County to do retail study

Consultant to gauge gaps in local market with eye to recruiting.

By AMANDA WILLIAMSON
awilliamson@lakecityreporter.com

Columbia County recently commissioned an Alabama company to identify areas of need in the local retail market and recruit businesses to fill those gaps.

Currently the county and businesses rely on census data to analyze the Lake City market, but Lake City-Columbia County Chamber of Commerce president Joel Foreman believes that data isn't reliable. The consulting firm, Retail Strategies, will provide a three-step process, with results showing job creation, industrial recruitment and an improved overall quality of life.

"You make the community more attractive, and the retail will follow," Foreman said. "It's become so competitive that unless you already have the services in your community — have the amenities in your community — you really aren't getting past go."

Historically, Columbia County focused on industry. After the economy took a downturn, the county started to think about the retail market, said County Manager Dale Williams. An in-depth analysis of the local market is not a new concept, he added.

But with the current state of Victims of crime face some of life's most difficult situations. Traumatic experiences coupled with a crash course in the criminal justice system leave many feeling vulnerable and afraid.

That's where people like Hope Crawford come in.

Since July 10, Crawford has been working for the Columbia County Sheriff's Office as the new victim advocate.

Her duties include helping victims navigate the complexities of the justice system during times of profound emotional stress.

"It's an emotionally trying job," she said. "But I'm not alone."

Capt. Chuck Brewington remarked that it takes a special kind of person to work as a victim advocate.

"You're dealing with individuals who are traumatized and need to find closure," he said. "You break into someone's home, you're breaking into their castle, their safe place. That's when we need to be versatile and empathize with that violation."

Although she's new to the job, Crawford is no stranger to dealing with victims of crime. She has 20 years of experience as a social worker and foster care specialist with the state Department of Children and Families and with the Another Way women's shelter.

Sports fields project making progress

Phase 1 construction work at complex about 70% done.

By TONY BRITT

Phase 1 of improvements to make Southside Sports Complex one of the premier youth sports venues in the area is expected to be completed within a few weeks.

Clint Pittman, Columbia County landscapes and parks director, said Phase 1 construction work, which began months ago, is approximately 70 percent completed.

The construction currently taking place is the first part of a four-phase project. The major construction work for Phase 1 was building the concession stands and rest rooms and adding underground infrastructure such as sewers and electrical services. Roofs were placed on top of dugouts at the girls softball complex, minor fence repairs were made and new bleachers were added and bolted in place.

Obama pushes his agenda in Jacksonville

President seeks public support against GOP.

By JOSH LEDERMAN
Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — Casting House Republicans as stubborn deadbeats, President Barack Obama sought Thursday to discredit House Republicans in upcoming fiscal fights by painting them as roadblocks to a thriving middle class.

With Obama and Congress approaching all-too-familiar showdowns over spending levels and the nation's borrowing limit, Obama used a visit to a seaside port in Florida to argue that the nation's economic agenda should be immune from the partisan backbiting he faulted Republicans for instigating.

"Shutting down the government just because I'm for keeping it open — that's not an economic plan," Obama said, wiping sweat from his face in a muggy port warehouse. "Threatening that you won't pay the bills in this country, when we've already racked up those bills, that's not an economic plan — that's just being a deadbeat."

In the last of three stops on a two-day tour to reframe his broad economic vision for the nation, Obama pitched the need for enhanced American infrastructure at this port and others across the country — and for better roads, bridges and power grids. But while he touted his efforts to streamline permitting, the president offered no new proposals for how Americans and their leaders could accelerate a lethargic economic recovery.

Obama warned that if Republicans continue with their "my way or the highway attitude," dire consequences could await Americans. He encouraged voters to use next month's congressional recess to tell Republicans who'll be in their home districts that gridlock is unacceptable. "It could plunge us back into financial crisis," the President Barack Obama gestures as he speaks about the economy Thursday at the Jacksonville Port Authority in Jacksonville. A day after he kicked off the tour in Illinois and Missouri, Obama again derided the wide gulf between his vision for a new American prosperity driven by a burgeoning middle class and the intense gridlock snarling up Congress.

O.J. Simpson expresses regrets to panel

CARSON CITY, Nev.
O.J. Simpson pleaded for leniency Thursday, telling a parole panel he deeply regretted robbing two sports memorabilia dealers in a Las Vegas hotel room and has tried to be a model inmate while behind bars.

"I just wish I never went to that room," he said. "I wish I just said keep it."

Simpson, 66, said he's been an upstanding inmate while serving his time at Lovelock Correction Center 90 miles east of Reno, where he has been since 2008 when he was sentenced to up to 33 years.

Simpson said during his 15-minute presentation that he shouldn't be compared with other inmates doing time for similar crimes.

"The difference between all of their crimes and mine is, they were trying to steal other people's property," he said. "They were trying to steal other people's money."

"My crime was trying to retrieve for my family my own property," he said. "Make no mistake I would give it all back to these guys. They can have it all to get these five years of my life back."

Simpson was sentenced to consecutive terms on several convictions. But some of his sentences were ordered to run concurrently — two counts each of kidnapping and robbery and one count of burglary.

As a result, even if the Nevada Parole Board ruled in his favor on those crimes, he would then begin serving sentences attached to other crimes and spend at least another four years in prison.

Simpson appeared for 15 minutes before Parole Commissioner Susan Jackson and hearing representative Robin Bates.

They were expected to make a recommendation to the full parole

Renowned sex researcher dies

ST. LOUIS — Virginia Johnson, the Missouri farm girl who helped redefine the understanding of human sexuality as half of the husband-wife team whose taboo sex studies in the 1960s turned them into worldwide celebrities and best-selling authors, has died. She was 88.

The pioneering sex researcher died at an assisted living facility in St. Louis on Wednesday after suffering complications from various illnesses, her son Scott Johnson told The Associated Press on Thursday. He said the family was planning a private funeral.

Johnson was in her 30s, a twice-divorced mother of two children, when she went job-hunting at Washington University in St. Louis in the late 1950s, seeking work to support her young family while she pursued a college degree.

She was hired as a secretary at the university's medical school but soon became the assistant and lover of obstetrician-gynecologist William Masters, then collaborated with him on a large-scale human sexuality experiment — a subject all but taboo at the time.

The couple became known for a revolutionary sexual therapy that brought couples from across the country with sexual dysfunction, including celebrities, to St. Louis for their two-week program.

Capitol protest getting costly

TALLAHASSEE — The protest gripping the Florida Capitol is showing no signs of ending.

Protesters upset at the verdict of the George Zimmerman trial have remained at the Capitol since July 16. And the numbers of those remaining overnight has been growing.

Protesters say they won't leave until Gov. Rick Scott calls a special session so legislators can repeal the state's "stand your ground" law.

The Florida Department of Law Enforcement said Wednesday that the state has now spent nearly $46,000 on overtime since the protest began.

The state has spent more than $116,000 on security since the day before the protest started. But that total includes normal security expenses.

Protesters have responded to the news about security costs by asking how much a human life costs.

Court dismisses voter lawsuit

TALLAHASSEE — Florida's efforts to screen and remove non-U.S. citizens from the voter rolls will soon be revived.

A federal court on Wednesday dismissed a lawsuit that a Hispanic civic organization and two naturalized citizens filed last year to block the contentious voter purge.

The lawsuit became moot because of a U.S. Supreme Court decision in June. That decision halted enforcement of a federal law that required all or parts of 15 states with a history of discrimination in voting to get federal approval before changing the way they hold elections.

The groups fighting the state had argued that Florida's efforts to remove suspected non-U.S. citizens needed to be cleared by federal authorities first because five counties in the state had been subject to the federal law.

Secretary of State Ken Detzner said in court filings the state plans to resume removal of voters.

Democrats target Scott on web

TALLAHASSEE — The Florida Democratic Party announced Thursday it is beginning an online and social media campaign targeting Republican Gov. Rick Scott even though the party doesn't have a well-known, well-funded candidate to face him.

The Democratic Party is buying ads on newspaper and social media website to promote www.realrickscott.com that criticizes Scott's record as governor.

"With his re-election looming, we have seen him try to change his stripes and camouflage his real motivations and his real beliefs in his effort to win over independent and moderate voters," said party Chairwoman Allison Tant. "It hasn't worked all year and we're going to make sure it doesn't."

The campaign comes as Democrats wait for a strong candidate to emerge against Scott. The only credible candidate in the race right now is former state Sen. Nan Rich, who has struggled to raise the money needed for a successful statewide campaign. She's been a candidate for more than a year and has raised only $160,000 in a state where it costs more than $1 million to run a week of television ads. And a Quinnipiac University poll last month showed that 84 percent of voters don't know enough about Rich to form an opinion.

Commissioner praises work of Small Counties Coalition

By TONY BRITT
tbritt@lakecityreporter.com

Columbia County Commissioner Ron Williams was recently re-elected as the North East Region representative on the state's Small County Coalition executive committee.

The election was held during the Small County Coalition annual meeting June 27 in Tampa.

Williams, 70, has been a Columbia County commissioner for more than 30 years, and he has served on the Small County Coalition executive committee for more than six years. Terms are two years each.

Williams represents Columbia, Baker, Bradford, Flagler, Nassau, Putnam and Union counties.

"It's important to be a representative of our region simply because the executive committee is the board that sets our legislative agenda,"

Williams said. "It's a very aggressive board, and we fared really well this past legislative session. By golly, we just about got everything we asked for as the Small County Coalition."

The coalition is a statewide alliance of 37 county commissions from counties with populations less than 150,000.

The purpose of the coalition is to give increased visibility and support to the issues of small counties and rural communities.

Williams said the strength of the coalition is that it acts as one.

"Small counties all have the same needs, and when we work for the Small County Coalition, we work as a small county coalition instead of an individual county," he said. "So, when we bring the bacon home for one small county, all the counties reap the benefits from it."

Before a small county coalition was organized, Williams said smaller counties competed against larger metropolitan counties and were often at a disadvantage.

"We didn't have any clout, but with 37 counties together, we carry clout now," he said.

Williams said the major issue facing small rural counties is the budget and unfunded mandates adopted by the legislature.

"Our small counties really were aggressive about Article 5 funding — that was state mandates," he said. "We are always fighting the legislature about passing laws with no funding and that funding has to come from small counties governments itself. ... The best thing that happened to small counties was forming the Small County Coalition to look after ourselves and to have the clout where the legislature hears 37 instead of one."

High bond set for man charged with sex assault

By STEVEN RICHMOND

Columbia County Sheriff's deputies arrested a local man on sexual assault charges.

Rohan Anthony Gray, 31, was arrested at 4917 W. U.S. 90 last Saturday evening. According to the arrest report released yesterday, Gray used a large kitchen knife to force another individual to engage in sexual acts.

Due to evidence gathered, deputies arrested on charges of aggravated assault with a weapon, sexual assault and lewd or lascivious molestation.

He was booked into Columbia County Detention Facility. His bond was set at $310,000 because his "deep family ties" to his home country of Jamaica made him a flight risk, according to the arrest report.

The investigating deputy wrote that he recognized Jarrell from prior con-Jarrell was booked into the Columbia County Detention Facility. Her bond was set at $7,000.

on the concession stands," Pittman said. "We're currently finishing the last stage of the underground power lines to re-feed all the concession stands."

He said work on structures to provide shade over bleachers at the Babe Ruth baseball fields was slated to begin Thursday.

According to county reports, construction costs associated with Phase 1 are approximately $871,904. The county will pay an estimated $339,727 for the work and the county Tourist Development Council will contribute $532,177.

The estimated costs of all four phases is $2.9 million. The TDC will pay $1.7 million and the county will pay $1.1 million.

The rest rooms and concession stands will be one-story buildings, with concessions in the front and the rest rooms and mechanical equipment in the rear. Three buildings were constructed, and there will be a concession building sitting in the middle of each four-field quad.

"I dealt with abused and assaulted children all the time," Crawford said. "You've got to be nonjudgmental in situations like these and realize not everyone may have been raised like you."

Sgt. Terrence Tyler with CCSO's Detective Division said it can be difficult knowing when to step in and decide who's the aggressor.

"It's never black and white," Tyler said. "You've got to make the best decision for everyone involved."

One of the most difficult parts of the jobs, Crawford said, is trying to break recurring cycles of domestic violence, which account for roughly 75 percent of victim advocacy cases in Columbia County.

According to Brewington, many spouses or children are either afraid or unwilling to seek legal guidance in cases of domestic violence.

"In a job like this," Brewington said, "you need to be willing to take that extra step to assist people who don't want it."

"It's important to be empathetic," Crawford added.

The sheriff's office provides a wealth of victim advocacy services including support with injunctions, restraining orders, transportation and legal recommendations.

"Sometimes people just want someone to talk to," Brewington said. "And we'd be happy to do it. We're willing, available and here to help."

the economy, Williams felt it was finally the right time. The enthusiastic support from the Chamber of Commerce, the county commission and the city manager reflected Williams' belief.

Retail Strategies requested $80,000 for its three-year program, with $40,000 paid the first year and the remainder paid over the course of two years. The county commission voted July 18 in favor of hiring the company.

Williams and City Manager Wendell Johnson said they expect the chamber to approach the city for funding as well, but as of now, no one has made the request. The intended plan was for the city to pay a prorated share based on population, Williams said.

Where the funds will come from, hasn't been decided yet, he said, and won't be finalized until after the county knows if the city intends to help cover the bill.

During the first year, the data will be collected and examined through market analysis, interviews and mosaic profiles. The profile will compare Lake City to similar communities around the nation, showcasing what worked for other communities to see if the idea can be replicated locally.

By interviewing business funneling into the city, the company can pinpoint who is shopping in Columbia County and where they are coming from.

"Basic data doesn't show that," Foreman said. "We're sort of a unique market. You can't just take a snapshot and know what's going on."

For example, he added, the company will tell what business niche would be oversaturated if any additional companies located to the area. Then, Retail Strategies would suggest not recruiting any more businesses in that category.

Through the market data, the company can also track money leaking to other regions.

How much are Lake City residents spending in Jacksonville or Gainesville? The data from Retail Strategies will tell.

"There's a lot of employment opportunity in that leakage," Foreman said. "They will tell us where we're full, and they'll tell us what we need to fill."

The program is designed not to harm existing businesses, he added.

County Commissioner Ron Williams said the survey will provide a road map to what the community needs, and then will help market the area to businesses that fit the criteria.

"It's all about creating jobs and making Columbia County more pleasing for businesses to locate," Commissioner Williams said. "I thought it was a great idea. We can use every advantage we can to attract businesses to the area. This is just another tool in the tool chest."

ANOTHER VIEW

Protecting your right to know

A misguided ruling by a federal appeals court on press freedom last week underscores the need for a federal shield law that protects the news media's right to report on wrongdoing in the government and mischiefs by public officials.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the 4th Circuit, based in Richmond, Va., declared in a 2-1 ruling that New York Times reporter James Risen must testify in the trial of a CIA operative charged with leaking classified information to him. The decision undermines the First Amendment privilege and gives the government unchecked power to intimidate Mr. Risen and other reporters who refuse to reveal their sources.

As Judge Roger Gregory noted in his dissent, the majority's ruling "severely impinges on the press and the free flow of information in our society."

It would compel reporters to reveal confidential sources in a criminal trial, effectively discouraging whistleblowers in the government from coming forth. Fearing government retaliation, news organizations would be obliged to think twice before going public with information based on leaks by employees on the public payroll.

The government would no doubt prefer a lapdog to a watchdog, but the public would be the big loser. Hard-hitting journalism that uncovers wrongdoing in government provides information on some of the most important issues in the realm of public affairs, promotes transparency, and keeps public officials on their toes.

The court's ruling should give Congress new impetus to enact a federal shield law... It is the best way to protect the public's right to know without damaging national security.

The proposed law protects journalists who are doing their job against being compelled to reveal their sources, but also requires courts to apply a balancing test to safeguard the public. Exceptions would include instances when the government seeks information that could be used to prevent terrorism attacks and when information sought from reporters can help prevent harm to others.

The bill would transform into law a set of guidelines issued by the Obama administration in response to the public backlash over disclosures that it had seized phone records and emails from reporters without notifying the news media beforehand.

The administration rules issued after the embarrassing disclosures of its overreach aren't enough. A law will guard against the possibility that a future president or attorney general — or the present ones — would try to get rid of the current guidelines at a later time.

One provision would not allow the Justice Department to delay notifying a reporter or news agency when their records are being sought for more than 90 days....

Congress has tried and failed several times to approve a federal shield law. This time it must not fail. The Risen ruling and the administration's overzealous efforts to seize reporters' records should be enough to persuade legislators that the need to enact such a law is more compelling than ever.

Don't let that dream die!

When a dream comes your way, do you just let it die? As kids, we fantasized about things that could be. We daydreamed, and used our vivid imaginations to explore worlds and things to do that were way beyond our reach. When I was eight years old, I was a frogman on a Navy demolition team, and an astronaut exploring the moon and planets, and a pirate!

Somewhere along the line, we may begin to give up on our dreams. We stop fantasizing about things that are unlikely or difficult. Maybe it's to avoid disappointment, maybe it's because we're teased or criticized for being "dreamers." Daydreams are replaced by more realistic and achievable thoughts, much less astounding. Instead of winning an Olympic gold medal or writing the great American novel, we settle for a job that offers enough money to make a living. Or maybe we stop dreaming at all.

Why do we let our dreams die? It's likely that we're afraid that our dreams will let us down. Fears of disappointment, fear of failure, and sometimes even fear of success, may be painful enough that we set our sights very low. We settle for less. When we do that, we may rule out the possibility of reaching out for chances of greater happiness.

Robert Denny
Bob.Denny8@gmail.com

We rule out trying to develop our gifts, talents, skills, and interests. We stop noticing opportunities. We give up what we could be, and settle for less.

But it doesn't have to be that way. Isn't it possible to allow our imaginations a little freedom, to consider what we could do with our lives, and explore paths we might enjoy choosing as alternatives to a better life? What's the cost of doing that?

It can be a little risky, a little unsettling. It's easy to let our fears stop us from living life to the fullest. We may fear the unknown, change, looking foolish, making mistakes, or failing. We may opt out, in favor of the practical side of life. But there are surely ways to get beyond these fears. Here are some things you could do to re-light the spark of adventure and self-development:

- Talk about possibilities and opportunities with a friend, or someone close to you. Play "What if?" What if I volunteered at the hospital? Took a flying lesson?

- Ask questions. Follow your curiosity. Use the Web on your computer. Call someone who knows something about the subject you're interested in. Does your local golf course offer classes for beginners?

- Play. Try it out, as a hobby, sport, or interest. Read about it. How about local history? Arts and crafts fair?

- Get educated. Local trade school or college subjects?

- What are your friends doing that you're interested in? Can you join them?

- "Keep your day job." Go for that dream to become an actor or singer, but don't expect to make a living at it any time real soon. Go for it, but keep your feet on the ground. Make sure you have a backup plan, "plan B."

Don't let your life become where dreams come to die. Don't shoot down a dream without giving it a chance to fire up your imagination. Be willing to reach for that better life for yourself. It could all start with just a dream.

Take Wiener's cell phone – please

Whether New Yorkers want Anthony "The Mad Sexter" Wiener as their next mayor is entirely their own choice, but the outcome affects the rest of us, and not just smart-alecky columnists and writers for late-night comedians.

The mayor of our nation's largest city is, ex officio, a national political power with considerable influence outside the city limits. Witness current Mayor Michael Bloomberg's sometimes-quirky crusades against large, heavily sugared drinks and public displays of tobacco products. And that's not to mention Hizzonner's campaigns to get city dwellers to use the stairs and take public transportation.

Weiner's interests run, not to public health, but to texting sexually explicit photos and messages to women strangers he has met over the Internet. The surprise is that he got responses from so many presumably sane women, although the one who said "Your health-care rants were a huge turn-on" was certainly pushing the mental envelope.

And rant is what Wiener did in Congress. The Democrat's anger and combativeness on the House floor, however, were unmatched by any record of significant legislative accomplishment.

When his Internet avocation became public (one of the more printable descriptions of his "sexting" images: him in his underwear pointing to a bulge in his tighty whities), he felt forced to resign

from Congress.

His then-pregnant new wife, Huma Abedin, a talented, extremely attractive and very private top aide to then-Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton, stood by him, although she skipped the customary awkward appearance of the wronged wife at her wayward husband's side at the usual mea-culpa press conference.

He left office in June 2011, with the usual commitments to seek repentance and rehabilitation and to repair relations with his wife – in short, to become a new, or at least a better-behaved, man. He also said that more embarrassing moments might surface. They did.

In many rehabilitations, there are relapses, and Wiener's came ... just days after he gave a warm, redemptive interview on July 2, 2012, to People magazine in which he said he tried daily "to become a better person."

That same month, he was sexting a 22-year-old woman. Apparently having learned nothing from his previous scandal or the truism that nothing on the Internet is truly private, he sent her descriptions of his sexual fantasies and photos of his genitals. The photos, which Wiener seems to send out like other people send thank-you notes, were posted on a website named, as if Wiener needed even more grief, "The Dirty."

According to the Associated Press, "The woman said Wiener exchanged nude photos of himself with her, engaged in phone sex with her, promised to help her get a job at the political website Politico and suggested meeting in a Chicago condo for a tryst."

But after six months – it took her that long to catch on? – the 22-year-old became disenchanted with the relationship. Her excuse, she told the New York Post, was that she was "young and dumb," and while she had thought she was in love with him, she now wanted to expose Wiener "as a creep," a task the former congressman seems to have accomplished on his own.

Until now, Wiener had been doing well in the mayoral primary set for Sept. 10. He was leading in the polls, and last week one less-dirty snapshot of the citizenry showed that 59 percent thought he deserved a second chance.

Weiner is exceptionally resilient in his shamelessness and New Yorkers are certainly entitled to choose the person they want to lead them. But if his conduct hasn't disqualified him, his choice of sexting alias, "Carlos Danger," should.

Deputies capture attempted robbery suspect

By STEVEN RICHMOND
srichmond@lakecityreporter.com

Sanders

Detectives from the Columbia County and Hamilton County sheriffs' offices apprehended a man they believe tried to rob a Lake City gas station.

Deputies detained Terrell Sanders, 20, a St. Petersburg resident, July 18 following an investigation into the attempted armed robbery of the Chevron Gas Station at 4008 W. U.S. 90. On July 17, deputies responded to a call from a clerk at the Chevron who told them a black male in a hoodie pulled out a revolver, placed it against her back and demanded she open the register.

The clerk did not have the key to the register, causing the suspect to quit the robbery and flee, the report said.

The detective assigned to the case, Martin Lee, received a tip from an unidentified person who said he knew the identity of the suspect.

After meeting with the informant, investigators were led to the Jasper home of Sanders' girlfriend and her mother, according to an arrest report. Sanders himself was also at the home.

According to the report, which was not released until Thursday, Sanders' girlfriend confessed to her and Sanders' attempted robbery and divulged information consistent with security camera footage.

She stated she and Sanders planned the robbery because her mother needed money, the report said.

Deputies placed Sanders in the Columbia County Detention Facility July 18, where he was detained in lieu of $20,000 bond. He faces a weapon-related offense and attempted armed robbery.

OBAMA: President brings economic message to Jacksonville

Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., questioned the point of Obama's big push in a speech on the Senate floor Thursday. "At some point, campaign season has to end and the working-with-others season has to begin," McConnell said. "At some point, you have to stop promising an 'ocean of tomorrows' and start actually working with the representatives of the people."

Obama praised Senate Republicans for being willing to compromise on issues like immigration, then drew a distinction with House Republicans, whom he repeatedly accused of bringing the economy to the brink. But Obama, too, at times has taken an uncompromising approach with ultimatums that force his opponents to give in or no deal. He's refused to consider any budget that includes the across-the-board, automatic spending cuts known as the sequester that went into effect in March.

The 2011 battle between Obama and House Republicans over raising the government's borrowing limit brought the nation close to default and resulted in a hard-fought budget deal. Obama says he won't be bullied on the debt ceiling again, but many in Washington believe the need to increase the borrowing cap later this year will prompt some kind of budget bargain.

A new poll by the Pew Research Center shows that pessimism about the economy remains widespread. The poll conducted last week found that 82 percent of Americans think the economy is in fair or poor condition and 67 percent are dissatisfied with the way things are going in the U.S. today. Forty-four percent think it will be a long time before the nation's economy recovers, while only 28 percent say it's currently recovering. The poll had a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

Even among Democrats, just 38 percent think the economy is recovering. But there are signs of slow improvement: The housing market is recovering, the stock market is booming, and unemployment is falling despite remaining uncomfortably high at 7.6 percent.

After an examining the port's giant cranes used to lift shipping containers onto ships, Obama spoke to a few hundred workers in the sweltering warehouse. He lamented that the U.S. was lagging behind China and Germany on fixing infrastructure and said that's why he's working to speed up the federal permitting process.

"The businesses of tomorrow are not going to locate near outdated roads and old ports," he said. Improvements to the port so more supertankers can come in would mean more workers spending more money at restaurants so that the waitress serving them, for example, can spend more money on an iPod, he said.

In making his plea for more spending on public works projects, the president is also relying on support from corporate leaders whose businesses either benefit from government financed construction or rely on up-to-date transportation systems to move their products.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce has been pressing Congress for greater spending on infrastructure and has allied itself with the president's effort, but in a statement Wednesday, chamber President Thomas Donohue also put some distance with Obama by saying such a public works initiative must be tied to less regulation, lower taxes and less overall government spending.

"The president correctly underscored the importance of infrastructure, education and immigration to our economic future," Donohue said. "But in order to grow and create lasting private sector jobs, we must have more economic freedom and while reining in government spending, taxes and debt."

The visit also marked Obama's first to the state since the acquittal of George Zimmerman, the man charged in the death of Florida teenager Trayvon Martin. The case has generated a painful, nationwide debate about racial prejudice, but Obama didn't mention the case in his public remarks.

As it was, so shall it be

Romans 15:4: "For whatever things were written before were written for our learning, that we through the patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope."

The time we live in now is much like the time Noah lived in before the flood that destroyed all but Noah and his family; and the days in which Lot lived when God destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah and only spared Lot and his family from the cities before He destroyed them.

Luke 17:26-30: "And as it was in the days of Noah, so it will be also in the days of the Son of Man: They ate, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage, until the day that Noah entered the ark, and the flood came and destroyed them all. Likewise as it was also in the days of Lot: They ate, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they built; but on the day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven and destroyed them all. Even so will it be in the day when the Son of Man is revealed".

How was it before the flood? How does it compare to us today? A quick look at Genesis chapters 4, 5 and 6 shows us how they compare to now. Eight things are recorded here: 1. Religious apostasy — Genesis 4:3: Cain brought sacrifice of works. 2. Travel — Genesis 4:16 "And Cain went out from the presence of the Lord and dwelt in the land of Nod (land

BIBLE STUDIES

ems-hugh4.3@comcast.net of wandering), east of Eden." 3. City building — Genesis 4:17: "And Cain built a city." Luke 17:28 speaks of the days before the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah. Jesus said: "They bought, they sold, they planted, they built." 4. Polygamy — Genesis 4:19 "And Lamech took unto him two wives." 5. Agricultural advances —

Genesis 4:20: 6. Music — Jubal, "the father of all those who play the harp and flute" Genesis 4:21. 7. Working with metal — "Tubal-Cain, an instructor of every craftsman in bronze and iron" Genesis 4:22. 8. Violence and crimes — "For I have killed a man for wounding me, even a young man for hurting me" Genesis 4:23.

All these things are prevalent today. But the things that happened before the flood and before Sodom and Gomorrah that was "the last straw" before God intervened, was sexual sins. Genesis 6 records the story of the "Sons of God" taking the daughters of men in an unholy union and causing a breed of giants to be born; and the world was filled with wickedness.

Genesis 18 and 19 records the account of the homosexual sin of Sodom and Gomorrah.

It is time for the church to stand up and speak out against these sins. Now, I know some are speaking against it in their local churches, but its time to take it "outside the camp" Heb. 13:13. Its time for all those who name the name of Jesus as their Savior to make sure that they are teaching their children that people are not born gay; they are gay because of sin. While we are to love them, we are to separate ourselves from them (2nd Cor. 6:17).

■ Hugh Sherrill, an ordained Baptist minister and Bible teacher, is available for special Bible studies and revivals.

Cain was not able

After they were driven out of the Garden of Eden, Adam and Eve had a son they named Cain. Sometime after his birth his brother, Abel, was born. As these two boys grew up they developed differing tastes about their life's work and their attitude towards serving God. Abel was a keeper of flocks, but Cain was a tiller of the ground (Genesis 4:2).

After the two boys became grown men, they individually offered a sacrifice to God. Cain offered "of the fruit of the ground" (Genesis 4:3), while Abel offered "of the firstlings of his flock and of their fat portions" (4:4). Because of his faith in God, "Abel offered to God a better sacrifice than Cain, through which he obtained the testimony that he was righteous" (Hebrews 11:4).

While God looked upon Abel's sacrifice with "regard," God had "no regard" for the sacrifice of Cain. From our passage in Genesis along with the passage in Hebrews we can conclude that God was pleased with, or had a pleasant feeling about, the sacrifice of Abel, while He was not pleased with, or had an unpleasant feeling about, Cain's sacrifice.

In response to Cain's anger with God and his countenance falling, God approached Cain with some words of advice. The Lord begins by asking Cain, "Why are you angry? And why has your countenance fallen?" (Genesis 4:6). We do not know if Cain responded to God's questions or if God just continued His words of advice to Cain. God said, "If you do well, will not your countenance be lifted up? And if you do not do well, sin is crouching at the door; and its desire is for you. But you must master it" (Genesis 4:7). These words are so gracious and encouraging. The creator of the world is trying to encourage Cain to do what is right. God is telling Cain that if he will "do well" then his facial expression will change. We might not see it as being very gracious, but God is extremely gracious to Cain by telling him what is about to happen to him if he does not "do well." Maybe the most encouraging words which God spoke were "you must master it" (Genesis 4:7).

As we read the rest of the story we see that Cain did not change and eventually killed his brother Abel. The apostle John gives us the reason for why Cain slew his brother, "because [Cain's] deeds were evil, and his brother's were righteous" (1 John 3:12).

The text does not tell us why Cain was not able to make the necessary changes in his life so that his countenance would be pleasant. Likewise we are not told why Cain was not able to master the "sin" which was "crouching at the door" (Genesis 4:7). However, we do know that God believed that Cain was able to change his countenance and master the sin. How encouraging! The Creator of the world is speaking to this man to help him do what is right.

As we meditate on this story, let us ask ourselves, "Why are we not able to master the temptations which confront us? Why are we not able to get over the things that happen in our life which make us angry at God?"

Abel was a man who heard what God wanted him to do and did it by faith (Romans 10:17). God has told us what He wants us to do to be pleasing to Him. Are we going to be like Abel and do it based upon our faith in God? Or, are we going to be like Cain and not do what God has commanded? Let's not be like Cain. We are able to be like Abel!

Greed - the enemy of your heart

As we continue looking into the book of Proverbs, the overriding theme of wisdom becomes obvious. In fact, the writer encourages seeking wisdom above any other pursuit in order to find satisfaction and fulfillment in life.

Despite our advancements in technology, communication and so many other areas, or perhaps because of them, our generation continues to seek many paths other than the one marked wisdom, and probably none more than the path to riches. No doubt you've seen this bumper sticker that expresses the theme for our generation: "He who dies with the most toys, wins." We always want more. Greed is the supplier and source for "more."

The definition of greed is an excessive desire for wealth or gain that can never be satisfied ... enough is never enough. In Ecclesiastes 5:10, the Bible says: "Whoever loves money never has money enough; whoever loves wealth is never satisfied with his income..." The real issue here is not money, but the love of it. Simply put, greed is about not being satisfied with what we have, and believing that we will be satisfied when we get "more."

"People who want to get rich fall into temptation and a trap and into many foolish and harmful desires that plunge men into ruin and destruction. For the love of money is the root of all kinds of evil. Some people, eager for money have wandered from their faith and pierced themselves with many griefs." (1 Timothy 6:9-10)

It is interesting that the Bible calls the love of money the

angieland3@windstream.net

"root" of all evil. On a tree, we can see the leaves, bark and branches, but not the root. It is the hidden part. Greed is not an action that we can see, but a motive behind our decisions. This can make greed hard to detect in our lives because we are skilled in hiding those motives and justifying our actions. However, we cannot hide them from God — and we should be grateful for that. Left alone, greed can leave us miserably unsatisfied and can cause serious damage in our relationships. According to Proverbs 15:27, "A greedy man brings trouble to his family." I'm sure that you could make your own list of troubles greed brings to a family, but here are a few I came up with: becoming a workaholic that never sees your family, quarrelling with family members over the inheritance of a loved one, stealing from our employers, cheating on our taxes, withholding money from someone in need and neglecting giving to our church.

In making these choices we may think we will get ahead, but the truth is we lose so much more than we gain: relationships, trust, respect, a good name and God's blessings. The good news is we don't have to give in to greed, selfish ambition or hidden motives to get what we need. Philippians 4:19 holds the promise: "... and my God will meet all your needs, according to His glorious riches in Christ Jesus."

Ask God to search your heart for any hidden motives of greed, to forgive you and to help you battle this enemy of your heart and relationships ... because your heart matters!

Blessings,
Angie

Love, gifts, grace, forgiveness

Before we look at the other brother, I wanted to look closer at what all these gifts from the father to the younger brother really means for us.

The action of the father was no less than the expression of agape love.

'Agape' is the word which describes the highest form of love. It is not based on emotions or feelings, it is the fixed, deliberate attitude of the whole heart which places the concern for someone else above that of yourself. It does not depend on love being returned, and is in spite of the actions of the one being loved.

This love is the love of John 3:16, as well as the love of Matthew 27:35-50; I John 3:16. One cannot be separated from God's love ... (Romans 8:38-39), but one can reject it. Love is the basis for the father's actions.

The BEST robe, which was reserved for honored guests. When you visited someone then, you would stay in a special guest room, and in the closet would be a choice of robes to be given to you. Your feet would be washed by the house servant, and you would be formally welcomed and presented with the robe. It was a gift, a symbol of honor shown by the host.

The implications of the best robe, sandals, and a ring given to the son... this startled everyone (especially the older brother). The father, by giving these things is saying, "This is (still) my son. I am accepting him back, no questions asked." The son was not put on probation. His offer to "work to balance the books" is flatly ignored. He is not just one step above a slave. He didn't have to try and undo all the sins he had committed. He wanted everyone to know, without a shadow of doubt, "this is my son!"

Christianity today, has fallen prey to a subtle (and dangerous) legalism. Many cannot understand the very thought of a father who would give the best robe to a "dirty hog slopper." Legalism says, "This son needs to prove himself first! He needs to make right the lies, give back the money, remain celibate because of his immorality." That's not the case with this father. His father did not sit him down and give him a questionnaire to decide whether or not he come home! Nor did he say, "Well, son, you've just done too much ... I don't think you would be happy here." He didn't say, "You'll have to work harder." Love and grace is seen here in giving the best robe in the house to the most undeserving person. Agape love is like that. Forgiveness is like that. Restoration is like that. Repentance was obvious, forgiveness is given, and grace is now appreciated more than ever before. "Welcome home son... I love you anyway, no questions asked."

"Go learn what this means, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice: For I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." (Matthew 9:13).

The ring, the robe, the calf ... for me, an unworthy, grateful son.

Televangelist Schuller in hospital after fall

Associated Press

ORANGE, Calif. — The Rev. Robert H. Schuller, a televangelist who built a soaring, glass-paned sanctuary dubbed the Crystal Cathedral to house his TV ministry, remained hospitalized on Thursday after a fall, his daughter said.

The one-time host of the "Hour of Power" TV ministry fell in the early morning hours Saturday at his home in Orange, Carol Schuller Milner said.

Schuller, 86, was doing well and was joking with hospital staff, she said. He could be released this week.

The family was initially concerned that Schuller, who had a heart attack in 1997, was suffering from heart failure but that was quickly ruled out. Doctors were trying to determine the cause of a high lactic acid count, Milner added.

"He just lost his balance. We took him in to make sure, because you just never know," Milner said. "They're just being extra cautious and taking their time."

Schuller, the once-popular televangelist whose Crystal Cathedral was dedicated in 1980, resigned from the church's board in 2012, two years after the church filed for bankruptcy.

The Roman Catholic Diocese of Orange bought the cathedral in bankruptcy proceedings and renamed the building Christ Cathedral.

Schuller began preaching in 1955 from the top of a drive-in movie theater concession stand in Orange County and by 1970 had launched a TV ministry with the "Hour of Power." He built the landmark cathedral in 1980.

At its peak, the broadcast attracted 20 million viewers around the world.

Fort White dominant at FCA

DeLand football camp continues today for Indians.

By BRANDON FINLEY
bfinley@lakecityreporter.com

DELAND — So far, so good for the Fort White High football team. The Indians have dominated the competition so far at the Fellowship of Christian Athletes Football Camp in DeLand.

While head coach Demetric Jackson said the competition hasn't been quite as stiff this year, the Indians are doing their best to prove that they could be a team to be reckoned with in Class 4A this year.

Fort White's most impressive performance thus far came in the final session of Thursday's afternoon matchup. The Indians scored on three plays each from 40 yards away and held Father Lopez without a score.

"That's the best our offensive line has played this camp," Fort White head coach Demetric Jackson said. "They weren't quite as good as the rest of the competition that we've seen, because they're a little young. Still, that's the best that both sides of the ball have played at the line."

Tavaris Jackson, Kellen Snider and Cameron White all had long touchdown runs and the passing game was also on point for the Indians, but those aren't the only players to stand out for Jackson.

"We've got a lot of good work in, but I'd probably say that Blair Chapman and Melton Sanders have stood out the most," Jackson said. "Defensively, Cameron and Kellen have stood out as well. It's not only our starters though, the young guys are getting in a lot of good reps."

Jackson did say there is one thing that has stood out that the Indians definitely need to improve on.

"We've got to find consistency," Jackson said. "Some of the young guys have got to do a lot of work. The varsity guys are doing a good job here and there, but they aren't being consistent. We've got to find a way to be more dominant, more aggressive."

The good news is that the Indians have one more day in which they can continue to build for the 2013 season. Jackson said he plans on filming the remaining sessions.

"It's going to be a big advantage for us to get it on film," Jackson said. "The first thing we'll do Monday is look at it. It's a big advantage to us, because we can look at and correct our mistakes. Our guys are visual learners so we can tell them something 100 times, but until they see it they might not understand what we're trying to tell them about how they're blocking on a stretch play."

Kicked around

Adult soccer players are feeling slighted by CYSA.

By TIM KIRBY

tkirby@lakecityreporter.com

Adult soccer players in Lake City feel like they are getting kicked around.

For years, there have been pick-up games on Tuesdays and Thursdays, but players have been told by Columbia Youth Soccer Association that the gates to the complex will be closed when there is not official activities on the field.

"I don't see what it hurts," said a player who coaches one of the CYSA teams. "Everybody in town knows you come here if you want to play soccer. We shouldn't be kicked out. This is what our tax dollars pay for."

Some former Columbia High players came out

Thursday to support the pick-up games.

"Everybody here works and pays taxes," Hunter Grow said.

"This is a good chance to give people an opportunity to play and get a little exercise," Geoff Beardsley said. "There is good interaction among a range of ages."

At the top of the age range is Felipe Pintado, 51, who played minor league soccer in Brazil and pick-up games for 15 years.

"This has happened before," Pintado said. "It went from CYSA to the county and we had no problem. Now it is back to CYSA and they want to lock it up."

"I have played out here, coached out here and volunteered out here," Kerceus Andre said. "It allows younger guys to come in

Sprint Cup drivers look back at Brickyard 400 wins, history at historic Indianapolis Motor Speedway

This weekend's Samuel Deeds 400 at the Brickyard marks the 20th running of a race many thought would never happen. For years, the only race run at Indianapolis Motor Speedway was the world-renowned Indianapolis 500. NASCAR was considered by many Indy fans to be a lesser form of racing, not worthy of competing on the hallowed oval that had been the focus of motorsports since the turn of the 20th century.

Legend has it that NASCAR's founder, the late Bill France Sr., was denied credentials to the 500 in 1965 and had to buy a grandstand ticket to watch as one of his NASCAR teams, the Wood Brothers, led Jimmy Clark to victory in the race.

But that all changed in 1994. The Sprint Cup Series ran the Brickyard 400 before crowds that rivaled the throngs that had been showing up for the 500.

Rick Mast won the pole for the inaugural Brickyard 400, and Jeff Gordon, who had lived for a time in nearby Pittsboro, Ind., won the race.

Simply racing on the historic track meant it was a great race for anyone involved that day.

"Everybody relates racing to either Daytona or Indy," said Bill Elliott, who finished third in the first Brickyard 400 and won it in 2002. "Having NASCAR and Cup being able to go there was very important.

"To pull off a win there, along with Daytona — don't get me wrong, all of them were big wins — but that was definitely a great place to win a race. And I've always enjoyed racing there over the years that I did race there."

In the beginning, many old-school open-wheel fans resented the presence of NASCAR racers at the Brickyard. Columbus, Ind., native Tony Stewart, who grew up following events at the Brickyard and initially raced in the Indy Racing League and was a series champion before moving to NASCAR, was among them.

"The first time they came, I'll be honest, I was 100 percent against it," Stewart said. "When you grow up in the state of Indiana, the Indianapolis Motor Speedway is the Holy Grail to you. I didn't want to see anything different come to it. To me, it was the Indy 500 and that's all it was supposed to be.

"But after watching the first race, the second year, I was kind of on the fence, and by the third year I was a fan of it. Luckily, my career path allowed me to come race here every year."

Stewart, who has raced in the Indianapolis 500 five times and run there in the Cup Series 14 times with wins in 2005 and 2007, now has no problem with other circuits invading his home track.

"Now with Formula One coming in, Moto GP, the Grand-Am Series, Nationwide cars running here, I think the mind-set has changed that it's too historic of a speedway to run one race a year on it," he said. "To be able to bring so many great different series and divisions here, it's pretty neat that a lot of people get the honor to race here at Indy now."

Stewart, who started from the pole in his first Indy 500 in 1996 and had a best finish of fifth the next year, makes no secret of his love for the Speedway or his desire to win there. "This is an event that I definitely circle on the schedule," he said. "Emotionally, I have a lot invested in it.

"To us, it's definitely not just another stop on the schedule. You don't just pull in and say, 'We're going to go in and try to win the race,' then pull out of here.

"When you're here, you're amped up because you're at Indianapolis."

And for Stewart, kissing the bricks in the traditional Indy winner's ceremony is about as good as it gets.

"It was everything to me," he said. "My whole life, since I was a kid, that's what I wanted to do. Not that I had some fascination with kissing bricks as a child. But my fascination to do it here was pretty obsessive."

Scott Bloomquist heads to Mudsummer Classic 'to win'

In most of the interviews heading into Wednesday night's Camping World Truck Series race on the dirt at Eldora Speedway, there's been little focus on the "ringers," those dirt-racing specialists who have secured rides for the first major NASCAR race on dirt in 43 years.

Scott Bloomquist, a 49-year-old dirt Late Model racer from Mooresburg, Tenn., who many consider one of the most talented drivers in any form of motorsports, will be driving a truck fielded by Kyle Busch Motorsports. He says he doesn't mind flying under the radar for now.

"I hope I am being overlooked," he said. "But I think they'll be surprised."

Throughout his career, Bloomquist has found great success when the stakes are high and there are unknowns about the racing, two factors that will come into play this week at Eldora.

He leads all drivers with six wins in the Dream at Eldora, a Late Model race that pays $100,000 to the winner. He's also a three-time winner of the World 100 at Eldora, the most prestigious event in the dirt Late Model world. He's also won numerous other big-money events, including a $100,000-to-win race at Batesville, Ark., for Modified cars, a type of vehicle he rarely drives.

"I have nearly a 70 percent win rate on my first visit to a race track," he said. "New challenges really motivate me."

For Bloomquist, participation in a major NASCAR race goes against the image he's created over the years. He's popular with his fans for many reasons, but largely because he marches to his own drummer. He wears his hair long, and his dirt cars carry skull-and-crossbones logos. He'd rather race where he can use his creativity in car construction and likes to compete whenever and wherever he wants, not always following a set schedule or a particular sanctioning body, although he has won multiple national titles in his career.

"It would be hard for me to be a driver in NASCAR," he said. "I like my freedom."

But the truck race at Eldora is different, he said.

"It's a big thing," he said. "It means a lot to my fans, and it means a lot to me, too."

"I really get up for new things, and I'm excited about this race."

"We've tested the truck, and I've got confidence in my ability to make changes to the truck to adapt to the conditions at the track."

"We're going up there to win."

Johnson cites 'experience' as reason he's dominating Sprint Cup in 2013

As the Sprint Cup Series heads into the stretch of the season where Chase berths and championships are to be decided and there are no off-weekends for struggling teams to regroup, Jimmie Johnson and his No. 48 team have established themselves as one of the organizations to be reckoned with before the final checkered flag falls at Homestead-Miami Speedway on Nov. 17.

The five-time champion has four wins already, the most recent running his career count to 64 after just 12 full-time seasons. He's been atop the points standings for all but two of 19 races this season, and his lead heading into the Brickyard 400, 56 points over second-place Clint Bowyer, will continue for at least another week, as there are only 48 points to be won in a given race.

Johnson said his experience is a big reason he's been so dominant of late.

"When you look at the generations before mine in racing, I saw a stat somewhere that the average Cup driver starting point was in the early 30s," he said. "You look at when (Dale) Earnhardt won his last championship and the bulk of his championships, he was older, and I think the same thing went for (Richard) Petty. That's all because of experience."

"I feel that I'm much smarter, focused; my talents are refined, I know the race tracks, I know my industry, everything is so much better today than it was in previous years."

But Matt Kenseth, who also has four wins, has established himself as a title contender in his first year driving the No. 20 Toyota for Joe Gibbs Racing.

"I think both of those guys [Kenseth and Johnson] could have won more races than that," said Jeff Gordon, adding that regular-season trends can be significantly altered once the 10-race Chase starts. "With the Chase ... all of the sudden, everything gets reset, and you might have a small advantage based on your [bonus points for regular-season victories], but basically ... you're all on a clean slate now and you have to put the best 10 races that you've put together all season long right then and there to win the championship."

Still, he thinks Johnson, his Hendrick Motorsports teammate, is in the driver's seat, so to speak.

"Right now, I think it's the 48's to lose," he said. "They've been so strong and because they've won five championships, you don't expect them to lose that momentum when the Chase starts. Because it is the Chase, anything is possible and can happen."

Joey Logano scores his 20th career Nationwide win

Joey Logano, the lone full-time Sprint Cup driver who ran in Sunday's STP 300 Nationwide Series race at Chicagoland Speedway, sped away from his Penske Racing teammate Sam Hornish Jr. in the closing laps to score his 20th career Nationwide triumph. He's now tied with fellow Cup driver Greg Biffle for 15th on the all-time Nationwide Series winners list.

Hornish's second-place finish allowed him to take the series points lead from Regan Smith, who struggled to a 13th-place finish. Third-finishing Austin Dillon left Chicagoland with the most money, as he collected a $100,000 bonus from the series sponsor as the highest finishing eligible driver in the Dash 4 Cash contest. Logano's winner's share of the purse was $85,615. Dillon's bonus was in addition to his third-place pay of $53,775.

Joey Logano celebrates his STP 300 win in Victory Lane at Chicagoland Speedway.

Jeff Gordon, whose 87 career Sprint Cup victories include four at the Brickyard, said he's looking to regain his winning form as he returns to the track where he, like Tony Stewart, grew up following the Month of May activities down the road from his home.

Gordon heads into this weekend's race 12th in the standings and in contention for a Chase berth with seven regular season races to go, but he likely would be safely in the top 10 if not for five DNFs (Did Not Finish) in the first 19 races of the season. He said that for the most part, he's been competitive, even if the results don't show it.

"Competitiveness versus results are two different things for me right now," he said. "We've really struggled this year. Earlier in the year with the competitiveness, and then we started to get into competitiveness in the cars just driving better and more to my liking and the speed being there."

He's been uncharacteristically off in qualifying, with an average start of 13.1, largely due to poor results on the intermediate tracks, but he's heartened by his 12th-place start and eighth-place finish at Kentucky Speedway three weeks ago.

"Qualifying, we've struggled, so that's something that we've been working on, and I was very pleased with what happened at Kentucky, and I hope we can see some more progress there on the mile-and-a-halfs," he said.

But it's at the Brickyard where he hopes to make the biggest gains.

"I'm very much looking forward to Indianapolis," he said. "We tested there, which is always great and beneficial, but things have evolved since that test, and I think our cars have improved since that test, and we'll be trying to apply that when we get there.

Jeff Gordon kisses the bricks in 2004 when he becomes NASCAR's first four-time Brickyard 400 winner.

"All signs of that test and things that we have planned, I'm very excited. We had a shot of winning that race a couple years ago, and I always go to that track with confidence and feeling good."

NUMERICALLY SPEAKING

4 Sprint Cup victories by Jeff Gordon and Jimmie Johnson at Indianapolis Motor Speedway, tops among all drivers.

124 Most laps led by a Brickyard 400 winner: Jeff Gordon in 2004.

11 Fewest laps led by a Brickyard 400 winner: Dale Jarrett in 1996.

14 Consecutive Sprint Cup races at Indianapolis Motor Speedway without a repeat pole winner: 1999 to 2012.

DEAR ABBY

Saving her sanity is right step for mom suffering depression

www.dearabby.com

DEAR ABBY: I was a single mom for most of my teenagers' lives. We have never been financially stable, and lately things have hit an all-time low.

I am prone to bouts of depression. I remarried last year, and my husband unfortunately does not understand or tolerate the depressions. He feels I should just "get over" things. He also doesn't believe in anti-depressants. It got so bad I attempted suicide last weekend.

My husband said my doing that was abusive to HIM. Had the pills not made me throw up, I would have happily waited to die.

There are six people on my medical aid, and the available funds are more than half used up. For me to see a psychiatrist will take a huge chunk out of it. If I do it, my family will miss out on medical care should the need arise later in the year. Is it selfish to try to hang onto what is left of my sanity? - ON THE EDGE IN JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA

DEAR ON THE EDGE: That your husband chooses not to recognize that depression is an illness - one that's treatable - is a reflection of his ignorance. That he would tell you your attempted suicide was abusive to HIM suggests that he is more concerned with himself than with you.

You have teenage children who need their mother. Trying to hang onto what's left of your sanity and get the medications you need isn't selfish - it's SOUND THINKING. If not for your sake, please seek help now for theirs.

DEAR ABBY: I'm pregnant with my first child and live 800 miles from my parents, who are retired. We have a good relationship now, but growing up I had major emotional issues my parents didn't handle well. Years of therapy in my early adulthood helped to fix them.

My parents have just told me they have been approved to be foster parents and will be caring for an emotionally disturbed teenager soon. I feel they were ill-equipped to handle my emotional issues growing up, and they should be more concerned with their grandchildren in retirement than taking in strangers.

When I heard the news, I tried my best to sound supportive, but they could tell I was upset. How can I handle these feelings? Would it be beneficial to tell them how I feel? - MOMMY-TO-BE IN NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR MOMMY-TO-BE: A way to handle your feelings would be to view the situation from the perspective of an adult, not a jealous child. That your parents will foster this teenager doesn't mean they will love their grandchildren any less.

On some level they may be trying to make up for the mistakes they made in your upbringing. Because they were ill-equipped to recognize your emotional problems does not mean they won't be wiser now. I suggest you wait to discuss this with them until you're feeling less resentful.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 12-year-old girl trying to live a simple life. I read your column every day. I have one small question. I really wanna know why girls don't like each other that much. Many girls at my school are really mean. I wish I knew the answer to why girls are like that. Do you know why? - CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: Girls your age are mean to other girls for a variety of reasons. Some of them may be acting out because they are having problems at home. They may do it because they are jealous or to make themselves feel more important (a power trip).

Girls like this have never been taught to respect the feelings of others. They behave this way because they haven't matured enough to have developed empathy, an ability to be sensitive to the feelings of those they are hurting.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend and I have been dating for a year, and it has been wonderful. He's amazing and sweet.

We went to the movies for our anniversary and about 50 minutes into it, he turned to me, said he didn't like the movie and he wanted to leave. I was enjoying it, but I didn't want to force him to watch it, so we left. When we were out of the theater I asked him why he didn't like it, and he told me he didn't want to discuss it. I pressured him for an answer a little bit, but he told me to forget it.

This has been bugging me. Should I leave it alone? I understand it's not that big a deal, but he has done this a few times before - not explaining things when I ask. I am confused about why he won't tell me. - PUZZLED IN THE MULTIPLEX

DEAR PUZZLED: There may have been something in the movie that made your boyfriend uncomfortable. Perhaps it triggered a memory of something in his past that he didn't want to be reminded of. Or, he may have been bored by the film and so centered on himself that he didn't care that you were enjoying it.

Your boyfriend may be wonderful and amazing, but he also appears to be a poor communicator. This would be a deal-breaker with some women. Only he can tell you why he's this way, but if he hasn't opened up in the year you have been seeing each other, it isn't likely to change.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has erectile dysfunction for which he takes medication. He gets it from a friend. I have discovered he takes the medication with him when he travels. He swears he isn't cheating on me and that he's faithful. Should I believe him? - SUSPICIOUS IN ARIZONA

DEAR SUSPICIOUS: I confess, my knee-jerk reaction after reading your letter was, "Uh-oh!" Then I picked up the phone and called Bruce Landres, M.D., in Los Angeles. His first words were, "That's an interesting question." He then went on to say that if your husband has prostate problems in addition to his erectile dysfunction, you should believe him, because last October the FDA approved a low dose of one particular E.D. drug for the treatment of benign prostate hypertrophy (BPH). (This low dose is not enough to assist in infidelity.)

Also, it would be much safer for him to get this kind of medication from his physician, who knows his medical history, since E.D. drugs can sometimes cause serious side effects.

P.S. Another thought: It's also possible your husband watches adult videos when he travels and needs "the pill" for his own entertainment. You'll never know unless you ask him.

DEAR ABBY: My mother-in-law passed away five months ago. I was given the option of taking a winter coat of hers, which I gladly accepted. When would it be appropriate to wear it around my husband's family? - STILL MOURNING IN WISCONSIN

DEAR STILL MOURNING: I'm sorry for your loss. The time to wear the coat would be when the temperature drops enough that you feel you need it. And when you do, if someone should recognize it and comment, just say you are wearing her coat because it helps you feel closer to her; it's like a warm hug from heaven.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get your chores out of the way and head out to socialize or take care of personal needs. Emotions will be difficult to deal with, so avoid a confrontation until you reassess how you feel and how you want to respond. ★★

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take part in community or family events. Pleasure trips or traveling to a destination that will inspire or motivate you to move forward with a lifestyle change should be planned. Romance is on the rise, and personal dreams can be fulfilled. ★★

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Look deeper into any situation that doesn't appear to be quite right. The information you are given may be embellished. Opportunities will surface through people you've worked with in the past, but do your due diligence before making a promise. ★★

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Participate in the action. Get involved in functions that introduce you to new business associates. Rely on your insight and ability to show sincerity and dedication to the talents you have to share. Love is on the rise. ★★★★★

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Not everyone will be up front with you, making it difficult for you to make a good decision regarding legal, medical or financial matters. Set your sights on the changes that you feel most comfortable making, not what's being forced on you. ★★

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A new look at an old idea will spark renewed interest. Call in favors from reliable sources. Expanding your interests will also help you explore partnerships that can influence you personally or professionally. Love is highlighted. ★★

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Arguments will not bring you any closer to getting what you want. Step back and rethink the situation you face and you'll find a way to use your past experience and your skills to come up with a workable solution. ★★

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Put your plans into motion. Get together with someone who inspires you, or take a trip that heightens your enthusiasm. Keep the momentum going and strive for success. Romance is on the rise, and special plans will enhance your love life. ★★★★★

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Put your money in a safe place or invest it in something that promises to bring you a high return. Making changes to your home or personal life may be enticing, but don't go over budget or you will end up feeling stressed. ★★

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Partnerships should be your focus. Whether you are dealing with a personal or professional relationship, take time to listen to what's being said. A simple request can make your life easier. Avoid impulsive reactions. Focus on simple pleasures. ★★

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Give your all, no matter what you pursue. A passionate response will get you the most in return. Taking a look back at your past will help you avoid making a similar mistake now. Put your money and possessions in a safe place. ★★★★★

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Put your creative imagination to work for you. Invest in your talent, skills and innovative ideas. Love is on the rise, and planning a romantic evening will enhance your personal life. Socialize and take care of your personal needs. ★★

LDR 13-02, an application by Jockelyn Michelle Graham Bell, as agent for Ozel Graham, to amend the Official Zoning Atlas of the Land Development Regulations by changing the zoning district from RESIDENTIAL, SINGLE FAMILY-3 (RSF-3) to COMMERCIAL, GENERAL (CG) on property described, as follows: A parcel of land lying within Section 30, Township 3 South, Range 17 East, Columbia County, Florida. Being more particularly described, as follows: Lot 1 of Block 1 of the Northwestern Division of the City of Lake City, as recorded in the Public Records of Columbia County, Florida, lying Southwesterly of U.S. Highway 41 (State Road 100). Containing 0.25 acre, more or less. The public hearing may be continued to one or more future date. Any interested party shall be advised that the date, time and place of any continuation of the public hearing shall be announced during the public hearing and that no further notice concerning the matter will be published, unless said continuation exceeds six calendar weeks from the date of the above referenced public hearing. At the aforementioned public hearing, all interested parties may appear to be heard with respect to the amendment.

A copy of the amendment is available for public inspection at the Office of Growth Management, City Hall located at 205 North Marion Avenue, Lake City, Florida, during regular business hours.
All persons are advised that if they decide to appeal any decision made at the above referenced public hearing, they will need a record of the proceedings, and that, for such purpose, they may need to ensure that a verbatim record of the proceedings is made, which record includes the testimony and evidence upon which the appeal is to be based.
Persons with disabilities requesting reasonable accommodations to participate in this proceeding should contact 352.463.3169 (Voice & TDD) or via Florida Relay Service 800.955.8771.

AMENDED ORDER OF
SERVICE BY PUBLICATION
TO: THE TRUSTEES OF THE S-K-T Trust, located in the County of Columbia and State of Florida
You are being sued by Debra Hurlburt & Norma Leduc, the Administrators of the Estate of Bernard Hurlburt. The purpose of the suit is to declare the Trust to be invalid, and to clear title to the lands located in Starksboro, Vermont that were purportedly transferred by Mr. Hurlburt to the B-S-T Trust in December 2001. By the terms of the B-S-T Trust, the S-T-K trust may have an interest in said lands.
You must answer the Declaratory Judgment Complaint within 21 days of the first publication of this notice in the Lake City Reporter, a newspaper of general circulation in the county of Columbia, Florida. Your answer must include any counterclaim that you have against the Plaintiffs. If you fail to respond within 21 days, you will lose your case by default.
You Answer must be filed with the Superior Court, Addison County Civil Division, 7 Mahady Court, Middlebury, VT 05753 by the 21st day after the first publication of this notice. You must also mail a copy of your Answer to Pamela A. Marsh, Marsh & Wagner, P., 62 Court Street, Middlebury, Vermont 05753. You may wish to get a lawyer to help you prepare your Answer. Your Answer must contain a response to each and every allegation of the Declaratory Judgment Complaint. You may obtain a copy of the complete Complaint by calling the Civil Division at 802-388-7741, or by calling Plaintiffs' Attorney, Pamela A. Mash, Esq. at 802-388-4026
Dated at Middlebury, Vermont this 18TH day of June, 2013.
