SCOTT SEEKS $74.2 BILLION

Raises, bonuses in budget

Proposal represents a 6 percent increase in spending over 2012.

By GARY FINEOUT
 Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Florida Gov. Rick Scott — who just two years ago said it was time to slash state spending and return government to its “core functions” — is now asking state lawmakers for a 6 percent hike in spending.

Scott on Thursday unveiled a $74.2 billion budget for the coming year that calls for higher spending on schools and universities, including an across-the-board $2,500 pay raise for school teachers and a $1,200 one-time bonus for state workers.

The Republican governor also called for spending more on key environmental programs such as Everglades restoration and increasing money available for school safety programs by 16 percent.

But Scott's third proposed budget was also notable for what it did not include: A recommendation on whether the state should accept federal aid and expand Medicaid — a key part of the Affordable Care Act.

Instead Scott continued to insist there were too many “unanswered

‘Pat’ settles into a new home

By DEREK GILLIAM

The Lake City-Columbia County Chamber of Commerce passed Pat the Chamber Champion on to its new home Thursday after North Florida Medical Sales and Pharmacy won the rights to display Pat in its stores.

Pat is the preserved head of an 8- to 10-foot alligator housed in a glass case.

Scott Middleton, president and owner of North Florida Medical Sales and Pharmacy, had the highest bid at $1,000, but did not want to pay less for Pat than the previous year's winner of the auction. He bumped up his bid to $1,200 — $100 more than last year's winning bid — before accepting the alligator Saturday at the Chamber Ball.

He said his grandchildren love alligators and that was a factor but wasn't the only reason why he

Beyonce admits inauguration lip sync

NEW ORLEANS

Beyonce faced the music at a press conference Thursday before the Super Bowl, admitting that she did lip sync when she performed the national anthem on Inauguration Day.

The singer said she's a "perfectionist" and wanted her performance for President Barack Obama to be a memorable one. She called the day "emotional."

"I practice until my feet bleed and I did not have time to rehearse with the orchestra," she said. "Due to no proper sound check, I did not feel comfortable taking a risk. It was about the president and the inauguration, and I wanted to make him and my country proud, so I decided to sing along with my pre-recorded track, which is very common in the music industry. And I'm very proud of my performance."

She opened her press conference in New Orleans with a live rendition of the national anthem. She asked those at the conference to stand before she belted "The Star Spangled Banner," and after she said with a laugh: "Any questions?"

The superstar hadn't spoken publicly since it was alleged that she lip-synced her rendition of "The Star-Spangled Banner" at President Barack Obama's inauguration last week. Her critically praised performance came under scrutiny less than a day later when a representative from the U.S. Marine Band said she wasn't singing live and the band's accompanying performance was taped.

Andrews

During World War II, they hawked war bonds, entertained soldiers overseas and boosted morale on the home-front with tunes like "Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy of Company B" and "I Can Dream, Can't I?"

Andrews, the last surviving member of the singing Andrews Sisters trio, died Wednesday at 94 of natural causes at her home in the Los Angeles suburb of Northridge, family spokesman Alan Eichler said.

From the late 1930s through the 1940s, the Andrews Sisters — LaVerne, Maxene and Patty — produced one hit record after another, beginning with "Bei Mir Bist Du Schoen" in 1937 and continuing with "Beat Me Daddy, Eight to the Bar,"

"Rum and Coca-Cola" and more. They recorded more than 400 songs and sold over 80 million records.

"Kind of funny, huh?" he said. It's true, though. One of basketball's most outrageous personalities has written a book for kids.

AROUND FLORIDA

State unveils new slogan, logo

TALLAHASSEE — Florida is banking on a catchy new slogan and a logo featuring an orange necktie to attract more businesses to the state.

Gov. Rick Scott and Enterprise Florida, a public-private partnership that promotes economic development, announced the state's new business brand on Thursday in Tallahassee.

The slogan is "Florida is the perfect climate for business."

The logo is the word "FLORIDA" in green capital letters except for the "I," which is orange and in the shape of a tie.

Enterprise Florida is seeking $3 million from the state and $1.5 million from private donors for a campaign based on the new brand.

It's a brand the state, though, must share with University of Miami football coach Al Golden whose trade mark is the orange tie he wears on the sidelines.

Court: Legislature can set tuition

TALLAHASSEE — The Florida Supreme Court says the Legislature rather than the Board of Governors has the authority to set tuition rates at state universities.

The seven justices were unanimous Thursday in affirming an appellate court ruling that previously reached the same conclusion.

The decision was a defeat for former Gov. Bob Graham and others who filed a lawsuit contending a state constitutional amendment creating the board also gave it tuition-setting authority.

Graham, also a former U.S. senator, led a petition drive that put the amendment on the ballot after the Legislature abolished another panel that previously had overseen the State University System. Voters approved it in 2002.

The justices said nothing in the amendment, though, indicates it was transferring the "quintessentially legislative power" to set tuition rates to the new board.

Boy, 17, charged in girl's death

RIVERVIEW — A 17-year-old who said his girlfriend shot herself in the chest has been charged with her murder after the Hillsborough County Medical Examiner found that the girl was shot in the back.

The Tampa Bay Times reports the teen has been charged with second-degree murder. Sara Gonzalez died after being shot Friday night.

The teen initially told officers that Gonzalez was shot by an unknown assailant who knocked on the front door, then fired when she opened it. Deputies say they found a Glock 9mm handgun and one shell casing in a crawl space under the mobile home. The teen then told police that Gonzalez shot herself in the chest with his gun during an argument.

An autopsy revealed that Gonzalez had been shot once, in her lower back.

Mom gets deal in child sex case

JACKSONVILLE BEACH — A 36-year-old Jacksonville Beach woman faces up to 30 years in prison after pleading guilty to four counts of child neglect. Authorities say Dalina Nicholas repeatedly allowed her 6-year-old daughter to be sexually abused in exchange for drugs and money. Nicholas agreed to testify against four other people. She won't be sentenced until those trials conclude.

In March 2012 a homeless man flagged down a police officer and told him a child was being molested in a nearby home. The man said he'd been to the home before to use drugs and had seen several men having sex with the child.

Justices loosen lawyer advertising

TALLAHASSEE — A divided Florida Supreme Court has loosened regulations on lawyer advertising.

But at least four of the seven justices agreed Thursday to extend those rules to websites and information requested by clients as well as traditional print, outdoor and broadcast advertising.

The majority agreed to permit previously prohibited ads that characterize the quality of legal services being offered, information about past results and testimonials.

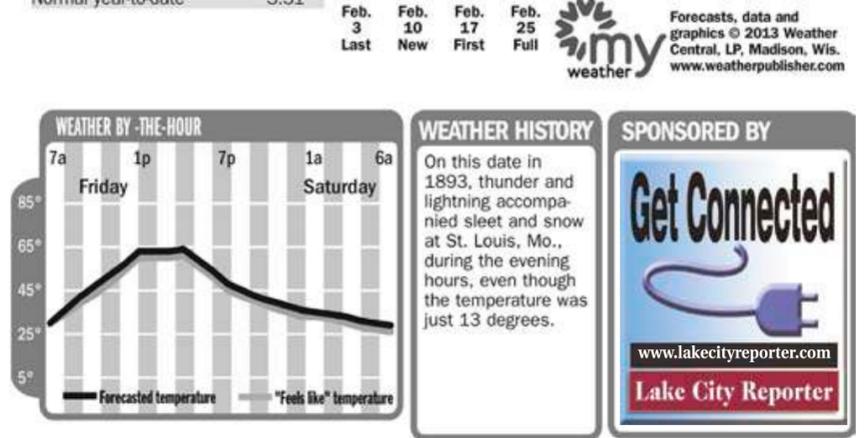

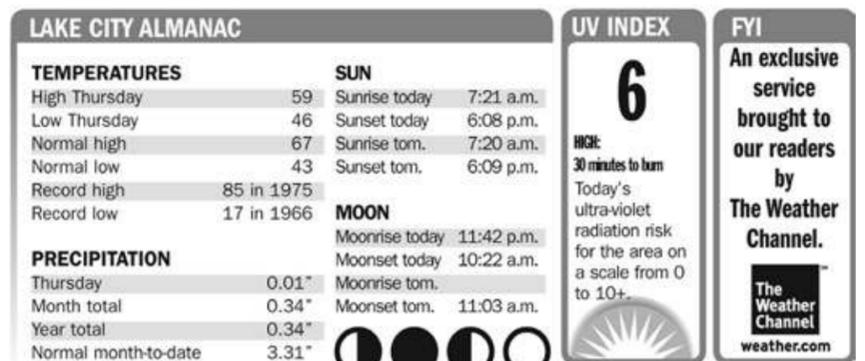

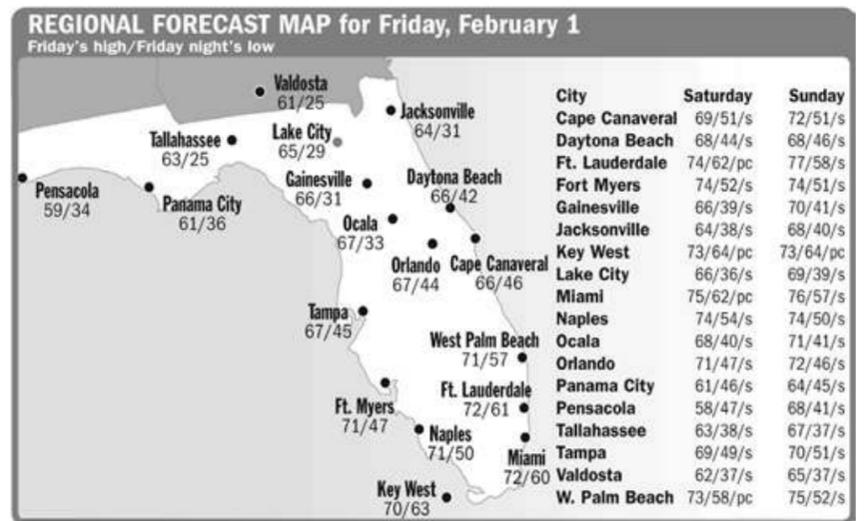

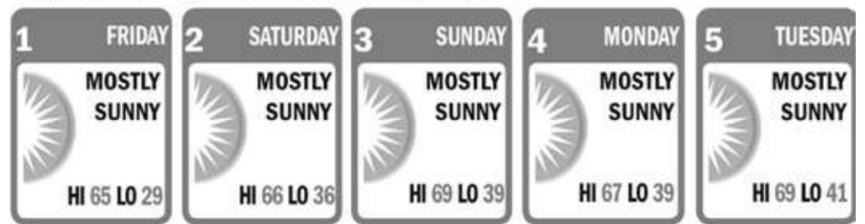

All advertising, though, must be "objectively verifiable."

That means, for example, an ad can say a lawyer obtained acquittals on all charges in four criminal cases. An ad simply saying a lawyer has been "successful," though, may not comply.

Two justices dissented. The seventh justice, Peggy Quince, dissented in part but did not write an opinion explaining which portion of the ruling she disagreed with.

Health screenings, more set for Saturday

By DEREK GILLIAM
dgilliam@lakecityreporter.com

Health professionals and experts will give free advice on how to maintain a healthy lifestyle and stay out of the doctor's office at the Richardson Community Center Saturday. Free screenings for health-related issues will also be provided at the Columbia County Recreation Department's Annual Community Health and Wellness Fair from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m.

The Recreation Department aims to promote healthy options to Columbia County residents, said Mario Coppock, director of the department. The recreation department will provide free refreshments that include fresh fruit, water, coffee and healthy snacks.

"The goal is to make available to the community these opportunities that they usually wouldn't have access to," Coppock said.

Nicole E. Smith, administrative secretary for the recreation department, said this will be the fifth year of the health and wellness fair, and 25 vendors will be at Richardson Community Center, 255 NE Coach Anders Lane.

She said the 25 vendors will be "touching on all different aspects of health."

The free health checks include screenings for cholesterol, body mass index, blood pressure, diabetes, HIV/AIDS, vision and depression, Smith said.

"If you have some general questions, we will have somebody that would be able to answer them," Smith said.

Also at the fair will be information about programs to quit tobacco products.

Smith said this year's fair has been extended an hour to allow more people in the community the opportunity to take advantage of the health screenings and discussion with health experts.

"We are giving away prizes that promote the goal of the health fair," she said, "... something to spark the healthy lifestyle that is catching on."

Smith said the door prizes range from blenders and George Foreman grills to the grand prize of a 32-inch, flat-screen television.

Also, there will be two keynote speakers. Dr. Maria Zaldivar of Nephrologists and Associates will start at 9:30 a.m., and Dr. Robert Busch of Busch Urology will speak at 10:30 a.m. Coppock said Busch and Zaldivar will be available after their speeches to answer questions.

"We hope some people will have a chance to take corrective actions to health conditions that they are presently unaware of," Coppock said. "We want to thank all those that helped to make the health and wellness fair possible, especially Lake Shore Hospital Authority, the Board of County Commissioners and RCC/AMN Inc."

State election woes spark finger pointing

By GARY FINEOUT
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE—A look at Florida's troubled election this past fall prompted some finger-pointing and back-tracking Wednesday.

A panel of top party officials, two election supervisors and two legislators had a confrontational discussion about the 2012 election at The Associated Press' 19th annual legislative planning meeting.

It was clear that Democrats and Republicans remain deeply divided over who deserves the blame for the long lines and other problems that delayed Florida's votes from being counted quickly.

Democrats charged that a decision by the GOP-controlled Legislature in 2011 to cut back the number of early voting days was designed to hurt President Barack Obama and it backfired.

"Gov. Scott and the Republican Legislature needed to fix something that wasn't broken," said Scott Arceneaux, executive director of the Florida Democratic Party.

Republican Party of Florida chairman Lenny Curry insisted that the changes were not partisan even though there have been reports that a lawyer affiliated with the party helped draw up the initial version of the law.

"I personally don't believe that Republicans sat in a room and tried to figure out how to suppress the vote," Curry said. "I don't believe that. I have no evidence of that."

Curry also said problems were "isolated" to a handful of counties.

BUDGET: 6 percent hike in spending proposed questions" about how the Medicaid expansion would work. If Florida were to expand the safety-net program, an estimated 900,000 residents would become eligible for coverage.

"Today is not the day for that decision," said Scott, a former health care executive who has been a strong critic of President Barack Obama's overhaul. Scott last summer had vowed the state would not expand Medicaid, but he softened his stance after Obama's re-election.

Scott did call for spending money to offer insurance to part-time employees under the Affordable Care Act. His budget also includes spending on mandatory items under the health care overhaul, including paying primary care doctors more.

In other areas, Scott is sticking to his position that university and community college tuition should remain at its current levels. He also wants state legislators to freeze tuition for the next four years for incoming freshmen.

His budget calls for spending more to promote tourism and borrowing money in order to pay for improvements to the state's seaports.

But Scott did include plenty of cuts in his budget proposal.

He wants to slash payments to hospitals, cut off some services now offered to Medicaid patients, and eliminate nearly 4,000 jobs, many of them in the state's prison system. He wants to close eight driver's license offices, including ones in Gainesville, Lakeland, Sebring and Orlando.

During a brief presentation to announce his budget focused primarily on two areas: His proposed $1.25 billion budget boost for public schools and new tax cuts for businesses, including the elimination of sales taxes on equipment used for manufacturing.

"This budget is aimed at making strategic, targeted investments to keep our economy on track and moving," Scott said.

Scott justified the increased spending this coming year by noting the "tough choices" that the state had made when he first came into office in 2011. The state's economy has improved since then and state tax collections are beginning to grow again.

Shortly after he was sworn in, Scott had recommended billions in spending cuts, including cuts to schools.

"It's not a budget that dabbles," Scott said two years ago when he unveiled his spending recommendations at a Central Florida church. "It doesn't offer a little something for every special interest or sweeteners for special people."

On Thursday Scott said: "Now we have the wherewithal to make more investments."

State lawmakers will use Scott's budget recommendations as a framework for the final budget they will adopt later this spring. The initial reaction from top Republicans was restrained.

Rep. Seth McKeel, R-Lakeland and House budget chief, called Scott's recommendations "thoughtful" but then said he was waiting to see if economic forecasts in March continued to show growth in state tax collections.

One Democrat said that Scott was relying on "gimmicks" to remake his image in advance of an expected re-election campaign in 2014.

Month began in 1926 as Negro History Week under the efforts of Carter Woodson," said Blondell Johnson, board member of It's About My Efforts. "Woodson received a PhD from Harvard and selected February because it held the birthdays of both Frederick Douglas and Abraham Lincoln."

What later became known as Black History Month would serve to remind and educate Americans about historical contributions of blacks in America. Columbia County has a variety of activities to educate about the diverse efforts beginning with the proclamation tonight given by Eugene Jefferson of the city council.

Other events include:
•The annual health fair Saturday at 9 a.m. at Richardson Community Center.
•A trip to Ft. Mose on

Feb. 9 to witness the reenactment of the first all-black settlement in St. Augustine.

•The 1970s Party at Annie Mattox Park on Feb. 16 at 4 p.m.

•The Greater Lake City Community Development Corporation annual fundraiser on Feb. 23.

•The Florida Gateway College annual talent show on Feb. 27.

•A celebration of our elders and recognition of the significant contributors to black history at the Elders Banquet and Awards Ceremony Feb. 28.

wanted to win the auction. "I did it to support the chamber," he said. "I think it's more to show that local businesses appreciate what they do for us on a daily basis and I think they do a wonderful job."

Middleton started his business, North Florida Medical Sales, in 1981 while he worked for Lake City Medical Center treating patients with respiratory problems. He said he noticed that many patients would leave the center, but return within weeks. He said he knew there was a better way.

"They gave me their sickest patients and we set them up with oxygen and did breathing treatments at their house," he said.

He said it worked, and patients were less likely to return to the emergency room because they had the proper equipment at their homes, where if they had problems breathing, they could administer oxygen themselves.

Since 1981, Middleton has added a business partner and expanded his medical sales business into the pharmacy business. North Florida Medical Sales and Pharmacy has 10 locations in the North Florida area, and employs more than 100 people.

"We put a lot of people to work, and that's what is important to me," he said.

sentences for first-degree murder and robbery with a firearm. Franklin committed both crimes in Volusia County.

Since Siegmeister has taken office, he has been examining open homicide cases and talking with the victims' families "because I think the family deserves to know," he said.

Siegmeister would not talk specifics of the case, other than saying "the aggravators clearly outweigh the mitigators."

He did say that he's a strong supporter of the death penalty, but because of the high cost to try death penalty cases, he will only seek the death penalty in the "worst of the worst" cases, which will have little chance of being overturned on appeal.

Thomas was killed on March 18, 2012, while checking on an inmate in one of the prison's dorms at 10:30 p.m., according to reports, when a control-room officer saw on his video monitor Franklin chase and then stab Thomas several times in the neck with a handmade weapon.

Last year, 18 people were sentenced to death in Florida, but only three were executed. There are 405 prisoners on death row in state prisons, according to the Department of Corrections.

There are four death row inmates in the Third Circuit, Siegmeister said.

"I think the death penalty is justified when it's the worst of the worst," he said.

ANOTHER VIEW

Rescue mission

Florida's decision to take control of Silver Springs, one of the state's most precious environmental attractions, is good news. It'll be even better news if it signals the start of a broader effort from state leaders to rescue the state's dying natural springs.

Visitors from around the world began flocking to Silver Springs more than a century ago to enjoy its crystal-clear waters. But attendance dropped off in recent years as the springs' depths became fouled with algae and weeds. Scientists have blamed polluted runoff and a diminished flow of groundwater from the aquifer that feeds the springs.

Under a deal approved this week by Gov. Rick Scott and the Florida Cabinet, the company that has been managing the state-owned property, Palace Entertainment, will pay Florida $4 million to get out of a lease that extended to 2029. Silver Springs will become a state park in October, and lose some of its tourist-trap add-ons, including rides and captive animal displays.

It'll be treated more like the invaluable resource it is, instead of just another amusement park.

This week state officials also said they're working on a plan to reduce pollution in Silver Springs. That's a welcome development, though it's years overdue.

A grass-roots campaign to save Silver Springs may finally be getting through to state leaders. But there are scores more springs in Florida imperiled by pollution and reduced water flows. Like Silver Springs, they are magnets for visitors, but also critical sources of drinking water and sustainers of fish and wildlife.

Leaders must save them. Now.

Buy American, for the economy

Ah, the joy of finding something made in America! Ever since ABC News focused on goods made in the good old US of A, we've become more conscious of what we buy and from whence it comes. No wonder China has so much air pollution!

I have to admit I cringe when I see that TV commercial featuring those gigantic green felt hats with the red stars and ugly stretch jeans, but the sentiment is real: We Americans have to get real about supporting our own.

The stories are now legion. Almost every product widely advertised as being made in America engenders a huge demand. A friend wanted a hoodie — a jacket with a hood attached — for her son for Christmas. She saw one advertised as made in America. By the time she got to the website to order one, they were sold out.

When the Tervis Tumbler company was featured on ABC News, the firm, based in North Venice, Fla., sold so many beverage containers that it opened a number of new stores.

Now that's what we're talking about!

amcfeatters@nationalpress.com

If we each commit to buying an American-made product when we need something (and when it is available), thousands of jobs are created here in America. Economists say if every American spent $64 on something made in America, we could create 200,000 jobs.

Yes, we went through the era when hundreds of American manufacturers moved their factories overseas for cheaper labor, fewer environmental regulations (see China, where fresh air is being sold on the street in soda cans) and fewer safety regulations (late last year, horrible fires killed hundreds of workers in Bangladesh and Pakistan).

Gradually, some manufacturers are realizing that there are other problems to being abroad and that returning home has benefits. If we are to restore America's middle class, for example, we must make goods here. The service industry alone won't suffice.

At times, the trend seems maddeningly slow. If you walk around your house checking to see where things are made, you quickly realize almost everything you have was not made in America. And what is made here often costs more, far more, than if it came from Southeast Asia.

Business leaders almost uniformly complain that U.S. environmental, safety and labor regulations are too harsh. And there are plenty of stupefyingly strange regulations on the books. But in these days of cost-benefit analyses, many regs are essential. When people die of meningitis caused by unsafe drugs, when green leafy vegetables sicken hundreds, when parents have to worry about the hormone levels infused in foods they feed their children — we have to realize that all regulation is not a bad thing. And regulators must be wary: New products and new uses mean hidden dangers unsuspected by previous generations.

Some say the state of American manufacturing is just fine because we are more productive — fewer workers make more goods. But that overlooks the thousands of factories that have closed and never reopened, leaving millions without jobs. And it overlooks the fact that there is no reason for many factories to be located overseas, employing foreigners, when American workers are some of the most hard working and most productive in the world.

The resurgence of the domestic auto industry is an encouraging piece of this puzzle. American-made cars were in danger of disappearing; now they are selling well. Just this January, Ford pledged to add 2,200 salaried jobs in the United States.

As globalization spreads, we must find a happy medium. There are things that will probably always — at least in our lifetimes — be cheaper and better made abroad. We want free and open trade — after all, we want others to buy our goods and services.

But when we decided it was inevitable that the future of manufacturing was overseas, we did ourselves no favor. We arose as a nation of entrepreneurs, innovators and risk takers. It served us well, and it will again.

And now, I have a birthday present to buy....

Women long ago earned combat rights

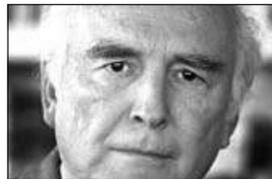

U.S. women have been in combat one way or another at least since the 1989 invasion of Panama. That's when Scripps Howard New Service's Peter Copeland reported from the isthmus that women assigned to at least one operation in the Southern Command had been attacked and returned fire.

The information was never official, but the Pentagon refused to deny its accuracy when a reporter for a prominent West Coast newspaper tried to shoot down Copeland's story as untrue. It was a sensitive subject at a time when women still were not expected to do any heavy lifting in the military. The thinking: They were potential mothers, and the weaker sex might not perform well under stress. Besides, it was a political hot potato.

But attitudes changed, and females unofficially carried some of the load when faced with it.

There have been numerous examples of women courageously fighting in Iraq and Afghanistan. Although they've held noncombat assignments as medics, intelligence officers, military police and other jobs, they've also traveled with combat units and been drawn into the fighting. They not only have come under fire, they have returned it,

Dan K. Thomasson

So the Pentagon's recently announced decision to allow women in all aspects of the military — including combat — has been too long in coming, denying them the promotions and benefits that result from combat assignments.

In that respect, the U.S. military has been decades, if not centuries, behind other nations in giving a rifle or spear to a woman and expecting her to use it. During World War II, women were an integral part in the underground units that fought against Nazi oppression. They also risked life and limb to infiltrate and gather intelligence. Israeli women long have taken part in combat operations. Canada resolved the question in 1989 by giving women fighting status in all units.

Today's women in the armed forces are as disciplined, skilled and tough in attitude and body as the men. And they can be at least as fierce as their male counterparts.

Consider the heroics of Air Force Staff Sgt. Stacy Pearsall, a photographer who was attached to an Army ground unit during her second deployment to Iraq.

When the personnel carrier she was riding in came under attack, she saved the life of one of her wounded comrades, dragging the unconscious man to safety and using the vehicle's mounted machine gun to return fire, the New York Times' James Dao reported.

And when a medic arrived, Pearsall was sitting next to the wounded man, his damaged carotid artery clamped between her fingers. She had wrestled him into the carrier, although he was 6-foot-2 and weighed 200 pounds, nearly twice as heavy as she.

Not everyone will support outgoing Defense Secretary Leon Panetta's decision to rescind the 1994 ban on women's participation in combat, which he made after consulting with the military hierarchy. A congressional effort to turn back the clock with legislation is expected. That would be a mistake.

Being put in harm's way unofficially to satisfy a myth of inequality is dishonest. Women need to be recognized officially as full participants in military life.

Be Strong in the Lord - Part I

Last week we talked about the danger of compromise. How do we arm ourselves so we have the power to not compromise; and be strong in the Lord? First of all (Eph. 5:1 NKJ) "Therefore be imitators of God as dear children". The word imitator is used in the continuous tense. It means not just on Sunday, but every day. We can't be strong in the Lord with a partial walk. Yes, we have to act like Jesus.

Then to "be strong in the Lord and the power of His might (without Him we have no power) put on the whole armor of God, that we may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil" (Eph. 6:10-11). The wiles of the devil come in many ways. The word "wiles" literally means he comes at us with all kinds of cunning devices. He is very crafty and not to believe this is a serious mistake.

The first desire of the devil is to damn our souls to hell. The devil is jealous of Jesus. He is envious, and every soul that he can beat Jesus to is a victory for him. Satan does not give up; even after a soul is saved. He is continually seeking to devour the child of God's testimony and his influence as a believer. There are so many ways he does this. Do you know today that the most important asset you have as a child of God is your testimony?

It is so sad today that the devil

BIBLE STUDIES

Hugh Sherrill
ems-hugh43@comcast.net

has caused so many to lose their testimony by using his deceit. He says things like "you are saved for ever, what difference does it make"? When one begins to think this way his testimony goes out the window and many times the church he attends loses its testimony because they fail to deal with these problems.

It is sad today that so many churches don't have much of a testimony. I pity the church leaders when they stand before the Judgment Seat of Christ.

The power of Satan is far too often overlooked. Verse 12 says "For we do not wrestle against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of darkness of this age, against spiritual host of wickedness in the heavenly places"; to "wrestle against" means to do conflict. It is an all out war. I Peter 5:8 says "Be sober, be vigilant, (this means be sober minded and awake at all times, looking for danger) because your adversary the devil walks about like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour". This is a strong description of Satan. Every day he looks for someone he can cause to stumble or someone to compromise the truth of the word of God. Verse 9 starts by saying "Resist him". Be steadfast in the faith.

If Satan tried every trick in his ungodly book to cause Jesus to sin, you can believe he will also come after you. We have to be alert "24-7-365". We have to maintain a strong prayer life. We have to feed on God's word regularly. We have to rely on His strength, not ours. For without Him, we have no spiritual strength.

■ Hugh Sherrill, an ordained Baptist minister and Bible teacher, is available for special Bible studies and revivals.

Obey God rather than men

The church was growing by leaps and bounds. The apostles were preaching the gospel and the people were believing the message. Everything was going well until the apostles began to preach on the resurrection of Jesus from the dead (Acts 4:2).

The Sadducees, the leading sect of the Jewish Sanhedrin Council, those who did not believe in the resurrection from the dead (Matthew 22:23; Mark 12:18; Luke 20:27), had the apostles brought before the council for questioning. After conferring with themselves, they brought the apostles back into their presence, and "commanded them not to speak or teach at all in the name of Jesus." But Peter and John answered and said to them,

"Whether it is right in the sight of God to give heed to you rather than to God, You be the judge, for we cannot stop speaking what we have seen and heard" (Acts 4:18-20). The apostles were released but only after they were "threatened."

After meeting with fellow-Christians and praying to God that He would "grant that Thy bond-servants may speak Thy word with all confidence" (Acts 4:29), the apostles went back to preaching the gospel. After a period of time, crowds were coming to see and hear the apostles. The apostles were healing people, preaching the message and "multitudes of men and women were constantly added to their number" (Acts 5:14). In other words the church was continuing to increase.

BIBLICAL MEDITATION

carlton_mc@msn.com

Because of jealousy, "the high priest and his associates (the Sanhedrin Council) laid [their] hands on the apostles, and put them in a public jail" (Acts 5:17, 18). During the night an angel of the Lord freed them from the jail and the next morning the apostles were back in the temple preaching and teaching.

Once again the Council had the apostles apprehended and brought before them. The high priest reminded them that they had been given "strict orders not to continue teaching in this name, and behold, you have filled Jerusalem with your teaching, and intend to bring this man's blood upon us" (Acts 5:28). The answer of Peter and the rest of the apostles should be a great lesson for us. They said, "We must obey God rather than men" (Acts 5:29).

After some advice from the great Pharisee "teacher of the Law," Gamaliel, the Council ordered that the apostles be "flogged" and gave them orders "to speak no more in the name of Jesus, and then released them" (Acts 5:40). When the apostles left the Council, they were "rejoicing that they had been considered worthy to suffer shame for His name and every day in the temple and from house to house, they kept right on teaching and preaching Jesus as the Christ" (Acts 5:41, 42).

This is a great example of commitment. What other reason would you give for why these men would continue to preach after suffering such persecution?

As we meditate upon their statement, "We must obey God rather than men" we must come to the conclusion that they truly believed in what Jesus taught and did. How strong is our commitment? How determined are we to obey God rather than men?

Step families of the Bible offer lessons

So ... have you heard about the man whose wife wanted him to send away his oldest son, born of a previous relationship, and leave him without any inheritance? Or what about the case of sibling rivalry so severe that a brother was kidnapped and left for dead? No, this wasn't on the morning news. These stories are actually recorded in Genesis, the biblical book of beginnings.

While every generation thinks that its struggles are unique, a quick browse through the scriptures tells another story. Interestingly enough, the two examples given here have something in common that continues to be a struggle in today's culture. Abraham, Sarah and Ishmael, and Joseph and his brothers both belonged to blended families.

Webster's dictionary defines the word "blend" as: "to combine into an integrated whole ... to produce a harmonious effect." This sounds easy enough, if you are following a favorite recipe, but for those working toward "blending" a family, the task is anything but simple — and rarely is the result instantly harmonious!

The "insider/outsider" dynamic is a unique characteristic in step families. The "insiders" are those biologically related, while obviously the "outsiders" are those that are not. This invisible line drawn between the two in a stepfamily home becomes a fault line under stress. The division will almost always come down to this factor. Understanding that this is a normal phenomenon helps stepfamilies then take the next steps in conflict resolution instead of getting side-tracked by this issue.

Loyalty issues are also distinct for stepfamilies — loyalty to children over the new spouse, as well as a child's loyalty to the absent parent. Children are naturally torn between their parents, even if no obvious hostility exists, and loyalty to the biological parent who is not in the home is often disguised as resistance to a step parent's authority. If these issues are ignored, they will erode the marriage relationship, which is critical to the success of the family as a whole.

Ron Deal, founder of the Successful Stepfamily Ministry, encourages stepfamilies to "cook" a stepfamily with the idea of a crock-pot, not a microwave. Crock-pots work with two primary elements: time and low heat. One study suggests that it takes an average of seven years for a blended family to integrate successfully. When it comes to building a relationship with step children, stepparents should let the child set the pace for the relationship in terms of affection and authority asserted by the stepparent. Trying to rush or force this relationship will typically not bring desired results.

It is estimated that one in three Americans is currently in a step-relationship. In fact 42 percent of all adults in America are in a step-relationship of some kind. To be sure, blended families have an additional measure of stress and problems that are unique to each family situation, but just as He did for the families of Abraham and Joseph, God has a plan and a purpose for our lives and our families ... because every heart matters.

What the Bible teaches about forgiveness

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth of six related columns.)

Bitterness will make your life go from bad to worse, never from bad to better! It gives a foothold for Satan to operate from and gain control over your life. Nothing but misery, restless sleep, mind numbing medication, lay ahead for the bitter person. Yet it does not have to be that way. There is an answer... But there are some important facts about this doorway to healing that we must know:

1. The unforgiver is unforgiven.

Often we say, "What goes around, comes around." Yet we fail to understand that this applies to ourselves as well in this area. The Bible teaches this principle. "And forgive us our debts, as we also have forgiven our debtors. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from the evil one." For if you forgive other people when they sin against you, your heavenly Father will also forgive you. But if you do not forgive others their sins, your Father will not forgive your sins" (Matthew 6:12-15).

In the parable of the unmerciful servant, Jesus says "Then the master called the servant in. 'You wicked servant,' he said, 'I canceled all that debt of

jackexumjr@yahoo.com

yours because you begged me to. Shouldn't you have had mercy on your fellow servant just as I had on you?' In anger his master handed him over to the jailers to be tortured, until he should pay back all he owed. "This is how my heavenly Father will treat each of you unless you forgive your brother or sister from your heart." (Matthew 18:32-35).

The apostle Paul writes, "Do not grieve the Holy Spirit of God, by whom you were sealed for the day of redemption. Let all bitterness, wrath, anger, clamor, and evil speaking be put away from you, with all malice. And be kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God in Christ forgave you" (Ephesians 4:30-32). Christians have been forgiven, and this 'grace' must be given to others as well. We forget that we did not deserve to be forgiven by God. Get baptized all you want, you still don't deserve nor earn forgiveness. Forgiveness is a matter of grace (un-merited favor). Forgiveness is a gift to be given.

2. Nothing takes the place of forgiveness.

Just saying, "Let's forget it" doesn't work, because we can't forget it. Moving to another State won't help, because you can't run from, hurts, and pains. (Besides, there's always, "Facebook".) Getting re-baptized won't do it. You can't donate your way out of bitterness. Constantly re-hashing the past, will never help. Forgiveness is the door through which one must pass, if healing is to begin. No one can say exactly when God will turn his back on the unforgiving person, but eventually He will. Paul's instructions are clear, "Do not take revenge, my dear friends, but leave room for God's wrath, for it is written: "It is mine to avenge; I will repay," says the Lord. On the contrary: "If your enemy is hungry, feed him; if he is thirsty, give him something to drink. In doing this, you will heap burning coals on his head." Do not be overcome by evil, but overcome evil with good" (Romans 12:19-21).

Forgiveness is not optional in scripture. If true healing is to begin, forgiveness must take place. Nothing can substitute for real forgiveness.

Court finalizes SC Episcopal schism

Judge ruling settles ownership of property, use of diocese's name.

By BRUCE SMITH
Associated Press

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Circuit Court Judge Diane Goodstein issued a permanent injunction Thursday ruling only churches that left The Episcopal Church last year may use the name the Diocese of South Carolina.

The use of the name and the diocesan seal has been in dispute since parishes in the eastern and lower part of the state left the national church in a dispute over the ordination of gays and other issues.

Following the split with the national church, the Diocese of South Carolina sued, seeking not only to protect its name but also $500 million of church property it says belongs to the diocese, not the national church.

Goodstein issued a temporary restraining order last week that only the diocese could use the name. She had scheduled a Friday court hearing in Columbia to hear arguments as to whether the order should be made permanent.

But the attorney representing The Episcopal Church and the 19 parishes and six worship groups remaining with the church in the eastern part of the state, did not contest making the order permanent, so the hearing has been canceled.

Those churches are calling themselves The Episcopal Church in South Carolina. Representatives of those parishes held a convention in Charleston last weekend where the Right Rev. Charles Glenn vonRosenburg was installed as a bishop to shepherd their group.

Either side could ask for a later hearing on the injunction. The property issues will likely still have to be resolved in court hearings that could take years.

"We are gratified that The Episcopal Church has consented to a temporary injunction protecting the identity of our Diocese and its parishes," said Jim Lewis, the Canon of the Diocese of South Carolina. The canon is the assistant to Bishop Mark Lawrence.

"We pray that sentiment fuels the prompt and reasonable resolution we all seek," Lewis added.

Fort White High permanently retains Paddle

Indians lose rivalry after seven consecutive wins.

FORT WHITE — Losing is hard to handle and Fort White High found that out the hard way.

The Indians' football team had defeated Santa Fe High for seven consecutive years in the annual Battle for the Paddle rivalry and without explanation, the Raiders are tucking tail.

Fort White High principal Keith Hatcher informed the Lake City Reporter on Thursday that the Raiders were backing out of the annual rivalry.

"It's going on 12 year tradition and I am very disappointed," Hatcher said. "Most of those years were playing for the paddle. It's something that we all really enjoyed. It's ashamed that it's over."

Hatcher couldn't find much reason behind the sudden cancellation of the rivalry by the Raiders either.

"There's a new principal there and I'm not sure what all the things are that fall into this reasoning for not doing this anymore," Hatcher said. "I don't know if the winning or losing streak has anything to do with it or what it is. It was always a rivalry. I've always stood on the sidelines, and I've never seen anything to indicate any other reason. It's always been a clean game, I thought."

The game was first designed by Hatcher with former principal Bill Herschled, but a new principal, Dr. Beth LeClear, took over at Santa Fe this year.

"I was out of town today and had talked to them earlier in the week, because there was a rumor they weren't going to play us," Hatcher said. "I talked to Dr. LeClear last week and I told her to think about the tradition. Each school gets a good gate. I called back today and she wasn't in. Around noon time, I spoke with Michelle Faulk and she confirmed that they don't want to play us. I don't know if they want to build Columbia rallies to beat Fort White, 72-70.

By BRANDON FINLEY
bfinley@lakecityreporter.com

It was like a scene from a movie as Columbia High's Morris Marshall and Javontae Foster were carried off the floor on the shoulders of Tigers fans after Marshall hit a game-winning shot to lift Columbia against rival Fort White High, 72-70, on Thursday.

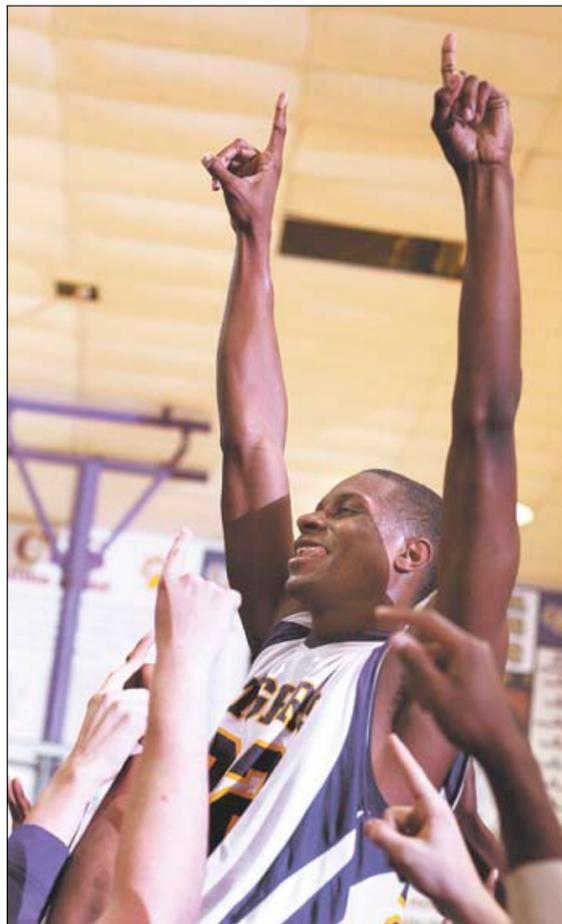

Columbia fell behind 13-0 in the first quarter before Foster stopped the drought with 4:22 remaining in the opening period.

The Tigers cut the lead to 19-16 in the second quarter after Marshall hit two free throws on a flagrant foul and Foster hit a layup to make it 19-18 with 6:10 remaining in the half.

Columbia's first lead came when Dillan Hall gave the Tigers a two-point edge after a pair of foul shots with 3:41 remaining in the half.

Man at center of Te'o hoax says he was in love

By PAT EATON-ROBB

Associated Press

Ronaiah Tuiasosopo fell in love with Manti Te'o and said all his energy went into pretending to be the woman the Notre Dame linebacker came to know as Lennay Kekua.

Tuiasosopo, the 22-year-old mastermind of the elaborate hoax that embarrassed Te'o and left him looking gullible, spoke publicly for the first time in an interview with Dr. Phil McGraw for the "Dr. Phil Show," the first part of which aired Thursday.

Tuiasosopo said Te'o knew nothing of the scam, and doesn't believe he ever suspected Kekua was fake.

"He had no involvement," Tuiasosopo said. "He did not know anything."

Tuiasosopo said he built the online persona of Kekua, a nonexistent woman who Te'o said he fell in love with despite never meeting in person. Tuiasosopo then killed off the character last September.

"I pretty much had this escape of Lennay and this was where my heart had pretty much invested, not just time, but all of my energy went into this,"

Tuiasosopo said.

He said he felt Kekua was a part of him, and grew feelings and emotions for Te'o that he could not control. He acknowledged that the hoax was cruel, but said it was never intended as a joke and that he got no financial gain from it.

"As twisted and confusing as it may be, yeah, I cared for this person," he said, referring to Te'o. "I did all that I could to help this person become a better person, even though I wasn't getting nothing out of it."

When the ruse was reported by Deadspin.com on Jan. 16, the report raised the questions about whether Te'o was in on it. The story of how Te'o played through pain after learning about the deaths of his girlfriend and grandmother on the same day led to an outpouring of support from Notre Dame fans. It became the backdrop to the Fighting Irish's undefeated regular season and run to the BCS championship, where they lost to Alabama.

Te'o won seven national awards for his play and was runner-up for the Heisman Trophy. He has denied any involvement from the beginning, and Notre Dame said an investigation of the player's claims backed up his story. When asked by Katie Couric in an interview broadcast last week, Te'o said he is not gay.

Tuiasosopo said he felt Te'o became a better person as a result of the relationship.

"If you really look at all his interviews, he felt that," he said. "When he was under the understanding that he lost her, he realized all the good that Lennay had done for him."

Through a spokesman, the Te'o family declined comment.

Tuiasosopo said he decided to confess to Te'o earlier this month as the hoax was unraveling because he felt he could not go any further with his own life until the truth was out.

"You've heard of recovering drug addicts? It takes a lot of courage to stand and say that," he said "To recover from homosexuality and this type of thing. Not only that, coming back to your real life, as hard as a task as that is I'm going to do all that I can to live right."

McGraw said that statement bothered him.

"I hope it's a pressure you don't put on yourself," he said.

would close out the half, however, with a 31-28 lead after Qarin Porter knocked down a three-point shot.

Columbia trailed after the first three quarters, but the Tigers were on top when it mattered most.

Harbaughs in tough spot as parents

By BRETT MARTEL
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Jack and Jackie Harbaugh are spending Super Bowl week celebrating the good fortune of having two sons at the pinnacle of pro football.

Once the Super Bowl between John Harbaugh's Baltimore Ravens and Jim Harbaugh's San Francisco 49ers has ended this Sunday night, the parents know their first priority will be expressing sympathy to the coach who didn't get to hoist the Lombardi Trophy.

"The one thing that I do think about is after the game. There is going to be one winner and there is going to be one that is going to be totally disappointed. My thoughts go to that one that will not experience the thrill of victory," Jack Harbaugh said. "That's where our thoughts will be."

Harbaugh explained that he and Jackie had a "dry run" on how to handle the postgame last season when the Niners lost at Baltimore on Thanksgiving night.

After leaving an office in the stadium where they watched the game — in private and emotionless — the first locker room they walked past was that of the Ravens.

"We've all experienced that excitement of victory-guys jumping up and down, the smile on John's face. They were just ecstatic. ... Then you realize that you're not needed here," Jack said. "You walk across the hall, and you went into the 49ers locker room and you walked and you saw the players walking about — that look in their eyes, that look of not being successful and coming up short. We opened up a couple doors and finally saw Jim all by himself in this room, just a table and a chair. He was still in his coaching outfit. His head down in his hands and you looked into his eyes and you realized that this where you're needed as a parent.

"Every single parent can identify with that," he continued. "On Sunday night, we're going to experience both of those great emotions. Our thoughts will be with the one that comes up a little short."

Now comes the second act in New Orleans, which happens to be the home of another set of parents who can relate to watching NFL games involving two of their sons on opposing teams: the Mannings.

As it turns out, Jack Harbaugh said, Archie Manning called before the Niners-Ravens Thursday night tilt last season to offer some advice.

"The advice was this, 'This will be over on Friday. I promise you it will be over on Friday,'" Harbaugh recalled. "Sure enough it was great advice and that's exactly how it happened."

The elder Harbaugh was a longtime coach himself, and a former assistant of Bo Schembechler at Michigan, where Jim quarterbacked before a playing career in the NFL, followed by a college coaching career and then his NFL head coaching debut just last season in San Francisco.

Jack credited Jackie for taking their sons to Michigan practices when they were young so they could learn about what their father did during long days at work. And he was thrilled that they wanted to play and later coach football.

Now that has put them in the spotlight in the Big Easy, where the Harbaugh parents were fittingly at ease as they sat — talk show style — in lounge chairs in front of a large crowd of international media.

Jack opened the news conference by loudly asking, rhetorically, "Who has it better than us?"

Then he and Jackie both exclaimed, "Nobody!"

It appeared well-rehearsed because it has long been a family motto.

But when it comes to navigating the rest of Super Bowl week, they acknowledged they were neophytes, and didn't have much of a plan beyond spending time with relatives and friends. They didn't even know where they were sitting for the game. They added that both sons have simply urged them to make sure they enjoy the experience.

When asked if the knowledge that one son will lose will diminish their enjoyment of the game, Jackie Harbaugh said, "I don't think so because we will see both of them after the game. We're going to hug both of them and tell them how proud we are of them."

Lewis says he's 'agitated,' not angry, about story

By HOWARD FENDRICH
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Ray Lewis is "agitated."

Not because the Baltimore Ravens linebacker thinks the magazine report linking him to a company that purports to make performance-enhancers will affect his play or that of his teammates against the San Francisco 49ers in the Super Bowl — the final game of a 17-year NFL career that most assume will earn him a spot in the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

Rather, Lewis did not want to spend time discussing the subject in private with his head coach or in public with the media, as he did Wednesday, when his forceful denials — and attacks on the owner of the supplement company — meant the matter intruded for a second consecutive day on his retirement send-off.

"It's so funny of a story, because I never, ever took what he says or whatever I was supposed to do. And it's just sad, once again, that someone can have this much attention on a stage this big, where the dreams are really real," Lewis said, wearing his white No. 52 Ravens jersey, gray sweat pants and a black hat with the team's purple logo. "I don't need it. My teammates don't need it. The 49ers don't need it. Nobody needs it."

He smiled widely when the first question at his media session was about the topic — surely, he figured it was coming — then chuckled later while addressing it. Known for his frequent references to God and faith, Lewis called the whole episode a "joke" and a "trick of the devil," adding that he told teammates: "Don't let people from the outside ever come and try to disturb what's inside."

Sports Illustrated reported Tuesday that Lewis sought help from a company called Sports With Alternatives To Steroids (SWATS), which says its deer-antler spray and pills contain a naturally occurring banned product connected to human growth hormone. The 37-year-old Lewis, the MVP of the 2001 Super Bowl, is the leading tackler in the NFL postseason after returning from a torn right triceps that sidelined him for 10 games.

SI reported that company owner Mitch Ross recorded a call with Lewis hours after the player hurt his arm in an October game against Dallas. According to the report, Lewis asked Ross to send him deer-antler spray and pills, along with other items made by the company.

Lewis called Ross a coward and said he "has no credibility."

Ross declined an interview request from The Associated Press but emailed a statement reading: "It is the view of SWATS and Mitch Ross that the timing of information was unfortunate and misleading and was in no way intended to harm any athlete. We have always been about aiding athletes to heal faster and participate at an optimum level of play in a lawful and healthy manner. We never encourage the use of harmful supplements and/or dangerous drugs."

Told by a reporter that he seemed angry, Lewis replied: "Me? Never angry. I'm too blessed to be stressed. Nah. You're not angry. You can use a different word. You can use the word 'agitated,' because I'm here to win the Super Bowl."

San Francisco 49ers cornerback Chris Culliver answers questions Thursday in New Orleans, regarding anti-gay remarks he made during Super Bowl media day Tuesday.

49ers' Culliver apologizes for anti-gay remarks

By PAUL NEWBERRY
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — San Francisco 49ers cornerback Chris Culliver apologized Thursday for anti-gay comments he made to a comedian during Super Bowl media day, saying "that's not what I feel in my heart."

"I'm sorry if I offended anyone. They were very ugly comments," Culliver said during an hour-long media session. "Hopefully I learn and grow from this experience and this situation."

He said he would welcome a gay teammate to the 49ers, a reversal of his remarks to Artie Lange two days earlier during an interview at the Superdome.

"I treat everyone equal," Culliver said. "That's not how I feel."

He added that he realized his comments were especially offensive to many people in San Francisco and the Bay Area, which is home to a large gay community.

"I love San Francisco," Culliver said.

During the interview with Lange, Culliver responded to questions by saying he wouldn't welcome a gay player in the locker room. He also said the 49ers didn't have any gay players, and if they did those players should leave.

San Francisco coach Jim Harbaugh met privately with Culliver to discuss the remarks.

"I reject what he said," Harbaugh said. "That's not something that reflects the way the organization feels, the way the rest of the players feel."

The coach would not discuss if Culliver would face discipline from the team, such as a fine or loss of playing time.

"He pledged to grow from it," Harbaugh said.

The interview began with Lange asking Culliver about his sexual plans with women during Super Bowl week. Lange followed up with a question about whether Culliver would consider pursuing a gay man.

"I don't do the gay guys, man. I don't do that," Culliver said during the one-minute taped interview. "Ain't got no gay people on the team. They gotta get up outta here if they do. Can't be with that sweet stuff."

Lange asked Culliver to reiterate his thoughts, to which the player said, "It's true." He added he wouldn't welcome a gay teammate — no matter how talented.

"Nah. Can't be ... in the locker room, nah," he said. "You've gotta come out 10 years later after that."

The 24-year-old Culliver, a third-round draft pick in 2011 out of South Carolina, made 47 tackles with two interceptions and a forced fumble this season while starting six games for the NFC champion Niners (13-4-1).

He had his first career postseason interception in San Francisco's 28-24 win at Atlanta for the NFC title, which sent the 49ers to the Super Bowl for the first time since 1995.

They will face the AFC champion Baltimore Ravens on Sunday.

DEAR ABBY

Romantic's heart is bruised by end of long relationship

Abigail Van Buren
www.dearabby.com

DEAR ABBY: A great man once said, "A life without love is no life at all." So many people find love in so many ways, either through arranged marriages or at social events, school or college.

I have always been a hopeless romantic, but since the end of my eight-year relationship, my heart no longer feels the same. I feel as though love will never find me.

I know people say when it happens you will know, but my question is: How do you really KNOW? And when that time does ever come, how do you prepare your heart for love after a tragic loss? - TRYING TO GO ON

DEAR TRYING: I'm sorry for your loss and headache. But unless your lover was wrenched from you by death, you should do what people of both sexes must when a romance ends - ask yourself why and what you have learned from it.

The failure of a romance doesn't mean that love will never happen again. You will know you have found love when you meet someone who makes you feel strong instead of dependent, who appreciates you for the person you are and isn't threatened by your successes, who supports you when you're down, takes pride in your accomplishments, and will hug you even after a difficult day. And it shouldn't take "preparation," just a willingness to risk putting yourself out there and a little good luck.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I live more than 1,000 miles away from our family. When our relatives fly out to visit us, should we feel obligated to let them use one of our cars to travel/tour while they are here? (Money is not an issue.) In most cases, they may be on the other side of the state for several days, leaving my husband and me to share a car. It is an inconvenience because my husband and I leave for work at different times.

However, this isn't my only concern. Will insurance cover our car if they have an accident in it?

When we visit them, we drive their car within city limits only, and when it's convenient for them. Please reply ASAP because they're coming here soon. - STRESSED OUT IN COLORADO

DEAR STRESSED OUT: Because money is not an issue, I assume that your relatives can afford to rent a car during their visit. The same rules should apply to them that apply to you in a similar situation. Your car should be for your own convenience, since you and your husband need transportation to work.

As to the insurance liability should someone have an accident while driving your vehicle, the person to ask is your insurance broker.

DEAR ABBY: I have a dear friend who recently remarried. He has always said that what he and his late wife worked for should go to their children. However, I have just learned that his prenup wasn't signed until AFTER their marriage. Also, it was drawn up by an accountant, not a lawyer.

I always thought that a prenup was an agreement to specific conditions BEFORE a marriage. Am I right, and is a prenup valid if it is signed after the wedding? - CURIOUS IN KANSAS CITY

DEAR CURIOUS: A document like the one you have described is called a POSTnuptial agreement. It should have been drafted by your friend's attorney, then reviewed by an attorney representing the wife to be sure she fully understood what she was signing. If she did not, then it may not be legal and enforceable.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 20-year-old college student with a great job, life ambitions and parents who love me. They raised me to think for myself and follow my dreams.

I didn't date much in high school, but a few months ago I met a wonderful young man who is in the Army. Two things about this relationship are different: First, we met on the Internet, communicated online for several weeks, then took the next step to meet in person. The second is, "Jack" is 10 years older than I am and has a son from a previous marriage.

Jack is stationed not far from me. When I met him, I realized he was everything a woman could want. I did a background check and everything he told me is true. He supports me fully in pursuing my degree and my future career. But I'm afraid to introduce him to my parents because they're old-fashioned. They are leery about people meeting on the Internet. They also want me to meet a guy closer to my age.

The more Jack and I are together, the more I realize how much I love him. I want to introduce the man I love to my family. How do I proceed with this? I am scared that my parents won't accept Jack. How can I get them to accept my choice? - DETERMINED IN THE SOUTHWEST

DEAR DETERMINED: Your relationship with Jack appears to be progressing at warp speed. If you want your parents to accept him, you must give them an opportunity to get to know him - and the same applies to you because this romance is fresh.

As you communicate with your parents, start mentioning Jack. Tell them he is a member of the military and how you met. Meeting someone on the Internet these days is very common and nothing to be ashamed of.

The longer you continue keeping his existence a secret, the more concerned and disappointed your parents will be when you spring him on them. They will want to meet him and you should introduce him. After that, the selling job will be his. Keep your cool. You are your parents' little girl and always will be. But the decision of who you'll wind up with is your own to make, not theirs.

DEAR ABBY: Most people recognize chest pain as a symptom of heart attack, as well as pain or numbness in the arm or shortness of breath. But did you know that a feeling of "doom" or back pain could also be signs of a heart attack?

An article in our local paper reported that most people do not recognize other warning signs of a heart attack. They include: a sense of doom, back pain, sweating, nausea or vomiting, dizziness or lightheadedness, weakness, fatigue or malaise, and jaw or neck pain.

My mother, age 87, who had never had back trouble and hadn't strained her back muscles in any way, suddenly developed back pain that the usual over-the-counter pain pills couldn't stop. Two days later, the pain moved to her chest, and that's when we took her to the emergency room. We would have gotten her there two days sooner if anyone had told us that heart attack pain could begin in the back. Please, Abby, let your readers know these other symptoms. - THANKFUL READER IN OKLAHOMA

DEAR THANKFUL: Forewarned is forearmed. I'm printing your helpful letter for all to see. Thank you for wanting to alert others to the sometimes subtle warning signs of a heart attack. Your warning may have saved some lives today.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): New connections will lead to greater opportunities. Call in favors, join organizations that interest you, and most of all open up and be receptive to suggestions and people that approach you for various reasons. Romance is in the stars. ★★

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take care of business. Don't leave your responsibilities for someone else to deal with. You can talk all you want about doing something, but until you actually do, it's all conjecture. ★★

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Look at your options and make wise choices. It's up to you to avoid deception and excess in order to have a clear-cut shot at advancement. Opportunity through networking, socializing and colleagues is apparent. Reach for the stars in love, financial matters and work. ★★★★★

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Step away from those putting pressure on you. Follow your own path and delve into creative projects that allow you to use your skills and talents fully. Don't make changes just because someone else does. ★★

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You'll question or be questioned about your personal life and relationships. Honesty is the best policy, but only offer what's necessary. Avoid compromising your financial position. Speak from the heart, but only offer so much. Positive change is on the horizon. ★★★★★

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You must be a participant if you want to get ahead. Put your best foot forward and indulge in a little social activity with peers, colleagues or people who share your interests. Don't just talk about your ideas and plans - get things up and running. ★★

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Keep life simple. Having a positive attitude will help you keep opposition at arms' length, giving you the chance to follow a path that is more suitable to you. Problems at home are best left alone for now. You need time to think. ★★

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You'll be faced with domestic issues that must be addressed in order for you to feel comfortable about your plans for the future. Honesty will be necessary and will make a difference when it comes to figuring out the best way to proceed. ★★

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Lots of talk is fine, but you must follow through if you don't want to make a poor impression. Finding a new or more interesting way to earn extra cash will help build your confidence as well as your reputation. Romantic opportunities are present. ★★★★★

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emotional issues will escalate if you don't address the existing problems. Think outside the box and you will come up with a workable solution that will suit everybody's needs. You can do with less if you budget and organize wisely. ★★

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Discipline will pay off and help you get ahead personally.

INDIANS: Express disappointment over Santa Fe backing out of rivalry

the program and renew."

Hatcher hasn't been too involved in the making of next year's schedule as of yet, but knows that head coach Demetric Jackson may find problems due to the Raiders backing out.

"We are having some issues filling our schedule, especially now with this," Hatcher said. "Everyone knows in the 11th week that we are playing Santa Fe. If I remember right, Demetric had talked about scheduling Buchholz, but I'm not sure what he'll come up with."

As far as the football side of it, Jackson shared much of the same shock as the Fort White principal.

"I'm disappointed, extremely disappointed," Jackson said. "To give no explanation why they don't want to play it any more is kind of bitter. We've won the last seven and for them to not want to schedule or play any part of the season, whether it's the principal, athletic director or coach is really disappointing."

Jackson's biggest challenge will now be finding a replacement.

Fort White High's Trey Phillips (5) attempts to escape a tackle as he drives down the field against Santa Fe High last season.

"It's made it real difficult," he said. "We were in a two team district last year and now we're in a four team. Generally you schedule your rival the last game of the season you don't have to worry about that. The sad thing about it was that they went ahead and scheduled another team before December without calling me."

Jackson's biggest complaint was not that the Raiders ran for the hills, but the way they handled the situation.

"It was not professional," he said. "It's not something I would do. Even if there's animosity, just call and say when you make the decision that way I know. I kind of got word from another coach. I called Santa Fe and it was almost three weeks before they return my call. They told me it was a 90 percent chance they wouldn't play and they had already scheduled another team. I thought it was classless. Just be up front and tell me to give a chance to schedule another team. Week 11 is generally is a rival. Here in Fort White, all the other teams in our area are 1A or already have a rivalry like Columbia and Suwannee."

Because of Santa Fe's decision, Jackson said it will put the Indians in a tough spot to end the year.

"Now we have to possibly travel to pick up a game," he said.

There are several possibilities floating around for the Indians, but nothing is expected to be finalized soon with other teams already having most of their schedules completed.

"Right now, we've got a possibility of playing Buchholz in week 11," Jackson said. "That still leaves us another game to fill. You're talking about a 4A school playing a 7A school. We're the smallest in that classification playing a 7A school the week before the postseason. It puts strain on the program and we'll battle through it. That's the only team I've talked to as possibility."

Another possibility is playing Suwannee High in the regular season even though the Indians were scheduled to play them in the kickoff classic.

"We were supposed to play Suwannee in the classic and I asked if we could play them in week 5," Jackson said. "Their head coach is trying to play Baker County, but (Baker County) has a district game in week 5. He hasn't returned my call and is waiting to make sure the district is final. I called him yesterday and he hasn't returned my call as of today."

Still, Jackson's thoughts were still centered on the Raiders on Thursday.

"It's always been what a rivalry is supposed to be," he said. "You look at college rivalries and sometimes a team wins 10 years in a row and then the roles reverse. I guess they feel they can play teams they can beat."

And the only reason in the end that Fort White could come up with is sour grapes.

"I don't know if they got tired of getting beat or just don't like us," Jackson said. "We have the Paddle. It's in Fort White. I guess the rival didn't mean anything to them. I thought it meant more to the community to keep the game going."

Now hear this ...

Media tour reveals new rides, new tech, even new romance

NASCAR's annual media tour, held each year in Charlotte, N.C. prior to the start of Speedweeks in Daytona, usually generates off-season news as teams and NASCAR wait for the tour to make any official announcements concerning the upcoming season.

This year's tour, held last week, was no different, except that some of the biggest news came the day after the tour ended when Danica Patrick and Ricky Stenhouse Jr. confirmed to the Associated Press that they were dating each other.

It had been rumored for weeks that Patrick, who announced last fall that she was divorcing her husband, Paul Hespenthal, and Stenhouse, the two-time and defending Nationwide Series champion, were romantically involved.

Stenhouse, who will face Patrick in the Sprint Cup circuit's Rookie of the Year contest this season, was questioned about their relationship during the media tour but offered little insight. The two spoke with the AP the next day and insisted that their off-track relationship won't affect the way they race each other on the track.

Stenhouse, 25, is moving up to Cup to drive the No. 17 Ford at Roush Fenway Racing. Patrick, 30, will drive the No. 10 Chevrolet for Stewart-Haas Racing.

On the tour, Joe Gibbs Racing announced that it had signed Kyle Busch to a long-term contract extension. Gibbs also will field the No. 54 Toyota in the Nationwide Series with Busch as its primary driver. Busch, for the most part, raced his own car in the Nationwide Series last year, but without the success he's had in Gibbs' cars in the past.

"This is a big deal for us," JGR President J.D. Gibbs said. "It's no secret that you have to have great drivers to win in NASCAR, and in the past year we've been able to secure long-term deals with Kyle and Denny [Hamlin] and of course we were able to add Matt [Kenseth] as well. Kyle is a big part of our success at JGR and we're thrilled to know he will be with us for a long time."

Busch, who drove for both Roush Fenway Racing and Hendrick Motorsports earlier in his career, said he looked around and decided that staying with Gibbs was his best opportunity.

J.D. Gibbs, president of JGR, speaks to the media on Thursday during the 2013 NASCAR Sprint Media Tour in Concord, N.C. (NASCAR photo)

"I did have options, which was awesome," he said. "I just felt like this was the best place for me. I've been here for a while now."

Busch said the lineup of drivers and crew chiefs at Gibbs weighed heavily in his decision.

"It just shows nothing but positive growth over here for this organization," he said.

At Roush Fenway Racing, team co-owner Jack Roush said he hoped to put Trevor Bayne in a full-time Sprint Cup ride in 2014. Bayne, who is set to run a full Nationwide Series campaign for Roush this season, already runs a limited Cup schedule in the Wood Brothers' No. 21 Ford. He won the Daytona 500 in that car in 2011.

Roush said Bayne's move to a full-time Cup ride will require more sponsorship and continued improved performance by Bayne.

There were plenty of sponsor-related announcements last week, most of them involving existing sponsors continuing their relationships, plus a few new sponsors joining the sport. Hertz was among them, announcing that it was teaming with Penske Racing to back cars in both the Cup and Nationwide Series.

Cessna also announced that it would be sponsoring Jamie McMurray's No. 1 Chevrolet at Ganassi Racing for 10 races this season, joining McDonald's, Dr. Pepper and Bass Pro Shops.

There also was confirmation that the sport's most popular driver, Dale Earnhardt Jr., has 13 unsponsored races at this point. His team owner Rick Hendrick said he's not concerned and is waiting to sign a backer with the best long-term prospects.

Hendrick also announced that his youngest driver, Chase Elliott, will run five ARCA and nine Camping World Truck Series races under the Hendrick banner. Elliott, the 17-year-old son of former Sprint Cup champion Bill Elliott, is in position to take over one of Hendrick's four Cup cars, if and when one of the current drivers retires.

Jeff Gordon, at age 41, appears the most likely candidate for retirement at some point in the not-too-distant future. He talked about his plans last week, telling reporters that he doesn't intend to compete into his 50s as many of his peers have done.

NASCAR officials discussed a new track-drying system that is billed as quicker than the kerosene-burning jet dryers now in use and more environmentally friendly. Drying the track after a rain has been a painfully slow process in the past, as the process can take up to two hours at most tracks, making for a long wait for fans at the track and watching on TV.

"The goal is to improve it by 80 percent," NASCAR chairman Brian France said. "So that means if we're drying Daytona off, where it usually took two and a half hours, we get it down to 30 minutes."

And France said that with the new system they're close to meeting his goal.

"We're going to be able to dry Martinsville off in 15 minutes," he said. "It's going to be a spectacular thing, and all auto racing will benefit from this as we go down the road."

The new system, which NASCAR owns the rights to, relies on compressed air and heat, plus some vacuuming, to dry the track. The old jet dryers, supplied by the tracks, used the heat from jet engines to blow water off the track as well as dry it.

NASCAR officials also praised the work that has been done on the Generation 6 race car that will make its competitive debut next month at Daytona International Speedway.

"The collaborative efforts between the manufacturers, teams and NASCAR has been unparalleled in my 34-plus years in the sport," said NASCAR's vice president for competition Robin Pemberton. "We've been highly encouraged by the results that we've seen at the tests at Daytona and Charlotte earlier this month, and are optimistic that not only will the cars look great, we believe they will race great ..."

"I really believe we're going to see some of the most competitive, intense and exciting racing that we've seen in quite some time."

NOTEBOOK

Laser inspection system tested

Recent NASCAR tests have given those in the garage a firsthand look at the new laser system being used by NASCAR officials to ensure that mechanics are building their car bodies precisely to NASCAR's specifications. In the past, measurements were made using big aluminum templates.

Since NASCAR inspections are done out in the open, anyone can watch the test and be certain that teams are going by the rules.

NASCAR president Mike Helton said during the media tour that the laser "gives NASCAR the ability to have the credibility of showing everybody else in the garage area that these measurements on everybody's cars are the same."

Fans to vote on race format

Like the Sprint All-Star Race at Charlotte in May, the Sprint Unlimited at Daytona – the 75-lap non-points race that opens the Sprint Cup Series season next month – will have portions of its format determined by fan voting.

Fans will determine the number of laps in each segment, the type of pit stop a team makes after the first segment, and how many cars will be eliminated after the second segment.

Votes can be cast on NASCAR's new official mobile app – NASCAR Mobile '13 – or at NASCAR.com/SprintUnlimited. All votes made through the mobile app will count twice.

The race, formerly known as the Budweiser Shootout, is set to get the green flag at 8 p.m. Eastern Time on Feb. 16.

Hamlin family welcomes baby

Denny Hamlin's daddy, Taylor James Hamlin was born Jan. 20. She weighed 6 pounds, five ounces and was 20 inches long. Her mother is Jordan Fish.

"She's awesome so far," Hamlin said during a media tour appearance. "She's better than I expected, but obviously she's still a newborn and still sleeping a whole lot ..."

"She came out healthy, so there are no issues there. We're just three or four days in. I'm sure she'll be a little bit more feisty in weeks to come."

Hamlin said he's a changed man already.

"Your outlook changes on when you have to leave home and when you have to get home and things like that – how excited you are to pull in the driveway knowing you get to see your daughter," he said. "That part of it is cool."

Harvick leaving RCR after 2013

During the NASCAR media tour stop at Richard Childress Racing in Welcome, N.C., team owner Richard Childress confirmed that Kevin Harvick, driver of the No. 29 Chevrolet, indeed is leaving after this year to drive a fourth car at Stewart-Haas Racing.

Childress told reporters that Harvick will "do well over there at Stewart-Haas, and RCR will keep going and moving forward."

Childress' grandson Austin Dillon, now a full-time Nationwide Series driver, is set to run several Cup races this season and is viewed as a likely replacement for Harvick.

Montoya sees Rolex win as good omen for Sprint Cup

Team owner Chip Ganassi hasn't had much to celebrate with his Sprint Cup operation the past year, but on Sunday at Daytona, his sports car team, with his NASCAR driver Juan Pablo Montoya a part of his driver lineup, won the 51st anniversary Rolex 24 at Daytona.

It was Ganassi's fifth Rolex 24 triumph in 10 attempts.

Montoya told reporters afterward that the victory should provide some momentum to get his Sprint Cup efforts back on track.

"I think, personally, it's a boost getting the job done," he said. "I think [Sprint Cup] testing has gone really, really well over the last couple months with the new car, and it seems like we've got a lot more speed than we had last year."

"It's encouraging ... We had to hire a ton of new people last year, and now everybody is working together, everybody understands their job and what needs to be done, so it's been pretty good."

In the closing stages of the around-the-clock race, Montoya passed fellow Sprint Cup driver A.J. Allmendinger to help secure the victory.

Allmendinger's team finished third, and he said afterward that his car was no match for the Ganassi entry of Montoya.

"It's just fun to compete with somebody like [Montoya] for the win," he said. "I knew it was going to be tough, and it was probably going to be a prayer to have a chance to beat him."

Several NASCAR drivers wound up participating in another endurance race over the weekend. The 200-lap Super Late Model portion of the annual Speedfest race at Watermelon Capital Speedway in Cordele, Ga., was plagued with caution flags, with 24 of them waving before Camping World Truck Series driver Jeff Choquette took the checkered flag.

Choquette is the grandson of 1954 NASCAR Modified Champion Jack Choquette. The younger Choquette, of West Palm Beach, Fla., ran three truck races last year, with a best finish of eighth at Iowa Speedway.

Other NASCAR names at Speedfest included David Ragan and Chase Elliott, who wrecked while racing for the lead in the closing laps of the main event. Also in the field were Johnny Sauter, John Hunter Nemechek, Erik Jones and Wes Burton.

Elliott won the Pro Late Model portion of the event.

HAMILTON COUNTY BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS

The Hamilton County Board of County Commissioners hereby request proposals from qualified individuals or firms to provide services for the establishment and operation of Rural Health Clinic pursuant to the Rural Health Services Act of 1977 (Public Law 95-210). The Rural Health Clinic will be located at the site of the existing Health Clinic at 506 N.W. 4th Street, Jasper, Florida 32052, and will provide the following services:

1. Physician services
2. Services and supplies incident to the services of a physician
3. NP, PA, Certified Nurse Midwife (CNM), Clinical Psychologist (CP), and Clinical Social Worker (CSW) services.
4. Services and supplies incident to the services of a NP, PA, CNM, CP and CSW.
5. Medicare Part B covered drugs that are furnished by and incident to services of the Rural Health Clinic provider.
6. Visiting nurse services to the homebound in an area where the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS) has certified that there is a shortage of Home Health Agencies.
7. Certain Federal and State requirements will apply to the contract for this project.
8. Professional services required shall be secured in accordance with the Rural Health Clinic Services Act of 1977 (Public Law 95-210), and the Rural Health Clinic will be required to:

1. Employ a NP or PA;
2. Have a NP, PA or CNM working at the Clinic at least fifty per cent (50%) of the time the RHC operates;
3. Directly furnish routine diagnostic and laboratory services;
4. Have arrangements with one or more hospitals to furnish medically necessary services that are not available at the RHC.
5. Have available drugs and biological necessary for the treatment of emergencies.
6. Furnish onsite all of the following laboratory tests:
Chemical examination of urine by stick or tablet method or both;
Hemoglobin or hematocrit;
Blood sugar;
Examination of stool specimens for occult blood;
Pregnancy tests; and
Primary culturing for transmittal to a certified laboratory.
7. Have an annual program evaluation;
8. Not be a rehabilitation agency or a facility that is primarily for the treatment of mental disease;
9. Not be a Federally Qualified Health Center; and
10. Meet other applicable State and Federal requirements.

Services will include complete management and reporting and all administrative duties associated with the establishment and operation of a Rural Health Clinic including, but not limited to, compliance with all Federal and State standards for certification and evaluation of a Rural Health Clinic.
Proposals will be evaluated on an equal competitive basis using the following criteria:

1. Experience or ability to become experienced with the Rural Health Clinics.
 2. Staffing and management.
 3. The approach to providing local needs for health services.
 4. Quality of references and their responses.
 5. Fees and costs.
- Seven (7) copies and one (1) original of sealed proposals marked "SEALED PROPOSALS FOR RURAL HEALTH CLINIC SERVICES" must be received by 3:00 p.m. on Monday, February 25, 2013 at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court, Hamilton County Courthouse, 207 N.E. First Street, Room 106, Jasper, Florida 32052, in order to be considered.
Any proposal received after this date will be rejected.
Additional information may be obtained from Danny Johnson, Hamilton County Coordinator, at 386-792-6639.

Proposals will be opened as soon as possible after the selection deadline. An Evaluation Committee may be appointed and interviews may be conducted.
Fees may be negotiated in compliance with Florida Competitive Negotiation Act.
The Hamilton County Board of County Commissioners reserves the right to reject any and all proposals and to waive any informalities or irregularities in the proposal process.
