeks advantage, not justice. America is better than that.

Boys Club set for 40th anniversary celebration

By LAURA HAMPSON
lhampson@lakecityreporter.com

For 40 years the Boys Club of Columbia County has provided local children with a safe, activity-filled place to go after school.

Past members, coaches and the community will gather Saturday at 5:30 p.m. for a 40th anniversary celebration at the Columbia County Fairgrounds banquet hall.

"I'm looking forward to seeing all the past members and enjoying the celebration," said Bill Caley, club executive director.

The club first opened its doors in downtown Lake City near Memorial Stadium in 1972, he said. It moved to a building near Lake Jeffrey and then to the current School Board Administrative Complex. In 1987 it moved to its current location, the Messer-Norton-Summerall building, 279 NE Jones Way.

Now the club hosts about 75 elementary and middle school children daily. The children can start on homework, use computers and burn off energy with games like two square, basketball and air hockey, he said.

Old photographs, newspaper articles and memorabilia will be displayed at the event, which hopes to draw 200 people, he said. Past director John Bailey and past members will speak about the club.

Caley said past members who are now adults tell him of the fond memories they have of the club and the friends they made there.

He said he is hoping past members will reconnect at the event. "It's a celebration of 40 years."

The $10 ticket, available at the club or at the door, includes a barbecue dinner. For more information call 752-4184.

JASON MATTHEW WALKER/Lake City Reporter

Boys Club of Columbia County members Kylen Callum (from left), 10; Natalie Hollingsworth, 10; Jaedon Stern, 9; Jevon Williams, 13; and Joslyn Jones, 7, pose for a photograph Wednesday at the club. The organization is having a 40th anniversary celebration Saturday at 5:30 p.m. at the Columbia County Fairgrounds.

CLARK: Heart attack claims legendary television host, producer at age 82

oldest teenager" because of his boyish appearance, Clark bridged the rebellious new music scene and traditional show business, and was equally comfortable whether chatting about music with Sam Cooke or bantering with Ed McMahon about TV bloopers. He thrived as the founder of Dick Clark Productions, supplying movies, game and music shows, beauty contests and more to TV. Among his credits: "The $25,000 Pyramid," "TV's Bloopers and Practical Jokes" and the American Music Awards.

For a time in the 1980s, he had shows on all three networks and was listed among the Forbes 400 of wealthiest Americans. Clark also was part of radio as partner in the United Stations Radio Network, which provided programs — including Clark's — to thousands of stations.

"There's hardly any segment of the population that doesn't see what I do," Clark told The Associated Press in a 1985 interview. "It can be embarrassing. People come up to me and say, 'I love your show,' and I have no idea which one they're talking about."

The original "American Bandstand" was one of network TV's longest-running series as part of ABC's daytime lineup from 1957 to 1987. It later aired for a year in syndication and briefly on the USA Network. Over the years, it introduced stars ranging from Buddy Holly to Madonna. The show's status as an American cultural institution was solidified when Clark donated Bandstand's original podium and backdrop to the Smithsonian Institution.

Clark joined "Bandstand" in 1956 after Bob Horn, who'd been the host since its 1952 debut, was fired. Under Clark's guidance, it went from a local Philadelphia show to a national phenomenon.

"I played records, the kids danced, and America watched," was how Clark once described the series' simplicity. In his 1958 hit "Sweet Little Sixteen," Chuck Berry sang that "they'll be rocking on Bandstand, Philadelphia, P.A."

As a host, he had the smooth delivery of a seasoned radio announcer. As a producer, he had an ear for a hit record. He also knew how to make wary adults welcome this odd new breed of music in their homes.

Clark endured accusations that he was in with the squares, with critic Lester Bangs defining Bandstand as "a leggily acceptable euphemism of the teenage experience." In a 1985 interview, Clark acknowledged the complaints. "But I knew at the time that if we didn't make the presentation to the older generation palatable, it could kill it."

"So along with Little Richard and Chuck Berry and the Platters and the Crows and the Jayhawks ... the boys wore coats and ties and the girls combed their hair and they all looked like sweet little kids into a high school dance," he said.

But Clark defended pop artists and artistic freedom, the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame said in an online biography of the 1993 inductee. He helped give black artists their due by playing original R&B recordings instead of cover versions by white performers, and he condemned censorship.

His stroke in December 2004 forced him to miss his annual appearance on "Dick Clark's New Year's Rockin' Eve." He returned the following year and, although his speech at times was difficult to understand, many praised his bravery, including other stroke victims.

Still speaking with difficulty, he continued taking part in his New Year's shows, though in a diminished role. Ryan Seacrest became the main host.

"I'm just thankful I'm still able to enjoy this once-a-year treat," he told The Associated Press by e-mail in December 2008 as another New Year's Eve approached.

He was honored at the Emmy Awards in 2006, telling the crowd: "I have accomplished my childhood dream, to be in show business. Everybody should be so lucky to have their dreams come true. I've been truly blessed."

He was born Richard Wagstaff Clark in Mount Vernon, N.Y., in 1929. His father, Richard Augustus Clark, was a sales manager who worked in radio.

Clark idolized his athletic older brother, Bradley, who was killed in World War II. In his 1976 autobiography, "Rock, Roll & Remember," Clark recalled how radio helped ease his loneliness and turned him into a fan of Steve Allen, Arthur Godfrey and other popular hosts.

From Godfrey, he said, he learned that "a radio announcer does not talk to 'those of you out there in radio land'; a radio announcer talks to me as an individual."

Clark began his career in the mailroom of a Utica, N.Y., radio station in 1945. By age 26, he was a broadcasting veteran, with nine years' experience on radio and TV stations in Syracuse and Utica, N.Y., and Philadelphia. He held a bachelor's degree from Syracuse University. While in Philadelphia, Clark befriended McMahon, who later credited Clark for introducing him to his future "Tonight Show" boss, Johnny Carson.

In the 1960s, "American Bandstand" moved from black-and-white to color, from weekday broadcasts to once-a-week Saturday shows and from Philadelphia to Los Angeles. Although its influence started to ebb, it still featured some of the biggest stars of each decade, whether Janis Joplin, the Jackson 5, Talking Heads or Prince.

But Clark never did book two of rock's iconic groups, the Beatles and the Rolling Stones. Elvis Presley also never performed, although Clark managed an on-air telephone interview while Presley was in the Army.

When Michael Jackson died in June 2009, Clark recalled working with him since he was a child, adding, "of all the thousands of entertainers I have worked with, Michael was THE most outstanding. Many have tried and will try to copy him, but his talent will never be matched."

Clark kept more than records spinning with his Dick Clark Productions. Its credits included the Academy of Country Music and Golden Globe awards; TV movies including the Emmy-winning "The Woman Who Willed a Miracle" (1984), the "$25,000 Pyramid" game show and the 1985 film "Remo Williams: The Adventure Begins." Clark himself made a cameo on "The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air" and a dramatic appearance as a witness on the original "Perry Mason." He was an involuntary part of Michael Moore's Academy Award-winning "Bowling for Columbine," in which Clark is seen brushing off Moore as the filmmaker confronts him about working conditions at a restaurant owned by Clark.

In 1974, at ABC's request, Clark created the American Music Awards after the network lost the broadcast rights to the Grammy Awards.

He was also an author, with "Dick Clark's American Bandstand" and such self-help books as "Dick Clark's Program for Success in Your Business and Personal Life" and "Looking Great, Staying Young." His unchanging looks inspired a joke in "Peggy Sue Gets Married," the 1986 comedy starring Kathleen Turner as an unhappy wife and mother transported back to 1960. Watching Clark on a black and white TV set, she shakes her head in amazement, "Look at that man, he never ages."

Clark's clean-cut image survived a music industry scandal. In 1960, during a congressional investigation of "payola" or bribery in the record and radio industry, Clark was called on to testify.

He was cleared of any suspicions but was required by ABC to divest himself of record-company interests to avoid any appearance of a conflict of interest. The demand cost him $8 million, Clark once estimated. His holdings included partial ownership of Swan Records, which later released the first U.S. version of the Beatles' smash "She Loves You."

In 2004, Clark announced plans for a revamped version of "American Bandstand." The show, produced with "American Idol" creator Simon Fuller, was to feature a host other than Clark.

He was diagnosed with Type 2 diabetes in 1994 and served as spokesman for the American Association of Diabetes Educators.

Clark, twice divorced, had a son, Richard Augustus II, with first wife Barbara Mallery and two children, Duane and Cindy, with second wife Loretta Martin. He married Kari Wigton in 1977.

DEAR PHARMACIST

SUZY COHEN

Nightshade foods – delectable or deadly?

Dear Pharmacist, I live in chronic pain, it's usually my joints but now my nerves are involved. My tests are all normal, and my doctor gives me Celebrex, Vicodin and Flexeril. I feel doped up, and still live in pain. What else can I do? —B.C., Sanibel Island, Florida

Answer: Avoid eating a certain class of foods known to ignite pain in the muscles, joints and nerves. Some of you can guess which foods I'm talking about here, especially if you grew up in tropical regions of the United States, where your summer camp counselor told you to avoid the wild berries of deadly nightshade, which contain belladonna. Nightshades belong to the Solanaceae family and I bet you eat a nightshade food each day.

The most common are tomatoes, white potatoes (not sweet potatoes or yams), potato starch is found in hundreds of medications; eggplant, and peppers (including all those deliciously spicy peppers like cayenne, chili, and habenero). Tabasco sauce, which contains large amounts of heat-causing "capsicum annum," ranks up there. Paprika is a sneaky one, showing up in flavoring mixes or under "added spices" on the label. Other nightshades include goji berries (bummer, they're the latest rage in the antioxidant crowd), ashwagandha, Cape gooseberries, ground cherries, and garden huckleberries (thankfully not blueberries). We all know cigarettes cause cellular damage, but they are also a nightshade!

These all cause pain! If you don't believe me, have a full-on nightshade "party" and load the salsa on your breakfast omelet, have French fries with lunch, and for dinner, eat eggplant parmesan with some stir-fry peppers and tomatoes. NSAIDs anyone? Because all those nightshades are sure to cause a flare-up for you, necessitating non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs). The flare-up could take 3 hours to 3 days to occur, so connecting the dots is tricky. If you are sensitive to weather changes, this could be a sign of nightshade sensitivity, don't ask me why.

So what's the problem with some of our favorite farmer's market heroes? Well, nightshades contain alkaloids that accumulate and block an enzyme called "cholinesterase" lighting the body's pain fuse: Muscle spasm, aches, joint pain, tenderness, hip pain, inflammation, and stiff movement. Heartburn too! And you thought heartburn was related to a Prilosec-deficiency, didn't you? While symptoms may dissipate in a few days or weeks if there is no more consumption, the problem is that we keep eating nightshades in almost every meal. The body never gets clear of them so it stays 'on fire' 24/7 despite all your pain-relievers.

If you're otherwise healthy, eat up! But if live in chronic pain, or have Rheumatoid arthritis, try completely eliminating nightshades for 3 solid months. Hang in there because it takes a few weeks before the pain even begins to retreat. I've read anecdotal reports where some people kiss pain goodbye forever, just by avoiding nightshades. Can you imagine? Complete pain relief, it costs nothing and the only downside is an occasional craving.

Insurance guards against big vet bills

By TOM MURPHY

Kaila and Mark Nickel were saving to buy a house. But their plans took a detour when Penny, their miniature Schnauzer, started shivering uncontrollably one evening last summer.

In an effort to find out why, the Nickels dipped deep into their down payment fund.

Veterinarians told the Nickels that X-rays revealed an unknown mass in Penny's stomach. The 2-year-old was unlikely to have cancer, so the vets recommended exploratory surgery. The mass turned out to be a collection of blood, yet the doctors never determined where it came from or what caused it.

Penny is doing fine now, but the Edmond, Okla., couple's bank balance is still recovering. The surgery, medication and subsequent vet visits cost nearly $4,000.

Big, unexpected bills like this are prompting more animal lovers to seek pet insurance. Americans spent an estimated $450 million on coverage for their pets last year, and they are expected to spend around $500 million this year, according to American Pet Products Association, a non-profit trade association.

An estimated 3 million dogs and 800,000 cats are covered by pet insurance in the United States, according to the association.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Luis Calderon is pictured with his German shepherd, Buddy, right, and his wife's dog Lola, left, in El Monte, Calif. Calderon said if Buddy needed a vet, he would have to go through public services or use credit. A growing number of pet owners are buying insurance to protect themselves against unexpected treatments that can easily top several thousand dollars as veterinary care becomes more sophisticated.

Policies for pets come with various terms, such as deductibles, co-insurance and coverage exclusions that must be sorted out before committing to a policy, just like health insurance for their owners. Plus pet owners have to decide if a policy is the right solution for them. Here are some of the issues to consider:

HOW DOES IT WORK?

Pet insurance policies can cover costs associated with emergencies, surgeries, medications, routine care or ongoing care for conditions such as diabetes. It does not cover conditions that existed before the coverage started.

Coverage, which is typically billed monthly, adds up to about $200 or more annually for cats, and can cost as much as $500 or more for dogs. That depends on the particular plan, the animal's age and where the pet owner lives.

Some breeds are prone to certain illnesses and that can affect how much their owners pay for a policy, and the terms of coverage. For instance, many policies for bulldogs exclude hereditary conditions like breathing problems that are common with the breed, said Chris Ashton, co-owner of Petplan Pet Insurance. His company covers those conditions, but to do so, it charges an average annual premium of $650. That is more than 70 percent higher than the $380 annual average for all dogs.

Pet insurance policies require the owner to pay the veterinarian first and then submit a reimbursement claim. Deductibles and co-insurance — portions of the bill the customer is responsible for — are subtracted from the reimbursement, and those also vary by plan.

Shoppers can find policies on the Internet. Some also can get coverage through work. Employers like home improvement retailer Home Depot Inc. give their workers a chance to sign up, but they don't pay part of the premium like they do for human health insurance.

IS THIS COVERAGE WORTH IT?

Expensive treatments are becoming common in veterinary care. Dogs routinely receive chemotherapy, and animals also receive heart pacemakers or stem cell treatments to correct hip problems. Those procedures can cost several thousand dollars.

About one in eight pet owners who took their animals to the vet in the past year spent $1,000 or more, according to an AP-Petside.com poll conducted last fall. That's money many pet owners are willing to pay even if they don't have coverage.

Positive outlook may be good for your heart

By LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Be happy — it seems to be good for your heart.

Scientists have long known that Type A personalities and people who are chronically angry, anxious or depressed have a higher risk of heart attacks.

Now a Harvard review of the flip side of that psychology concludes that being upbeat and optimistic just may help protect against heart disease.

Rather than focusing only on how to lessen heart risks, "it might also be useful to focus on how we might bolster the positive side of things," said lead researcher Julia Boehm of the Harvard School of Public Health.

Boehm reviewed dozens of studies examining a positive outlook — as determined by various psychological measurements — on heart health. Optimism in particular seems key, as a number of studies found the most optimistic people had half the risk of a first heart attack when compared to the least optimistic, Boehm said.

Why? Previous work shows the stress associated with negative psychological traits can lead to damage of arteries and the heart itself.

Boehm found that people with a better sense of well-being tend to have healthier blood pressure, cholesterol and weight, and are more likely to exercise, eat healthier, get enough sleep and avoid smoking. But she cautioned that it will take more research to tease apart if a positive outlook makes people feel more like taking heart-healthy steps — or whether living healthier helps you feel more positive.

The review, funded by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, was published Tuesday by the Psychological Bulletin.

More research is needed but that link between psychological and physical well-being makes sense, said Dr. Elizabeth Jackson of the University of Michigan and American College of Cardiology, who wasn't involved with the review. Among her own heart patients, she has noticed that those who feel they have some control over their lives and are invested in their care have better outcomes.

No-surgery option for aortic stenosis not for everyone

Q: My cardiologist says I have aortic stenosis and need a new aortic valve. He also mentioned that the FDA has approved a new procedure that replaces the aortic valve without open-heart surgery. This option sounds safer to me, but my doctor says this new option is not for everyone. Can you walk me through the pros and cons of these two approaches?

A: The short answer may seem facetious: Ask your doctors. In fact, it's a complicated decision that requires an individualized answer depending on your health, your preferences and - above all - the experience and skill of your cardiac care team. With that said, let's discuss some general considerations.

The aortic valve is a three-flapped structure that ensures the one-way flow of blood from the heart's main pumping chamber to the rest of the body. In some people, the aortic valve becomes encrusted with calcium deposits that stiffen and narrow it, restricting blood flow.

When people with aortic stenosis start feeling symptoms such as light-headedness or fainting, breathlessness, fatigue and loss of appetite, quality of life goes downhill quickly until the valve is replaced.

Until recently, replacing the aortic valve required open-heart surgery. Now that the FDA has approved a no-surgery technique for replacing a failed aortic valve, many people with aortic stenosis are asking, "Can I get this procedure?"

The answer is "Maybe." That's because the FDA has currently restricted its use to people who are not good candidates for open-heart surgery.

As you point out, it's easy to see why people might prefer the new approach, called tran-

ON HEALTH

scatheter aortic valve implantation, or TAVI. The new valve is placed using a wire, or catheter, that is maneuvered into the heart from a blood vessel in the groin. Both the hospital stay and recovery are shorter and less painful than with open-heart surgery.

The FDA based its approval on a clinical trial dubbed PARTNER. In this trial, 69 percent of the patients undergoing TAVI were alive after a year, compared with 50 percent of a group that received standard therapy, which included balloon valvuloplasty, an attempt to increase the valve opening with a balloon-tipped catheter.

PARTNER data presented at a scientific meeting in late 2011 showed that more than two-thirds of the people in the standard-care group had died after two years, compared with 43 percent in the TAVI group. Another analysis found that quality-of-life scores after one year among the TAVI group improved by 32 points on a 100-point scale, while scores among the standard-care group improved by only 4 points.

But although it prolongs life and is less invasive than open-heart surgery, TAVI has its drawbacks. TAVI recipients in the PARTNER trial had more than twice the number of strokes and many more serious bleeding complications than patients in the other group. The bleeding problems were mostly related to the wide catheter that's used during TAVI.

So it's important to look at the benefits and drawbacks of TAVI on an individual basis, taking into account your specific health status. That's where your heart team can be very useful in advising you. People who are treated with TAVI may live longer than patients who undergo standard therapy, but the procedure does have limitations that need to be considered, too.

The FDA stipulates that a surgeon must help determine which people with aortic stenosis are eligible for TAVI. Patients may be eligible because they have an unhealthy aorta (the main pipeline for blood from the heart to the body), chest tissue that won't heal well due to past radiation treatment, previous artery-bypass surgery that makes another surgery impractical or simply a very weak heart.

The TAVI procedure is an prime example of astounding medical innovation. But it still takes old-fashioned experience and judgment to decide when to use this new technology.

Sebelius encouraged by vaccine efforts in Haiti

By JENNIFER KAY
Associated Press

MIAMI — Following a two-day trip to Haiti, U.S. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said Wednesday that she was encouraged by the Haitian government's efforts to boost health in the Caribbean country still battling a cholera outbreak that began after the 2010 earthquake.

Haiti, the United States and international partners announced this week a nationwide vaccination campaign to immunize Haitian children against diseases such as diphtheria, tetanus, whooping cough, measles rubella, polio and other diseases.

That program and efforts to curb the cholera epidemic bode well for the health of vulnerable Haiti, said Sebelius, who praised Haitian Health Minister Dr. Florence Duperval Guillaume for focusing on projects that could show results to international donors investing in long-term improvements to sanitation and access to clean water.

"We're eager to work with her," Sebelius said.

Plans to use some donor funding for earthquake recovery efforts are still waiting for approval as Haiti's government awaits confirmation of a new prime minister. Until then, Guillaume is "very focused on measurable, deliverable results, understanding that in order to have continued interest from the donor community, in order to make sure that their budget resources are spent wisely, they needed to focus on areas that really made a difference in people's health and could show people that there were results," Sebelius said.

Cholera has killed more than 7,000 people and sickened 530,000 more, according to Haitian health officials. Last week, Haiti's Health Ministry approved a separate campaign by Boston-based Partners in Health and the Haitian-run Gheskio Center to distribute a two-dose, oral vaccine to roughly 100,000 people.

The cholera vaccination program was supposed to begin in January, but an ethics committee in the Health Ministry delayed the distribution out of concern that the two groups were using the vaccine as a research project.

The nationwide vaccination program to prevent infectious diseases includes support from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and from the GAVI Alliance, a group of international health organizations, the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation and others.

On her way back to Washington, Sebelius toured women's health, pediatric and dental services at a Borinquen Medical Centers of Miami-Dade clinic on the edge of Miami's Little Haiti.

Roughly 40 percent of Borinquen's patients at its seven clinics are Haitian, a number that has swelled since 2010 with Haitians displaced by the earthquake and their South Florida family members seeking care, said president and CEO Robert Linder.

Summit steps down

Women's hoops all-time winning coach to retire.

Associated Press

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Pat Summitt is stepping aside as Tennessee's women's basketball coach and taking the title of "head coach emeritus" with long-time assistant Holly Warlick being promoted to replace the sport's winningest coach.

Tennessee released a statement Wednesday announcing the move.

Summitt will report to the athletic director and help the women's program she guided to eight national titles. The 59-year-old Summitt said in a statement she loved being head coach but recognizes the time has come to step into a new role. She says she supports Warlick as her replacement and wants to ensure the stability of the program.

The move comes less than a year after her diagnosis with early onset dementia-Alzheimer's type.

Warlick has been Summitt's assistant for 27 seasons and was a three-time All-American with the Lady Vols.

Burton becomes Viking

Williams says second baseman was his favorite.

By BRANDON FINLEY
 bfinley@lakecityreporter.com

Columbia High coach Jimmy Williams had to let go of one of his favorites on Wednesday as Michaela Burton signed to play college softball at St. Johns River State College.

The good news for Williams is that he still gets to coach Burton through a playoff run.

"Since the first day, she has always been my favorite," Williams said. "In 13 years, I've seen a lot of talent, but I knew her freshman season that she would be one of those to play college."

But Burton isn't quite ready to make the move.

"My dad told me a little while back that I only had two games left," Burton said. "I started crying, until I thought we still have districts, the playoffs and finally a state championship to play for."

Burton will try to help the Lady Tigers earn their third district title in four years against Atlantic Coast High at 7 p.m. today in Jacksonville.

"It would mean the world to me," Burton said.

But her ultimate goal doesn't end at a district title.

"I would love to leave high school with a ring on my finger," she said. "I'd love to go out as state champions."

For Burton, it's never been about the individual achievements. She does all the little things to help a team win.

"It doesn't really matter to me, because it's a team game and that's how I look at it," Burton said.

After playing shortstop through her sophomore year, Williams moved Burton to second base. It's a move that has paid off for the Lady Tigers.

"She made our defense championship caliber," Williams said. "Moving was a sign that she's a team player. When we have conversations it's never about her. It's always about team. Once you understand the true meaning of this game is being about the team, you're going to be successful."

Burton learned that lesson early.

"Making the move felt really good," Burton said. "I have more range and was able to make more plays for the team."

And Burton feels that the team's first attitude is one of her best assets.

"I think I have a good attitude," she said. "I've worked really hard to get where I am."

And where she was Wednesday was signing a college scholarship. She knows that all started at home.

"I wouldn't be standing here today without my parents," she said. "They have supported me all the way from the start. They've done so much between all the tournaments and travel. My whole family has been supportive."

Williams was also big on the support and Burton didn't go without noticing.

"He always had the drive for us," Burton said. "He wanted the best for us and I think he's done pretty good at getting that."

Now Burton will try her best for Vikings coach Katie Brosky. And Brosky thinks Burton will make an immediate impact.

"I actually caught onto Michaela by watching Jessica Keene," Brosky said. "Everywhere I went, Michaela would be there and she was just outstanding. She makes all the great plays and has great character."

For now, the Vikings will have to wait, because Burton isn't through as a Lady Tiger.

Columbia's relay team advances to region

Tigers finish 10th in twelve-team district Tuesday.

By TIM KIRBY
 tkirby@lakecityreporter.com

Columbia High's track team made somewhat of a showing in the District 2-3A meet at Wolfson High on Tuesday.

Both Columbia's girls and boys placed 10th in the 12-school district.

Chiles High won the girls competition with 147 points, followed by Atlantic Coast High with 130 points and Stanton Prep with 125. The Lady Tigers scored 13 points.

Lincoln High won the boys competition with 185 points. Chiles (81) was second and Stanton Prep (67) was third. Columbia scored 24 points.

Columbia's strongest performance was second place from the 4x100 relay team of Rakeem Battle, Cornelius Montgomery, Zedrick Woods and Trey Marshall. The team will advance to region competition.

The Region 1-3A meet is noon Wednesday at the University of North Florida.

J.T. Bradley also made region as an individual with a fourth-place finish in the high jump.

Marshall was sixth in the 100 meters and ninth in the 200 meters. Dominique Cason was eighth in the long jump. Montgomery was eighth in the 100 meters and Andre Williamson was ninth in the high jump.

Shaquille Johnson was sixth in the 200 meters and anchored the 4x400 relay team with Nick Jones, Alex Weber and Kiva Bunkley that placed sixth. Weber tied for 14th in the long jump. Brinkley was 15th in the 800 meters. Jones was 26th in the 1,600 meters.

Milla Chasteen was 15th in the discus and tied for 21st in the shot put. Zachary Peterson was 23rd and Noah Henderson was 25th in the 3,200 meters. In the 1,600 meters, Peterson was 30th and Johnathan Key was 31st.

For the Lady Tigers, Michaelle Charlotin was closest to making region with fifth-place finishes in both the 400 meters and 1,600 meters. She was 18th in the 800 meters and also led off the 4x400 relay team with Abby Williams, Valerie Enriquez and Alexis Williams that placed eighth. Williams was eighth in the 1,600 meters and 13th in the 800 meters. Enriquez was 19th in the 800 meters.

Kaicie Chasteen was sixth in the discus and 16th in the shot put. Ashlyn Martin was 12th in the 1,600 meters, 13th in the 3,200 meters and 17th in the 800 meters.

Colorado Rockies starting pitcher Jamie Moyer is congratulated by teammates in the sixth inning of a baseball game against the San Diego Padres on Tuesday in Denver. The Rockies won 5-3. Jamie Moyer became the oldest pitcher to win a major league game.

Moyer fends off Father Time to notch win at 49

By PAT GRAHAM

Associated Press

DENVER — Jamie Moyer is headed to the Hall of Fame.

Well, maybe his uniform anyway. Or perhaps even his glove.

Cooperstown has asked for some sort of memorabilia from Moyer to commemorate his record-setting night as the 49-year-old left-hander became the oldest pitcher to ever win a major league contest.

And whatever the Hall of Fame decides it wants, Moyer said he will certainly deliver after throwing seven efficient innings to help the Colorado Rockies beat the San Diego Padres 5-3 on Tuesday.

"To have your name mentioned with great players of the past or Hall of Fame players, it's pretty special," Moyer said.

For Moyer (1-2), making history was nice. But stopping the Rockies' two-game skid was just as rewarding.

Moyer was effective all evening as he picked up his 268th career win, tying with the 19th-century pitcher Jim Palmer for 34th on the career list.

He relied on a cutter the Padres couldn't get good wood on and a 78-mph fastball that danced all over the place. Moyer gave up just six hits and two runs — both unearned — as he kept the Padres hitters off balance and guessing.

"Today, for me, just like it's been my previous two starts — going out and trying to give my best effort," Moyer said.

That's a tried and true formula for success, one that's worked well for Moyer over a career that has stretched nearly a quarter century and included 689 games.

Moyer earned that elusive win for the ages in his third start of the season. He is 49 years, 150 days old.

That's important to note since before Moyer's effort the oldest pitcher to win a game in the majors was Jack Quinn of the Brooklyn Dodgers on Sept. 13, 19

DEAR ABBY

Ex-wife can't take man's trash talk about girlfriend

Abigail Van Buren www.dearabby.com

DEAR ABBY: My ex-husband likes to call to ask me for advice. Our most recent conversation was in regard to his girlfriend and her sexual past, which he knew about before they started dating. He now disapproves of her history and he began calling her unpleasant names. He tells me he deserves better but intends to stay with her until he gets bored.

Hearing this sort of talk gives me a stomachache and heartburn. I feel terrible for the woman. I want to be a friend to my ex, but I'm not sure I can handle the stress it causes. He has had a hard life, and I didn't make it any easier by divorcing him.

Is the only solution not to take his calls, like my friends tell me? I'm not sure I can do that without major guilt. - WISCONSIN READER

DEAR READER: I'll offer another option: The next time your ex starts asking you for relationship advice, tell him you don't like hearing the way he talks about his girlfriend. Explain that it makes you so uncomfortable that you prefer to avoid the topic of his love life. If he respects your wishes, continue taking his calls. If not, because you find them upsetting, refuse them.

And please, stop feeling guilty about the divorce.

From your description of your former husband, he is a user, and you're lucky to be rid of him.

DEAR ABBY: I attend a church with about 350 worshippers. The church provides a supervised nursery for infants to 2 years of age. Most parents with babies use it. However, one couple has a 2-year-old child and a 2-month-old baby. These parents do not take advantage of the nursery, but keep the kids in the sanctuary.

Last Sunday the baby, who was in the father's arms, cried during most of the service. The parents may be able to tune it out, but many of us were very distracted by the wailing.

The father is a school-teacher. I couldn't help but wonder how this teacher would handle a student who caused such a disruption in his classroom. I don't think he would tolerate an hour of loud crying from anyone. Why don't these people understand their behavior prevents others from worshipping as they would like? - SILENCE, PLEASE

DEAR SILENCE, PLEASE: That's a good question, and one I recommend you pose to the person who was conducting the service. Out of consideration for the congregation, he or she should "remind" the parents that the nursery is available, and stress that in the future it be used to prevent the problem from recurring because "so many complaints."

DEAR ABBY: I was recently a bridesmaid at a friend's wedding. The bride gave all of us bridesmaids gifts after the reception. The bags were fancy and contained expensive gourmet chocolate candy. When I went to open mine, I noticed the box had already been unwrapped and half of it had been eaten. I didn't say anything because I didn't want to hurt her feelings or seem ungrateful. What should I do? - BRIDESMAID IN TENNESSEE

DEAR BRIDESMAID: While it's unfortunate, I see no reason to bring it up now. Expensive or not, it's only a box of chocolates.

THE LAST WORD Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Put everything you've got into personal gain.

Invest in you and what you can do to improve your situation. Don't let anyone deter you from engaging in a project, activity or plan. Taking action will shut down any opposition you face. ★★

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't divulge private information if you want your plans to unfold without a hitch. Take care of any loose end that might leave you in a vulnerable position. Observe what everyone around you is doing to avoid being caught off guard. ★★

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You'll impress people if you participate in a cause, fundraiser or event you believe in. Your ability to find solutions and formulate a simple plan will help you gain seniority. Don't be surprised if someone is jealous of you. ★★

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Keep your thoughts to yourself. Accept the inevitable. An emotional matter will develop if you or someone you are close to becomes controlling or pushy. Try not to change your mind too often or you will send the wrong impression. ★★

LEO (July 23-Aug.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You've got all the moves and ideas to win favors. Communication is the key to getting what you want. Your outgoing nature will bring greater interest from someone who wants to partner with you to reach similar goals. ★★

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Put your money and possessions in a safe place. You stand to lose if you are too trusting. Joint ventures, lending or borrowing are all bad ideas right now. Focus on home and family, and work to secure your position and your future. ★★

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You can turn a good idea into a profitable venture. Don't just talk about your plans; spring into action and get things up and running. Love is in the stars, and a romantic plan should be executed. ★★

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Don't take anything or anyone for granted. You are better off doing things on your own. You will be disappointed in someone you thought you could trust. Don't share your personal secrets with anyone. Put your money in a safe place. ★★
