Prison guard faces charges

Report: Tried to bring prescription meds into facility.

By TONY BRITT
tbritt@lakecityreporter.com

A corrections officer at the CCA-Lake City facility was arrested Wednesday and faces felony charges for allegedly attempting to bring drugs into the prison.

Minchin

Katie Sloan Minchin, 33, no address provided, was charged with smuggling contraband into prison in connection with the incident. She was booked into the Columbia County Detention Facility on $25,000 bond.

According to Columbia County Sheriff's reports, Deputy Shayne Foote was dispatched to CCA shortly after 10 a.m. Wednesday in reference to an employee attempting to introduce contraband into the facility.

A CCA inspector met Foote and told Foote he would be interviewing the employee, Minchin, who allegedly attempted to bring eight and a half 10 mg hydrocodone pills and a capsule containing a combination of aspirin, butalbital and caffeine, which is classified as a prescription-only narcotic, into the facility.

The corrections officer who searches employees before they enter the facility told the inspector and Foote that Minchin reported for work around 5:50 a.m.

The corrections officer told investigators she checks employees for illegal contraband and weapons and the search process includes employees taking off their boots, belts and emptying their pockets.

The search officer said when she asked Minchin whether she had any contraband, prescription medication or anything that could be used as a dangerous weapon, Minchin reportedly reached into her pockets and retrieved an Aleve medication bottle and placed it on her desk.

She said Minchin told her to hold the bottle because the K-9 used to search employees for illegal narcotics might sniff it. The officer said Minchin provided no detail as to what Lohan charged in NYC and Calif.

NEW YORK

Actress Lindsay Lohan was arrested Thursday in New York City after police said she hit a woman during an argument, then hours later was charged in California with lying to police and reckless driving for a June crash in which her Porsche slammed into a dump truck.

The "Mean Girls" and "Freaky Friday" star was arrested at 4 a.m. and charged with third-degree assault.

She left a police precinct nearly four hours later with a black jacket pulled over her head. She drove off in a black SUV with a driver.

Lohan, 26, allegedly got into the spat with another woman at Club Avenue. She struck the woman in the face with her hand, police said. The woman did not require medical attention.

The charges come just after Lohan's portrayal of Elizabeth Taylor in the Lifetime movie "Liz & Dick" premiered to harsh reviews from critics and the public.

After the June crash, the actress told police her assistant was driving, but detectives determined Lohan was behind the wheel, police said. Prosecutors charged her with three misdemeanors: providing false information to police, reckless driving and willfully obstructing a police officer from their duties. No date for Lohan's arraignment was announced, but the charges are likely to trigger a probation violation for a 2011 necklace theft case.

AROUND FLORIDA

Should feds run health exchange?

MIAMI — Florida health advocates are urging the federal government to run the state health exchange, saying Florida officials dragged their heels and have missed crucial deadlines.

Florida CHAIN and several other groups sent a letter Thursday telling U.S. Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius that the state hasn't had any public meetings or done any of the other legwork that other states have spent months working on. They said it's not realistic for the state to create a quality program in time for federal deadlines.

Nearly 9,000 Floridians have signed a petition backing the request.

The exchange is an online marketplace where residents can shop for health insurance.

Republican Gov. Rick Scott has been a vocal opponent of "Obamacare" but recently softened his stance, saying he will explore the options.

Police: Dad killed daughter, self

DAVIE — A 6-year-old girl is dead after she was killed by her father in a murder-suicide, police said.

Davie Police Capt. Dale Engle says the child, her father and a dog appear to have died from carbon monoxide poisoning.

Two schoolchildren discovered the bodies in a van parked outside the Davie home of the girl's mother Thursday morning. They alerted a neighbor who pulled the child out of the vehicle and attempted to resuscitate her but could not.

Investigators believe the child's father, 30-year-old Paul Andrade, parked outside his ex-wife's home and attached a hose from the exhaust pipe to inside the vehicle.

Engle says the man was upset that his wife recently remarried. He had an overnight visitation with his daughter when the deaths occurred.

Teen charged with killing guard

TAMPA — Authorities say a teenager with a violent past fatally shot a security officer outside an apartment complex.

Tampa police arrested the 16-year-old late Wednesday. They said DNA samples taken from a bicycle found next to the slain security officer linked the teen to the shooting of 38-year-old Michael Valentin. Valentin was killed while on patrol at the apartment complex on Thanksgiving Eve.

Police said the teen was arrested Tuesday night on other charges.

The Tampa Bay Times reported that after DNA results arrived Wednesday, the teen was arrested in Valentin's death.

Tampa police Sgt. Bill Todd says the motive was an attempted robbery. He says the teen acknowledged the bicycle was his.

Police say the teen was first arrested when he was 10 and has a dozen felony convictions.

Truck driver dies in train wreck

ORLANDO — A dump truck driver was killed when his vehicle collided with an Amtrak passenger train south of downtown Orlando.

Amtrak spokeswoman Christina Leeds said six passengers and two crew members from the Silver Star Train 91 were taken to hospitals for minor injuries Thursday.

The truck driver wasn't identified by police.

The train was traveling from New York to Miami, and was on the Orlando-to-Tampa leg of the route when it collided with the dump truck.

There were 139 passengers on the train, and they were going to be taken to their final destinations in Florida by bus.

Leeds says some trains in Florida were being held while crew members cleaned up the tracks and that could cause some delays later in the day.

5 Fla. districts named finalists

MIAM — Five Florida school districts have been named finalists for the U.S. Department of Education's new Race to the Top competition.

Broward, Charlotte, Manatee, Miami-Dade and Seminole county schools are vying for a slice of close to $400 million to help close the achievement gap and prepare students for college and a career.

The Obama administration has already awarded more than $4 billion in Race to the Top grants to 18 states and the District of Columbia. The Education Department will now focus on granting money to individual districts.

The department is concentrating on districts where at least 40 percent of students come from low-income families.

Fifteen to 25 districts are expected to receive four-year grants ranging from $5 million to $40 million.

Sixty-one finalists have been named.

Traffic stop ends in drug arrest

By TONY BRITT

tbritt@lakecityreporter.com

A Lake City man was arrested during a Thursday morning traffic stop after authorities said they found drugs in the man's vehicle.

Tashea Laquez Everett, 36, of 413 SE Sharon Lane, was charged with cocaine distribution, possession of cocaine, possession of drug equipment and destroying evidence in connection with the case. He was booked into the Columbia County Detention Facility on $36,000 bond.

According to Columbia County Sheriff's reports, around 12:24 a.m. Deputy J.

Latimer stopped a white Nissan Maxima for improper display of the registration sticker.

When Latimer spoke to the vehicle's driver, later identified as Everett, he reported he detected the odor of an alcoholic beverage coming from the vehicle.

Latimer also reported that Everett was uncooperative and continued to speak over him when he attempted to explain why he pulled him over.

Latimer requested that Everett walk to the hood of his patrol car, but he said Everett was attempting to use his cell phone. When Latimer asked him to walk to his patrol car again, Everett reportedly tried to sit on a garbage can. He was asked again to walk to the patrol car and when Everett got there he began to pace back and forth, reports said.

Everett reportedly told Latimer he had three mixed drinks during the evening, then Latimer reported he noticed a patch of white powder on Everett's shirt that appeared to be cocaine. When Latimer went closer to Everett to investigate, he reported that Everett saw the powder and attempted to wipe it off.

Everett was then secured in handcuffs and Latimer field-tested the substance on Everett's shirt, which tested positive for cocaine, reports said. Everett admitted to having "two eight balls of cocaine" in his center console, according to Latimer.

When searching the vehicle, Latimer reported he found four, individually packaged amounts of cocaine, which totaled approximately 11 grams. Latimer also reported Everett had numerous small bags which were new and had not yet been used, adjacent to the cocaine.

Everett was then arrested and taken to jail, reports said.

ETHICS: Cities, counties cracking down; state hasn't done so

have had to recuse himself, he said.

"I did declare the conflict and I took myself out of the discussion," he said.

Williams said the County Code of Conduct sets the policy on ethics for county staff members.

Lake City Manager Wendell Johnson also said the city also has tough requirements regarding ethical dilemmas and financial disclosure.

In 2009, the city council had Johnson draft a Council-Employee Interaction Policy, which was adopted by the city council at the Sept. 21, 2009, meeting.

"It expands well beyond the typical guidelines," he said.

The study by the Leroy Collins Institute, a think tank at Florida State University, and a state ethics group, Integrity Florida, said the Sunshine State has a well-documented problem with corruption at every level of government. It said an increase in exemptions to the state's open records laws and the unwillingness of lawmakers to continue ethics reform has led to Florida falling behind the rest of the country in ethics enforcement and government transparency.

"Too often, Florida has been associated with anti-ethics reform," said Carol Weissert, a Florida State political science professor and director of the Collins Institute named after a former Florida governor. "We want to be leading, we don't want to be bad examples."

The report pointed out that Florida led the nation in federal public corruption convictions from 2000 to 2010, according to data from the U.S. Department of Justice. Although some of these convictions were of state officials, many of the corruption scandals involved local government officials.

Dan Krassner, executive director at Integrity Florida, also noted that the Florida Ethics Commission, which is frequently criticized as a paper tiger, simply doesn't have enough authority to be effective.

"They just don't have the tools," Krassner said.

As a result, local governments have taken the initiative on strengthening ethics laws and not sitting idly waiting on the Legislature to take action.

"In many of the instances, reform followed the corruption," Weissert said. "While there is always more to do, Florida counties are taking the initiative in creating an ethical culture and can serve as leaders for future state action in Florida and across the nation."

Weissert and Krassner each professed confidence that new leaders in the Florida Legislature and Gov. Rick Scott's office are on board with efforts to toughen state ethics laws during the upcoming legislative session that begins in March.

"We have a commitment from our top state leaders for ethics reform," said Krassner, noting that their effort focuses on ethics policy and enforcement, lobbying, campaign financing and procurement.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

NAACP election Dec. 15

From staff reports

The Columbia County NAACP branch local election will take place at 10 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 15 at the Richardson Community Center, 255 NE Coach Anders Lane, officials said Thursday.

The election is open to the public, but only Columbia County branch NAACP members in good standing can vote.

The election, which was originally set for earlier this month, was recently suspended after a complaint was filed with the Florida State Conference of the NAACP. The complaint reportedly centered around the "violation of process" regarding the local branch's nominating committee.

The election will be conducted by state and/or national NAACP officials.

State Sen. Charlie Dean (R-Inverness) will also attend.

The legislative delegation hearing for Columbia County will be at Florida

Gateway College Library from 1 p.m. until 2:30 p.m.

"These hearings will provide our fellow citizens the opportunity to express their concerns, share legislative ideas and have personal input into the legislative process," Porter wrote in a press release.

Any member of the public who wants to speak at the hearing should contact Koby Adams to be placed on the agenda. The phone number for Porter's office is 386-719-4600.

There will be a way for people who don't call in advance to speak at the meeting. The press release asks that if members of the public present a handout, they bring at least four copies.

The Suwannee County legislative delegation hearing will be held from 9:30 a.m. until 11 a.m. at Live Oak City Hall, and the Baker County hearing will be held from 3:30 p.m. until 5 p.m. in the county commission chambers.

was inside the bottle.

The officer reported she found the behavior as odd and after the morning rush of all employees entering the facility, she told her superior about the incident and a K-9 officer was brought in to sniff the bottle. The bottle reportedly contained several white pills and a yellow and green capsule pill. The bottle was then confiscated.

When Minchin was speaking to the CCA investigator, she reportedly said she knew the policy established by her employer about bringing prescription medication into the facility and she identified the pills as Lortab and Flornal, both of which she said she had a prescription for. Her explanation for bringing eight and a half pills in was that she was unaware how many were in the bottle. She told investigators she believed there were no more than six pills in the bottle.

It was explained to Minchin that six pills would still constitute a policy violation and she said she made a mistake. Minchin told investigators she put the pills in an Aleve bottle Wednesday morning before work and had forgotten the total number of pills inside. The CCA investigator told her it was odd that she put the pills in the bottle and had already forgotten the number inside. Minchin also told the investigator that she was aware that according to policy, the medication she entered the facility with was supposed to be in the original container.

She said she didn't notify her supervising officers that she would be bringing the medication.

Minchin said she had a prescription for both medications.

Minchin was then interviewed by Foote but provided no additional detrimental information to the case. She then provided a written statement.

Foote also collected two statements from Minchin's supervising officers that confirmed Minchin had not informed them she would be entering the facility with her prescription medication.

Minchin was then arrested and taken to jail, reports said.

Hard to believe

By which we mean, it's nearly impossible to fathom that our nation's leaders won't find some kind of solution to the "fiscal cliff" crisis before we go hurtling over the edge.

Surely Congress and the White House will find common ground before New Year's, when all manner of economic mayhem becomes reality.

But by "hard to believe," we also mean to question the credibility of every single player in this real-life drama.

After watching their bickering and posturing for weeks now, it's difficult to imagine either side truly has the best interests of our nation at heart.

It's tempting to say, "throw the bums out."

In many cases, however, we already have.

Plenty of lame ducks are among those who will decide our nation's economic fate.

Maybe at least we'll soon know for certain what these folks — along with the ones we just put back into office — are really made of.

Let's hope that somehow we are all pleasantly surprised.

HIGHLIGHTS IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1782, the United States and Britain signed preliminary peace articles in Paris, ending the Revolutionary War.

In 1803, Spain completed the process of ceding Louisiana to France, which had sold it to the United States.

In 1835, Samuel Langhorne Clemens — better known as Mark Twain — was born in Florida, Mo.

In 1874, British statesman Sir Winston Churchill was born at Blenheim Palace.

In 1900, Irish writer Oscar Wilde died in Paris at age 46.

In 1936, London's famed Crystal Palace, constructed for the Great Exhibition of 1851, was destroyed in a fire.

In 1939, the Winter War began as Soviet troops invaded Finland. (The conflict ended the following March with a Soviet victory.)

Congress hates us

Congress hates us. There's no other conclusion to reach. We are SO ready for some holiday spirit, exhausted by politics and gridlock and deficits and tax debates.

And what do we get as we're trying to think about presents and trees and pag-eants and carols and food and family reunions? The fiscal cliff.

Not a day goes by that we don't hear that the average middle-class family (which means most of us) could face higher taxes of $4,000 next year because Republicans and Democrats in Congress can't get their acts together. For most of us, the idea of paying $4,000 more in taxes is dumb-founding.

We're told 18 percent of people approve of the job Congress is doing. Just as we did last August when that figure was 10 percent, we ask: Who are those people? How can they possibly think Congress is doing a good job?

So we're like the audience at a Ping-Pong game. House Speaker John Boehner says something; the White House responds. Vice versa. And the media ponders: Are they curt? Conciliatory? Did Boehner smile? Cry? Smirk? Is President Barack Obama listening? Are Democrats deserting him? Rallying round him?

And once again, it all seems to be about tax cuts for the rich. The really, really rich would have to pay the rates they paid during the Clinton administration, when millions of jobs were created, a surplus seemed in sight and most people were not worried about their next meal.

To make us feel better, economists are saying that this isn't really a cliff (the $4,000 wouldn't be due Jan. 1) but more of a "slope." Since most political slopes are usually slippery, that doesn't make me feel better.

Republicans: Tax increases on anybody will foil job growth even though the evidence from the recent past doesn't bear that out at all.

Democrats: Any talk of raising the age for Social Security benefits or means-testing it amounts to treason against the middle class.

It's enough to make us scream: "Hey Congress, there wouldn't be a fiscal cliff crisis if you hadn't created it."

All they have to do is create jobs by passing one of the massive put-America-back-to-work bills Congress has been ignoring for two years.

All they have to do is stop insisting that Medicaid and Social Security have to be cut. (Social Security is self-funding and is not part of the current crisis; Medicaid is for the seriously poor.)

All they have to do is make certain the rich pay their fair share. Is it fair that Mitt Romney paid only 13 or 14 percent on millions of dollars, way less than most Americans?

All they have to do is extend the current tax rates for Americans earning less than $250,000.

Congress doesn't want us to have a happy holiday. Congress wants us all to be miserable. Congress hates us.

Don't die on the road

We were among the 50-million Americans predicted to travel for the Thanksgiving holidays. We shared the Interstate with cars that switched from lane to lane and followed threateningly close. There was a feeling of frustration, stress, impatience, and even hostility in the air.

Suddenly there was a flurry of brake lights, as everyone threw on brakes. Highway speeds of 70 miles per hour plus were instantly stopped dead in their tracks, and we found ourselves part of the bumper-to-bumper, stop-and-go routine. I felt a wave of relief and relaxation. After about 15 minutes of creeping traffic on both lanes going our way, we passed a thoroughly destroyed and mangled vehicle. I found myself wondering if it was a lesson presented to these drivers to slow down and be safe.

Later, I learned that we weren't alone. A hundred vehicles piled up together on Interstate 10 in Texas. On our way back from Virginia, we passed a highway sign in Tennessee — "833 died this year in traffic." In Georgia, a sign read "1038 traffic deaths so far this year in Georgia."

In the "human growth and development" psychology class that I teach at Florida Gateway College, we learn that the causes of death are different at each age. In infancy, it's disease that's the big killer. For senior citizens, it's heart disease, stroke and cancer. But for teenagers, young and middle adults, the leading cause of death is accidents. Death in auto accidents leads all other accidental deaths, by far.

Actuarial tables — charts specifying cause of death for each age group — are used to determine your estimated longevity (that is, how long you can expect to live, on the average.) With all causes of death considered, you may be expected to live well into your 70s But, if we exclude accidents as a cause of death, you might expect to live to 90 or 100.

What could this mean to you? If you could reduce your risk of dying in traffic, you might expect to live 10 or 20 more years past your expected longevity!

What are some ways that could help you reduce your risk of accidental automotive death? Here are some ideas; and I encourage you to be creative and to come up with some ideas of your own.

■ Wear seat belts. Almost everywhere, it's the law. But maybe one-third to one-fourth still don't.

■ Remove all distractions. It's estimated that the majority of accidents are due to distractions like cell phones, texting while driving, adjusting the radio or heater. (I noticed one obviously impaired driver reading a book at 70 mph yesterday!)

■ Be patient and thoughtful. Don't follow so close. At 60 mph, if you're two or three car lengths behind, you have no chance of responding in time if something happens to the car ahead. Drop back two or three seconds behind the car in front of you. Relax.

■ Don't keep changing lanes. The police recognize lane changing as a major cause of accidents.

■ Alcohol, even very small doses, impairs your judgment and reaction time. Prescription drugs usually have side effects detrimental to driving ability.

■ Are you tired or sleepy? Get off the road. Take a walk, have a coffee, or quit driving for the day.

■ The best drivers focus on their driving, look half-a-mile down the road, and anticipate situations before they happen. Move over early, and make room for cars entering the highway to merge from the access ramps.

The holiday season is just getting started. Be safe. Don't die a senseless, meaningless, and easily preventable death. You'll not only give yourself extra years, but may help lots of others you're sharing the road with to live longer.

I hope you thoroughly enjoy the holiday season.

ANOTHER VIEW

Teen sexual health outlook troubling

Two reports out this week reveal a troubling outlook on teen sexual health in the United States.

First, a new policy from the American Academy of Pediatrics suggests members consider routinely prescribing emergency contraception to teen girls "to have on hand in case of future need" as part of sexual health counseling and that boys get the same information regardless of current or intended sexual behavior.

Then, a report from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said that more than 1,000 young people aged 13 to 24 are being infected with human immunodeficiency virus each month — about a quarter of all infections in the U.S. Surveys suggest 60 percent of them don't know they're infected.

Both documents point to a health system struggling to protect teens.

More than 300,000 U.S. teenage girls gave birth last year, with 80 percent of the pregnancies unintended. While the teen pregnancy rate has declined in the past few years, it's still higher than in any other developed nation.

The pediatricians say advance prescribing has been shown to increase use of emergency contraception and the odds that it will be used in the critical first 48 hours after unprotected sex. They also say there's no evidence that access to backup contraception increases teen sexual activity.

Public health officials have been recommending for several years that children as young as 11 get vaccinated against sexually transmitted human papillomavirus. Yet the nation's top health officials have overruled efforts to make "morning-after pills" available to girls younger than 17 without a prescription.

That leaves it to doctors to try and protect their younger patients not just from unintended pregnancy, but also from HIV and other sexually transmitted diseases.

The odds of that care being delivered are daunting. Teens tend to drop out of health care as they age, and particularly avoid pediatricians and family doctors. Teen girls may find their way to gynecologists or women's health clinics, but the availability of care for the gay and bisexual male teens, who make up the majority of the new HIV infections, is much less certain, particularly outside major cities.

More than 30 years into the AIDS epidemic, awareness of the risks of unprotected sex remains low even among gay and bisexual teens. Only 13 percent of all high school students have been tested for HIV.

Getting meaningful warnings and information to the teens most at risk demands new approaches and new messengers.

Assurance of salvation — Part 2

"These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God"

— I John 5:13

As we continue our study on assurance, I hope it will help someone find that assurance of salvation. Only when one is sure of their destiny can they live a productive life for Christ.

Someone said the other day: "I don't feel like I am saved, I have never had that feeling that so many talk about". Let me say to you today that salvation does not depend on feeling, it depends on one placing their hope and faith in what Christ did for us on

BIBLE STUDIES

Hugh Sherrill

Calvary.

It is amazing to discover that the Bible maintains a profound silence on feelings. The concordance shows that the word is used only twice in the Word, and in neither case is it employed in connection with our salvation.

In Ephesians 4:19, the word describes a Christ-rejecting and hardened sinner. In Hebrews 4:15 the word denotes Christ's feeling or His power to sympathize. The word "feel" is found in six places, but in no instance is it related to a true Christian experience.

Our salvation rests, not upon fluctuating and fitful feelings, but upon the unassailable facts the Scriptures present.

Saving faith directs attention away from self to the Savior. The Bible does not say, "He that feeleth good, or feeleth bad, shall be saved", but "he that believeth". We are not left to pump dry hearts and bring up feelings, but are to have thoughts wholly occupied with Christ and His finished work on our behalf.

We must hasten to say that it is not our experience or even our faith that saves, but Christ alone. He, alone, is the ground of our salvation and certainty. Whatever our changing feelings, our minds must be wholly stayed on the Lord.

It cannot be emphasized too strongly that the Bible teaches the truth that all who are regenerated by the Spirit can be absolutely certain of their standing in grace.

All who have accepted Christ as Savior are saved, but a few timid souls probe their feelings, practicing psychoanalysis. With them it is, "I hope so", or, "Maybe", or, "Perhaps so", while it should be, "I know so", "I have", or, "You have". This is a profound assurance, of which John wrote in I John 5:13.

There can be no assurance within unless there is the acceptance of the direct testimony of the Word of God. Such an assurance is not a mere mental assent to the veracity of scriptural statements, but an inner light, produced by believing God. Assurance is no vocal or audible voice or the revelation of an angel, but a condition of being secure, the willingness to take God at His word.

Full assurance rests upon unchanging Bible facts. An objective source of our assurance are the unconditional promises of God, as in John 6:37; 10:27 & 28; Romans 8:31-39. True assurance is built upon scriptural foundation. What God promises, He will complete (Phil. 1:6). Faith is what the Bible declares produces assurance.

Losing heart and feeling weary

One of the greatest obstacles to our endeavor is "losing heart." It often occurs when things are difficult or life seems hard. We often "grow weary" in doing what is necessary for us to accomplish our goal.

Knowing that people needed to be constantly reminded of not giving up as a follower of Christ, the great encourager, the apostle Paul, wrote to the Galatians, "let us not lose heart in doing good, for in due time we shall reap if we do not grow weary" (Galatians 6:9). He knew that his brethren would sometimes "lose heart" just because of the "daily grind" of living as a Christian.

Some days do you wonder if it is really worth all the hassle of living for Jesus? Do you find it hard to do the things which He has asked people to do? Do you just want to give up and forget it all?

Everyone, from the days of the apostle Paul until now, has had these thoughts and feelings. It is only natural for these emotions to arise especially when things are not going well. We begin to feel weary. We feel exhausted because of the constant strain to do the right thing.

Earlier in this text, Paul said, "Do not be deceived, God is not mocked; for whatever a man sows, this he will also reap" (Galatians 6:7). This passage often is used to speak of the "paybacks" a person gets because of some evil thing they have done. However, the verse is not limited to just evil actions. It will also apply to good

BIBLICAL MEDITATION

carlton_mc@msn.com

actions. We are going to reap what we have sown.

So, if we continue to work in the kingdom of God, we will reap the things which God wants us to have. We will enjoy the "fruit" of our labors. We will be able to see and be with God for eternity.

For just a moment, let's think about why we might "grow weary;" why we might "lose heart."

Because of our exhaustion, we might begin to think, "I will never make it, so why keep trying?" We might think, "The odds are against me, so why keep trying?" Because of the constant mental strain that is required to execute the commands of Jesus, we might think "I just cannot take it any longer, so why keep trying?"

Why should we keep trying? Why should we not "lose heart"? Why should we not "grow weary"? Because of what we will reap!

We will reap eternal life with God. We will spend eternity in His presence. We will be in the company of all the faithful from the beginning of time. We will be surrounded by all those who love the Lord and want to be in His presence. What a wonderful time it will be! From the very first moment that we are in the "bosom of Abraham" we will find great comfort. All the problems and frustrations of this world will be forgotten. Because of all the joy that we will be experiencing we will find it hard to believe that we even gave a thought to quitting; to giving up.

When you are feeling like you can no longer make it as a Christian, remember that such thoughts are natural but must be overcome. Don't "grow weary!" Don't "lose heart!" Stay faithful. You will never regret it!

When things aren't ideal, consider why

Okay ... the time for making your Christmas holiday plans has arrived. So, are you looking forward to all the festivities or are you just hoping to survive?

Of all the things we experience during the holidays, time spent with family probably tops both lists: the most wonderful and the most difficult. Perhaps you are spending Christmas without a loved one this year because of death — or a divorce — in your extended family will leave empty seats at the dinner table. It could even be conflicting schedules will cause you to miss out on family celebrations. In any case, Christmas can be a season where we realize that things haven't turned out like we hoped. Mary knew a little about that:

"So Joseph also went up from the town of Nazareth in Galilee to Judea, to Bethlehem the town of David because he belonged to the house and line of David. He went there to register with Mary, who was pledged to be married to him and was expecting a child. While they were there, the time came for the baby to be born, and she gave birth to her first-born, a son. She wrapped him in cloths and placed him in a manger, because there was no room for them in the inn." — Luke 2:4-7

Can you even imagine? About that first real labor pain, Mary had to be thinking, "This is not how it was supposed to be!" Giving birth to your firstborn is a big enough deal, but giving birth to God's Son? Surely, Mary didn't see the stable and manger when she pictured her due date. Those pretty Nativity scenes we set up each year are wonderful decorations, but the real deal was dirty and it smelled like animals ... not exactly the place for a newborn. Only because Mary had a heart of thanksgiving and was obedient to God's plan ("I am the Lord's servant ... may it be to me as you have said ..." — Luke 1:38) was she able to make those sacrifices with such grace. Instead of a soft, clean bed, she gave birth on the floor of a stable. Instead of her mother and other women tending to her, she was alone with Joseph, who was no doubt as overwhelmed as she was. Instead of a cradle to lay her son, she placed him in a feed trough. Nope ... this was not at all what she had in mind.

As you think about this, and the rest of the story, consider the fact that if Mary and Joseph had been anywhere else, those shepherds whom God chose to be the first witnesses of the birth of his Son, would have missed it. Shepherds were not exactly high on the social ladder, and maybe not whom Mary and Joseph were expecting, but they were sent by a host of God's angels. Who better to understand the amazing truth that God had just provided the perfect "Lamb" that would one day be the sacrifice to take away the sins of the world?

Could it be that when we feel like there is no room for us someplace, it is because God has made room for us somewhere else ... or is making room for someone else to be with us? Try this perspective when dealing with holiday plans for your family. If someone can't be there, look around and see who that makes room for ... perhaps a single adult or someone without any nearby family. If too many miles or your schedule cause you to miss family celebrations, look around to see where God is making room for you.

Celebration is ultimately up to us, and the attitude we choose to take ... things may not work out exactly like we hoped ... but God may just have something extra special in mind for you this year. Believe it ... because your heart matters.

Tibetan protests against Chinese rule in new phase

By CHRISTOPHER BODEEN
Associated Press

BEIJING — Two dozen Tibetans have set themselves on fire in western China this month in a dramatic acceleration of the protests against authoritarian Chinese rule, activist groups say.

The surge in self-immolations, along with an increase in large demonstrations, marks a new phase in the Tibetan protests.

At least 86 people have set themselves on fire since the immolations began in 2009. In a change in recent months, most self-immolators now are lay people — some of them acting together — rather than Buddhist monks and nuns who live in tightly monitored monasteries and thus can be more closely watched by authorities.

The protests have also sought to avoid direct attacks on authorities and government property, acts which in the past were used to label them as riots or terrorism, providing an excuse for greater oppression. Despite the altered approach, observers see little short-term possibility of Beijing changing its repressive policies.

"I think the problem will just escalate over time. The government shows no inclination to respond positively to recommendations for reform from the outside or Tibetans," said Michael Davis, a law professor and expert on Tibet at the University of Hong Kong.

In the latest immolation, 24-year-old Kalsang Kyab doused himself with kerosene and set himself alight Tuesday in front of local government offices in Kyangtse in Aba prefecture, a hotbed of unrest, according to London-based Free Tibet and other groups.

An Aba official said Wednesday he was aware of the immolations but refused to give any details before hanging up.

On Monday, about 1,000 students staged a bold protest in Qinghai province. Riot police fired shots into the air and released tear gas and beat the students.

Rastafarian church growing in Jamaica after long disdain

By DAVID McFADDEN
Associated Press

BULL BAY, Jamaica — The robed Rastafarian priest looked out over the turquoise sea off Jamaica's southeast coast and fervently described his belief that deliverance is at hand.

Around him at the sprawling Bobo Ashanti commune on an isolated hilltop, a few women and about 200 dreadlocked men with flowing robes and tightly wrapped turbans prayed, fasted, and fashioned handmade brooms — smoking marijuana only as a ceremonial ritual.

"Rasta church is rising," declared Priest Morant, who wore a vestment stitched with the words "The Black Christ." "There's nothing that can turn it back."

The Rastafarian faith is indeed rising in Jamaica, where new census figures show a roughly 20 percent increase in the number of adherents over a decade, to more than 29,000. While still a tiny sliver of the mostly Christian country's 2.7 million people, Jalani Niaah, an expert in the Rastafari movement, says the number is more like 8 to 10 percent of the population, since many Rastas disdain nearly all government initiatives and not all would have spoken to census takers.

"Its contemporary appeal is particularly fascinating to young men, especially in the absence of alternative sources for their development," said Niaah, a lecturer at the University of the West Indies.

Founded 80 years ago by descendants of African slaves, the Rasta move-

Robed Rastafarian priests chant prayers while facing the direction of the African nation of Ethiopia at the Bobo Ashanti commune in Bull Bay, Jamaica. More people are joining Jamaica's homegrown Rastafarian religion some 80 years after it was founded by the descendants of African slaves in response to black oppression on the Caribbean island.

ment's growing appeal is attributable to its rejection of Western materialism, the scarcity of opportunities for young men in Jamaica and an increasing acceptance of it.

For the black nationalist Bobo Ashanti commune, the Rastafarian faith is a transforming way of life, where Rastas strive to live a frugal existence uncomplicated by binding relationships to "Babylon" — the unflattering term for the Western world. They share a deep alienation from modern life and Jamaica is perceived as a temporary harbor until prophecy is fulfilled and they journey to the promised land of Africa on big ships.

Life is highly regimented at the isolated retreat, cut off from most of the comforts of modern society. But it has a strong appeal for some, among them 27-year-old Adrian Dunkley, who joined the strict sect two months ago after years of questioning his Christian upbringing and struggling to find work as an upholsterer.

"This place is helping me a whole heap. I'm learning every day, and things are starting to make sense," the new recruit known as Prince Adrian said in the shade of one of dozens of scrap-board buildings painted in the bright Rastafarian colors of red, green and gold.

Other Rastafari adherents follow a more secular lifestyle, marked by a passion for social justice, the natural world, reggae music and the ritualistic use of pot to bring them closer to the divine.

A melding of Old Testament teachings and Pan-Africanism, Rastafarianism emerged in colonial-era Jamaica in the 1930s out of anger over the oppression of blacks. Its message was spread by the reggae songs created by musical icons Bob Marley, Peter Tosh, Burning Spear and others in the 1970s, and the movement has attracted a following among reggae-loving Americans, Europeans and Asians. Academics believe at least 1 million people practice it worldwide.

In the United States, the population of Rastafarians appears to be steadily growing due in part to jail-house conversions, said Charles Price, associate professor of anthropology at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and the author of "Becoming Rasta: Origins of Rastafari Identity in Jamaica."

"I regularly get letters from inmates seeking information," Price said. "I also get regular invitations to talk to prisoners at local North Carolina juvenile facilities, often from chaplains trying to figure out what to do."

Cancer takes a cousin

You would have thought he already paid his dues fighting death.

Joe was born with a heart defect — a hole in his heart, as it was explained to us cousins.

“He never drew a clean breath,” was how our grandmother summed it up.

That changed in his eighth year when the condition was corrected at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore. Heart surgery back then wasn't the fairly easy fix it is today, and Joe had the horseshoe scar from his underarm to his chest bone to prove the severity of what he had been through.

But, it worked and he grew out of those thin arms and legs in a big way.

That was until cancer struck him down this year. By the time it was officially discovered, it was all over. He had the proven record of being a fighter, but this time he never had a chance, and he died on Sunday at 60.

Because of the struggles of his younger years, it seemed so unfair. I wanted to be bitter on his behalf.

As I wrestled with that mysterious ways thing, I began to see the other side.

His death could have happened 50 years ago.

Family lore has it that Joe was one of three patients sent to Johns Hopkins, and his doctors thought he was the least likely to make it.

Yet, he was the only one to survive.

His daddy and mama called before the operation when we were gathered at the grandparents for Sunday dinner. We all spoke to Joe and took turns crying.

Joe was on every prayer list in the county, and its power prevailed.

My thoughts turned to thanks.

Thanks for those years that were given. For his wife and daughters and granddaughter.

And for childhood memories of holes dug, helping with the cows and hogs, building forts and hunting days of riding the roads.

Watching Joe tear down all manner of machines to see how they worked was a marvel in itself.

Thanks, too, for the lives Joe touched with his gentleness, as evidenced by the line at his visitation that could have stretched around the block twice.

The mystery began to clear up.

Columbia travels to Navarre for regional final.

By BRANDON FINLEY
bfinley@lakecityreporter.com

One more roadblock. That's all that stands in the way of Columbia High and a chance to play for a shot at the state championship.

Columbia can secure a home playoff game against the winner of Gainesville and Armwood high schools by defeating Navarre High at 7:30 p.m. Central time today.

The Tigers final road game could be their toughest test yet in the playoffs, but Columbia is ready for the challenge.

“The first time I became familiar with Navarre was when I purchased the speed track machine for our team three springs ago,” Columbia head coach Brian Allen said. “Their coach (Jay Walls) was giving a testimony for the fast-twitch muscle training.”

The machine has made a difference for Navarre and Columbia. Now the two teams meet as eight teams remain in the Class 6A playoffs.

“Before he got there, they were a below .500 football team,” Allen said. “They have incorporated big plays. They're having 10-0, 9-1 type seasons.”

The Tigers were able to get their hands on film for Navarre early and Allen has been impressed with what he's seen on tape despite not being a physically imposing football team.

“They're not intimidating in size, but they have a (running) back (Jay Warren) that has run for

1,500 yards,” Allen said. “They have a 6-foot, 6-inch receiver (Jordan Leggett) and players that are capable of making plays. They've also got good coaching.”

It's a combination that has proven deadly for opposing teams throughout the rest of the year with Navarre's only loss coming against Pensacola High in a 25-24 loss during Week 2.

Navarre will run an offense similar to what Columbia has seen out of Baker County and Leon high schools this season with a spread attack.

“They'll have a spread mindset,” Allen said. “They're going to run doubles (at receiver), but they're going to try to run the ball and pop off a few plays. They're able to do that at a higher percentage than most teams. We know they're going to get after it.”

Navarre could also throw some things at the Tigers that aren't orthodox.

“We've seen six or seven films and they've got a trick play or two that we'll prepare for,” Allen said.

Allen said this is a game where his defense must shine.

“This is definitely a game where we need

Navarre coach Walls has team ready for regional.

Columbia High will face an imposing task in the regional final of the Class 6A playoffs at Navarre High at 7:30 p.m. Central time today.

Raiders' head coach Jay Walls has his team primed for the playoff matchup with an 11-1 record and Navarre hasn't lost since Week 2.

Although the two teams share the same record, the philosophies are different for the two coaches.

“Offensively, we base out of a spread attack,” Walls said. “We have a running back in Jay Warren that has rushed for over 1,500 yards and Johnny Robinson is also pretty good with over 600 yards rushing. We have what I think is one of the top receivers in the state in Jordan Leggett. We have to get the ball to him and he's had about 50 catches for over 800 yards. We're going to throw a good bit as well, but we're a balanced attack.”

Defensively, the Raiders are similar to the Tigers in that they are stingy on the scoreboard.

“We're going to base out of a 3-3 stack,” Walls said. “We've been solid all season and only allowed 14-15 points per game. We've had some close ball games, but we've done a good job of being physical against other teams and pressuring the quarterback.”

Walls also showed his respect for the Tigers.

“They do a great job of running the football,” Walls said. “From a defensive standpoint, we definitely have to stop the run. They're good at disguising things from going in wide open formations and shifts.”

Walls said both teams share the same philosophy for what they ultimately want out of their offenses.

“We want to be balanced,” he said.

Bulldogs beat Tigers in basketball opener

By TIM KIRBY
 tkirby@lakecityreporter.com

LIVE OAK — Columbia High's basketball team lost on the road to Suwannee High, 67-46, in the opener for both teams. The matchup of Columbia's Morris Marshall and Suwannee's Jimmie Taylor III proved out. Marshall hit five 3-pointers and scored 19 points, while Taylor led all scorers with 22 points. "Our help defense and lack of scoring was our nemesis tonight," Columbia head coach Horace

Jefferson said. "Suwannee shot lights-out; you have to give them credit."

While Morris was the only Tiger in double figures, Suwannee got five treys and 17 points from Deangelo Ross. Raymond Gardner hit four 3-pointers in the first half as the Bulldogs built a 40-28 lead. Kevarrus Hayes chipped in nine points.

Suwannee wrapped things up with a 9-0 spurt midway through the fourth quarter.

Marshall had a steal and highlight dunk in the first quarter for an 11-10

Suwannee lead, then the Bulldogs closed the quarter on a 10-3 run for a 21-13 lead and Columbia couldn't get any closer.

Other scorers for CHS were Tré Simmons with eight points, Andrew Momeka with seven, Wayne Broom with four, and Dillan Hall, Kevin Louder, Kelvin Jonas and Dylan Hinson each with two.

Columbia plays Union County High at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in Lake Butler.

Columbia's junior varsity fought back from a 34-27 halftime deficit and won a 63-62 thriller.

BCS implications in final week

By RALPH D. RUSSO
Associated Press

Time to put the BCS puzzle together.

There's not a lot of mystery going into championship weekend. Mostly, everything should simply fall into place.

The spot opposite Notre Dame in the championship game will go to Alabama or Georgia, whichever one takes the SEC title. The winners of the Pac-12, Big Ten and ACC championship games will each advance to a big game, as will the team that comes out on top in the Big East matchup between Louisville and Rutgers on Thursday night.

Florida and Oregon aren't playing this weekend, but both are safe bets to land at-large bids to BCS games. Pencil in the Gators for the Sugar Bowl and the Ducks for the Fiesta.

The real BCS intrigue this weekend will happen at a most unlikely place: Detroit, where No. 18 Kent State and No. 19 Northern Illinois will be playing for the Mid-American Conference title Friday.

The MAC has never sent a team to the BCS, but it could benefit from the Big East's struggles this season.

BCS rules state that if a champion from a conference without an automatic bid, such as the MAC, ranks in the top 16 of the final BCS standings and is ranked higher than a champion from one of the AQ leagues, such as the Big East, that non-AQ champ is guaranteed a spot in the BCS.

Neither Rutgers nor Louisville was ranked in last week's BCS standings, so that opens the back door to a bid for the MAC champ.

Kent State was 17th and stands a good chance to move up one spot with a victory. UCLA is in 16th place and has to play at Stanford in the Pac-12 title game on Friday night.

"I won't talk about that at all," MAC coach of the year Darrell Hazell said about Kent State's BCS prospects. "I'll talk about Northern Illinois. If our guys don't focus on this Friday we won't have the opportunity to play in some of those big games."

"This is huge, huge game for this university."

Northern Illinois is 21st in the BCS standings and could also get into the top 16, but would need a little extra help. It's just as likely an NIU victory in the MAC title game will eliminate both the Huskies and the Golden Flashes.

Boise State, 20th in the standings, plays at Nevada on Saturday and can win a share of the Mountain West title. The Broncos also have a long shot chance at getting into the top 16, but it'd be tough for them to jump the MAC champion.

If a BCS buster does emerge, the biggest loser could be the Big 12.

No. 12 Oklahoma plays TCU on Saturday with a chance to close its season 10-2 (losses against Notre Dame and Kansas State) and earn a share of the conference title.

The Sooners can still win the Big 12 if they win and Kansas State loses to Texas. Still, there's room for both in the BCS unless space needs to be created for Kent State or one of the other potential BCS busters.

If the Golden Flashes (11-1), who lost to Kentucky by 33 early in the season and later won at Rutgers, do find their way into the BCS, expect it to be in the Orange Bowl.

The Orange Bowl has the last selection among the BCS bowls and it's not likely any other game will be rushing to take Kent State, or Northern Illinois (11-1) for that matter.

But rest assured those teams won't be picky.

The picks:

Today
No. 17 UCLA (plus 8½) at No. 8 Stanford, Pac-12 championship
Rematch for the Rose Bowl ... STANFORD 31-21.

No. 18 Kent State (plus 6) vs. No. 19 Northern Illinois, MAC championship at Detroit
KSU RB Dri Archer and NIU QB Jordan Lynch are MACtion stars ...

NORTHERN ILLINOIS
35-28.

Saturday

No. 2 Alabama (minus 7) vs. No. 3 Georgia, SEC championship at Atlanta

Winner gets the Irish in Miami ... ALABAMA 28-24.

No. 23 Texas (plus 11½) at No. 7 Kansas State

Wildcats get Big 12 title and Fiesta Bowl bid with victory ... KANSAS STATE 38-24.

UPSET SPECIAL

No. 12 Oklahoma (minus 6½) at TCU

Sooners need to bounce back quickly from Bedlam ... TCU 34-31.

BEST BET

No. 13 Florida State (minus 14) vs. Georgia Tech, ACC championship at Charlotte

Seminoles looking for first ACC title since 2005, and Orange Bowl bid ... FLORIDA STATE 44-21.

No. 14 Nebraska (minus 3) vs. Wisconsin, Big Ten championship at Indianapolis

Winner goes to Rose Bowl because Ohio State can't ... NEBRASKA 24-17.

Nicholls State (no line) at No. 16 Oregon State

Postponed by Hurricane Isaac earlier in season ... OREGON STATE 48-14.

No. 24 Oklahoma State (minus 4) at Baylor

Cowboys and Bears combine to average 1,122 yards per game ... OKLAHOMA STATE 51-45.

No. 25 Boise State (minus 9½) at Nevada

Last time Broncos visited Reno, an OT loss kept them out of BCS ... BOISE STATE 31-24.

Last week's record: 14-5 (straight); 12-7 (vs. points)

Season record: 211-48 (straight); 122-111 (vs. points)

Best bets: 5-8.

Upset specials: 8-5.

that at this point, turnovers could be key to the contest.

"There are only eight teams left at this point and they're all really good," Walls said. "We have to protect the football and play without mistakes."

But Walls said the Raiders can't play tight.

"We still have to make plays," he said. "We need to make plays in the kicking game as well. I think we'll see some big plays. We've done well in that area and we're kind of aggressive."

Walls expects the travel to give the Raiders a leg up.

"I hope it's a huge factor," Walls said. "We know that a good football team can play anywhere, but we're in the advantage that we get to stay in our routine and don't have to travel."

Both teams enter on 10-game winning streaks and Walls said the Raiders will play with a lot of confidence.

"I think it's a positive for us that we lost early," Walls said. "Each week we've gained a bit of confidence and we've seen our team build in confidence. We're still taking it one game at a time and not looking back or ahead. We want to get better in what we do every day. We have to continue to keep doing the things that we do. Football is a tough sport, but winning makes it fun."

Terry (Calloway) and Felix (Woods) to play really good out there," Allen said. "They've played extremely well all year. We need Roger (Cray) to play good. We need Roc (Battle) to play good."

But one unit will be key for the defense.

"We need the defensive line," Allen said. "They will be key. We need penetration so that they're not able to let their quarterback sit there and look at the coverage. They have a tendency to put the ball up in the air and let kids make plays. If we're able to make a couple plays on them, I'll feel good."

Despite Leggett's size advantage over Columbia's secondary, Allen feels good about the matchup.

"Our line has to get after their butt early up front so that he has a hand in his face while trying to complete the pass," Allen said. "He's a big target and our guys might not be that tall, but they can jump. It's going to take more than one guy to beat us."

Defensively, the Tigers will prepare for a look they've already seen once in the playoffs.

"They're going to run a 3-3 stack," Allen said. "We last saw that against Bartram Trail. They're not big on the ball, but they're 11-1 so they're getting after it pretty good."

Allen said the Tigers won't change many things up on the offensive end as Columbia looks to keep the ground game pounding the front.

"We've got to continue to do the things we've been doing well all season," Allen said. "We'll pass when we need to, but it's imperative that we establish the run quickly."

The school is asking that the fans try to give the team a send off on Friday at 10 a.m. as the Tigers leave the school. The procession will proceed up Marion St. and through downtown.

The charter buses will have a police escort with sirens as the buses come through town. Fans are asked to wear their purple and gold and wave at the players as they make their way up to I-10.

Backfields come in two's for SEC

By JOHN ZENOR

Associated Press

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — That running back duo in the Southeastern Conference championship game has been punishingly effective all season.

Pick a team — No. 3 Georgia or No. 2 Alabama — the description fits.

Bulldogs freshmen Todd Gurley and Keith Marshall roll into Saturday's game with 1,858 combined yards and 22 touchdowns.

The Crimson Tide counters with Eddie Lacy, freshman T.J. Yeldon and their collective 1,848 yards and 24 TDs.

The stats hardly settle the debate of which tailback tandem is better.

"They've got two great running backs," Tide cornerback Dee Milliner said. "We've got two, three great running backs here."

Well, that's no help.

There's not an easy answer. Both backfield combinations have been terrific. If one player gets winded, the other goes in. One gets a little dinged up, no problem.

Fresh legs, and no rest for the weary defenses.

It has been Alabama's formula since Nick Saban arrived. The two-tailback system has flourished with 2009 Heisman Trophy winner Mark Ingram and 2011 finalist Trent Richardson, and both gained 700-plus yards as freshmen.

Yeldon has already surpassed the first-season production of either of those two first-round NFL draft picks with 847 yards and 10 touchdowns.

Georgia running back Todd Gurley (3) reacts after scoring a touchdown against Georgia Tech during the first quarter of an NCAA college football game on Nov. 24 in Athens, Ga.

Saban said the system is especially effective if the backs present defenses with different styles, like Gurley and Marshall.

"Todd is a little bit like our guys in a way," he said. "He's big, physical, can run inside, can run outside. He'll make you miss, but has power. Their second guy is a very, very good back in all those regards, but he's a very fast guy. There's a change of pace there that the players have to be aware of."

Gurley has been the most prolific of the bunch. He is second in the SEC with 1,138 yards while he and Lacy's 14 touchdowns are tied for tops among running backs. Lacy has 1,001 yards.

Georgia linebacker Christian Robinson said Yeldon and Gurley compare favorably.

"They both run really hard," Robinson said. "When I look at Todd I just see lower body. You know, people try to hit him high a lot of times, and he just keeps turning his legs and gets those extra yards and makes a lot of people miss."

"What I've seen of Yeldon, he has the speed to get around the edge. He turns up a lot on people that don't think he's as fast as he really is. You've got to hold the edge of the defense or else he's gone.

I think Todd has speed as well. He's obviously looking a little bit faster. But I would say Todd's a little bit bigger and more of a bruiser."

Georgia's backs have the clear advantage in one area: Nickname. No. 3 Gurley and No. 4 Marshall (720 yards, eight touchdowns) have been dubbed "Gurshall" after Herschel Walker, who led the Bulldogs to the 1980 national title as a freshman. Their numbers just happen to smush into his 34, and Walker has praised the two freshmen.

"That's great, to have one of the best players to ever come through college football to say great things about me," Gurley said. "But I've got to keep working."

He's not into any comparisons with the former superstar, either. "We're not trying to be like nobody else," Gurley said. "But it's a cool thing for the fans."

Gurley is one touchdown away from matching Walker's 15 as a freshman. He and Marshall have already blown by the 1,739 yards and 14 combined touchdowns by Arkansas freshmen and future first-rounders Darren McFadden and Felix Jones in 2005.

"Playing as a true freshman in the SEC, two guys, that's enough said right there — at the University of the Georgia," Alabama defensive end Damion Square said. "I know they've got some big-time guys there. For those guys to come in and play early and often, that makes them great. Those guys run hard. They're going to make you pay when you make mistakes. Come in and tackling those guys, they're going to make a 2-yard gain a 7-yard gain. You've got to be really fundamentally sound when you're playing against those guys."

Square passed on the question of which tailback tandem is the best.

"I play for the University of Alabama. So..." he said.

Maybe Saturday's game will provide a more conclusive answer.

Stanford, UCLA Pac-12 title rematch a 'mind game'

By ANTONIO GONZALEZ

Associated Press

STANFORD, Calif. — This week has been unlike any other in the 20 years Mike Gleeson has been Stanford football's video director.

Even though there's a tight turnaround between the Cardinal's 35-17 victory last Saturday at UCLA and the Pac-12 championship game rematch Friday night, Gleeson's typical task is simplified. All he has to do is add video from the first game and recalculate statistics to the preparation done last week.

After that, things get complicated.

"The staff, in a way, they have to shuffle the deck as if it didn't happen. Or did it?" Gleeson said. "How do you want to look at it? Do you want to change things? Do you want to keep things? Now we've got the mind games with UCLA. What did they show? What do we think they showed compared to what they'll do this week?"

"Well, we have 11 other games. So we kind of know what they're about, just like they know what we're about. But did they show everything that they could against us? Maybe. Maybe not. That's the mind game."

Call last week a dress rehearsal, although even that may be in question. Stanford will wear its black uniforms, helmets and shoes for only the fourth time. UCLA is expected to swap out those dark blue "L.A. Night" jerseys for its traditional white tops, gold pants and gold helmets on the road.

With the league title at stake, what else the eighth-ranked Cardinal (10-2, 8-1) and the No. 17 Bruins (9-3, 6-3) bring out of the closet for the sequel at Stanford Stadium might not be so obvious. They will be the first opponents in major college football matched against each other for a regular-season finale and conference title game in consecutive weeks.

After the opener at the Rose Bowl, booking a return trip to Pasadena for "The Granddaddy of Them All" on Jan. 1 could be tricky. Both staffs lost a day of game planning and practice, and the preparation has everybody involved contemplating how to approach Part II.

"I cannot recall ever being in this situation before," UCLA coach Jim Mora said. "I don't know that it benefits either team, or is hard on any team. It just comes down to going out on Friday night and executing. Any familiarity we have with them, they'll have with us."

Stanford's video staff usually compiles highlights of about four games from when its opponent faced a team that mirrored what the Cardinal does, including last season's meeting if the opponent has the same coaching staff or style.

In this case, last week's game stands for last season's game.

Then producers send the videos and analytical reports to coaches and players through an application on their iPad playbooks.

FSU looks to secure ACC

Associated Press

Georgia Tech (6-6, 5-3) vs. No. 13 Florida St (10-2, 7-1, 8 p.m. (ABC)

Line: Florida State by 14.

Series record: Florida State 12-9-1.

What's at stake: Atlantic Division winner Florida State has won a dozen league championships since joining the league in 1992. Georgia Tech, which qualified after Miami officials decided to skip the game in anticipation of NCAA sanctions, defeated Clemson in the league's championship game in 2009, but was forced to vacate the title because of NCAA sanctions. Georgia Tech's string of 16 straight seasons being bowl eligible may also be in jeopardy if it loses.

Key matchup:

Florida State's defense, which is ranked second nationally, against Georgia Tech's high-powered triple-option offense that averaged an ACC record 323.3 yards a game on the ground. The Seminoles allowed just 85 yards a game rushing. A high-scoring affair could occur if Florida State has trouble containing the Jackets although if it comes down to a kick, the Seminoles have all-time NCAA field goal and scoring leader Dustin Hopkins available.

Players to watch: Florida State: DE Bjoern Werner, a Nagurski finalist who wreaked havoc with opposing offensive lineman all season and was the top vote getter in the ACC's all-conference defensive unit. Werner has 13 sacks and seven deflected passes despite having been frequently double-teamed during the season. His ability to stop the run will be tested. Georgia Tech: QBs Tevin Washington and Vad Lee are the igniters in the Georgia Tech offense and will need some protection against Werner and others in Florida State's ACC-best defense to have a chance at upsetting the Seminoles. The Yellow Jackets didn't get into the end zone last week in a 42-10 drubbing at Georgia until midway through the fourth quarter.

Facts and Figures:

Florida State won the first ACC championship game in 2005 and is making its third appearance.

Badgers get redemption shot in Big Ten title game

By NANCY ARMOUR

Associated Press

Wisconsin is in some unfamiliar territory.

No, not the Big Ten title game. The Badgers count as grizzled veterans after playing in last year's inaugural conference championship, well acquainted with all the hype and hoopla that comes with it. A trip to the Rose Bowl isn't so daunting, either. The Badgers, after all, rang in the last two New Years in Pasadena.

It's being so, well, mediocre, that's new for Wisconsin. Winners of the Big Ten title the last two years, the Badgers are getting a chance at the first three-peat in school history Saturday — by default. With Ohio State and Penn State ineligible for the post-season, it's Wisconsin playing No. 14 Nebraska on Saturday for the title and a trip to the Rose Bowl.

"Obviously it is different and strange this year because of our record going into this game," said Montee Ball, who last week became major college football's all-time touchdown leader. "But it's not our fault what happened to the teams that can't play in this game. We're most definitely going to take the opportunity and we're going to run with it. We're going to go to Indianapolis and play hard."

ASSOCIATED PRESS

In this Sept. 29 file photo, Wisconsin head coach Bret Bielema (left) and Nebraska head coach Bo Pelini chat prior to their game in Lincoln, Neb. With Ohio State and Penn State both ineligible for the postseason, Wisconsin will represent the Leaders Division in the title game. The Badgers play the No. 14 Cornhuskers on Saturday in the Big Ten Championship.

Wisconsin (7-5, 4-4 Big Ten) stumbled to the finish of the regular season with three losses in its last four games, all in overtime.

It tied for fifth in the Big Ten, and lost more than three conference games for only the second time in coach Bret Bielema's seven seasons.

Most years, that would have relegated the Badgers to a bowl named for an automotive company or bar food, played so early they'd be home in plenty of time to watch the BCS bowls from the comfort of their couches. But somebody had to represent the Leaders Division in the Big Ten title game, and without the Buckeyes and Nittany Lions, the Badgers were the best of the rest.

"I didn't set the rules with how everything has worked out. I didn't pick the teams that were in there," center and team captain Travis Frederick said. "This is how it's worked out, and it's going to come down to us and Nebraska."

To be fair, the Badgers weren't all that far from being a good team. Possibly even a really good one. Only one of their losses was by more than three points, and that was the 21-14 OT loss to Ohio State. Wisconsin led or was tied going into the fourth quarter in three of the losses. It also played its last three games with a quarterback who had played all of three snaps — that's snaps, not starts — since the 2009 regular-season finale.

A play here, a play there, and the Badgers could be headed to Indianapolis with a far more impressive record.

DEAR ABBY

Too much togetherness may result in couple's breakup

www.dearabby.com

DEAR ABBY: I'm engaged to someone I love very much. I am 36 and he is 44. We get along great, but he's in a rush to get married. It will be my first and his second. We got engaged three months ago, and he wants the wedding to be in February. The date he picked is his father's birthday.

My other problem is, he is always pawing at me. He always needs to be touching me or calling me his "beautiful angel." It's good to hear that once in a while, but not five times a day.

I love being with him, but sometimes I need my own space. If I say no, he gets defensive and worried that I'm going to leave him. We spend practically every waking (and non-waking) moment together. I am almost at a breaking point. Help! - OVERWHELMED IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR OVERWHELMED: I hope you realize that the behavior you are describing is not an indication of love, but of extreme insecurity. His need to constantly touch you, his defensiveness if you say you need some space, and his fear that you will leave him WON'T CHANGE if you marry him. I am also concerned about the way your wedding date was chosen, because the decision wasn't arrived at mutually.

Ask yourself this: If he makes what should be joint decisions, and you have no space for yourself because of his insecurity, is this the way you want to spend a LIFETIME? These could be symptoms of an abuser.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 25, have an associate's degree in health management, completed a CRMA (Certified Residential Medication Aide) course, and I'm now on my way to obtaining my bachelor of science in health management. It sounds like I'm heading toward a great future, right?

My problem is I have zero confidence in myself. I'm scared of death of making mistakes as a CRMA, and equally scared of being successful. Everybody says how "proud" they are of me and that I'm headed toward great things, but I'm not sure I can do this. I am struggling to find self-confidence because if I don't believe in myself, I won't achieve anything. What can I do to put myself out there and take the steps I need to accomplish my goals? - NEEDS A BOOST IN MAINE

DEAR NEEDS A BOOST: Self-doubt can be an asset if it causes you to strive harder to master the skills you will need in your profession. However, because you are afraid of both failure AND success, the surest way to conquer your fears would be to talk about them with a counselor at your school or to a psychologist. What you are dealing with is not as unusual as you may think.

DEAR ABBY: My husband insists that wearing a white T-shirt when out and about is the same as wearing a colored one with a design on it. I think he's wearing underwear as outerwear and is being too casual.

We do not live in a rural community. We are in a suburb of San Diego. Life is relaxed here, but not THAT relaxed. Do you have an opinion? - DRESSING UP, NOT DOWN

DEAR DRESSING UP: I do have a thought or two on the subject. If your husband is comfortable this way, leave him alone. Because you are the one concerned with appearances, continue dressing up to create the impression you want and let him dress down and suffer the consequences - if there are any, which I doubt.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend "Alex's" mom is the most controlling person I have ever encountered. We only get to see each other on weekends because he lives an hour away from me. When we do see each other, it's for one-third of the day. Alex has to spend the other two-thirds with her. I'm 22 and he is 21.

He is also not allowed to stay with me. Alex has to lie to her about where he's staying in order to be able to spend time with me. His mom has added a feature to his cellphone in order to see where he is 24/7, and would cancel his service if he refused it.

I love my boyfriend unconditionally, but his mom is driving us both crazy and turning our relationship into a trio. We have tried getting her to back off, but it just makes her worse. I am at a loss as to what to do. What do you think we should do? - EXTREMELY WORRIED IN MISSISSIPPI

DEAR EXTREMELY WORRIED: Frankly, you should be worried. Your boyfriend is an adult who seems to be firmly under his mother's thumb. He is completely dependent. At 21, Alex's activities should not be monitored, nor should he be spending two-thirds of his day with his mother. If nothing else, he should be looking for a job so he can sever the umbilical cord before it strangles him. You can't fix this. HE has to do it.

DEAR ABBY: My former roommate and I took a short trip to Florida. We agreed we would split the hotel costs. I'd reserve the room; she would reimburse me after the trip.

She paid me a month later, and I deposited her check as soon as I could get to my bank, which was three weeks later. When the check went through, she attacked me because she said it drained her account! I apologized, but told her I was upset that she was making it seem like it was my fault.

I think that if someone is slow on funds, the person should be more diligent in balancing his or her checkbook. Had I known she had money problems, I would have waited to deposit her check. It has been months, and my once best friend still won't speak to me. Was I wrong? - AT FAULT? IN KENTUCKY

DEAR AT FAULT?: No, you were not. It was your friend's responsibility to make sure there were enough funds in her account to cover the check she gave you. She may be embarrassed, which is why she doesn't want to talk to you. People who are angry at themselves sometimes blame others. It's a sign of immaturity.

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating "Kristen" for seven months. She is great as far as personality, physical chemistry, similar likes and dislikes, and patience go. She is ALMOST everything I have ever wanted in a girl. However, I have never called her "beautiful," although she has made a couple of "fishing" comments to try to get me to say it. In my eyes, that would be a lie.

Kristen is attractive, but not beautiful. I have always thought that anyone I'm planning on spending the rest of my life with would be "beautiful" to ME, and I'd let her know accordingly. Your thoughts? - NOT SHALLOW IN PHOENIX

DEAR NOT SHALLOW: Candidly, I think that in spite of all of her wonderful qualities, Kristen is not "the one" for you. And you are not "the one" for her because what she needs is validation you can't give her. Women need to feel beautiful in the eyes of the men they love, and because you plan to spend your life with someone who is beautiful "to you," you should both move on.

Champ to buy big toy; downplays critics

In addition to picking up a nice trophy and a place in NASCAR history for winning the 2012 Sprint Cup championship, Brad Keselowski is in line to collect millions of dollars in bonus money and from other sources. His take from NASCAR alone, which is split with his Penske Racing team, is estimated to be about $6 million.

So what does a 28-year-old single person plan to do with that kind of cash?

Keselowski said on last week's NASCAR teleconference that one of the "toys" on his list is a tank.

"I've been looking into that really all summer long," he said. "It all started with Wally Dallenbach, who was telling me a story about having one. I thought, wow, that would be awesome. So obviously living where I do and being around Dale [Earnhardt] Jr., I thought it would be cool if we both got a tank and chased each other around in the woods with them. It's kind of our deal.

"I promised myself if I won it, I would buy one whether Dale does or not. It was kind of a little bit of motivation, I should say."

He said he's not really into buying trophies for himself, but a tank is different.

"I think a tank would be pretty cool," he said. "I want to put one together and have some fun with it. When I'm done playing with it, I'll just park it in the driveway and scare off people who aren't supposed to be around. I don't know. It will be fun either way."

He said he'll likely try to find a vintage model. "I want to get something from World War II to Korea era, something in the '40s to mid-'50s, era," he said.

A good-running tank shouldn't put too much of a dent in Keselowski's wallet. They're for sale on military vehicle websites starting at around $250,000.

As NASCAR's newest champion, Keselowski drew plenty of notice and some criticism for appearing to have consumed several adult beverages before some of his post-race interviews from Homestead-Miami Speedway in the hours after he clinched the Cup championship. But on a teleconference with reporters two days later, he expressed no regrets.

"I think everybody faces their criticism no matter what you do," he said. "You're never going to get all of the people to like something that you do. It's not possible. Someone's always going to dislike something you do, and you have to roll that off your shoulders and move on."

He said that if a person remains true to himself, it'll all work out in the long run.

"I had fun, and I wanted to show that fun and enjoy it with others," he said. "I'm more thrilled that people enjoyed [it] than I am disappointed to questioning my path because someone else didn't like it."

TV ratings for last week's Sprint Cup season finale at Homestead-Miami Speedway continued a trend of Chase races drawing fewer viewers than comparable events last year.

The Ford EcoBoost 400 earned a 3.5 household coverage rating, averaging 3,444,706 viewers, according to the Nielsen Company. Those numbers were down from last year's 3.6 rating with 6.8 million viewers.

Overall, the 10 Chase races on ESPN had a rating average of 2.7 with 4.2 million viewers, compared to a 3.1 rating and 4.763 million viewers last year.

NOTEBOOK

Greg Ives in at JR Motorsports

Greg Ives, who was announced this week as the new crew chief for Regan Smith at JR Motorsports, brings strong credentials to his new job. He was the race engineer for all five of Jimmie Johnson's Sprint Cup championships, and he's been involved in racing for most of his life.

His first racing experiences were as a crew member for his father Roger and brother Steve on the short tracks of the Midwest.

"We had an old barn in back of our house with a concrete pad for the car," said Ives, a 33-year-old native of Bark River, Mich. "The earliest job I can remember was cleaning the car. I was five or six years old, and small, and could crawl around and clean the car. Then I swept everything out."

From there, he eventually drove some himself, with a fair amount of success.

"If I showed up, I was a threat to be fast, contending for wins and in the points chase," he said.

JR Motorsports also announced that it likely will field just one full-time car next year, as no sponsor has been signed to back Cole Whitt, who raced for JR Motorsports this year along with Danica Patrick, who is moving to a full-time Cup ride next year.

Team co-owner Dale Earnhardt Jr. is set to run a limited number of Nationwide Series races for JR Motorsports next year.

Patrick announces divorce

NASCAR's Danica Patrick announced on her Facebook page last week that she's divorcing her husband, Paul Hopenhthal.

"I am sad to inform my fans that after seven years, Paul and I have decided to amicably end our marriage," she said. "This isn't easy for either of us, but mutually it has come to this. He has been an important person and friend in my life and that's how we will remain moving forward."

Hopenhthal, a physical therapist who met his future wife while treating her for a yoga injury, is 47. Patrick is 30.

Also last week, Patrick received the 2012 Nationwide Series Most Popular Driver Award, which is determined by online voting by race fans.

Townley joins Red Horse team

Camping World Truck Series driver John Wes Townley said last week that he'll be driving a truck for Red Horse Racing next season. Townley, 22, said he'll essentially take over the No. 7 team that fielded trucks for John King and Parker Kligerman this season.

King won at Daytona, and Kligerman was victorious at Talladega. Townley said he believes he, too, can win in the Red Horse truck, which is owned by Tom DeLoach, a former Mobil 1 executive and fellow Georgia native. DeLoach is from Statesboro, while Townley is from Watkinville, but it was in DeLoach's hometown that Townley's father Tony and his partner Zach McLeroy founded the Zaxby's restaurant chain that will sponsor Townley's truck.

John Wes Townley, who was criticized early in his career for crashing trucks fairly frequently, had a solid season in 2012. He failed to finish just two races, had two top-10 finishes and eight more of 16th or better in 21 starts.

"I feel like I did what I needed to do this year, which was finish races and get experience," Townley said. "Now the goal is to go out there and win some races, and I think I can do it."

Townley also said he's hoping to make several Nationwide Series starts next season.

Bright future for Elliott

For Chase Elliott, the teenage son of NASCAR veteran Bill Elliott, the future – immediate and longer term – is looking as promising as ever.

When Elliott shows up at Five Flags Speedway in Pensacola, Fla., next week to begin preparations for the 45th annual Snowball Derby, he'll be in the unique position of being the defending winner of one of the premiere short track races in America, but also still a teenager.

Elliott, who will turn 17 on Wednesday, already has won some of short track racing's biggest events, including the Winchester 400 at Winchester Speedway in Indiana and a Late Model race at North Wilkesboro Speedway. And he's the youngest winner in the history of the Snowball Derby, a race that has been won by some of NASCAR's best racers including Darrell Waltrip, Donnie Allison, Pete Hamilton, Jody Ridley and Kyle Busch.

Elliott has raced at Five Flags several times this summer and feels he's in position to contend for the win again.

"I'm always excited to get to race at Five Flags," said Elliott, one of the track's former champions. "We learned some things racing there this year, and I feel like we've got as good a shot at winning as anybody."

Elliott also is anxious to see if NASCAR's decision to lower the minimum age for drivers in the Camping World Truck Series to 16 at road courses and ovals less than 1.1 miles will lead to some truck races for him next year.

"I was definitely excited when I heard about that," he said, adding that his participation in the series would have to be approved by Hendrick Motorsports, where he's been signed as a developmental driver, and by Aaron's, his primary sponsor.

"It depends on whether they think it's the right thing to do, but it's definitely an option."

Elliott's 2013 plans, which are uncertain at this point, also could include some ARCA events.

Burton has surgery

NASCAR driver Jeff Burton had surgery last week to alleviate symptoms of carpal tunnel syndrome.

"After feeling some recurring symptoms of carpal tunnel syndrome, my physician and I decided routine surgery would be best for this situation," Burton said in a release from his Richard Childress Racing team. "There is no such thing as an off-season in this sport, so I wanted to get it done as soon as possible to be ready for my Caterpillar Visitors Center appearance with Richard [Childress] early next month. Plus, we have many test sessions planned in December with the No. 31 Chevrolet team in preparation for the 2013 season with my new crew chief Luke Lambert.

"I will be ready to go." Burton is coming off two of the most disappointing seasons of his career. He hasn't won a race since 2008, posted just two top-five finishes in each of the past two seasons and finished 20th and 19th in the points standings.
