Deputies arrest burglary suspect

Man accused of six break-ins in Fort White area.

By AMANDA WILLIAMSON
awilliamson@lakecityreporter.com

A suspect in six Fort White residential burglaries was arrested Wednesday, according to a Columbia County Sheriff's Office report.

Shane Ryan Summers, 23, of 2701 SW 31 Terrace, Gainesville, faces six charges of burglary and 16 charges of larceny.

According to the report, all six homes were entered in October and items such as electronics, firearms and jewelry were stolen.

In some cases, witnesses reported seeing a green and gold Ford Expedition in the same area as the crimes.

Deputy Cody McIntyre responded to Marquita Cheney's home on Oct. 16 about a burglary. A minor in Cheney's home discovered the break-in after getting out of school. According to the child, two dogs were outside, the front door was open and the house looked extremely messy, the report said.

The television was missing. The girl's bedroom was disheveled, with the mattress knocked off the bed and her drawers dumped onto the ground. The second bedroom was in disarray and clothes littered the floor. The suspect had locked her third dog in one of the bedrooms. Outside the home, McIntyre noticed tire tracks leaving the house.

Cheney informed McIntyre she would complete a detailed list of all the items missing from her home. She also said that her door was damaged and her three dogs beaten. One of her dogs had a bloody mouth and a red chest, the report read.

While processing the home, Deputy Brian Lucas did not find any prints on the jewelry boxes, door handles or the DVD player. However, according to the report, he found a fresh cigarette butt and a plastic cigarette wrapper. Cheney said neither belonged to her.

Lucas discovered a fingerprint on the plastic wrapper, the report said.

On Oct. 19, Deputy Joseph Vargo received a call from Detective Yankel of the Alachua County Sheriff's Office saying that Summers had been arrested in Alachua County for a series of burglaries. When ACSO searched Summers' vehicle, a green and gold Expedition, several items were found that connected back to the Fort White burglaries, including medicine prescribed to one of the victims.

Vargo met with Yankel to get photos of the recovered property. Keith Cason, one of the victims,

Area lawmakers met for a Legislative Breakfast at The Country Club of Lake City Thursday to discuss current issues affecting Florida, such as water conservation, education and agriculture.

U.S. Rep Ted Yoho, R-Gainesville, addressed the 119 attendees first, followed by state Rep. Elizabeth Porter, R-Lake City; U.S. Sen. Marco Rubio's aide Brian Mimbs; state Sen. Charles Dean's aide Nicholas Abrahams and several community members.

The breakfast was organized by the Lake City-Columbia County Chamber of Commerce.

"The big thing we have to do for economic development is bring certainty to the market," Yoho said. "It's a point in time when I see people willing to put party politics aside. It's not a Republican issue or a Democratic issue. It's an American issue."

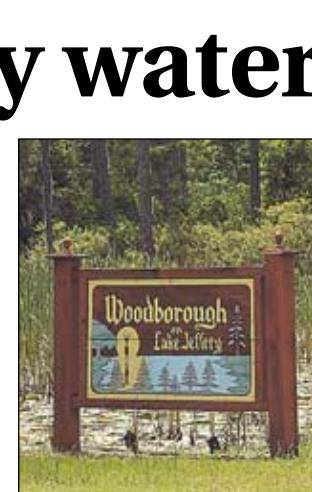

According to Yoho, the U.S. House just passed a bill in support of the Keystone Pipeline, which he thinks will stabilize the economy.

Subdivision to get city water

By TONY BRITT
tbritt@lakecityreporter.com

Lake City government is expanding city water services to the Woodborough Subdivision.

Woodborough is a residential subdivision about 2.5 miles northwest of the city, off Lake Jeffery Road.

The water lines are being added to Woodborough because a number of residents have called city officials complaining about the quality of water from their wells.

"Over the last two years we started receiving feedback from the residents of that community that they have bad water out there," City Manager Wendell Johnson said. "There are some problems with the quality of the water, and they inquired about city water."

The city already has water lines to another, smaller subdivision directly across from Woodborough and decided to look into the water system extension project.

"The city currently has an available 12-inch water main that's located on Lake Jeffery Road, directly across from the Woodborough Subdivision," Johnson said.

The estimated cost of the project is $500,000. The city received $18 million in utility bond funds in 2010 to build the Kicklighter Waste Water Treatment Plant, but the HOLLYWOOD actor Danny Glover has made an appearance at a union protest in downtown Johannesburg.

Glover, also a labor rights activist, is in South Africa as part of a trade union delegation from the United States that seeks international support for auto workers in Canton, Mississippi. The workers want to form a union at an auto manufacturing plant operated by Japanese company Nissan in Canton.

On Thursday, Glover attended protests by South Africa's Police and Prisons Civil Rights Union that drew hundreds of protesters. They want police officials to improve administrative staff pay and work conditions.

Glover was joined on his trip by Bob King, president of the United Auto Workers union. The two were invited by the National Union of Metalworkers of South Africa.

The website for People magazine was first to report Wednesday that the divorce is final.

Guard furloughs worry governor

MIAMI — Gov. Rick Scott says federal budget cuts known as the sequester are his biggest concerns for the upcoming hurricane season.

Scott says the cuts threaten to strain Florida's readiness capability.

According to the governor, the cuts mean nearly 1,000 Florida National Guardsmen and technicians will have to take furloughs during the summer.

Scott says he's talked with Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano and Federal Emergency Management Agency chief Craig Fugate about his concerns.

Scott joined Miami-Dade County Mayor Carlos Gimenez and other elected officials Tuesday at the Miami-Dade Emergency Operations Center to urge residents to prepare for hurricane season. Tips for making evacuation plans, disaster supply kits and other emergency preparedness are available at www.floridadisaster.org.

Parents jailed for neglect, drugs after six kids found in squalor

awilliamson@lakecityreporter.com

A Lake City couple faces charges of child neglect and drug production after investigations revealed they were living with their six children in a one-bedroom trailer without running water or electricity.

Holly Kimble, 34, and Johnny Kimble, 36, of 2928 SE Ebenezer Road, were arrested Wednesday.

According to the arrest report, Columbia County Sheriff's Office received information that the children were complaining of a chemical smell coming from their parents' room, as well as their mother locking herself in the room for days at a time.

When Deputy Daniel Lee arrived at the home, all six children, ages 1 to 13, were standing in the front yard eating "bricks of dried Ramen noodles and looked as if they had not bathed in days," the arrest report said.

Dirty clothes littered the yard, and the trailer smelled of raw sewage. Lee asked if the home had running water and electricity, to which Johnny Kimble responded it did not. According to the report, the Kimbles had not enrolled their children in Columbia County Schools after moving from Union County.

Holly Kimble took Lee inside the trailer to inspect the living conditions. The trailer had one bedroom, where the Kimbles slept with their youngest children. According to the report, toilet paper and feces were piled in the bowl of the bathroom toilet, with used toilet paper accumulating next the toilet.

let. The shower had a broken faucet and was unusable.

In the kitchen, dirty dishes were stacked on the counter and in the sink, the report said. The refrigerator had little food, while the freezer had meat and a half-melted bag of ice to keep the food from going rancid.

According to the report, there was a couch in the living room where the oldest children slept.

Lee contacted the Department of Children and Families, and Investigator Pujala arrived at the Kimble's home. The DCF investigator reported drug use within the home.

According to the report, Pujala requested both Johnny and Holly Kimble submit to a urinary drug test but they refused.

As Lee photographed the home, he noticed a container of lighter fluid, a scale and lithium batteries on a shelf in the bedroom, the report read.

"All of these items are commonly used to 'cook' methamphetamine," he wrote in the report. "While looking at the burnt plastic and metal that were scattered throughout the yard, I noticed a plastic bottle approximately two liters in size that contained a white and red powdery substance."

He suspected the item to be a reaction vessel for producing meth. Investigations revealed that Johnny Kimble had purchased pseudoephedrine 17 times in the last year, and Holly Kimble had purchased it 8 times.

Both were taken to the Columbia County Detention Facility, and held in lieu of $15,000 bail each.

LAWMAKERS: Government leaders speak at chamber event

Everything America does is dependent on oil, he said.

The congressman also expressed concern that America would lose its edge in manufacturing of medical devices because of the Affordable Care Act, also labeled "Obamacare." The House recently voted to repeal the ACA for the 37th time.

The act establishes a large array of taxes, including a 2.9 percent tax on medical devices, which would affect all businesses that produce those products.

Florida recently established Blue Alert, which uses the Amber Alert system to send out a notice when a law enforcement officer is shot and the offender is still at large, Yoho said.

During the question-and-answer part of the breakfast, County Commissioner Ron Williams spoke on behalf of Florida's dwindling resource, water.

"Water, water, water," Williams said. "Water is our future, and without water, we're going to disappear."

Being from an agricultural background, Yoho said he understood that water is a huge issue. He said Floridians need to be good stewards of all resources — timber, oil and water.

"Water is something we can't live without," he said. "I was at a meeting. There was this old-timer there ... He goes, 'Yeah, water's a real thing, but what we need to do is get on our knees and pray. Only God can fix this, and the rest falls on us.'"

Porter continued the conversation about water by addressing her water management bill passed in the last session of the state legislature.

"This will help protect our water supply," Porter said.

With the legislative session ending on May 13, Porter informed the group at the Legislative Breakfast that the new state budget contained extra revenue. With the additional funds, the legislature didn't have to make cuts or increase taxes, she said.

"We were able to give education an additional $1 billion," Porter said.

Columbia County School Superintendent Terry Huddleston said the funds will help with teacher raises. The additional money given to school districts is earmarked and required to be spent only in certain areas, such as teacher raises and technology, he said.

As Common Core Standards replace Next Generation Standards in state education, all testing will be done digitally.

Columbia County will use the funds Porter referenced to improve the technology infrastructure, in order to stabilize the county's ability to handle information, Huddleston said.

"One of the profound issues Sen. Rubio has really been moved by, stood through election for and one of the reasons he's there now is the deficit and the debt," said Brian Mimbs, Rubio's legislative aide.

Rubio intends to stand by not raising the debt ceiling in future sessions, he said.

State Sen. Dean, R-Inverness, was represented by his aide, Nicholas Abrahams. Abrahams spoke directly to Williams when he said he intended to talk only about the water.

Before the Water Management Bill was passed, the St. Johns Water Management District and the Suwannee River Water Management District weren't allowed to talk to each other.

"We can't outlaw drought," he said. "But we can protect what we have."

According to Abrahams, state government budgeted $10 million for springs protection.

Lake City Mayor Stephen Witt discussed the city budget, which dropped from $53 million last year to $50 million this year.

"If you noticed around our community, there's been a lot of improvements," he said. "One of main improvements being the paving of the streets downtown — something that hadn't been done in many years."

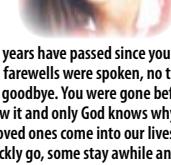

The city is considering adding a pavilion at Wilson Park, he added.

County Commission Chairman Stephen Bailey was the last representative to speak. He said the county is in good shape.

"We get constantly asked why we are in such good financial condition," he said. "They use us as models throughout the state. ... We don't utilize state forecasted budgets when they send them out."

ANOTHER VIEW

A reset on presidential primary

Florida's presidential primary experiment is over, and the results are mixed, at best.

With no fanfare at the end of this year's legislative session, the state moved its primaries from January to March, helping restore some sanity to a process that had come to resemble a game of musical chairs.

Although some might argue the change is rooted in the presidential aspirations of U.S. Sen. Marco Rubio, we think the return to a March primary is beneficial for the state, the candidates, the political parties, and to the overall primary process.

Going back to 2008, a handful of states that included Florida jockeyed to gain influence and attention during the presidential primary season. That meant positioning themselves earlier in the season, before the nominations are locked up.

In Florida, the move to earlier primaries was championed by Rubio, who was speaker of the Florida House of Representatives at the time. Florida lawmakers voted to move the primaries to January, causing other states to move theirs even earlier. The move angered the Democratic and Republican national parties, which punished the state's parties by reducing the number of voting delegates from Florida who could attend the national conventions.

Florida did get plenty of attention, and it did influence the outcomes to some degree, though not always in ways that were anticipated or desired. Early primary wins in Florida boosted the campaigns of John McCain and Mitt Romney. ...

Long-shot candidates who won surprising victories in early primaries complained about a compressed schedule that made it impossible to compete with more monied candidates, particularly in a state as vast as Florida.

Looking to 2016, the national Republican Party was prepared to impose a significant penalty on state Republicans if they kept the primary in January, preventing all but 12 of its 100 delegates from attending the national convention.

That prospect was enough for Rubio's state director to suggest to state lawmakers that the primaries be moved back to March. Not surprisingly, Florida's Democrats agreed.

All things considered, the January primaries caused more trouble than they were worth. Florida's decision to reverse course will bring an orderly procession of primaries that benefit the candidates and the nomination process overall. The state's political parties can seat all of their delegates.

As we have said before, there is a way to give every state a chance to play a role early in the primary season. Congress needs to consider a rotating schedule of regional primaries that gives each region a turn at going first. That would help address the criticism that the traditional early primary states of Iowa, New Hampshire, Nevada and South Carolina are given undue influence every primary season.

Whether its primaries are in January or March, though, Florida need not worry about its influence. As the fourth-largest state in the nation, and with its reputation as a political bellwether, Florida will always matter.

How much time do you have left? Captain Jack Sparrow (Johnny Depp) tells us in the "Pirates of the Caribbean: On Stranger Tides" movie: "...But better to not know which moment may be your last; every morsel of your entire being, alive to the infinite mystery of it all... and, who's to say I won't live forever, eh?" We probably don't know how much time we've got left. Is there enough time left to do new and exciting things in your life? What if you died today? Did you experience what you want in this life? Did you accomplish what you want in your life? Are you satisfied with your life? Are there regrets that you could still resolve? Are there things you'd like to do, have, or be?

I moved on from a career of counseling troubled youth and families with Florida Sheriffs Youth Ranches, and with Meridian Behavioral Health Achievement Center, a residential home for troubled youth in Lake City. I felt a need to do more new and exciting things with my life. In these last five years, I began teaching more classes at Florida Gateway College, beginning to write this weekly column, and I took up golf, and joined a country western band. For the last three years we performed three or four times a month. This year I've taken my karaoke machine on the road and enjoyed doing some local performances. I bought a boat, and became more active in water sports and activities. I'm having the best time of my life. For me, I want to keep making each new year the best year of my life.

Time is one thing that we all have in common. The length of time each of us is given is built into our genes. Psychological biologists now know that aging, and the very time of our deaths, is built into our genes. Each of our DNA molecules has about 25,000 genes, and there are little clocks called telomeres near the end of each of those DNA molecules that have our deaths programmed in. They're ticking away.

However, biology isn't the only determinant of the length of our lives. The way we live, the care we take of our bodies, our judgment, foods we choose in our diet, and physical activities, can make our lives either shorter or longer. Research even shows that having a positive attitude can add seven to ten years to our lives! The amount of respect and appreciation we give our bodies and minds can add years to our lives, or shorten those lives dramatically.

That time that we are given is only as good as the way we use it. Wasted time can't be replaced. It's gone. Time that's used well can add enjoyment, self-development, self-fulfillment, a purpose, and a worthwhile life for ourselves, for those we touch, and for the whole world.

What's next for me? It might be another career in real estate sales, or I might be an anthropologist (or an assistant), or crew a tour boat. I'm working on my book, a collection of these very articles.

How about you? What do you feel is the best thing you could be doing with the time you have? If you could see your life as a story, what would you like your story to be about? What would you like to experience, enjoy, accomplish, develop, contribute, or to stand for? Now is a good time to give it some thought. Make a short list of those things you want to do, be, or have in your life. Choose some directions to pursue. What can you do now to get the ball rolling? Put the first step on your calendar.

Feel that spark. Quick, before it slips away, turn off that television. Don't waste the hour. Get started. Do it now. "The longest journey begins with a single step." (Lao Tse.) Life is too short to waste. Take charge of the moment. Now's your chance.

■ What are some new directions you'd like for your life? Please send me your comments and ideas to Bob.Denny8@gmail.com.

Smoke from wildfires puts more Americans at risk

Wildfires in this country have generally been considered the price one risks for living in the rugged and scenic reaches of the Far West and Southwest. If the fires were health hazards, they were dismissed as local ones.

Recent research has shown wildfires are becoming a national health menace, especially considering that one-third of Americans have breathing or heart problems that put them at risk from the fine particulates — soot — from a wildfire that can travel thousands of miles from the site of the blazes.

The problem will only intensify. As the climate gets warmer and drier, wildfires will cover larger areas, generate more smoke and become more difficult to contain in fire seasons that are beginning to last longer.

The number of fires has remained relatively constant — roughly 74,000 a year — but the number of acres burned has been. More than 7 million acres burned in eight of the last 12 years.

It doesn't help matters that people insist on living in wooded areas that Mother Nature never intended as subdivisions. The pollution from the Colorado wildfires of last spring exceeded the worst pollution on record in such notoriously smog-shrouded cities as Beijing, Mexico City and Los Angeles.

Russia's top pulmonary scientist, Dr. Alexander Chuchalin, compared the effects of the 2010 wildfires outside Moscow to the effects of smoking two packs of cigarettes within two or three hours.

As usual, children and the elderly are the most at risk. The main culprit is fine particulate matter that goes deep in the lungs. By fine, the scientists mean particles a fraction of the width of a human hair. The particles and other hazards, like ozone pollution, can be there even when there's no visible smoke.

Wildfires are notoriously difficult to predict, their direction determined by prevailing winds, topography and the presence of whatever trees and plants burn most easily.

Larger fires mean larger smoke plumes traveling farther, meaning families living where there is no immediate threat to life or property, who live out-of-sight, out-of-mind from the wildfires, far enough not even to smell the smoke, are still at risk from the pollution the fires throw up.

The science is getting better, but less than a third of all U.S. counties have air-quality monitors, and even fewer, even in the danger zones, have smoke emergency plans or ready access to enough effective soot-filtering masks.

With the reach of fire pollutants spreading nationwide through the atmosphere, the old adage needs to be revised: Just because there's no smoke doesn't mean there's no fire, even if it's half a continent away.

Hell on earth - Part 2

Last week in part 1 of Hell on Earth, we gave you the scripture in Revelation 9. This week we want to take a more in-depth look at its meaning. The title "Hell on Earth" does not speak of the hell of Revelation 20: 11-15. The hell spoken of there is the final abode for the Devil and his angels; and all those who do not know Jesus as their personal savior.

Now I know that some do not believe that the God of Love would ever allow anyone to go to a place like hell; but it is clearly taught in the pages of God's Word. Today we speak of a time on earth that will come about during the seven-year Tribulation period on earth; before the return of the Lord to earth at His Second Coming.

Verse 1. Notice that "a star fallen" is a person; for it says "to him was given the key to the bottomless pit." The person is none other than Satan. Notice in verse 2: and he opened the bottomless pit. The pit spoken of here should be translated the abyss, sometimes used as the lower parts of the earth (Eph. 4:9). It is a place so feared by demons they prefer the depth of the lake instead (Luke 8:31). When he opened the pit much smoke arose out of it, so much that the sun and the air were darkened. That's not hard to believe because often roads are closed because of smoke from forest fires. This pit is the place where the angels that fell with Lucifer are bound. Jude 6 speaks of the fallen angels "And the angels which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, He has reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day." Seven times in the Book of Revelation reference is made to the place where the fallen demon angels are. God is the only thing holding back these demons today, because He has the key and this pit will not be unlocked till God gives the key to Satan.

BIBLE STUDIES

When Satan unlocks the abyss million of demons come out to torture men that do not have the Seal of God. They do not kill, only bring torment on them for five months. They have a tail like a scorpion. The scorpion tail has a stinger that injects poisonous venom when it stings. I am told today a scorpion's sting will not kill but make a person extremely sick and is extremely painful. The torment in the stinger is so bad that men want to die, but as verse 6 says "In those days men will seek death and not find it."

David Jeremiah said this about the demons in verses 7-9: "They are imperial creatures; Their shape is like horses prepared for battle. They are invulnerable creatures, ... intelligent creatures ... intriguing creatures ... inhuman creatures ... indestructible creatures and ... impressive creatures." What a powerful description given of these demons. Verse 11 tells us their king is in Hebrew Abadon and in Greek it is Apollyon. These names mean the Prince of Darkness (Satan).

Don't be caught here. Accept Christ as your savior today, before it is too late.

Angry but helping

Four times Isaiah describes God's attitude towards the nation of Israel as, "In spite of all this His anger does not turn away, and His hand is still stretched out." It is quite interesting that even though God was angry with Israel, He was still willing to stretch out His hand to help them.

The first time the statement is used comes after Isaiah describes the mindset of Israel as being full of pride and arrogance because they said they would rebuild what God had destroyed with better material than what was used earlier (Isaiah 9:12). A second time Isaiah says this follows his description of the mistreatment of the people by their leaders (Isaiah 9:17). The third time comes after Isaiah says that the people are devouring one other (Isaiah 9:21). The fourth time this is mentioned is in regards to how the people were treating the poor, the widows and the orphans (Isaiah 10:4).

The nation of Israel thought they were somebody. Because they had been told all their life that they were God's "chosen one," they believed they were something special, much different from the nations around them.

While God was not pleased with their actions and attitudes, He still was willing to help them. God's love for His people must have been extremely great in order for Him to be angry with them, but still be willing to help them – a characteristic for us to implement in our own lives.

Most, probably, would agree that if we are angry with someone, we surely are not going to help them! If we are upset

BIBLICAL MEDITATION

Carlton McPeak

with a friend, we are not going to help them until they make things right. If we are mad at our spouse, we are not going to do anything around the house to help make their life easier. If our parents do something which makes us angry, we will show them by not doing anything to help them. Why are we so unlike God in this manner?

Most people have a hard time doing something good for someone when they are upset with them. Our unpleasant attitude towards that person will not let us do good for them. However, God's example shows us that we can be angry with them while at the same time doing something which will help them. How is this possible?

Probably the most important thing to remember is that what makes us angry is a separate action. Be upset at what they are doing and not at them personally. Even though they make us angry, we still must be seeking their best interest and doing what we can to help them. This may not be what we naturally want to do, but it is the "God thing" to do. Continuing to love a person even though they have made us angry is very difficult but not impossible. We must separate in our minds the anger we have for someone and the love we have for that same person.

In trying to help His people, God sent the prophet Isaiah to tell them what they were doing that made God angry. One way that we can help people who make us angry is by telling them what they are doing that makes us angry. Without us telling them, they may not have a clue as to what they have done to make us angry. They may have no knowledge that their actions have made us angry. How can they make any changes if they are uninformed?

Let's be like God! Getting angry is okay. After we get angry, be willing to help others.

Money can't buy happiness

While standing in line at the grocery store recently, I noticed the cover of a national magazine warning about how our troubled economy is negatively affecting families and relationships. According to the headline, money is the number one relationship killer.

On one hand, I have to agree: family members quarrel over money and go years without speaking. Friendships end over loans not given or not repaid, and marriages experience huge struggles when both sides aren't working together toward a common financial goal. But on the other hand, let's be careful to see the real problem here: Money itself is amoral. It can be a blessing or curse, depending on its use. It is the nature of the person using the money that determines its morality.

The Bible speaks often to the issue of money because it is a fact of life. We need money to live. I Timothy 6:7-10 records some basic truths:

"For we brought nothing into the world, and we can take nothing out of it. But if we have food and clothing, we will be content with that. People who want to get rich fall into temptation and a trap and into many foolish and harmful desires that plunge men into ruin and destruction. For the love of money is a root of all kinds of evil..."

I once heard a joke about a greedy, miser of a man who hoarded money his entire life and was bound and determined to take it with him when he died. He instructed his wife to place his wealth in the casket when he passed away; he wanted no one else, including her, to enjoy his money after he was gone. After his funeral, friends and family were curious to know whether

HEART MATTERS

angieland3@windstream.net

she carried out his wishes; "Of course," she replied, "but instead of handling all that cash, it was much more convenient to write him a check!" No way around it ... you can't take it with you!

The word "content" is defined as "quietness of mind; satisfaction." When we are struggling with financial issues, isn't "quietness of mind" the first thing to go ... even more so if our struggle includes other people? But notice the last part of this scripture. It tells us that the root of the problem is not money, but the love of money is where all kinds of problems begin. Constantly overextended on your budget? Continually arguing with your spouse over money? A workaholic with no time for your family? These are just a few of the "temptations and traps that plunge men into ruin." One of the biggest traps here is to think that more money will solve these problems. In Luke 16:10, the Bible says, "Whoever can be trusted with very little can also be trusted with much ..." If the way we are handling the money we have been trusted with is damaging the relationships in our lives, there is a good chance that more of it won't help.

In his book "Money Answers," financial planner and best-selling author Dave Ramsey agrees with God's word that contentment is the most important financial concept. He writes, "Happiness is sold to us as an event or thing, and consequently our finances have suffered. Fun can be bought with money, but happiness cannot."

In other words, contentment is not found in gathering more "stuff" but in our relationship with God and others. Changing our focus on how we pursue happiness will ultimately change our financial situation and our life for the better. After all, in the end it will not be our checkbook but our hearts that matter.

Blessings,
Angie

Jesus and Jonah, the reluctant prophet

Once again hard-headed Pharisees approached Jesus. As usual it was to challenge Him. They wanted to see a sign, something which would speak directly of his authority.

Where had they been? Jesus had been openly performing miracles and signs (Matthew 12:22-23). Their response: (24): "But when the Pharisees heard this, they said, 'It is only by Beelzebul, the prince of demons, that this fellow drives out demons.' Would Satan work against himself? Of course not. Their hard heart was so obvious. Their request for a sign was answered this way: "A wicked and adulterous generation asks for a sign! But none will be given it except the sign of the prophet Jonah. For as Jonah was three days and three nights in the belly of a huge fish, so the Son of Man will be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth. The men of Nineveh will stand up at the judgment with this generation and condemn it; for they repented at the preaching of Jonah, and now something greater than Jonah is here" (Matthew 12:39-41). He had called them hypocrites and "vipers," and now He points them to Jonah. But why?

Jonah had prophesied some 800 years before. (Here is the short version.) God had called Jonah to go to Nineveh and tell them, "Repent of perish... He didn't want to go, because they were the enemies of Israel. He figured, if he didn't go, God would destroy them, which would help Israel. Instead of going to Nineveh, he went the opposite direction by boat. God sent a big storm, which threatened the ship, and Jonah confessed, he was running from God. This frightened the others, so he volunteered to be thrown overboard. Now God sends a big fish, which swallows Jonah. Three days in that situation would make anyone repent. So he did. I can just imagine how Jonah made the fish sick, and he vomited Jonah up on the land. He then went and preached his short "repent or perish" sermon. They repented, and God spared them. Jonah pouted, God rebuked him.

Now you can't call Jonah a fable without calling Jesus a liar. Jesus referred to Jonah as the only sign they would get. So what is he referring to?

Jesus was speaking of the time when he would be crucified, and then on the third day, He would rise from the dead. (Just as Jonah had spent three days in the belly of the whale/ big fish.) Would this convince them? Evidently not, at least most of them rejected Jesus. This is why Jesus said that the people of Nineveh would testify against them in the judgment — because the people of Nineveh repented, but these hard-hearted Israelites did not.

All the miracles done in their presence, all the messages presented in their hearing, all the prophecies fulfilled — even the greatest miracle of all, the resurrection of Jesus, who was seen by hundreds afterwards, (I Corinthians 15) — and many still refused. What will God do with those who's hearts are so hard, that they are unmoved by His grace? (Luke 10:13-14). It's not over, till it's over friends.

Best-selling author-priest Rev. Andrew Greeley dies

By DON BABWIN

Associated Press

CHICAGO — The Rev. Andrew Greeley was, it seems, always writing. At home on a typewriter, later on a computer, then on a plane with a laptop and even in his car dictating into a tape recorder as he drove.

By the time he finished, the outspoken Roman Catholic priest and Chicago newspaper columnist had written more than 100 non-fiction books and some 50 novels, many international mystery thrillers that routinely climbed onto best-seller lists. They were translated into a dozen languages.

And he also often spoke out about various religious topics, even criticizing the hierarchy of his own church over the child sex abuse scandal.

"His mind was never idle," said Tom Smith, Greeley's longtime colleague at the University of Chicago, where Greeley spent years as a sociology researcher.

"He was the kind of person who could be writing a column and get an idea for a novel, have a conversation he would use in a novel, use his novels to inspire his academic work and his academic work to inspire his novels," Smith said Thursday, shortly after learning about his friend's death.

On Wednesday night, nearly five years after he suffered a brain injury during a fall that put him in a coma for weeks, Greeley died in his home in downtown Chicago. He was 85.

"He served the church all those years with a prophetic voice and with unfailing dedication," his niece, Elizabeth Durkin, said in a statement. She also praised Greeley as a loving uncle who "tremendously enriched" his family's lives.

The Rev. Andrew Greeley, a Roman Catholic priest and best-selling author of novels and religious books, died Wednesday in Chicago.

Greeley, who was ordained in 1954, wrote a weekly column that appeared in the Chicago Sun-Times and other newspapers on the relationship between religion and politics. An internationally recognized scholar, he also was a contributor to the New York Times, National Catholic Reporter and other publications.

His final book, "Chicago Catholics and the Struggles Within Their Church," was published in 2010, exploring a topic that he had written about for years, sometimes giving him a reputation for generating controversy in the church.

"Sometimes I think that we as priests and bishops have done everything we possibly could to drive away the laity during the last 20 years," Greeley wrote in his book "Catholic Contributions: Sociology and Policy," published in 1987.

Greeley also had said that neither the church nor the government was willing to do much about priests who sexually abused children, telling a lay Catholic group in 1992: "The sexually maladjusted priest has been able to abuse the children of the laity and thus far be reasonably secure from punishment."

And during a news conference in 1987, Greeley said that if he were heading a church fundraising campaign, he would admit to church members that "we've really goofed. People are resentful over what they take to be the insensitivity of church leaders — particularly on matters relating to sex."

Greeley was born in the Chicago suburb of Oak Park in 1928, and he spent much of his life close to home.

He worked as a sociology professor at the University of Arizona and a researcher at the University of Chicago's NORC, formerly known as the National Opinion Research Center.

Field trip adds reality to book's ideas

By TONY BRITT
tbrritt@lakecityreporter.com

Reading a book can provide excitement through anticipation and imagination.

For a group of Eastside Elementary School students, excitement came to life Thursday when they toured the local airport, visited Timco and had an opportunity to see and touch aircraft they are reading about in class.

Sarah Ripple, an Eastside Elementary School fourth-grade teacher, said three classes with a total of 52 students participated in the field trip. She said the field trip included an excursion to Ocean Pond.

The students are reading "Hatchet," a book by Gary Paulsen, in which a boy named Brian survives a plane crash and has to survive in the wilderness.

The field trip was designed to reinforce the information the students have been reading in the classroom.

"The students are getting to compare and contrast between the smaller aircraft that Brian would have experienced in the book 'Hatchet,' and then they get to go over to Timco and get to look and observe some of the bigger aircraft," Ripple said. "They love getting to talk to the pilots and actually asking what all the gadgets do."

Ralph Zahnle (left) and Nick Harwell, Lake City Gateway Airport manager, talk to Eastside Elementary School fourth-grade students in Sarah Ripple's class during a field trip. Fifty-two fourth-graders participated in the field trip to the airport, Timco and Ocean Pond.

The field trip also included an excursion to Ocean Pond where the students were slated to catch minnows, collect and test water samples just as the character Brian in the book did.

"Between the airport, Timco and the visit Ocean Pond, the students get to experience what Brian experienced with the life survival skills," Ripple said. "They are loving it."

Nick Harwell, Lake City Gateway Airport manager, said the children toured eight aircraft and two helicopters during their field trip as well as visited Timco.

"We want to try to interest children in our community with aviation and we have a great relationship with Timco, so it was good the school was able to split the two groups with 30 kids each," he said. "We want to try to push and encourage aviation and try to capture interest in that age group. As they grow older and mature and may develop an interest in aviation, they can look back and reflect on the opportunity to see the aircraft up close and personal."

Art Hutchinson showed the students his 1951 Navion L17 aircraft, and explained to them that the craft had seen for more than 50 percent of all aviation history.

"We got some really good questions out of those kids," Hutchinson said. "It would have been nice to talk to them in smaller groups so you could talk to them individually, but it's nice to see young people interested in aviation because there's going to be a tremendous pilot shortage before long. We're interested in seeing anybody get into aviation."

Ralph Zahnle, had his 2003 Alarus CH2000, an aircraft primarily designed for flight training, on display for the students.

"I told the kids they have to weigh the benefits of any aircraft," he said. "If you wanted to go fast you are going to give up some handling characteristics and if you go slow, it will handle better, but not be able to go fast. That's what this aircraft does—it goes slower and handles well."

Zahnle also pulled some aviation fuel from the plane and explained the difference between aviation fuel and automotive fuel to the children.

WATER: City service being extended to subdivision project was altered from its original plans because of lack of growth.

City officials reapplied some of the $18 million in bond funds to the 2013 budget for other utility projects, including the Woodborough project.

The permit for Phase 1 of the project was approved earlier this week, Johnson said.

There are approximately 75 lots in the Woodborough Subdivision, and the permit is to provide water service to the first 38 lots. Twenty of the lots are on Scenic Lake Drive, and 18 lots are on Country Lake Drive.

"We anticipate the requests for proposals, since we have to contract this out because it's going to require directional drilling," Johnson said, noting it will take 5,400 feet of pipe to serve the customers. "We plan to go out to bids in June — within the next couple of weeks. It will take about a month, but we anticipate the actual construction on this will not start until the first of September." Johnson said once construction begins, it should take 90 to 120 days to complete.

City council has agreed to pay the costs for the lines, and Woodborough residents will only have to pay about $490 each for a tap fee. The city will also install backflow devices when connecting the water services.

City impact fees were suspended 18 months ago, and Johnson said he will ask city council Monday night to continue the suspension through the end of 2013.

The second phase for the remaining lots that are closer to the lake is in the design phase. Johnson said they hope to begin construction on that phase in early 2014 and have it done by next summer.

identified five firearms he said were taken from his home. Richard Lord, another victim, identified a broken television and a container full of change.

The report does not say where Summers was arrested. He was booked into Columbia County Detention Facility in lieu of $200,000 bail.

JV softball has big year on diamond

By BRANDON FINLEY
bfinley@lakecityreporter.com

While the varsity softball team of Columbia High captured a state championship in 2013, it wasn't the only softball team at Columbia enjoying success.

The junior varsity finished the season with an 11-2 record under first year head coach Jamie Crews and assistant Chelsea Brewington. The junior varsity avenged both of their losses — to Suwannee and Gainesville high schools — and the highlight of the year was winning the Doc4life tournament.

"All of the Tigers helped to deliver the win," said Crews.

Columbia continued its success in the tournament with a 12-0 win against East Ridge High.

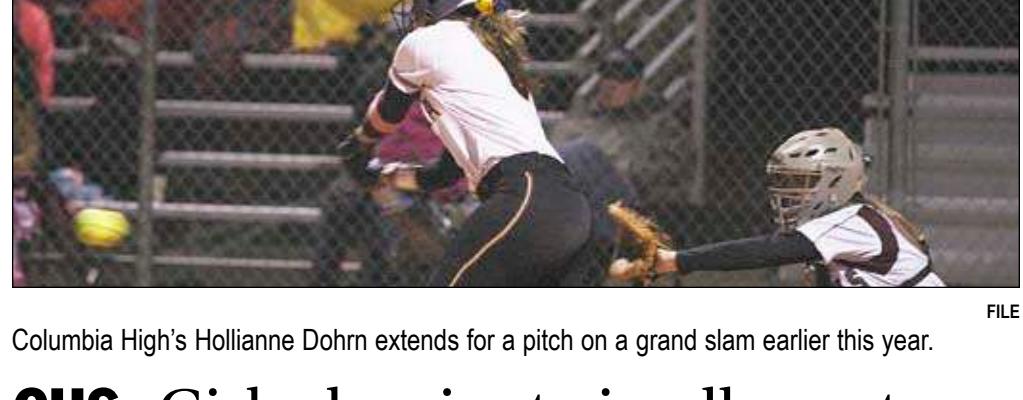

Columbia went on to beat Chiles High, 3-2, to win the Silver Championship. Hayes Fulford began the game with a single and reached second after Leslie Ann Ronsonet reached on an error. Lexus Eaker singled to score both runners.

In the third inning, Chiles answered with two runs, and the teams remained tied until the bottom of the seventh inning.

Fulford delivered the game-winning hit to score Shania Pelham, who led off with a bunt and stole second.

Ronsonet was also the teams ace on the mound during the year and her performance helped her move up to the varsity at the end of the season.

Head coach Jimmy Williams was named the Class 6A Coach of the Year and finished third out of all classifications for the same honor at the state level. Junior Kayli Kvistad took home the Class 6A Player of the Year and finished second out of all state classifications.

Columbia's bowling team also continued its success in recent years with a third straight trip to the state finals. The Lady Tigers finished fifth — their best showing in the state meet in school history. Columbia was also the district champion for the third year in a row.

Volleyball team members also had a year to hang their hats on with the first playoff appearance since 1999. Columbia also earned the second playoff victory in the sport in the school's history by defeating Orange Park High. It was the first playoff win since 1997.

Columbia's cross-country team rounded out the year with a third-place finish at the district tournament. The Lady Tigers advanced to the regional run.

DEAR ABBY

New wife's short leash keeps dad away from his young son

www.dearabby.com

DEAR ABBY: My ex-husband and I divorced a year ago. We share a 4-year-old son and have a cordial relationship.

Shortly after our divorce, he married a woman he had been carrying on an affair with while married to me. Since their wedding she has not allowed him to enter my home beyond the front door, be alone with me for any reason regardless of what we need to discuss, and he rarely calls to talk with our son anymore – all at her “request.”

He has also informed me that she’s “not comfortable” with the idea of us communicating unless she is part of the conversation. I think she is being silly and immature, and he claims to agree, but he wants to keep the peace.

I explained to him that even though he may allow her to dictate his life, she will not be dictating mine. If I feel I need to speak with him about something, I do not have to include her. Am I wrong? I am in no way trying to cause a problem in their marriage. I have decided that whatever answer you give I will abide by as I respect your opinion greatly. – NEEDS AN ANSWER IN TEXAS

DEAR NEEDS AN ANSWER: The current “Mrs.” is acting more like a jailer than a wife, but then, she knows what your ex is capable of if he gets past the front door or has private conversations with another woman.

This is happening because she perceives you as still a threat. That your former husband allows her to exert this amount of control is unfortunate. The distancing from his son is happening because he is permitting it, and the loser here is the little boy.

You're not wrong, but if the only way your son can have a relationship with his dad is for this woman to be ever-present, then bite your tongue and go along with it for as long as this marriage lasts or your ex summons up enough backbone to set his No. 2 straight.

DEAR ABBY: My sisters and I look out for our “Aunt Lil,” who is in her late 70s and never had children. Physically and mentally she’s fine right now. She quit driving a few years ago, but that had more to do with the price of gas than her driving ability. We run errands for her, take her to appointments, etc.

Our question: For most of her life, Aunt Lil has kept up a steady correspondence with many people all over the world. When I say she has pen pals everywhere, I’m not exaggerating. When the time comes and she is gone, how should we notify her friends?

I think a simple formal letter would be fine, but my sisters think each person should be notified individually, either with a phone call or a personal letter. Abby, there are 100 people she writes to and those are just the ones we’re aware of! Your thoughts would be appreciated. – AUNT LIL’S GIRLS

DEAR GIRLS: Considering that people live longer these days, I wouldn’t write off Aunt Lil too quickly. Because she still has all her faculties, ask HER how she wants it handled. She may prefer to write her own farewell note to be mailed after her death. (“By the time this reaches you, I will have gone to that great stationery store in the sky . . .”)

DEAR ABBY: I’m a 16-year-old girl. I am home-schooled with one friend. I’m lonely, sad, mad and depressed. I have always wanted to go to a real school, but it’s not an option for me. My parents are against it.

I am always lonely. I don’t know where to turn. I want to meet new people, but I don’t know how, or if my parents will let me do new things. I have been cutting myself for more than a year and have lost all motivation to do my schoolwork. I feel lost. Please help me. – SAD, MAD AND DEPRESSED IN BOZEMAN, MONT.

DEAR SAD, MAD AND DEPRESSED: Most parents who home-school make sure their children are exposed to activities within the community to ensure they engage with people of all ages. They participate in scouting, 4-H, sports, field trips, etc.

That you cut yourself to distract yourself from the pain of your isolation is serious. If you have a family doctor, please bring this up with him or her so you can receive the help you need to quit.

I’m sure your parents love you and want to protect you, but they appear to be doing it too diligently. At 16, you should be learning to interact with others your age. If you have a relative you trust or feel close to, I’m urging you to talk to that person about this. Perhaps your parents will accept the message from another adult.

DEAR ABBY: My husband brought home a puppy he couldn’t resist. I wanted to make him happy, so I didn’t object. We already have one dog. She’s calm, mature and well-trained. She is also used to our schedule (we both work full-time).

We have now decided to try for a baby. The puppy is only 5 months old, and even though it may take months to become pregnant, I’m worried it will be too much stress to train and care for a puppy while I’m pregnant. When I try to discuss this with my husband, he says, “Everything will work out.”

I want the best pregnancy possible, but I also don’t want to upset my husband by finding a new family for the puppy. What should I do? – ILLINOIS DOG LOVER

DEAR DOG LOVER: Talk to your husband again and stress to him the importance of seeing that the dog starts obedience classes. While it might be tempting to foist off the responsibility on your husband, you should both be involved so the dog will obey you both. With that accomplished, your pregnancy will be less stressful.

DEAR ABBY: I have been living with a man for 10 months. He is 70 and I am 59. Whenever we go to the grocery store, he winks and smiles at all the young, attractive women. Abby, I am fairly attractive for my age, and I don’t appreciate his making me feel disrespected this way.

Other than this, he makes me happy. Most of the time, he denies he does it, except when I catch him red-handed. Is there any hope for this relationship? – FEELING DOWN IN THE SOUTH

DEAR FEELING DOWN: Yes, if you can accept him exactly the way he is and not take what he’s doing personally. He may smile and wink because he thinks he’s being friendly. Or it may be a way of proving to himself that he’s still attractive. As long as it’s just a smile and a wink by the frozen vegetables, I’d say it’s harmless.

NASCAR INSIDER

Kevin Harvick snatches Coca-Cola 600 win, his second victory in NASCAR's longest race

Kevin Harvick won Sunday's Coca-Cola 600 at Charlotte Motor Speedway in typical Kevin Harvick fashion. He wasn't one of the more dominant drivers in the race, but when the checkered flag was in sight, he figured out a way to snatch the victory away from those with seemingly faster cars.

Kasey Kahne, going for his fourth Coke 600 victory, appeared to have the car to beat in the closing laps, before the caution flag flew on Lap 386 of 400.

Kahne stayed on the track, figuring that at the least a handful of drivers on the track behind him would stay out as well, providing a cushion between him and the drivers who did stop for fresher tires.

But Kahne wound up being the lone driver not to pit, and that allowed Harvick to restart beside him with two fresh tires. Harvick put the new rubber to work immediately after the restart, seized the lead and drove away, leading the final 11 laps to get his second 600 victory in the past three runnings of NASCAR's longest race. In 2011, he led just two laps in winning. It was his second win of the season, the first coming at Richmond on April 27, where he led just three laps.

He said his strategy of saving his best shot until the end was born years ago out of necessity.

"I like to just take my time and put myself in a position at the end of the race," he said. "I think a lot of that comes from growing up ... The only way to race the next week was to win enough prize money the week before so you could buy tires, whatever the case may be, to race."

"My dad, anybody I ever drove for before, would probably tell you the same thing. I'm not going to burn my car up in the first half of the race, go out and show off. That's what happens at the beginning of the race."

"Obviously, you want to run as fast as you can, but it really doesn't matter until the end."

For Kahne, who led a race-high 161 laps after starting the day with flu-like symptoms, it was another disappointing end to a race he could have won.

"This is the third time we've been to a mile-and-a-half [track]," he said. "I ran second, have been the fastest car at all three of them, but just didn't get the wins."

Kurt Busch also appeared to have a car capable of winning, but an issue with the battery in his No. 78 Chevrolet knocked him out of the lead and left him scrambling to finish third.

"Well, it was a good 550 miles, it seemed like for us, then the normal something has to pop up, some adversity we have to overcome, came about," he said.

Early in the running of Sunday's Coca-Cola 600 at Charlotte, a cable used with an overhead camera came loose, causing injuries to 10 fans, three of whom were transported to area hospitals, and damaging several cars, including the No. 18 Toyota of Kyle Busch.

NASCAR, in a fairly rare decision, allowed the affected teams to repair their cars under the red flag brought about by the fallen cable.

Race winner Kevin Harvick said he thought his eyes were playing tricks on him when he saw a black streak go by on the frontstretch. If they were, he feared his career was over.

"I tell myself, 'You've got to believe what you saw,'" Harvick said. "I got to the start/finish line, I eased off the gas. I knew what I had seen the lap before. I was hoping it wasn't my last race. I was hoping what I saw was right."

The FOX network, which uses the camera and cables, issued a statement saying the camera wouldn't be used again until the cause of the failure could be determined.

The Fox Sports overhead camera before it came loose, sending a cable onto the track.

Survival and 'a good car' are the most important things to Jeff Gordon at 'The Monster Mile'

After flirting with disaster while dancing with "The Lady in Black" at Darlington Raceway and running NASCAR's longest race at Charlotte Motor Speedway, the Sprint Cup Series drivers now must take on "The Monster Mile" at Dover International Speedway.

Jeff Gordon, whose four Dover wins are second among active drivers — bested only by his Hendrick Motorsports teammate Jimmie Johnson and his seven victories — said the one-mile concrete oval can present a monstrous challenge. He cited high speeds, big corners banked 24 degrees and straightaways banked at 9 degrees. The track's qualifying record is a sizzling 161.522 miles per hour, set in 2004 by Jeremy Mayfield.

"It's just a track where you're on the edge," Gordon said. "There's not a lot of room for error."

And Gordon said that even the best of drivers can become involved in single-car spins at Dover.

"On your own, you can break your car loose and find yourself in trouble, and it's hard to recover there," he said. "Usually when you have a problem, you're in the wall. And same thing when you're in a group and it happens as a group; there is going to be a big wreck. So, it is definitely a monster."

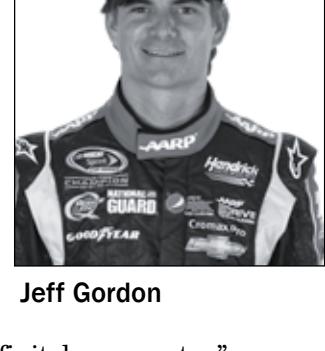

He said he races Dover much like he runs Darlington, and that means racing the race track itself first, and the competition second.

"You have to really respect the race track," he said. "You can't get too caught up in the competition. If you get track position like anywhere else, you've got to try to maintain it. It's just still very important, even at Dover. But survival, and having a car working good there, is the most important thing."

Matt Kenseth is a two-time Dover winner and made his Sprint Cup debut there in 1998, finishing sixth driving the No. 94 Ford for Bill Elliott, who missed the race to attend the funeral of his father, George Elliott.

Kenseth's performance tied the best finish of the season for Elliott's team, and it helped launch Kenseth's Cup career.

"Dover's always been my favorite track," Kenseth said. "Dover is real unique. It's one of those tracks you really have to attack."

Georgia, home of stock car racing's early stars, gets its due on NASCAR Hall of Fame Voting Day

In the earliest years of NASCAR, and even before the current Sprint Cup Series was started, many of the sport's top drivers and its top team were based in Atlanta, Ga. Raymond Parks was the Rick Hendrick of his era, dominating the series with multiple entries of immaculately prepared cars. And Peach State drivers like Red Byron, Gober Sosebee, Billy Carden, Roy Hall, Lloyd Seay and the Flock brothers — Bob, Fonty and Tim — were among the sport's early stars.

Atlanta was home to the one-mile Lakewood Speedway, known as both the "Indianapolis of the South" and the "Grand Old Lady." It hosted many of the major stock car races in the early years, as well as events for the same open-wheel cars that ran in the Indianapolis 500.

In 1949, the first year of the series now known as Sprint Cup, Byron won the championship, and he and Bob Flock combined to win half of the eight races on the schedule.

But it wasn't until the fifth class of the Charlotte-based NASCAR Hall of Fame that a Georgian was selected.

Last Wednesday, the late Tim Flock, the younger brother of Bob and Fonty Flock, Frances Flock and son Carl celebrate the selection of Tim Flock into the NASCAR Hall of Fame.

Jack Ingram is congratulated on his selection to the Hall of Fame.

Richard Petty congratulates Maurice Petty on his selection to the Hall of Fame.

among those praising the selection of one of the Georgia pioneers.

"Given the importance of Georgia drivers and car owners to the birth and development of NASCAR, it has been very frustrating to see people such as Raymond Parks all but shut out," Reed said. "So to finally see a Peach State pilot, especially one as deserving as Tim Flock, who was among those that helped mold and shape NASCAR, is very rewarding and a bit overdue."

"Hopefully, the voters will now see fit to put the other racing pioneers from Georgia into the NASCAR Hall of Fame."

Flock's Cup career was relatively brief. He ran just 187 races, but won 39 times, including 18 in 1955 alone, and took championships in 1952 and 1955. His winning percentage of 20.86 is second only to another Hall of Famer, Herb Thomas, who finished his career at 21.05.

Flock was born in Ft. Payne, Ala., but moved to Atlanta as a child. His family devoted their lives to racing, and even his sister, Ethel, drove for a time. The Flocks holds the distinction of being the only family to have four members run the same race in the division now known as Sprint Cup.

Running on the beach-road course, Ethel Flock Mobley, who was named for the highest grade of gasoline, finished 11th in a race that saw Red Byron take the win over Tim Flock, while Ethel finished ahead of her brothers Bob and Fonty.

Like his brother Fonty, Tim Flock was a showman. For a time he raced with a monkey, Jocko Flocko, strapped in the car with him. But in 1964, he was banned for life from NASCAR for trying to help organize a driver's union. He was reinstated shortly before his death in 1998.

NUMERICALLY SPEAKING

11 Sprint Cup races at Dover International Speedway in which the winner lapped the rest of the field (it hasn't happened since 1991).

32 Victories at Dover by Chevrolet, tops among all manufacturers.

1,923 Laps led by Jimmie Johnson in the past 16 Sprint Cup races at Dover, tops among all drivers.

3 Laps led by Dale Earnhardt Jr. in the past 16 races at Dover; he led 193 laps in winning there in 2001.
