LeBron serves as music curator for game

LeBron James is taking some of his talents during the offseason to a best-selling basketball video game franchise as a music curator.

2K Sports announced that the two-time NBA champion of the Miami Heat selected 20 songs for the soundtrack of the upcoming "NBA 2K14." The league's four-time MVP is also the cover athlete of the popular video game.

James said in a statement that he is honored to be the first cover athlete to choose songs for the soundtrack. He follows his friend and Grammy-winning rapper Jay-Z, who was the executive producer of the last year's installment that sold more than 4.5 million copies.

"2K is letting me take control of some important elements in NBA 2K14, including this year's soundtrack," James said. "I love that I'm the first NBA 2K cover athlete to choose the soundtrack."

Some of the songs featured on the game's soundtrack are Drake's "Started From The Bottom," Phil Collins' "In the Air Tonight," Daft Punk's "Get Lucky," featuring Pharrell Williams and Macklemore & Ryan Lewis' "Can't Hold Us," with Ray Dalton.

James is the first solo cover athlete to cover the game in two years since Michael Jordan.

Latin 'queen of radio' dies in Miami

Miami — A Latino radio personality known as the "queen of radio" has died in Miami.

She died Tuesday at a hospital from a bacterial infection. Pino was 65.

The Ecuadorian disc jockey was a well-known personality in Miami's Latin music radio.

Music producer Emilio Estefan told the Miami Herald that Pino's death was "a great loss for Latin music."

Estefan says Pino was also the first DJ to play songs from his first album with wife Gloria Estefan.

Allen wants to reclaim N-word in comedy

LOS ANGELES — Tim Allen isn't a fan of the N-word — not just the word, but the phrase.

The 60-year-old actor-comedian told the Tampa Bay Times that the term "N-word" is worse than the racial slur it represents.

The star of the TV shows "Home Improvement" and "Last Man Standing," and films such as "The Santa Clause" said he thinks the criticism that keeps non-black comedians from using the actual N-word is a step backward from the days when Richard Pryor and Lenny Bruce purposefully used such language.

Allen's comments were published last week ahead of a stand-up performance.

But he made them in June after it was revealed celebrity chef Paula Deen admitted using racial slurs in the past.

Virtual school lays off hundreds

Miami — The Florida Virtual School has laid off several hundred teachers in response to a decline in enrollment and change in funding.

The online school cut 177 full-time positions and 625 part-time instructors over July and August. The layoffs come in light of a significant decline in enrollment. Thirty-two percent fewer students pre-enrolled for August and September courses as of July 23 compared to the previous year.

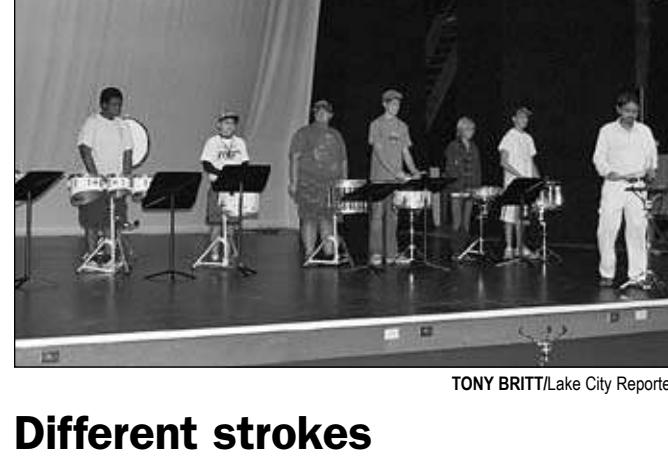

"As a result of a decline in pre-enrollments, for the first time in 16 years, we had to make the painful decision to reduce staff," Florida Virtual School spokeswoman Tania Clow said.

The state Legislature has also changed the funding model for virtual school education. Before July 1, a traditional school received a set amount of funding to provide six classes for each student, and the Florida Virtual School received the equivalent of one-sixth that amount for each additional course the student enrolled in online.

Now funding has been capped to the amount that was traditionally provided to the brick-and-mortar schools. So for each additional online class the student enrolls in, the school loses money, and the Florida Virtual School receives less — the equivalent of one-seventh of the traditional school's funding instead of one-sixth.

State sues mortgage firm

TALLAHASSEE — Florida Attorney General Pam Bondi is suing a company that her office says allegedly preyed on homeowners in danger of losing their homes.

Bondi's office filed the Bondi's office, however, alleged that the company allegedly acquired titles to the distressed owners' homes and pocketed the advance fees without providing any help. The homeowners remained liable for the mortgage payments.

HEALTH: County ranks low on health measures

67 for mortality. Morbidity, the quality of life, scores slightly better in the study, ranking Columbia 49th out of 67 counties.

"What affects health?" Lander said. "Health does not always equate to health care. Good health can be the habits that we chose."

Health behaviors examined by the Population Health Institute included adult smoking, adult obesity, physical inactivity, excessive drinking, sexually transmitted infections, teen birth rate and motor vehicle crash death rate.

"We're going to be focusing a lot of our efforts in Columbia County on promoting a healthy lifestyle through the health department," Lander said. "Better eating habits. More exercise. Reduce smoking numbers."

Currently, one quarter of Columbia County residents smoke compared to 19 percent of the Florida population. Locally, 34 percent of adults are obese, while only 26 percent of adults are obese statewide. Twenty-nine percent of adults in the county report physical inactivity, five percent higher than the state.

The study also examined Columbia County's physical environment, specifically drinking water, particulate matter, fast food restaurant, access to recreational facilities and access to healthy foods. The county ranked 32nd out of 67 for physical environment.

In Columbia County, 51 percent of all restaurants in the area are fast food, ranking significantly higher than Florida's 44 percent. However, Columbia County has a more access to recreation facilities and better access to healthy foods than Florida.

"When the [Population

Health Institute] says you're in the bottom 20 in the state, you have health issues," Lander said. "Knowing we have health issues, where do we go from there?"

At a recent Lake Shore Hospital Authority meeting, Lander presented the WellFlorida Council 2013 Community Health Improvement Plan Update that provides a guideline for the community to follow during the next couple years in terms of health.

According to the update, the county needs to increase the appropriate use of health care, increase health care provider availability, enhance partnerships to address community health issues, and increase the awareness of community health issues and resources.

"By implementing the Community Health Improvement Plan, we anticipate moving up in the rankings," Lander said. "I don't know if we will see changes by the 2014 report, but we expect to see them by 2015."

Because the health improvement plan provides a road map for the community to pull its way up from the bottom, Lander believes the guide shouldn't just be for the health department, but for the entire community. The only way the community can be successful is if everyone comes together to address the problems, he added.

As the study addressed environmental aspects and clinical care, the health department alone cannot tackle the wide variety of issues ranking Columbia County so low.

"[The ranking] does not strictly fall on the shoulders of the health department," Lander said. "We all have a stake in this."

WORKFORCE: Professor to offer insights executive director. "We're hoping this speaker can give us some insight on some ways we can reach them."

Johnson is a distinguished professor of strategy and entrepreneurship at the University of North Carolina Kenan-Flagler Business School.

Johnson's presentation for Columbia County is: Workforce Development "Disruptive Demographics: Implications for Businesses and Consumer Markets."

The program will take place 8 to 9 a.m. Monday at the Columbia High School Auditorium, 469 SE Fighting Tiger Drive. Breakfast will be served at 7:45 a.m. and the presentation will begin at 8.

Chick-fil-A is catering the event, which is sponsored by TD Bank.

The event is free to all chamber members, though anyone planning to attend is asked to make a reservation by 4 p.m. today by calling 752-3690 or emailing sonja@lakecitychamber.com.

Decker said the Workforce Seminar is a collaboration between the Lake City-Columbia County Chamber of Commerce and the Columbia County School District.

Terry Huddleston, Columbia County superintendent of schools, and other school board members heard Johnson speak at a conference and they told chamber representatives how beneficial it would be to have Johnson as a speaker for a local business seminar.

"He (Johnson) will speak on demographic trends and why this generation is so different from the Baby Boomer generation and how to reach them more effectively in business," Decker said. "He'll give us overall workforce trends."

Decker said Huddleston felt so strongly about the speaker and the message that he's going to bring, that after Johnson speaks to the business community, he'll speak to every school system employee.

Huddleston said approximately 1,300 school district employees will hear a presentation from Johnson.

"Dr. Johnson provides a lot of information about human behavior and human nature from the Baby Boomer generation all the way to the present Millennials," he said. "His presentation is very insightful into the work habits and the way different generations approach work and how different generations value work. All of it gives employers a better understanding of how to develop expectations, performance plans and it gives a real understanding about how society has transformed over the last 50 years."

Huddleston said the same attributes from the Baby Boomers to Generation X, Generation Y and the Millennials will be discussed by Johnson as they relate to education.

"Each of those groups have had different expectations for education," he said. "Education served a different purpose based on technology and where the world was at the time. Johnson's research provides a very strong indicator about why education is so important and why we must be teaching our students to think critically because it impacts their employment. Not only does it affect their employment, but it affects the future of our country and locally in our county as far as economics, economic development and the sustainability of our communities."

School district officials have scheduled two 80-minute sessions so Johnson's presentation can be heard by all school district employees. School board members will also address the employees.

Huddleston said this is probably the first time since the mid-1980s that all school board employees have gathered together for the beginning of the school year.

"Everything Dr. Johnson said is pertinent to our world today," he said. "We just want to set a vision for our teachers and non-instructional staff and get the year off on a positive note with some very positive insight into the world we live in."

PROJECT: Altrusa volunteers to help CARC

Sandy Kishton, local Altrusa International member, said Altrusa does various service projects throughout the year and this weekend, Saturday and Monday, Altrusa members have designated hours where they are going to CARC's House of Bargains/Valerie's, a retail thrift store, and help with a clothing backlog.

"We're volunteering to do some of the sorting of the various items that come to the store," she said. "We're going to be sorting items that have been donated. Then when we sort through it we'll be sorting through clothing, hanging things on racks and also separating things by category whether it's a household item or something else."

Altrusa International members will help CARC with its clothing backlog and move to a new store location, 500 N. Marion Ave., from 8 a.m. - noon on Saturday and from 2 - 8 p.m. on Monday.

Kishton estimates there will be around 60 people from Altrusa volunteering. She said there will be approximately eight Altrusa volunteers working per shift and there will be about four shifts of volunteers during the two-day project.

"CARC is a very important part of our community and with the services they provide to their clients, we felt like this was an important thing for us to do as far as giving our time," she said. "I think it's important for all of us to participate within our own community and this is one opportunity that we at Altrusa decided to do it for such a good organization."

Kishton encouraged residents to volunteer in the effort to process the items and also urged people to continue to donate items to CARC's House of Bargains/ Valerie's Boutique. She said CARC also has delivery trucks for large bulk items such as furniture.

"The House of Bargains store not only financially supports the (CARC) organization, but it also provides the location for some of the higher functioning (CARC) clients to have a place of employment," she said. "They also work in the store and assist with the hanging of items and sorting. The mission of the store is twofold."

ANOTHER VIEW

Legislature should clarify and apply residency rules

State lawmakers are showing a commendable interest in developing standards to assess and possibly enforce residency rules regarding legislative districts.

After all, the Florida Constitution requires state representatives and senators live in their districts. But here's the rub: When it comes to residency, there is no "clear set of principles" developed by either chamber to enforce the intent of the constitution. This has been the case for years, according to House Speaker Will Weatherford, R-Wesley Chapel, and Senate President Don Gaetz, R-Niceville.

State Sen. Jack Latvala, R-Clearwater, seeks to change that. Latvala, the chairman of the Senate Ethics and Elections Committee, has made inquiries to Gaetz and Weatherford about residency standards....

The state constitution says "each legislator shall be at least twenty-one years of age, an elector and resident of the district from which elected and shall have resided in the state for a period of two years prior to election."

That's pretty clear, but a number of residency questions have appeared in recent weeks. Latvala has questions about five Democratic legislators, so partisan motivations may be present in the matter.

But the problem of residency isn't just a partisan issue.

WCTV reports that state Rep. Alan Williams, D-Tallahassee, owns a homesteaded residence outside of his district. But he claims to split time in a home he partially owns with relatives within the district.

And Holly Hill is having its own drama about the residency of City Commissioner Donnie Moore. A check several weeks ago revealed that Moore's driver's license indicated he lived at an address on Woodbourne Lane in Ormond Beach. Yet he continues to serve on the Holly Hill City Commission.

Three citizens are suing Moore and a number of Holly Hill officials about the issue, but it shouldn't have to come to a lawsuit. There should be clear — and enforced — standards of residency.

But questions continue to arise in Florida, suggesting that clearer standards are needed.

The Legislature can and should take its own steps to ensure legislators are living within their districts. Gaetz and Weatherford want the residency information from the secretary of state's office by Sept. 1. After that date, it is unclear what they will do with the data, and how they will proceed.

Lawmakers should adopt stricter standards for member residency. The Legislature should make sure a lawmaker's primary residence is in his or her district, and use state records — such as voting information and driver's license data — to confirm residency. Members should be expected to resign if they move out of their district.

Florida citizens have a right to expect that their representatives live within the appropriate political boundaries. Faith in government is running pretty low these days, but it will drop even lower if such basics of public service aren't properly enforced.

The psychology of good sleep

Can't sleep? Are you too tired at the end of your day, and end up falling into bed too early? Do you sometimes toss and turn, worrying about today's problems and tomorrow's threats? Do digestive problems, aches, pains, or discomfort bother you? Some good tips from psychology could help you get that better sleep you deserve.

I'm a licensed mental health counselor in Florida, but I'm not a sleep expert. My students at Florida Gateway College and I study what makes good sleep, from our research and from our textbook, Psychology, by Carole Wade and Carol Tavris. Common sense and folk wisdom are helpful, but science has some helpful facts we can use. For instance, I've always heard that the sleep you get before midnight is the most important, but sleep studies show that sleep gets better and better through the night, during 45-minute sleep cycles. During these sleep cycles, the sleeper goes through four stages of deeper and deeper sleep, then ascends back to stage 1 sleep, where sleep psychologists tell us that most dreaming occurs. With each cycle, more time is spent dreaming. Your best and longest dreams occur in the hour before waking in the morning! Science tells us that we need to sleep and dream every night, or we will suffer problems with both our mental and physical health.

What are some common sleep mistakes? If we don't give our nightly sleep the priority that it deserves, it comes back to haunt us! Psychologists tell us that when you lose some sleep each night of the week, you can't make it up on the weekend! Some sleep problems are easy to fix:

- Just like your workspace, you need to clear your sleep space. Your bedroom should be for just for sleeping, not for watching TV, using your computer, studying, working, or paying the bills.

- Don't go to bed with unresolved thoughts. Keep a note pad by your bed. If you wake up with your mind racing, make a note and go back to sleep.

- Your overall health makes a big difference. Choose healthy regular meals, and don't go to bed too hungry or too full.

- Restlessness and tension can be a problem. Get a little exercise every day, even if it's just a short walk. Stretch before bed, and upon getting up in the morning.

- Have a regular 8-hour sleep schedule, with a regular bedtime and regular time to wake.

- Darken your bedroom. A dim night-light is okay, so you don't stumble around or break a toe getting up in the night.

- A little water before bed is OK. Don't take too much or too little water. Limit your salt intake; it regulates water retention and metabolism.

- Anxious, nervous, worried? Deal with your issues before bedtime.

- Sleep is part of your overall health plan. See your doctor once a year. If sleep is a problem, your doctor can help. Melatonin is the body's own sleep aid, produced by the pineal gland. Your doctor can prescribe melatonin or other sleep aids, if advised. You can find some foods, like turkey, that contain a natural sleep aid, tryptophan.

Sleep habits may be the easiest part of your life to improve. Take this one step closer to your destination—a healthier, happier, and fulfilled life.

Make your own fun, Snowden

After 39 days living in a Russian airport transit lounge, a circle of hell that Dante unaccountably omitted, Edward Snowden, the great leaker of NSA secrets, has been granted a year's asylum while he waits for some Latin American country to take him in.

One Russian winter should convince Snowden, who defected from Hawaii, that his first choice of Venezuela or Ecuador for sanctuary was probably the right one. He will find that there's a lot to be said for sunshine and warmth.

In an effort to be helpful — and surely a great American newspaper wouldn't be sarcastic — The Washington Post published a tourism guide of sorts so that Snowden can see what he's been missing after days spent staring at travel posters for Ulan Bator.

"If Snowden really is, as his father suggests, a sensitive sort" — note that he said "sensitive" and not "sensible," a virtue Snowden clearly lacks — "he'll want to probe the Russian soul," writes freelancer Isabel Gorst.

That means at some stage he'll find himself standing on the ledge of the 17th floor of his apartment building. Probing the Russian soul means reading up on Russian literature, a trove of almost unrelieved grimness.

For example, there's the famous

mcfeattersd@shns.com

Nikolai Gogol novel "Dead Souls." It's a comedy.

Fyodor Dostoyevsky's "Crime and Punishment," perhaps the country's most famous novel, is about the ax murders of two elderly women by a penurious ex-student named Raskolnikov. There is so much handwringing and soul-searching that midway through the book the reader is ready to take an ax to the protagonist. After his chief tormenter commits suicide, Raskolnikov gets eight years of penal servitude.

One of the most popular Russian novels in the United States was "Doctor Zhivago" by Boris Pasternak. To make a long story short — and it is a long story — Yury Zhivago dies suddenly of a heart attack while the on-again, off-again love of his life, Lara, dies in the Gulag. Pasternak won the Nobel Prize for the book, but the Kremlin wouldn't let him accept it, perhaps because it was too cheerful.

After Snowden bones up on Russian literature, he'll be ready for some nightlife. Gorst writes that tweeters jokingly say "the first place Snowden should go is the Hungry Duck, Moscow's legendary strip club, a favorite haunt of expats in the 1990s."

"Unfortunately," she writes, "the Duck is no longer open," but she notes that the city does not lack for pole dancers, much like the girlfriend he left behind in the States and now apparently very much misses.

Moscow is, by repute, an expensive city. The Kremlin's stipends for defectors tend not to be terribly generous and this is likely to be especially so with a transitory defector like Snowden. The Russians have probably already copied everything in his three laptops and, given their success at spying here — Robert Hanssen and Aldrich Ames, considerably more senior to Snowden, to name two — Snowden probably doesn't know much that they don't know already.

Having embarrassed his host, the thin-skinned Vladimir Putin, by forcing the cancellation of the Russian leader's one-on-one meeting with President Barack Obama, Snowden will likely have to make his own fun.

Planning for revival

Many churches are planning for a fall revival service; and many will only go through the motions.

Few if any will start now planning for and praying for revival. Revival will not happen if the people do not do their part.

Many today don't really understand why the churches have the revival services because they don't know what revival means. The word revive means "to flourish anew or to blossom again", "to live again or to regain life". If you do not believe the church needs reviving then you need to be revived first.

Many spend what little time they spend in prayer praying for souls salvation rather than revival. However, that is not the primary purpose for the revival services. They are services that should be dedicated primarily to revive the church, those who are born again.

So many in the church today have lost their first love, they have lost the will to give their life over to the one who gave His life for them. Unless the church is revived, it will not survive nor will the nation survive.

To experience revival we need to adhere to the instruction God gave to Israel concerning their moving into the promise land recorded in Exodus 23:20-33. He said (paraphrased) He would send an angel before them to keep them in the way. God said not to provoke the angel by transgressing God's law; if they would obey His voice and do all that He spoke, then He would be an enemy to their enemies. He said you must not involve yourself with the ways of and the gods of their land. They must not under any circumstances compromise the word of the Lord.

If the church would just heed and adhere to the words of God in Exodus 23, the church would truly have revival.

So many of the evangelists of today have become more entertainment than preacher. They think much of their message needs to be geared around jokes and funny stories. Don't they know that when they do that they take peoples mind off of God's word?

Pastors, remember that Satan does not want even one of your people to experience revival, much less you or your church. So make sure of the one you invite. As I John 4:1 says: "Try every spirit to see if it be of God."

Evangelist, are you delivering the message God wants you to or have you slid into the world of entertainment? The meaning of revival has not changed. The way Billy Graham, EJ Daniels, etc. did it is the same way it ought to be done today.

Church, we need revival. Please pray for it today.

The purpose of the Helper

Knowing that He is going to shortly leave the apostles, Jesus begins to tell them that He will send the Holy Spirit to be a helper to them. During this conversation, Jesus says three times He is going to send the Holy Spirit (John 14:26; John 15:26; John 16:13).

Jesus has been preparing these men for the work He wants them to accomplish; namely, taking His message to the entire world and thereby making disciples of all the nations (Matthew 28:19). The question for us to meditate upon is: How would the Holy Spirit be a helper to these men? What purpose would this Helper be to these apostles of Jesus? As we analyze these three verses, we see the various things which will be done for these men.

The Holy Spirit was going to be sent to the apostles by both Jesus and His Father. The Father was going to send it to the apostles because Jesus had requested it. Jesus did not want the apostles to be left without some support in their mission. He knew that they would need a helper in accomplishing the mission He had given them. The fulfillment of this promise by Jesus to send the Holy Spirit was accomplished on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2).

One of the ways the Holy Spirit would help the apostles is that He would "teach [them] all things" (14:26). The Holy Spirit would be the one who would instruct the apostles in everything they needed to know and do to make disciples of all the nations. He would be imparting instruction to these men so that they would be able to teach others.

If the Holy Spirit taught the

BIBLICAL MEDITATION

apostles "all things," then there is nothing in which they were not instructed. When "all things" have been taught, then there is nothing else to be "taught." The apostles had all the knowledge that they needed and nothing else needed to be added. The Holy Spirit is called the "Spirit of truth, who proceeds from the Father" (15:26). This "Spirit of truth" was not only going to teach them "all the truth," but He was going to "guide [them] into all the truth." The things the Holy Spirit spoke to these men were not from "His own initiative, but whatever He hears, He will speak" (16:13). Everything God wanted people to know, He revealed to the Holy Spirit who then gave it to the apostles.

Not only would the Holy Spirit "teach [them] all things" but He was going to "bring to [their] remembrance all that [Jesus] said to" them (14:26). The apostles would have a helper when it came time for them to remember what Jesus had taught and because the Holy Spirit was helping them to remember, their memory would be complete; they would not have a "memory lapse" on some point; it would always be accurate.

By having someone help the apostles to know all the truth, be guided in all the truth, as well as having assistance in remembering everything that Jesus taught, they would be the source for everything the disciples of all the nations would need to know. The apostles would become the authority by which everything in the body of Christ was to be done. If the apostles did not teach it, then it was not something God wanted them to teach. Since they are the source of authority, there is no one else who would have this authority.

There was a great responsibility placed upon the apostles. It is very reasonable to see how and why they would need a helper to carry out their mission. Helping the apostles accomplish their mission was the purpose of the Helper.

The key to life's riches

Take a quick look and count how many keys are in your pocket or purse. Don't we take these funny looking little things for granted? That is, until we need one and can't find it!

Even the name of a "key" is synonymous with how important they can be: crucial, important, significant, vital, strategic, basic, central, major, and essential, just to name a few. In other words, it is usually "key" that we find our "keys."

Now look at your keys and think about what they do for you. The job of a key is to give us access to something that is protected or limited only to designated people. If we have a key, we have been granted access to what that key protects. For example, my key ring includes a key to my car, house, office, post office box, my husband's truck, and a safe deposit box. With each key, I have been granted access to all these places.

I bring this up because I read something recently in scripture that stuck in my mind about keys. Isaiah 33:5-6 has this to say:

"The Lord is exalted, for He dwells on high;

He will fill Zion with justice and righteousness.

He will be the sure foundation for your times,

A rich store of salvation and wisdom and knowledge;

The fear of the Lord is the key to this treasure."

In these verses, I see a list of coveted, protected items: a sure foundation for our times, a rich store of salvation, a rich store of wisdom, and a rich store of knowledge. Who doesn't want access to a sure foundation,

HEART MATTERS

Angie Land

angieland3@windstream.net

especially in our times?

Apart from God's offer of a sure foundation, the best we can do is recall the "good old days," which had its own share of problems! Secondly, salvation is the question that every religion attempts to answer and one we have already wrestled with or will eventually.

Acts 16:30 records the jailer asking Paul and Silas the question "What must I do to be saved?" Countless people are still asking the same question every day. Access to this rich store is indeed priceless.

The rich stores of wisdom and knowledge are worthy pursuits as well in order to be successful and live rich, full lives. We press our kids to read and learn voraciously in order to gain knowledge and become wise. Studies suggest those who continue learning later in life are less likely to lose brain function. In fact, there doesn't seem to be any downside to having access to a rich store of wisdom or knowledge, but we could be pounding on the door of these rich stores and still be denied access ... without the key.

The Bible clearly identifies the key to this foundation and these rich stores: the fear of the Lord. This fear is defined as a reverence or awe; a recognition of His place and our place.

Translated into our daily life, this would mean that we have a clear understanding of who God is and what we are. It also means when God speaks, we don't keep doing our own thing, shrug our shoulders and say, "Oh well, God understands me."

It means we listen with fear and trembling. That fear gives us the key, the access to these destinations, and is available to "whosoever will" ... because every heart matters.

The older brother

"Meanwhile, the older son was in the field. When he came near the house, he heard music and dancing. So he called one of the servants and asked him what was going on. Your brother has come,' he replied, 'and your father has killed the fattened calf because he has him back safe and sound.' The older brother was angry and refused to go in."

— (Luke 15:25-28a)

They were celebrating inside, but the elder brother wasn't celebrating. He heard that the father was celebrating the return of his brother, but he did not share the feelings of his father. Think now how this series began. "Now the tax collectors and sinners were all gathering around to hear Jesus. But the Pharisees and the teachers of the law muttered, 'This man welcomes sinners and eats with them.'

The elder brother was angry, and refused to go and celebrate. Why? Because his brother had gone off and squandered everything, and then comes home and is accepted! The brother is jealous! You can hear him saying, "This is not fair! That rotten brother has done too much! He has not obeyed your commands (like I have)! He has not worked every day in the fields (like I have)! He has done everything he could to shame and dishonor you, Father!

jackexumjr@yahoo.com

"You receive him back with open arms, give him the best robe, a ring, shoes, and kill that calf ... which should have been for me!"

On and on the brother complains, and reveals his heart to the father. The father now responds to his other son. The one who had been "faithfully keeping his commandments." The one who had worked so hard ... "My son," the father said, "you are always with me, and everything I have is yours. But we had to celebrate and be glad, because this brother of yours was dead and is alive again; he was lost and is found" (Luke 15:31-32).

Christians are not perfect (by a long shot), they're just forgiven. The life of the Christian is one of grace. Grace is not something which just saves, it is that by which keeps one saved... By grace one grows and becomes. It's about elbow room, it's about being patient with each other as well as loving. One does not need to know everything about the Bible to be saved, he just needs to come to Jesus, repent of sins and be immersed into Christ (Acts 2:38)... New Christians (as well as mature ones) make mistakes (sin). Every child does things that need corrected. Even when your child breaks your heart... you don't disown the child.

The older brother never understood the grace, mercy and love of the father. He was working hard, keeping commandments faithfully... all the while thinking "I earned what I got. I deserve it and everyone has to do the same." Understand this: Legalism, law and works totally undermine the grace of God.

One doesn't come to Christ and be saved by grace and then earn heaven. We are saved by grace through faith... and because we are heaven bound, we live for Jesus.

Muslims celebrate Ramadan end, but strife casts shadow

By KARIN LAUB
and TONY G. GABRIEL
Associated Press

CAIRO — Millions of Muslims paid respects at ancestral graves, shared festive family meals and visited beaches and amusement parks Thursday to mark the end of the fasting month of Ramadan, but violence and political tension overshadowed holiday joy in hotspots like Egypt, Yemen and Afghanistan.

The three-day Eid al-Fitr holiday, which caps Ramadan, also highlighted the long-running divide between Sunni and Shiite Muslims.

Many Sunnis began celebrating Thursday, while Shiites were to mark the holiday today, based on different views about sighting the moon.

In recent months, sectarian tensions have risen between Sunnis and Shiites, with the two sides increasingly lined up on opposite sides of Syria's civil war.

Ramadan and Eid al-Fitr are a time of increased religious devotion, and some Muslims said they're particularly distraught over discord among the faithful during the holiday season.

In Egypt, where rival political camps have been facing off since the military ousted President Mohammed Morsi last month, worshipper Medhat Abdel Moneam said he doesn't like to see Muslims quarreling.

Abdel Moneam was among hundreds of Morsi opponents performing prayers in Cairo's Tahrir Square.

"I am very sad about what is going on in Egypt," he said of the intensifying showdown between Morsi's Muslim Brotherhood and interim rulers backed by the military. "Today is Eid, and the Egyptian people are divided into two sides, two different thoughts, and it's a shame because both sides are Muslims."

Morsi supporters, camped out at two other sites in Cairo, said they will not give up until Morsi is reinstated. "Whoever thought that the revolution would come to an end once Ramadan is over was wrong," said Mohammed el-Beltagy, a top Muslim Brotherhood figure.

Protesters at one of the pro-Morsi sit-ins set up an amusement park for children with trampolines, slides and water games.

For many of the world's hundreds of millions of Muslims, Eid al-Fitr begins with a cemetery visit to pay respects to ancestors. In parts of the Middle East, people typically place palm fronds on graves.

In other holiday customs, children get haircuts, new clothes and toys, while well-off families slaughter animals and distribute the meat to the poor. Relatives visit each other, gather for festive meals, such as lamb and rice sprinkled with pine nuts, or spend the day in parks or on beaches.

In eastern Afghanistan, a bomb planted in a cemetery killed seven women and seven children from an extended family as they visited a relative's grave as part of Eid observances.

There was no claim of responsibility, but a man whose daughter was killed in the blast blamed Taliban insurgents. Afghan President Hamid Karzai condemned the attack and urged the Taliban to lay down their arms.

In northern Iraq, police closed many streets in the mainly Sunni city of Mosul to prevent car bombs during the holiday. Bombings are part of Iraq's ongoing sectarian strife, and violence has picked up in recent months.

Mosul resident Mohammed al-Samak said he planned to take his wife and five children to an amusement park later in the day despite the potential risk.

"We are aware that the security situation in Mosul is bad, but we cannot stay home all the time," he said. "The family and I decided to have a nice Eid, away from fear and sadness."

In Syria, devastated by civil war, rebels fired rockets and mortar shells Thursday at an upscale neighborhood in the capital, Damascus, where President Bashar Assad attended Eid prayers.

At least two rebel brigades claimed to have hit Assad's motorcade on its way to a mosque, but this appeared to be untrue. Two opposition figures said the route was hit but not the convoy itself. State TV broadcast images of Assad praying at the mosque.

Syria's brutal war, in its third year, has killed more than 100,000 people and uprooted millions, with no end in sight.

In tent camps that have sprung up in neighboring countries, Syrian refugees marked the holiday with a mix of hope and despair.

"We wish in this Eid that God liberates Syria and to return safely to our country," said Ibrahim Ismail, a refugee from Damascus, after he performed holiday prayers with others in Jordan's sprawling Zaatari camp.

Yet, he said, "we feel truly said because we are not at home, we are displaced."

In the Palestinian territories, rival leaders Mahmoud Abbas in the West Bank and Ismail Haniyeh in the Gaza Strip used holiday speeches to stake out their opposing views on the negotiations with Israel that resumed last week.

Abbas, the Western-backed Palestinian president, said he hoped that by next year's holiday, "our people will achieve their hope of freedom..."

'It's hot (August), but the worst part is the lightning that comes with the afternoon storms,' Pinkham said.

Kobe Slow (left) and Clyde Uzila, both of Ocala, carry concrete reinforcing wire at the Florida National Guard Armory. 'The heat is something you have to deal with,' Slow said. 'You have to stay hydrated.'

Eugene 'Pops' Mitchell, 64, of Fort White, carries a sheet of plywood while working on a new home Thursday. 'You don't beat the heat, you keep working,' Mitchell said.

Terri Grebs and Anna Parrot sell hot dogs to a customer from their cart in front of their business, Terri's Sweet Tweets. Anna, who just moved here from Illinois, likes the heat. 'It's a little hot, but I like it!' Terri, the owner, said 'I'm selling a lot of ice cream right now.'

Travis Brantley, an employee of Lawn Enforcement, sprays a yard Thursday morning. 'I do around five to six yards a day during this time of the year, and I drink about one and a half gallons of water, while keeping a dry towel with me.'

LAKE CITY AREA RESIDENTS CASH IN: Pictured above and protected by armed guards are the Overstuffed Money Bags containing 10 individual Vault Bags full of money that everyone is trying to get. That's because each Vault Bag is known to contain over 100 U.S. Gov't issued coins some dating back to the early 1900s.

State zip codes determine who gets free Silver coins

Vault Bags loaded with U.S. Gov't issued coins are up for grabs as thousands of U.S. residents stand to miss the deadline to claim the money; now any resident of Florida who finds their zip code listed below gets to claim the bags of money for themselves and keep any valuable coins found inside by covering the Vault Bag fee within the next 2 days

FLORIDA - The phone lines are ringing off the hook.

That's because for the next 2 days Vault Bags containing valuable U.S. Gov't issued coins are actually being handed over to Lake City area residents who find their zip code listed in today's publication.

"Now that the bags of money are up for grabs Florida residents are claiming as many as they can get before they're all gone. That's because after the Vault Bags were loaded with over 100 U.S. Gov't issued coins the bags were sealed for good. But, we do know that some of the coins date clear back to the early 1900s, including: Silver, scarce, highly collectible, and currently circulating U.S. Gov't issued nickels, dimes and quarter dollars, so there's no telling what you'll find until you sort through all the coins," said Timothy J. Shissler, Chief Numismatist for the private World Reserve.

The only thing residents need to do is find their zip code on the Distribution List printed in today's publication. If their zip code is on the list, they need to immediately call the National Claim Hotline before the 2-day order deadline ends.

Everyone who does is being given the 90% pure Silver Walking Liberty coin for free just by covering the fee for each Vault Bag loaded with over 100 U.S. Gov't issued coins for only $99 each as long as they call before the deadline ends.

Since this advertising announcement can't stop dealers and collectors from hoarding any of the valuable coins they can get their hands on, the World Reserve had to set a strict limit of ten Vault Bags per resident.

"Coin values always fluctuate and there are never any guarantees, but those who get in on this now will be the really smart ones. Just think what some of these coins could be worth someday," said Shissler.

Each Vault Bag is loaded in part with highly sought after collector coins dating clear back to the 1900s including a 90% pure Silver Walking Liberty Half Dollar, an Eisenhower Dollar, some of the last ever minted U.S. Dollars, Kennedy Half Dollars, Silver Mercury Dimes, rarely seen Liberty 'V' Nickels, nearly 100 year old Buffalo Nickels and a big scoop of unsearched currently circulating U.S. Gov't issued nickels, dimes and quarter dollars.

"We're bracing for all the calls because there are just hours left for residents to get the Silver Walking Liberty coin free," he said.

So, Lake City area residents lucky enough to find their zip code listed in today's publication need to immediately call the National Claim Hotlines before the 2-day deadline ends to get the Silver Walking Liberty coin free. If lines are busy keep trying, all calls will be answered. ■

LOADED WITH OVER 100 COINS: The phone lines are ringing off the hook. That's because thousands of sealed Vault Bags each loaded with over 100 U.S. Gov't issued coins some dating back to the early 1900s including: Silver, scarce, highly collectible, and currently circulating coins are being handed over to Lake City area residents.

ENLARGED TO SHOW DETAIL. YEAR VARIES
1916-1947

► How to claim the bags of U.S. Gov't issued coins: Read the important information listed below about claiming the Vault Bags. Then call the National Claim Hotline before the 2-day deadline ends at: 1-888-282-6742

► Who gets to claim the bags of money: Thousands of U.S. residents stand to miss the deadline to claim the money. Now Lake City area residents who find the first two digits of their zip code listed in today's publication and beat the 2-day deadline get to claim the bags of money for themselves and keep all the U.S. Gov't issued coins found inside.

► I keep calling and can't get through: That's because each Vault Bag is guaranteed to contain a free Silver Walking Liberty coin and just that one coin alone could be worth $15-$325 in collector value. So thousands of residents are calling to claim as many Vault Bags as they can get before they're all gone. In fact, since the Vault Bag fee is just $99 everyone is claiming as many bags as they can before the deadline ends. So if lines are busy keep trying, all calls will be answered.

► How much are the Vault Bags worth: Coin values always fluctuate and there are never any guarantees, but here's why Florida residents are claiming as many Vault Bags as they can get before they're all gone. After the Vault Bags were loaded with over 100 U.S. Gov't issued coins including: Silver, scarce, highly collectible, and a big scoop of unsearched currently circulating U.S. Gov't issued coins the bags were sealed for good. But we do know that some of the coins date back to the 1900s. That means there's no telling what you'll find until you sort through all the coins. So you better believe at just $99 the Vault Bag fee is a real steal since the free Silver Walking Liberty coin alone could be worth from $15 to $325 in collector value.

► Are the Silver Walking Liberty coins really Free: Yes. All Lake City area residents who beat the 2-day deadline are instantly being awarded a Silver Walking Liberty coin issued by the U.S. Gov't between 1916-1947 free with each Vault Bag they claim.

► Why is the Vault Bag fee so low: Because thousands of U.S. residents have missed the deadline to claim the money the World Reserve has re-allocated Vault Bags that will be scheduled to be sent out in the next 2 days. That means the money is up for grabs and now any resident who finds the first two digits of their zip code on the Distribution List below gets to claim the bags of money for themselves and keep all the U.S. Gov't issued coins found inside. Each Vault Bag fee is set at $149 for residents who miss the 2 day deadline, but for those who beat the 2-day deadline the Vault Bag fee is just $99 as long as they call the National Claim Hotline before the deadline ends at: 1-888-282-6742.

Kasey Kahne outduels Jeff Gordon after final restart to take the trophy at Pocono Raceway

With the start of the Chase for the Sprint Cup just six weeks away, several likely contenders appear to be hitting their strides while others seem stuck in a rut of mediocre finishes.

At Pocono Raceway on Sunday, Jimmie Johnson once again appeared to have the car to beat, but he blew a right-front tire while leading and smacked the wall. But in a show of strength that could be a deciding factor in the 10-race Chase, his team patched up the car and he drove it to a 13th-place finish, which allowed him to increase his points lead over second-place Clint Bowyer from 75 to 77 points.

And while Johnson was overcoming his setback, his Hendrick Motorsports teammates surged to the front, with Kasey Kahne outdueling Jeff Gordon to get the win, while Dale Earnhardt Jr. finished fifth. Brickyard 400 winner Ryan Newman, who runs Hendrick cars and engines, overcame slow pit work by his Stewart-Haas Racing team to finish fourth and move up one spot in the standings to 15th.

Kurt Busch, whose single-car Furniture Row Racing team has been plagued by inconsistency for much of the season, had a strong Pocono run, finishing third and moving up one spot in the standings to 13th, just 11 points out of 10th place, which is the final spot guaranteed a Chase berth after the regular season finale at Richmond International Raceway on Sept. 7.

Carl Edwards and Kevin Harvick held on to their points positions, Edwards third and Harvick fourth, but neither were factors at Pocono.

Edwards finished 11th despite a penalty for speeding on pit road, and Harvick was 17th.

For Kahne, the race was his to lose once Johnson crashed. He wound up leading a race-high 66 laps en route to his second win of the season, but he almost lost the win to Gordon, who passed him on the next-to-last restart.

The race's final caution flag gave Kahne one more chance, and he drove to the outside of Gordon into Turn One and held on for the final two circuits.

"I had some help from Kurt Busch, pushed me down the frontstretch, and I just drove into [Turn] One as far as I felt

I could, and I got some speed and momentum down the back and beat Jeff to Turn Two," Kahne said. "That was kind of the race at that point. Once I cleared him getting into Two, from there it was just don't make a mistake and try to run the quick lap on that last one."

Gordon said he thought he made the right move by driving to the inside on the last restart, but Kahne was too strong on the outside.

"I thought I did everything I needed to do, and I looked in my mirror and I really thought that the inside lane got a good run on Kasey, so I thought all I needed to do was get in here and get the bottom and I'd be good," Gordon said. "But, man, he got a killer run and blasted on the outside of me. Caught me by surprise. In that case, and in that scenario, it just kills your momentum, so I feel fortunate to finish second."

Gordon has five top-10 finishes in the past six races and he's headed to Watkins Glen, where he has four career victories, but he said his Pocono finish is the best sign in a while that his team is Chase material.

"I feel like we've pulled together some decent finishes, but it hasn't been pretty," Gordon said. "[Pocono] was an impressive run for us internally. Just well-executed ... good [pit] stops. Everything just kind of went our way. I felt like we finally actually went out and earned that one."

that saw him race his way into the Chase, win five of the 10 Chase races and the 2011 Cup championship.

"Maybe it sparked something then," Stewart said back in 2011 of his Ohsweken win. He went on to say that while those around him feared for his safety racing sprinters, he feels it was well worth the risks.

"It energized me," he said. "It was like hitting a reset button."

But those worried about Stewart's safety have reason to be concerned. In May, Josh Burton was killed in a crash in Indiana. In June, one of Stewart's fellow NASCAR drivers, Jason Leffler, died in a sprint car crash. And on Sunday, sprint car legend Kramer Williamson died from injuries suffered the night before when he flipped numerous times at Lincoln Speedway in Abbottstown, Pa.

Williamson, who started racing in 1968, had been inducted into the National Sprint Car Hall of Fame in 2008 and the United Racing Co. Hall of Fame in 2010.

Kahne celebrates his win at Pocono Raceway on Sunday.

And he's upbeat about his prospects for this week's race on the road course at Watkins Glen, especially after a second-place finish on the Cup circuit's other road course at Sonoma, Calif.

"I felt like we learned a lot at the end of the second half of the race at Watkins Glen last year," he said. "We kind of did a test more for Watkins Glen than we did for Sonoma prior to Sonoma, so I'm hoping that pays off."

For Kahne, a Chase berth seems much more secure. He's eighth in the standings, 18 points ahead of 11th-place Tony Stewart, but his two victories put him in good position to take a wild card berth should he drop out of the top 10.

He said his dominant Pocono victory "gives myself confidence and gives the whole team confidence. It closes the gap."

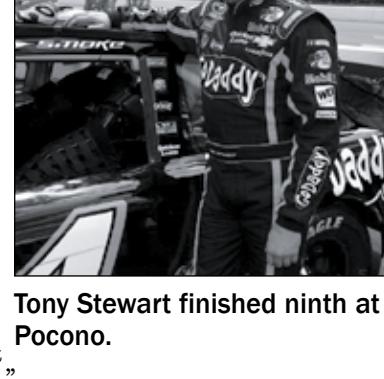

And he said that making the Chase is very important.

"The Chase is what it's all about in NASCAR," he said. "You need to make it for the sponsors, for the teams."

"We've been right there on the edge with the way our summer went. So it was nice to get two wins. It gives us much more hope going in. We'll just start a lot closer."

Kahne's crew chief, Kenny Francis, said the second victory makes his job easier for the next few weeks.

"It gives you a little more flexibility to be able to take more risks in the upcoming races," he said. "You've already got your two wins. There is a good chance you're going to make the Chase either way, so now you can maybe take a little more risk."

Tony Stewart finished ninth at Pocono.

Tony Stewart downplays World of Outlaws sprint car flip at Ohsweken Speedway

Tony Stewart, who spends as much of his spare time as possible racing sprint cars, flipped his sprinter five times last week while racing in a World of Outlaws event at Ohsweken Speedway in Ontario, Canada.

While his flip wasn't especially nasty or all that uncommon for sprint car racers, it did get lots of attention because of Stewart's primary job as a Sprint Cup Series driver and team owner.

At Pocono Raceway on Friday, Stewart explained to the assembled media, some of whom have called on him to curtail his extracurricular racing and concentrate on Cup, that the flip really was no big deal.

"You mortals have got to learn, you guys need to watch more sprint car videos and stuff," he said. "It was not a big deal. It's starting to get annoying this week about that."

"That was just an average sprint car wreck. When they wreck, they get upside down like that. That was not a big deal. I guarantee you there were 15 to 20 guys across the country that flipped just like that this weekend and were just fine just like we were."

Stewart bounced back and finished fifth in the main event.

Ironically, it was at Ohsweken two years ago that Stewart won a World of Outlaws feature that started a win streak that saw him race his way into the Chase, win five of the 10 Chase races and the 2011 Cup championship.

"Maybe it sparked something then," Stewart said back in 2011 of his Ohsweken win. He went on to say that while those around him feared for his safety racing sprinters, he feels it was well worth the risks.

"It energized me," he said. "It was like hitting a reset button."

But those worried about Stewart's safety have reason to be concerned. In May, Josh Burton was killed in a crash in Indiana. In June, one of Stewart's fellow NASCAR drivers, Jason Leffler, died in a sprint car crash. And on Sunday, sprint car legend Kramer Williamson died from injuries suffered the night before when he flipped numerous times at Lincoln Speedway in Abbottstown, Pa.

Williamson, who started racing in 1968, had been inducted into the National Sprint Car Hall of Fame in 2008 and the United Racing Co. Hall of Fame in 2010.

Keselowski overcomes engine problems and penalties to win Nationwide Series race at Iowa Even before the green flag fell to start Sunday's Sprint Cup race at Pocono Raceway, defending Cup champion Brad Keselowski had a great weekend.

He traveled to Iowa Speedway to run the No. 22 Ford for Penske Racing in Saturday's Nationwide Series race at Iowa Speedway and overcame a pit penalty and an overheating engine to score his third straight victory behind the wheel of that car, the other two coming at Richmond and Kentucky earlier this year.

And while he was en route from Pocono to Iowa, he got a win at Pocono as a team owner, as Ryan Blaney drove Keselowski's No. 29 Ford to victory in the Camping World Truck Series race Saturday at Pocono.

Keselowski, who finished sixth in the Cup race at Pocono and moved to 12th in the standings, just seven points out of the top 10, said overcoming setbacks at Iowa was satisfying and a momentum-builder.

"As a driver, those are probably some of the most difficult moments, knowing you have a fast race car and circumstances are playing against you," Keselowski told reporters at Iowa. "There are two ways you can react to that. You can let the moment define you, or you can define the moment."

For the 19-year-old Blaney, his second career Truck Series victory saw him prevail on a green-white-checkered-flag restart after losing out on an earlier try.

On the second attempt at a green-white-checkered-flag finish, Blaney started on the outside, but surged past rookie German Quiroga Jr. to take a lead he would not relinquish. Miguel Paludo finished second, with Quiroga third.

On the previous restart, Quiroga, with a push from Paludo, took the lead from Blaney, but a caution set up another restart.

"It's hard to keep the lead on a restart if you're the leader," Blaney told reporters at Pocono. "But we were fortunate enough to be on the front row on that last restart and capitalized on it."

Veteran Todd Bodine, driving in a one-race effort for Turner Motorsports, was poised to take a storybook win when he held the lead on a restart with four of the scheduled 50 laps to go.

But like other leaders after him, he wound up getting shuffled back on the restart and spun. He came back to finish 11th.

With his eighth-place finish, Matt Crafton extended his Truck Series points lead to 52 over 12th-finishing Jeb Burton.

Blaney's win boosted him five spots in the standings to third, 62 behind Crafton.

"I am confident that this is going to give our team the momentum needed to make a run at this year's championship, with plenty of more wins in between," Blaney said.

'Wind Tunnel' ends 11-year run with demise of SPEED

One of the most popular racing shows on TV signs off for the final time on Sunday.

"Wind Tunnel," hosted by veteran broadcaster Dave Despain, will end its 11-year run on the SPEED channel, which is changing over to Fox Sports 1 and an emphasis on all sports instead of focusing on motorsports.

"Wind Tunnel" has been the most relevant and popular show on auto racing for 11 years, and Dave [Despain] has been the conscience," Robin Miller, a veteran motor sports journalist and regular contributor to the show, said in a release from SPEED. "If you mattered, you were on 'Wind Tunnel.' It embraced all forms of motorsports and leaves a void that won't be filled."

FOX-TV picks up TV rights to more Cup, Nationwide races

The FOX television network and NASCAR made it official last week, announcing that Fox would pick up broadcast rights to three more Cup races and the first 14 Nationwide Series races of the season, beginning in 2015. NBC has obtained the broadcast rights to the remaining Cup and Nationwide races, and Fox has secured the entire Camping World Truck Series schedule. Both new arrangements begin in 2015 and continue through the 2024 season.

DEAR ABBYFlowers meant to ease grief cause only heartache instead*Abigail Van Buren

www.dearabby.com

DEAR ABBY: My father-in-law died two weeks ago. The services were beautiful. Many people sent flowers, but one arrangement – a bouquet of white flowers – arrived anonymously. I didn't think much about it, just that someone wanted to express sympathy. Now my mother-in-law has become frantic with concern about the flowers. She sobs over not knowing who sent them and – we think – suspects they came from an old or not-so-old flame.

My in-laws were married for more than 50 years, and it is heartbreaking to see her compound her grief with these thoughts. We have suggested various reasons that someone might have sent the flowers anonymously, but she refuses to accept them.

Is sending flowers this way unusual? Or are there good reasons to do it? For the record, is it even good manners to send flowers to a funeral anonymously? Or is my mother-in-law's reaction normal? – GRIEVING IN GEORGETOWN, TEXAS

DEAR GRIEVING: Your mother-in-law is grieving. She is fragile right now, and possibly not thinking straight. A card may have been sent with the bouquet that was somehow lost in transit.

That she was married to her husband for 50 years and now suspects he was unfaithful because of a bouquet of flowers at the man's funeral is a sad reflection on their marriage. She should discuss this with her spiritual adviser, if she has one, or a grief therapist.

** * * *
DEAR ABBY: I am in my early 30s and have been married for five years. My husband and I decided to have a baby, and five months ago I found out I was pregnant. When I told my mom the great news, she wasn't happy to hear it. She doesn't care. All she cares about is how "fat" I'm going to get.

My mother never wants to talk about anything baby-related. If I complain about an ache or pain, she quickly says, "It's because you're fat!" The last time I went to the OB/GYN for a checkup, Mom didn't even ask if everything was OK. All she said was, "How much weight have you gained?"

It hurts me so much that she treats me and her future grandchild this way. I almost feel like having this baby was a mistake. Please help me. I don't know what to do anymore. – ALMOST IN TEARS IN OHIO

DEAR ALMOST IN TEARS: Stop depending so much on your mother's approval and you'll have a happier pregnancy. The person you should talk to about your weight is your OB/GYN. If your weight is such that it might affect your health or your baby's, you need to know it ASAP. Your doctor can refer you to a nutritionist if you need guidance about your diet.

Your relationship with your mother doesn't appear to be particularly positive. As you grow closer to motherhood, talk more with your girlfriends, talk more to your husband and less to your mother.

DEAR ABBY: I don't go to nightclubs often, so I'm curious as to what the protocol is for this.

Sometimes, in the ladies' room, there is a woman there with toiletries, gum, cosmetics, etc. Before you can get your own, she puts soap in your hand and gives you a paper towel. There is a bowl on the counter for people to leave tips. The club manager says she isn't an employee of the club, but simply looking to make tips. I understand this.

My question: Am I supposed to tip her just once for the evening, or each time I use the ladies' room? – INQUISITIVE CLUBBER IN FLORIDA

DEAR CLUBBER: Tip the attendant each time you use the bathroom and she hands you the soap and towel – the standard rate is 50 cents to a dollar. However, if you tip the person generously the first time, you shouldn't feel obligated to do it again if you need to return.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 16 and have a 13-year-old sister. Our parents are divorced, and we live with our mother. We used to see our dad on visitations every other weekend, but he moved away, so now we see him for two weeks in the summer and one week during Christmas. We talk to him a lot and have a good relationship. We're scheduled to visit him soon.

Dad lives in a one-bedroom apartment and when we're there, he lets us stay in the bedroom and he sleeps on the couch. He has just told us he is "coming out of the closet" and has a partner who is living with him. They plan on getting married now that it's legal. When I asked him what the sleeping arrangements will be, he said he hasn't figured it out yet, but will work it out.

We're really not surprised to find out that Dad is gay, and we can accept that. But we're really uncomfortable about spending two weeks in a one-bedroom apartment along with his partner when we don't even know what the sleeping arrangements will be. We'd like to find a way to get out of the visit, but we don't want to hurt our dad, and because of the visitation agreement, he has the right to have us for two weeks every summer. What can we do? – UNCOMFORTABLE IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR UNCOMFORTABLE: Of this I am sure, your father and his partner will welcome you with open arms and do everything in their power to show you a good time. You and your sister should go and try to be gracious guests. I agree, the space may be cramped, but it's only for two weeks. After they marry, they may move to larger quarters.

If you don't enjoy the visit, keep in mind that in two years you will be 18 and no longer "obligated" to spend three weeks with your dad. But if you give this a chance, you may be very pleasantly surprised, so think positive. **

DEAR ABBY: My father-in-law is considering having my two precious little girls' names tattooed on his arm. I'm not a fan of tattoos and would prefer my daughters' names not be displayed in this manner.

Do my husband and I have a right to ask him not to do this? Our history with him hasn't been the most pleasant because he can be manipulative and hard to deal with. I'm afraid if we tell him we are opposed, it will encourage him all the more to get the tattoo. How should we approach this without causing a ruckus? – AGAINST IT IN OKLAHOMA

DEAR AGAINST IT: You can offer your opinion, but there is no way you and your husband can control what he does with his body. Because the subject has already come up for discussion, it would not be rude to raise it again and explain NICELY that if he hasn't done it yet, you would prefer the girls' names not be displayed that way.

Of course, the decision is his to make, and while it may not be to your liking, I'm sure your father-in-law considers it to be a loving gesture and a sign (literally) that he's proud of his granddaughters. If the tattoo has already been applied, then please, for the sake of family harmony, try to view it from that perspective.
