Commissioners OK $100K to help fund conversion to wetland.

By STEVEN RICHMOND

The County Commission unanimously approved $100,000 of funding Thursday night toward a plan to convert Lake City's wastewater spray field into a wetland treatment system.

The plan is to convert 334 acres of spray fields near Sisters Welcome Road and CR 242 to a man-made wetland to filter nitrates out of wastewater, Steven Minnis, Suwannee River Water Management District's director of government affairs and communications, said during a presentation at the commission meeting.

While all commissioners were in favor of any action that would benefit the Ichetucknee Springshed, they raised concerns about the actual details of the plan, including proposed design, layout and long-term impact. Their primary concerns were about the wetland's stability during hurricanes, its impact on local wildlife and the lack of control the commission would have over the project, if approved.

Several commissioners claimed that they had very little knowledge of the project.

Minnis told commissioners that the estimated $4.8 million project would involve construction of a man-made wetland area that would filter out about 77,350 pounds of nitrates per year and ultimately

A road crew from Curt's Construction works on the new entrance to Columbia High School on County Road 252 on Thursday. The project is expected to be completed by mid-August, weather permitting.

New CHS entrance expected to be ready when school starts

Project's goal: Reduce traffic congestion on CR 252, US 41/441

By TONY BRITT

Construction work on the new Columbia High School entrance is expected to be completed when school begins next month.

"The project is still under construction and projected to be completed before school starts back," said Chad Williams, Columbia County engineer for the project.

Williams said he expects the project to be completed Aug. 19, which happens to be the day classes are scheduled to start.

The project's remaining work includes construction work in the county's right-of-way.

"The work is the final course of the driving surface, and the final dressing out. We've still yet to layout the sod and miscellaneous small items," Williams said.

The improvements involve about 1,800 feet of roadway, with new side drains, extensions of old culverts and replacement of some existing culverts.

Construction began in early June.

"The county has self-performed a large portion of the work and has contracted out a portion to Curt's Construction," Williams said.

The project's purpose is to alleviate traffic congestion on County Road 252 and U.S. 41/441.

"The school board initiated the project because of concerns they had, and the Department of Transportation got involved because of the traffic congestion on U.S. 41/441," Williams said.

Donnie Harrison, CHS assistant principal, said school officials were hoping to have the road completed for the 2012-13 school year, but it was pushed back by Tropical Storm Debby. He seemed pleased to learn the project was slated for completion before classes resume, offering traffic congestion relief.

"This (new entrance) is really going to help our traffic flows around the school area, for our neighbors and with our business," he said.

The celebration happens to coincide with Witt's 80th birthday, although he prefers the event to focus more on the community.

Spacey helps make TV history

LOS ANGELES

Kevin Spacey loves being part of what he calls "a new paradigm": Internet television that's just as compelling and well produced as anything on a cable or broadcast channel.

Spacey was nominated for an Emmy Award Thursday for his leading role in "House of Cards," the Netflix original series that collected nine bids in all.

"I'm so happy for the series and so happy for Netflix ... because it's a big acknowledgement of the show and its quality," said Spacey, also an executive producer. "For us to have broken through in ... so many categories, nine nominations, for what is really, in many ways, a new paradigm, is so thrilling."

Internet TV is a new frontier with new rules. For example, Netflix didn't require "House of Cards" to begin with a pilot episode introducing the main characters and story lines, freeing the writers to create natural suspense in an evolving story.

"It changes the creative process of how you write a show," said Spacey, 53. "When they gave us an order of 26 episodes — or chapters, as we like to call them — that was a remarkable thing for us because it meant that we could just get on with telling the story."

The way the show is distributed — all 13 episodes available at once — also offers audiences more choices about how to consume it.

Such creative flexibility draws film writers, directors and actors, such as Spacey, to the TV landscape.

"For storytellers who want to tell stories that are driven by character and not by explosions and things that only, in a sense, appeal to the heartbeat or the pulse and not the mind, then it makes sense to me that the best writers and directors and actors and storytellers are going to go to the ground where it is fertile," he said. "It's very fertile now, obviously. The streaming business is fertile, and the television business in its usual sense."

Marc Anthony reminds people he's American

NEW YORK — Apparently, some people need to be reminded that Marc Anthony is an American.

The New York-born singer of Puerto Rican descent touted his roots on "Live with Kelly and Michael" on Thursday after some people criticized his selection to sing "God Bless America" at this week's Major League Baseball All-Star Game, held in New York City.

In an interview, the Grammy-winning salsa star said that he heard people were questioning why a foreign-born person was singing the patriotic song.

Anthony said he was born in New York and added: "You can't get more New York than me."

Olbermann rejoining ESPN with late show

Keith Olbermann dreaded that he'd be remembered as the guy who rose to stardom at ESPN then left less than amicably.

"I don't want that to be in the obituary, flatly," he said on a conference call Wednesday.

So now he's returning to the company as a late-night host, insisting that, this time, a gig won't end badly.

Leaders want state's own test

TALLAHASSEE — Florida legislative leaders are calling on the state to draw up its own test for new standards that will soon be in place.

House Speaker Will Weatherford and Senate President Don Gaetz on Wednesday wrote a letter requesting that the state withdraw from a national consortium drawing up tests to measure common core standards.

Instead the two legislative leaders told Education Commissioner Tony Bennett that Florida should develop its own tests.

The legislative leaders said they reached that conclusion because the test drawn up by the national consortium will take too much time to administer.

They also said they were concerned about how long it would take to evaluate test results.

Bennett said the letter raises "critical issues" and he will soon make a decision on what to do.

Lottery winner buys home

JACKSONVILLE — The retiree from Maine who won a $590.5 million Powerball jackpot in May has bought a 6,322-square-foot, five-bedroom home in a gated golf course community in southeast Jacksonville.

The Tampa Bay Times reports that 84-year-old Gloria MacKenzie has remained in the shadows since coming forward to claim the prize, which she took in a lump sum of $370.9 million that totaled $278 million after taxes. She bought her winning ticket May 18 in Zephyrhills, where she

Superintendent charged with theft

BRISTOL — A Florida Panhandle superintendent was removed from office Wednesday after authorities charged her with using a district credit card for personal expenses.

Gloria Gay Uzzell, 51, turned herself in at the Liberty County Sheriff's Office Wednesday afternoon. She was later released on bail.

She's been charged with grand theft, official misconduct and failing to disclose information in a public records request, according to a Florida Department of Law Enforcement arrest report.

Shortly after taking office last November, investigators say, Uzzell opened a credit card in the name of the Liberty County School Board without its approval or knowledge. She reportedly made more than $2,000 in charges for items that included clothing, lodging, lingerie, fuel, beauty supplies and alcohol.

SUV backs over toddler

APOPKA — A 2-year-old girl is dead after a sports utility vehicle driven by a 16-year-old relative backed over her.

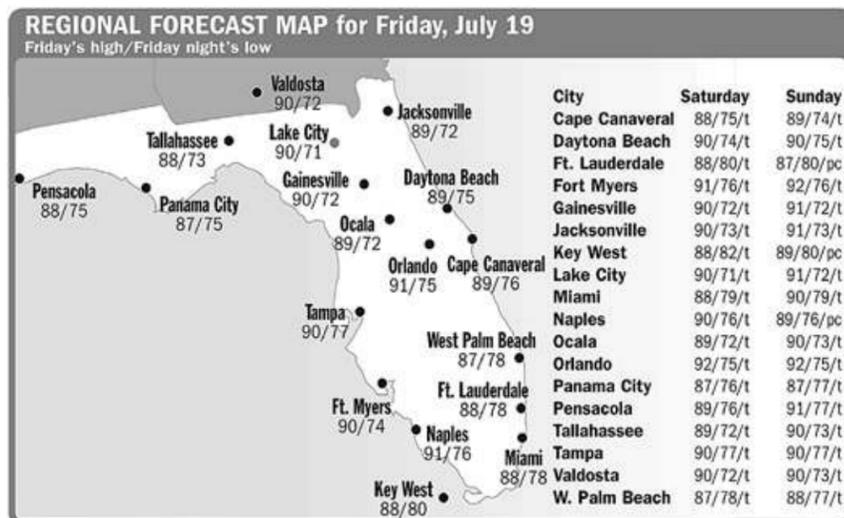

The Florida Highway Patrol says the accident happened Wednesday afternoon when the child ran behind the vehicle as the teen was backing up.

Orlando television station WESH reports the family had been preparing to celebrate the child's second birthday this weekend. The death is being treated as an accident.

Troopers say the teen had been moving the SUV to clean the driveway.

SCHOOL: Neighbors' attempt to revoke construction permits fails their neighborhood.

"Everybody knew that we weren't in favor of this. It's a two-way lane, and [the school's] in a bad location," Linda Dowling, one of the school's neighbors, told commissioners. "They destroyed a beautiful piece of property that can never be rebuilt."

However, New Generation Christian Ministries has been issued all necessary permits, and followed site-plan guidelines appropriately, County Manager Dale Williams told an audience of about 150 people in the County School Board Complex auditorium.

The project meets all requirements. Of the audience members, about 70 showed up specifically to support the school, and 10 of them were on the list to speak at the meeting. Barely half of them chose to speak.

About 20 neighborhood residents were there, too, but only Dowling took a stand at the podium.

"If there's a remedy that exists, we have not been able to uncover it," Williams said. "I simply do not know of any options you may have."

The school started functioning two weeks ago at the current address, said CEO and founder Paula Gorman. Currently, plumbers and electricians are working on the property, but Gorman intends to build decks after that work is completed. Landscaping will be added to form a buffer between the school and nearby properties, she said. She hopes to be finished with all the improvements by Aug. 24.

Gorman said she also plans to eventually stucco the portable classrooms to create a hacienda, "old-Florida" appearance at the school.

"We are working very diligently to clean them up," Gorman said. "While I'm concerned for my neighbor's, as well as my own, property value, I don't do it for the neighbors. I do it for the kids."

After the meeting, audience member and another school neighbor, Pat Hale, said you can put paint on an old car, but that wouldn't make it run. Her husband agreed, adding that they weren't against the school but against the unsightly portables on the property.

Annette Simpson's grandson was one of New Generation's first graduates. As a board member for the school, she said she sees Gorman do everything possible for the children.

"To see ... how the children relate to each other and how much the their school means to them," she said, "I don't want to see this school go down. I want to see it continue. It is well worth it."

With revocation of the school's permits impossible, Dowling said she understood that the school was going to be built but continued to say it should not have been allowed in a residential area.

She asked the County Commission to create regulations that would require Planning and Zoning Board members to state during their meetings that appeals were allowed. She said she had no idea she could have appealed the board's ruling.

"At no point, at any time, did anyone tell us that there was an appeal process," Dowling said. "Had we known, we would have appealed it and let it go to the board of county commissioners. Would it have made a difference? I don't know, but at least we would have felt we did all we could do."

County Commissioner Scarlet Frisna, whose district includes the school's new address, said she understood both sides of the story.

"There were citizens who wanted us to revoke their permits and stop the school from opening, but that's unlawful," she said. "I'm looking forward to seeing [New Generation] get it put together and looking nice."

The school, which had operated 159 SW Spencer Court, has about 150 students in kindergarten through 12th grade.

Even though Witt is well into his 21st year of retirement, he's still well-connected to Columbia County's top government and law enforcement officials. Residents can expect to see a who's-who of area sheriffs, political candidates, circuit judges, county commissioners and more.

But Witt assures that the peanut boil will not be political in any way. He even bars individuals running for office from bringing campaign materials.

"I don't believe in that," he said. "I just want people to come out and have a good time."

Sitting by the large pond on his 14-acre property, he recalled his childhood near

DCF secretary resigns abruptly

By MARGIE MENZEL

The News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE, — After weeks under fire following the deaths of four children, David Wilkins on Thursday abruptly resigned as secretary of the Florida Department of Children and Families.

Gov. Rick Scott said in a statement that Wilkins had stepped down "to pursue opportunities in the private sector and to provide more attention to his foundation."

Scott also tapped as interim secretary Esther Jacobo, the regional managing director for DCF's southern region, which serves Miami-Dade and Monroe counties.

Wilkins has endured a steady drumbeat of criticism since May 16, when the first of the four children died. All four had had contact with DCF before their deaths, which critics said could have been prevented.

The city of Lake City already pledged $200,000 towards the project and SRWMD has pledged $400,000.

With the funding from the County Commission, local support stands at $700,000.

Minnis hopes the remaining $4.1 million will come from a $10 million block of funding the state Legislature approved earlier this year for statewide freshwater springs restoration.

The Florida Department of Environmental Protection will decide which projects get grants from the fund.

Minnis hopes local funding will help the SRWMD land a grant for the proposed wetland project.

JOBS: Scott seizes on positive report

in the state government and media off guard on Thursday. A county-by-county breakdown was not released.

The announcement of the monthly numbers came against a backdrop of protesters calling for the governor to return to the Capitol to address their concerns about the "stand your ground" law and Department of Children and Families Secretary David Wilkins' decision to resign.

Wilkins' agency is embroiled in a controversy about the deaths of four children since May 16 and a dispute with local child-welfare agencies.

Florida Department of Economic Opportunity spokeswoman Jessica Sims said the local unemployment breakdowns will still be released today, but the statewide figure was announced because the U.S. Department of Labor Bureau of Labor Statistics had "inadvertently" released the monthly percentage on Thursday.

The 7.1 percent unemployment rate is the lowest in Florida since September 2008 and remains below the national mark of 7.6 percent.

Florida has been below the national average for four months.

The monthly statewide number also comes as Scott has traveled for several new job announcements.

On Wednesday, Scott was in the western Panhandle as CHCS Services, a California-owned information technology company announced plans to bring up to 385 jobs to Pensacola, and West Fraser Timber Co.'s saw mill in McDavid introduced plans to hire 80.

On Thursday, Scott announced Bristol-Myers Squibb planned to locate a facility in Tampa that would create 579 life sciences jobs.

"Announcements like this from Bristol-Myers

Squibb show that companies are taking notice of our economic turnaround and that it's working in Florida," Scott stated in a separate release.

The need for jobs has also been playing out in recent weeks as communities across the state cobble together financial packages intended to entice Internet giant Amazon to open one of the planned distribution "fulfillment" centers that would result in 3,000 jobs and more than $300 million in investments within Florida.

On Thursday, the Hillsborough County Commission approved the second half of its offer, agreeing to pitch $6.4 million in property-tax exemptions over a seven-year period.

Last month, the commission agreed to offer up to $225,000 as a partial match needed for the state's Qualified Targeted Industries Tax Refund Program.

ENTRANCE: On schedule

Harrison said parents going into the school, along with students when they leave in the afternoons, many times have to wait for about 20 minutes and businesses can't take in any customers because of traffic congestion.

"This will push the traffic further down the road, down County Road 252, and the traffic will be able to come in and loop out, and it gives everyone a chance to spread out that traffic flow," he said. "This will allow the students to get out of the parking lot before a lot of our other population gets out there."

It will make the traffic flow a lot better."

Harrison also said school officials will be able to block off the entrance if needed, so it will only be accessible at certain times in the day, which will also help to reduce traffic problems.

"The roadway is also going to be the entryway for our logistics building and also trucks for our cafeteria, unloading supplies," he said. "It's just going to be a better situation where everyone is going where they need to be without interfering with the school flow."

Smile. Your license plate is on candid camera

One of the last venues offering any kind of privacy in this country is – or was – your car. No longer. According to a study by the American Civil Liberties Union, law enforcement agencies across the country using automated scanners are able to pinpoint in real time the location and movement of millions of vehicles.

The scanner images are stored for whatever length of time the collecting agency chooses to keep them in giant databases holding millions of images. The scanners are mounted on bridges, buildings, toll booths, intersections, tunnels and on police cruisers.

Police can track a suspicious car by getting a warrant to plant a GPS, but no such permission is needed for a scanner, a passive device mounted in a public location.

Maryland officials say that scanners on state troopers' cars can examine up to 7,000 license plates in a single eight-hour shift while the trooper goes about his normal patrol duties.

Few states – New Hampshire being a notable exception – place restrictions on scanners and those mostly involve how long the images can be stored. And police say bluntly that there is no expectation of privacy for vehicles driving or parked on public roads.

The scanners have obvious utility in cases of missing or abducted persons, carjackings, drug shipments, car theft and tracking perpetrators fleeing from the scene of a crime.

While it's possible to posit significant law enforcement benefits from the scanners, in fact the odds of actually solving or preventing a crime are not at all good. The ACLU said that Maryland read 29 million license plates between January and May of last year. Of those, 60,000 were found to be suspicious, but offenses like expired plates or failing to have an emissions inspection sticker accounted for 97 percent of the plates flagged.

The scanners are akin to the old metaphor of being unable to put the toothpaste back in the tube. If we have the technology and it is not unnecessarily intrusive, we might as well use it. But Maryland has the right idea in restricting to criminal investigations the use of scanners and the databases they create.

Forget privacy. That's so 20th century. The 21st century requires you to smile, or at least keep a clean license plate, because you're on candid camera.

Napolitano tried, failed

Well, well, well. Janet Napolitano is quitting and heading west.

She leaves behind the most mammoth government bureaucracy created in modern times. And she is likely to go down in history as someone who tried hard, but ultimately failed, to make a success of unifying it.

A truly daunting task it is, trying to mold the unwieldy Department of Homeland Security into a cohesive, workable body.

Born in divisiveness, chaos and fear after the 9/11 terrorist attacks, the agency had/had many naysayers who said that it would/will prove impossible to unify 22 agencies whose employees have long been suspicious of the others, sometimes actively competing and working against each other.

The new Cabinet-level department, signed into law in 2002 by President George W. Bush, was tasked with preventing more terrorism on U.S. soil, overseeing natural disasters – of which there have been dozens, ranging from killer hurricanes to murderous tornadoes – securing the nation's borders and keeping airplanes from being used as weapons.

Almost 250,000 people toil at DHS, from border patrol agents to customs agents to Transportation Security Administration personnel to immigration officers. With an annual budget of $60 billion, it is the third largest Cabinet department.

Consistently, DHS is at the bottom of the list of Best Places to Work in the Federal Government, hardly a testament to its leader. If you know anybody who works for DHS, you know morale is terrible.

Ann McFeatters
annmcfeatters@nationalpress.com

DHS employees were warned in an internal memo recently that any one of them opening a Washington Post article on the Internet containing a classified slide showing how the National Security Agency eavesdrops on international communications was subject to being penalized. Say what?

On the other hand, Michael Chertoff, the second DHS secretary from 2005 to 2009, was a co-author of the Patriot Act, which gave government huge, unprecedented power over the civil liberties of American citizens.

A Democrat, a lawyer and a former governor of Arizona, Napolitano, who is 55 and single, remains scandal-free. The most shocking thing about her may be her antipathy toward email, which she refuses to use. She also doesn't text or tweet. You may not even know who she is, unless you shop at Wal-Mart and have seen a video of her admonishing shoppers, "If you see something, say something."

Napolitano leaves to become president of the University of California's 10-school system with a budget of $23 billion. As for her tenure at DHS, she issued this statement: "The opportunity to work with the dedicated men and women of the Department of Homeland Security, who serve on the frontlines of our nation's efforts to protect our communities and families from harm, has been the highlight of my professional career." Hardly a declaration of great accomplishments.

Napolitano did suggest that it might be necessary to expand the use of drones from borders to the interior of the country. So far, thankfully, nothing has come of that, at least that we know about. But she has begun plans to put "nonlethal weapons" on drones operated by Customs and Border Protection to be used against "targets of interest," including undocumented immigrants.

During Napolitano's tenure, the DHS has begun implementing plans to stockpile 1.6 billion rounds of ammunition, far more per officer than the U.S. Army's allotments for its soldiers. Angered at the DHS's refusal to explain what it intends to do with that amount of ammunition, which includes devastatingly destructive hollow-point bullets, Republicans in the House last month pushed through a measure to halt the stockpiling. The Senate has not acted.

The departure of Napolitano, the fourth person to head DHS, offers an opportunity to evaluate the effectiveness of this federal behemoth, but that probably won't happen. Republicans are in no mood to tether it; Democrats, facing possible loss of Senate control in 2014, don't have the stomach for a serious probe.

Senate reaches a compromise

The Senate, when it rouses itself to do so, does work. Slowly, inefficiently, maddeningly, but it does work.

Proof of that was the Republicans' decision this week to allow quick votes on seven of President Barack Obama's nominees to top administration posts.

Senate Republicans, after a rare closed-door session with their Democratic counterparts, agreed to subject the nominees to a simple majority vote in return for the Democratic leadership forsaking the "nuclear option."

That option required the majority Democrats to round up 60 votes to allow the Senate to proceed on any given issue. Democratic Leader Harry Reid had threatened to overturn that rule, returning the Senate procedural votes to the old 50 votes plus one, thus depriving the GOP of its most powerful tool to obstruct legislation.

The first vote under the new agreement was to confirm Richard Cordray as head of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau. Cordray had been waiting two years as of this week for a vote. Once he got one, he passed easily, 66 to 34.

President Obama was so pleased by the vote that he introduced his newly confirmed consumer watchdog at the White House State Dining Room. As Obama noted, the opposition was not to Cordray personally but to the law that set up the regulatory agency in the first place.

Cordray said he saw the agency's role as standing on the side of consumers and seeing they're treated fairly by lenders, mortgage brokers, debt collectors, credit reporting agencies and other players in the consumer finance field.

The need for such an agency, the brainchild of Harvard Professor Elizabeth Warren who rode the idea to a seat in the Senate, became glaringly apparent during the financial meltdown.

Even without a confirmed leader and little publicity about its watchdog role, the CFPB in its first two years addressed 175,000 complaints and won $400 million in refunds from unscrupulous lenders for 6 million Americans, according to the White House. Clearly there's a need for this agency.

The next vote under the compromise was even more lopsided, an 82-18 endorsement of Fred Hochberg for a second term leading the Export-Import Bank. Also coming are votes on Labor Secretary-designate Tom Perez, the head of the EPA, the chairman of the National Labor Relations Board and two new nominees to the board, replacing Obama recess appointments that a federal appeals court ruled invalid.

The morning-after consensus was that this compromise was a major victory for Reid, marked the emergence of GOP Sen. John McCain as an essential powerbroker and left GOP Leader Mitch McConnell with nothing to show for his acrimonious two-year battle to stymie Obama's appointees.

The Senate does work, but it doesn't always work for everybody.

Jesus said go make disciples

After the resurrection of Jesus, He was on this earth ministering for 40 days. Matthew records some of Jesus' most important last words before He ascended back to heaven.

Jesus said "Go therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all things that I have commanded you; and, lo, I am with you always, even till the end of the age" (Matthew 28:19-20 NKJ).

The King James Bible says "Go ye therefore and teach." The Vines Expository Dictionary defines disciple as "a learner." It denotes one who follows one's teaching. A disciple was not only a pupil but an adherent; hence they are spoken of as imitators of their teacher.

If we are to be disciples of Jesus, then we must imitate Jesus. The Bible gives us many things that Jesus said we must do if we are to be disciples of Him. We must be willing to deny ourselves and take up our cross. "Then Jesus said unto His disciples, 'If anyone desires to come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow Me'" (Matthew 16:24). Luke 9:23 says "We must take up our cross daily." We don't just decide to serve our Lord some of the time, but all the time.

All four Gospels close the same way with the command to go and make disciples. See Mark 16:15-18; Luke 24:46-48. In His high priestly prayer to the Father in John 17:18, Jesus said "As you sent Me into the world, I also have sent them into the world." Again in John 20:21 Jesus said "As the Father has sent Me, I also send you."

So, if we are to be disciples of Jesus, we must go and make more disciples. For one to go does not necessarily mean one has to go to another country but to be willing to go next door, down the street or across town to tell of Jesus' saving grace.

I believe this is a mission that most are failing in. Most churches are not teaching discipleship classes. It is said that only about 2 percent of Christians ever share their faith with anyone else. That's sad. To be a disciple, we must go. Jesus did not go to a select few but to all His followers. The very last command He gave before he ascended to the Father was "But you shall receive power when the Holy Spirit has come upon you; and you shall be witnesses to Me in Jerusalem and in all Judea and Samaria, and to the end of the earth" (Acts 1:8).

To be a disciple of Jesus, He must be first in our lives. See Luke 14:26; Luke 14:33. John 8:31 says to be a disciple of Jesus we are to "continue in His word," and John 15:8 says we are to "bear much fruit" for Him. After all, we are the only light on earth now. If we don't shine for Jesus and do His work, how will it be done?

So, Church, how do we respond to the clear teaching of God's word? It's time to get busy before it's too late!

Life after the first sin

Because of the action of one person, the world has never been the same. Even though her action seemed quite innocent, she not only changed her life, but also the life of her husband. How would she have ever known that she would have affected every person who has lived since her?

Once Eve took that first bite out of the forbidden fruit, gave it to her husband to eat and Adam ate of it, "the eyes of both of them were opened" (Genesis 3:7). This is not to say that their eyes were "closed" before, but rather is a figure of speech which indicates that they now understood better what they had been told by God. It is a way of saying they now realized some things about themselves which previously they had not noticed. They could now see that they were "naked" and needed to sew some "fig leaves together" to cover their loins (Genesis 3:7). Apparently, prior to taking a bite of this forbidden fruit, this couple had been walking around without any clothes and it had not occurred to them that they needed to cover up some parts of their body.

Some time later, when "the Lord God [was] walking in the garden in the cool of the day, the man and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the Lord God among the trees of the garden" (Genesis 3:8). When asked by God, "Where are you?" their response was not like any they had ever made before. Adam responded, "I heard the sound of Thee in the garden, and I was afraid because I was naked; so I hid myself." God's next question was, "Who told you that you were naked?" (Genesis 3:8-11) One result of this sinful action is that it opened the eyes of this human being to the fact that he needed

BIBLICAL MEDITATION

carlton_mc@msn.com

to "hide" from God because he was now totally exposed before the presence of God. When this fellow human being sinned, he knew that God could now see everything about him. Adam now experienced something new; he was now afraid of God.

How could this one act, this eating of the forbidden fruit, cause Adam to be afraid of God who previously had been walking with him in the cool of the day? It seems that Adam realized that he had done something to break his relationship with his creator. It seems that Adam knew that he had done something that he was not supposed to do. He did not need someone to tell him that he was "naked" because it became very evident to him, and simultaneously, it caused fear to be within Adam.

God announced the punishment for the serpent, the woman and the man. Today, we can see the results of this punishment. The serpent is still crawling on his belly; the woman is still having trouble with childbirth; and the man is still sweating when he is working in the field trying to get out the "thorns and thistles" which have grown in his garden.

Another consequence mentioned by God after Adam and Eve ate of the forbidden fruit was that they would "return to the ground ... for you are dust, and to dust you shall return" (Genesis

3:19). Death entered into the world because of this one simple act. If Adam and Eve had eaten of the "tree of life," they would have lived forever. However, because they did not and God cast them out of His garden, every human being is subject to this same "punishment."

Wonder what Adam and Eve felt as they were sent out of the Garden of Eden never to return?

Life has never been the same. We are suffering because of their actions. Who will suffer because of our sinful behavior? What will future generations have to endure because we have and will sin against God? What has our life been like since we sinned the first time?

The rewards of discipline

Discipline is a recurring theme running through the book of Proverbs, and no few verses are spent urging parents to understand and act on the responsibility of correcting their children.

Children are indeed a blessing, a challenge, and our primary focus. Someone once described having children as realizing that your heart, formerly safe and protected, is now living on the outside of your body, exposed and in harm's way. After nearly 25 years of being a mom, I can confirm this feeling of vulnerability.

The Bible says in Psalm 127:3 that "Sons (and daughters) are a heritage from the Lord, children a reward from him." Who doesn't agree with this verse while holding a sweet newborn in their arms? But as they grow up and begin to struggle against their parents, it can be difficult to see them as a reward.

Responding to a child's disobedience is frustrating and often leaves us wanting answers — answers that the Bible clearly gives. Hebrews 12:11 states: "No discipline seems pleasant at the time, but painful. Later on, however, it produces a harvest of righteousness and peace for those who have been trained by it."

The most obvious point in this verse is that discipline will not be fun. Not for the giver or the receiver. But it is necessary for training. This training marks the difference between discipline and punishment. Punishment focuses on what the child did wrong and making them pay for disobedience, while discipline focuses on training and teaching the child to choose what is right next time.

The harvest that discipline produces is desirable in the life of every child: righteousness and peace. Righteousness is the ability to make wise choices that while difficult, keep us in right standing with God and others. Teaching a child to do what is right at a young age makes it easier for them to choose right as they grow into adulthood. Even in the midst of difficult circumstances, they will then experience the peace that comes from a clear conscience.

"Discipline your son, for in that there is hope; do not be a willing party to his death" Proverbs 19:18. "Discipline your son and he will give you peace; he will bring delight to your soul" (Proverbs 29:17).

As parents we can grow weary in trying to discipline our children, especially living in a culture that condemns this practice. It is easier at the time to give in, but in failing to correct a child, we allow disobedience. We may avoid a temporary battle, but we lose the war in building self-control and responsibility within the child. This allows them to travel a path that leads to destruction of their relationships, reputations, health and possibly their lives.

Our desire to be "friends" with our children can be realized after they are adults and will come as a result of the respect gained through the hard work of being their parent when they are young.

Consistent, loving discipline ultimately teaches our children how to discipline themselves and guard their hearts from the consequences of bad choices. After all, their hearts are what matter.

Blessings,
Angie

The lost son

When a son or daughter is lost, all sorts of alarms go off. We call out the police, tracking dogs, go door to door — because we care. The love and concern is obvious, especially when the lost one is our own. What about when a son or daughter just leaves?

Jesus has told the story of the lost "Sheep" and "Coin" and now he gets more personal: "There was a man who had two sons. The younger one said to his father, 'Father, give me my share of the estate.' So he divided his property between them" (Luke 15:11-12). Sometimes parents are disappointed with their children — but not in this case. This time, both sons disappointed their father in different ways.

The younger son came to his father and as one version says, "Give me what is coming to me". (If I had said that to Dad, he probably would have given me something, but it wouldn't have been money.) The father divided the estate, and now it was up to the son what he would do with it.

This son, had been planning. Perhaps he was tired of the rules and regulations. Perhaps he was tired of his older brother. The "dust from the road" was on his heart long before it got on his feet. He packed up, no signs of saying good bye, and he left. This alone broke the father's heart. Sleepless nights, and worry-filled days followed as every meal would hear the echo of the father: "My son is gone!" The father's days of waiting, hoping and watching began.

jackexumjr@yahoo.com

The son, he was "free" at last. He was on his way and would not stop even though he knew what he had done had broken his father's heart. He would not stop until he reached his destination, a country where he could "be his own man." He was the life of the party, and he picked up the tabs. People would finally respect and look up to him, he thought. "Prodigal riotous living" meant just that for him — wild parties, drinking and women. No one to stand in his way now!

While Satan's advertisements of sin are attractive, days filled with pleasure and fun, yet "Satan always crops the picture." Satan's picture omits the sadness and shame of the eventual pig pen. He doesn't want us to see the whole thing all at once, because who would want it?

The son wouldn't have taken the first step in this direction if he had known what was ahead.

Then it happened. The money ran out, the friends were gone, self-respect was gone and since there was a famine in the land, the consequences were catastrophic. This son had to sell himself to someone in the land. The job he got — feeding pigs in the pigpen.

Now, I love bacon like most people, and wouldn't have a problem with raising pigs. I have been to some pig roasts, and it was good-tasting meat. However, this was forbidden to Jews. The pig pen, well, what do you think it was like? In a word, stinking! He had no food. So he was eating what the pigs got.

How far does one have to go before he finally wakes up? What will a person eat before he finally wakes up? What more does one have to lose before he wakes up? He hit the bottom. "I've had enough. I'm going home."

The father? He was still waiting, hoping and praying and watching, as a loving father does, for his son to come home. Guess what? He is waiting for you.

The Lake City 15U All-Stars team stumbled early and could not recover in a 5-2 loss to Argyle in the Florida Babe Ruth Baseball North Florida State Tournament on Thursday.

The 15U state tournament is one of three being hosted by Lake City/Columbia County Babe Ruth Baseball at the Southside Sports Complex.

Tallahassee won twice Thursday in 15U play, beating Melrose, 2-1, in an early game and knocking off Lafayette in the afternoon, 9-5. Tallahassee will play the Fort Caroline/Argyle winner at 2 p.m. today.

Lake City plays Lafayette at 11:30 a.m. today in an elimination game. Melrose will play the loser of the Fort Caroline/Argyle game at 9 a.m. today. A third elimination bracket game is scheduled for 4 p.m. today.

Championship games in the 15U, 14U and 13 age groups are scheduled for 11:30 a.m. Saturday.

Argyle used an error, four walks and a double to score three runs in the top of the first inning. Will Pillsbury had the base hit to bring in A.P. Pierce and Alex Newton. Jake Schmidt walked and scored in the inning.

Lake City got one run back in the bottom of the inning. Dylan Stalter doubled and moved to third on a wild pitch. Austin Matthews singled him home.

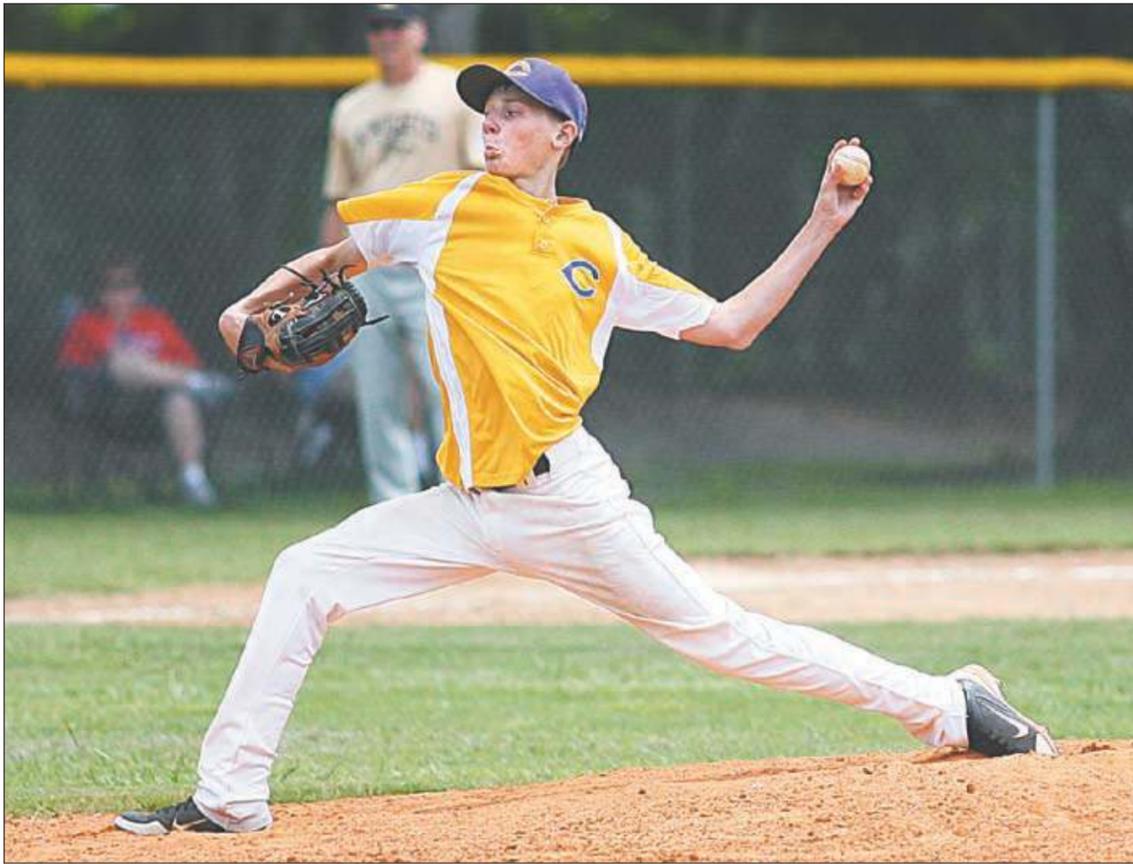

Christian Matthews singled to start the second inning for Lake City. T.J. Price bunted him to second, but he stayed there.

Brady Shuey and Chris Mauloni singled to open the third inning for Argyle. Pierce walked with the bases loaded for a 4-1 lead.

Austin Matthews singled to lead off the bottom of the fourth inning. He moved around on two ground balls and scored on a wild pitch.

Argyle had two runners in scoring position in the fifth inning, and both were thrown out on plays at the plate. Mauloni walked and scored in the seventh inning on Justin Wager's second hit of the game.

Lake City couldn't capitalize in the final three innings. Pillsbury relieved

Lake City 15U All-Star Tyler Morgan delivers a pitch while playing Argyle in the Florida Babe Ruth Baseball North Florida State Tournament on Thursday.

Mauloni and pitched two innings of no-hit ball. After a lead-off walk, he struck out the side in the sixth inning. Lake City put the first two hitters in scoring position in the seventh inning, but three ground balls ended the game.

Mauloni got the win with four hits, two runs, two walks and five strikeouts in five innings.

Austin Matthews started for Lake City and pitched one inning with one hit, five walks and one strikeout. Tyler Morgan went two innings with three hits, one run, four walks and two strikeouts.

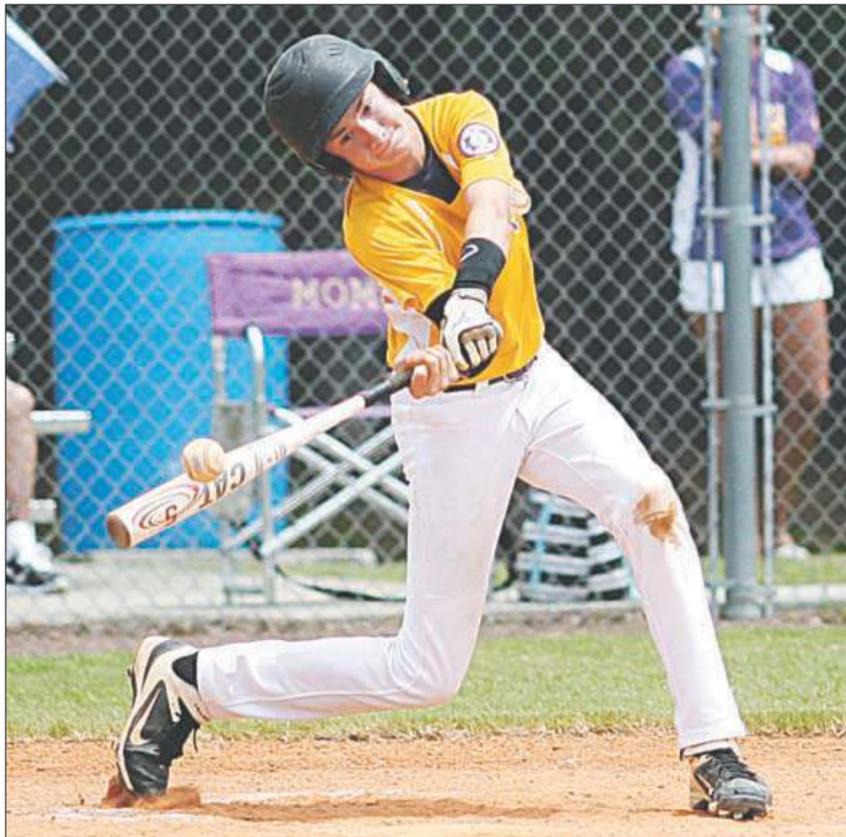

Christian Matthews pitched 3½ innings with three hits, one unearned run, two walks and three strikeouts. Micah Kreighauser came on for the final two outs.

"We dug us a hole," coach Jonathan Ulsh said. "We put two on base and a guy bangs one off the wall. It's not the hits that kill you, it's the walks."

"Basically, our pitchers kept us in it, but we didn't hit well enough."

Other Thursday results follow with today's games.

Johnson leads at Muirfield

Masters champion
shoots 5-under 66
for one-shot margin.

DOUG FERGUSON

GULLANE, Scotland — A blue sky and a gentle breeze usually means ripe scoring conditions at the British Open. Just not on the brown links of Muirfield.

Zach Johnson handled it better than anyone Thursday. Helped along by a 45-foot eagle putt and only one bogey despite trouble lurking around every pot bunker, Johnson had a 5-under 66 for a one-shot lead, the first time he's been atop the leaderboard at any major since he rallied to win the Masters six years ago.

Tiger Woods more than survived the late end of the draw, after the sun had thoroughly baked out the crispy greens and allowed only eight of the 20 rounds under par. He knocked one putt clear off the green, but 10 one-putts — most of them for pars — carried him to a 69, a good start in his bid to end his five-year drought in the majors.

"The golf course progressively got more dried out and more difficult as we played," Woods said. "And I'm very pleased to shoot anything even par or better."

And for all the talk about Muirfield's men-only membership, at least the club doesn't discriminate against age.

Mark O'Meara, the 56-year-old who won his claret jug in 1998 at Royal Birkdale, shot a 67 and nearly tied Johnson for the lead until his 25-foot birdie putt on the 18th took a hard spin out of the cup. Another former champion, 54-year-old Tom Lehman, opened with a 68.

It was an eclectic group who broke par, from major champions to players making their British Open debut. What they all had in common was finding a way to get through a firm, fast and frightening test at Muirfield.

Phil Mickelson opened with a 69 and felt like he got off easy by playing in the morning.

"Anytime you shoot under par in an Open — or a major, for that matter — you have to be putting at least somewhat decent," Johnson said. "And I putted great. I made some nice birdie putts and obviously that one for eagle. But I struck some really nice, solid par putts. That's what you've got to do to stay in it."

Rafael Cabrera-Bello of Spain joined O'Meara at 67. Dustin Johnson and Brandt Snedeker shot 68, and Angel Cabrera was in a group at 69.

Former rising star Brian Vickers makes major Sprint Cup comeback with victory at New Hampshire

To get an idea of the significance of Brian Vickers' victory on Sunday at New Hampshire Motor Speedway, one need look no further than the official Sprint Cup Series media guide.

To find information about the part-time driver of the No. 55 Toyota at Michael Waltrip Racing, one has to look in the "Other Drivers" section.

While most of the top stars have their own page or two, Vickers is lumped into a catch-all category that includes drivers such as Robert Richardson, Stephen Leicht, Scott Speed, Cole Whitt and Josh Wise, none of whom regularly compete for race victories.

At one point in his career, Vickers, now 29, was considered a rising NASCAR star. Driving for Hendrick Motorsports, he won the 2003 championship of the series now known as Nationwide at age 20 to become the youngest driver to win a major NASCAR championship. He moved on to the Cup series, driving for Hendrick, and got his first win at Talladega in 2006.

When Toyota joined NASCAR in 2007, Vickers moved to the Red Bull team, where he struggled initially, failing to qualify for several races, before he finally won at Michigan in 2009. Then midway through 2010, he developed blood clots and missed the remainder of the season. In 2011, his season was marred by run-ins on the track with numerous drivers, including championship contender Matt Kenseth, and by the announcement that his team was ceasing its NASCAR operations.

He started the 2012 season without a ride, but was picked up for a six-race stint by Michael Waltrip Racing, which later extended it to eight races. His career comeback was underway as he posted three top-five and five top-10 finishes and led 158 laps in those eight races.

For this season, he's sharing the No. 55 with Mark Martin and Michael Waltrip and running the full Nationwide Series schedule in a Toyota fielded by Joe Gibbs Racing. He also ran three Cup races as a substitute for the injured Denny Hamlin.

On Sunday at New Hampshire, Vickers and his Rodney Childers-led crew used pit strategy to overcome an early setback due to a penalty on pit road and join the lead pack late in the race. Then Vickers outduelled Tony Stewart, who wound up running out of fuel, and Kyle Busch, who finished second, down the stretch. The battle for the win including a critical final green-white-checked-flag run that saw Vickers power to the front after a three-wide battle for the lead.

In his winner's interview, Vickers said the win was special for many reasons, including his relationship with Childers, who built Vickers' first go-kart back in the day and has been a friend and supporter since.

"Rodney and I have been trying to work together for a long time," he said. "It's taken us 20 years to do it, and nothing could be more special for me than for both of us to have this win."

NUMERICALLY SPEAKING

2 Bonus points earned by Clint Bowyer for leading laps, the fewest of any driver in the top 15 in Sprint Cup Series points.

30 Bonus points earned by Matt Kenseth for leading laps, the most of any Sprint Cup Series driver this season.

8 Points positions lost by Joey Logano in the past two Sprint Cup races, to 18th.

3 Rookies in the top 10 in Camping World Truck Series points: Jeb Burton in second place, Ryan Blaney in sixth and Darrell Wallace Jr. in 10th.

"For me, personally, I think the biggest thing is just the support of family and friends, my parents, my grandmother, my fiancée and so many others through all of the difficult times and not having a ride."

Vickers, who said he believes the win will go a long way toward getting him a full-time ride in the No. 55 for next season, also thanked those in the NASCAR garage who believed in him through all his troubles, including the people at his race team and at his sponsor, Aaron's.

"When your back is against the wall and things are not looking so good, you find out quickly who is willing to vouch for you or not," he said. "I learned a lot through that experience personally and I grew a lot as a person. I'll never forget those learning curves. All of that, coming here, sitting in Victory Lane, just makes it one of the most special events of my life."

NOTEBOOK

Jeff Burton races to third place at New Hampshire

Jeff Burton's No. 31 Chevrolet

Jeff Burton's strong third-place finish at New Hampshire Motor Speedway on Sunday appears to be another sign that he's regaining the form that has seen him win 21 Sprint Cup races in his 21-year career.

After winning two races and finishing sixth in the standings in 2008, the driver of the No. 31 Chevrolet at Richard Childress Racing has been winless since and failed to finish in the top 10 in points.

But in recent weeks, he appears to be picking up the pace, and he says that despite his 17th-place points position, Burton says a Chase berth isn't out of the question.

"We have been running a lot better the last two months," he said. "I'm not saying we are the class of the field, but we are definitely making progress, and we feel like we are starting to build on something, and we understand what we're looking for now."

"And we don't think we are out of the Chase. We feel like we can still do it. There's a lot of stuff that's going to happen between now and Richmond [the final race of the regular season]."

Burton, a four-time winner at New Hampshire, said his wasn't the fastest car on Sunday, but it was close. "I thought we had the second- or third-best car," he said. "I thought 78 [Kurt Busch] had the best car."

Busch started second and led a race-high 102 laps before being involved in a crash and dropping to 31st at the finish.

"Once [Busch] had his trouble, I thought, 'Hey, the door is open, and now we've got a shot,'" Burton said. "Just didn't work out for us."

Jeff Gordon still hopes for a Sprint Cup midweek night race

With the Camping World Truck Series set to run on the dirt at Eldora Speedway on Wednesday night, July 24, there's been lots of buzz about having one of NASCAR's elite series racing on dirt and racing on a weeknight.

For years, many in the sport have suggested that a midweek Sprint Cup Series night race would be a prime-time TV hit. Jeff Gordon agreed in his comments to reporters at Daytona.

"I would love to see that," he said. "I think when Monday Night Football ends, we should start Monday night racing."

Gordon first came into the public eye when he was running USAC short-track races that were televised nationally on Thursday nights by ESPN, and he knows firsthand how popular those shows were.

"Thursday Night Thunder was ridiculously successful back in the day," he said. "I am not saying we need to do it every week, but if we could find the right week in the schedule and mix it up, make it special, and make it make sense for the fans at home as well as the ones that could attend, then I think it would be awesome."

But he said he hasn't received much positive feedback when he broaches that subject with the NASCAR brass.

"It seems like every time I talk to NASCAR about doing a weekly race or one midweek, they say, 'If you do it on this day, you won't get as many people coming to the track, so the track suffers, and if you do it on this day, then maybe the track does well, but then the people at home won't watch it because of this,'" he said. "So it always seems to be some kind of obstacle."

Major driver changes announced at Stewart-Haas Racing for the 2014 Sprint Cup season

In the NASCAR world, it's been known for months that Kevin Harvick was leaving Richard Childress Racing at the end of this season to drive for Stewart-Haas Racing. Childress himself said so in a pre-season press gathering.

But it wasn't confirmed by the folks at Stewart-Haas Racing until last Friday at New Hampshire Motor Speedway, when team co-owner Tony Stewart made the announcement that Harvick and his longtime sponsor, Budweiser, would be joining his three-driver team.

The unanswered question up until Friday was whether Stewart-Haas would add a fourth team for Harvick or whether one of the current drivers, Ryan Newman or Danica Patrick, would be displaced.

For Newman, a 16-time winner on the Cup circuit, the answer came earlier in the week in a phone call from Stewart.

"I got a phone call from Tony (Stewart) on Wednesday," Newman said. "That was it. His phone call was about making the announcement and that I would not be a part of Stewart-Haas Racing in 2014."

Newman indicated that Stewart, a fellow Indiana native whose own career has been similar to Newman's going all the way back to their early days racing USAC open-wheelers, hoped their friendship could survive the business changes.

"His stress was the importance of our friendship and that, to me, will never change," Newman said. "We've only ever argued over how hard we race. That is the kind of friends Tony and I are. There is a chance that we might do that again in the future, but we have a great friendship and I look forward to keeping that. That was the main point of our conversation outside of the obvious of 2014."

Stewart had similar comments about his relationship with Newman.

"This was a business decision that was Gene's [Haas] as well as mine, and it was a hard decision," Stewart said. "There is a personal side and there is a business side. For Ryan and I, we had to put the personal bit of it aside to work through the business part. "I'm behind him 100 percent. I believe in him 100 percent. I truly wish we were able to facilitate four teams at this time. We are just not able to do that."

For Harvick, leaving the only team owner he's ever had in NASCAR for Stewart-Haas is a chance to put some new spark in his step. It has worked recently for Stewart, who in 2009 left Joe Gibbs Racing to start Stewart-Haas and has gone on to win 15 races and the 2011 championship. And it's working for Matt Kenseth, who left Roush Fenway Racing for Joe Gibbs Racing this year and already has won four races.

"The decision to make the change was ... from a personal standpoint, to rejuvenate exactly what you're doing," said Harvick, who will drive a Chevrolet numbered 4 next season. "For me ... having that relationship with a guy that is going to be sitting in the cars next to you ... having that kind of teammate that has won championships, a team that has won championships in the last couple of years is ... exciting."

Then there's the chance to take advantage of the technology available from Hendrick Motorsports, which shares cars, engines and information about them with the Stewart-Haas team.

Newman also will be experiencing a change next season, but at this point he has no idea what the new season will bring as far as which team or what sponsors he'll be affiliated with in the future.

"I have no idea on any part of it," he said. "There are no answers that I have. Obviously, I have my own homework to do."

DEAR ABBY

Love for kids keeps man in loveless relationship

Abigail Van Buren
www.dearabby.com

DEAR ABBY: I have been living with my girlfriend, "Robin," for four years. She has children from a previous marriage, and their father is fairly active in their lives. I jumped in and have taken the kids to activities, helped with homework and I pay the majority of the bills. I dearly love the children.

My problem is I no longer love their mother. Robin and I are like roommates who share a bed. There is no passion, no joy together and no partnership. I spend my time with the kids or alone. She's with them at different activities or busy on her computer. When I suggest ways we could bond together, she says, "I'm too tired," or "I don't want to do that."

I have stayed this long only for the kids, but I'm unhappy to the point of aching. I feel guilty about leaving and the strain it will put on the kids. Is there a way to leave a situation like this? Am I a bad man for wanting out and possibly leaving the children to a tougher life? - UNHAPPY IN SOUTH CAROLINA

DEAR UNHAPPY: Because the woman you're living with shows no interest in improving the quality of the relationship, wanting to leave does not make you a bad person. You will have to accept that because the children depend upon you for certain things they will be affected by your departure.

Try to make the break-up as civil as possible. Before you go, talk to each of the children individually. Make it clear that they are not the reason the relationship is ending and that you will always care about them. That way, they won't think they did something bad and blame themselves.

DEAR ABBY: How do I break up with friends who I love but have nothing in common with anymore? I'm married with a child, but as a new business owner, I don't have time to meet their needs. How do you tell people in a loving way that you have appreciated their friendship in the past, but it's over? We have grown apart. - DON'T HAVE THE TIME

DEAR DON'T: Is it possible that your feelings are temporary, and that you are simply overwhelmed by the demands of your new business? If so, I'd hate to see you end friendships with people you love. Relationships don't always remain at the same level or have the same intensity. Rather than cut the people off entirely, explain that you can't be as available because you have a new business and don't have the time. It would be kinder.

DEAR ABBY: My family has had our dog "Pouncer" for 10 years. He was originally bought to be a "family" dog, but I am the one who feeds and takes care of him. Because of that he sleeps with me and licks and obeys only me.

When I say Pouncer is my dog, the rest of my family chews me out and insists he is the family's dog, not mine. Don't you think I have the right to call him my dog? - WILLIE IN WEST VIRGINIA

DEAR WILLIE: I think this is less a question about ownership than it is about tact. Because you are the one who feeds and takes care of Pouncer, and he sleeps with you and obeys only you - in that sense, he IS your dog. But unless you are the only one paying for his food and veterinary bills and the roof over his head, Pouncer is also the family's dog.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married more than 20 years. Her best friend from childhood, "Jill," and her husband, "Jack," are two of our closest friends.

On a recent visit to their home in another state, Jack made a pass at my wife. He said he'd always had a crush on her and asked her to go to our hotel room and have sex while the rest of us were at an amusement park. She refused.

We cut our vacation short and left for home immediately. She told me about it after we got home, concerned that if she said anything while we were there, a confrontation would have ensued. To date, Jill knows nothing about what occurred.

My wife asked me not to say anything until she decides what to do. She's concerned that if she tells Jill, the friendship will be over. On the other hand, if nothing is said, she will be hiding a guilty secret from Jill, which will probably damage the friendship.

Should my wife tell her friend? Should I call Jack and confront him one-on-one? Or should we do nothing? - UPSET HUSBAND IN NEW YORK

DEAR UPSET HUSBAND: The friendship has already been damaged thanks to the husband's inappropriate behavior. What you and your wife must now decide is whether he has caused a permanent estrangement.

If you both agree you can look beyond his boorish lapse in light of the length of the long friendship, then by all means call Jack and tell him how you feel about what he did. And when you do, make it plain that if it happens again, you and your wife will discuss it with Jill TOGETHER.

DEAR ABBY: My sisters and brothers and I don't speak and haven't in five years. When I pass, I have a list of people who will be welcome at my services. If someone's name is not on the list, they will be asked to leave. I want my children and some of my grandchildren there, but no one else. Do you think I am wrong? - TROUBLED IN TEXAS

DEAR TROUBLED: No, I don't. Your wishes are your wishes. However, it is sad when families feud and, at the end, things that should be said are left unspoken.

One would hope that anyone who comes to your funeral would be there to support your children and grandchildren, or to pay last respects. I think it would be rude to ask someone who came to leave. A better way to handle it would be to specify in the funeral announcement that services will be for "your children only" and for further information people should contact a person you designate to carry out your wishes.
