Girls join modern slavery fight

Saturday race to raise funds for movement.

awilliamson@lakecityreporter.com

Slavery never ended. Today, 27 million people suffer daily on farms and in factories and brothels around the world, according to the End It Movement, an national organization dedicated to ending modern-day slavery.

Two Lake City college students, Katherine Mathis and Sarah Elkins, have decided not to sit by and watch. They worked with local gym owner Michelle Richards to organize the Running for Freedom 5K, which will be held on Saturday to support the cause.

“Slavery is something that’s not really spoken about,” Mathis said. “Not many people know that it is going on today.”

According to the End It

Movement website, there are more people enslaved today than ever before. Human trafficking exists in 161 countries across the globe, including the United States.

Mathis, 19, and Elkins, 18, plan to donate 100 percent of registration fees from the race to the End It Movement.

Currently, registration is $30, but it will be $40 on the day of the race. The race will start at 8 a.m. at the courthouse. Registration will be from 7 to 7:45 a.m.

An inflatable slide and bounce house, along with live entertainment, created excitement at the second annual Easter egg hunt at Wilson Park as children waited for the signal to stuff the more than 1,000 colored plastic eggs into Easter baskets.

At the signal to go, more than 200 children, grouped by age in three separate areas, rushed to the eggs and stuffed them into baskets. The hunt was over fast, as the children picked the park clean in about 3 minutes.

But while the eggs were still on the grass, the parents took pictures, and Jackie Kite, Lake City’s community redevelopment administrator, waited to hand out prizes.

Deal may open path to immigration reform

Big business, big labor agree on solution to sticking point regarding unskilled workers.

By ERICA WERNER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Big business and labor have struck a deal on a new low-skilled worker program, removing the biggest hurdle to completion of sweeping immigration legislation allowing 11 million illegal immigrants eventual U.S. citizenship, a person with knowledge of the talks said Saturday.

The agreement was reached in a phone call late Friday night with AFL-CIO President Richard Trumka, U.S. Chamber of Commerce head Tom Donohue and Democratic Sen. Chuck Schumer of New York, who’s been mediating the dispute.

The person, who spoke on condition of anonymity ahead of a formal announcement, said the deal resolves disagreements over wages for the new workers and which industries would be included. Those disputes had led talks to break down a week ago, throwing into doubt whether Schumer and seven other senators crafting a comprehensive bipartisan immigration bill would be able to complete their work as planned.

The deal must still be signed off on by the other senators working with Schumer, including Republicans John McCain of Arizona and Marco Rubio of Florida, but that’s expected to happen. With the agreement in place, the senators are expected to unveil their legislation the

Jobless rate drops again

Unemployment in Columbia County falls to 6.9 percent.

By AMANDA WILLIAMSON
awilliamson@lakecityreporter.com

Columbia County unemployment rate dropped to 6.9 percent in February, from 7.5 percent in January.

Meanwhile the state’s unemployment rate fell to 7.7, the lowest since October 2008 when it was 7.4 percent and well below the 9 percent rate of February 2012, according to state Department of Economic Opportunity figures released on Friday.

Neighboring counties, except for Baker County, have lower unemployment rates than Columbia County. Alachua claims the lowest rate at 5.6 percent, with Union County following at 6.3 percent, Gilchrist County at 6.4 percent and Suwannee County at 6.6 percent. Baker County falls slightly below the national average at 7.4 percent.

Florida’s rate is the same as the national 7.7 percent unemployment figure, a key psychological marker of how the state is doing.

The unemployment rate in the state has gone down even as the labor force has grown, according to DEO statistics, meaning that the drop is mostly attributable to actual job growth, not people leaving the labor force. DEO counted the non-seasonal workforce last month at 9.35 million, up from 9.27 million a year ago.

Columbia County’s workforce grew from 30,707 in January to 30,886 in February.

Monroe County had the state’s lowest unemployment rate last month at 4.2 percent, followed by Walton, Okaloosa, Alachua and St. Johns counties — all below 6 percent. Hendry County in south-central Florida had the highest jobless rate in the state at 10.8 percent.

Lawmakers plan more money for schools, pay raises

TALLAHASSEE — Florida's economic turnaround is giving state legislators a chance to do something they haven't done in years.

Fueled by growth that is adding to the state's bottom line, both the House and Senate on Friday unveiled rival $74 billion spending plans that would boost the state's budget by roughly 6 percent.

It likely means more money for public schools, the first pay raise in six years for state workers, and possibly even a tax break for those wanting to buy a new computer.

"If you are to look at our budget and say who's the big winner this year ... the big winner is education," said House Speaker Will Weatherford.

This year's budget proposals are a stark turnaround from those of the past few years that either included deep cuts to the state's public schools and universities or relied on tax increases.

Lawmakers have until early May to pass a new state budget that will cover state spending from July 1 to June 2014. While there are differences in the rival plans there's not enough to keep legislators ending their work on time.

Legislators: Keep health insurance

TALLAHASSEE — Florida legislators plan on keeping the cost of health insurance low for state leaders.

Gov. Rick Scott proposed having himself and other high-ranking state officials pay the same for health insurance as rank-and-file workers.

But new budgets unveiled by the House and Senate on Friday would keep health insurance premiums the same as they are now.

The governor along with the three elected members of the Cabinet as well as House members pay no more than $400 a year for health insurance.

The 40 members of the Florida Senate earlier this year started paying the same as career service employees. That's nearly $2,200 a year for family coverage.

Florida spends $1.9 billion to cover roughly 170,000 state workers, university employees and retirees. Most of the money comes from taxpayers, not premiums.

Man shoots dog to reclaim finger

BRADENTON — A preliminary investigation supports a father's account of shooting and killing a dog that bit his 11-year-old son in order to recover the boy's severed pinky, a Manatee County Sheriff's report said.

The boy was at his home Friday evening when he approached the dog in its cage. As the boy

Crucifuxon re-enactment

The Family Life Church of God in Archer had young men re-enacting the crucifixion of Christ on Friday by standing on crosses as part their celebration for the religious weekend. In the mornings, the young men took 15-minute turns on the crosses, and as the weather warmed later in the day they lengthened the stay to an hour.

stuck his hand through the slots to pet the dog, the animal bit his left hand and severed the child's pinky finger, according to the report.

The child's father took the dog out of the cage and shot it multiple times. The father then removed the severed finger from the dog's stomach and waited for emergency responders to arrive, the report said.

The boy was airlifted to All Children's Hospital in St. Petersburg for treatment. His condition was not immediately released by authorities. Officials said the boy's forearm may also have been broken in the attack.

The report said a preliminary investigation supports the father's account of the accident. He was not identified in the report.

Manatee County Animal Control removed the dog's remains from the home.

State to get $6M for pest control

TALLAHASSEE — Florida will receive $6 million in federal funding to help control disease and eradicate pests that threaten the state's agriculture, including Giant African Land Snails.

In a statement sent Friday, Agriculture Commissioner Adam Putnam said the money is coming from the federal Farm Bill.

In addition to the giant snail mitigation project, the money will help pay for detector dog teams, citrus research, avocado protection and a honey bee survey. It will also fund the "Traveler's Don't Pack a Pest Outreach Program," which cautions people not to bring harmful insects, diseases and bacteria from other locales when entering Florida.

Skeletal remains found in woods

CRESTVIEW — Investigators in northwest Florida are seeking information on any unreported missing person after finding skeletal remains in a wooded area.

Crestview police tell the Northwest Florida Daily News that the remains found on Thursday will be sent for DNA testing to try to match it with a missing person.

Police say a group of teenagers discovered the remains behind a low-income housing development. A police statement says the remains appear to have been in the area for a long time. A tent was found nearby.

'Jesus Stomp' teacher on leave

BOCA RATON — Florida Atlantic University has placed on leave an instructor who had students stomp on pieces of paper with "Jesus" written on them as part of a lesson.

The school said in a statement Friday that Deandre Poole was put on leave for safety reasons and to prevent disruption of the university's activities. The statement says Poole will not teach classes, keep office hours or be present on campus.

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

Barbara Walters to retire next year

NEW YORK

Barbara Walters plans to retire next year, ending a television career that began more than a half century ago and made her a trailblazer in news and daytime TV.

Someone who works closely with Walters said the plan is for her to retire in May 2014 after a series of special programs saluting her career. The person was not authorized to discuss the matter publicly and spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity Thursday.

Walters, 83, was hospitalized earlier this year after falling and cutting her head while leaving a party in Washington and remained out of work after developing the chickenpox. Largely retired from ABC News already, her main work is at "The View," the daytime hit she created in 1997.

Her television career began in 1961 when she was hired as a writer for the "Today" show. She graduated quickly to on-air work and became the show's co-host before leaving in 1976 to become co-anchor of ABC's evening news with Harry Reasoner — the first woman in such a role for a television network.

The pairing ended quickly and Walters settled in a role as ABC News' cajoler-in-chief, competing ferociously to land newsmaking interviews with heads of state and stars of the day. She regularly did interview specials, including an annual show with the most fascinating people of the year, and was co-host of "20/20" for two decades, much of the time with Hugh Downs.

She described "The View" as the "dessert" of her career, a gathering of women chatting about the hot topics of the day and interviewing visiting presidents and actors eager to reach a daytime audience.

ers in show business, said Friday he's looking forward to "clearing the wreckage of my past."

Step 1 will be coming up with $300,000 for the tax man.

Baldwin, 46, admitted in Rockland County Court that he failed to pay New York state income taxes for 2008, 2009 and 2010. Under a plea bargain, he gets to stay out of jail — so he can make some money — and can have his record wiped clean if he pays the taxes within a year.

His total bill in taxes, interest and penalties is $400,000, but state Supreme Court Justice Charles Apotheke said $100,000 had already been paid.

Baldwin, currently appearing on "All-Star Celebrity Apprentice," said he never intended to avoid paying taxes and got in trouble by trusting others.

"Unfortunately, I got some really bad suggestions and advice ... from lawyers and accountants," he said outside court.

Rapper Lil Wayne says he's an epileptic

NEW YORK — Lil Wayne says he's an epileptic and has had seizures for years.

In an interview with Los Angeles-based radio station Power 106 on Thursday, the 30-year-old rapper said epilepsy caused his most recent health scare earlier this month, when he was rushed to a hospital.

Wayne said he had three back-to-back seizures.

The Grammy winner says: "I've had a bunch of seizures, y'all just never hear about them."

Wayne says he "could've died" and that the recent seizures were a result of "just plain stress, no rest, overworking myself."

He released his 10th album, "I Am Not a Human Being II," this week. He'll embark on a 40-city tour in July with rappers T.I. and Future.

Kite said this year's event was a success, and thanked Parkview Baptist Church for helping entertain the children. The church provided the inflatable slide and bounce house.

Shana Banana, a Gainesville children's singer and songwriter, performed for the crowd.

Kite said the planning for next year's Easter egg hunt has already begun, and she expects it to be larger than this year.

"This is only our second year," Kite said. "It's going to grow even more. We are going to have to expand next year."

The Lake City-Columbia County Chamber of Commerce sponsored the event and placed gold and silver plastic eggs among the Easter eggs.

Abbie Chasteen, chamber marketing director, said the silver and gold eggs held paper slips that children exchanged for gift cards. She said some of the prizes were donated by businesses.

CAUSE: Girls plan fundraiser race to help end-human-trafficking movement

Louie Giglio promoted the End It Movement, Mathis decided she wanted to raise money to help the organization.

Since the movement began in December, it has raised about $174,000.

Three weeks after leaving the conference, jogging inspired Mathis to come up with their idea for the Running for Freedom 5K.

"I was thinking I really wanted to do something to help," she said. "People do 5Ks for all different causes. Why couldn't I do one for End It? The idea literally just came from God."

While this is the first event she has organized for End It, Mathis has participated in the organization's other campaigns, such as its Social Media Blackout Day. Supporters of End It abandoned the Internet for an entire day to honor those who remain voiceless.

On Saturday, community volunteers will read stories from people who escaped slavery. Three of them are between the ages 20 to 25, the same age as the victims whose lives they will share with the runners.

"I'm reading their stories, and I think I would fall for the same ploy," Mathis said. "The Super Bowl happens to be one of the biggest avenues for human traffickers to scout."

Elkins believes it's important to hold the event in her community because she wants Lake City residents to be aware of the issue. People think slavery is a thing of the past, she said, but it isn't.

The Passion Conference made her realize the issue still existed, she said, and she hopes the 5K will do the same for those attending the event.

"I might have heard someone talk about modern-day slavery once before, but I kind of blew it off," she said. "The Passion Conference was the first time I thought this might be real."

This is the first time Richards has organized a race for college-age students, but she said it has been amazing to see the group so dedicated to a cause.

"I know Americans know that there's slavery in the world, but I don't think they have the awareness or defense to protect themselves and their families from it," she said. "Running the race brings awareness to the cause, but they also bring awareness to a healthy lifestyle."

Mathis and Elkins recruited a group of friends, community members and local businesses to support their cause. Several businesses, including Concept Construction and Edwards Jones, have sponsored the event, providing drinks and more for the runners.

More than 25 people, mainly members from Mathis' church, gathered together to help bring her dream to life. The group — all college age — has worked to gather sponsors, create posters and educate the public about the race and the End It Movement.

"I'm doing it to shine a light on slavery," Mathis said. "To run the 5K is a way the community can help do something about it. We're giving them an avenue to help and donate to the cause."

Fix law that limits testimony from sex-abuse victims

Imagine a youngster twice victimized — once by the horrific crime of sexual abuse, then by a legal process that is supposed to provide justice. It happens on too many occasions, in too many courtrooms. ... Lauren Book hopes to change that. Book speaks from experience. She was once the victim of a sexual abuser who was the family's nanny. Refusing to remain the victim, she has become the champion for sexually abused children whose voices wouldn't otherwise be heard. She has started a non-profit, called Lauren's Kids, and every year pushes the Florida Legislature to change laws in a way that helps those who've been abused.

HB 7031 is her latest effort at reform. The bill would align Florida law with the federal Adam Walsh Act by tightening provisions on when someone can have their status as a sexual offender changed, raise the penalties for people who expose themselves to children and add requirements that judges must consider in determining bail.

The highlight, though, is a proposed change in the rules regarding hearsay evidence.

Currently in child sex-abuse cases, unless the victim is 11 or younger, most information obtained outside of a jury's presence can't be used in court because it's considered hearsay. Older children must wait weeks, months, sometimes years, before deciding whether to recount the sordid details of their abuse in open court, or forgo testimony altogether. HB 7031 would raise the age for the hearsay exception to 16, allowing the early, more accurate accounts by older children to be used during trial.

The bill has its safeguards. Defense attorneys would still have adequate tools, like the deposition process, to make credible cases on behalf of their clients. And a judge would still make the final call of whether the information gathered during that initial interview should be admitted or not.

But it would help prevent what all too often occurs today: young victims, robbed by time, struggling on the stand to present clear and convincing testimony about their abuse.

It doesn't hurt that Lauren is the daughter of Ron Book, one of Florida's most influential lobbyists and biggest money raisers for political candidates. Book's name opens doors in Tallahassee and, this time, the benefactors are young abuse victims who stand to gain from his daughter's singular focus.

As an advocate, Lauren Book has a string of accomplishments, from her annual awareness-raising walks to Tallahassee, to obtaining $1.5 million from the state in 2011 to develop an age-appropriate violence-prevention curriculum for kindergarteners.

Her greatest success, however, came after overcoming four years of sexual assault from an employee who had been considered part of the family. In 2002, Waldina Flores was sentenced to 15 years for sexual battery by a custodian and 15 years for lewd or lascivious molestation on a child under 16. Young Lauren took the high road: "I really don't wish any harm on Waldy," she told the court. "I forgive her for her weaknesses, which have hurt me."

... While providing safeguards for the wrongly accused, the Florida Legislature should work with her to turn this good idea into state law.

Why I resigned as NAACP secretary

Lies can destroy people! However, truth can dissolve lies. The NAACP national office has allowed and supported some local branch officials to override the Preamble, the Vision Statement, the Mission Statement, and all principles upon which the NAACP was founded — the Constitution.

The two state NAACP officials came to Lake City without full disclosure to the local branch last year and called for the resignation of Police Chief Argatha Gilmore (black female) — all without a shred of credible evidence. Then suddenly at this meeting a picture surfaced (taken at the Olustee Festival parade) showing the chief with her arms around several men — it was said that the chief was cavorting with the Ku Klux Klan — she must resign or be fired!

At a Lake City City Council meeting a myriad of charges were leveled against Chief Gilmore by John Mayo, Dale Landry, Rev. R. L. Gundy, President of the SCLC, and others. But when the chief stood to defend herself, all of her accusers had vacated the premises. "Where are my accusers?" she asked. None could be found.

Later, NAACP state president Adora Obi Nweze asked the Columbia County Executive Committee to execute a resolution requesting the resignation of Chief Gilmore. The committee refused to support the idea. Glynnell Presley, secretary, was made the scapegoat. Presley appeared to be the reason that the Executive Committee failed to support State President Adora's call for a resolution. It was allegedly said that the Presleys had to be punished, they're getting "too big." Adora is a member of the NAACP 64 member National Board of Directors, along with Leon Russell, Vice Chair of the National Board, and Roslyn Brock, Chairperson. All are from the state of Florida and appear to support Adora, since none of them returned calls, emails or letters to the Pressleys.

Mrs. Bernice D. Presley was two times voted president of the Columbia County Branch. Trumped-up charges were brought against her by state president Adora, who forwarded them to the national office. Article X, Section 4(a) of the NAACP Constitution, the law that Mrs. Presley was said to have violated, does not (in my opinion) comport with Mrs. Presley's dismissal. Scenario: As a Silver Life NAACP member, another NAACP member enters my house and steals sums of money. Am I supposed to seek the NAACP for a solution and restitution, or the police? This is tantamount to what happened to Mrs. Presley; she sought legal protection and was victimized by the NAACP four times: (1) she was removed as NAACP president; (2) her Silver Life membership was revoked; (3) the NAACP hired a lawyer to personally represent another member against her, a Silver Life NAACP member, and (4) she was made to suffer embarrassment and humiliation.

Mrs. Presley was given 15 days to appeal the NAACP's bogus decision. She immediately complied. However, some 80 days later, after three return-receipt letters were mailed to the NAACP leadership, 12 emails were forwarded requesting a hearing date. NO RESPONSE! None of the NAACP national leaders had the literary decorum to reply. This violates all principles of democracy, decency and courtesy! And it circumvents the 5th Amendment's due process clause. In the meantime, justice delayed is justice denied!

Mrs. Presley was suspended because she defended herself against another member. The NAACP National office used NAACP money to hire a lawyer to defend this woman (a member less than a year) against Mrs. Presley (a long-term Silver Life member) involving a personal matter. Up to this point I have remained silent in anticipating a hearing, thinking that the hearing would correct and restore normalcy to the branch. However, it appears that the national office has no intentions of providing a hearing, though the NAACP Constitution, Article X, Section 7 states, within 60 calendar days of the receipt of the complaint "... make findings and recommendations regarding the complaint." But I guess when you cannot defend your actions, you refuse to conduct the hearing, and you fail to communicate hoping that the issue will go away.

In the meantime, my family and I have been subjected to attempted bullying, threats, mean-spiritedness, mischaracterizations, injustice, unfairness, and vindictiveness by so-called leaders on the NAACP local, state and national levels.

My reason for resigning earlier this month after 30-plus years as secretary of this Columbia County Branch NAACP is because of the mistreatment, unfairness and the injustice perpetrated on my wife, my family and me, and, the failure of the local branch to support me as a long-time warrior for the community and the NAACP. How can I continue to serve an organization that violates the very basic principles and tenets of which the NAACP is founded? How can I continue to serve an organization that expends NAACP funds to pay legal fees to fight my family and me in the courtroom for personal issues of another individual? How can I continue to support and serve an organization that violates its Constitution, yet it expects me to obey and adhere to it. How can I continue to support and serve an organization that discriminates against me, and my family?

The organization, as I see it, is fast losing its relevance, focus and purpose. It is becoming, in my opinion, a social club instead of a premiere civil rights organization.

As for me, I will continue to fight for justice, equality, and democracy until all, without regard to race, gender, creed, or religion, enjoy equal status.

I remain ever committed to the struggle. God bless you.

HIGHLIGHTS IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, March 31, the 90th day of 2013. There are 274 days left in the year.

On this date:

In March 31, 1932, Ford Motor Co. publicly unveiled its powerful flathead V-8 engine; although it was not the first eight-cylinder engine, it was the first to be affordable to many people.

In 1931, Notre Dame college-football coach Knute Rockne, 43, was killed in the crash of a TWA plane in Bazaar, Kan.

In 1976, the New Jersey Supreme Court ruled that Karen Ann Quinlan, who was in a persistent vegetative state, could be disconnected from her respirator. (Quinlan, who remained unconscious, died in 1985.)

In 1995, Mexican-American singer Selena Quintanilla-Perez, 23, was shot to death in Corpus Christi, Texas, by the founder of her fan club, Yolanda Saldivar, who was convicted of murder and sentenced to life in prison.

In 2005, Terri Schiavo, 41, died at a hospice in Pinellas Park, Fla., 13 days after her feeding tube was removed in a wrenching right-to-die dispute.

Area attorneys join forces against foreclosure

From staff reports

Due to a temporary increase in funding, many previously ineligible Florida residents facing foreclosure may now take advantage of free legal services as the state's most experienced housing attorneys are banding together to address rising foreclosure rates.

"Three Rivers Legal Services is happy to have an opportunity to extend our services at this time to a greater number of homeowners in dire straits and those who are continuing to struggle during this economic downturn and recovery," said Allison Thompson, executive director of Three Rivers Legal Services. "We are grateful to be a part of the solution."

These efforts could not have come at a better time. Floridians today face a foreclosure filing rate double the national average. In fact, Florida's foreclosure rate has now been the highest in the nation for the fifth consecutive month according to RealtyTrac, which monitors real estate trends nationwide.

Free legal aid services are now available to any Florida resident who owns their primary home and meets certain income requirements (low to moderate income). Any eligible resident with questions or concerns about the foreclosure process should not hesitate to call to get advice, even if no formal action has been taken.

Lawyers and advocates at Three Rivers Legal Services are available Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. until 5 p.m. to address a wide range of issues, including short sales, bankruptcy, and how to lower mortgage payments.

Experts will also be on hand to advise residents who belong to a homeowners or condo association. It often comes as a surprise to many members of these associations to learn that even if they are current on their mortgage, failure to pay homeowners' or condo association fees may put them at risk of foreclosure.

Individuals who could benefit from these free services should contact Three Rivers Legal Services to schedule a consultation as soon as possible. Funding is limited and expires on June 30.

The Lake City branch of Three Rivers Legal Services is located at 334 NW Lake City Ave. and can be reached by phone at 752-5960.

Tractor show coming to Foster Center

From staff reports

WHITE SPRINGS — The Stephen Foster Folk Culture Center State Park will host the 25th Annual Antique Tractor and Engine Show next weekend. Antique tractors and farming equipment reflecting 200 years of rural American history will be on display.

Demonstrating the craftsmanship and durability of American farm machinery, participants will operate working equipment and compete in tractor races. Visitors will be able to watch demonstrations of wheat threshing, shingle milling, corn grinding and unusual engines for everyday purposes. Exhibits will include collections of flywheels, hit-and-miss engines, water pumps, vintage pedal tractors, antique cars and farm equipment.

Competitions for adults will include tractor pulls, barrel races and a blind race.

Children can participate in pedal-powered tractor races, an old-fashioned game of needle-in-a-haystack or a rooster-crowing contest.

Food concessions will include root beer floats, hamburgers and hot dogs, barbecue and kettle corn.

On Saturday afternoon, an antique tractor parade will feature everything from customized lawn tractors to restored farm machinery.

Admission to the public is $5 per vehicle with up to eight passengers. For more information, call (877) 635-3655 or visit www.FloridaStateParks.org/stephenfoster.

DEAL: Business, labor agree on solution to roadblock

week of April 8. Their measure would secure the border, crack down on employers, improve legal immigration and create a 13-year pathway to citizenship for the millions of illegal immigrants already here.

It's a major second-term priority of President Barack Obama's and would usher in the most dramatic changes to the nation's faltering immigration system in more than two decades.

The AFL-CIO and the Chamber of Commerce, longtime antagonists over temporary worker programs, had been fighting over wages for tens of thousands of low-skilled workers who would be brought in under the new program to fill jobs in construction, hotels and resorts, nursing homes and restaurants, and other industries.

Under the agreement, a new "W" visa program would go into effect beginning April 1, 2015, according to another official involved with the talks who also spoke on condition of anonymity ahead of a formal announcement.

In year one of the program, 20,000 workers would be allowed in; in year two, 35,000; in year three, 55,000; and in year four, 75,000. Ultimately the program would be capped at 200,000 workers a year, but the number of visas would fluctuate, depending on unemployment rates, job openings, employer demand and data collected by a new federal bureau pushed by the labor movement as an objective monitor of the market.

A "safety valve" would allow employers to exceed the cap if they can show need and pay premium wages, but any additional workers brought in would be subtracted from the following year's cap, the official said.

The workers could move from employer to employer and would be able to petition for permanent residency and ultimately seek U.S. citizenship. Neither is possible for temporary workers now.

The new program would fill needs employers say they have that are not currently met by U.S. immigration programs. Most industries don't have a good way to hire a steady supply of foreign workers because there's one temporary visa program for low-wage non-agricultural workers but it's capped at 66,000 visas per year.

Florida slams "Dunk City"

Gators knock off Florida Gulf Coast to reach Elite 8.

By STEPHEN HAWKINS
Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas — Florida Gulf Coast put on one last show at the NCAA tournament.

The high-flying kids from "Dunk City" — the No. 15 seed few people even knew of on Selection Sunday — were hitting 3-pointers, had a highlight alley-oop and seemed like they were just getting started against one of the big schools from Florida.

SEC regular-season champion Florida, the No. 3 seed, was getting an all-too-close look at what everybody has enjoyed watching this March. But Michael Frazier's only two baskets of the night got the Gators on their own run, and FGCU's improbable NCAA tourney run to the round of 16 came to an end just before midnight Friday.

Frazier's 3-pointers came from the left side, directly in front of the FGCU bench, to start a 16-0 run late in the first half. That put the Gators ahead to stay on the way to a 62-50 victory.

"Stepping into a situation like this where you have everybody against us, we've got to block everything out. Just treat this like a road game," said Mike Rosario, who led the Gators with 15 points. "I thought we did a great job of blocking everything out and focusing on the next play."

Florida is going to its third straight NCAA regional final, even after the Eagles jumped out to an early 11-point lead. The Gators (29-7) and their roster filled with NCAA

Man of the mat

Cole Schreiber a four-time state qualifier.

By TIM KIRBY

tkirby@lakecityreporter.com

Cole Schreiber spent several years on a diamond, but it turned out a mat was more to his liking.

The Columbia High senior began wrestling in middle school and ends his career as one of the most successful wrestlers in Tigers history.

Schreiber is a four-time district champion and three-time regional champion. His high school record is 166-23.

Schreiber qualified for the state meet four years and placed three times, finishing runner-up by the slimmest of margins last month. He placed third as a junior and sixth as a sophomore.

"I played little league baseball 5-6 years, but was never really interested," Schreiber said. "Wrestling was a challenge. It was something just on me. I didn't want to rely on anybody else."

Schreiber started by wrestling five matches as a seventh-grader at Lake City Middle School.

"I was still not very good in the eighth grade, but I won the North Florida Championship that year and wanted to see how far I could go in it," he said.

Schreiber's early wrestling was mostly rough-housing.

"I liked throwing my little brother Wyatt around," he said.

Weighting in at 80 pounds, Schreiber got himself thrown around in his introduction to high school wrestling.

"I wrestled in the 103-pound weight class that summer at Lake Gibson and won two matches, and one was a forfeit," Schreiber said. "I had to gain weight."

Schreiber wandered into wrestling practice as a freshman and later found out about the progression from regular season to the meets that counted.

"I didn't know anything about district or state," Schreiber said. "I thought that maybe I could make it to state."

At the end of the season he faced a major test.

"My first district match went to triple overtime," Schreiber said. "With 5 seconds left, I had an escape to tie it up. I won the match in triple overtime, but lost to the same kid at region."

Schreiber's first visit to state was an eye-opener.

"By the end of region, I

GATORS: Will play Michigan next

ourney experience were just too strong and too good. FGCU matched its season low for points.

Once Frazier hit his shots, things just rolled downhill for the Eagles (26-11), whose program is so new they were only in their second season of eligibility for the tournament. The baskets started a 4 1/2-minute span when the Eagles couldn't even get off a shot. They missed their only field goal attempt while turning the ball over four times in that stretch.

The slump finally ended when Sherwood Brown, the Eagles dreadlocked senior showman, made a layup in the final minute to get Florida Gulf Coast back within 30-26 by halftime.

"When they started their run, we didn't have the energy we had in the other two games," said Eagles forward Chase Fielier. "We weren't playing with the same fire we were before."

FGCU players walked down the steps off the raised court at Cowboys Stadium at the break with their heads down — much different from the team that looked so loose and ready for a good time after an early 11-0 run — similar to extended spurts they had in upsetting No. 2 seed Georgetown and No. 7 seed San Diego State.

The Gators play Michigan in the South Regional final at Cowboys Stadium on Sunday. They are trying to get to their first NCAA Final Four since consecutive national championships in 2006 and 2007.

Michigan overcame a 14-point deficit earlier Friday and beat No. 1 seed Kansas 87-85 in overtime.

After the Gators turned up the defensive pressure, the most fun team this side of the Harlem Globetrotters was suddenly having a lot fewer laughs. Those spectacular dunks and alley-oops weren't there and Florida forced 20 turnovers.

Scottie Wilbekin added 13 points for Florida and Casey Prather 11.

Brown led FGCU with 14 points, and Fielier had 12.

Fielier started the Eagles' big run, the only one they'd have, with a 3-pointer from the top of the key before a few plays of the sort that earned them their "Dunk City" moniker.

After Brett Comer stole a pass, he ran down the court and threw up an alley-oop pass for the trailing Brown, who delivered a slam that sent the announced crowd of more than 40,000 into a frenzy — except for those in Gator orange.

Comer then flipped another backward pass to Bernard Thompson for a 3-pointer. Then Fielder had another 3-pointer — less than 3 minutes after the first one — for a 15-4 lead only six minutes into the game.

Could the first No. 15 seed to make it into the round of 16 actually go further?

Not against Florida, the team that had been here so many times before. The FGCU run came too early, leaving the Gators plenty of time to recover.

After Frazier's second 3, Enfield angrily called timeout. But that didn't stop the Gators surge.

Rosario knocked away a pass inside to Eric McKnight, sending the break the other way. Casey Prather grabbed an offensive rebound, and with his back to the basket, basically flipped the ball over his head — and it went in.

McKnight missed two free throws after that, and Wilbekin penetrated for a short jumper to tie the game at 24. Rosario hit a go-ahead 3-pointer after a steal by Will Yegueté.

Eddie Murray had a steal for Florida Gulf Coast, but Patric Young took it right back and got it to Boynton. He made the layup while being fouled, and added the free throw for a 30-24 lead.

The Eagles has 12 turnovers in the first half — one less than they had in each of their first two NCAA tournament games. They took twice as many shots (32-16) as Florida, but that wasn't enough.

There was still 10 minutes left on the halftime clock when FGCU returned to the court, and players started taking shots even as their mascot was on the court doing a halftime routine.

But Florida scored the first seven points of the second half. Boynton drove for a layup and was fouled before making the free throw. Rosario then drove for a shot off the glass and after another FGCU turnover had a floater that rattled in before Enfield called timeout with his team suddenly down 37-26.

But they never threatened and soon their NCAA run was over.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Working to be more welcoming

Project to locate signs at city entry points gets started.

By TONY BRITT
tbritt@lakecityreporter.com

Lake City-Columbia County Chamber of Commerce is working on a project to visually welcome people by erecting signs along roads leading into Lake City.

During a December chamber board planning session for 2013 potential projects, members discussed reintroducing "Welcome to Lake City, Columbia County" signs at various locations around the community.

"The concept was unanimously supported by the chamber board and has sort of been in an incubating phase," Chamber of Commerce president Joel Foreman said.

Foreman said the plan is to have the signs erected on the arterial roads leading into the city.

The signs would feature placards of local civic organizations that help fund the project.

"We would obviously like to have some chamber recognition on there and perhaps recognition for a chamber member who might help subsidize the costs of the sign," Foreman said.

Earlier this month Columbia County Commissioners unanimously voted to support the project after Foreman made a presentation during a county commission meeting. Foreman plans to make a similar presentation for city officials.

Chamber officials have not determined how many signs would be erected.

"We're getting endorsements from the county and the city to move forward and one of the first things we'll do is site selection with those two entities," Foreman said.

"We want to have cooperation from our governmental entities on site selection to make sure we're not in violation of any laws or creating any sort of issues with traffic. We would love to have a sign on every major road coming in, maybe five to seven signs. Right now, we're so early in the process we can't quantify it."

The chamber is hoping to finance the project privately.

Foreman said the chamber is primarily composed of private businesses and is accustomed to funding its operations creatively in the same manner the private sector funds operations.

"What we're looking for from the public entities is primarily sweat equity and things like that," he said. "When it comes to the money that we'll need to actually design and build the signs, we're going to try to get funding from our civic organizations and chamber members who might be willing to help on a community project. The maintenance moving forward we would fund through sponsorship of the signs."

A small banner at the bottom of the sign could tell which local business provides sponsorship for it.

"It's not a big marketing message, but sort of a community service," Foreman said.

With the project still in the planning and design phase, Foreman said, it could be months before the first signs emerge.

"It will be the end of 2013 before we could get things set up," he said. "I hoped we would break ground on something like this this year. I would love to be able to have it done by the end of this year, but just being realistic, these things don't ever happen super fast. My main concern at the present is that the project gets real good legs under it and

Cleaner gas rule would mean increased prices at the pump

By DINA CAPPIELLO
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration's newest anti-pollution plan would ping American drivers where they wince the most: at the gas pump. That makes arguments weighing the cost against the health benefits politically potent.

The proposal to reduce sulfur in gasoline and tighten auto emission standards, released Friday, would raise gasoline prices by less than a penny per gallon, the Environmental Protection Agency says. But the oil industry points to its own study putting the

Different Values

Q What's the difference between "intrinsic value" and "market value"? — C.B., Opelika, Ala.

A Great question, as it's a vital concept for investors. Imagine Meteorite Insurance (ticker: HED-SUP). Its intrinsic value is what it's really worth, based on factors such as its assets and debt, its anticipated growth rate and, ultimately, the amount of cash it's expected to generate over its lifetime.

Unfortunately, that's not easy to determine, and different smart analysts will arrive at different numbers. Plus, things change. Meteorite's intrinsic value may be estimated around $10 billion, but if a competitor gains a lot of ground, perhaps via a new product, Meteorite's future, and therefore its intrinsic value, is suddenly different.

Meanwhile, market value is what investors are willing to pay for a company. It's typically measured by calculating a company's market capitalization: If Meteorite Insurance has 100 million shares outstanding and the current share price is $60, then its market cap is $6 billion (100 million times $60). If a firm's estimated intrinsic value is higher than its market value, then its stock is likely undervalued and attractive.

Q What's a derivative? — A.M., Portland, Maine

A It's a financial contract whose value is "derived" from another security, such as a stock, bond, commodity, currency, or a market index such as the S&P 500. Some common types of derivatives are options, futures and mortgage-backed securities. They're sometimes used to "hedge" risk, such as when companies limit their exposure to losses from currency exchange rate fluctuations or fuel price volatility.

Some derivatives can be very risky, such as when they're used to amplify gains (and losses). Warren Buffett has called derivatives "time bombs" and "financial weapons of mass destruction."

The Bad Math of Lotteries

Buying lottery tickets can deliver a little fun or a lot of financial ruin. Consider, for example, that according to a 2008 study, households earning less than $13,000 annually spend, on average, 9 percent of their income on lottery tickets. Another study found 21 percent of Americans view lotteries as a practical way to build wealth. Yikes! Playing the lottery is just not a smart move.

Math professor Tyler Jarvis has explained why, offering the example of the California Lotto Jackpot, with odds of about 1 in 18 million: "If you have to drive 10 miles to buy this ticket, you are three times more likely to be killed in an automobile accident on the way than to win the jackpot, yet many people would incorrectly think that winning this lottery would be more probable."

It's true that by buying more than one ticket, you can up your chances of winning. But consider this: With odds of 1 in 18 million (and many lotteries offer far worse odds), if you bought 50 tickets per week, you ought to win once every 6,923 years. So you should have won by now — if you'd started playing around 5000 B.C.

Meanwhile, if you bought 100 $2 Powerball lottery tickets every week from age 18 to 75, that would total $592,800. With the jackpot odds at worse than 1 in 175 million, your odds would still have just a 1-in-295 chance of winning. Look at all that money you spent, which could have supported you considerably in retirement!

In fact, cash-strapped governments are often the winners, with North American lotteries raising more than $300 billion since 1964. It's ironic that many lotteries spend their revenue on education, as a popular saying reasonably points out that lotteries are a tax on people who aren't good at math.

Don't buy more than occasional tickets for fun. Keep in mind the wisdom of Fran Lebowitz, who reportedly quipped, "I've done the calculation, and your chances of winning the lottery are identical whether you play or not."

A Sudden Drop

On July 2, 2000, I read good things about a software company called TenFold in my newspaper. On July 5, I bought shares at $17 apiece. On July 10, the stock dropped $7 per share, giving me a quick 41 percent loss. It was difficult to understand how a company could go from being profitable on July 2 to unprofitable on the 10th. — B.T., via email

The Fool Responds: A stock can surge or plunge based on a surprising quarterly earnings report. On July 10, TenFold preannounced disappointing results. The market's view of the company then changed, with more people wanting to sell than buy it, thereby driving the price down.

The company had early success, and its stock went public at $17 per share in 1999, soared to $70 by March 2000, and then sank to around $1 per share as the Internet stock bubble burst. In 2002, the company was hit with an SEC investigation, with the case eventually dismissed. TenFold was eventually acquired by another company in 2008, with shareholders receiving $0.04 per share and convertible preferred stock on an as-converted basis.

Senior portfolio manager accused of insider trading

By LARRY NEUMEISTER
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A senior portfolio manager for one of the nation's largest hedge funds was arrested Friday, accused of joining an insider trading conspiracy that the government said made more than $6 million illegally for the powerhouse investment company founded by billionaire businessman Steven A. Cohen.

The arrest broadens the government's probe of trading practices at SAC Capital Advisors, which manages $15 billion.

Two weeks ago, the Securities and Exchange Commission said that two affiliates of SAC Capital would pay more than $614 million in what federal regulators called the largest insider trading settlement ever. The settlement is subject to court approval.

In the latest development, Michael Steinberg, 41, pleaded not guilty Friday to insider trading charges only hours after being arrested at his Manhattan apartment.

The charges were lodged in an indictment unsealed in U.S. District Court in New York City.

Steinberg, who has worked more than 15 years at SAC Capital Advisors and its Sigma Capital Management unit, was released on $3 million bail.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Antonia Apps told Judge Richard Sullivan that Steinberg made no statements to authorities after his arrest.

Steinberg's attorney, Barry Berke, said in a statement that his client "did absolutely nothing wrong." He said Steinberg's trading decisions were based on detailed analysis along with other information he properly obtained.

"Caught in the crossfire of aggressive investigations of others, there is no basis for even the slightest blemish on his spotless reputation," he said.

In a statement, SAC Capital said Steinberg "has conducted himself professionally and ethically during his long tenure at the firm."

Foreman grew up in the area, and he recalled from his youth a sign on the south side of town off U.S. 441 that welcomed people into Lake City.

"That's been long gone, and we've never had this kind of signage," he said. "I'd like to see our community step up and

Drone aircraft industry worries about growing privacy backlash

By JOAN LOWY
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — It's a good bet that in the not-so-distant future aerial drones will be part of Americans' everyday lives, performing countless useful functions.

A far cry from the killing machines whose missiles incinerate terrorists, these generally small, unmanned aircraft will help farmers more precisely apply water and pesticides to crops, saving money and reducing environmental impacts. They'll help police departments find missing people, reconstruct traffic accidents and act as lookouts for SWAT teams. They'll alert authorities to people stranded on rooftops by floods and monitor evacuation flows.

Real estate agents will use them to film videos of properties and surrounding neighborhoods. States will use them to inspect bridges, roads and dams. Oil companies will use them to monitor pipelines, while power companies use them to monitor transmission lines.

With military budgets shrinking, drone makers have been counting on the civilian market to spur the industry's growth. But there's an ironic threat to that hope: Success on the battlefield may contain the seeds of trouble for the more benign uses of drones at home.

The civilian unmanned aircraft industry worries that it will be grounded before it can really take off because of fear among the public that the technology will be misused. Also problematic is a delay in the issuance of government safety regulations that are needed before drones can gain broad access to U.S. skies.

Some companies that make drones or supply support equipment and services say the uncertainty has caused them to put U.S. expansion plans on hold, and they are looking overseas for new markets.

"Our lack of success in educating the public about unmanned aircraft is coming back to bite us," said Robert Fitzgerald, CEO of The BOSH Group of Newport News, Va., which provides support services to drone users.

"The U.S. has been at the lead of this technology a long time," he said. "If our government holds back this technology, there's the freedom to move elsewhere ... and all of a sudden these things will be flying everywhere else and competing with us."

Since January, drone-related legislation has been introduced in more than 30 states, largely in response to privacy concerns. Many of the bills are focused on preventing police from using drones for broad public surveillance, as well as targeting individuals for surveillance without sufficient grounds to believe they were involved in crimes.

Law enforcement is expected to be one of the bigger initial markets for civilian drones. Last month, the FBI used drones to maintain continuous surveillance of a bunker in Alabama where a 5-year-old boy was being held hostage.

In Virginia, the state General Assembly passed a bill that would place a two-year moratorium on the use of drones by state and local law enforcement. The measure is supported by groups as varied as the American Civil Liberties Union on the left and the Virginia Tea Party Patriots Federation on the right.

Gov. Bob McDonnell is proposing amendments that would retain the broad ban on spy drones but allow specific exemptions when lives are in danger, such as for search-and-rescue operations. The legislature reconvenes on April 3 to consider the amendments.

"Any legislation that restricts the use of this kind of capability to serve the public is putting the public at risk," said Steve Gitlin, vice president of AeroVironment, a leading maker of smaller drones, including some no bigger than a hummingbird

Americans oppose paying for beach repairs

Survey finds many feel its not worth cost as seas rise.

By SETH BORENSTEIN
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON — More than four out of five Americans want to prepare now for rising seas and stronger storms from climate change, a new national survey says. But most are unwilling to keep spending money to restore and protect stricken beaches.

The poll by Stanford University released Thursday found that only one in three people favored the government spending millions to construct big sea walls, replenish beaches or pay people to leave the coast.

This was the first time a large national poll looked at how Americans feel about adapting to the changes brought on by global warming, said survey director Jon Krosnick, a professor of political science and psychology at Stanford.

The more indirect options the majority preferred were making sure new buildings were stronger and reducing future coastal development. New building codes rated the highest with 62 percent of those surveyed favoring it.

Three in five people want those who are directly affected by rising seas to pay for protection, rather than all taxpayers.

Krosnick said the low favor-ability of sea walls and sand replenishment “reflect the public’s fatalistic sense that it’s more realistic to just give up the beach than to try to save it when other storms in the future will just wash it away again.”

The nationally representative survey of 1,174 Americans conducted online by GfK Custom Research has a margin of error of plus or minus 4.9 percentage points.

University of Miami geology professor Harold Wanless, who wasn’t involved in the survey, said he was at a Miami Beach meeting on Thursday with business and political leaders on how to try to keep from losing their “hugely expensive” land. But they are afraid of spending money in vain attempts that won’t work.

There are three ways the public can deal with the effects of rising seas on beaches, said coastal geology professor S. Jeffress Williams of the University of Hawaii. He is an expert on sea level rise and methods of adapting to it. You can “hold the line” with expensive sea walls, retreat and leave the beach, or compromise with sand dunes and beach replenishing.

Sand dunes helped protect the New Jersey town of Seaside Park more than its dune-less neighbor Seaside Heights when Superstorm Sandy hit last fall, said Laurie Mcgilvray, a government coastline science expert.

Williams said the public’s attitude about not doing much to protect current beach development would be fine if it were 100 years ago. “But we’ve got tremendous trillions of dollars of a tourist economy that depends on the coast.

“You should expect that if you are going to use the coast, you need to put some money in to maintain it,” he said.

But people surveyed said money is an issue.

When it came to the general question of who should pay to protect the coast, 60 percent of the public said it should be paid for by local property owners and businesses, not the general taxpayers. And when it comes to specific solutions, about 80 percent of those surveyed said the money should come from local property taxes, not federal or state income taxes.

Nearly half, 47 percent, said the government should prohibit people from rebuilding structures damaged by storms.

The survey also found that 82 percent of the public believes global warming is already happening. About three out of four people said rising sea levels caused by global warming is a serious problem.

The S&P 500 index notches a record. How did we get here?

By MATTHEW CRAFT
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — The stock market notched another record.

Three weeks after the Dow Jones industrial average blew past its all-time high, the broader Standard & Poor’s 500 index joined it in the history books.

The S&P 500 gained six points on Thursday to close at 1,569.19, topping its previous peak by four points. That previous record stood since Oct. 9, 2007.

The S&P 500 may generate fewer headlines than the Dow, its older stock-index sibling, but it’s the market gauge favored by professional investors. That’s largely because it covers a wider swath of companies — 500 as opposed to 30.

Like the Dow, the S&P 500 has now recovered all of its losses from the Great Recession and the financial crisis that followed. Investors who held on and put their dividends back into the market have fared even better. An investment of $10,000 in the S&P 500 on Oct. 9, 2007, would be worth $11,270 today.

Anyone brave enough to put $10,000 in the S&P 500 at the market’s bottom on March, 9, 2009, would have $25,200.

Q: What’s driving the stock market to a new high?

A: Since the S&P 500 bottomed out in March 2009, the economy has pulled out of a recession and started growing. Companies are making record profits quarter after quarter, they’re hiring in greater numbers, and the housing market is finally recovering. The economy has expanded for 14 quarters in a row.

The Fed has helped, too. By keeping interest rates near record lows, the central bank has encouraged people to move money out of savings accounts that pay next to nothing and into stocks and other investments.

Pundits often argue that the Fed’s efforts have created the illusion of a strong stock market. But that argument misses the big picture, says Mark Luschni, chief investment strategist at Janney Montgomery Scott. People buy a stock to own a share of the company’s profits, and those profits keep climbing. Earnings for the S&P 500 hit $103 per share last year. That’s up from $84 in 2007 and $61 in 2009.

Traders consult on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange on Thursday. The Standard & Poor’s 500 index closed at a record high Thursday, beating the mark it set in October 2007. The S&P rose six points to 1,569, beating its previous record by four points.

“This isn’t all smoke and mirrors,” Luschni says. “Corporate profits are at all-time highs.”

Q: What about inflation? How does that affect the record?

A: When inflation is taken into account, the S&P 500 is still far from its peak. On March 24, 2000, the index hit 1,527. With inflation added to it, that peak works out to 2,065, according to calculations from JPMorgan Chase.

Q: The Dow just hit a record three weeks ago. What’s the difference between the two indexes?

A: The Standard & Poor’s 500 index takes a company’s market value into account. That means that the most valuable companies in the index — Exxon Mobil and Apple — can move the index more than smaller companies like Avon Products and Hormel Foods. A $1 move in Exxon Mobil moves the S&P more than a $1 move in Hormel.

In contrast, the Dow takes a company’s stock price into account. Every change of $1 in any of the 30 Dow stocks moves the index by the same number of points, roughly seven. That gives more sway to companies with higher stock prices. It’s easier for a $100 stock to rise $1 than it is for a $10 stock.

As a result, the oil giant Exxon Mobil, with a market value of $406 billion, has less influence on the Dow than Chevron, with a value of $233 billion. Why? One share of Exxon sells for $91, while one share of Chevron sells for $120.

Q: Why should I care about what happens to the S&P 500?

A: If there’s a U.S. stock mutual fund in your retirement account, it’s probably tied to it.

More funds and more money chase after the S&P 500 than any other U.S. stock index. It’s the most widely used yardstick for money managers who pick and choose stocks, as well as for index funds, which simply try to mirror an index, says Michelle Swartzentruber, a research analyst at Morningstar. Some 1,359 funds worth $2.8 trillion track the S&P.

The Dow, by contrast, has six followers worth $142 million.

The index is also popular with investors in exchange-traded funds, baskets of securities that trade like stocks. The largest ETF is the SPDR S&P 500, with $131 billion.

Q: Which index do professional investors follow?

A: For anyone working in financial markets — professional investors, academic types — the S&P 500 is the main barometer. It’s built to mirror the overall stock market, and it’s a measure of how well Corporate America is doing.

“Anyone in our business uses the S&P,” Luschni says. “Nobody uses the Dow. On any given day, if you stopped me on the street to ask where the Dow was trading, I couldn’t tell you. But I’ll generally know the number for the S&P.”

Q: Why did it take the S&P 500 longer than the Dow to reach a new record?

A: Mainly, the answer is math. A single actor plays a larger role in a cast of 30 than a cast of 500. The Dow’s success owes a lot to one stock — IBM — because of its high price. Since March 9, 2009, when IBM closed at $83, its stock has gained 155 percent, shouldering a tenth of the Dow’s gain, according to Howard Silverblatt, senior index analyst at S&P Dow Jones Indices.

A woman gases up her car at a Gulf station in Brookline, Mass., last summer. Reducing sulfur in gasoline and tightening emissions standards on cars beginning in 2017, as the Obama administration is proposing, would come with costs as well as rewards.

cost between 6 and 9 cents a gallon.

The EPA also said its proposal would add about $130 to the price of new vehicles, beginning in 2025.

The administration says the costs to consumers are worth the payoff: billions of dollars in health benefits from reductions in smog and soot-forming pollution.

The agency predicts $7 in health benefits for every dollar spent to implement the new rules. The agency must hold public hearings before finalizing the rules. It plans for them to take effect in 2017.

The proposal was praised by environmentalists and health advocates, as well as automakers who say it will help the U.S. catch up with the cleaner fuels used in other nations. California already uses the sulfur standard.

EPA Acting Administrator Bob Perciasepe said the proposal is designed to “protect the environment and public health in an affordable and practical way.”

Opponents say gasoline prices are stubbornly high already and Americans shouldn’t have to pay more. The oil industry, Republicans and some Democrats had urged the EPA to hold off on proposing the tighter regulations.

“With $4 a gallon gas the norm in many parts of the country, we cannot afford policies that knowingly raise gas prices,” House Energy and Commerce Chairman Fred Upton said Friday. Instead, the Obama administration should work to increase energy supplies by approving the Keystone XL oil pipeline from Canada and other projects, said Upton, R-Mich.

Rep. Ed Whitfield, R-Ky., who is chairman of the energy and power subcommittee, called the sulfur rule “another example of an overzealous EPA” and said lawmakers would give it a hard look.

Environmentalists hailed the proposal as potentially the most significant in President Barack Obama’s second term.

The so-called Tier 3 standards would reduce sulfur in gasoline by more than 60 percent and reduce nitrogen oxides by 80 percent. It would make it easier for states to comply with health-based standards for the main ingredient in smog and soot. And the regulation would allow automakers to sell the same vehicles in all 50 states.

The Obama administration already has moved to clean up motor vehicles by adopting rules that will double fuel efficiency and putting in place the first standards to reduce the pollution from cars and trucks blamed for global warming.

“Together, these standards represent the largest step in our nation’s history toward reducing harmful emissions from the vehicles we drive every day,” said Michelle Robinson, director of the clean vehicles program of the Union of Concerned Scientists.

Taste Buddies find the Blues

On a recent getaway day, we were joined by Carolyn Castagna and Tina Roberts and ended up browsing the shops in Micanopy looking for a rare find. No success there, so we headed for lunch at the Blue Highway, located at 204 NE U.S. Highway 441.

We ended up having to use our GPS, since the signage wasn't easy to spot. Gainesville friend, Claudia Bates, highly recommended we try this one. The restaurant is one room that seats about 60 people, including the bar seating. It's painted in a warm cantaloupe color with local artisan work hanging on the walls. The bar features an open kitchen behind it, where you can watch masterful creations being prepared.

Our server, Sara, welcomed us warmly and gave us detailed information about the menu choices. She started out our meal in such a nice way. The Italian cuisine had many tempting dishes, and we narrowed our selections to three appetizers and a pizza in hopes that we would get a true perspective of their cooking.

Four Rivers Audubon Society

Lake festival on tap

Organizers promote greater awareness of recreation area.

By CHRISTOPHER SHUMAKER
Special to the Reporter

Four Rivers Audubon Society members Valerie Thomas and Jacqui Sulek say their organization has adopted Alligator Lake as their special hang out.

"We bird there every month, and of course, we go multiple times a month," said Thomas. "We love that place. It's the best birding place in the county."

Thomas and Sulek, both avid bird watchers, said they are never disappointed with a walk down one of the lake's many trails. Both said they often see new birds on the Great Florida Birding Trail site.

"If you have the least bit of interest in nature, looking at birds, looking at butterflies, just being outdoors and enjoying it, you couldn't ask for a more beautiful place," Thomas said.

That is why the fourth annual Alligator Lake Spring Festival is taking place there. Thomas and Sulek want others to know this lake and park exist. The women are the driving forces behind the Four Rivers Audubon-sponsored event, scheduled for Saturday, April 13, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. The festival is free to the public and will be held in the park at 420 SE Alligator Glen, off of Old Country Club Road.

A festival participant asks a vendor about different birds on display at last year's Alligator Lake Spring Festival. The fourth festival sponsored by Four Rivers Audubon Society is scheduled for Saturday, April 13, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Alligator Lake Recreation Area in Lake City.

The Audubon members are surprised more people in Columbia County don't know of this 1,000 acre recreational park. The two wish more locals would get out and explore the trails, have a picnic or just explore the lake's wetlands.

"We get so involved in our computers and being indoors now. This is just a day to be outside, to be in a beautiful place, to feel good," Sulek said, referring to the festival.

There will be 35 vendors offering many activities, Thomas said. The kids will get to build birdhouses this year courtesy of Home Depot, as well as get their faces painted and play bird guessing games to win small prizes.

"It's fun," Thomas said, "but we want to have it fun with a little bit of a message."

The festival will also feature native snakes and gopher turtles, as well as expert advice on which native plants attract butterflies and birds into a yard, said Sulek. Several tours are scheduled throughout the day for people interested in learning more about native plants, butterflies and birds.

University of South Florida professor J. Michael Francis looks at documents at the St. Augustine Catholic diocese in St. Augustine. The records date back to the year 1594, when Spanish colonists settled in the area. Francis is working to digitize the records, which are fragile. The project is timely as Florida celebrates its 500th anniversary this year. Records show that by the time Jamestown was settled in Virginia in the early 1600's, St Augustine was a diverse home to 500 people of European descent, native Americans and free and enslaved Africans.

FIRST: Ancient records being saved

the people who lived in St. Augustine from that time through the mid-1700s. They're the earliest written documents from any region of the United States, according to J. Michael Francis, a history professor at the University of South Florida St. Petersburg.

Francis and some of his graduate students in the Florida Studies department have spent the past several months digitizing the more than 6,000 fragile pages to ensure the contents last beyond the paper's deterioration.

"The documents shed light on aspects of Florida history that are very difficult to reconstruct," Francis said.

Eventually, the digital images of the records will be put online for anyone to view.

Francis' project is timely because the state is celebrating its 500th anniversary this year.

In April 1513, the Spanish monarchy contracted explorer Juan Ponce de Leon to find another island off of Cuba that was rumored to have great riches. Instead, he landed in Florida and named it "La Florida," after the "feast of the flowers" during Spain's Easter celebrations.

De Leon probably wasn't the first European to set foot in Florida, and there is debate on whether he landed in St. Augustine or the sites of present-day cities to the north or south. St. Augustine was founded in 1565 by another Spanish explorer, Don Pedro Menendez de Aviles.

Many Americans don't even realize that St. Augustine's stature among the country's first European settlements. Jamestown, Va., was founded in 1607 and Plymouth, Mass., in 1620, and both are routinely emphasized in school history classes. Historians believe that because America is an English-speaking country, an emphasis was put on the British settlements of Jamestown and Plymouth and not the Spanish-speaking St. Augustine.

St. Augustine holds many of the secrets to 16th-century Florida, largely because of these documents.

Written in flourishing script, they are a treasure trove for scholars and genealogists who want to know more about who lived in Florida centuries before it became a state.

"The documents shed light on aspects of Florida history that are very difficult to reconstruct."

— J. Michael Francis,
University of South Florida professor

Francis said the documents surprised him by revealing what a diverse place St. Augustine was in the late 16th and early 17th centuries.

By reading the records in Spanish, Francis has pieced together tales of Irish priests, Spanish missionaries, native Americans. He's discovered family tragedies and stories of freed slaves.

"Slaves who escaped plantations in Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, slaves in fact who had come all the way from New York City, to come to St. Augustine," he said. "And when you read those, one immediately begins to imagine a situation in which they're in these plantations, and they decide, one day, to try to escape and make their way to St. Augustine."

TASTE: Blue Highway restaurant

was made with pureed Tuscan white beans, tahini, garlic, lemon and spices — all served with warm flat bread ($6.50). It was creamy and seasoned perfectly. We then tried the shrimp bruschetta. It was a hit and consisted of shrimp, garlic butter, diced plum tomatoes, roasted garlic, kalamata olives, capers and fresh herbs served over warm focaccia bread ($9.00). Our third selection was Vongole Poaillipo — Genie's favorite. It included small, succulent Cedar Key clams steamed in garlic, white wine, fresh herbs, plum tomatoes and butter served with focaccia. ($10).

At this point we were all happy and would have been content to call it a day but we still had pizza coming. All breads and dough are made on the premises, and the yeasty smell is tantalizing. We ordered the Sicilian thick-crust pizza, and when it arrived it was a sight to behold. It was on a colorful rectangular pottery platter, bubbly hot and the aroma was amazing. We chose the Abruzzese, which was prepared with tomato sauce, house-made meatballs, sliced roasted garlic, mozzarella, parsley, Romano and Parmesan cheeses ($17). It was huge and covered with 15 to 20 medium-size meatballs. The meatballs were made with ricotta cheese, which gave them a wonderful moist consistency. They had not been cooked in tomato sauce, as most are, but were oven cooked and their flavors weren't lost in a tomato flavor. Cooked on a stone, the pizza dough was absolutely some of the best we've eaten. This alone is worth a future trip.

Needless to say, our carry-out box was full. As a side note, gluten free pizzas are also available.

There are many more menu selections left behind for another visit. The salads sounded wonderful, as well as their sandwiches. Next time may have to try the lamb Plandine: roasted lamb, mint pesto, aioli, mixed greens, red onions, Parmesan and red wine vinegar served on warm flatbread topped with cool salad and folded like a sandwich. ($10)

They do serve desserts but we didn't even look at the menu. Sara told us they have Key lime pie, brownies and cannolis.

Frank and Winny Ruffino, originally from Chicago, opened the Blue Highway nine years ago. Intrigued by the name we asked about the origin. Before our current Interstate highway structure was created Highway 441 was a major route bringing tourists to Florida vacation sites. Like all major U.S. highways, it was marked with a blue line on maps. It just goes to prove that driving down the back roads of small town U.S.A. can lead to unexpected treasures.

There are two Blue Highway locations. In Micanopy, it is at 204 NE U.S. Highway 441; phone (352) 466-0062, and in Newberry, it is at 13005 SW First Road; (352) 505-6833.

Grandparents are Lee and Belinda Austin, Ricky Simpson and the late Franita Bethune. Great-grandparents are Bill and Sandra Black.

FESTIVAL: Lake to be showcased

Two butterfly tours are scheduled with expert Mark Minno. One tour will start at 11 a.m., the other at 1 p.m.

If you are interested in native plants, expert Betsy Martin will have a tour at noon.

Three bird tours are scheduled, but participants are asked to call Thomas at (386) 466-2193 to reserve a place in one. There will be two tours starting at 8 a.m., one for beginners and the other for the more advanced. Another bird tour with Jimmy Krummrich is scheduled for 10 a.m.

Thomas said participants will need to take their own binoculars for bird tours, but they will have a few loaners.

"By getting people who haven't been there [Alligator Lake] before," Sulek said, "hopefully, you are getting new people who say, 'Wow, I never knew this was here. I think this is really cool. Hey, maybe I'll take a native plant home.' Before you know it, their kids are going to be able to experience a butterfly in the yard. You're getting them engaged in nature, and nature is important for all of us."

Thomas and Sulek hope the festival gets people thinking about water conservation, too.

"People don't think about it," Thomas said. "As long as the faucet turns on when they get ready to wash their dishes or take a shower, everything is fine. If we don't conserve, we are going to be in trouble."

"We understand we all need water," Sulek said. "We can't fight each other; we've got to find a common solution."

Thomas and Sulek said just turning the water off while brushing your teeth is something simple that helps conservation efforts.

The upcoming festival is designed to get people outside, to teach people something new and to develop a love for Alligator Lake, Thomas said.

"It would be wonderful if they'd bring their families back to Alligator Lake or tell their neighbors and have them come enjoy the place," Thomas said, referring to festival participants, "because I really do think it's a beautiful spot, and I do think that it's not very well known in Lake City."

Work needed to attract hummingbirds

Jewels of the air overcome many disadvantages.

By SUE MANNING
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The world's smallest bird can take up a big chunk of a person's spring to-do list: Trim the trees, weed the garden, make the nectar and hang the feeders.

With the beginning of spring, hummingbirds are making their way north after migrations that took many of them more than 500 miles across the Gulf of Mexico. They will return to the same yards where they have stayed in the past.

"They are fascinating. I call them nature's miracle. They have all these disadvantages (size, enemies, flying solo), yet they are thriving and have all these incredible abilities," said John Schaust, chief naturalist for Wild Birds Unlimited Inc. nature shops, which are based in Carmel, Ind.

Although hummingbirds are not traditional pets in the sense that they cannot be caged, clothed or leashed, enthusiasts consider the tiny colorful birds as pets that they feed, watch and fuss over.

Every spring, for instance, Schaust fields calls from people worried that not all of the hummingbirds that lived in their yards will return.

"They say last year they had six and this year there is only one. They want to know if they got hurt, if they were caught in a hurricane," he said.

It's illegal to sell or keep a hummingbird as a pet, but people who put out food and feeders and make their properties bird-friendly care about them like pets, Schaust said.

A good reason why hum-

A male ruby-throated hummingbird hovers above a backyard feeder. The smallest bird in the world weighs a tenth of an ounce, has a brain the size of a BB, wobbly legs and enemies like the praying mantis and bull frog. Even so, millions of humans will spend countless hours this spring and summer watching, feeding and worrying about the hummingbirds mating and nesting in their backyards.

mingbirds shouldn't be caged like canaries or parakeets is that it would die if it weren't free to fly and feed, said Dr. Laurie Hess, a Bedford Hills, N.Y., veterinarian for birds and exotic pets. She has treated two rescued hummingbirds, one for an eye ulcer and one for a beak injury.

A hummingbird has to visit between 200 and 1,000 flowers a day to survive, depending on the size of the bird and amount of nectar in the flower, said Ethan J. Temeles, a professor of biology at Amherst College in Massachusetts. Nectar is available in many stores, along with bird feeders, but concoctions can be made at home with four parts water to one part sugar, Schaust said.

Hummingbird numbers are unknown but Schaust estimated it to be in the hundreds of millions, though they are only found in North, Central and South America. They can live between three and five years.

Anyone who wants to attract hummingbirds to their yards should avoid pesticides in their gardens, since the birds need nectar and small bugs, and residue can easily be carried back to its nest, said Monique Rea of San Juan Capistrano, a volunteer hummingbird rehabilitator. Preparing for the return of the birds means carefully trimming trees and plants to avoid agitating a nest, she added.

It might seem like a lot of work for a bird that weighs just a tenth of an ounce, but devotees say the rewards are handsome— among them watching their flight. Hummingbirds flap their wings 20 to 80 times a second in a figure-eight motion to get lift going up and coming down.

They can fly forward, backward, right side up and upside down, making them "one of few birds who can fly backwards and the only one that can sustain flight backwards," Schaust said.

"It's just amazing to me that they can beat, breathe, hover and still be able to eat, but they do," said Hess.

Spring is an ideal time to watch for them, because it coincides with one of the birds' two mating seasons. Females build walnut-sized nests or redecorate last year's, Schaust said, in a process that takes six to 10 days. The nests are reinforced with spider web silk, so some homeowners might see the tiny birds in the eaves of homes collecting webs, he said.

To camouflage the nest, the mother covers the outside with lichen from tree trunks and glues it on with tree sap. If a nest breaks before the hummingbirds return, it can be rebuilt by humans.

"Hummingbirds have no sense of smell, so the mother won't have any problem with you touching the baby. You can even rebuild a nest if it was destroyed," Rea said.

After making a yard hospitable, hummingbird watchers have few other responsibilities. Orphaned babies can be brought to rehabilitators, Rea said, but medical attention for injured birds is difficult for an animal that size.

Surgery on hummingbirds is unheard of, Hess said, adding that it's a problem when the bandage weighs more than the patient.

Emma Eisenhauer, a first-grader at Fremont Elementary School in Columbus, Ohio, knows exactly how small a hummingbird is. For her studies this year, she had to make a life-size model of one— no easy task considering the 6-year-old's hand was too small to stuff the paper sculpture.

"It had to be bigger than the real bird because otherwise it would be too small to stuff," she said.

Get ready for success with roses

American gardeners aren't alone in their passion for cultivating roses in their home gardens. People around the world share this love of roses. Here in North Florida, roses will grow and bloom for at least nine months of the year. We grow them in mixed flowering plant beds, as specimens or in containers, or in gardens totally devoted to roses.

Roses are generally divided into either low or high maintenance rose groups. Those that thrive with minimal care include the antique, or heirloom roses. These easy care types produce more open and informal blooms like the shrub roses in the "Knock-out®" series. At one time in the past, good old rose bushes were grown as flowering shrubs in the landscape. They were leafy and full, had interesting form, and the blossoms had a heady rose scent. The blossom colors were soft pastels that fit harmoniously into southern gardens.

When hybridizers produced longer stems, larger blossoms, brighter colors, and pretty bud shapes in 'modern' roses, a trade-off was made for higher maintenance. Modern hybrid tea, grandiflora, floribunda and polyantha roses fit into the higher maintenance group because they demand frequent grooming, fertilizing, watering and spraying to keep them healthy.

Research in Florida has shown that hybrid roses grafted on 'Fortuniana' rootstock grow larger, are more vigorous, produce more flowers, and live much longer than plants grown on any other rootstock. 'Dr. Huey' rootstock is second-best, and 'Multiflora' is the shortest-lived and least satisfactory rootstock under Florida conditions. Many "old" roses and dwarf cultivars perform well on their own roots, but often do better when grafted.

<http://edis.ifas.ufl.edu/ep339>

You may or may not have been successful in your attempts at growing these captivating beauties. Success with roses also depends upon selecting varieties that perform well in our high humidity. Florida humidity contributes to the problematic fungal disease on leaves called blackspot. Some roses that perform well despite the humidity are labeled as resistant to blackspot, and they will rapidly renew any foliage lost to infection as they keep on growing.

Attend a free rose workshop and learn from the rose experts from 10:30 a.m. to noon at the Home Depot garden department in Lake City. Sabine Marcks, registered landscape architect and UF Master Gardener, will share ways to incorporate roses into any landscape. Geoff Hart, rose grower and UF Master Gardener, will show you which roses are best in our North Florida climate. Get answers to your rose questions.

Angry Birds roost at Space Center

By NARCIA DUNN
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL — Angry Birds have a new space coop.

At NASA's invitation, the online game birds are roosting at Kennedy Space Center for the next 1-2 years in an effort to lure youngsters to the cosmic wonders of math and science.

The huge interactive exhibit opened March 22 and immediately packed in the kids, including this reporter's 7-year-old son who couldn't get enough of the mirrored maze and the design-your-own Angry Bird and play-the-game stations.

It's called Angry Birds Space Encounter and is the first of its kind.

Astronaut Donald Pettit, a chemical engineer and father of 12-year-old twin boys, announced the collaboration between NASA and Angry Birds creator Rovio Entertainment a year ago while living aboard the International Space Station. He squeezed in as much physics as he could in the YouTube announcement.

"Wow, this could be a great venue for getting some physics and getting some math and getting some science into something that has the connotation as just an empty brain-draining video game that sucks out the creativity from the minds of young people," Pettit told The Associated Press at the grand opening.

"And so I thought, well, maybe I could help make a difference on this and bring the idea of a game up to a different level, where unbeknownst to the kids playing it, they're learning a little bit of math and physics at the same time."

Enter the concepts of parabolic trajectories, hyperbolic trajectories, elliptical trajectories and even Holman transfer orbits, "which is what we do with spacecraft going from Planet A to Planet B."

Billionaire sues over vintage wine

By LARRY NEUMEISTER
Associated Press

NEW YORK — As experts can testify, super sleuths in the wine business must study the cork, glass, sediment, wrapping, labels and how full a bottle of wine is to ascertain whether it's the real deal. And as two uber-wealthy wine collectors can tell you as they square off in federal court over some questionable bottles, even that sometimes is not enough.

Testimony began Wednesday in a civil trial six years after Florida energy maven William Koch, a yachtsman and collector, sued onetime-billionaire California businessman Eric Greenberg in U.S. District Court in Manhattan over $320,000 he spent in 2005 on two dozen bottles of wine that turned out to be duds.

The trial threatens to pop the cork on the dirty secrets of the wine auction world, which like the art market has been stung in recent years by a proliferation of fakes.

At the opening, there was plenty of talk of how difficult it is to be sure a bottle is real and how good a fake can be. It's heartbreaking for a true collector to learn that wine is inauthentic because it's more than just a bottle and a flavor, Koch's attorney John Hueston said.

"Koch will say these are links to history," he said, adding that great wines transport people to another era. "It's not just the juice in the package."

Greenberg — a former billionaire who built two Internet consulting companies before the 2000 collapse of those stocks reportedly reduced his net worth by as much as 90 percent — asserted his innocence as he took the stand as one of the trial's first witnesses.

"I wouldn't sell a fake wine," he said. "I've never intentionally sold fake wine in my life."

Koch, the brother of famous industrialists and conservative political supporters David and Charles Koch, is seeking compensation for the $320,000, along with unspecified damages.

DEAR ABBY

Mom happy with one child resists adopting a relative's

www.dearabby.com

DEAR ABBY: I have a relative who is very ill. She's not expected to survive. She has a 1-year-old daughter, "Whitney," and a husband who isn't particularly interested in parenting once his wife is gone. My husband and I have a 3-year-old, and my husband would like to have more children. I love this relative and the little girl, but I'm not interested in raising another child. I'm fine with just one.

I am in my mid-40s and already feel overwhelmed being the parent of one child. My husband says I'm selfish for not wanting to share my good fortune. He may be right, but I feel that if I'm talked into taking her, I'll be unhappy and resentful. Please advise. - ONLY WANTS ONE

DEAR ONLY WANTS ONE: Children need love and attention from the adults who parent them. While your husband has that to offer Whitney, you do not. Because you would be unhappy and resentful if your husband talks you into adopting her, it would be better for you AND Whitney if someone who really wants a child, and is capable of providing the love and support a child needs, took her.

DEAR ABBY: I am retired from teaching high school biology after 39 years. The last year I taught, some of my students said I was the "youngest" teacher on the faculty - not chronologically, but in the way I talked to them. I treated them as important, as equals. Being around high school students all those years kept me young.

Since my retirement, I can no longer do the thing I loved best: teach biology. However, I am keeping my commitment to staying young. Last summer I bicycled 500 miles across Kansas. I do nine hours of dance exercise and aerobics a week, paint with oils, do photography and am starting to relearn the guitar. I may be in the early stages of Parkinson's disease, so I want to do everything I didn't get to do when I was younger while I still can.

I think too many people are busy being old. Most of my former classmates and friends have died. Many younger people can't do what I do. Some of them tell me I should "act my age" and "learn to be old." But what I'm doing keeps me young, and if I look silly doing it, so be it. I feel more fit now than when I was 21. If I die in an aerobics class it will be a lot better than doing it slumped in a chair. What are your thoughts on this? - LIVING WELL IN WICHITA

DEAR LIVING WELL: As long as you are living a full life and enjoying what you're doing, you should ignore those "helpful" individuals who tell you to "act your age" and "learn to be old." It has been awhile since I have read such nonsense.

You have been blessed with health, vitality and an inquiring mind. Life is too short to waste a second of it. When you're old and infirm you will know it, so don't let anyone rush you.

TO MY CHRISTIAN READERS: A happy Easter to all of you!

exciting and challenging. Love is on the rise, and your current relationship will be enhanced, or a new one will begin if you get out and do the things you enjoy doing most.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't let emotional issues get blown out of proportion. Take pride in what you do and use your logic and common sense to get others to help you achieve your goals.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Nurture important relationships. Talks may be emotional, but they will be effective, bringing you closer to a decision that has to be made regarding your personal life. Don't feel pressured, instead take control and make the choice that is best for you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A financial situation can be resolved if you drum up new ways to offer services that utilize your skills and talent. Good fortune will be yours if you use your ingenuity and loyal contacts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't let your emotions stand between you and what you need to accomplish. Put your effort into your home and family as well as your romantic relationships and you will enjoy the luxury of good company and additional comfort.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stand back and let others fend for themselves. Taking over may be your way of doing things, but this time you will be meddling and criticized for your actions. Focus on your reputation and what you want to accomplish.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Don't make excuses. Do what's expected of you and get on with your day. Getting together with old friends will do you good. Changes at home will work to your advantage. Love is highlighted, and a close relationship will enhance your status.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Flesh out your creative ideas. Draw up your plans and discuss the possibilities with people you feel can contribute. There is money to be made. Stop dreaming and procrastinating and take action before someone steals your idea.

CELEBRATING
DOCTORS' DAY
2013

Every day, the doctors at Lake City Medical Center treat others with compassion, respect and kindness. On March 30th, it's our turn to show just how much we care about them. That's because March 30th is National Doctors' Day. A very special day for doctors everywhere to receive a little well-deserved attention of their own.

So, to all the wonderful physicians at Lake City Medical Center, we have one very important thing to say:

thank you for caring so much.

 LAKE CITY
MEDICAL CENTER
