Bill to arm teachers filed

'Stand your ground' would be expanded under another.

By JIM TURNER
The News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE — The state's controversial "stand your ground" law would cover warning shots to fend off attackers and teachers would be able to pack heat on campus under bills now before legislators.

Freshman Rep. Neil Combee, R-Polk City, filed a bill on the one year anniversary of the shooting death of Trayvon Martin in Sanford that would free any individual from prosecution for firing a warning shot or even simply brandishing a firearm to scare away a would-be attacker.

The immunity measure would cover acts of self-defense as well as stepping in to protect others.

On Wednesday, Rep. Greg Steube, R-Sarasota, offered a bill that asks for school principals to decide which teachers and staff can carry a concealed weapon while at work.

Steube said the chances of a student getting hold of a weapon are "minimized" due to the bill's requirement that anyone approved for concealed carry on campus must first undergo firearms training.

Also, "we've given a lot of flexibility to principals in the bill,"

A high-speed chase that involved multiple law enforcement agencies ended when the suspect vehicle crashed and its two occupants were arrested — one after a three-hour manhunt.

The driver, Terrick Shadon Lundy, 26, of Jacksonville, fled into the woods off Interstate 10

Multiple law enforcement personnel searched for about three hours for the driver of the car after he fled on foot from the crash scene.

Lawyer: Lohan committed change

Lindsay Lohan is committed to turning her life around and wants to record public service announcements on the dangers of domestic violence, alcohol abuse and drunken driving, her attorney said.

Mark Heller told The Associated Press that the actress' plans are independent of a criminal case that could return her to jail on charges that she lied to police about being a passenger in her car when it slammed into a dump truck in June.

The "Liz & Dick" star has been repeatedly sentenced to jail, rehab, and community service since her first pair of arrests for driving under the influence in 2007. She spent several months in court-ordered psychotherapy until a judge released her from supervised probation in March 2012.

As part of the intense psychotherapy sessions, Lohan is in the beginning stages of trying to become an inspirational speaker to young people, he said.

"I think she suddenly woke up one morning and had an epiphany and she suddenly realized and appreciated the seriousness of the events that led to her being in court," Heller said.

"She's going to try to inspire hope in people," he said. "I think it will be good for her. It certainly won't hurt others."

Syco says the contest, which starts next month and is due to run for a year, will seek auditions in a different category of talent every two weeks. Entrants can upload their pieces on a dedicated YouTube channel, to be viewed by the public and judged by professionals associated with Syco.

There will be prizes — exactly what they are has yet to be announced — every fortnight and a grand prize at the end of the year.

Syco calls the initiative an experiment aimed at discovering new talent. It's the company's bid to tap the power of social media, which has launched millions of wannabe celebrities — and some genuine

AROUND FLORIDA

Counties lose out in tax dispute

TALLAHASSEE — A divided three-judge panel sided with online travel companies such as Expedia and Travelocity on Thursday in a dispute over how much tax they must pay on hotel rooms booked in Florida.

A request for rehearing or an appeal to the Florida Supreme Court, though, is likely.

The 1st District Court of Appeal panel voted 2-1 that tourist development taxes are due only on what the firms pay to the hotels, not the full amount they charge their customers.

The majority affirmed a prior decision by Tallahassee-based Circuit Judge James Shelfer in a lawsuit filed by 17 of Florida's 67 counties.

The counties argued the online firms also should be taxed on the markup they charge their customers — amounts that run into the millions statewide and nationally. Such cases also have come up in other states with similar laws and in federal courts.

The online companies contend the markup should not be taxed because it pays for their services rather than hotel rent.

2 officers shot; 1 dies of wounds

FORT PIERCE — A St. Lucie County Sheriff's deputy has been killed in the line of duty.

Authorities say Sgt. Gary Morales was shot while making a traffic stop Thursday morning south of Fort Pierce.

The 13-year-veteran was later pronounced dead at a hospital. A suspect is in custody.

It was the second shooting of an officer in a matter of hours in St. Lucie County. A Port St. Lucie officer was shot in the pre-dawn hours Thursday while responding to a domestic dispute.

He was released from the hospital and expected to make a full recovery.

No further details on the deputy shooting were immediately available.

Man sentenced for old murders

BARTOW — A man who told police that he was responsible for a pair of unsolved Lakeland homicides from the 1980s has been sentenced to 40 years in prison.

As part of a deal with Polk County prosecutors, 48-year-old Anthony Jackson pleaded no contest earlier this month to two counts of second-degree murder and one count of attempted robbery.

The Ledger reports that Jackson's conviction is related to the 1984 slaying of William Clark Ford Jr. and the 1985 killing of 16-year-old Sharon Cheryl Boyce.

For years, the two fatal shootings remained cold cases until Jackson called 911 on Dec. 10, 2011, and asked officers to meet him on a street corner in Tampa.

Woman gets jail for animal cruelty

PENSACOLA — A Pensacola judge sentenced a woman to 300 days in jail after she was convicted of animal cruelty for duct-taping her dog's injured eye.

The Pensacola News Journal reports 46-year-old Mechele Potter also must pay fines and court costs.

Authorities say Potter called animal control Sept. 18 to report a stray dog in her yard with duct tape on its head. Investigators later learned the dog belonged to Potter, who had placed duct tape over its injured eye but didn't seek medical attention.

Animal control workers removed the tape and found the dog's eye was red, swollen and protruding from its socket. The dog's eye had to be removed.

Officials say the cause of the injury is unknown, but it was made worse by Potter's failure to seek help.

Citizens faces class action suit

PLANTATION — A class action lawsuit has been filed against the state-backed Citizens Property Insurance Corp. alleging the company deprived customers of windstorm mitigation discounts through an arbitrary re-inspection program.

Lawyers for the plaintiffs estimated Thursday that 226,000 customers have lost nearly $200 million in credits since 2010.

Citizens gave wind mitigation credits to homeowners who hardened their homes against storm damage. The credits were supposed to last five years.

But the lawsuit alleges Citizens changed the rules mid-game, embarking on a systematic re-inspection campaign that revoked millions of dollars in credits and was designed to increase customers' premiums. It has been a particularly heated issue in South Florida where a large chunk of Citizens' 1.4 million policyholders live.

Citizens said in a prepared statement that the re-inspections were conducted under statutory authority.

AWARDS: Contributions recognized

John Gay, a Black History Postage Stamp Collection by John Young, and African artwork from Deepwell Studios and Public Work by Terry Bailey seemed to transform the Richardson Community Center into a local black history museum.

During the awards ceremony, former Lake City Council member Bettye Lane received the 2013 Woman of the Year Award.

"I'm surprised and honored," she said of winning the award. "It's such a good group and they do so many good things. I'm just proud that they thought I do a thing or two in this community. I just enjoyed this. These surprises just make me feel good."

Mel Turner received the 2013 Man of the Year Award and Hayward and Corine Lofton were recognized as the 2013 Couple of The Year. The couple has been married for 60 years.

The event focused on community unity, and Bea Coker, It's About My Efforts executive director, explained why it's important to recognize community members with an award ceremony.

"It's important to recognize the community in this fashion because citizens need to observe the minimal seemingly efforts of individuals so that they can determine how best they fit into the community," Coker said. "A lot of times people think if they don't have major contributions to make that they are not significant. It takes the contributions of a lot of citizens, a lot of businesses and a lot of individual small efforts to have a big impact on improving our way of life."

Thursday's award banquet was the fourth year It's About My Efforts has held to celebrate the community.

a presenter at the event.

"An event like this is basically to know who in the heck you are," he said. "It's just an event to get together to know what you're doing, to have some ideas of what you should be doing and for the kids, to give them something to look forward to and let them know they are not by themselves and that they can be more than what they think they can be and to provide some leadership."

The Rev. R.L. Gunter, Southern Christian Leadership Council state president, served as the event's keynote speaker and delivered a message thanking residents for making contributions for local history and also challenging the community to come together to improve living, educational, financial and economic conditions in Columbia County.

Gunter ended his address by urging local leaders to unite to make conditions better for everyone and he began singing the Christian spiritual "I've Got a Feeling Everything Gone to Be All Right," and the crowd joined in, creating a unified voice by singing several verses of the song, which essentially ended the event.

Area rivers continue to rise

From staff reports

Most river gauges on Georgia tributaries to the Suwannee River are cresting after back-to-back storms, according to the Suwannee River Water Management District.

As the peak flows approach Florida, forecasts are showing a potential for higher stages on the Withlacoochee, Alapaha, middle Suwannee and Santa Fe rivers than earlier forecasts indicated.

Rainfall was similar to storms in March and April of 2009, which caused record floods on the Alapaha and Withlacoochee.

Therecentrainswereless widespread and intense, resulting in lower expected stages than the historic 2009 flood. However, the Withlacoochee near Pinetta could be higher than other recent floods.

CHASE: Two arrested after crash

after the crash, and canine units were used to track him down. His passenger, Ronnie Benard Williams, of St. Augustine, was injured in the wreck and hospitalized in critical condition, according to police.

Lundy suffered minor injuries but did not require hospitalization, law enforcement officials said. He was taken to the Baker County Jail. A Florida Highway Patrol news release said the two will face "multiple charges pending further investigation."

The chase began when a Madison County sheriff's deputy attempted to stop the 2012 Dodge Charger for speeding. After pulling over, the driver sped away. Multiple law enforcement agencies became involved as the chase wound through Suwannee and Columbia counties before ending on I-10 in Baker County.

Baker County Sheriff Joey Dobson said the suspect's 2012 Dodge Charger swerved around stop sticks deployed by Baker County deputies. When the driver swerved the car tilted onto two wheels and the driver lost control. The Charger ran off the highway and struck a large pine tree.

"They were going about as fast as they could go," Dobson said.

Williams, 31, from St. Augustine, was arrested at the scene of the crash, but Lundy fled into a wooded area where law enforcement used helicopters, canine units, deputies and troopers to search the area. He was captured by Department of Corrections and FHP canine units, said Ed Seifert, public information officer with Columbia County's Sheriff's Office.

Law enforcement shut down the eastbound lanes of I-10 and rerouted traffic onto U.S. 90 while they searched for Lundy. Williams was first transported to Fraser Hospital in Macclenny, but because of the severity of his injuries, he was moved to Shands Jacksonville. His condition was listed as critical at the hospital at 8:20 p.m. Thursday. According to FHP, both were not using seat belts.

Initial reports from FHP said the chase began after a Madison County deputy stopped the suspects for speeding. When the deputy was at the window of the car, the passenger reached under his seat. The deputy told the passenger to show him his hands, and then the driver sped away east on I-10.

The deputy then "fired upon the suspect vehicle before it fled the scene," a FHP news release said.

The Madison County Sheriff's Office did not return multiple phone calls seeking information about the incident.

Also, there were reports of shots fired at law enforcement during the chase.

"We can't confirm that that occurred," said Tracy Hisler-Pace, public information officer with FHP.

Dobson said he also heard there were shots fired at law enforcement but also could not confirm.

"We heard that, but can't confirm that," he said.

Seifert said about 15 Columbia County deputies assisted in the chase, including deputies at the I-10 interchanges at U.S. Routes 441 and 41 in the event the suspect exited the interstate.

Columbia County deputies also tried to stop the car with stop sticks, but the driver was able to avoid running over the devices, Seifert said.

"Nobody was injured," he said. "That was our primary concern."

BILLS: One would let teachers be armed

Steube said. "If they want to designate one (teacher), if they want to designate many they can. If want to require them to put (the gun) in a safe they can. It's going to be completely up to the principle logistically how they want to implement the legislation."

Steube's measure (HB 1097) comes as some conservatives nationwide and in Florida have called for arming teachers and guards at schools in the wake of the December shooting in the Newtown, Conn. Sen. Alan Hays, R-Umatilla, is expected to file the Senate companion of the bill.

Steube said he's received positive feedback from educators and school board members.

However, school administrators haven't lined up behind the armed teachers plan.

"Our members are saying they would rather not have that, that they'd rather have other security measures put in place," said Michele White, a spokeswoman for the Florida Association of School Administrators.

POPE: Benedict begins retirement

retirement began with an emotional send-off from the Vatican, with Swiss Guards in full regalia and prelates kneeling to kiss Benedict's papal ring one last time. Benedict's closest aide wept by his side as they took their final walk down the marbled halls of the Apostolic Palace.

As bells tolled in St.

Peter's and in church towers across Rome, Benedict flew by helicopter to the papal vacation retreat in Castel Gandolfo in the hills south of Rome, where he will spend the first two months of his retirement.

Benedict leaves behind a church in crisis, still coping with the fallout of the sex abuse scandals, a central Vatican administration torn by divisions, and what Benedict said was a crisis of faith, with baptized Catholics in places of ancient Christian tradition thinking they can do without God.

In his final public remarks as pope, Benedict pledged to continue working for the good of the church in his retirement.

Shameful way to treat veterans

Disgraceful. Shameful. An embarrassment. Those are the best words to describe the ordeal Korean War veteran James Gunn endured to get the Department of Veterans Affairs to listen to his appeal for benefits.

It took more than five years — and a front-page story [in the South Florida] Sun Sentinel — for the 81-year-old Marine Corps veteran and Coral Springs resident to get his appeal heard as he seeks benefits for debilitating frostbite wounds.

Gunn won't know for weeks whether an appeals judge will grant his claim for a pension, but at least he finally got a chance to be heard. Count him among the almost 250,000 veterans waiting for news about their benefits appeals.

What a way to treat our veterans

Gunn is wheelchair-bound and in constant pain, a reminder of the Battle of Chosin Reservoir in the winter of 1950. Fighting through sub-zero cold, the 12,000 survivors are called the Chosin Few and the Frozen Chosin.

Gunn applied for two benefits: Aid and Attendance, which would provide more than $1,000 a month, and a mobility stipend. He was denied both in 2007, and appealed the decision.

After five years of more paperwork, more frustration and more deterioration of his health, his appeal was finally heard.

Who knows how much longer it would have taken if his plight hadn't made it to the front page of the newspaper? Unfortunately, few veterans entitled to VA benefits can get that kind of exposure.

Florida veterans wait nearly 10 months on average for the VA to respond to their claims, although veterans advocates say the wait time is often longer than that. And appeals can take several years.

Don't wholly blame the VA for the slog. The department is chronically understaffed and backlogged. The situation only figures to get worse as thousands of veterans return home from Afghanistan.

"(Decision review officers) are good people, they know the law, but there's just no way they can handle the caseload," says Matthew Hill, an Orlando attorney on the board of the National Organization of Veterans' Advocates.

Blame the folks we send to Washington, who talk about "supporting the troops" when the cameras are on, but obviously don't do enough to adequately fund the VA to help the troops who need it the most.

The VA has a $127 billion budget, but more funds are certainly needed to increase staffing and reduce the huge case backlog.

Supporting the troops — particularly those who come home with a variety of disabilities after fighting for our freedoms — should be a priority, not just a bumper-sticker slogan.

If James Gunn's case helps bring more attention to the problem and gets results, then maybe the five-year wait he has endured wasn't totally in vain.

■ South Florida Sun Sentinel

How to solve that problem

Who taught you problem solving? Your parents? Elementary school? High school? Or no one at all?

How did you learn problem solving? Like much of what we learn about how to live, we may have learned by modeling, or copying, what we saw our parents or others do. We may have seen them get upset, angry, frustrated, and act emotionally out of fear or anger, and spring into thoughtless action to solve a problem. Instead of thinking straight, we duck the bullet, or hide from it like an ostrich with its head in the sand.

Wouldn't it have been great to learn effective problem solving when you were a child? It's no wonder that we continue to have problems! It helps to have a problem-solving plan. Here are some steps that should help you:

- The first step is to recognize any feelings of discomfort, frustration, fear, or anger. Choose to think rationally rather than reacting emotionally. Don't get hung up wallowing in the mud. Decide to get up and do something to fix the problem now.
- Here comes the positive part.

Robert Denny
Bob.Denny8@gmail.com

See the problem in a different light. In psychology we call this "reframing." A problem is only a problem when you see it as a problem. In reality, it's just a situation. Shakespeare said "All the world's a stage, and the players merely actors." So the stage is set, the situation is presented. We're actors and directors of our own lives. See the situation as a challenge.

• Now's your chance to script your own life. Your challenge can be to choose your own path in life; make your life into what you want it to be. In this life, most anything is possible. As soon as you accomplish something difficult, you build up strength to accomplish even more. Success breeds success. You become more and better than you were.

- Decide on the ideal or best solution. What would be the best outcome? What do you want to have, to do, or to be?

• Now that you know what you want, what can you do to "make it so?" (Star Trek's Picard.) What can you do today? This week? Right now?

• You've done most of the work. Now, take some action. Research shows that your mind and body don't see much difference from the real world and your imagination or vision. Imagining the better situation you'll have after the problem is resolved, you can feel excited, empowered, exhilarated. Your positive vision and good feelings will motivate you to take action.

• Write down a short plan, and a schedule on your calendar

• After each step, reward yourself. Share your good feelings with someone close to you. Social support is an important source of encouragement.

Life can be enjoyable, successful, fulfilling, productive, and fun. Say "bring it on" to the next problem (situation) life presents you.

An impressive job by firefighters

Very few times in my life have I been impressed by the ability of a team to accomplish a mission quickly, quietly, and professionally. I was witness to the house fire that occurred the night of Feb. 19 in Three Rivers Estates and was not just impressed, I was awed, by the firemen who responded.

My daughter and I were finishing a late dinner out on the deck overlooking the Ichetucknee. I was facing the direction of a nearby house and didn't notice anything out of the ordinary. Then I heard what sounded like three or four rifle shots in fairly quick succession. They sounded close although I couldn't tell whether the sounds originated in the neighborhood or across the river. My thought was that some fool was celebrating like they do for Cinco de Mayo and was glad I was under cover so no bullets would return to earth through me. Shortly thereafter I smelled what seemed to be spent powder. I didn't notice a cloud but the smell was strong. I thought someone had discharged a firearm pretty close by.

Then the smell changed to something like burning plastic. Then I thought some fool had a bonfire going, burning refuse while taking target practice. I didn't think it a big enough deal to worry too much. I walked inside where my daughter and I had a conversation in the living room.

Suddenly my daughter exclaimed,

David Grant

"Oh my God!" I looked out the window and it took a second for my brain to register what I was seeing. It looked as if the entire woods were on fire.

As we watched, flames rose into the air and above the treetops. I told my daughter to call 911. Before she could make the call, I saw the first truck roll up to the fire. By then I could see the outline of a house in flames.

Lights were flashing but there was no siren. Quietly, men got out of the truck and spread out. Within five to ten minutes I heard the pump on the truck fire up. Then they hit the burning house with water. Immediately the fire seemed to come under control. From my vantage point I couldn't hear any voices. I only saw the shadows of men moving around the fire quietly, going about their business.

Quickly I saw the major burning extinguish although fire appeared to glow low to the ground. Then it got dark, although I could still see men moving around the site in the lights they had trained on the site. It sounded as if a few orders were shouted or maybe calls for gear. I couldn't hear what they were saying. But for the most part I heard no voices as these men quietly went about their business as a team. Every now and then I caught smells like a campfire being extinguished with water as they searched the site for secondary fires and burning embers. I stayed up until about 1:30 a.m. and men were still on the scene when I went to bed.

On Feb. 20, I walked over to the site. I expected to see nothing but blackened char. I was astonished at how much of the structure still remained. Nothing had spread to the houses on either side. One house was pretty close. I saw no damage to the houses on either side nor to the foliage. I stood there with my mouth open reflecting on the size of the fire I had seen and how well it had been contained.

What I witnessed the night of Feb. 19 was so impressive it's almost hard for me to put my feelings into words.

Station 46 in Fort White (and anyone else who responded that night) is a highly professional group.

I feel safer knowing these guys are on the job. I thank them all for a job well done.

■ David Grant lives in Fort White.

The true gospel

The word gospel is used some 98 times in the King James Version of the Bible. The word gospel simply means "good news." Many translations choose not to use the word gospel but change it to "good news" or "to announce glad tidings."

What is the gospel? What do we need to know about the gospel? What happens to those who reject the gospel as the only means of salvation?

Five times we find the phrase "The Gospel of the Kingdom": Matthew 4:23; 9:35; 24:14; Mark 1:14-15. The Gospel of the Kingdom message preached by John the Baptist and Jesus before His death and resurrection is not the Gospel of Salvation today. The message before the cross was "Repent ye and be baptized" for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand. Failure to rightly divide the scripture has caused some to err by adding baptism to the plan of salvation.

The true gospel is recorded by Paul in I Corinthians 15:1-4: "Moreover, brethren, I declare to you the gospel which I preached to you, which also you received and in which you stand, by which also you are saved, if you hold fast that word which I preached to you — unless you believed in vain. For I delivered to you first of all that which I also received: that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, and that He was buried, and that He rose again in the third day according to the Scriptures ...

What we need to know about the gospel is that nothing can be added or taken away from it. It's the total acceptance of the death, burial and resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ. He paid the price for our sin. Ephesians 2:8-9 says: "For by grace you have been saved through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God, not of works lest anyone should boast." It is because of grace; anything else is works.

There is no way one can be saved outside the true gospel. Romans 5:8 says: "But God demonstrated His own love toward us, in that while we were still sinners, Christ died for us." It has always taken the shedding of blood for the sacrifice of sin; but only the blood of the spotless Lamb of God was it done once and for all. All others who pray to a different god or add anything to God's simple plan of salvation is, as Paul wrote to the churches in Galatia, that some had come in with a different gospel. Paul said, "Which is not another (gospel); but there are some who trouble you and want to pervert the gospel of Christ. But even if we or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel to you than that which we have preached to you, let him be accursed" Gal. 1:7-8. Paul repeated this in verse 9.

To those who reject the simple gospel of Christ there can be but one ending; that is a devil's hell prepared for the devil and his angels, a place of outer darkness, where the worm dieth not.

Accept God's simple plan: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved" (Acts 16:31).

■ Hugh Sherrill, an ordained Baptist minister and Bible teacher, is available for special Bible studies and revivals.

Employee adorns the doctrine of God

The apostle Paul left his "true child in a common faith," Titus, at Crete to "set in order what remains" (Titus 1:4, 5). Based upon the epistle which Paul wrote to Titus, we see that there were several things which Paul wanted Titus to do. He wanted him to "appoint elders in every city." Paul wanted Titus to teach certain things to different people. One such group was the "bondslaves" (2:9).

Bondslaves were people who had given up their own desires to please another person. This may have been a voluntary action or it may have been involuntary. At the beginning of his letter to Titus, Paul used this same word to describe his relationship to God.

Paul gives five instructions to this group of people. He wants them to (1) "be subject to their own masters in everything;" (2) "to be well-pleasing;" (3) "not argumentative;" (4) "not pilfering;" (5) "but showing all good faith" (2:9, 10). Paul also gives a reason why these Christians who are bondslaves should act in this way. Paul says, "That they may adorn the doctrine of God our Savior in every respect" (2:10).

What seems interesting is that Paul wants these Christians to behave in a certain way, not because it would be a good thing to help their relationship to their master, but rather so that the "doctrine of God" would be adorned. He wants the "doctrine of God" to be "embellished with honor." Paul wants the "doctrine of God" to have an appealing influence upon those who are seeing the work of these bondslaves. He wants

BIBLICAL MEDITATION

carlton_mc@msn.com

their actions to "add beauty to the "doctrine of God."

Have we ever meditated on the idea that our actions on the job would make the "doctrine of God" more appealing to others? That the way we go about our activities in the work place would "add beauty to" the "doctrine of God"? That the way that we, as an employee, treat our employer would help the "doctrine of God" look impressive in the eyes of our boss?

This instruction that Paul wanted Titus to teach indicates that our lives in the work place must be governed by the "doctrine of God." If we are going to "adorn the doctrine of God" then we must apply Christian principles in our relationship to our employer. It says that this must be our character, that living the Christian life is something which we must do outside of our assemblies or away from a function where church members are gathered.

What if we are the only Christian at our work place? Will we "adorn the doctrine of God"? Are our "ethics" at the work place so above the average that people will wonder why? If you are a female worker, will they wonder if your husband is a preacher?

But, let's look at this thing from the perspective of Paul being a "bondservant." In his relationship to God, Paul had to be subject to God in everything. Paul had to be "well-pleasing" to God. He had to not be "argumentative." Which should cause us to meditate upon our service to God? Is our "Christian walk" such that people would say we are adorning "the doctrine of God"?

They may not express it in those terms, but would they say, "He walks the talk!" Or, "He lives what he preaches!"

Whether we are an employee or not, may we all live so that we "adorn the doctrine of God."

Learn the boundary of your power

It is amazing how much time one person can spend trying to change another ... and getting nowhere! Since we are all prone to try this, you (like me) have discovered that trying to change other people is a lot like spitting in the wind. It doesn't work, and it can get real messy. In fact, we are even limited in our own ability to produce lasting change in ourselves. So, why on earth do we ever think we can change someone else?

The boundary of power makes clear what we have power over and where we have no power. It is critical for us to understand that we have no power over the attitudes and actions of other people; we cannot make them more mature or responsible. We also cannot change another person's character, or stop their bad habits, no matter how obvious it is to us that they need to.

What we do have is the power to influence others. Webster's dictionary defines "influence" as "power of producing an effect without force or a direct command." Think about some things that we often do to try and get someone to change: repeat ourselves over and over (better known as nagging), criticize, scream and yell, bully, threaten, withdraw and give the silent treatment. Now think about those who influence you. Would someone doing these things make you want to listen and cooperate? Me neither.

We all are more likely to respond to someone who is not trying to "fix us" even if we know they don't approve of our choices or behavior. Instead, we can draw a boundary by saying something like, "Your irresponsible behavior (be specific) is causing problems in our relationship. Is there some way I can help you? I love you, but if this behavior continues our

HEART MATTERS

angieland3@windstream.net

relationship will suffer (explain how). It is your choice." This allows the "offender" to be aware of the problem and to understand the consequences if they continue their irresponsible behavior. This may mean not being included certain activities or a distancing in the relationships. It also gives the freedom to choose to change the behavior with the benefit of being reconnected to the relationship.

The problem is that we spend so much time and effort trying to change someone with ways that hurt our influence with them that we actually lose what we did have power over to start with.

The most important part of the boundary of power is gaining wisdom, so that we don't spend time and energy where we have no power and keep our influence where we do. The very familiar "Serenity Prayer" offers a great explanation:

"God, grant me the serenity (calm and without worry, stress or disturbance) to accept the things I cannot change (have no power over), the courage (the ability to face danger, difficulty, uncertainty, or pain without being overcome by fear or being detoured from a chosen course of action) to change the things I can (that I do have power over), and the wisdom to know the difference."

The Bible tells us in James

1:5 that "If anyone lacks wisdom, they should ask God, who gives generously to all without finding fault, and it will be given to him." This means that we can bring our problems to God and ask the question: Do I have power to change something in this situation, and if I do, where? When we do, He will generously give us wisdom without blaming and finding fault. Why would God do this? He wants us to have strong, healthy relationships ... because our hearts do matter.

Blessings,
Angie

What on earth am I here for?

I am now 63 years old. I have been a minister, a "burger flipper," a janitor, "Q-Tip" maker, an aircraft repairman, an insurance salesman and now a writer. These and other things people do are good, but don't go far enough. There is more to life than "doing."

I am a husband, a father, a grandfather, a son, a friend. These are more important than things I do, for they speak of relationships and love. Still, there is more to life than relationships with friends and loved ones. Even these don't go far enough.

I am a Christian, an (imperfect but grateful) possession of Jesus. This gets to the heart of our question, "What on earth am I here for?" Because it deals with my purpose.

As a Christian, I believe that God is Creator, and that "in the beginning GOD actually did what the Bible says He did. Mankind was made in His image, far different from monkeys. I believe there was a "big bang" but this was when God "spoke" and things 'happened' (Genesis 1 and 2). Faith and trust in God gives me reason and purpose for living. To take away God, is the same as taking away the stars from the sky, which are used by ships to find their way.

Jack Exum Jr.
jackexumjr@yahoo.com

As a Christian, my life is not based on 'doing' or 'having' or 'relating to others,' it is based on my relating to God through Jesus Christ, and in Him, all these other things find their meaning and proper place. In Him I find my genuine reason for being here.

The older I get, the more clearly I see that without Jesus, all I have is unanswered questions. Solomon, "did it all" and "had it all." He went after "pleasure," but this proved to be meaningless. "Laughter," he said, "is madness." He tried cheering himself with wine. (Sound familiar?) He wanted to see what was good for people to do ... during the few days of their lives. He undertook great projects: built great houses, planted vineyards, gardens and parks, with all kinds of fruit trees... He made reservoirs to water groves of trees. He had male and female slaves and had other slaves who were born into his house. He owned more herds and flocks than anyone in Jerusalem. He amassed silver and gold and treasures of kings and provinces. He had male and female singers, and a harem as well—all the delights of a man's heart. He became greater than anyone in Jerusalem who had ever live. He denied himself nothing. He refused his heart no pleasure. His heart took delight in all his labor, and this was the reward for all his work. Yet when he surveyed all that his hands had done and what he had worked to achieve, everything was meaningless, a chasing after the wind; nothing was gained under the sun. (Ecclesiastes 2:1-11).

The question, "What on earth am I here for?" is not answered in how many things one has, nor by friends or family, as vital as they are. The real meaning of life, and the beginning of wisdom is found in these simple words, "Now all has been heard; here is the conclusion of the matter: Fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the duty of all mankind" (Ecclesiastes 12:13).

President Lincoln visits school

Shining Star Academy of the Arts was honored recently with a visit from President Abraham Lincoln, as portrayed by actor Tad Allen. Students watched in amazement when they saw the pages of history come alive as the "President" spoke. "Honest Abe was more than a catchy slogan. For me it was a way of life," Allen said. Allen recited the Gettysburg Address and answered questions from the more than 235 students on the Shining Star Academy campus. Also pictured is Shining Star Academy Principal Tony Buzzella.

Zach Deputy disc jam, golf tourney set for March 8-10

From staff reports

LIVE OAK—Music artist and one man band Zach Deputy will entertain and hold his first disc jam and golf tournament March 8-10 at The Spirit of the Suwannee Music Park in Live Oak. Plans are to hold the event annually. While Zach Deputy will entertain at least once each day during the three-day event, other artists include The Legendary JC's, funkUs, Greensound, Herd of Watts, My Morning Fatty and Love Chunk.

Zach Deputy is a unique one-man band who had played the SOSMP many times during Bear Creek and other festivals.

Deputy, an emerging international musician, recording artist and avid disc golfer, looks forward to helping expand the game by turning new people on to disc golf. He first started playing disc golf as a way to get exercise while on tour and fell in love with the game.

The weekend kicks off March 8 with Long Pad

Doubles disc golf played on the SOSMP's disc Magnolia Disc Golf Course at 3 p.m. and entertainment in the amphitheater.

CHS baseball, softball fall to P.K. Yonge, ACD.

By BRANDON FINLEY
bfinley@lakecityreporter.com

It was a tough night on both diamonds as Columbia High's baseball and softball teams dropped games.

The Lady Tigers' loss was the first of the year for the softball team as Columbia fell, 8-4, to the state's top-ranked P.K. Yonge Blue Wave, 8-4.

On the baseball diamond, the Tigers fell, 14-4, to Arlington Country Day.

The Lady Tigers took a 2-0 lead in the bottom of the first inning after loading the bases with Lacey King, Kayli Kvistad and Brandy Morgan on the bases. A fielder's choice at home with Hollianne Dohrn at the plate moved Kvistad to third with the bases still loaded.

Caliegh McCauley singled to score Kvistad and Morgan for the 2-0 lead after the first inning.

P.K. Yonge got both runs back and scored an extra one to take a 3-2 lead after two innings.

Nikki Santiago and Nikkia Robinson scored off a double by Garland Evans and Taylor Knight scored off a bunt by Katie O'Dell for the Blue Wave's runs.

McCauley drove in her third run of the game in the bottom of the third inning to score Kvistad, who reached on a double earlier in the inning, and Morgan for a 4-3 lead.

O'Dell hit a solo shot in the top of the fourth inning to tie the game at 4-4.

The game remained tied heading into the sixth inning, but errors caught up with the Lady Tigers.

With the bases loaded after a couple of errors, O'Dell delivered a hit up the middle to score Knight and Sara Hendrix for a 6-4 lead.

Kassidy Kennard added the final damage for the Blue Wave with a hit to score Evans and O'Dell for the 8-4 lead heading into the bottom half of the sixth inning.

The Lady Tigers had runners in scoring position during their final two at-bats, but were unable to bring a runner home.

"Four runs was enough to beat them," Columbia head coach Jimmy Williams said. "They put the pressure on us when they needed to and they're just as good as advertised. That's why we signed up to play them three times. We need to know what it's like to play against teams of their championship caliber. We have to pick up our level of play against teams like that."

Columbia (7-1) plays host to Madison County High at 7 p.m. tonight.

On the baseball field, Columbia and Arlington Country Day played three scoreless innings before combining for four runs in the fourth.

Arlington Country Day had three runs in the top half of the fourth and never looked back on the way to the win.

Columbia got one back with Alex Milton scoring off of a Sam Bass single to make the score 3-1 heading into the fifth.

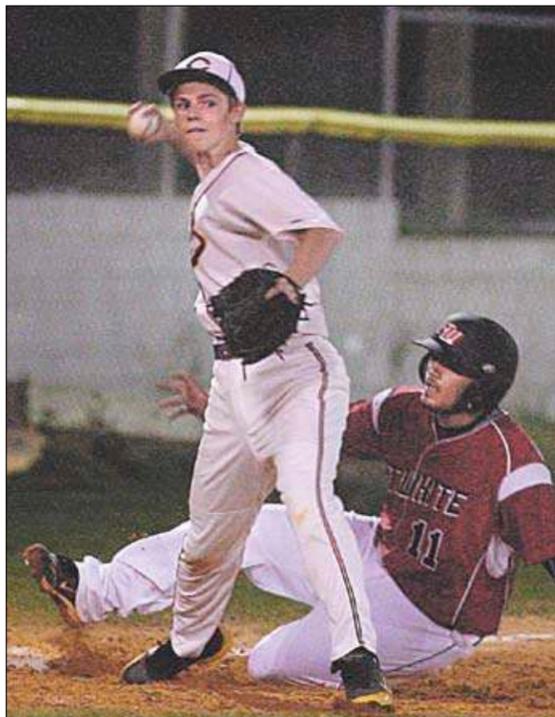

Arlington Country Day added 11 more runs in the next two innings.

The Tigers scored three runs in the bottom of the sixth for the 14-4 final.

Milton scored Jordan Culp off a double and Levi Hollingsworth scored off a Dalton Mauldin double. The Tigers' final run came off a ground ball by Caleb Vaughn to score Milton.

"We had a better approach at the plate tonight," Columbia head coach Jonathan Ulsh said. "Every ball they hit just dropped. The big thing is we didn't give up."

Columbia (1-3) travels to Lincoln at 6 p.m. today.

Yeguete, Frazier cleared to return to Florida hoops

Gators back at full strength after injury-filled year.

By MARK LONG
Associated Press

GAINESVILLE—Florida coach Billy Donovan is cautiously optimistic about his team's health.

Forward Will Yeguete and guard Michael Frazier II were cleared to practice and play Thursday, giving Donovan a full complement of players heading into Saturday's game against Alabama.

It's the first time in three weeks the eighth-ranked Gators (22-5, 12-3 Southeastern Conference) have been fully healthy.

But Donovan doesn't want his players putting too much stock in having Yeguete and Frazier back in the mix.

"They've got understand that they've got to step up and they've got to play and they cannot take the approach of, 'Well, we're a little bit deeper. We have more guys available,'" Donovan said. "Because I just don't know if Frazier and/or Yeguete are going to be really able to be able to really provide some significant minutes for us."

Yeguete, a 6-foot-7 junior averaging 6.0 points and 6.3 rebounds, missed the last six games following arthroscopic surgery on his right knee. Frazier, a 6-foot-4 freshman averaging 6.4 points, sat out Tuesday night's loss at Tennessee with a concussion.

Without them, the Gators pretty much went with a six-man rotation against the Volunteers and seemed to wear down in the second half.

Top NCAA executive speaks about 'messy and complex' business

By LARRY LAGE

Associated Press

The NCAA is enduring another barrage of criticism for how it handled another high-profile case.

Executive committee Chairwoman Lou Anna K. Simon said in an interview with The Associated Press on Thursday that the botched probe of Miami's athletic department should lead to change, but not at the top of the governing body.

Less than a week after NCAA President Mark Emmert got a vote of confidence from the executive committee, Simon insisted no one in a position of power is ready to push for a new leader.

"The committee, by and large, understands that this is a very messy and complex business," Simon, Michigan State's president, said in a telephone interview. "What the Miami case showed was that there is an embedded culture and set of processes and approaches that need to be changed."

The NCAA is alleging that former Miami booster Nevin Shapiro was responsible for providing about $170,000 in impermissible benefits to Hurricanes athletes, recruits, coaches and others between 2002 and 2010, according to a person who spoke Wednesday to the AP on condition of anonymity because neither Miami nor the NCAA has publicly released the allegations.

The NCAA, though, has acknowledged it can't use some ill-gotten findings in the probe of Miami because investigators working the case obtained information through depositions taken under subpoenas.

"The NCAA has an interesting way of behaving in enforcement cases that has been there for a very long time," Simon told the AP. "They try to create walls among people within the organization to make sure the investigation is not viewed as being controlled by the executive office. I am not sure that is a correct way to do it because it raises the question about who really is looking over (the enforcement staff), which is a legitimate set of questions to raise."

On the same day last week that Miami received its notice of allegations, which included a charge it lacked institutional control, Emmert announced NCAA vice president of enforcement Julie Roe Lach would be replaced.

"Obviously, this is an outcome that nobody wants to see on their watch or anyone else's," Emmert said Feb. 18. "This is something that's an embarrassment to the association and our staff."

DEAR ABBY

Son suspects dad's death was an assisted suicide

Abigail Van Buren
www.dearabby.com

DEAR ABBY: I'm convinced my father's wife killed him and I don't know where to turn. He had fought complications from quadruple bypass surgery for a few years, and had been in hospice for months prior to his death. My siblings and I didn't put all the pieces together until afterward.

Although I'm sure Dad was killed, based on facts and discussions with social workers, I'm pretty sure it was assisted suicide, which is illegal in most states, including the state where he lived. I feel cheated and angry at my father's wife for not having the guts to talk to us about his plans, and Dad for relying on her to tell us when she never had a good relationship with any of us. I'm also angry with myself for not stopping what I witnessed as it happened before my eyes. How could I have been so blind?

It has been several years now, and I still feel guilty for letting it happen, although I'm not sure how I could have stopped it. Your thoughts would be appreciated. - ANGRY SON IN GEORGIA

DEAR ANGRY SON: I'm sorry for your pain and anger, emotions that are not uncommon when a loved one dies. But for your own sake, accept that if your father had an advance health care directive, and trusted his wife to carry it out, then she was following his wishes. While today's medical interventions can prolong someone's life, they can also prolong death.

Hospice offers grief counseling for family members for a period of time after a death occurs, and you and your siblings should have received some. It would have helped you to stop blaming the wife, and let go of any negative feelings so you could go on with your life. And that, I assure you, is what your father would have wanted.

DEAR ABBY: My sister "Mary" was in a car accident when she was in her 20s that left her with some brain damage. She appears normal, but has trouble with interpersonal relations, boundaries and impulse control. Overall, her behavior varies from acceptable to belligerent. When she was evaluated by professionals years ago, our family was advised to set standards for her behavior as near to normal as possible.

When we go to restaurants, Mary has a hard time deciding what to order, often engaging the server in an uncomfortable, long conversation about the alternatives. When her meal arrives, she is rarely satisfied with her choice and makes a scene over her dissatisfaction to the server. If we try to intervene, she becomes even more belligerent.

She looks forward to going out and we love her dearly. We would hate to exclude her from these family outings, but we don't know what to do. Can you help? - IMPOSSIBLE TO DIGEST IN WASHINGTON STATE

DEAR IMPOSSIBLE TO DIGEST: Because you were told to "set standards" for your sister as near to normal as possible, that's what you should be doing. Before you take her out for a meal, explain to her what the ground rules are. If she acts out, do as you would with an unruly child and leave the restaurant until she regains control of herself.

Because of her impairment, she may need extra help with her menu choices. Luckily, many restaurants now post their menus online. If you print one out and go over it with Mary, you might be able to make the process of ordering easier for her. I can't promise it will work, but it's certainly worth a try.

** ** *

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old female from the West Coast. I am home-schooled and don't have many friends because I score high in tests, meaning I retain more information than the average person.

On the rare occasion that I mingle with children my own age, they call me unpleasant names, play pranks on me and otherwise torture me. I had to change my emergency cellphone number and start using my sister's because there have been so many immature and insulting prank calls.

I hate it. I can't help that I am smart, and I refuse to degrade myself by dumbing down my actions and speech because they can't handle their insecurities.

- HIGH IQ
DEAR HIGH IQ: Being "different" isn't easy, and clearly you are very intelligent. But you and your parents should understand that crank calls are not "pranks" - they are a form of bullying and should have been reported when they happened.

Most parents who home-school also network with other home-schooling parents so their children can socialize with peers. If your parents haven't done this, I recommend you discuss it with them. You might also meet more intellectually advanced young people if you joined special-interest groups for older students.

Your high IQ might be less threatening to the students who have given you trouble if you volunteer to tutor some of them who need help with their schoolwork. (Just don't fall into the trap of doing it FOR them.)

DEAR ABBY: I have been with my boyfriend, "Dan," for almost five years. He's wonderful and we have a great relationship. We have talked about spending our lives together, but had mutually agreed in the beginning that marriage wasn't a priority for either of us. He has said for years that he never wanted to marry - which is fine with me.

I now suspect that he's planning to propose to me on our fifth anniversary. (He has never been great at hiding surprises.)

I'm thrilled that he wants to make that kind of commitment, and I want nothing more than to spend the rest of my life with him, but the thought of marriage scares me. I don't know if it's nerves about the pending proposal or that I have never planned on marriage and now I have to think about all the stress and strife that comes with planning a wedding.

I want to say yes, but I love the way things are right now, and I know that marriage will change things. What, if anything, do I say to him? - COLD FEET? IN SALT LAKE CITY

DEAR COLD FEET?: I wish you had mentioned why you think being married to Dan would "change things." If you've been happy together for five years, it's unlikely that making a formal commitment would damage the special relationship you have together.

Perhaps this is "old school," but I feel that if couples plan to bring children into the world, they should be married. Because you want nothing more than to spend the rest of your life with Dan, and are concerned about the stress of planning a wedding, when he pops the question, I suggest you say, "Yes - why don't we elope?"

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Listen carefully and avoid being sanctimonious. It's best to do your own thing and allow others the same privilege. At the end of the day you have to be good about what you accomplished, not what everyone else has done. ★★★

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): It's what you offer to do that will separate you from others. Don't let someone limit or interfere in your life or with your work. Make it clear what your goal is and how you are going to proceed. ★★★

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): False information or confusing signals will lead you down a difficult path. If you aren't sure what's being asked of you, question your motives and those of the person you are dealing with. ★★★★★

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Stop dreaming and start doing. You have some wonderful ideas that must be implemented if you want to get ahead. Discover what you are capable of doing by presenting what you have to offer to friends, family and clients. ★★

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Fix up your home or nurture an important relationship. Set aside funds to make domestic changes that will alter your life. A move, trip or involvement with an unusual group or lifestyle will enlighten you and your future. ★★

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Make plans to get together with friends, family, or take part in a community event. The people you meet and the exchanges you make with interesting people will shape the way you do things in the future. Love is on the rise. ★★★★★

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Finish work before you decide to take off on an adventure. Attending a reunion or visiting a place you haven't been to for a long time will open up new possibilities with someone from your past. Change is upon you. ★★★★★

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Plan to have some fun or work toward a goal that is creative or will improve your living arrangements. Love is highlighted and romance should be scheduled into your busy day. A commitment or promise will make you happy. ★★★★★

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Pay close attention to what transpires between you and the people you encounter. Friends, family and acquaintances may lead you astray intentionally. Don't shy away from the truth. Ask direct questions. It's better to know than to appear naive. ★★★★★

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A positive change to the way you are living is apparent. Put your skills to the test and you will land a position that is interesting, unusual and pays you what you are worth. A celebration will lead to love. ★★

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Take care of legal or financial matters. The sooner you clear up any misconceptions, the better. Changing your living arrangements will allow you greater freedom to explore new interests. Someone from your past will surface. ★★★★★

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take care of business. Contracts and agreements should be dealt with and put to rest. An important relationship can bring you closer to your goals. Ask questions if you don't know where you stand. Face facts and move forward. ★★★★★

Japan favorite in World Baseball Classic

By JANIE McCAULEY
Associated Press

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — They'll play in the Far East and the Far West — and in the Caribbean, too. Wherever they are, Miguel Cabrera and R.A. Dickey and dozens of All-Stars in the World Baseball Classic know the team to beat: two-time WBC winner Japan.

The Japanese are hoping to defend their title in the third edition of baseball's global tournament, having topped Cuba in the inaugural Classic in 2006 and South Korea three years later.

To do it, Japan — with a roster that doesn't include a single player from Major League Baseball — will have to win two rounds at home and then the semifinals and final at San Francisco's AT&T Park.

In their way will be an American team led by Dickey, Ryan Braun and Joe Mauer, trying to make up for a couple of underwhelming WBC showings — and featuring Joe Torre's return to the top step of the dugout.

Team USA has plenty of motivation. The Americans didn't get out of the second round in 2006, then lost in the semifinals to Japan three years later.

"We'll probably be disappointed if we don't make it to San Francisco," said Giants right-hander Ryan Vogelsong, slated to be the No. 2 starter in the U.S. rotation. "First and foremost, we're focused on getting there."

Japan's pro teams are known for their rigorous spring training regimen, which typically begins a couple of weeks before the major league clubs and feature all-day workouts with just a short break to eat.

"It's such a dedicated group of players. I go back to going over to Japan as a member of the Mets back in '74 and just noticing and at that time I didn't think necessarily that the Japanese could play at our level, maybe stature-wise," Torre said. "Even though their game was clean and disciplined, it just didn't look like they were as good as we were. That's certainly has changed."

Rockies slugger Carlos Gonzalez will play alongside San Francisco's Pablo Sandoval and Triple Crown winner Cabrera for Venezuela. The World Series champion Giants have had to plan carefully this spring to get through the Cactus League with much of their roster headed to the WBC — Marco Scutaro on Venezuela, Angel Pagan and Andres Torres on Puerto Rico, Vogelsong and reliever Jeremy Affeldt on the U.S. team, closer Sergio Romo pitching for Mexico.

"It's my first time representing and I'm really looking forward to doing it," Pagan said. "The first two Classics I couldn't do it because I was either trying to make a team or I was trying to be the everyday player. It fills my heart to go out there and play in front of my countrymen and in front of my family. I did it when I played in New York and Puerto Rico but it's not the same when you're wearing the P.R. jersey."

And CarGo sure is confident in Venezuela's chances.

"I don't think we need practice — Venezuela doesn't need practice," he said. "Japan, they train together for a long time and get prepared for that. We don't really get prepared for that ... put the uniform on, let's play."

In all, 45 big league all-stars, including seven MVPs, were on the final WBC rosters.

Many MLB players are torn between playing for their country or playing for the club that signs their paycheck — especially those who might be on the bubble of making a major league roster or earning a starting job.

Gonzalez said the Venezuelans feel tremendous pressure to take part in the Classic, yet he understands why Seattle ace Felix Hernandez has passed after signing a $175 million, seven-year contract earlier this month that made him the highest-paid pitcher in baseball.

"You have to represent your team," Gonzalez said. "You see all the news about King Felix not playing for Venezuela and the whole country changes, they get upset that you're not going to play for your country. They think it's all about the money but, you know what, we've been working since we were 16 years old and we came from Venezuela to represent. ... I think made the right choice."

The inaugural 2006 Classic featured a pool-play format, while 2009 was double-elimination — and this one will be a combination of both. The first round will be pool play, with the top two teams advancing. The second round is double-elimination, and the top two teams from each group will reach the semifinals.

The Americans will play their round-robin games at the Arizona Diamondbacks' Chase Field in Phoenix. The other first-round groups will play in: Fukuoka, Japan; Taichung, Taiwan; and, San Juan, Puerto Rico.

"The guys who have played this before were excited to get back to it," Torre said. "I think it's still something to get a little used to. Let's admit it, you play the USA team, MLB, even though there are a number of MLB players obviously playing for other countries, it's like putting on your Sunday best, you know, We're excited because we have a chance to beat them at their own game' so to speak."

Semifinals will be played March 17-18, with the championship March 19 in the Giants' waterfront ballpark.

That's where Sandoval cleared the fences three times in a Game 1 World Series win against the Tigers.

The guy known as Kung Fu Panda hopes to find his groove again for his country. If he does, and his nation wins it all, Sandoval will be World Series, Venezuelan and WBC titles to his credit.

"I'm trying to get the Triple Crown," Sandoval said.

WATCH FOR:

■ Animated crowds with a different flavor than the regular MLB fans. Expect musical instruments, patriotic chants, face paint and flags. More than 1.5 million fans have attended games in first two WBC tournaments.

■ This year's 16-team field was drawn from the top 12 nations in the last WBC, plus four others who qualified in a tournament last year. The WBC winner will be named "world champion" for the first time.

■ Americans on a mission: Team USA failed to reach the championship game of the first two Classics.

■ Players will be subject to drug testing by the World Anti-Doping Agency.

■ San Juan will host games for the third time at Hiram Bithorn Stadium, to be played March 7-10.

■ Sparkling new Salt River Fields at Talking Stick, the shared spring venue of the Arizona Diamondbacks and Colorado Rockies, will be on display for the world to see. The ballpark hosts Pool D games between the U.S., Italy, Mexico and qualifier Canada.

Branden Grace, DeLaet share early lead at Honda

By DOUG FERGUSON
Associated Press

PALM BEACH GARDENS — Branden Grace was downright bullish when it came to the "Bear's Trap" on Thursday in the Honda Classic.

Grace knew from television and from Charl Schwartzel about the notorious four-hole closing stretch at PGA National. It didn't seem to bother him Thursday when he birdied every hole in the "Bear's Trap" — Nos. 15, 16 and 17 — and added a birdie on the 18th for a 5-under 65 that gave him a share of the lead with Graham DeLaet of Canada among early starters.

Dustin Johnson finally got his game on track to join the group at 66.

Tiger Woods turned around his fortunes with one risky decision. He stepped into the water left of the sixth fairway to play a shot that was half-submerged in a creek, turning a likely double bogey into a par that enabled him to salvage a 70.

Grace, part of the core group of young South Africans on the rise, is making his Honda Classic debut.

"I sat down with Charl last week at the Match Play and he said, 'Listen, the four finishing holes are quite a beast out there.' So I was a little nervous coming here," Grace said. "I just thought, 'What's going to happen around that corner?'"

The first one was easy after a tee shot into 2 feet on the par-3 15th. He holed birdie putts of about 18 feet on the next two holes, and then his 3-iron barely cleared the water in front of the green on the par-5 18th, leading to a simple up-and-down to finish in style.

Some of the tees were moved forward because of rain earlier in the week that softened the course, and players were allowed to lift, clean and replace their golf balls. PGA National is converted into a par 70 for the tournament, however, which keeps scoring at a premium.

"This is a golf course that you have to really hit good shots," said DeLaet, who missed only one green in regulation. "You can save yourself with a few putts here and there, but if you're hitting it poorly, it's going to eventually catch up to you."

Woods didn't hit it all that poorly, except for his tee shot on the par-4 sixth, with the tees moved forward 40 yards. He drove it left and down the bank into the water. Because of where it first crossed the hazard, he would have had no chance to get near the green after a penalty drop. Woods saw enough the ball to give it a shot.

He removed his shoes and socks as the gallery came to life, and then put on rain pants and removed his sweater. The ball shot out with a big splash, leaving Woods about 80 yards to a front pin. He hit wedge to 8 feet and saved par.

"I wasn't trying to advance it very far, just make sure I got it back in the fairway and give myself some kind of wedge shot in there, which I did,"

Woods said. "I was 1 over at the time, and if that ball is not playable from where it's at, where I crossed was pretty far back. ... Looking at 6 — 3 over — and all of a sudden I flip it, make par there and birdie the next."

Woods said it was an otherwise boring round, and he was right. He dropped one shot from the middle of the 10th fairway (his first hole), and another when his plan to hit a cut from around a palm bush didn't go as far as he wanted and left him a long, tough bunker shot.

Rory McIlroy, the No. 1 player in the world and the defending champion, was among those who played in the afternoon.

Johnson, playing alongside Woods, was coming off a miserable stretch of golf in which he missed the cut at Pebble Beach, missed the cut at Riviera and then was bounced from the first round of the Match Play Championship by Alex Noren.

But he spent enough time at home in south Florida with Claude Harmon III, mostly on his driver. His miss was a hook, and it was a big miss. This time, he kept the ball in the short grass for most of the cool, cloudy morning and took advantage of his birdie chances.

The weather didn't get much better at the start of the Florida swing.

Livestrong enters post-Armstrong era

By MICHAEL TARM
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Leaders of the cancer charity founded by Lance Armstrong struck a determined, sometimes defiant tone on Thursday as they declared the organization will persevere in the wake of the cyclist's admission that he used performance-enhancing drugs.

"I am on safe ground to say that the past year did not go as planned," Livestrong's executive vice president Andy Miller said at The Livestrong Foundation's annual meeting in Chicago. "Things happen that we cannot control — cancer has taught us that. What do we do? We adapt."

He added later, "This is our message to the world: The Livestrong Foundation is not going anywhere."

The meeting, its first such gathering since Armstrong's troubled departure in October, comes amid a swirl of uncertainty about whether donors could back away or whether people worldwide will stop showing their support by purchasing the foundation's trademark yellow "Livestrong" bracelets.

Addressing some 500 people in his 30-minute keynote speech, Miller mentioned Armstrong by name only four times. But there was no mistaking what he meant by the foundation being "caught in the crossfire of the media frenzy."

"We faced headwinds that were not only stiff, but heartbreaking," Miller said, without getting more specific.

Armstrong won seven Tour de France titles — all of which were stripped in August. He also is banned for life from sports. He stepped down as chairman of the charity in October, Livestrong Foundation's executive vice president Andy Miller speaks at its annual meeting Thursday in Chicago. Leaders of the cancer charity founded by Lance Armstrong said at the first such gathering since Armstrong was engulfed in scandal that the organization will persevere in the wake of the cyclist's admission that he used performance-enhancing drugs.

saying he didn't want his association to damage the foundation's ability to raise money and continue its advocacy programs on behalf of people with cancer.

Livestrong's president, Doug Ulman, echoed Miller's sentiments in prepared remarks.

"Our success has never been based on one person," said Ulman, who was unable to deliver the speech in person because of travel delays. "Will the Livestrong Foundation survive? Yes. Absolutely, yes. Hell, yes."

A common theme Thursday was disappointment in Armstrong's actions but gratitude for how he parlayed his fame into raising cancer awareness.

"We were deeply disappointed when we learned along with the rest of the world that we had been misled during and after Lance's cycling career," Miller said. "We accepted the apology ... and we remain grateful for what he decided to create and helped build."

Among the steps the organization is taking to establish a new identity is to change its day of action each year from Oct. 2 — the date in 1996 that Armstrong was diagnosed with cancer — to May 17, the group announced Thursday.

On that day in 2004, the charity launched their yellow bands. Since then, 87 million have been sold, Katherine McLane, the group's executive vice president for communications, said.

"The foundation is charting its own course without the founder since its inception," she said in an interview. "It's a challenge. It might be a rocky road in 2013. But we are thinking in terms of the next five years."

There has been no indication, she said, that donors are distancing themselves from the charity, which raised $48 million in 2012. That was 2 or 3 percent less than fundraising in 2011 but consistent with slight dropoffs other foundations saw in a still-struggling economy, she said.

The cyclist created the organization — originally called the Lance Armstrong

Foundation — in Austin, Texas, in 1997 while he was being treated for testicular cancer that had spread to his brain and lungs. Doctors gave him 50-50 odds of surviving.

Throughout his career, Armstrong always denied drug use, but earlier this year, he admitted during an interview with Oprah Winfrey that he used performance-enhancing drugs.

He told Winfrey that leaving Livestrong was the most "humbling" experience after the revelations about his drug use broke.

"I wouldn't at all say forced out, told to leave," he told Winfrey about Livestrong. "I was aware of the pressure. But it hurt like hell."

"That was the lowest," Armstrong said. "The lowest."

In an interview later Thursday, Miller said Armstrong wasn't formally asked to resign after admitting the use of performance-enhancing drugs. It wasn't even clear, he added, that there was a provision in the organization's bylaws to ask the founder to leave.

"It ultimately had to be his decision," he said.

During his time as chairman, Armstrong was the biggest single donor to the foundation, and Miller declined to say if Armstrong might continue to contribute or whether — at some point — he could be asked to play a role in the charity again.

But when asked if Livestrong would ever seek a new celebrity to be its face, he was quick to answer.

"No. ... We won't go that route," he said. "It's risky for any organization to have one person as a spokesman — to put all your eggs in one basket. If something happens to that person, you're in trouble."

Scouting combine shows NFL's global progress

By MICHAEL MAROT
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Ezekiel "Ziggy" Ansah knew nothing about the NFL when he was growing up. Now, he could be a first-round pick in April's draft.

Ansah played soccer in Ghana as a kid, came to America to play basketball at Brigham Young and, after getting cut twice, finally took the advice of his track coach and tried out for football. The first time he put on football pads, as a sophomore in 2010, he looked like the Michelin man with things in all the wrong places. Until last fall, he had never started a game.

These days, NFL scouts are drooling over his potential.

"I try to stay up late and watch NFL Network. I see some things," Ansah said. "This is going to be my life, so I just try to suck it all in."

Ansah has been a sponge in this new world order of pro football, where anyone on Earth seemingly can apply for a job. Some men who made it to this year's 333-player combine were born or reared in Australia, England, Estonia, Germany, Jamaica, Japan, Liberia and Tonga.

Sure, the NFL has a history with players from the Pacific Rim and Africa. Some fans will remember Christian Okeme, nicknamed the Nigerian Nightmare, or Jack Thompson, known as the Throwin' Samoan.

Maybe this should have been expected given the league's conscientious effort to expand its global reach, though the NFL still lags behind Major League Baseball, the MLS, the NBA and the NHL. NFL officials have been scheduling regular-season games annually in London since 2007 and will play two regular-season games there in 2013. Buffalo has played five times in Toronto and has signed an agreement to play at least one game per season there for the next five years. The NFL also has staged preseason games in Mexico City and Tokyo in the past.

Twice, league officials tried to create a European developmental league, a venture that ended in 2007.

But now the results are rolling in.

Ansah played well at the Senior Bowl in January and only cemented his top 15 status by measuring in at 6-foot-5, 271 pounds and finishing the 40-yard dash in 4.63 seconds. Some have questioned his practice habits, but the one guy who has worked up close and personal with him, Lions coach Jim Schwartz, disagrees. Schwartz coached Ansah during Senior Bowl week.

"I think the most important thing in football and scouting is how they play," Schwartz said. "He played well in the game and just like this — it's important what you run a 40."

Female kicker set for NFL regional combine tryout

By DAN GELSTON
Associated Press

Lauren Silberman has a scant chance at making the NFL.

Silberman never kicked anything more than a soccer ball in an organized game and she just started practicing long-range field goals.

Even so, the first female kicker scheduled to try out at an NFL regional scouting combine would like to see where her new hobby will take her. In an era where Danica Patrick can contend against men in motor sports, Silberman is about to take a big kick forward for female athletes, even if the odds are clearly stacked against her. The 28-year-old Silberman will kick Sunday at the New York Jets' training facility in Florham Park, N.J.

"I realize that I may not make an NFL team this year," Silberman told NFL.com. "But for me, I'm expecting to have fun, to meet really interesting people and hopefully perfect my technique from the other tremendous kickers that will be in attendance."

Her goal for the weekend is a true long shot — perfect 60-yard field goals.

Odds are, though, that scouts will want to see her connect on extra points and chip-shot field goals with some consistency before moving on to the heavy kicking.

Silberman will compete against more accomplished or polished college kickers, all hoping to prove they have the leg strength and accuracy worthy of earning an invite to an NFL training camp. St. Louis Rams kicker Greg Zuerlein participated in a regional combine last year before he was drafted and morphed into "Legatron."

Cincinnati Bengals special teams coach Darrin Simmons said teams look for several things specifically when judging kickers in these situations. The most important is leg strength, followed by accuracy on field goals over 40 yards, and how they did on clutch kicks in college.

"When rating field goals, the deepest we test at the combine is a 50-yard field goal. There's not many attempts over 55 yards. We don't practice kicks much deeper than that — rarely do we do them," Simmons said. "You can tell after watching a 50-yard field goal how far the ball goes over the crossbar if they can hit from 55. They've got to be able to hit from 55. On kickoffs, they've got to be able to get the ball out of the back of the end zone."

Silberman won't be kicking against the best of the sure-footed prospects, but there will be talent there regardless. The regional combines debuted in 2011, and feature players who weren't among the 333 invited to the main combine in Indianapolis. So no first-round picks are likely to show, only potential, hidden, undrafted gems or late-round risks. The league is holding these sessions in 10 cities this season, with the most impressive players advancing to a super-regional in April in Dallas. It's sort of the sports version of a TV reality show, where each hit and tackle can wow a scout and move a player on to the next round.

Only instead of a recording contract, it's an NFL one.

"It's all up to those guys. If you're talented enough, you're going to get recognized. And if you put up good numbers, the numbers don't lie," said Doug Whaley, assistant general manager/director of player personnel for the Buffalo Bills. "That's one of the things about the combine part of this business. It's the least subjective part of the business. And it's really objective, because you're looking at numbers."

She hasn't treated the tryout like a publicity stunt. But Silberman, whose NFL.com bio listed her as a former club soccer player at Wisconsin, seems to understand what she's up against. More likely, she wanted to use the weekend as an opportunity to promote greater diversity in football.

"It would be a great opportunity to attract more women to the sport," she said. "Hopefully, I'll have a good line that won't let anyone through to tackle me."

The possibility also exists that Silberman can use this opportunity as a stepping-stone to other ventures. Public speaking, perhaps, or even some sports marketing.

"The real upside is if she reaches the next level," said Steve Rosner, a partner with 16W Marketing in New Jersey. "Kickers, in general, aren't brands. Very rare. Even someone like Adam Vinatieri, who (has won) Super Bowls, would have to do a little more than kick to capitalize and endorse at the national level. The one thing she has, that they don't have, is that she's a woman. The uniqueness of her and the possible success she has will differentiate what she has at that position."

While a female has never played in the NFL, if the gender breakthrough did happen, it most likely would be at kicker.

Females have kicked or tried out for a roster spot in the college ranks for years. Just last season, former LSU women's soccer goalkeeper Mo Isom tried out for as a Tigers place-kicker. In 2003, Katie Hnida became the first woman to kick for an NCAA Division I-A football team, scoring in one game for the University of New Mexico.

Hnida, who later kicked for the Fort Wayne Firehawks of the Continental Indoor Football League, was surprised a player with no true kicking background would be scouted at a combine.

"I thought it would be an athlete who has come through the ranks of playing football for a long time," she said. "It is so different kicking in a live situation, too, dealing with the timing of the snap, having guys rushing at you. That's where you separate the good from the great."

Sean Landeta, a Super Bowl champion and considered one of the NFL's great punters, gave Silberman credit for competing, one way or the other.

"I think it's courageous on her part in trying this, and certainly groundbreaking if she could prove her skills are good enough to play in the NFL," he said. "What a team's policy would be as far as entertaining the thought in signing a female, that's still debatable."

GATORS: Play Tide in first test at full-strength since return from injury

JASON MATTHEW WALKER/Lake City Reporter

Florida guard Michael Frazier II wins a rebound while playing against Georgia during a game on Jan. 9.

also went down with what looked like a concussion in the final minutes against Tennessee. But Donovan says Prather, who missed four games early in the season because of a concussion, passed baseline tests and is fine.

“Obviously, it’s great to have those guys back,” forward Erik Murphy said. “You know, it gives us back a full team, at full strength. But I think that doesn’t give us any reason to expect anything out of them. ... We can’t expect too much out of those guys. Everybody’s got to stay on edge, continue to stay focused and do what they’re doing.”

Yeguete’s injury caused the most concern.

Initially, Donovan said the Frenchman would miss at least the remainder of the regular season. But Yeguete’s knee responded well following surgery to remove loose bodies Feb. 8.

Yeguete has been running and cutting more than a week, but hadn’t practiced fully until Thursday.

“I have no idea right now,” Donovan said before practice. “My expectation on him going into the game is not very high just because I haven’t seen him play. Obviously, he’s got two days to practice, but I would be hard-pressed to believe he’s going to be the same player he was before he went down with his injury. It’ll probably take him some time to get back, but at least he can start working to get back in shape and get back in rhythm and timing and those kinds of things.”

Yeguete, who also missed several games late last season, was nervous and eager to get back on the court.

“I feel like a little kid right now,” he said. “I’m a little excited to get back out there. I feel like it’s been a minute since I played with those guys and on the court and competing. But at the same time, I’m not going to be like 100 percent and not going to be able to go up and down for 30 minutes like a regular practice. So it’s going to take time. It’s going to be a process. I think the coaches know that, and I’m ready to go whenever they want me to

Yeguete still has to get used to playing with a bulky knee brace.

“I feel like I’m not free,” he said. “My knee is still kind of strapped up or something, but if that’s what I have to do and the safest thing to do, I have to play with it and just get used to it. It was a bit harder in the beginning, but now I’m getting used to it.”

The Tide (19-9, 11-4) is the first test.

The game also could decide the regular-season title. A win would put the Gators, who are 13-0 at home this season, two games up over Alabama with two to play.

Florida, though, cares more about getting healthy in time for the postseason.

“I always get nervous when guys miss practice and games because there is a rhythm that you kind of miss out on — the normal routine of going through practice, going through shooting, going through individual instruction and game preparation, getting ready to play.”

Nationwide car goes airborne; Johnson wins Daytona 500

The horrifying crash at the end of Saturday's Nationwide Series race at Daytona International Speedway sent parts of Kyle Larson's car flying into the grandstands, injuring 28 fans — up to 30-something by some reports — and raising questions of the safety of auto racing, particularly at the faster race tracks like Daytona and its sister track, Talladega Superspeedway.

Race winner Tony Stewart, who skipped most of the traditional post-race ritual out of respect to the injured fans, described his view during his brief comments just after the race: "I looked in the mirror, and that's the worst image I've ever seen in a race in my life."

But others before him have had similar experiences over the years, particularly at the two giant tracks, both of which were designed decades ago with maximum speed in mind.

Daytona, opened in 1959, is 2.5-miles long, with the turns banked 31 degrees and the tri-oval at 18. Talladega, which held its first race 10 years later, is slightly longer at 2.66 miles. Its turns were tweaked for even higher speeds than Daytona, with a more sweeping layout and higher banking at 33 degrees.

But about the time Talladega opened, the technology on the race cars had outrun the safety of the race tracks. Bob Welburn won the pole for the first Daytona 500 with a speed of 140.121 miles per hour. Talladega's first race saw Bobby Isaac win the pole with a lap at 196.386 mph, but Charlie Glotzbach, in the second qualifying round, went even faster, qualifying at 199.466 mph.

After tires began to fail at those speeds, most of NASCAR's top drivers boycotted the race, and Richard Brickhouse drove Glotzbach's car to victory.

Since that first Talladega race, NASCAR has struggled to find a way to deal with the speeds at Daytona and Talladega. In 1987, Bill Elliott qualified at a record 212.809 mph at Talladega, but on the 21st lap of that race, the Buick of outside pole-sitter Bobby Allison flew into the catch-fence on the frontstretch, ripping down the fence, sending parts flying and injuring five fans.

NASCAR responded by placing speed-dampening restrictor plates on the engines of the cars at Daytona and Talladega. But teams and drivers kept working to make them fast again, using technology in the race shops and tactics like push drafting on the tracks.

While some have suggested reducing the banking or adding a bus-stop-like detour on the backstretch, both tracks remain unchanged, and both were recently repaved in their original configurations.

In 2009 at Talladega, Carl Edwards' car, running at nearly 200 miles per hour, being pushed by Brad Keselowski and racing for the win on the last lap, sailed into the catchfence, injuring seven.

At that time, the response of NASCAR officials was similar to last Saturday's, which also occurred because drivers were pushing each other for the win. They pointed out that the catchfence kept the entire car out of the grandstand, and the situation was being studied.

Catchfences were built higher and stronger at many tracks, including Daytona and Talladega, after Edwards' wreck, and officials continued to try to figure out how to have racing there that is relatively safe, but not boring.

Last Saturday night, officials were back in the same spot their colleagues at Talladega were in 2009.

Daytona track president Joie Chitwood III said: "Following the incident, we responded appropriately according to our safety protocols, and had emergency medical personnel at the incident immediately. We transported 14 people off property and treated 14 people at our on-track care center. We're in the process of repairing the facility and will be ready to go racing [Sunday]."

NASCAR president Steve O'Donnell was asked what can be done to prevent future occurrences.

His answer: "I think we look at this after every incident. We've learned in the past certain protocols put in place today are a result of prior incidents. Again, our initial evaluation is still ongoing. But it's certainly something we'll look at. If we can improve upon it, we'll certainly put that in play as soon as we can."

The situation this past weekend brings to mind the final words ever written by the one-time leader of the NASCAR print media corps, David Poole of the Charlotte Observer.

Poole died of a massive heart attack two days after Edwards' crash. His final paragraphs were:

"All I want is for someone to tell me what's acceptable. We apparently established Sunday that seven fans being injured — one spent the night in a hospital with a broken jaw — is OK.

"It seems we've decided we can live with that much damage being done to the sport's customers for 'good racing.'

"How many people have to be listed in 'guarded' or 'critical' condition before we say that's too much?"

"Is it lead changes? If we have fewer than five fans hurt for every lead change, is that acceptable?"

"Does somebody have to die before we've decided we don't have control?"

Johnson celebrates in victory lane after winning the Daytona 500.

Patrick's Daytona 500 a female best; 'learning curve' ahead

From the start of Speedweeks through the closing stages of the Daytona 500, an overwhelming amount of focus was on Danica Patrick, first for her romance with fellow Sprint Cup rookie Ricky Stenhouse Jr., then for her winning the pole for the 500.

It continued on Sunday in the race as Patrick ran among the leaders all day and even became the first woman to lead the 500 under the green flag, when she took the top spot for the first time on Lap 90. She wound up leading five laps.

But with 10 laps to go, Jimmie Johnson, who had ridden under the media radar for most of Speedweeks, surged past Brad Keselowski into the lead and held it the rest of the way to score his second Daytona 500 victory.

Johnson, who stuck to single-car runs throughout the pre-race practices, said his speed at the end of the race shouldn't have come as a surprise to anyone.

"At the end when it was time to go, I knew we had a straight race car with no scratches on it," he said. "We worked real hard. We had a game plan down here every time. Even though we were in single-car drafts [in practice], we had an agenda and things we worked on and made the car a little bit better each day, kept perfecting it."

"I had one heck of a race car."

He said that just because the media attention was elsewhere, it didn't mean those truly in the know were caught off-guard.

"I guess I was quiet in the overall spectrum of things from the media side," he said. "I think people in the garage, people knew we were sitting on a lot of speed and had a very good race car."

Johnson said the key to his win was the pass of Keselowski with 10 laps to go, just before the caution flag flew. Because he was leading, he got to choose which lane he'd be in for the restart. He picked the preferred lane up high, and Keselowski wasn't able to overcome the disadvantage, and faded to fourth behind the surging duo of Dale Earnhardt Jr. and Mark Martin, who finished second and third, respectively.

Danica Patrick high-fives the crowd during driver introductions prior to the Daytona 500 on Feb. 24.

Patrick lined up third on the deciding restart, but faded to eighth at the end, which still was the best-ever Daytona 500 finish by a female. Sara Christian holds the all-time Cup record with a fifth-place finish at Pittsburgh in 1949.

Patrick said she needed more experience to truly contend for victory.

"I really didn't feel like I had a great grasp as to 'how do you go win this race,'" she said. "I hadn't wrapped my head around exactly how that was going to happen."

"I kept thinking about it out there, because for the most part I was running half throttle for most of the race, running in the line. I will know better for next time and for Talladega. I mean the same stuff will probably apply."

Johnson was among those praising Patrick for her performance.

"Being close to other competitors, door-to-door, whatever environment takes place on the race track, at these speeds, she was very comfortable, took advantage of runs when she had them," he said. "She did a really good job."

But Johnson cautioned that Patrick's success at Daytona isn't a sign that she'll be a contender when the circuit moves to other types of tracks.

"I think the style of race track really suits her," he said. "When we get to the other tracks, she has a tall learning curve ahead of her."

Johnson also has some learning to do, as he and his crew chief Chad Knaus prepare to race NASCAR's new Gen-6 race cars on the flat mile at Phoenix International Raceway this week and at the 1.5-mile Las Vegas Motor Speedway the week after.

Their Daytona 500 win won't be any help there, said Knaus, who was enjoying his first Daytona 500 win, as he was suspended from NASCAR when Johnson won in 2006.

"That's the thing that's difficult about our sport," he said. "You've got to move on relatively quickly and put the good things and the bad things behind you."

NOTEBOOK

Little-funded teams score big

The Daytona 500, NASCAR's richest race, sometimes rewards those on the lower end of the financial ladder.

In 2005, journeyman driver Kevin Lepage finished ninth driving for maverick car owner John Carter. In 2011, David Gilliland finished third in Bob Jenkins' modestly funded No. 34 Ford. And this year, Michael McDowell and J.J. Yeley, both of whom have been relegated to start-and-park efforts in recent seasons, finished ninth and 10th, respectively.

McDowell, whose career average finish is a dismal 37.8, got his first-ever top-10 finish but stayed out of trouble, running a smart race and running the entire race.

"We were in a good position there at the end and just stayed out of trouble," he said. "Every time I would pull to the bottom to try and make a move I wouldn't be able to pull it off, so the last 30 laps I committed to the top. I said to myself, 'I'm not moving. I'm not even going to try anything. I'm just going to ride right here,' and made up a lot of spots there coming to the white and coming to the checkered ..."

"For us, an under-funded team, to come here to Daytona and get a top 10 finish is pretty cool."

Yeley, who has an average finish of 37.4 for the past three seasons, scored his first top-10 since 2008 and the eighth of his career.

Sauter wins NextEra 250

Camping World Truck Series driver Johnny Sauter finally put his Daytona bad luck behind him and won last Friday's NextEra Energy Resources 250.

Sauter held a tenuous lead on the white flag lap, with Kyle Busch poised to draft past him, when the caution flag flew and ended the race early and left him with his seventh career Truck victory and his first at Daytona.

"We came down here a couple years ago and crashed before the first half lap was over," he said. "Couple guys got together and we were in it. Last year, we were leading coming to the white [and] got wrecked."

Sauter said he hopes the win in the season opener will propel him to the series championship that also has eluded him. The 2011 season was particularly heartbreaking, as he won the season finale at Homestead-Miami Speedway, but lost the title by six points to Austin Dillon.

"The Truck Series has been a tough row to hoe for me," he said, adding that his Daytona troubles have put him behind in points from the start. "Every year we've been looking at being 25th to 35th in points, depending where we finished going in to the season, and came close to winning the championship two years ago."

"Hopefully, we can get back to championship form. I think we can. I know the guys are working hard. We're going to Martinsville next, which is a great race track for us. We've won there, so I'm digging right now where we're sitting, that's for sure."

Johnny Sauter celebrates after winning the Camping World Truck Series NextEra Energy Resources 250.
