Trucking magnate slain

Three others shot before gunman takes his own life.

LAKE BUTLER—The owner of a trucking company here was shot to death Saturday morning by an ex-employee who also shot three former co-workers before turning the gun on himself, according to the Union County Sheriff's Office.

At about 9 a.m., Hubert Allen Jr., 72, shot his onetime boss and founder of Pritchett Trucking, Inc., Marvin Pritchett, in a rampage that left three dead, including Allen, and two wounded at four different crime scenes, according to a Union County Sheriff's Office press release. The motive is still unknown.

However, Allen could have been upset about a forced retirement or a planned retirement that led to depression, according to a top law enforcement official with knowledge of the case.

"With the shooter being dead, it's basically figuring out what happened," said Jeff Siegmeister, a former Lake Butler resident who now lives in Lake City. "There's no easy way to explain this... I don't know the why. I just know he left employment about a week ago, but then he came back and shot Marvin and three employees. I'm speculating, but that tells me this is some sort of direct anger toward the company."

Siegmeister said Allen may have retired willingly, and then become depressed. Siegmeister works as the Third Circuit State Attorney but has no official involvement with the case. Union County is in the Eighth Circuit.

"Today's tragic events have shocked and saddened the Pritchett Trucking family," Steve Perez, CFO of Pritchett Trucking, said. "We mourn the loss of our founder, Marvin Pritchett, and of Rolando Gonzalez-Delgado, and we pray for the recoveries of Lewis 'Buddy' Mabrey Jr. and David Griffis. Our thoughts and prayers are with all of their families, and at this time our sole focus is on those impacted by today's events."

Allen first drove to a farm owned by Pritchett off County Road 18A, where he confronted and killed his former co-worker, 28-year-old Rolando Gonzalez-Delgado. Shortly after, Allen shot and killed his longtime boss Pritchett, 80, on Pritchett's property — Rolling Oaks Farm. According to the press release, a few minutes later Allen encountered another former co-worker, Lewis Mabrey Jr., driving a farm tractor on County Road 18A. Allegedly, Allen exchanged words with Mabrey, 66, and then fired a small-bore shotgun at his co-worker. He struck Mabrey in the left arm and side.

Union County Emergency Medical Services rushed Mabrey to UF Health Shands Hospital, where he was to undergo surgery for a broken arm and other injuries, the release states. He is currently listed in stable condition.

At the Pritchett Trucking, Inc. headquarters, 1050 SE 6th Street, Lake Butler, Allen then shot 44-

3 masked men rob woman, seek pain pills.

By AMANDA WILLIAMSON

Three masked men robbed a woman at gunpoint Friday night in her Amberwood Hills apartment, demanding money and the pills she uses as pain relief from cervical cancer, she said.

Sandra Patterson, 44, was sitting outside her apartment at approximately 9:40 p.m., but as she stood up to go back inside, three men rushed her, she said. The men, two white and one black, pushed her inside her apartment and locked the door, according to Patterson. She was home with her daughter and infant niece.

The two white males wore bandanas over their faces, while the black man wore a Halloween mask. All three wore black hoodies over their tall, skinny frames. One of the white men did all the talking, Patterson said.

"He wanted my money," she said, estimating that she handed over approximately $400. "After I gave it to him, he kept saying he wanted my merchandise, and if he didn't get it he was going to blow my brains out. ... I had no idea what he was talking about."

Patterson told the man she didn't know what he meant, until he finally told her he knew she had pills. Patterson said she is being treated for cancer but didn't have any

Hyper-Sub enters next phase

Investors sought to bring hybrid craft to market.

Investment challenges are on the horizon for Marion Hyper-Submersibles Powerboat Design LLC on the voyage to keep its speedboat-submarine hybrid afloat in a turbulent economy.

Founder and CEO Reynolds Marion spearheaded the design and construction of the world's first "Hyper-Sub," a recreation-size speedboat with submersible capabilities.

"The Hyper-Sub is the first submarine that operates with the same economy and ease of use as a 40-foot boat," Marion said. "In that respect, I like to compare it to Sikorsky's VS-300 helicopter," the world's first practical amphibious helicopter developed in 1939.

Police focus on school zone violators

Effort under way to remind drivers that school's open.

By TONY BRITT
tbritt@lakecityreporter.com

The Lake City Police Department has launched a campaign to increase motorists' awareness in school zones now that the school year has started.

Classes for Columbia School District public schools started Monday and the beginning of classes required a pattern shift for motorists driving around or through school zones.

Authorities believe many motorists may have gotten used to driving during the summer when the school zones were not active, which could create a safety concern now that school is in session.

To facilitate a smooth and safe transition, the Lake City Police Department will be in full force during the first few weeks of school, focusing specifically on traffic and safety issues within the school zones and surrounding areas.

"For the first few days, our focus is to remind everyone that school is back and that school zones are back in effect," Police Chief Argatha Gilmore said in a prepared statement. "After a short educational component, we will begin a zero-tolerance enforcement wave to further edu-

Governor calls for review of school standards

TALLAHASSEE — Saying that Florida's A-to-F school grading system had reached a critical point, Gov. Rick Scott has asked top education leaders to convene next week to discuss what should be done next.

Scott's decision comes just weeks after Education Commissioner Tony Bennett abruptly resigned and follows weeks of debate over education standards and the state's grading system.

The Republican governor wants a group of more than 30 people including legislators, school superintendents, school board officials, teachers and critics of new education standards to examine everything from high-stakes testing to the grading system itself.

Scott also wants the group to discuss new Common Core standards that kick in this year as well as teacher evaluations.

"Florida's education accountability system has become a national model, but we are at a critical point in our history," said Scott in a statement.

He has asked interim Education Commissioner Pam Stewart to convene the summit over a period of three days next week in Clearwater.

The governor's action comes after the Aug. 1 resignation of Bennett. He resigned following allegations that he changed the grade of a charter school run by a major Republican donor during his previous job in Indiana.

But even before Bennett's resignation there a rising controversy associated with the grading system that was put in place under former Gov. Jeb Bush.

Banks report 120,000 helped

TALLAHASSEE — A national report issued Thursday maintains that more than 120,000 Floridians have received billions in aid so far from five major banks.

That same report — required as part of a landmark $25 billion settlement that grew out of an investigation of reported foreclosure abuses — shows that much of the $9.2 billion in assistance came from lenders forgiving loans or liens in order to facilitate the sale of homes.

The data collected by a national monitor is all self-reported by the banks and has not yet been confirmed.

But if it holds, state Attorney General Pam Bondi said it means that Florida got a larger share than was anticipated under the settlement that was announced in 2012.

"The banks are reporting that they have exceeded our expectations for relief provided to Floridians by $800 million," Bondi said in a statement. "We will remain diligent in our efforts to ensure compliance with the settlement and to verify that the banks have fulfilled their obligations."

Florida — which has been hit hard by the foreclosure crisis and the collapse of the housing market — negotiated one of the largest shares in the settlement agreement with Ally Financial, Bank of America, Citigroup, JPMorgan Chase and Wells Fargo.

The help provided by the banks on loans and mortgages is on top of more than $100 million in direct payments that went to Florida homeowners and more than $300 million that was paid to the state.

Florida is using that money on everything from domestic violence shelters to affordable housing programs and Habitat for Humanity.

Joseph Smith, the monitor of the national settlement, said that so far nearly 644,000 borrowers nationwide have benefited from some type of consumer relief totaling $51.3 billion, or $79,742 per borrower. The average payment in Florida is $77,000.

Allied Veterans leader pleads

SANFORD — The leader of a veterans' charity that prosecutors say was a $300 million gambling operation entered a no-contest plea to running an illegally lottery on Friday, a decision that will allow him to skip prison time but likely will make him a star witness at the trials of dozens of defendants still facing criminal charges.

Jerry Bass, the national commander of Allied

Veterans of the World, entered a no-contest plea to two counts of operating an illegal lottery. Bass may testify as a witness for the prosecution and defense during the trial of other defendants, which is set to start next month, said his attorney, Charles Hobbs.

Bass had faced more than 200 charges including running an illegal lottery, money laundering and possessing slot machines.

"This allows him the opportunity to move forward with his life," Hobbs said. "It's important for him to move forward and not have to deal with the specter of an eight-week trial."

Another defendant, John Hessong, was given the opportunity to enter a pre-trial diversion program.

Bass and Hessong were the latest of the 57 Allied Veterans defendants to reach some kind of agreement with prosecutors.

Allied Veterans' former commander, Johnny Duncan, last week pleaded no contest to one count of money laundering and four counts of maintaining an illegal lottery. He will be sentenced to probation at a later date.

Allied Veterans ran nearly 50 Internet parlors in Florida, including ones in Lake City and Live Oak. The parlors were equipped with computerized slot machine-style games and gave about $6 million to veterans out of nearly $300 million in profits.

Linda Ronstadt has Parkinson's disease

LOS ANGELES

Linda Ronstadt says she suffers from Parkinson's disease, which has robbed her ability to sing.

The 67-year-old music legend tells AARP Magazine in an article posted online Friday that she was diagnosed eight months ago and "can't sing a note."

Ronstadt says she began to show symptoms as long as eight years ago, but attributed her inability to sing then to a tick disease. When her hands began to tremble, Ronstadt said she thought the shaking was the result of a shoulder operation.

She said she was "completely shocked" when she finally saw a neurologist and was diagnosed with Parkinson's disease. "I wouldn't have suspected that in a million, billion years."

"No one can sing with Parkinson's disease," Ronstadt told AARP music writer Alanna Nash. "No matter how hard you try."

Ronstadt sold tens of millions of records starting in the 1970s with pop hits like "You're No Good" and "When Will I Be Loved." But she also segued into country, pop standards and mariachi music, among other genres.

In addition, the singer was known for her romances with California Gov. Jerry Brown and filmmaker George Lucas.

Ronstadt now uses poles to walk on uneven ground and a wheelchair when traveling, the AARP story said.

Her autobiography will be released next month, but makes no mention of Parkinson's or the loss of her voice, according to AARP.

The singer's New York-based managers did not immediately respond to requests from The Associated Press for comment.

In a statement released Thursday, the department says it has chosen to give the officer "informal counseling" after investigating the escort involving the athlete. The statement says no further action will be taken. It does not identify the officer.

James posted a video on social media sites before Friday's concert saying he was following a police escort on the wrong side of the street. The video showed the police vehicles with their lights flashing.

The department said Monday that officers violated policy by providing the police escort. It wasn't scheduled in advance and all safety precautions appeared to have been taken.

Sides agree to drop Paula Deen suit

SAVANNAH, Ga. — Lawyers signed a deal Friday to drop a discrimination and sexual harassment lawsuit against celebrity cook Paula Deen, who was dumped by the Food Network and other business partners after she sued under oath that she had used racial slurs in the past.

A document filed in U.S. District Court in Savannah said both sides agreed to drop the lawsuit "without any award of costs or fees to any party." No other details of the agreement were released. The judge in the case had not signed an order to finalize the dismissal.

Former employee Lisa Jackson last year sued Deen and her brother, Bubba Hiers, saying she suffered from sexual harassment and racially offensive talk and employment practices that were unfair to black workers during her five years as a manager of Uncle Bubba's Seafood and Oyster House. Deen is co-owner of the restaurant, which is primarily run by her brother.

The dismissal deal came less than two weeks after Judge William T. Moore threw out the race discrimination claims, ruling Jackson, who is white, had no standing to sue over what she said was poor treatment of black workers.

Officer bitten while saving kids

Report: Mother choked children while in street.

By STEVEN RICHMOND
srichmond@lakecityreporter.com

Lake City police temporarily shut down part of Lake Jeffery Road Thursday night in response to a woman acting erratically with her three children, according to a Lake City Police Department news release.

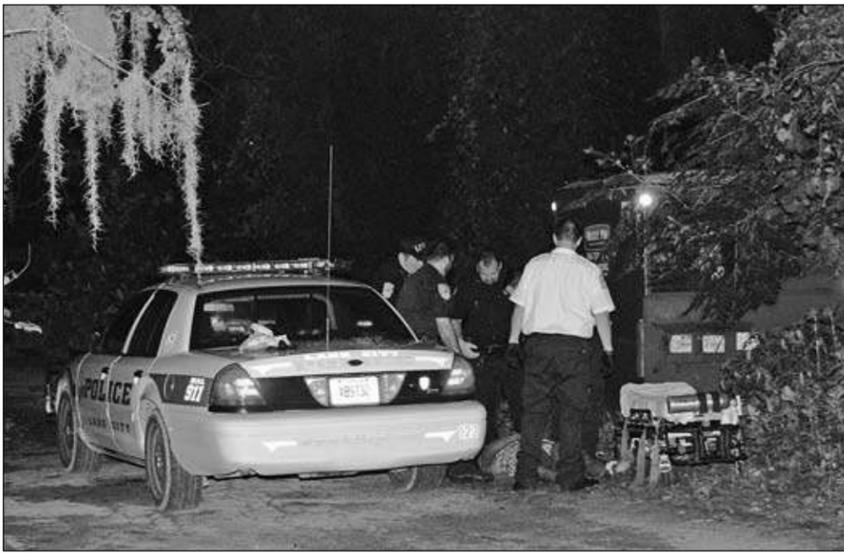

Police said they found Kalandra Perry standing in the roadway near DOT Glen with her three children ages 5, 4 and 1, shortly before 8 p.m. Thursday. Two of the children were held by their necks under each of Perry's arms while the third was pinned between her legs, the release said.

As officers approached Perry, they heard her yelling comments that "made no sense," along with threats to kill her children, according to the release.

Officer Michael Del Castillo and additional officers physically engaged Perry in order to free the children from her clutches, the release said.

At least six officers, a sheriff's deputy and two ambulances arrived at the scene to stabilize the situation.

During the altercation, Perry lunged forward and bit Del Castillo on his side under his arm, ripping his uniform in the process. Other officers used a Taser to subdue her, police said.

Officers said they had to use the Taser a second time along with pepper spray in order to restrain Perry.

Lifeguard Emergency Medical Services personnel reported that the children were unharmed, aside from minor scrapes.

The state Department of Children and Families placed the children in the custody of their grandparents pending further investigation.

"This is a very sad and traumatic experience for all involved," LCPD Chief Argatha Gilmore said.

"Thankfully, our officers arrived on the scene quickly and did not hesitate to jump into a dangerous situation to protect the lives of those defenseless children."

Perry was transported to Shands at the University of Florida in Gainesville for a psychiatric evaluation, the release said.

The release said she was charged with battery by strangulation, child endangerment, aggravated battery on a law enforcement officer and battery on a law enforcement officer. The case was referred to the state attorney's office.

De Castillo was treated for his bite injury at Shands at Lake Shore Medical Center, the release said.

City police arrest man from Jasper on drug charges

By STEVEN RICHMOND
srichmond@lakecityreporter.com

A Jasper man was arrested in Lake City after being caught with methamphetamine and a small portable manufacturing kit, Lake City police report.

Porter Jaymes Anderson, of 3667 NW 108 Ave. in Jasper, was arrested on charges of drug possession, illegal manufacture of controlled substances and resisting officers following a small scuffle Tuesday morning, LCPD reports.

About 11:20 a.m. Tuesday, police responded to a call about a 1998 Chevrolet Camaro, which had been left behind an abandoned building at 197 NW Gwen Lake, the report said.

Officers said they saw a book bag containing a Powerade bottle with a clear liquid, a glass measuring cup, a funnel, a plastic hose and a large can of Coleman camping fuel.

According to Officer Connie Hightower, the materials fit the description of a "one pot" methamphetamine lab.

Anderson

Several individuals who came by the scene told police they were picking the car up from next door. Officers then visited the home where the individuals claim they had seen the car parked in the past, the report said.

Officers made contact with two women and Anderson at the home, the report said. As Anderson was escorted outside, he attempted to flee on foot, officers said.

After he was tackled to the ground and restrained with handcuffs, officers searched him and found approximately 9 grams of methamphetamine wrapped in a coffee filter inside a clear plastic sandwich bag, according to the report.

Anderson was taken to the Columbia County Detention Facility, where he was detained in lieu of $21,000 bond.

He faces charges of drug possession, drug manufacture and resisting an officer.

year-old David Griffis in the stomach, authorities said. Griffis remains in critical condition as of press time.

Allen then shot himself to death in his truck parked at his home off 6th Avenue, less than a half-mile from the corporate headquarters. The Union County Sheriff's Office believes Allen acted alone, but investigations are ongoing. The department is interviewing Pritchett Trucking employees and witnesses for a possible motive behind the shootings.

"It's very shocking," said former Third Circuit Public Defender Dennis Roberts. "Very shocking to the entire area. Anybody who knew him is really feeling down right now... [Marvin Pritchett] came from modest background and built his holdings to a tremendous level."

Roberts grew up in Lake Butler, and his father was friends with Pritchett. According to Roberts, Pritchett donated money to Florida Gateway College and to many Union County public schools. Pritchett was an asset to the entire region, Roberts said.

"This is a big deal for Lake Butler," Siegmeister said. "Marvin Pritchett will be missed. I feel for his family and the community at large."

Siegmeister knew Pritchett most of his life, after growing up in Lake Butler and attending school with one of Pritchett's sons. As of press time, he had not yet spoken with the family, but described Pritchett as a kind, successful man who donated a lot of money to the Union County High School football program.

Former Third Circuit State Judge Vernon Douglas was friends with Pritchett for 40 years. Every year, Pritchett invited Douglas to his home for dinner and a state of the union on the world. According to the former judge, the two would talk about the way of the world — in the justice system, in the Boy Scouts and whatever interested them.

"It's a sad day for everyone that knew him," Douglas said. "He was really a giving part of the community... That's just the kind of person he was."

In addition to donating to the local football teams, Pritchett — a self-made man — bused children from the Lake Butler schools to nearby Lake City to see the air show. Pritchett was also a sponsor.

"Anyone who did business with him respected him as a fair and honest businessman," Douglas said.

Pritchett began working in the trucking business in 1970 when he purchased a local timber producer and acquired three trucks, according to the Pritchett Trucking website. He founded Pritchett Trucking ten years later.

By the mid-1970s, the company was the largest timber business in the southeast with more than 100 truckloads of wood delivered per week. But by the end of the 70s, the timber business started to decline as producers were placed on quotas. Pritchett focused on his trucking business, and shortly after started hauling for a local chip and saw mill.

Now the company employs over 400 people with over 600 trailers. Pritchett also owned Nextran Corp., which operates truck dealerships in Georgia, Alabama and Florida, including one in Lake City.

Multiple news agencies reported that Allen was the step-grandfather of running back C.J. Spiller of the Buffalo Bills.

cate those who disobey the school zone signs."

During the first week of school the Lake City Police Department has had marked patrol cars, using their emergency lights, to warn motorists that they were approaching an active school zone. The patrol cruisers were at the sites at the beginning of the school day as well as at school dismissal time.

Motorists are being reminded that while many of the more heavily used school zones utilize flashing lights as a reminder, some of the side streets around the schools are not equipped with flashing lights (which are not required by law).

Signs in those areas indicate the location of school zones and drivers need to slow down during school hours.

In Columbia County, normal speeding fines range from $129 to $354, depending on the speed. Fines for motorists cited in active school zones are doubled.

ANOTHER VIEW

Despite calm, it's still hurricane season

For anyone thinking the forecasts for an active Atlantic hurricane season have turned out to be a joke, the nation's chief emergency manager issued a pointed warning.

"Have we started playing college football yet?" asked Craig Fugate, who heads the Federal Emergency Management Agency and previously ran Florida's equivalent agency.

Fugate's point, a serious one, is this: We're just entering the peak period of the Atlantic hurricane season — which coincides with the kickoff of college football — so no one should be fooled into thinking it will continue to remain calm until the season officially ends Nov. 30.

The historical peak of the Atlantic season is around Sept. 10.

So far this season, which began June 1, there have been five named storms, including Tropical Storm Andrea, which lashed the Tampa Bay area in June before making landfall in Florida's Big Bend.

The National Hurricane Center's Web page map on Thursday afternoon was mostly clear. A small disturbance in the northeast Gulf was being monitored by center specialists, who gave it a 10 percent chance of developing into a tropical cyclone as it headed west. But that wasn't the case on Aug. 24, 1992 — 21 years ago yesterday.

Hurricane Andrew devastated parts of South Florida...and Louisiana.

Andrew was a Category 5 monster with 160-plus-mph winds and a 17-foot storm surge. The storm's effects killed 23 people in Florida and Louisiana and caused more than $25 billion in damage. In Florida, the storm also forced a change in building codes and wrecked the homeowners insurance market.

And remember, Hurricane Sandy, which eventually became known as Superstorm Sandy, didn't strike the northeast Atlantic Coast until late October last year. The recovery effort is ongoing in some areas.

In 2012 alone, seven named storms developed in September and October — including Sandy and one other hurricane. So we should not let down our guard.

In fact, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration is still calling for a high chance of an above-normal season. In its Aug. 8 update, its numbers stack up like this: There's a 70 percent chance of 13 to 19 overall named storms and six to nine hurricanes, three or five of which could be major.

With many areas of Florida already saturated from heavy summer rains, tropical systems could cause even more damage than normal. This is yet another reason why Floridians need to be mindful of the season.

As Bryan Koon, director of the Florida Division of Emergency Management, points out, forecasts and evacuations are not "exact science" — but that the emphasis is on saving lives.

Floridians could very well save their own by making it a habit of checking the weather for hurricane season updates, having a disaster kit and evacuation plan, and listening to the directives of their local emergency managers should a tropical storm or hurricane threaten.

Nov. 30 is still a good ways off.

I 'hear' she's turning 12

I hear better than I used to. Before, I just listened. That's the progress I've made as a parent as another birthday rolls around. At least that's what I tell myself.

Not my birthday. My daughter's. Another year's progression rolls around as we continue our climb into double-digits and this year, I'm reflecting on how much I've adapted to her growing up. She will read this and roll her eyes and tell me, most certainly, that I get a zero, or something equivalent. She'll say it with a smirk.

Lauren turns 12 this week.

The difference in "hearing" and "listening" is that hearing is relating to what your ears are picking up. I capture the sound, I comprehend, I understand to a depth that completely relates to what, in my case, a pre-teen is saying and doing.

I'm down with it. I'm cool. I'm hip. I'm da-bomb-dot-com.

At least that's what I tell myself.

When she's making a point, I "hear" what she's saying. I totally

Todd Wilson
twilson@lakecityreporter.com

get her point when she presents her argument about fashion and make-up tips and homework and Justin Bieber.

I hear it. I truly do. I feel the magnitude of the point. Then I respond accordingly that shorts must be longer, that shirt needs sleeves, there will be no make-up for now and homework is a priority. I'm not going there with Justin Bieber and don't roll your eyes at me.

I'm proud of my evolving "hearing" ability. But I still get to be the Dad.

I hear the majesty of being 12, too. I hear the excitement of moving up to a new school this year. I hear the goals and dreams of singing on stage at church, then the Suwannee Jam, then moving to Nashville to cut a record.

I hear the enthusiasm of wanting to be a world-class athlete in several different sports, a medical doctor, a teacher and a scientist, all the while we're planning cross-country trips and making lists of forts of historical importance that need a visit. I love the attitude that most things are probable. It is great being 12.

I hear myself asking where the time went and discussing with myself the things all fathers remember about their baby girls. Twelve is a tough one for an old man. Two-thirds of her home life is in the books and that means I only have six more years left to control her life. I said that out loud during lunch last week and one friend chuckled and stated the obvious: "You only think you're in control now!"

At least that's what I tell myself.

Welcome to the Obama regime

Slowly at first, then all of a sudden, the Obama administration has devolved into the Obama regime. Those pesky impediments on his predecessors — namely, the separation of powers, federal law and the Constitution — have proved as tough as tissue paper in containing President Barack Obama's ambition to impose statism on America. From "Obamacare" to unions to telephones, it's basically another day, another decree.

"I have to figure out what I can do outside of Congress through executive actions," Obama told the Congressional Black Caucus, Politico.com reports. In Jacksonville last month, Obama announced: "Where I can act on my own, I'm going to act on my own. I won't wait for Congress."

Obamacare's internal contradictions threaten to tear it apart, like a crippled satellite re-entering Earth's atmosphere. Even committed collectivists like Teamsters boss Jimmy Hoffa Jr. and former Democratic National Chairman Howard Dean are fleeing.

But Obama still tries to keep Obamacare in orbit — by fiat. Obama gave employers another year to offer health insurance to their payrolls of 50 or more employees.

But nothing in Obamacare — technically, the Affordable Care Act — empowers Obama to waive this mandate. Section 1513(d) clearly declares: "The amendments made by this section shall apply to months beginning after Dec. 31, 2013."

When Congressional Democrats screamed that Obamacare's costs might prompt staff resignations, Obama decided to extend the program's subsidies to members and their employees. Thus, Obama will bail out legislators who make $174,000 annually and aides whose 2012 earnings averaged $81,419 in the House alone, Legistorm.com estimates.

deroy.murdock@gmail.com

While taxpayers may weep for America's brave Hill staffers and their selfless bosses, Obama and the Office of Personnel Management rescued them illegally. As the Wall Street Journal noted, "OPM has no authority to pay for insurance plans that lack (Federal Employee Health Benefit Plan) contracts."

Consequently, any Democrat or Republican who accepts this lawless perk will be guilty of receiving stolen goods.

Obama made three recess appointments to the five-member National Labor Relations Board Jan. 4, 2012, even though the Senate was not in recess; it technically held pro forma sessions during a break. Hence, the D.C. Circuit Court concluded last Jan. 25 that those nominations were "constitutionally invalid." Without those members, the NLRB lacked a quorum. That rendered bogus its decisions during the previous year. Regardless, the NLRB issued 112 rulings after the D.C. Circuit delegitimized those three members. Last May 16 and July 17, respectively, the Third and Fourth Circuit Courts of Appeal backed the D.C. Circuit's opinion. The Senate on July 30 confirmed fresh NLRB appointees, who now compose a proper quorum. They are sifting through 18 months of board decisions that the Fourth Circuit vacated as illegal.

By June 15, 2012, Congress had failed to adopt the so-called Dream Act. So what? Without legislative approval, Obama that day brazenly abandoned his duty to enforce existing law and instead shielded from deportation illegal aliens up to age 30 whose parents brought them here before age 16.

Just last week, Obama unveiled a brand-new $6 billion cellphone tax, to fund high-speed Internet links for government schools. Rather than support legislation for this tax, Obama expects his appointees to the Federal Communications Commission to impose it by edict. As White House deputy press secretary Josh Earnest said, "Unfortunately, we haven't seen a lot of action in Congress, so the president has advocated an administrative, unilateral action to get this done."

There is a way to get things done in Washington, and this is not it. Former Supreme Court Justice John Paul Stevens, a reliably liberal jurist, put it well: "There is no provision in the Constitution that authorizes the president to enact, to amend or to repeal statutes."

Lake City firefighter Trevor Caslin solicits donations on Main Boulevard during last year's 'Fill the Boot' drive to raise funds for the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Local 'Fill the Boot' drive to begin

By STEVEN RICHMOND

srichmond@lakecityreporter.com

It'll soon be that time of the year again when Lake City firefighters take to the streets to fill their boots with donations to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Between Monday and Sept. 2, members of the Lake City Fire Department will be collecting donations in front of Wal-Mart and the intersections of U.S. 90 and Branford Highway, U.S. 90 and Bascon Norris Drive and Madison Street and Main Boulevard.

"It's a great time for the community to connect with firefighters and vice versa," MDA fundraising coordinator Kelly Sheehy said. "It's a great time to thank them for their commitment to the city and helping those in need."

Funds raised by firefighters go directly to the MDA, a voluntary health agency that provides direct services, research and professional and public health education to individuals with neuromuscular diseases in northeast Florida and southeast Georgia, according to their press release.

Sheehy said the LCFD's goal is $7,000 this year. They raised $6,651 last year, she said.

Muscular dystrophy consists of a group of muscular disorders, including Lou Gehrig's disease, that weaken neuromuscular systems and inhibit movement. As of today, there is no known cure.

For more information about the "Fill the Boot" campaign or MDA, contact Kelly Sheehy at the Jacksonville District office at 904-296-7434 or visit www.mda.org.

SUB: Investors wanted

boy that wanted to build this," he said. "Lying awake in bed until 5 a.m., you'd be surprised what you can figure out."

He said the main difficulty in designing a vessel like the Hyper-Sub was overcoming the power-to-weight problem common in other submersibles.

Long-winded technical explanations aside, Marion said he found inspirations for solutions from things as simple as plastic bags and toilets.

"I've had engineers from MIT and Israel tell me this is the holy grail of submarines," he said.

However, Marion is facing challenges finding investors to contribute to what he calls "bridge capital" to help push production forward.

Marion said the Hyper-Sub could be on the verge of securing significant contracts and investments from venture capitalists and government agencies.

"But it takes money to walk through that process," Marion said. "It's kind of a double-edge sword. Right now we're just trying to keep the lights on and pay the bills."

The Hyper-Sub may be able to navigate these troubled waters if Marion and company are able to raise somewhere between $50,000 and $75,000 to assist them along to the next phase of development.

To this end, he's taking the boat on tour.

"Right now we're in a full-on push mode," Marion said. "We're taking the boat to different areas in North Central Florida and showing people why it's a global game changer."

He expressed confidence that the Hyper-Sub would succeed if he could get past this initial intermittent phase in investing.

Much of that confidence stems from talks Marion claims to have had with Ministers of Defense and Secretaries of Navy from countries such as Israel, South Korea and Indonesia.

"The Indonesians expressed interest in our vessel because it can be used in the shallow waters where pirates operate that are inaccessible to their larger diesel-driven subs," he said.

The heart of Marion's investment campaign lies in lauding the Hyper-Sub's versatility, claiming it would fit well in a myriad of environments such as port security, military recon, personal recreation, tourism, marine research and even films.

"It would be flattering if the Hyper-Sub was featured in a James Bond movie," he said. "But we're looking for a more sustainable contract that could really benefit our investors."

Before that can happen, Marion said he'll need to raise enough money to sustain them through a 90-120 day "operating envelope" before he can weigh anchor with the Hyper-Sub.

Marion thinks it's only a matter of time.

"I'm confident we can proceed if we get over this hurdle," he said.

"This is the last battle we have to fight. But we've surpassed expectations before. We're no strangers to adversity. I have no doubt we'll win this battle."

Willie Nelson to headline 16th annual Magnolia Fest

By STEVEN RICHMOND

srichmond@lakecityreporter.com

Willie Nelson and friends are on the road again on their way to 16th annual Magnolia Fest in Live Oak in October.

Willie Nelson, John Prine, Kris Kristofferson and Stephen "Ragga" Marley are just a handful of the musicians booked for the music festival.

"Mag Fest" will return to its home in the Spirit of the Suwannee Music Park along the Suwannee River.

"Folks from all over the country are going to come," Spirit of the Suwannee Marketing Director Teena Peavey. "We're expecting about 25,000 people to come throughout the festival."

Executive director of Lake City's Tourist Development Council Harvey Campbell warned, however, that reservations for camping within the park have already sold out.

"Anyone who wants to come at this point has to camp elsewhere or rent a room," he said.

Aside from shows by some of country and folk's biggest names, guests will be able to participate in disc golf, canoeing on the Suwannee, yoga classes, hula hoop lessons and drum circles.

"It's not the mostly country crowd you see at things like Suwannee River Jam," Peavey said. "It's a different kind of crowd."

Campbell also predicted that there will be an average of 10,000 guests in attendance on any given day during the four day festival, and that the average tourist will spend $90 a day.

"It's going to help across the entire spectrum," he said. "Not only the lodging industry, but also restaurants, gas stations and retailers will benefit from the people coming in."

Magnolia Fest will be held October 17-20 at Spirit of the Suwannee Music Park in Live Oak. Single day tickets start at $50. Children under the age of 12 are admitted free.

ROBBERY: Three invade apartment pills in her apartment at the time. When she told the men she didn't have any, two of them wanted to leave. The third encouraged them to stay.

"I said, 'I can't believe you would do this in front of a 5-day-old child,' and he said, 'My kid's got to eat, too,'" Patterson said.

When she realized they weren't leaving, Patterson decided to get louder, thinking a neighbor may hear and come help. Finally, the men left.

According to a neighbor, Grayson Nunn, the suspects must have run on foot behind the apartment complex, through the woods and to a car parked in the Ace Hardware lot (on Baya Avenue).

Authorities at the scene said they had police dogs tracking the scent through the area. But the dogs suddenly lost the trail, which led police to believe the men got into a waiting vehicle.

Nunn said he was sitting outside with a cup of coffee, people-watching, when he noticed a suspicious man lurking in the area. According to Nunn, the man was in all black.

"I stepped back to where he couldn't see me, but I kept an eye on him," he said. "I went inside to get another cup of coffee. I didn't get five feet in the door before I heard, 'help, help.' I don't even know what happened to my coffee cup."

When Nunn came back out, he saw Patterson standing outside with her daughter, who was holding a baby. Figuring the man went behind the house, Grayson circled around the opposite side of the building to see what he could find.

Not locating the suspects, he returned to his apartment. When police arrived, they told him to stay inside.

"The money was for my car insurance," Patterson said. "I had just got the money up to pay that. ... I have no idea how I'm going to pay the car insurance. I haven't even thought about it."

Instead, she said she spent the day crying after a night of restlessness.

Patterson planned to return to her apartment and sleep.

"I'm going to be double-checking everything," she said.

The Lake City Police Department was unable to provide information about the incident as of press time.

Army thanks corrections facility staff

Care packages sent to troops overseas greatly appreciated.

By TONY BRITT
tbritt@lakecityreporter.com

The staff at Corrections Corp. of America's Lake City Correctional Facility has an annual tradition where it collects items and sends care packages to relatives of staff members who are in the military.

This year the tradition took a twist when Army Staff Sgt. Yuri Sidorov, of Lake City, received so many items in his care packages he was able to share with other soldiers in his unit and even other soldiers in the field.

The gesture of goodwill did not go unnoticed by the military, which recently sent the local CCA facility a certificate of appreciation for the care packages.

Joseph Taylor, warden at CCA-Lake City Correctional Facility, said he was honored to get a certificate of appreciation from the military, recognizing the facility's program that gives packages to employees' family members serving in the military.

"It means a lot to our facility to have the certificate of appreciation sent to us," Taylor said. "For all of our staff to be supportive of our men and women who are in the armed forces. It means a lot that we had an opportunity to show our appreciation in a very small way. I'm very proud of our staff taking the time and being very generous to give to a very good cause to show our appreciation for our men and women that are out protecting our freedom and peace."

Each year the staff at CCA asks whether any of the facility's staff has family members serving in the military. Then two individuals are chosen and CCA sends the chosen individuals care packages throughout the year.

Staff Sgt. Yuri Sidorov, son of Tatayana Exum of Lake City, was chosen as one of the individuals last year.

"We collected and sent him so much stuff that he not only shared it with his unit, he shared it with the entire battalion and with troops passing through the base," said Shirley Cox, CCA administrative supervisor and public information officer.

When Sidorov, 29, came home in February, he went to CCA and thanked the CCA staff for their donations.

Aimee Richer, a CCA administrative clerk, said CCA initiated the care package program in 2010.

"We started the collection in October and the packages went out in November in time to hit the troops in time for Thanksgiving," she said.

Exum, an academic instructor at CCA, said when the question came up what they needed to send in the care packages, first it was personal items and what does he need.

"In the end we found out that a lot of people put a lot of thought in it, and we collected books, letters and a lot of items that could be shared and that's exactly what he did," Exum said. "When I heard from him, he said 'Mom, I shared it with everyone.' It was shared not only in the battalion, but in the field. It was not just for one person — he shared it with everyone."

Exum said the care package also greatly connected with the community because everyone in the community had an opportunity to donate something.

"When we were sending letters that came from schools and local school children," she said. "Everyone in the community knew where the care package was going and that's why I get goose bumps whenever I talk about it. It's very close to me and that care package meant a lot to the people who were in the field who finally felt appreciated. They felt loved by everyone in the community who was thinking about them because it's very difficult during holiday time. I think this is a great project where we can really connect community."

Exum said sending the care packages to active-duty soldiers also seemed to lift the morale of CCA employees. She said she saw faces shining, smiling and everything else whenever someone started talking about the project.

"When Yuri came back in February to talk to us, everyone knew what we were talking about," Exum said. "It wasn't distant like something was sent and forgotten. He was proud to talk about it, we were very proud to talk about it and this is really meaningful."

Richer said two soldiers were selected to receive the packages and the CCA staff sent a total of 103 pounds of items to them in 12 separate boxes.

The boxes contained personal hygiene items, cookies, coffee and she said the troops also requested condiments, so they were sent packets of ketchup, mustard, mayonnaise, hot sauce, sugar and salt.

"Whenever we said this is what we're looking for, it just kept coming in from everywhere," Richer said.

"Personally and professionally, I think it's awesome to be recognized," she said. "... For them to stop and take the time to show their appreciation, and not just Ms. Exum's son, but the whole squadron, the head of the battalion to send us this nice certificate — it just touches our heart."

Cox said the CCA corporate office has told the local staff that they will use Sidorov for a model for their next upcoming care package promotion.

"We're going to be their model on how the community and facility can get involved and come together as a unit," she said.

The certificate reads: "Exceptional support of the 3rd Infantry Division, Division Headquarters and Headquarters Battalion Combined Joint Task Force - 3. Your selfless services and dedication to the team have directly impacted the morale of the soldiers and greatly contributed to the success of Operation Enduring Freedom."

Sea cadets train in Branford

Members of the Naval Sea Cadet Corps interested in sports medicine participate in the dissection of a fetal pig during one of several training programs held at the Middle Florida Baptist Assembly in Branford earlier this month. The cadets, ranging in age from 10 to 18, came from 23 states, Puerto Rico and Washington, D.C., to experience a week of training in military specialties, such as culinary arts, field medicine and photo journalism. The local Liberty Division of the Sea Cadets hosted the event.

Columbia fights to scoreless tie against Trinity.

By BRANDON FINLEY
bfinley@lakecityreporter.com

Columbia High had a peek into its football future against Trinity Christian Academy in the kickoff classic on Friday with the game providing as many questions as answers.

Weather was an issue and so was finding officials.

After an hour delay and the officiating crew not showing up, both coaches agreed to use replacement refs.

The Lake City Reporter asked about the problem with the referees, but was given no clear explanation.

The result was a 0-0 tie as both varsity squads played a half at Tiger Stadium.

"We started getting calls about 3 p.m. asking if the game was still on, because of the weather," Columbia head coach Brian Allen said. "Then you have the officials not show up on top of it, and it makes for a bad night as far as that goes."

Still, not all was bad on the field once the game finally started.

Fort White gets the better of Dixie County, 29-6.

By TIM KIRBY

FORT WHITE — It was bam right off the bat.

Fort White High tailback Tavaris Williams ran the first play from scrimmage around the right side for 57 yards and a touchdown, as the Indians outscored the visiting Dixie County High varsity 21-6 in a kickoff classic game on Friday.

Fort White's junior varsity added a touchdown and two-point conversion in the fourth quarter for a 29-6 final.

"Tavaris set the tone and the guys fed off that," Fort White head coach Demetric Jackson said. "We were able to run and pass. You have to give the fullbacks and offensive line credit."

Williams added a two-yard touchdown plunge on the next possession and a 46-yard run on a draw play late in the first half to finish with 124 yards rushing on 13 carries.

After the quick strike Fort White's defense forced a three-and-out and the Jackson experiences highs and lows of watching son

By TIM KIRBY
tkirby@lakecityreporter.com

FORT WHITE — Even after taking care of his opponent, a head coach can't rest when the kickoff classic is turned over to the junior varsity teams in the fourth quarter.

That interest is more intense for Demetric Jackson, whose son, DJ, is the starting quarterback for the Fort White JV.

Jackson had a taste of the highs and lows of watching a son on the football field on Friday.

On Fort White's first JV possession Jabari Rivers broke a 44-yard run to move the ball to the Dixie County 25. On second down Jackson fired a pass toward the end zone. It was tipped by one Fort White receiver and Logan Greenwald snatched the rebound for a touchdown. Carlous Barteer ran in the extra point.

On the next play the Bears fumbled and there was a scramble for the ball. Nathan Thomas got the recovery for the Indians, but DJ was down on the field.

"He had a touchdown play, then got hurt," Jackson said. "It is one of your worst fears. You don't want any player to go down, and you especially don't want your son to go down. On the sidelines I was saying, 'O Lord, let him be all-right.'" Before the worrying, Jackson was beaming over the touchdown.

"It is one of our favorite pass plays and DJ threw a pretty pass, a tight spiral," Jackson said. "Logan made a great play to catch it."

After his shoulder was shifted a bit on the field, DJ walked off with several concerned attendants.

"It doesn't seem to be too serious, just a real bad bruise," Jackson said. "We will do more tests, but I don't think the shoulder is separated."

DJ is a freshman and Jackson is looking at four years of celebration and concern.

INDIANS: Dominant vs. good defense

offense went to work in a businesslike manner. The Indians rolled up four first downs on a 77-yard scoring drive, converting four times on third down.

Quarterback Andrew Baker had a 28-yard run during the drive and two completions for 17 yards. Kellen Snider and Edward Garrison got carries. Williams scored on a third down.

"We had that 14-play drive and the guys wanted to finish it," Jackson said. "We pretty much dominated against a real good defense. Their secondary and defensive line are one of the best we will see."

This time, Dixie County answered with a touchdown drive. It was also 14 plays and covered 69 yards.

The Bears converted one fourth down and James Bowers scored on a fourth-and-1. Julian Robinson ran for 32 yards during the possession.

"We got a little tired at one point late in the second quarter," Indians defensive coordinator Ken Snider said. "We made some mental mistakes that we have got to remedy."

The Indians stopped a Bears' fourth-down try on the opening drive of the third quarter and took over at the Fort White 42.

Baker threw to Melton Sanders for nine yards and one first down. The Indians then sent Cameron White crashing up the middle on two plays. The third time, Baker pulled off a good fake to White and hit Sanders behind the secondary for a 46-yard touchdown.

"Melton was saying, 'Ok, we ran it in the first half and now let's throw it,'" Jackson said. "Coach (Isiah) Phillips said we can hit that pass.

Fort White High quarterback Andrew Baker huddles up the Indians during pre-game of the kickoff classic on Friday.

Andrew showed a lot of arm strength and Melton went out and got it. It was beautiful."

After the touchdown, Sanders added the third of his PATs, and he had an interception later in the quarter.

Baker finished 5-of-7 passing for 74 yards. Sanders had three catches with one each by Williams and Christian Helsel.

"Andrew played great and Melton gave us productivity," Jackson said. "We need that from our seniors."

Bears quarterback Aaron Thomas was 4 of 6 in the first half for 80 yards, but was 0 for 6 after intermission.

Shaquille Mitchem had three catches for 63 yards. Duke Dawson, who has committed to Florida, had one catch for 17 yards.

Dixie County rushed for 116 yards, led by Kendal Copeland with 54 yards on 10 carries.

"I was proud of how physical we were for the first game," Snider said. "It was an overall team effort. We got some back-ups in there to get their feet wet, which will give us some much-needed depth and good competition. Our coaches did a heck of a job making adjustments during the game and at halftime."

The season starts for real next week when the Indians travel to Jasper on Friday to take on Hamilton County High.

"We have to mend some bruises and start over again," Snider said. "It is never as bad as it seems and never as good as it seems."

CHS: Mixed results in opening game

Columbia's defense showed why it has been one of the top units in the area by forcing two turnovers and holding Trinity off the scoreboard.

The downside was Columbia's offense failed to get on the scoreboard and didn't produce much yardage.

Trinity took the first possession of the game and picked up two first downs before Roger Cray picked off a Kevin Tolliver pass to end the drive.

Columbia's offense looked good on the first drive as it was able to pick up three first downs before stalling due to a mix-up on a designed run.

Quarterback Jake Thomas hit running back Lonnie Underwood on a 21-yard screen pass to move the ball into Trinity territory and connected with Caleb Carswell on what coach Allen called a "heck of a fingertip catch" before the drive stalled.

"Going back and looking at the tape, we're going to see things that can be easily corrected," Allen said. "We were playing a pretty good team, and we're a pretty good team ourselves. It wasn't a matter of being outmanned, however, but not making the right block here or rolling out the wrong way in the red zone."

After the initial drives, both teams exchanged three-and-outs. Trinity had its longest run of the game when Kevin Tolliver held onto a keeper and scampered more than 50 yards, but a holding penalty turned it into only an 18-yard gain. The drive ended, however, when Terry Calloway fell on a fumble for the Tigers with 9:04 remaining in the second quarter.

Columbia's offense wasn't about to get things going the rest of the game on offense without a first down the rest of the game.

The final highlight of the game for the Tigers came when Carlos Vega picked up a sack closing out the second quarter to end either team's chances of scoring.

With a scoreless tie, Allen feels there's plenty of room for improvement heading into this week's home game against Gainesville High at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

"I told the kids that if we are ready to win state after the first game, then there isn't a need for our coaching staff," Allen said. "What we saw were small mistakes that we have to come back and get corrected. We had two quarters of what was like playoff-atmosphere football and thinking back at the end of the day, I think we're both going to be very good teams."

The Tigers best news may have been escaping without any injuries in the sloppy, rainy conditions.

"We didn't go into the game planning to hold back," Allen said. "The players may be playing for a state championship on a wet field. We have to be ready for all of the elements. We weren't doing anything to protect them or hold back, but we came out without any injuries."

Airport taxiway upgrade coming

By TONY BRITT
tbritt@lakecityreporter.com

Lake City Gateway Airport is in line for renovations that may translate into future prosperity for the general aviation airport

TONY BRITT/Lake City Reporter

The air traffic control tower at Lake City Gateway Airport is scheduled to undergo a series of renovations starting next month.

and the community at large.

General Manager Nick Harwell said three renovation projects will upgrade the facility's taxiway and drainage, air traffic control tower and air conditioning in the traffic control tower.

"As the Plum Creek development materializes, the renovations position the airport for increased traffic for aircraft," Harwell said. "As the Plum Creek project materializes we can't help but believe that we're going to have and see increased traffic because those businesses will want to come and do site reviews of the Plum Creek development project. As a result of them coming here, we're trying to do our best to get ahead of that so that as these aircraft arrive and depart there are no safety concerns."

Currently the Lake City Gateway taxiway is not a full parallel-length taxiway.

Larger aircraft have to back-taxi out onto the primary runway to get the full length for takeoff.

"With the design and construction of this project, what will happen is those aircraft will no longer have to back-taxi and they'll be able to taxi all the way to the end of the runway in order to get the full benefit of the runway," Harwell said.

The runway's length is 8,003 feet – long enough to accommodate a jumbo jet – and the expansion will make the taxiway of equal length.

"The extension and widening of the taxiway will accommodate a full parallel taxiway," he said. "No longer will we just have an 8,003-foot runway, but we'll also

Ask the Fool

Stocks Over CDs

Q After recently graduating from college, I'm employed and contributing to my workplace 401(k) plan. Should I invest additional money in a CD, too? — G.J., Flagstaff, Ariz.

A For most young people, CDs are not ideal. Even the best CD rates these days (which you can look up at bankrate.com) are puny. If you know you won't need a sum of money for at least five years (and to be more conservative, 10 years), it's likely to grow more briskly in stocks.

Five-year CDs, for example, top out around 2 percent in interest these days, and that's the maximum. On a $10,000 investment, all you can hope for is roughly $200. Two-year CDs offer only about 1 percent, or $100.

But tobacco giant Philip Morris International was recently offering a dividend yield of 3.8 percent, which would give you close to $400. Procter & Gamble's yield is around 3 percent, while utility company National Grid yields more than 5 percent, and even Apple's yield has approached 3 percent.

Dividends are never guaranteed, but many companies have been regularly paying — and raising — them for decades. Plus, on top of the dividend, the stock price of healthy and growing companies will increase over time, too, delivering additional wealth. (The Motley Fool owns shares of Apple and its newsletters have recommended Apple and P&G.)

Q If I want to switch brokerages, can I have my entire portfolio transferred to the new brokerage, or will I have to sell everything, taking a hit on each transaction, and start from scratch with the new account? — H.W., St. Joseph, Mich.

A Your new brokerage will likely be able to help you switch seamlessly. No selling or taxable gains need be involved.

Byron Wien on Life

Byron Wien, one of the most influential investment thinkers in recent decades, has offered a bunch of life lessons he has learned over his 80 years (lessons he hopes to continue to practice "in the next 80"). Here are a few:

- Network intensely. Luck plays a big role in life, and there is no better way to increase your luck than by knowing as many people as possible. Nurture your network by sending articles, books and emails to people to show you're thinking about them.

- When you meet someone new, treat that person as a friend. Occasionally you will be disappointed, but your network will broaden rapidly if you follow this path.

- At the beginning of every year, think of ways you can do your job better than you have ever done it before. Write them down and look at what you have set out for yourself when the year is over.

- The hard way is always the right way. Never take shortcuts, except when driving home from the Hamptons. Shortcuts can be construed as sloppiness, a career killer.

- Don't try to be better than your competitors, try to be different. There is always going to be someone smarter than you, but there may not be someone who is more imaginative.

- When seeking a career as you come out of school or making a job change, always take the job that looks like it will be the most enjoyable. If it pays the most, you're lucky. If it doesn't, take it anyway.

I took a severe pay cut to take each of the two best jobs I've ever had, and they both turned out to be exceptionally rewarding financially.

- Every year, try doing something you have never done before that is totally out of your comfort zone.

This will add to the essential process of self-discovery.

My Smartest Investment

Go Clubbing

Around 1959, while young and working at a research and development lab, some colleagues and I formed an investment club and turned $10 into $5 with our young get-rich-quick mindsets and approaches. We did learn investing techniques, though.

About 10 years later, I joined an investment club with a much wider range of ages. Most members were professionals, but not all. The club had a much better approach and was much better balanced. Both these club experiences provided an excellent training ground for me. I think it's best to get your training early, when you have only small sums to put at risk while you learn. — M.R., via email

The Fool Responds: Investment clubs are indeed excellent for beginning investors, as they provide a venue in which to learn with and from others. They can be terrific for experienced investors, too, permitting a bunch of folks to share ideas and insights and share the stock-research workload. You can even stop short of actually pooling your dollars, just pooling your thoughts (and enjoying refreshments) at meetings. Learn more about clubs at betterinvesting.org and bivio.com.

have an 8,003-foot taxiway."

The taxiway project will consist of widening the taxiway from 35 feet to 50 feet, increase the length and LED runway lighting will replace the current runway lights.

The project is broken down into two major components for funding purposes. The drainage improvements will be funded through Federal Aviation Administration, state and local matching funds of approximately $170,000. The second component, for the extension and widening of taxiway Alpha, is funded by state and airport revenue funds to include signage and taxiway lighting for $190,000.

In addition to the taxiway renovation, additional work will take place at the airport's tower. Air conditioning units will be replaced and the air tower's roof will also be upgraded.

"We're going to do a complete air traffic control tower roof replacement," Harwell said. "In conjunction with the air traffic control roof replacement, we're also going to do what is known as a waterproofing. The waterproofing will take place around the catwalk of the air traffic control tower so that we do not have any additional leaks as a result of the roof replacement."

Each level of the air traffic control tower has windows and air conditioner units that need to be addressed in regards to waterproofing.

"In addition to that we're also going to install a new air conditioner unit on top of the tower as well," Harwell said.

The air traffic control tower roof replacement work is expected to last about a week — weather permitting. The waterproofing work is expected to take longer, approximately two to three weeks.

"The air conditioner replacement could happen as early as two hours or two days," Harwell said.

"The beauty of the City of Lake City owning, operating and maintaining the airport tower is that we were not impacted by the (federal) sequester," Harwell continued. "We own the tower and the employees in the tower are employees of Timco, so the sequester had no impact on the operation of our tower here at Lake City Gateway Airport."

The work on the air traffic control tower, the renovation project's first task, is expected to start in early September.

"We anticipate starting approximately the second week of September on the air traffic control tower roof replacement and waterproofing project as well as the AC installation," Harwell said.

The air traffic control tower renovation work was budgeted by the city. The total cost of the roof replacement, which includes waterproofing as well as a new A/C system, was $42,598.

SMART SPENDING

Good deals for college students

By JOSEPH PISANI
AP Business Writer

That plastic college ID card is worth more than you think.

Flashing the card at stores and restaurants can get you major savings. But many of the deals are not advertised, so it never hurts to ask.

Clothing seller Banana Republic and electronics chain RadioShack Corp., for example, offer discounts to college students year round. Online sellers, such as Amazon.com, will ask for your college email address in exchange for deals. Smaller local stores near campus are likely to offer deals, too.

"Always have your student ID with you," says Trae Bodge, a senior editor at online coupon and deals company RetailMeNot. "All college students need to inquire about discounts. A store might have a discount they are not aware of."

The deals expire when your college education does, so take advantage of them while you can. Here's what you need to know:

TECH DEALS:

If you're in the market for a new laptop or other electronic devices, you're in luck. Many companies offer deals for college students. Apple Inc. has special pricing on its laptops and desktop computers, both at its online and physical stores. MacBook Pro laptops, for example, are discounted $200.

RadioShack, which sells everything from calculators to computers, offers a 10 percent discount online and in its stores. (You'll need to put in your college email address for the online discount here: <http://bit.ly/1duaRsD>.)

Best Buy Co. Inc., the electronics retailer, will send you new online coupon codes every month on a variety of items. You will need to register and give them your .edu email address at BestBuy.com/StudentDeals. Among its current deals, Best Buy is offering $100 off Apple iPads and $20 off Beats headphones until Sept. 14.

CLOTHING MARKDOWNS:

You can also save money if you want to update your wardrobe. J. Crew, the clothing retailer, offers a 15 percent discount in its stores. Club Monaco and Ann Taylor both offer 20 percent off their goods, but only on full-priced items. Banana Republic gives 15 percent off full-priced items. Charlotte Russe's 10 percent student discount works in its stores and online.

FOOD DISCOUNTS:

Many fast-food companies, such as Subway and Dairy Queen, offer discounts, but not all stores participate. Fast-food restaurants are often owned by individuals, and not the parent company. The companies can't enforce the discount. So ask at the counter if they offer any discounts. Most are around 10 percent off.

MEMBERSHIP PROGRAM DEALS:

Some retailers offer deals on their membership programs. Amazon.com Inc. gives college students free two-day shipping for six months if they sign up at amazon.com/joinstudent. After that, you can sign up for Amazon.com's Prime service for $39 a year, almost half off its regular price of $79 a year. Amazon Prime members receive free two-day shipping, free instant streaming of select movies and TV shows and one free e-book loan a month.

DO THE RESEARCH:

Stores and restaurants near your campus might offer discounts, too. Check your school's website to see if it has a list of shops that offer deals, or ask the store's employees when you're there. Do a quick Internet search before for a store and the words "student discount" before you head out. You can also find search "student discount" on RetailMeNot.com's search bar for newer or limited discounts, Bodge says.

'Hyperloop' travel idea gains fans

By JUSTIN PRITCHARD,
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Billionaire entrepreneur Elon Musk urged the public to polish sketch plans he released last week for a "Hyperloop" that would shoot capsules full of people at the speed of sound through elevated tubes connecting Los Angeles and San Francisco.

From tinkers to engineers, the race is on.

A Utah firm hustled out a model using a 3-D printer. A Pennsylvania company is testing a virtual Hyperloop with sophisticated computer software.

People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals wants ad space inside capsules, and in San Francisco, enthusiasts interested in "making Hyperloop a reality" will meet over beers.

Meanwhile, Musk himself has shelved the project and returned to his established future-is-here transportation ventures: luxury electric car maker Tesla Motors Inc. and the rocket-building company SpaceX.

In principle, the Hyperloop is doable. The concept pulls together several proven technologies: Capsules would float on a thin cushion of air and draw on magnetic attraction and solar power to zoom through a nearly air-free tube. Because there would be so little wind resistance, they could top 700 mph and make the nearly 400-mile trip in about half an hour.

Actual construction would hinge on challenges far more complex than advanced engineering — those involving money and politics.

The $6 billion Musk projected as the cost was a terrific lowball to some. Others suggested his timeframe of a decade to completion was naive — that getting political backing and environmental clearances, would be hugely time-consuming.

TRAVEL TALES

Sandy Kishton

More touring in North Georgia

We arrived in Blue Ridge, Ga., and quickly changed clothes for dinner, which was at the Blue Ridge Brewery so I could sample the Sandy Bottom Ale, which we saw advertised in a magazine. We sat outside in the courtyard at picnic tables and listened to some live music. Unfortunately, they didn't have any of the beer I wanted to try, so I ended up with something else local.

Next stop, the SWAN Drive-In. These are just more of the stops and things we did on my summer trip with my mom and my niece, Allison. The drive-in movie was another first for Allison. It's been a pretty long time since Mom and I had been to one. In fact, it was probably the same time when I was little and my parents would take us. Drive-in movie theaters seem to be a thing of the past, but not for us on this night. The movie was "Despicable Me 2." But the highlight of the night was the deep-fried Oreos we ate while piled up in Community Concerts of Lake City organized 15 concerts with its partner Live! at Dowling Park Artist Series at the Advent Christian Village in Dowling Park. Six of the concerts will be available at Florida Gateway College Performing Arts Center and nine at the Advent Christian Village Church in Dowling Park. "We're excited," the group's president, Bonita Hadwin, said. "We feel privileged to bring cultural activities into our small community."

Tickets for the entire season cost $70 for adults and include admission to all 15 shows and membership status. Tickets for students cost $10. Single tickets can be purchased for each concert, but cost $20 a piece. For the first time, flex tickets are available

And what will you be reading this fall?

The Friends of the Columbia County Public Library group is sponsoring a county-wide reading project this fall called Community Read. It is modeled after the American Library Association's program that has been happening in cities and towns all over the U.S. for more than 10 years.

The basic premise of our project is that one title has been selected, many people in the county will read it and then book discussions will be held, along with associated events.

The purpose of Community Read is to promote reading and literacy, engage the community in intergenerational book discussions and to foster a sense of community by bringing people together through literature.

The book we selected is "A Land Remembered" by Patrick Smith. While a work of fiction, the book represents Florida history and fits perfectly into the Library's year-long celebration of Viva Florida 500 and Florida's rich history.

Gov. Rick Scott recently presented Patrick Smith with the Great Floridian award. Smith is a beloved Florida author, and "A Land Remembered" is required reading in many Florida schools.

We received several

grants to purchase copies of the book. The Altrusa International of Lake City grant provided enough money to purchase one set of the student edition for each of Columbia County's elementary schools. We have partnered with the Columbia County schools to encourage the intergenerational aspect of the project. The Florida Humanities Council grant has allowed us to purchase over 200 copies of the book to give away to participants and to pay for a humanities scholar, Dr. Sean McMahon of Florida Gateway College, to lead one of the book discussion programs.

The Community Read kickoff will be on Sept. 24 at 7 p.m. at the Main Library. The books will be distributed and there will be a screening of the DVD "Patrick Smith's Florida."

We have also scheduled some fun and interesting associated programs during the Community Read timeline of October and November. Florida novelist Janis Owens has published

"The Cracker Kitchen: a Cookbook in Celebration of Cornbread-fed, Down-home Family Stories and Cuisine" and will do a food demonstration on Sunday, Oct. 13 at 2 p.m. at the Main Library in downtown Lake City.

Hank Mattson is known as a Cracker cowboy poet and he will visit the Main Library on Sunday, Oct. 27 at 2 p.m. Florida's weather history through the years will be the topic of Gainesville TV meteorologist, Mike Potter on Monday, Nov. 4, at 7 p.m. at the Main Library.

The grand finale program of Community Read is on Nov. 19 at 7 p.m. and will be a multimedia show about Patrick Smith and

"A Land Remembered," presented by his son, Rick Smith. Patrick Smith is unable to travel anymore, but Rick presents his program all around Florida.

I hope I have whetted your appetite to participate in the Library's Community Read project this fall! I would like to encourage individuals, book clubs, and other groups to read the book in October, participate in a book discussion and to also attend our terrific associated programs.

Salad proves watermelon and feta better together

By SARA MOULTON
Associated Press

Even though fruit and cheese tend to go together like soup and sandwich, the first time I saw watermelon and feta cheese paired up on a menu it struck me as very odd.

Apples and cheddar? Sure. Pears and Stilton? You know it. But I was sure that watermelon was much too watery to stand up to the bold flavor of feta, no matter that everyone tends to love the interplay of sweet and salt in general, and that the combo is hugely popular in Egypt, Israel and throughout the Balkans.

Well, those folks are right and I was dead wrong. Watermelon and feta are a great match — and they are at the center of this salad.

I must confess that I've only recently come to love watermelon. Part of the problem is that it always seemed kind of monstrous. You brought one home from the supermarket, chopped it into hunks, and still had to empty out your whole refrigerator to store it. These days there are options. First, of course, we can buy it in pieces and sometimes by the slice. Secondly, there are now littler guys — seedless watermelons — so called because they contain only tender little edible seeds.

The user-friendly new packaging aside, I also appreciate watermelon's healthfulness. The aptly-named edible is in fact 92 percent water by weight, which is at the core of its unique ability to hydrate us. Finally — and duh! — it's delicious, and particularly refreshing when accented with a spritz of citrus.

With the watermelon, feta and cucumber in place, I filled out the salad with some dark bitter greens — namely arugula — and fresh herbs. You're welcome to substitute watercress for the arugula, and any one of your favorite herbs for the mint and cilantro.

As for the onion, there's a way — if you have a little extra time — to abbreviate the lingering smell of it on your breath. Just soak the slices in a strainer set in a bowl of ice water for 15 minutes. Then drain and dry it and add it to the salad. The whole process not only tamps down onion breath, it also makes the little rascals crispier.

The grilled pork tenderloin here plays the same role as the chicken or shrimp added to a Caesar salad — it turns a side dish into a meal. By the way, the tenderloin is one of the leanest cuts of pork. And so long as you don't overcook it — and give it a bit of a rest before slicing — it will be tender and juicy.

Now to the dressing, which teams up feta and buttermilk. Given its ability to provide cream-iness (and tang) to a recipe without adding a ton of fat, buttermilk is one of my favorite cheating ingredients. And the feta is so flavorful — and its texture so pleasurable — that I crumbled some extra onto the finished salad.

At the end, you'll add some crunch in the form of homemade baked whole-wheat pita croutons. These are so easy to make, I never bother with the packaged varieties, which are usually deep-fried and loaded with fat.

Voila, the perfect summer meal in a bowl. Refreshing and filling.

GRILLED PORK TENDERLOIN WITH WATERMELON-ARUGULA SALAD

Start to finish: 50 minutes (25 minutes active)
Servings: 4

Ingredients:

4 ounces feta cheese, crumbled, divided
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1/3 cup buttermilk
1 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil
Ground black pepper
Two 6-inch whole-wheat pita pockets
Olive oil cooking spray
Kosher salt
1-pound pork tenderloin, trimmed
3 cups arugula
1/2 cup thinly sliced red onion
1/2 cup fresh mint leaves
1/2 cup fresh cilantro leaves
2 cups cubed and seeded watermelon
1 cup cubed seedless cucumber

Instructions:

Heat the grill to medium. Heat the oven to 400 F.

While the grill and oven are heating, in a blender combine half of the feta, the lemon juice, buttermilk and olive oil. Blend until smooth. Season with pepper, then stir in the remaining feta. Set aside.

Split each pita pocket into 2 rounds. Spray the rough sides of each round lightly with the cooking spray, then sprinkle lightly with salt. Cut each round into 8 triangles. On a rimmed baking sheet arrange the triangles in a single layer. Bake on the middle shelf of the oven until golden and crisp, about 8 minutes. Set aside to cool.

Spray the pork with the olive oil spray, then season it lightly with salt and pepper. Grill it directly over the heat, turning it a quarter turn at a time, until a thermometer inserted at the thickest part registers 140 F to 145 F for medium, about 6 minutes per side. Transfer the pork to a plate, cover it loosely with foil and let it rest for 10 minutes.

In a large bowl, combine the arugula, onion, mint, cilantro, watermelon and cucumber. Add the pork juices from the resting pork to the feta dressing, whisking to incorporate.

Place a mound of the salad on each of 4 plates. Slice the pork crosswise into rounds 1/2 inch thick and arrange a quarter of the slices on top of each mound of salad. Drizzle the dressing on top of the pork, then divide the pita croutons between the plates. Serve immediately.

the back of my Expedition with our pillows and blankets we grabbed from the hotel. The Oreos were so good! Needless to say, we all fell asleep, as it had been a full day.

The next day and our next activity on this crazy train was a train, literally. We took the Blue Ridge Scenic Railway for an hour-long ride up to McCaysville, Ga., and Copperhill, Tenn., where we had a couple of hours to eat and take in the sights.

The train ride was relaxing and scenic. We sat in one of the open-air cars for better views and fresh air. We sat where we could see views of the Toccoa River. There were a lot of men and women fishing, some in boats and some fly fishing. Apparently, this county is the trout capital of the world.

After leaving the train, we headed for food first. Mom wanted barbecue and got a pork sandwich to go from Georgia Boys BBQ — they've been featured in Southern Living magazine — and took it in with us at El Rio, a

From there, we walked across the two bridges coming and going to and from Georgia and Tennessee. You can literally walk the state line and be in both states at the same time.

Not only did we get pictures, but we all got T-shirts that say that. It was fun! A few souvenirs and back on the train for the ride back to Blue Ridge.

Back in Blue Ridge, we walked the Main Street and did a little more shopping. Allison was looking for the Sweet Shoppe, so she could get a cupcake.

The owners were winners of "Cupcake Wars" season six on the Food Network. Mom and Allison each had a cupcake and I took a bite of the chocolate one, very good!

A little more walking, then we stopped for a beer at Black Bear Bier Garten to rest our feet for a little while.

Dinner was at 6 and at Christy Lee's Courtyard Grille. More good food, wine and music. Next, we bought tickets to a play that we saw advertised on a flyer in one of the stores. It was at the Blue Ridge Community Theater and was called "The Hallelujah Girls." It was very funny. Allison and I sang through the set changes as did most of the audience.

It was a great nostalgic trip to Blue Ridge, with drive-in movies, community theater, a historic train ride and beautiful scenery.

Native American pipe focus of monument

Stone quarried here used by craftsmen from many tribes.

By KRISTI EATON
Associated Press

PIPESTONE NATIONAL MONUMENT, Minn. — Like his uncles and grandfather before him, Travis Erickson takes great pride in the handmade pipes he creates using red stone he digs from the ground and carves with intricate designs.

Used both for works of art and in ceremonies, the pipes are an integral part of the history and culture of Native American tribes in the Great Plains. It's at Pipestone National Monument where Erickson, a member of the Sisseton Wahpeton Oyate tribe, and other Native Americans quarry for the stone used to make the pipes.

"It's more a spiritual journey for me," said Erickson, a fourth-generation pipe maker who demonstrates to visitors how he uses a variety of tools to carve the pipes.

Visitors to Pipestone can also watch a short film and tour a museum that details the history of the Pipestone quarries and the historical significance the pipes have.

A three-quarter-mile-long trail takes them past several quarries as well as to the Winnewissa Falls. A gift shop sells the pipes starting at around $40.

Erickson says a regular pipe takes about three hours to create.

Of course, that's after he's dug the stone out of his quarry, which he has been using since the 1970s. There are current-

ABOVE: Winnewissa Falls splashes at Pipestone National Monument in Minnesota. More than 50 Native Americans travel to Pipestone to quarry catlinite stone that will then be carved into pipes used in traditional ceremonies. ly 56 active quarries, and only enrolled members of federally recognized tribes are allowed to obtain a permit to quarry the stone.

First, soil is shoveled away. Once that is done, quarriers break up the top layer of hard quartzite with a sledge hammer and wedge.

Underneath the quartzite, there are one- to three-inch sheets of pipestone, called catlinite.

The catlinite sheets are lifted from the pits and cut into smaller pieces, which are then be-shaped into pipes.

The process can be arduous. "It's not just like a caveman beating on a rock," Erickson, 50, said. "You do have to read fractures. You have to be able to

The quarriers often leave offerings of food and tobacco as a sign of appreciation for the opportunity to quarry the land for the stone.

In the past, Erickson said, tribal members from as far away as California and Florida have traveled to Pipestone National Monument for the opportunity. Now most come from within the Plains region. There are about 150 people on a waiting list for their own quarry.

A quote from Lame Deer, a Lakota leader in the 1800s, hangs on one wall of the visitor center and succinctly describes the pipes' significance to Plains' tribes:

"The stone is our blood, red as our skin. The opening of the bowl is our mouth and the smoke rising from it is our breath, the visible breath of our people. The pipe is our most sacred possession. ... It is the heart of all our ceremonies."

Today, though, tribal members don't seem to have the same reverence for the pipe because of the growing focus on technology, said Erickson, who recalled gathering to carve pipes when he was a child with extended family members.

"We are dying," he said. "In the last six years, we've had five pipe makers go."

But for those who continue to put in the time and effort to quarry the stone and carve the pipes, it's worth it.

"They're not dedicated to the quarry. They're dedicated to the spiritual side," Erickson said.

RIDES: Going geeky?

involving a simple, blue elephant just won't cut it.

Take World of Chima at Legoland, for instance. The attraction is based on a Lego building block play set and Cartoon Network show about eight animal tribes, a crocodile king, magical vehicles called Speedorz and a life force called Chi. There are epic battles over the Ancient Pool of Chi, set in a lushly landscaped tropical world.

Or look at Universal's Transformers ride. It isn't just inspired by the toy and the movie — it's a detailed, 3-D, "interactive battle" between the Autobots and Decepticons that has its own website.

Even the straightforward-sounding Antarctica: Empire of the Penguin ride at SeaWorld Orlando is about a penguin hatchling who grows up, leaves his mom, is chased by a leopard seal through a psychedelic-looking world and then reunited with his tribe of fellow birds. Real, live penguins appear at the end of the ride.

Theme park consultants say attractions need to be more detailed in the age of video games, smartphones and 3-D TVs. And of course, parks aren't just competing with home entertainment; they're competing against each other, especially in the I-4 corridor, a busy highway that runs through the Orlando area.

Several theme park fan blogs are devoted to dissecting the geeky details of each new attraction.

"In the 1970s we could do quite a bit in theme parks," said John Gerner, the managing director of Leisure Business Advisors LLC. "Nowadays, it's hard to provide a typical music show. There just isn't that much of a thrill anymore."

Attraction designers have a difficult job: They must present a story to guests of all ages, from all walks of life.

"It's got to be layered and it's got to work on a number of different levels," said Phil

Hettema, a California-based theme park designer. "It's got to work on the kids, the adults. It's pretty tricky. ... You have to give the newcomer enough clues."

With an established story like Transformers, many people have seen the 1980s TV cartoon, and many more the movie franchise. So even if Universal's intense, dark ride involves a new story, most people can follow the narrative.

Same with Universal's Wizarding World of Harry Potter. Many of the visitors are familiar with the story, either through J.K. Rowling's books or the blockbuster movies. Yet familiarity also has its pitfalls for theme park designers: Rabid fans know when a detail is out of place.

Scott Thomas, Cartoon Network's vice president of consumer marketing, says he's gotten emails from the under-10 set about inconsistencies and questions in the storyline for the Chima cartoon. "Kids today have very high expectations," he said. "And the storylines are very complex in kids' media today."

Legoland worked with Cartoon Network writers and animators on the Chima attraction to sync details and distill the complex cartoon into basic elements. But they also recognized that not all guests have heard of Chima, said Candy Holland, senior creative director for the Legoland parent company Merlin Entertainment. So, for the uninitiated, designers used the queue line to tell the Chima story so people could be brought up to speed before boarding the water ride.

"It's a balance," Holland said. "There are some people who may not yet be familiar with the Chima theme. Some people come to Legoland, maybe haven't even played with Legos yet. And it's a great opportunity for the parents to understand why their kids are living in, and obsessed with, the World of Chima."

Solutions to palm problems

If you are thinking about planting a palm, now is the ideal time. The best palm survival rate occurs from July through September, when the weather is warm and rain water is abundant.

Palms are not particularly high-maintenance plants in our landscapes if they have been selected from plants that are hardy in North Florida. A complete list of palms for North Florida can be found at <http://edis.ifas.ufl.edu/ep359>.

Palms growing in the landscape may experience nutritional deficiencies occasionally, even when given the best care. When the temperatures are high and water is plentiful, palms are growing and using nutrients. Most mineral deficiencies can be readily diagnosed just by their visual symptoms.

If your palms aren't looking their healthiest right now, the following tips may help you find a nutritional remedy to perk them up again.

Florida's sandy soils have little ability to retain nutrients, so many minerals are leached away with all the rain. Potassium (K)

GARDEN TALK

Nichelle Demorest
dndemorest@ufl.edu

is one of the most common mineral deficiencies because of the low soil content and all the leaching in rain. The symptoms will appear on the older leaves, usually as yellow or orange "freckles," and then progressing to dead spots and leaflet tips.

Most gardeners react to these symptoms by cutting off the offensive fronds because of their unattractive coloring. This just intensifies the problem and makes it more difficult to correct. The partially green fronds should be left on the plant until they turn completely brown. The damaged leaves will not return to green, but the plant has the ability to move the potassium that it needs from the old leaves to the new leaves.

Another common mineral deficiency for palms is magnesium (Mg). The symptoms also appear on older leaves. A broad yellow band appears along the margins of older leaves while the inside of the leaves remain green. Although magnesium deficiency can result from low levels of that mineral in the soil, it can also result from a reaction of too much nitrogen, potassium or calcium in the soil.

Gardeners may respond to yellowing leaves by applying a high nitrogen fertilizer. In this case, they are causing a situation that is keeping magnesium from entering the palm roots.

Leave partially yellowed older fronds on your palms if you have either of these deficiencies so the plant can relocate the minerals. Once the symptoms occur, they cannot be reversed. Therefore, prevention is the best practice for palms, especially with our very leachable soils. Special "palm formula" fertilizers have a good balance of needed magnesium, potassium and nitrogen in a controlled-release form. The controlled-release form slowly releases nutrients, making them less leachable and more available for the plant.

Some of the most interesting deficiency symptoms on palms are caused by boron (B) deficiency. There is very little of this mineral in the soil, but plants use very little.

Boron leaches easily with rain, so a heavy rainfall can temporarily move most of the boron from the root zone. The good news is it's quickly replaced as organic matter decomposes.

Strange kinks, zigs, zags or bends may appear in the leaflets when they open, showing the development stage when they lacked boron. Fronds may partially unfold, look corrugated, or may not unfold at all. Luckily, this is usually a temporary situation, but creates some interesting results.

Read more about palm nutrient deficiencies at <http://edis.ifas.ufl.edu/ep273> or call the Master Gardeners at 752-5384.

Murdock added. "You can get to our venue from anywhere in Lake City in just a couple minutes. We feel like we're situated pretty well because people can get a pretty good deal without having to spend gas and parking."

When Hadwin attends a concert in Dowling Park, she makes an evening of it. She and a group of friends usually eat a nice dinner then head to the show. On their way back, the group likes to stop at the Dairy Queen in Live Oak, she added with a smile.

"It's so good for families," Hadwin said. "We don't have anything that's crude, rude or socially unacceptable. Everything we present is family oriented."

The wide array of concerts includes New Odyssey, three guys with 30 instruments; The King's Brass, professional musicians leading the audience members in praise and worship; the Tamburitans, an ensemble of young folk artists preserving the music, song and dance of Eastern Europe.

On April 25, 2014, the Orlando Philharmonic Orchestra concludes the season with a "spectacular concert" at the FGC Performing Arts Center, the Community Concert Series website states. Murdock calls the concert the crown jewel of the season, acquired through a grant provided by the Florida Department of State Division of Cultural Affairs Arts on Tour program.

"We insist that [the music selection] has good musicality, that it's entertaining and that it's affordable," Murdock said. "I'm excited this year about the wide variety that there is. ... This season's lineup is an eclectic mix of genres, but always includes one or more classical artists."

Memberships (or tickets) can be purchased online at the Community Concert Series website communityconcerts.info or at the Lake City-Columbia County Chamber of Commerce (386-752-3690), Duval Cottage Antiques (386-365-4932) or Secondhand Rose (386-466-4385).

DEAR ABBY

Wife wants her husband to show her some sugar

Abigail Van Buren
www.dearabby.com

DEAR ABBY: My husband, "Ray," and I have been together for eight years, married for one. He is a great husband who works hard, is responsible, healthy, and he does half the household chores. He also tries to stay in great shape. We have a lot in common. My only problem is how Ray shows his love for me.

Ray says he expresses his love by doing what needs to be done - repairs, yard work, grocery shopping, etc. I appreciate it, but it doesn't feel like love to me. I'd like him to buy me flowers, send me handwritten notes, take me to romantic candlelit dinners, etc. I reciprocate by giving him back rubs, baking him his favorite pie and buying him small gifts.

How can I get my husband to understand that it would be good for our marriage to give each other these "extra" acts of sweetness? - DEMONSTRATING LOVE IN WASHINGTON, D.C.

DEAR DEMONSTRATING LOVE: You can't dictate how someone "should" express love. If the gestures you're looking for don't come naturally, it really is defeating the purpose to demand it. Many women would kill to have a husband who demonstrated his love by doing all the things your husband does.

Unless Ray has suddenly changed since your wedding, this is the person he was all during your seven-year courtship. The chances of him changing to any great degree are slim, so try to accept him the way he is, and you'll both be happier.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are in our early 30s and both have full-time jobs. Because of our busy work schedules and a general lack of desire to be parents, we have decided not to have children. We have nothing against kids, but we feel it isn't the best fit for our lifestyle.

The problem is my mother. She has a small farm I was always told I would one day inherit and move back to. My degree is in agriculture, and my husband and I have been saving for this for some time. Mom now says unless we have a child to pass the farm onto, we can't have it.

I am devastated about not being able to fulfill our dream and the pressure of my mother trying to force parenthood on us. I refuse to cave into her demand, but I'm not sure how to handle myself around her. Should I cut off contact until she stops badgering me? Any advice? - CORNERED IN OHIO

DEAR CORNERED: People who don't want to be parents usually don't make very good ones - and to bring a child into the world in order to get your hands on your mother's farm would be unfair to the child.

I see no reason to cut off your mother. When she raises this subject again, tell her that even if you had a baby "to pass the farm onto," there is no guarantee the child would WANT it. In the meantime, continue saving your money for a farm of your own - no strings attached.

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.
