Christian group refuses food, citing USDA rules

JASON MATTHEW WALKER/Lake City Reporter

However, local charity may not have violated agency ban on proselytizing

Federal officials insist it was a misunderstanding; group claims directive was clear.

A local Christian group says it broke ties with the United States Department of Agriculture after the federal agency told them they would have to remove references to religion during food distribution and stop offering to pray with people coming to them for aid.

However, USDA officials dispute that account, saying they never told the Christian Service Center to remove religious images or signs. In addition, USDA said, the charity's long-standing practice of praying with those seeking help doesn't violate federal rules either.

The Christian Service Center has served low-income Columbia County residents for 31 years but recently declined to sign an annual contract for USDA commodities in 2013.

At the center of the dispute is whether Christian Service Center personnel are following federal guidelines for food disbursement.

Federal guidelines say organizations may not engage in inherently religious activities, such as worship, religious instruction, or proselytization, as part of the programs or services supported with direct USDA assistance. These activities must be offered separately, in time or location, from the programs or services supported with direct assistance from USDA and participation must be voluntary, according to USDA rules.

"We share Christ with everyone who comes into the center regardless of what their request is," said Kay Daly, Christian Service Center executive director. "If they do not wish to hear about it, then we skip it and pray with them and go ahead and take care of their need."

Daly said that is normal practice at Christian Service Center.

USDA officials said Tuesday that would only be a problem if participation were mandatory, which CSC says it is not.

"It's a not a violation as long as it's not a requirement to receive the food," said Erin Gillespie, Florida Department of Agriculture

Coach is fired for nude photos

Lee Trawick had led CHS baseball squad for less than 3 weeks.

Columbia High School baseball coach Lee Trawick was fired Tuesday after photographs surfaced on the internet of him as a nude model.

Trawick

Trawick, who was hired as the school's baseball coach Aug. 22, also served as a paraprofessional in the district. He was fired from both positions.

Terry Huddleston, Columbia County School system superintendent, said he became aware of the photographs early last week and discussed them with Columbia High School principal Todd Widergren.

Huddleston said assistant superintendent Lex Carswell immediately discussed the issue with Widergren once the photos were discovered.

"Then we did some research of our own, the issue being that these photos were from several years ago — I'm unclear, I've heard 10 years ago," Huddleston said. "Certainly it was concern-

Obama makes his case on Syria

By DAVID ESPO and JULIE PACE
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama said in a nationally televised address Tuesday night that recent diplomatic steps offer "the potential to remove the threat of chemical weapons" inside Syria without the use of force, but he also insisted the U.S. military will keep the pressure on President Bashar Assad "and be ready to respond" if other measures fail.

Obama

Speaking from the East Room of the White House, Obama said he had asked congressional leaders to postpone a vote on legislation he has been seeking to authorize the use of military force against Syria.

Acknowledging the weariness the nation feels after a decade of war in Iraq and Afghanistan, Obama said, "America is not the world's policeman."

And yet, he added, "When with modest effort and risk we can stop children from being gassed to death and thereby make our own children safer over the long run, I believe we

Ebert's hometown raising money for statue

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. Organizers in Roger Ebert's hometown announced plans Tuesday to try to raise $125,000 to build a life-size bronze statue of the late famed film critic.

The statue would go in front of Champaign's Virginia Theatre, which has hosted the Ebertfest film festival for 15 years. Ebert, a Pulitzer Prize-winning movie reviewer and television personality, grew up in neighboring Urbana and attended the University of Illinois in Urbana-Champaign.

The sculpture will show Ebert sitting in the middle of three movie theater chairs giving his signature "thumbs up." Artist Rick Harney of Bloomington will create the sculpture. Ebert's widow, Chaz Ebert, selected the composition and organizers said she will work with Harney on the design.

"The sculpture will be a permanent memorial which will honor Ebert for both his career and his dedication to his roots," said a statement announcing the fundraising campaign. "It will also honor him for his determination to press forward with Ebertfest in the face of huge medical challenges."

Organizers hope to have the sculpture ready to unveil and dedicate at next year's Ebertfest in April.

Ebert died in April in Chicago after a yearslong battle with cancer. He was 70.

iPad video might help police in case

LAKE MARY — Police investigating a domestic dispute between George Zimmerman and his estranged wife said Tuesday that video from her broken iPad may be crucial evidence in determining whether any charges are filed.

Police believe the mobile device captured video of Monday's dispute at the Lake Mary house where Zimmerman was living, but the former neighborhood watch volunteer smashed it to pieces and it needs to be examined in a crime lab. Without the video or some other piece of independent evidence, legal experts said it will be hard to build a case because Shellie Zimmerman changed her story about her husband threatening her with a gun and decided not to press charges.

Sentencing delayed for ex-candidate

MIAMI — Sentencing has been delayed another three months for a failed South Florida congressional candidate in a campaign finance fraud case with ties to former Rep. David Rivera.

A federal judge on Tuesday set a new Dec. 30 sentencing date for Justin Lamar Sternad. He had been scheduled for sentencing Sept. 23 after pleading guilty to several campaign finance law violations, including accepting illegal contributions and filing false reports.

Papers filed by Sternad's lawyer said he needs more time to provide information to prosecutors who are continuing to investigate the case. Sternad seeks a lesser prison sentence for cooperating. The maximum is 15 years in

Dr. Shiping Bao relieved of duty

ORLANDO — The medical examiner that performed Trayvon Martin's autopsy and offered conflicting testimony at George Zimmerman's murder trial has been relieved of his position.

According to a letter released by Volusia County on Tuesday, Shiping Bao was fired from his position as an associate medical examiner last week. Spokesman Dave Byron declined to give a reason, citing county standard personnel practices.

In the Aug. 23 letter, Bao was granted 30 days to find employment at another office, and he declined to resign at the end of that period. An attorney Bao has retained didn't immediately return a message.

During Zimmerman's trial Bao changed his original opinion about how long Martin lived after being shot.

USDA: Local charity says federal agency infringed on religious practices and Consumer Services press secretary. "They would not be in violation of USDA requirements as long as it was not a condition to receive the food."

"We have more than 1,033 faith-based distributors that use this program and there is not any problem with any of the rest," Gillespie continued. "We tell them that pictures would never have to be removed. You just can't make whatever activities you are providing a condition of getting the food."

The Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services receives the funding from USDA and follows USDA rules. The Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services contracts with major food distributors such as Second Harvest to provide the food to food banks across the state.

Gillespie said there is a chance that what she termed a misunderstanding could be resolved.

"We have reached out to them (Christian Service Center) to provide additional assistance if they are still interested," she said, noting the attempt was made Tuesday afternoon by telephone.

CSC officials could not be reached late Tuesday for comment.

However, earlier Tuesday Daly said she had been told otherwise by a USDA inspector.

"The representative from the USDA, Department of Agriculture for Florida, informed us that they were going to enforce a policy that they had that said we could no longer pray with our people if they were going to receive USDA food and that we needed to remove objects in our lobby where someone is coming for USDA food would pass by and see," Daly said.

Suzanne Edwards, executive director of Catholic Charities, said locally there are two other agencies that provide USDA commodities within one mile of Christian Service Center — one is a church and is the other is faith-based.

The community does not have to worry that the food is going elsewhere. "It's staying right in the community," Edwards said.

She said the rules have always been the same.

"It's clearly been a standard and guideline from USDA, nothing has changed that there's a separation of church and state and there are certain guidelines that are given by USDA when an agency signs a contract they must abide by those rules," Edwards said. "Every agency, there are 1,500 agencies in Florida that distribute USDA food and 1,033 are churches. They all have the same guidelines and we're all held to abide by that."

Daly said 30-40 percent of the Christian Service Center's food pantry came from the USDA.

She said local churches who support the Christian Service Center on a regular basis, have been asked to conduct food drives for the agency on a normal regular basis, instead of just once a year, in order to help make up the difference.

"Some have done food drives by the quarter and some have put out big buckets in the front of their church so people could bring every a canned good," Daly said. "Some folks have decided when they shop, they shop two. They shop for their family and then they'll buy an extra item of whatever it is and bring it to us."

Randy Cox, president of the CSC board of directors and a volunteer at the center, said food donations are on the rise.

"The food donations have increased and we have a lot of support within the community," he said. "We have some businesses say, 'We'd like to do a food drive for you'. A lot of the donors are new donors, that haven't donated before."

Daly said the contract became an issue in November when she was discussing terms of the agreement with Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services program inspectors.

"They said we could no longer pray with our people if they were going to receive USDA food," she said. "They said we needed to remove objects in our lobby where someone who is coming for USDA food would pass by and see."

However government officials said the rules governing the program don't mandate that religious images or objects be removed.

"There is not a policy that says you have to remove religious pictures," Gillespie said. "There is definitely a misunderstanding somewhere. That's not a policy. The state of Florida does not set policy, the federal government sets policy, and there is no policy that calls for removing religious pictures from any location."

Bruce Ganger, Second Harvest North Florida executive director, which contracts with USDA for food distribution, said the inspector that visited Christian Service Center, performs that same service for 100 organizations that distribute this food across the 17 counties of North Florida that he's responsible for.

"Most of them, by far, are faith-based organizations and we've never had any issues with any of the inspections or rules interpretations," Ganger said. "I think what has happened here is somebody who misinterpreted and misunderstood and instead of clarifying, she made a decision based on that. That would be my guess, but again I wasn't there and I wasn't a part of the conversation so I don't know for sure."

The Christian Service Center's board of directors voted unanimously to break ties with USDA and "trust God to take care of us," Daly said.

"We are going to continue to pray with people who come here for help, we are going to share the gospel with them and we are going to give them Bibles if they want it," Daly said.

"We are a mission to the people in the community and we serve Christ," Cox added. "We felt like prayer, giving out Bibles and our signage is very important and it is our mission. The board discussed it and it was a unanimous vote by the board ... that we would not sign the USDA contract. Thanks, but no thanks."

ing to us."

According to Widgren, Trawick had formerly worked as an actor and model.

"I found out about the picture early last week, did some research and talked to Huddleston and Carswell," Widgren said. "I came to the conclusion after a lot of back and forth discussion that this would be in the best interest of our student athletes."

Huddleston said Widgren spent a great deal of time time considering the matter over the weekend and the decision to fire Trawick was made Tuesday.

"We're concerned that we've got to have good role models for our children," Huddleston said. "Our baseball team has struggled the last two or three years with coaches but the bottom line is we just have to always uphold the situation of having good role models for our children. Unfortunately, people may do things in the past, but it may have an impact on us when we're dealing with children. That has to stay first and foremost in our mind."

School board member Stephanie Finnell said she never saw Trawick's photos and never deemed them "art" — as some, she said, have maintained.

"Nor was my husband part of Mr. Trawick's hiring process," she said in reference to another rumor. "My priority is our children, and I'll continue to be an advocate for our children, parents, teachers and staff."

Huddleston said he and Widgren are committed to helping the baseball team find a coach, as is the school board.

In the meantime, Trawick's dismissal might spur creation of a new school board policy.

Huddleston noted many companies now do a Google, YouTube and FaceBook search and those checks will be implemented on school board employment applications.

"I've been reading that literature and never had a reason to (use it), but I'm going to direct Frank Moore (district director of human resources) to include in our paper that a principal sends in three boxes: Did you Google, check YouTube and check FaceBook," he said. "It's becoming standard practice across the United States it's just something else that we're going to add because this is a post employment issue. Mr. Widgren, nor the selection committee, knew these facts prior to Trawick's selection."

Huddleston said he doesn't believe Trawick's actions were a violation of the law or school board policy.

"It just boils down to a post-employment concern and whether we think it's in the best interest of our students," he said.

Attempts to reach Trawick for comment Tuesday were unsuccessful.

ANOTHER VIEW

Bondi's poor timing

There is something unseemly about delaying an execution because it conflicts with a politician's fundraiser.

But that happened last month when the rescheduled execution of convicted murderer Marshall Lee Gore landed precisely on the day Attorney General Pam Bondi plans to launch her re-election campaign in Tampa.

According to News Service of Florida, Bondi's office requested a delay without informing Gov. Rick Scott exactly why it was needed. Scott obliged, and the execution, previously scheduled for yesterday, was moved to Oct. 1.

Last week, a Bondi spokeswoman offered little defense other than to say the fundraiser was scheduled before the state decided to reschedule Gore's execution. But on Monday, as the story gained attention, Bondi issued a statement acknowledging the mistake.

"We absolutely should not have requested that the date of the execution be moved," the statement said. She is absolutely right.

Gore is convicted of killing two women in 1988 in Miami-Dade and Columbia counties. His execution has been delayed twice before amid questions about his sanity, and a relative of one of the victims has spoken out about the difficulty of enduring the interminable delays.

His 25-year stay on death row far exceeds the average 13 years inmates spend awaiting execution in Florida.

We understand the logistics involved in getting powerful political players to change a commitment to a certain date. But according to the News Service story, the decision to set the execution for today was made Aug. 13, weeks before the fundraiser.

But even if the change had been made just days before, the execution should not have been delayed.

The attorney general and governor typically need to be available on days when executions are planned to handle any last-minute legal maneuvering and to give the all-clear.

Scott on Monday dodged questions about the propriety of rescheduling an execution for a fundraiser. He said he didn't know the reason for the delay, just that Bondi had asked for one and that he generally tries to accommodate such requests.

To her credit, Bondi took responsibility Monday. Nobody can argue that she is unfamiliar with a death sentence or that she is unaware of the emotional toll that delays inflict on relatives. As a prosecutor she put two people on death row, and she has participated in eight executions as attorney general.

She was an advocate for the state's Timely Justice Act legislation that Scott signed into law earlier this year in an effort to minimize death penalty delays.

Clearly, this is a blunder that should never have happened.

Needed: Lessons in effective education

The public school system faces daunting challenges: from the federally directed emphasis on standardized tests, from alternative learning choices' drain on resources, from the need to provide services outside the scope of academics. The weight of these and other problems threatens to crumble the once-vaunted system.

What some poor neighborhoods need, for instance, is more on the concept of the historic settlement houses of the late 19th and early 20th centuries than a place just to teach Dick and Jane how to read, write and cipher. Students need an atmosphere that nurtures, both emotionally and physically, to fill the void caused by poverty. Students in poor neighborhoods also are more likely to come from a household with a single parent. Most colleges of education don't prepare aspiring teachers for this kind of environment.

That, in turn, would involve a daily contribution of care far longer and certainly exceedingly more expensive than is the norm in public education today. Money alone isn't the answer. If it were, the District of Columbia public schools - which spent $20,793 per pupil as of 2010-11, one of the highest amounts anywhere - would be the best in the nation instead of being generally rated among the worst.

I've read recent reports of parents protesting conditions in older schools that lack air conditioning and some other amenities, claiming such settings compromise health and also impede learning. They are correct both in their assessment that attending class in a room approaching 100 degrees is debilitating and that what is needed is adjusting the school year to begin later and continue longer.

Dan K. Thomasson

But wait. That would require radically changing all sorts of schedules that have nothing to do with education and might be inconvenient for parents and teachers. It certifies that for all the lip service paid to improving schools, in many instances, it is not really about student welfare at all.

While that may be a bit unfair, it is nevertheless a large portion of the considerations when it comes to making the system run. Take, for instance, the University of Minnesota's research, dating to 1996, showing that high school students do better academically if classes don't start until after 8 a.m. Their attentiveness when they reach the classroom improves dramatically. Have many schools adopted this common-sense approach? No. Why? Because scheduling throughout much of the land is designed for the benefit of working parents, teachers, bus drivers, etc.

Another suggestion that I believe would improve the system and would cost little is teaching boys and girls separately, at least into high school. The two sexes generally learn at different paces and with different processes. Since many schools have two sections in every grade, boys should be taught in one and girls in another with socialization provided at recess, cafeterias, and a variety of non-classroom functions.

But don't hold your breath until this takes place, for a number of reasons including political incorrectness.

One probably could list a host of simple and expedient changes that would improve the system that have nothing to do with the current testing fad and teacher demands. They aren't likely to happen either, as students now filing into sweltering classrooms can attest.

9/11 still lingers in unexpected ways

This year, there are roughly 31.5 million more Americans than there were on this same date in 2001. Children born that year are entering junior high school, their "memory" of the attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, the vivid video of the two hijacked airliners plowing into the twin towers of the World Trade Center.

The site is now occupied by One World Trade Center at a symbolic 1,776 feet tall, New York's tallest skyscraper. Three other towers, although not quite so grand, are planned for the site, which is now largely landscaped and adorned with ornamental pools on the footprints of the original buildings. A museum and memorial are nearing completion. The WTC website, onewtc.com, promises unsurpassed access to public transportation and "world-class shopping."

Sadly, less well-remembered are the hijacked airliner that slammed into the Pentagon in Arlington, Va., and a fourth, believed to have been headed toward the U.S. Capitol, that passengers forced to crash into a Pennsylvania field near Shanksville. No one aboard any of the airliners survived. The hijackers thought their names would live forever; it's doubtful that any Americans stopped at random on the street could name even one of them.

But the aftereffects of that day are with us still; in some ways, they are more influential now than in the immediate aftermath.

Take the revelation this year of the breathtaking extent of the U.S. government's electronic spying on its own citizens. At one time, the loss of privacy and the breach of the implied constitutional right to be secure in one's communications would have been public outrages. Instead, insofar as the public's attitude can be characterized, it was, "We didn't know it for a fact, but we suspected all along that something like this was going on." And then back to business as usual.

President George W. Bush used the 9/11 attacks and misleading intelligence about weapons of mass destruction - long since destroyed - to leverage us into a war with Iraq that dragged on for eight inconclusive years.

Now, President Barack Obama, with clear evidence of the existence and use of poison-gas weapons in Syria, faces an uphill battle to convince a skeptical Congress to approve even a limited strike to discourage Syria from their use.

In addition to the usual partisanship, Obama is battling post-9/11 cynicism about military ventures. According to Politico, 83 Republicans who voted to support Bush's invasion of Iraq are still in Congress. Only 10 have come out in support of a strike on Syria; the rest are leaning against or entertaining serious reservations.

Memories of our 9/11 inevitably fade, but we may well have it in our power to prevent someone else's 9/11, this time caused by nerve gas, not airliners.

Yoga may help blood pressure, pain, more

Dear Pharmacist,

I have neck pain, sciatica and headaches. I've tried prednisone, Celebrex, Ibuprofen, Vicodin, physical therapy, chiropractors, massage, reiki, acupuncture, prayer work, laser and 2 surgeries on my neck. Nothing helps. Please, any ideas? — D.C., San Diego, California

Answer: Assuming your diet is good, I'd try yoga next. I hear you thinking, "I can't even sit without pain, why should I twist myself into a knot?" Because research proves yoga can help certain types of neck and back pain, headaches, migraines, anxiety, high blood pressure and osteoporosis. Since you've tried addictive narcotics, anti-inflammatories, steroids, surgery and whatever else, spending thousands of dollars and suffering endlessly, I think yoga's worth a shot. It has no side effects other than making you feel refreshed, sort of like a human breath mint!

In a 2012 German study, researchers saw how a 9-week yoga program helped participants with chronic neck pain. Yoga has been around for centuries, and there's no harm so long as you don't push your body past its limits, but in your case, I would still get your physician and chiropractor's blessings. And speaking of "blessings" I've never associated a religious connotation with yoga, it's about stretching and breathing. Besides, you'll be the life of the party if you can turn yourself into a human pretzel!

DEAR PHARMACIST

Suzy Cohen
info@dearpharmacist.com

If your hips are tight, it may be the result of inflexibility, and it can subsequently cause your knee joint to become misaligned with the other bones in your leg, causing pain throughout the leg.

Sciatica is a rather common condition in which lower back pain extends into one or both legs, by way of the sciatic nerve. A January 2013 study demonstrated that certain "asanas" or yoga poses relieved symptoms of sciatica including pain, rigidity and walking.

Flexibility helps your posture, and the strength that yoga builds in your bones and muscles may reduce your odds for arthritis. A systematic review was performed earlier this year in New Zealand, evidence showed regular yoga practice might alleviate pain caused by musculoskeletal disorders. What about your bones? Different yoga poses and transitions create mild stress on your bones, which causes the bone to become denser (and stronger!) in order to balance out this stress.

Your mind benefits too. A 2012 study performed in London showed yoga and meditation significantly reduced anxiety and blood pressure and improved mood. That occurs by increasing "happy" serotonin levels, while lowering cortisol, a stress hormone. Choose classes carefully, when I walked into my first yoga class and it was 105 degrees!

It's called "Bikram" yoga, or sometimes "hot yoga." What a nightmare for me, I despise heat. I could not get out of there fast enough. So call in advance and ask about the class you want to take. Classes labeled "restorative" or "yin" are gentle, and cool, also those labeled "Vinyasa" or "Hatha" are also fairly easy, at least for me. Start out slowly and with your doctor's permission since you've had surgeries.

Groups race to hire 'Obamacare' guides

By CARLA K. JOHNSON
AP Medical Writer

CHICAGO — With the program known as "Obamacare" only weeks away from its key launch date, hectic preparations are in motion in communities across the country to deal with one of its major practical challenges: hiring and training a small army of instant experts who can explain the intricacies of health insurance to people who've never had it.

More than 100 nonprofits and related organizations, which specialize in everything from running soup kitchens to organizing farm workers, have been recruited by the federal government to sign up "navigators" to help the 30 million uninsured people who can now gain coverage.

Many of the groups have little expertise in health insurance. And the timeline for training the workers is tight. According to the new health law, people can begin shopping among the new policies on Oct. 1. The enrollment period lasts six months. Coverage begins in January. "I think there's a lot of concern about whether, with all these state requirements, they are going to be ready to go," said Katie Keith, a former research professor at Georgetown University, who has been tracking the health care legislation. "You want people out there educating consumers."

Deploying the guides for the uninsured is one of the first hurdles for the new health system as it transitions from an abstract political debate in Washington to a real-life process in communities. It is one of the steps government officials are concerned about as critics warn that the Affordable Care Act could become a "train wreck."

The guides will be sent to community events with laptops to help people sign up for insurance online. They will work at food banks, shelters, churches and free clinics where the uninsured are likely to be.

The short time available for training raises questions about how prepared the workers will be to answer people's questions about the different policies and government subsidies available. Community groups received the course materials for the 20-hour training only days ago. Many have just begun to post the openings on job boards.

A small scream came from Tara McCollum Plese when she was asked whether her group, Arizona Alliance for Community Health Centers, has hired any of the 45 workers authorized in its federal grant. "Ack! No," she said Thursday. Her group has posted a job description, she said, and is now flooded with inquiries for the positions, which pay about $15 an hour. She's since heard one worker has been hired.

Not one navigator has been hired yet under the $2 million grant obtained by the Ohio Association of Foodbanks. The Illinois Eye Institute, which will help with enrollment in the Chicago area, plans to train a dozen staffers for the task.

The work will be more difficult than what most other temporary employees, such as census workers, do. The navigators must listen to a family's real-world story, assess its income, and figure out eligibility for the Medicaid program, which provides health care for the poor, or for new tax credits, each with its own complicated rules.

If the system works as federal officials hope, more than half of the nation's uninsured, which amount to 15 percent of the population, will get coverage.

In Texas, with the highest percentage of uninsured residents, eight groups are receiving a total of $10.8 million and plan to train more than 150 paid workers and volunteers. Tim McKinney, CEO of United Way of Tarrant County, which got the largest grant, said many people without insurance are looking for information.

In Mississippi, workers will go into rural areas without Internet access to help people with the enrollment and policy-shopping process, which is done online.

"When Oct. 1 rolls around, we're going to be ready to rock 'n' roll," said the Rev. Michael O. Minor of Oak Hill Baptist Church in Hernando, Miss.

In 17 states, navigators have additional hoops to jump through because of new state laws affecting the federal health care law, such as required background checks for the workers.

Republican members of the House Committee on Energy and Commerce have also called on some of the assisting groups to explain how consumers will be protected when they speak with a navigator.

Report: US may face crisis in cancer care

By LAURAN NEERGAARD
AP Medical Writer

WASHINGTON — The U.S. is facing a crisis in how to deliver cancer care, as the baby boomers reach their tumor-prone years and doctors have a hard time keeping up with complex new treatments, government advisers reported Tuesday.

The caution comes even as scientists are learning more than ever about better ways to battle cancer, and developing innovative therapies to target tumors.

And while doctors try to optimize treatment, the Institute of Medicine found "daunting" barriers to achieving high-quality care for all patients. Overcoming those challenges will require changes to the health care system, and savvy consumers.

"We do not want to frighten or scare people who are getting care now," said Dr. Patricia Ganz, a cancer specialist at the University of California, Los Angeles, who chaired the panel.

But too often, decisions about cancer treatments aren't based on good evidence, and patients may not understand their choices and what to expect, the panel found. For example, some studies suggest that two-thirds or more of cancer patients with poor prognoses incorrectly believe the treatments they receive could cure them.

Topping the list of recommendations is finding ways to help patients make more informed decisions, with easy-to-understand information on the pros, cons and costs of different treatments.

"The patient can't be passive," Ganz said. "It's an important partnership that we need."

The risk of cancer increases with age, and older adults account for just over half of the 1.6 million new cases diagnosed each year. By 2030, new diagnoses are expected to reach 2.3 million a year as the population ages. The report warns there may not be enough oncology specialists to care for them.

Perhaps a bigger concern is the growing complexity of care.

Tigers try to remain grounded

CHS looks to remain unbeaten against Buchholz.

By BRANDON FINLEY
bfinley@lakecityreporter.com

Coming off what may have been the biggest regular season win in Columbia High head coach Brian Allen's three-year career with the Tigers, Columbia must fight against a potential letdown this week when Buchholz High visits Lake City at 7:30 p.m. on Friday.

But the good news for the Tigers is they won't be facing a cupcake this week as the Bobcats come in at 2-0 after wins against Eastside and Clay County high schools.

Still, Allen knows that the Tigers must remain focused despite knocking off the state's second-ranked team in 7A.

"The biggest thing when I talked to different people about it is keeping the kids grounded," Allen said. "We have to stay humble through this winning streak, knocking off a good team and winning against another. You have to be eager to do better than the week for. It starts on Monday when we come in here and watch film. We have to go in and see where we made mistakes. We weren't flawless and didn't play a perfect game. That's the biggest thing we're doing as a staff. You hear Nick Saban talk about it all the time about keeping the guys in line and grounded. We know that we may have gone out and beat this team, but we have the ability to go out and be better."

One thing the Tigers have to be better at is avoiding penalties.

Columbia was penalized nine times for 100 yards against Lincoln in their 28-14 win in Tallahassee on Thursday.

"Some of them were stupid penalties," Allen said. "You look back at it and there's a kid giving a Gator chop and that's a foolish penalty. We had some false starts when Roc (Battle) came in to run the wildcat. Even the previous week, three of them were stupid penalties. The (refs) don't see their team in the middle of the Tiger head stomping and we have a late hit on the sideline and it's hard to let up when you're being aggressive. We have to limit the foolishness. You're going to have some here and there, but once you start looking at what type of penalties they are, foolish ones can be corrected and cleaned up."

Allen said it'll be good for the Tigers to get back at it against Buchholz, because he expects the Bobcats to be very well prepared coming into the matchup.

"They watch just as much tape as we do," Allen said. "When the mindset is right to go out and win a championship, that team is the next team in our way, so they're the best team. Whether it's Buchholz, Lincoln or whoever the case may be, these kids understand the next team is the best team, because they're keeping us from our goal."

FOR BETTER OR WORSE

DEAR ABBY

Mom's brief cell phone video has lingering consequences

Abigail Van Buren www.dearabby.com

DEAR ABBY: My 13-year-old son, "Wiley," was playing a game on my cellphone. I stupidly forgot to delete a short video of myself engaged in a sex act with my ex-husband, "Cliff." Wiley didn't confront me or mention it, but given his sudden change in behavior, I'm almost certain he saw it.

The next morning I mentioned it and apologized, hoping we could get past the awkwardness, but Wiley wouldn't admit this is what's bothering him. He acted as if he didn't know what I was talking about. Now he won't talk to me, where a few days before we would laugh, share and trust each other.

I divorced Cliff because he and my son didn't get along, but in the last six months we have been secretly having an affair and we ultimately want to get back together when Wiley is 18. My son doesn't approve of him and he's angry about it.

I'm worried and embarrassed that he saw me doing what I was doing in that few seconds of video, and I don't want to scar him or have him think differently of me. I suspect Wiley's father adds fuel to our son's anger during his weekend visitations. I tried therapy for Wiley

– it didn't help. Do you have any suggestions? – MORTIFIED IN ARIZONA

DEAR MORTIFIED: Because Cliff and Wiley's relationship was so poor the three of you couldn't coexist under one roof, discovering that you are once more intimately involved with your ex must have been traumatic and threatening to Wiley. It might reassure him to know that your seeing Cliff does not mean you will be living together anytime soon.

In the meantime, I recommend that YOU talk with a therapist to help you cope with the changed relationship you now have with your son. It's a shame that Wiley's father has used this incident for his own selfish purposes.

DEAR ABBY: A year and a half ago, I reconnected with "Paul." We were in grade school together and hadn't seen each other for many years. We have been extremely happy and want to spend our remaining years together. Because of our ages (we're both seniors) and separate families and incomes, we feel marriage is not what we'd like to do. But we would like to move in together.

Would it be ridiculous for us to do that without being married? Will the world condemn us? Will our children understand or ostracize us? How do we handle questions about why we have chosen not to marry? – IN LOVE IN LOUISIANA

DEAR IN LOVE: Many older couples do what you are considering because being married would negatively affect their retirement income. If your children like Paul – and his children like you – I doubt you will be ostracized. Most adult children want their parents to be happy.

If you're worried about how the community will react to your living arrangement, consider talking to a clergyman about being "married in the eyes of God." As to questions about why you have chosen not to marry, apart from your family, it is nobody's business and you are not obligated to discuss it.

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

HOROSCOPES

THE LAST WORD Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Taking on too much will cause pressure, undue stress and sudden changes that require additional time and effort. Gauge your time and stick to a routine. Invest in your skills, not in helping someone else get ahead. ★★★★★

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do things differently. Taking a unique approach to an old idea will show off your talent. Someone is likely to be jealous or threatened by you. Offer your support and it will help turn an enemy into an ally. ★★

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Make positive changes in the way you help others. Offer services, time and physical assistance that can be easily documented. Keep any suggestions that may cause emotional disputes to yourself. Diplomacy is essential if you want to have things done your way. ★★

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Don't spend too much energy trying to impress someone who is impossible to please. You'll get far more gratification out of doing things that will help you get ahead or pursuing something you enjoy. Creative projects will lead to greater opportunities. ★★

will take a positive turn. ★★

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your emotions will be stirred up by any impulsive move you make. Acting in haste due to an incident that happens between you and a friend, peer or neighbor will turn out to be in your best interest. Actions count. ★★

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The spotlight will be yours and what you do will make a difference to your reputation. Speak openly and aggressively, and force issues that will put an end to a problem that has made your life difficult. ★★

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Listen, observe and protect what you have worked so hard to accomplish. A change in your money matters will be a relief and enable you to raise your standard of living; however, money in the bank will ease your stress. ★★

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Look over contracts, investments and other personal paperwork that can make a difference to the way you move forward. Don't let emotions stand between you and making a reasonable choice. You must consider every angle and do what's best for you. ★★

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Hanging out with friends and discussing plans for the future will result in incentive and enthusiasm to turn your ideas into reality. Don't let an old issue hurt your chance to follow a dream. Address pending problems and put the past behind you. ★★

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Focus on personal goals and discuss plans with someone you want involved in your life. You will know where you stand and how you can get around any obstacle that stands in your way. Love

Gibson edges out Howard on Sunday

Bruce Gibson (+11) outdueled Don Howard (+10) in a battle of the birdies for first place in Sunday's blitz.

Scott Kishton and Steve Thomas, both at +8, were in third, a point up on Greg Lyons.

Closest to the pin winners were Gibson on No. 5, Charlie Timmons on No. 7, Pete Skantos on No. 15 and Thomas on No. 17.

Chris Lewis cashed in a skin to split the pot with Gibson, Skantos, Thomas and Lyons.

Jonathan Allen (+9) lapped the field for a first-place finish in the Saturday blitz.

Don Combs, Bruce Gibson, Ken Radcliffe and Michael Yacovelli knotted up in second place at +4.

Shayne Edge owned the par 5s with a par, two birdies and an eagle, but settled for a fifth-place tie with Roger Parrish and Bob Randall.

Edge and Radcliffe pocketed two skins apiece. Timmy Rogers, Tom Wade, Robbie Kerby and Allen had one each.

Allen Rose (+6) doubled up on Dennis Crawford and Keith Shaw, both at +3, in the A flight of Wednesday's blitz.

Shelton Keen (+6) did the same to Cory Bannister, John Raulerson and A.J. Lavin, all at +3, in B flight.

Don Howard and Rose scored a nice payoff with the day's only skins.

The pot hole carried over.

The threesome of Carl Ste-Marie, Pete Skantos and Roger Parish rolled in a host of long putts to take the Thursday PM Scramble at 9 under par.

The team of Cory DePratter, Casey Clemons and Bob Wheary were two behind the winners.

COUNTRY CLUB at LAKE CITY

Ed Goff

The pot hole continued to grow.

Only the even holes counted in the LGA "evens" match. Jan Davis (38.5) won with a half-stroke edge over Carol Felton.

Suzi Davis posted a net 40.5 and Natalie Bryant a 41.5 to finish in the money.

Felton scored the only chip-in on No. 3.

Both Good Old Boys matches ended in two-point victories.

Match one was a three-way affair that went to the team of Dennis Hendershot, Merle Hibbard, Jim Stevens and Dan Stephens by a 4-2 count over the team of Ed Snow, Jim Bell, Dave Cannon and Paul Davis.

The foursome of Rhea Hart, Eli Witt, Howard Whitaker and Carl Wilson also put two points on the board.

Scoring picked up in match two, where the team of Marc Risk, Rob Brown, Tony Branch Bobby Simmons and Bill Rogers bested the fivesome of Stan Woolbert, Noidrie Moses, Joe Persons, Larry Ward and Don Christensen by 6-4.

Risk (37-71-78) stayed in the medalist seat by one stroke over Bell (37-42-79).

Woolbert's 37 was two strokes better than Persons, Simmons, Witt and Hart in a close contest on the front nine. Brown's 39 was unchallenged on the back.

The Club Championship is Saturday and Sunday. Trophies and prizes will be awarded in Men's and Senior divisions. Tee times begin at 8 a.m. each day.

The MGA tournament is Sept. 28.

GOLF REPORTS

Worst Team trophy winners at the 3rd Annual Tough Enough to Wear Pink Golf Tournament are Jim Faircloth, Scott Strickland, Jeremiah McCall and Trey Dickson.

Tough Enough to Wear Pink tournament draws 28 teams

Columbia County Resources' 3rd Annual Tough Enough to Wear Pink Golf Tournament was contested Saturday.

The course was wet and long after receiving over three inches of rain the night before, but that didn't deter the 28 teams from supporting a worthy cause — raising money for breast cancer awareness donated to the Tough Enough to Wear Pink Crisis Relief Fund.

The winner of the four-person scramble tournament was the C.A. Boone team of Greg Lyons, Cory DePratter, Nick Tuttle and Jason Self with a 55.

Second place was the Cancer Center of Lake City team of Donny Thomas, Al Alvarado, Richard Gaines and Andy Peterson at 56.
