LAFAYETTE COUNTY — Bill and Lynda Ward dropped a relative off at her job in Lake City Wednesday morning before driving to their Lafayette County river home, according to friends. They haven't been seen since.

The Lafayette County Sheriff's Office searched into the night to uncover what happened to the couple. Both in their 60s, they usually tell friends when they leave their home in Lake City to drive to their other residence on the Suwannee River.

But neighbor Buddy Clayton said he had no idea they were

Olustee Expo a prelude to the big one

Event should whet appetites for 150th anniversary in '14.

By STEVEN RICHMOND

Civil War and Florida history buffs alike will be meeting at Olustee Battlefield this weekend to participate in the Olustee Civil War Expo.

Visitors attending the expo will have the opportunity to learn about the trials and tribulations of soldiers' lives during the Civil War and February 1864 Battle of Olustee.

"I enjoy the exhibits and collections they have," local resident and Blue-Grey Army official Faye Warren said. "It isn't one of the usual Saturday morning or afternoon events one would attend."

The expo will feature authentic re-enactments, military drills, music, storytelling, exhibits, period artisans and roleplaying merchants as part of the experience. There will be demonstrations of period weapons and fighting tactics throughout the day.

"[Olustee] has a great deal of history for this community," Warren said. "If you're a southerner like me, it's your heritage to learn more about your history and to know your ancestors may have fought in the war. It's important for people to understand why the battle was fought and what life was like for people during

Falling for Education

Westside Elementary school is hosting Falling for Education, a fundraising festival supporting the Westside Parent Teacher Organization and students of the school.

Bounce houses, a rock wall, a dunking booth, food and entertainment will be available.

Children ages 3-12 may purchase $10 wristbands at the door, allowing for unlimited booth and entertainment participation. An additional $5 will get attendees a meal deal consisting of a hamburger, hot dog or sausage dog combined with a bag of chips and soft drink. Parents are admitted free. The event is open to all members of the community.

Test-drive fundraiser

Columbia High School supports can help raise funds for the organization of their choice this Saturday at Ford's Drive One 4 UR School. The event lasts from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. at CHS. For every verified test drive, Ford Motor Company donates $20 to the school. Drivers can specify what organization they wish to contribute to, such as band, football or cheerleading. Every driver must be over 18 and provide proof of a valid driver's license and insurance card. Next month, on Oct. 12, the event Lincoln Driven to Give will support Fort White High School.

Sept. 29

Glad Tidings

Glad Tidings Assembly of God, 1571 E. Duval Street (Highway 90 East) Lake City, invites you to attend Homecoming and our one-year anniversary at this location beginning at 10:30 a.m. Sept. 29 with Pastor Lowell Van Vleck sharing the miraculous works of God throughout this year.

There will be special music and dinner.

There will be no evening service.

New program aims to curb truancy

Classroom attendance has direct tie to salaries, incarceration rates.

By AMANDA WILLIAMSON
awilliamson@lakecityreporter.com

To form a prediction about a child's adult life, one simply has to look at their early elementary school attendance habits. Students who regularly attend school from kindergarten until third grade are less likely to be high school dropouts, according to research by Columbia County School District Director of Truancy Keith Hatcher. Students who graduate from high school have higher incomes, higher self-esteem and lower incarceration rates than their counterparts who drop out.

In fact, according to a study conducted by Northeastern University in Boston, dropouts between the ages of 16 and 24 have incarceration rates 63 times higher than those among college graduates.

Starting this year, the Every Child, Every Seat, Every Day program hopes to educate parents and students about the consequences of not attending school regularly. Hatcher created the program to inspire students using both the positive impacts of attendance and the negative impacts of truancy.

2 buses collide at CHS

From staff reports

A school bus parked at Columbia High School Thursday afternoon "lunged forward" and struck the back of another bus, according to a Florida Highway Patrol report.

No one was hurt, FHP said. Forty-five passengers were aboard both buses.

Isiah Hill, 68, of Lake City was cited for careless driving, the report said.

The buses were waiting to depart SE Fighting Tiger drive at 3:20 p.m. when Hill's 1990 International struck the rear of a 2006 Thomas bus driven by Brittany C. Bryant, 24, also of Lake City, according to FHP.

Damage to both buses totaled $4,000, FHP said.

Howard makes believable film with 'Rush'

Ron Howard admits he was no racing aficionado when he set out to make the Formula One thriller "Rush," chronicling the tense 1976 world championship battle between playboy James Hunt and calculating Niki Lauda.

Racing movies don't have the best track record, after all. The driving has usually been unrealistic and too many directors cheated on details that insiders found offensive.

"I love sports, too, and I don't know much about Formula One, but I just kept thinking, 'If somebody made a baseball movie and if they cut to the center fielder and the center fielder was standing there with a catcher's glove on, I'd feel disrespected,'" Howard said. "I didn't want those kinds of gaffes. When talking to people who really love motorsports, they'd talk about movies that weren't documentaries and they'd cite mistakes, the kind of mistakes that would really just take them out of the movie."

"While you can never be 1,000 percent authentic, it was important that we get it right."

Howard was understandably nervous when he screened "Rush" for the F1 community, with Lauda himself in the audience, during the German Grand Prix weekend in July.

Tamblyn appears on season 11 of CBS' 'Men'

NEW YORK — Amber Tamblyn plays Charlie Harper's previously unknown daughter, Jenny, on the 11th season of CBS' "Two and a Half Men," premiering Thursday night.

Jenny and her father (who was played by Charlie Sheen) have something in common: a love for women. She's a hard-partying bisexual.

Brandt 'felt sick' shooting 'Breaking Bad'

NEW YORK — Betsy Brandt said the intensity of the final "Breaking Bad" episodes "physically affected" her.

"There were days shooting — these last eight episodes especially — I just felt sick. My chest would get all tight and I just felt awful," she said.

Brandt plays Marie Schrader, sister-in-law to chemistry teacher turned drug lord Walter White (Bryan Cranston) on the show, which airs its series finale this Sunday on AMC at 9 p.m. EDT. In an interview Wednesday she said she did a lot of crying, too.

Appeal denied for murderer Gore

MIAMI — A Miami federal judge has denied the latest appeal by convicted killer Marshall Lee Gore, whose execution by lethal injection is set for next week.

U.S. District Judge Donald Graham ruled Thursday against Gore, who has had three previous execution dates delayed this year. Graham agreed the Florida Supreme Court was reasonable in finding that Gore's claims of insanity are unfounded.

Gore was sentenced to death for the 1988 killing of exotic dancer Robyn Novick, whose body was found in rural Miami-Dade County. He was also sentenced to death for the separate slaying earlier in 1988 of Susan Roark in Columbia County and was convicted of attempting to kill yet another woman.

El Nuevo chief to become editor

NAPLES — Award-winning investigative reporter and El Nuevo Herald executive editor Manny Garcia has been named editor of the Naples Daily News.

Garcia replaces Phil Lewis, who retired after 16 years in July. Garcia announced his resignation from El Nuevo Herald Wednesday. He will start his new post Oct. 21.

During his tenure as editor of El Nuevo Herald, the paper was named a finalist for a Pulitzer Prize in 2010, the first Spanish-language media outlet to achieve such recognition.

Westside has big Saturday planned

By STEVEN RICHMOND
srichmond@lakecityreporter.com

Parents and teachers of Westside Elementary School invite community families to join in the Falling for Education festival fundraiser on Saturday.

The objective of Falling for Education is to raise money for the Parent-Teacher Organization events and additional school supplies for students, according to kindergarten teacher Laurie Benefield.

"We're trying to do something different so parents and students don't have to go out to beg for money," she said. "This is our only fundraiser to earn money for the school this year."

Located at Westside Elementary, the festival will feature six bounce houses, a rock wall, dunking booth and various other booths set up by local government and community organizations.

Notable dunkables include Superintendent Terry Huddleston, Assistant Superintendent Lex Carswell, school board chairman Steve Nelson and various staff from Westside.

Last year's festival accumulated over $10,000 in donations that went toward the purchase of new computers and different PTO events, Benefield said. She hopes the event will raise $12-13,000 this year.

"We're trying to offer something fun for the children," Benefield said. "It's a family event and we always want to have family events the whole family can enjoy. Every school in the county has a PTO that raises money, and this is how we've chosen to raise our money."

Children ages 3-12 may purchase $10 wristbands at the door, allowing for unlimited booth and entertainment participation. An additional $5 will get attendees a meal deal consisting of a hamburger, hot dog or sausage dog combined with a bag of chips and soft drink. Parents are admitted free.

The event is open to all members of the community.

truancy rate by 3 percent this year," Hatcher said. "I wanted something that had never been done before. I wanted something that would help student attendance."

The program also hopes to increase attendance rates and the percentage of students referred to the Truancy Intervention Partnership Program (TIPP) and decrease the number of students referred to Truancy Court.

"Ninety percent of students in delinquency court have a bad attendance record," Third Circuit Judge Julian Collins. "There's an incredible correlation between kids in delinquency court and low attendance."

Assistant Third Circuit State Attorney Wendy Kwon believes the program has been effective, and needs to continue to educate parents on the importance of getting their children to school.

"The best way to deter children from a life of crime is an education," she said.

Already the program has a banner at every school, advising parents: "When your child misses school, he/she misses out." Elementary schools and secondary schools will compete throughout the school year in several areas, including best attendance rate, lowest truancy rate, greatest increase in attendance and greatest decrease in truancy. The winning schools will be awarded $250 to spend at the discretion of leadership and a permanent plaque honoring its achievement. Students who achieve perfect attendance and students who increase attendance by 10 perfect points over the current school year will be eligible for a grand prize drawing of a flat screen television, two for each group.

Within Columbia County, the attendance rate sits at 96 percent and the truancy rate at 18 percent. Truancy rate calculates the percent of students who miss 21 days or more, including tardies.

The lowest attendance rates — and therefore the highest truancy rate — occurs at Challenge Learning Center off Labonte Lane. It has a truancy rate of 70 percent. Westside Elementary, the lowest truancy rate in the county, has a 5 percent rate.

Hatcher kicked off his Every Child, Every Seat, Every Day program this month, which also happens to be the first-ever Attendance Awareness Month. The month works as a national and state initiative to promote better policy and practice for school attendance. Its motto: Advancing Student Success by Reducing Chronic Absence.

The district tries to reduce chronic absence, a term they define as students who miss 10 percent or more of their schooldays. Chronic absence includes tardies, excused absences and unexcused absences.

"Even if the absence is excused, the students are still missing valuable instruction time," Hatcher said.

For every day of school missed, it takes two or more days for a student to catch up, states information released by the CCSD.

Hatcher is also the director of adult education and charter schools.

Before the service Luter, accompanied by First Baptist Church pastor Robert Bass, was introduced to several congregation members and took time to introduce himself to many people entering the sanctuary for the service before delivering his sermon on encouragement.

"I understand that a lot of us as believers go through a lot of things in life and some of those things can get the best of us," he said. "So, I shared words of encouragement tonight to those in the sanctuary or those who may see the sermon at another time, to let them know that no matter how difficult times maybe in life that if God brings you to it, He'll bring you through it."

at the river home until he received a call from Lynda Ward's sister, who told him she had called the sheriff's office.

Currently, the Columbia County Dive and Recovery Team is assisting LCSO in searching the Suwannee River for clues to their whereabouts, according to CCSO public information officer Mark Pentolino. Clayton said the Wards' floating wooden dock has a broken board and signs of scuff marks.

"Police stayed here real late," Clayton said. "We left about 1 a.m., and they were still here — a pile of them."

But, so far there is only speculation about what might have happened. Clayton believes the Wards arrived at their river home, left their keys, cell phones and purse in their Chevrolet truck to walk down to the riverside to look at the water. They hadn't even unlocked their home.

The quick-moving water of the Suwannee River has risen recently with all the rain, and may have trapped logs along the edge of the dock.

Clayton said the couple may have been attempting to "get the logs unjammed." He added that Bill Ward could swim, but he did not say whether Lynda Ward could.

Lynda and Bill Ward visited their Lafayette County river house on a weekly basis, a 35-minute drive from their main residence in Lake City. They've had their house for about 20 years, but the dock was in good shape, Clayton said. He said his home and the Wards' neighboring home were isolated, with no surrounding houses.

Clayton has known the Wards for about 18 years. He said they were both friends to him and his wife, calling them good people who would "help you do anything."

In a media release, Lafayette County Sheriff Brian Lamb said LCSO received a call at 5:09 p.m. Wednesday notifying them the Wards — Bill, 69, and Lynda, 60 — were missing.

Lamb said in addition to CCSO, five other law enforcement agencies are assisting in the investigation: the sheriff's offices of Suwannee, Duval, Gilchrist, and Franklin counties, and Mayo Correctional Institution.

Lamb asked that anyone with information on the couple's possible whereabouts call LCSO at (386) 294-1301.

ANOTHER VIEW

Iran's change of tone

Naturally, the American focus on Iranian president Hassan Rouhani's speech to the United Nations this week was on his assurances that his nation's hugely controversial nuclear development program has nothing but peaceful purposes.

The problem, of course, is that Iranian leaders have been saying that for years, and international nuclear experts — not to mention the White House through several presidencies — have never been convinced. Thus, there are severe economic sanctions that are crippling Iran's economy, and that fact may have induced the change in tone in Tehran.

Rouhani's bellicose predecessor, Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, was so antagonistic to Iran's critics that, no matter how loudly he protested to the contrary, he only increased the global suspicions that Iran was working diligently to arm itself with nuclear weapons and thus further destabilize the vulnerable political and military situation in the Middle East.

But Rouhani's U.N. appearance had more to it than the question of Iran's nuclear intentions, as important as that question may be. Although there are many who may not yet be ready to believe he truly is a moderate leader, he did take steps to suggest he is a fresh voice with a message of optimism.

He was even accompanied to New York by Iran's only Jewish member of parliament, Siamak Moreh Sedgh. And in a significant interview after his speech, Rouhani made it clear that his views of the Holocaust are totally the opposite of those expressed by Ahmadinejad, who often called it a myth propagated by the West.

"I've said before that I am not a historian, and when it comes to speaking of the dimensions of the Holocaust, it is the historians that should reflect," Rouhani told CNN's Christiane Amanpour. "But, in general, I can tell you that any crime that happens in history against humanity, including the crime the Nazis created towards the Jews as well as non-Jews, is reprehensible and condemnable. Whatever criminality they committed against the Jews, we condemn."

But if those sentiments were designed to mollify Iran's foes, they did little to diminish the hostility toward Iran from Israel's prime minister, Benjamin Netanyahu, who, referring to Rouhani's statement about Iran's nuclear intentions, called it "a cynical public relations ploy."

In fact, the Israeli delegation walked out during Rouhani's speech, and Israel's minister for strategic and intelligence affairs, Yuval Steinitz, told The Associated Press that the Iranian leader's rhetoric was a "game of deception."

But after so many years of Ahmadinejad's belligerence, even a change in tone can be considered progress.

The United States should encourage Rouhani to continue his moderate approach, while always remembering Iran's actions, including its support of terrorists and Syria, are what matter.

Don't let the bad guys win!

No matter how successful, popular, outgoing, involved, or connected with others you are, you'll still find people who just don't like you! Why? Maybe they want to feel superior to you, judge you, are jealous of you, just don't like your looks, or maybe they're just angry people with their own problems. Even the most friendly, wonderful people, movie and television stars, sports heroes — even the president — have lots of people who dislike them. In fact, it's been said that the more well-known you are, the more enemies you have!

What's the problem with that? When someone doesn't like you, they may want you to feel bad, they may find fault with what you do, they may want to hurt you, or may want you to fail. They may throw criticism at you, or throw obstacles in your way. They may want to argue with you, prove you wrong, or just to hurt you.

You probably want to know, "What can I do?" Some folks respond by confronting their tormentor. You may feel like arguing, or fighting back. Some resort to gossiping about them to others, or expressing anger. Some just try to avoid the enemy, or just develop a dislike or hatred, and hold onto a long-term resentment.

Robert Denny
Bob.Denny8@gmail.com

Now, what's wrong with that? When we lower ourselves to their level, we can bring out the worst in both of us. We can be left feeling negative emotions like anger, frustration, and loss of our energy and self-esteem. We may feel grief, sadness, or even guilt over our poor handling of the situation.

As it turns out, when we hold onto bad feelings, resentments, or a grudge, it actually hurts us more than it hurts them! It can stand in the way of our own well-being and happiness. What's a better way?

Probably the best way to deal with your enemy is to find a way to do something positive, and have good feelings about action you decide to take. Even the Bible says, "Love your enemies." Rather than letting yourself become a part of their negativity, choose happiness, success, and enjoyment of your life. Focus on the "doughnut," not upon the "hole." Take time to decide what you want to have in your own life that will bring you the joy, success, personal growth, self-fulfillment, and happiness that you deserve. Your life will end up being the better for it. And strangely enough, they may stop playing their hateful games of finding ways to hurt you. If attacking your doesn't work for them, they are likely to give up that strategy, and move on to find better and more positive ways to run their own lives. It can be a win/win situation for both parties.

Don't keep holding onto resentments. Life is too short!

Don't fear smartphones

Boy, give young people a new way to interact socially, and it's doom and gloom from the rest of us.

As writer Tom Standage reminded us earlier this year in The New York Times, in the 17th century, for instance, many pillars of society complained about a novelty, the coffeehouse, where people were beginning to gather and exchange ideas with folks outside of their typical social spheres. There was special worry that this would corrupt the young. A lawyer in Cambridge, England, echoed many of his peers when he bemoaned this new social outlet and the "vast Loss of Time grown out of a pure Novelty. For who can apply close to a Subject with his Head full of the Din of a Coffee-house?"

Flash forward to a recent visit by comedian Louis C.K. to late-night host Conan O'Brien, where C.K. pronounced himself unwilling to let his kids have cellphones, a stand that has won huge applause across every kind of media. Cellphones are isolating, he believes, "toxic," they've created a situation where kids in particular don't learn to interact as they should with others, and on it goes.

Yep. Sounds familiar. In any event, you know that guilty parents everywhere said another "uh-oh." And you can almost hear the self-satisfied ones saying, "We don't allow our kids cellphones, either! We're special!"

By the way, I'm all for reasonable restrictions, whether it be age or just prying the devices out of clutched hands during meal and family times and at bedtime.

But mostly, I think smartphones

Betsy Hart

are like any other tool. They can be used for good — or not. And guess what? If American young people are becoming more isolated, it's not because of some complicated device they walk around with.

Anyway, it's no surprise to me that a study commissioned by the Pew Internet & American Life Project, part of the respected Pew Research Center in Washington, revealed some interesting things about a nation of so-called isolated Internet and cellphone users.

The study, released in 2011, showed that when it comes to social-networking sites, with Facebook being the largest, "Social-networking sites are increasingly used to keep up with close social ties"; "Facebook users are much more politically engaged than most people"; "Facebook users get more social support than other people"; and they have more close relationships and are even more generally trusting of people than are others who are demographically similar but not on Facebook.

And a study released by the same Pew unit in 2009 revealed that, on many key indexes, active Internet users, cellphone users and bloggers are more likely to have larger social networks of people they consider their "closest and most significant confidants" and more likely to be involved in local voluntary organizations and to have more racially diverse social networks than are demographically similar nonusers.

The lead researcher of that 2009 study, Dr. Keith N. Hampton of the University of Pennsylvania, said it was "a mistake to believe that Internet use and mobile phones plunge people into a spiral of isolation."

Look, we've heard tragic stories of suicides, idiotic stories of kids (and adults) sexting or otherwise compromising themselves online. And don't even get me started on how the ease of Internet porn is pernicious.

Understood. I'm just saying that as a mom I know my children are quite capable of eye-rolling at me or ignoring me even without regular smartphone use.

So by all means, let's be wise about our kids and their social-networking activities, let's make sure we have their passwords, talk to them about the permanency of everything that goes online and have them drop the phones in the basket before dinner and bed.

I fully admit that I've got some things to work on there with my kids! But rather than fearing smartphones and their "toxicity," I prefer to spend my energy trying to teach good manners, self-respect and respect for others, and that my children can enjoy and master, not be mastered by, that device in the palm of their hands.

On the Constitution

The John Birch Society has a new series of DVDs for you to learn how the Constitution was intended to secure rights, not to enable the federal government to infringe on those rights.

You're invited to attend an ongoing six-part workshop based on these DVDs that will provide you with a practical, common sense understanding of how the Constitution was intended to limit the government, not the citizens. This understanding will equip you to work with others to solve many of the problems Americans face every day that were created by Big Government.

Each class will include a DVD presentation and group discussion. Topics include:

Part 1: The Dangers of Democracy (Sept. 3)

Part 2: Enumerated vs. Unlimited Power (Sept. 10)

Part 3: Constitutional Economics, Constitutional Money (Sept. 17)

Part 4: Constitutional War Powers and the Enemy Within (Sept. 24)

Part 5: Exposing the Enemies of Freedom (Oct. 1)

Part 6: Restoring the Constitution (Oct. 8)

Where: Lake City Baptist Temple, 3061 SR 47, Lake City.

When: Beginning Tuesday, September 3 at 7:00 pm and every Tuesday after for 5 weeks. More Information: Contact Sharon Higgins by phone (386-935-0821) or email (shiggins@windstream.net)

Time capsule to be buried in December

By TONY BRITT

tbritt@lakecityreporter.com

It's hard to predict what the world will be like in 25 years, but people living in Columbia County 25 years from now will know how people in 2013 lived by looking through preserved pieces of history.

A time capsule, set to be opened in 25 years, will be placed in the Columbia County public library main branch building.

Wednesday afternoon a Time Capsule Committee met for close to an hour at the main public library meeting room to determine what items will be placed in the time capsule, where it would be placed and when it would be opened.

Debbie Paulson, Columbia County Public Library Director, said the meeting was a follow-up meeting to the initial Time Capsule Committee meeting which was held in 2012.

Paulson said the time capsule program is through the Florida Department of State.

"Their initiative in 2013 was Viva Florida 500 to celebrate the 500th anniversary of the discovery of La Florida by Ponce De Leon," she said. "So each county library in Florida received a time capsule and we've had a lot of programs throughout the year celebrating Florida History."

The time capsule is a silver cylinder, five inches in diameter and about 3.5 feet in length.

A ceremony has been scheduled for 2 p.m. Dec. 7 at the main branch library to place the time capsule, which will be followed by a reception. The time capsule won't be buried, but most likely placed in a locked library display case or some other secured area.

Paulson explained why the committee choose to open the time capsule in 25 years.

"I think people on the committee felt that 50 years was really too long and 100 years was way too long," she said. "In 50 years maybe something would get lost or something may happen with the building, where as 25 years seemed a more reasonable amount of time."

Paulson said the committee also decided that several items suggested for inclusion in the time capsule would last better for 25 years rather than a longer period of time.

Each of the local libraries collected suggestions on surveys from the public about possible items that could be included in the time capsule.

Paulson said most of the suggestions were about including iPhones, Kindles or other forms of today's technology. She said other suggestions included giving a list that provided information about the cost of selected items, what clothing people wear now and what Columbia County and the Lake City area looked like.

"I think it's fun to see what was representative of things," she said of the importance of a time capsule. "This is the first time I've been involved with a time capsule, but I think when people open time capsules it's always a lot of fun to see what was representative of that time and how much things have changed or have not changed. I think it's just a good idea to take a photograph of a certain time in history and then see what it is 25-50 years later."

Paulson said there were a variety of celebrations in observance of the anniversary as part of Viva Florida 500.

The celebration also included a kickoff for the library's community read program.

"We received two grants to purchase copies of 'A Land Remembered' by Patrick Smith," Paulson said. "We're encouraging people to read the book in October and early November."

The library has two discussion on the book programs set for October. Smith's son, Rick Smith, will also present a multimedia presentation about his father Nov. 19 at the Columbia County School Board Administrative Complex Auditorium.

Paulson said the public library has partnered with the school district for the presentation and the library has bought student editions of the book with an Altrusa International grant. A set of the books has been placed in local schools.

"We're encouraging local book clubs to get involved and anybody who likes to read the book," Paulson said.

FAITH & VALUES

Two men, two ways, two destinies – Part 1

At the top of Psalms one, my Bible has as the theme “Two Men, Two Ways, Two Destinies”. Psalms one has only six verses. The first three are the benefits of the Godly man; the last three are the rewards for the ungodly. Today we will deal with the blessings of the first three verses.

“Blessed is the man who walks not in the counsel of the ungodly, Nor stands in the path of sinners, Nor sits in the seat of the scornful; But his delight is in the law of the Lord, And in His law he meditates day and night. He shall be like a tree Planted by the rivers of water, That brings forth its fruit in its season, Whose leaf also shall not wither; And whatever he does shall prosper (NKJV).” Notice first what the blessed man does not do. “He does not walk in the counsel of the ungodly” (counsel means advice). The counsel of the ungodly is more prevalent today than the counsel of the Godly. There is ungodly counsel all over television, all over the entertainment world, on the radio, in all the check-out lines at grocery store; even in many of our schools, including religious institutions where the Gospel is not taught. Ungodly counsel says we should not have the Bible and prayer in schools. It says no God in government. It says kill millions by abortion. It says same sex marriage is ok. It says

BIBLE STUDIES

ems-hugh43@comcast.net that alcohol and drugs are ok. Ungodly counsel says there is no standard of right and wrong. The blessed man does not listen to such counsel. II Corinthians 6:17 says “Therefore, Come out from among them and be separate, says the Lord. Do not touch what is unclean, and I will receive you” The second thing the blessed man does not do is “stand in the path (or way) of sinners”. If one listens to the counsel of the ungodly, soon he will act like they do. Maybe just a little at first, but it will get worse. The third thing he does not do is “sit in the seat of the scornful.” Scornful means to laugh at or make fun of. These are those who make fun of and downplay God. They don’t want to be any part of God and His word. The blessed man will “delight in the law of the Lord”. He will take great pleasure in God’s covenant with man. He will walk in the light of his Lord and Savior. For He is the light. His desire will be daily to let the fruit of the spirit show in his walk (Galatians

5:22-26). He will meditate on God’s word day and night; the most important thing in his life will be to study and to worship God. Verse three speaks for its self. “Whatever he does shall prosper”. Just think, whatever the blessed man does will prosper. This is a promise of God. No matter what the world says, it will happen. So today, if we want to prosper, if we want to see our families prosper, our churches prosper, our state prosper, our country prosper, we must do what God says.

God making a transfer

Paul expressed his thanks to God for what had happened to the Colossians. After hearing the message of God and being obedient to the commands of God set forth for becoming a Christian, God did several things for the Colossians which they could not do for themselves. Let us meditate upon just one of those things, namely, God delivered them “from the domain of darkness, and transferred [them] to the kingdom of His beloved Son” (Colossians 1:13).

Paul uses two words that describe what God has done. One is “delivered” and the other is “transferred.” This dual action by God informs us of what is the complete action by God when we first became a Christian. The word “delivered” in this context means “to release or save.” After our obedience to God, He released us or saved us “from the domain of darkness.” In this context the word “domain” has the meaning of “the territory governed by” some ruler, in this case “darkness.” The Biblical context of the word “darkness” has the idea of the opposite of “light,” which signifies an illumination of how and where one is to walk or conduct their lives. So Paul is saying that God has “saved” us from the territory of darkness. Christians have been released from the consequences of not living Godly lives or lives according to the “light.” The word “transferred” has the meaning of being “conveyed” or “moved” from one place to another. In this context God “moved” or “transferred” a person from the “domain of darkness” to the “kingdom of His beloved Son.” God did this for not only the

BIBLICAL MEDITATION

carlton_mc@msn.com

Colossians, but for every person who has obeyed God commands to become a Christian. A human being cannot make this transfer but rather it is something which God does for a person because of their obedience. A “kingdom” is a “state or domain ruled by a king” in this case, Jesus. It is interesting to note that a “kingdom” has a “domain” just like “darkness” has a domain. Another thing which should be noted about this “kingdom of His beloved Son” is that it was in existence before Paul wrote the book of Colossians. Another thing that should be noted about this kingdom is that because God has “transferred” us into this kingdom, we have been atoned for our failure to obey the commands of God. It means that all the penalties for all the transgressions of God’s law which we have committed have been paid. We have received the “forgiveness of [our] sins.” We are no longer accountable for those actions. This passage tells us that we are going to be in one domain or another. We are going to be living in one kingdom or another. God is the only one who can move us from one domain or kingdom to another. However, His actions are dependent upon our actions. We must act first before He can act. Even though God very much wants to make this transfer, He is constrained by our actions. As a member of this kingdom of God’s beloved Son, we have certain privileges. There are certain benefits which the citizens of this kingdom enjoy. Because God has “transferred” us into this kingdom, it means that a human being can only be a member of this kingdom if God makes the transfer. Has God transferred you? Are you a member of the kingdom of His beloved Son?

With Naomi, on the road to Bethlehem

Then Naomi said to her two daughters-in-law, 'Go back, each of you, to your mother's home. May the Lord show kindness to you, as you have shown to your dead and to me. May the Lord grant that each of you will find rest in the home of another husband.'

But Ruth replied, 'Don't urge me to leave you or to turn back from you. Where you go I will go, and where you stay I will stay. Your people will be my people and your God my God. Where you die I will die, and there I will be buried. May the Lord deal with me, be it ever so severely, if anything but death separates you and me.' (Ruth 1:8-9,16-17)

What are we to do when those we love leave us behind? This week we join Naomi on the road to Bethlehem in Judah with her two Moabite daughters-in-law because she is "left without her two sons and her husband." Upon hearing that the Lord had ended the famine and was once again providing food for His people, the three women leave Moab in the rear view mirror...until Naomi reasoned that it would be best for these two young women, Orpah and Ruth, to return and find new husbands among their people.

Both Orpah and Ruth wept and offered to stay with Naomi, but Orpah finally kissed Naomi goodbye, while Ruth "clung to her." What in the world would make a young widowed woman leave her home, her people, and her country to go with her mother-in-law to a foreign land? So glad you asked... because I would like to suggest a possible scenario:

We have already discovered that Moab was an enemy to God's people, Israel, but a little further investigation reveals a distant family connection. Genesis 19:30-38 records the history of the Moabite and Ammonite people as the result of an incestuous relationship between Abraham's nephew Lot and Lot's two daughters. According to this passage, the two daughters, (whose names are not recorded) were driven by desperation

HEART MATTERS

angieland3@windstream.net

to preserve their family line. While this reasoning seems appalling, and the Bible in no way condones incest, remember that these girls were raised in Sodom, a city so wicked that God destroyed it by fire. Take note: we cannot hang out with sin and expect that it will not affect our lives or influence our children.

Throughout the Old Testament, the Bible continues to mention the Moabite people, and in 1 Kings 11:1-7, Chemosh is named as "the detestable god of Moab." Further study into 2 Kings 3:26-27 reveals that Chemosh was worshipped with human blood as the King of Moab "took his firstborn son, who was to succeed him as king, and offered him as a sacrifice..." in an attempt to gain victory over the Israelites in battle.

Back to Ruth and Naomi... from Ruth's statement, "your people will be my people and your God my God," we can surmise that while living in Moab, Naomi had not abandoned the God of Israel in order to worship Chemosh, the god of Moab. No doubt Ruth had observed and experienced the difference between serving a god that would require your child's life as a sacrifice and worshipping the God of Israel. God honors human life, so much that when the debt for our sin required death, He went to the cross Himself to make that payment. As believers, that gift of love, rightly cherished and celebrated, will naturally create a desire among those who have been living in "Moab" to embrace our people as theirs and our God as their own! May it be so...

A pink letter in the sand

By JACK EXUM JR.

It is 9 a.m. January 17, 1991, in Germany and the soldiers of the 12th Engineer Battalion prepared to depart for war. Kira, a nine-year old girl holding a pink piece of construction paper, along with her third grade class from Dexheim Elementary School, was looking for her father, to give him her note, before he left to go to war.

There were nearly a thousand soldiers each dressed like the other. She was unable to find her daddy so she stopped in front of a soldier and handed him the folded piece of pink construction paper. When she finally found her father, she cried because she didn't have the note to give him... "It's OK, sweetheart" her father said, "I just need your love." Shortly after that the soldiers boarded buses bound for the airport with Saudi Arabia as their destination. For 15 days the soldiers prepared for movement north across the Saudi Arabia border into Iraq. Hand to hand combat training, letter writing, ammunition uploads, mail call, weapons checks, radio checks, equipment checks - the 16th day is the day that will stand out forever in the mind of SSG Richard K. Nesbitt, Jr.

It was February 2, 1991 and the 12th Engineer Battalion was breaking camp, as they prepared to move to the Line of Departure, their own 'Line in the Sand.' Sergeant Nesbitt had just picked up a trash bag to toss it up on a truck, when he looked down at where it had been lying. Folded up neatly, and firmly pressed into the sand was a four inch square piece of pink construction paper.

To this day he doesn't know why he would take notice of a paper in the desert - except to pick it up and throw it away.

Prepared for war, he took a moment and sat down on a pile of sandbags, picked up the paper and unfolded it once. Printed across the top of the pink paper, above two apple trees drawn in crayon, were two words: "Dear Soldier." He thought, "This must be from one of those elementary kids back in Germany." Unfolding it a second time SSG Nesbitt read "I wish you good (actually spelled "goob") luck. Be careful down there. Hurry up and come back!" It was the final word that made him cry. The card was signed, "Love, Kira."

With tears in his eyes SSG Nesbitt folded up the piece of paper, slipped it into a zip lock bag and put it in his shirt pocket next to his heart, and set his mind on carrying it home to Kira, his little girl. His mind went back to that 17th day of January. He pictured his daughter looking for him because she wanted to give him her special note and giving it to a soldier hoping it would make its way to him. The identity of that soldier still remains a mystery, but the letter, along with a picture of a third grade girl and her father, has been framed and continues to hang in very prominent place above her father's desk.

God has been planning for all eternity just to give you a message... written in the blood of His own Son, "I love you," "Come to me, all you who are weary and burdened, and I will give you rest" (Matthew 11:28). Frame the message in your heart, and come to Jesus.

Men-only Mormon conference session to be broadcast Oct. 5

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — A Mormon church conference session next month that's previously been limited to men will be broadcast live for all to watch for the first time.

But a group of LDS women advocating for complete gender equality say that's still not enough. They say they'll still carry out their plan to stand outside and ask to be let in the Oct. 5 session.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints announced Tuesday that the priesthood session during the first day of the conference in Salt Lake City would be available on channels and online, including LDS.org, the Mormon Channel and BYUtv. The conference is Oct. 5-6.

Church officials say the move aims to make the meeting, held during the twice-yearly general conference, accessible to members around the globe. The session is reserved for members of the priesthood, which includes most males in the church 12 years old and older. Session broadcasts were previously password-protected.

Ordain Women, a group of Mormon women that formed earlier this year to push for gender equality and ordination of women, said in a news release that they are pleased with the move toward openness, but they still want to attend the session. The women requested tickets to the session, but were denied by church leaders.

"This is an important step toward a future where Mormon women will participate side-by-side with our brothers in all areas of church leadership and life," said Kate Kelly, one of the group's founders, in a statement.

But, she added they will still be in line demanding to get in the session to draw attention to the exclusion of women from the session.

"We are demonstrating our faith by standing at the door and knocking," Kelly said.

Women can hold many leadership positions in the Mormon church, but they aren't allowed to be bishops of congregations or presidents of stakes. Stakes are made up of up to a dozen congregations, known as wards. The church's highest leaders, called the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles, are also all men.

Efforts by Mormons to draw attention to what they perceive as 'gender inequality' within the Mormon church, which has 14 million members worldwide, have intensified this year.

In April, a woman led the closing prayer during the morning session of the spring general conference. That marked the first time that's happened in the event's 183-year history.

Lady Tigers fall to Orange Park at home

Columbia drops district game against Raiders.

By BRANDON FINLEY
bfinley@lakecityreporter.com

It was a tough match, but Columbia High's volleyball team dropped its second district game of the season to visiting Orange Park High on Thursday.

The Lady Tigers fell in four sets 29-27, 25-18, 19-25 and 25-19 to the Lady Raiders.

"We fought hard and we made some good plays," Columbia head coach Rebecca Golden said. "There were moments when we were able to string a few points together. We just couldn't find a way to win in the end."

Jara Courson led the team with seven kills in the match, while Meghan

Yates added five kills against the Lady Raiders.

Hanna Baker led the Lady Tigers in assists with 17 in the match.

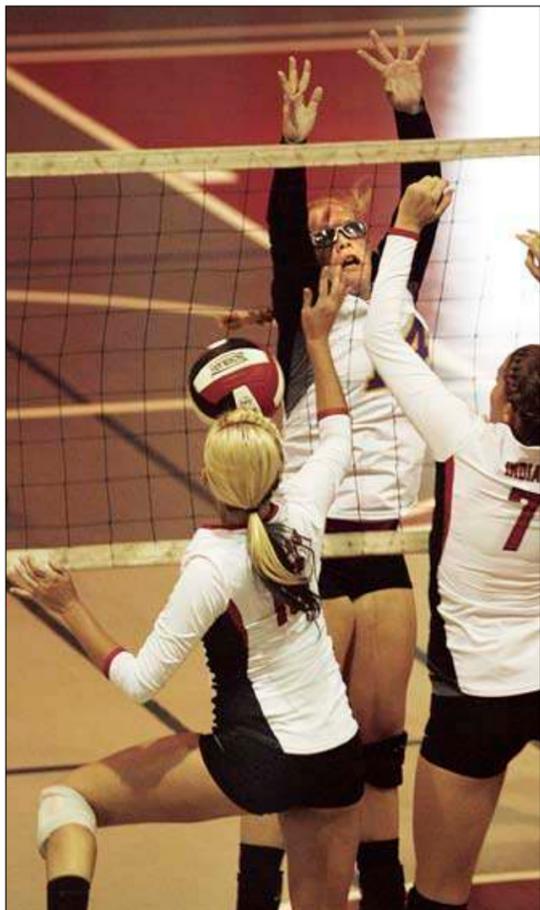

Annie Milton led Columbia with three blocks and Charlee Watson led the Lady Tigers with five digs.

"They're a very good team that's well matched with Gainesville, but they lost to Middleburg," Golden said.

The Lady Tigers will travel to Gainesville for the Oak Hall tournament beginning at 3 p.m. today against Eastside High.

"We're excited to get back out there after tonight and play a lot of games this weekend," Golden said.

The Lady Tigers will hold their "Dig Pink" game against Fort White High at 6 p.m. on Monday before traveling to Middleburg at 3:30 p.m. on Thursday.

Columbia travels to Englewood tonight

By BRANDON FINLEY
bfinley@lakecityreporter.com

Columbia High head coach Brian Allen called tonight's game another chance to suit up and prove what the 2013 Tigers' football team is all about.

Sure, the opponent might not be up to the caliber of foes the Tigers have met earlier this year, Englewood High is a district opponent, which makes it even more important for the Tigers.

The Rams (1-3, 0-1 District 4-6A) got off to a hot start on the year by defeating Paxon, 21-0, on the road before falling in their next three contests.

Atlantic Coast (19-0), Baldwin (25-21) and Ed White (48-0) have all knocked off the Rams since.

Columbia enters the game with an undefeated 4-0 mark, but Allen said earlier this week the key to this season for the Tigers will not be buying into how good they are perceived to be around the state.

Columbia is currently ranked No. 2 in 6A behind only Miami Central, which has one loss on the season. Still, only receiving one first-place votes compared to Miami Central's 16 doesn't bother the Tigers.

Instead, the Tigers are focused on going 5-0 on the season and that means being prepared for the Rams.

"They run a 4-3 defense, running a 40 front" Allen said. "They're a Cover 3 team. If you're playing a 4-3 group, you can get into different spread looks and they'll have a tough time adjusting without being able to drop back a defensive end into coverage."

Traditionally, teams that throw the ball have an advantage against teams in a 4-3 look, but Columbia likes to run the ball. Still, Allen believes there will be matchups available for the Tigers to exploit.

"We can get some things going against a 4-3 look on defense," Allen said.

Offensively, the Rams are going to throw a bag of tricks at the Tigers as they look to knock off the state's second-ranked team. Allen said that their offense will have multiple styles.

"They have options, traps," Allen said. "They're throwing out of three step and five step. It's a little bit of the same as we what we saw a week ago."

But Allen's biggest worry isn't what the Rams will show them, but how the Tigers operate their system.

"The biggest thing is coming out and executing," Allen said.

On the injury front, Columbia will still be without Trey Marshall at safety and quarterback Jake Thomas. It was also announced that Tyrone Sands will miss the rest of the season.

"Trey is getting better," Allen said. "Jake is progressing. He's still two or three more weeks away from being able to participate. Tyrone has an ACL and he's done for the year."

Columbia will kick off against the Rams at 7 p.m. tonight in Jacksonville.

No. 20 Florida relying on stout defense again

By MARK LONG
Associated Press

GAINESVILLE—Florida defensive tackle Dominique Easley wore a red sweat shirt with a gold football helmet on the front and the word "BEST" underneath it on campus Tuesday.

Easley bought it in Miami because he liked the colors, but Florida will be without Easley the rest of the year.

It seemed somewhat appropriate, however, to throw on this week. The 20th-ranked Gators lead the Southeastern Conference in just about every major defensive category. Florida (2-1, 1-0 SEC) tops the league in scoring (14.7 points a game), rushing (55.3 yards a game) and passing (157 yards a game).

Coach Will Muschamp's unit didn't allow Toledo, No. 15 Miami or Tennessee to gain more than 220 yards and has been at its best on third down (19 percent).

Now, with quarterback Jeff Driskel out for the season with a broken right leg, the Gators might rely on the defense more than ever before.

"We're not afraid to punt the ball," offensive coordinator Brent Pease said Tuesday, summing up the state of the team.

The defense has played well enough for Florida to be unbeaten. The Gators held the Hurricanes to 212 yards, including 76 over the final 11 possessions, but lost 21-16 thanks to five turnovers.

Nonetheless, the Gators believe they can play better. They want perfection, which they define as a shut-out and three turnovers. They haven't witnessed it in more than a year — a lengthy wait they would like to see end Saturday at Kentucky (1-2).

"Those guys have got to continue to play well," Muschamp said. "You're only as good as your next game. That's our mentality and we've got to understand that whatever we've done to this point really doesn't matter."

The Gators rank second in the nation in total defense, up three spots from where they finished last season.

It's been somewhat surprising considering Florida lost seven defensive starters after 2012. But the team has experienced little, if any, growing pains while replacing defensive linemen Sharrif Floyd, Omar Hunter and Lertee McCray, linebackers Jon Bostic and Jelani Jenkins and safeties Matt Elam and Josh Evans.

Muschamp expressed concern before the season about how stout the defense would be up the middle.

But Easley had wreaked havoc on offensive lines. Middle linebacker Antonio Morrison has emerged as the team's top tackler despite being suspended for the season opener. And former cornerbacks Cody Riggs and Jaylen Watkins have played well at safety.

Several youngsters have made significant impacts, too.

Sophomore defensive end Dante Fowler was named the SEC defensive player of the week after recording three tackles for loss, two forced fumbles and a sack against Tennessee. And freshman cornerback Vernon Hargreaves III intercepted two passes in his first two games and broke up three more against the Volunteers.

"We know we can do better," Fowler said. "We take defense really seriously especially after the year that we had last year. I know a lot of people had some doubts going into this year, so we wanted to play even harder and be better than last year. We wanted to be the best defense in the nation."

So far, the Gators are getting rave reviews.

Tennessee coach Butch Jones said Florida's defensive front "dominated the line of scrimmage" in Saturday's 31-17 loss in Gainesville and added that the Gators have "one of the best defensive fronts in the country."

Kentucky's Mark Stoops was equally impressed.

"They're very disruptive, very dominant up front, and their secondary is fabulous," said Stoops, who got an up-close look at the Gators as Florida State's defensive coordinator the last three years. "They cover the heck out of you."

Florida's last "perfect game" on defense was a 38-0 shutout against the Wildcats last season.

The Gators have come close to repeating the feat a few times since. But no matter how well they play on defense, Muschamp never seems satisfied.

No. 6 LSU, No. 9 Georgia meet in crucial showdown

Associated Press

Here are five things to watch in the Southeastern Conference during Week 5 of games:

GAME OF THE WEEK: No. 6 LSU at No. 9 Georgia. There will be plenty of intrigue when LSU travels to face Georgia. There could also be plenty of touchdowns. LSU's new offensive coordinator Cam Cameron has been the architect of an offense that's averaging more than 43 points per game. Georgia isn't far behind the Tigers and averages 40.3 points per game. Georgia coach Mark Richt on LSU: "They're not going to try to trick you. They're just going to line up and ball you."

BEST MATCHUP: Mississippi's running game against Alabama's defense: The 21st-ranked Rebels have moved the ball on the ground with ease so far this season, averaging 250 yards rushing per game. No. 1 Alabama is in the middle of the SEC pack in rushing defense. The Rebels don't lack confidence heading into Tuscaloosa. "I think we can put points on them. I think we can put points on anybody. We've just got to show up and play," Ole Miss quarterback Bo Wallace said.

INSIDE THE NUMBERS: Missouri has picked off three passes in each of its first three games, the first time since 1980 that the Tigers have collected three interceptions each in three straight games. Missouri already has exceeded its 2012 season total of seven interceptions. ... Florida leads all FBS teams in run defense (55.3), third-down conversion percentage defense (18.9) and first downs allowed per game (11.3). The Gators are second nationally in total defense (212.3).

LONG SHOT: UCF is savoring the opportunity to host an SEC opponent in a nationally televised game as it welcomes No. 12 South Carolina to town for a noon kickoff. The unbeaten Knights had an off week to prepare for this showdown after winning 34-31 at Penn State in their last game. UCF, a seven-point underdog, will be playing in front of its first home sellout crowd since 2011. South Carolina must contain Storm Johnson, who already has run for six touchdowns this season. "We have got to treat them like they are in the SEC," South Carolina linebacker Marcquis Roberts said.

IMPACT PLAYER: LSU QB Zach Mettenberger: This week marks Mettenberger's return to Georgia, where he began his college career before legal troubles caused him to get dismissed from the team. Mettenberger went from Butler (Kan.) Community College to LSU, where he has emerged as one of the SEC's most improved players this season. Mettenberger's mother still works as an administrative assistant in Georgia's football office, though Bulldogs coach Mark Richt gave her this week off.

LSU-UGA highlight week to reshape rankings

By RALPH D. RUSSO
Associated Press

Finally, a college football weekend with real potential to reshape the rankings and shake up the national championship race.

The fifth Saturday of the season features four games matching ranked teams, highlighted by No. 6 LSU at No. 9 Georgia. Eight more ranked teams play road games of varying degrees of difficulty.

Last weekend's schedule produced mostly blowouts, and when it was over it was as if it never happened. The top 14 teams in the AP Top 25 held their spots from the week before, and no team moved up more than one place.

This Saturday could end with a couple of teams saying goodbye to their national championship hopes, and maybe a few new teams being taken more seriously as contenders.

Georgia wraps up the toughest September schedule in the country with its third game against a top-10 opponent.

The Bulldogs (2-1) split with Clemson and South Carolina to start the season and now face an LSU team that is yet again looking like a Southeastern Conference heavyweight, though the Tigers are getting it done a little differently this season.

For the first time in a few years, LSU's passing game is a strength instead of a question mark.

Zach Mettenberger has the sixth best passer rating in the country.

"There's a big ceiling on him," Bulldogs coach Mark Richt said of Mettenberger, who originally attended Georgia but was dismissed from the team when, as a redshirt freshman, he got into legal trouble over his treatment of a woman at a bar.

JASON MATTHEW WALKER/Lake City Reporter

Former Florida quarterback Danny Wuerffel acts as honorary 'Mr. 2 Bits' before the start of the game against Tennessee on Saturday.

LSU receivers Odell Beckham and Jarvis Landry are making a case for being the top tandem not just in the SEC but in the nation.

That should lead to another increasingly common occurrence: high-scoring SEC games.

Georgia, with quarterback Aaron Murray and tailback Todd Gurley leading the way, is seventh in the nation in yards per play at 7.83. LSU is ninth at 7.53.

The other big game in the SEC takes place in Tuscaloosa, where No. 1 Alabama faces No. 21 Mississippi.

The Rebels spread it out and play fast like Texas A&M, but Ole Miss presents very different challenges.

"Even though the offenses may be similar, the philosophies are not the same," Tide coach Nick Saban said.

No. 4 Ohio State faces its first stiff test of the season when No. 24 Wisconsin comes to Ohio Stadium on Saturday night.

No. 22 Notre Dame is an underdog for the second straight season to Oklahoma. Of course, that didn't stop the Fighting Irish from beating the Sooners in Norman last year. Any hope the Irish have of getting back to the BCS title game would be dashed with a second loss.

The picks:

Lake City Hunnies' Lethal Dose (center) takes out the Bradenton Bombers jammer in a derby match last year in Lake City.

ACR Hunnies return to Lake City on Oct. 5

From staff reports

With only 2 home bouts left in the 2013 season, the ACR Hunnies, a flat track roller derby team, will be going head-to-head with the First Coast Fatales from Jacksonville on Oct. 5, at the Skating Palace in Lake City. The doors open at 5:30 p.m.

"Roller Derby has come back as a true hard-hitting, skill based, athletic sport that inspires woman to be whoever they want to be on and off the track," Vice President of the ACR Hunnies Sara Ivin, better known as Salma Hectic, said.

The national roller derby began in Austin, Texas, and has been gaining momentum. The new generation of derby pays homage to the theatrical traditions of the past, but plays by bona fide rules, with penalties, referees and champions. Modern day roller derby is a fast-paced, hard-hitting, explosive sport that combines the spirit of creator Leo Seltzer's vision with genuine athleticism. Since 2001, there are more than 1,150 roller derby leagues in operation worldwide. Nearly every state in the United States has one or more roller derby leagues representing them on a national level.

Bout tickets are $8 in advance through www.acrderby.com, the Skating Palace or from an ACR Hunnies or Stingers skater. Tickets are $10 at the door and children 10 and under are free. Exclusive seats are available on the skating floor for a $2 upgrade at the door.

With prizes donated from local Lake City businesses, raffles tickets will be available for purchase to benefit the Chances for Children Advocacy Center. The children's Advocacy Center of the 3rd Circuit is dedicated to reducing trauma to victims of child abuse and their non-offending family members through intervention, prevention and education.

ACR is proud to exhibit our newest team, the ACR Stingers! The Stingers is a north central Florida junior roller derby team, welcoming girls and boys age 8-17 as skaters and referees.

ACR Hunnies and Stingers currently practice on Sunday nights from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m., Monday nights 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. and Friday nights 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. at the Skating Palace, in Lake City.

OUTDOORS

FWC officers ready instantly

By Katie Purcell

At 9 p.m., the officer backs into his driveway. He signs off on the radio, climbs out of his truck and heads toward his darkened house. When he gets inside, he greets his wife and looks in on his two young children who are already tucked into bed. After changing out of his uniform, he hangs it in its usual spot in the closet. Finally, he showers and warms up his supper.

At the other end of the county, one of his squad mates has just put on her bullet-resistant vest and uniform shirt. After snapping on her duty belt, she goes through the routine of checking her gear. Then she says goodbye to her husband and son and heads out the door to begin her shift. Her plans for the night include working in a wildlife management area where there have been night-hunting complaints.

In the meantime, while the second officer is in the dark woods and the first is getting ready for bed, at just past 11 p.m., their supervisor is awakened from sleep by a ringing phone.

"Lieutenant?" a voice asks. "This is Dispatch. Your squad is heading to work a search-and-rescue and they need you right away."

After giving a few brief details, the dispatcher disconnects quickly and begins calling others on the radio.

In less than 20 minutes, the lieutenant has grabbed his uniform, always hanging in the same place in his closet, put on his gear, and is pulling out of his driveway in his patrol truck. As he buckles his seat belt, he checks in on the radio and lets Dispatch know he is "10-51" – en route to the scene.

During his drive to the next county – he supervises six officers across two counties – he finds out more about the incident and plans a meeting point with the other two officers.

Situations like this are all too common for officers with the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC). They don't work what most people would call traditional hours. Nor would many aspects of their job be considered traditional. But these roles are necessary.

Many of them are working while we're sleeping or enjoying a Saturday at a state park or a holiday weekend in a campground.

They may start out their shift thinking they're going to work on a certain issue, or they may have just finished their regular shift and are at home. But, with a moment's notice, they are called to assist with an urgent issue, like a search for a missing person.

Many times, FWC officers work with other law enforcement, fire and medical personnel. Typically, the FWC provides the equipment and knowledge of the area, often using their ATVs and airboats to transport the personnel and victims.

Every year, they perform around 1,000 rescues in the woods and on the water. This year, they have been involved in almost 700 so far.

In fact, a scenario like the example above played out in the end of June. FWC officers spent nearly two days working with the Flagler County Sheriff's Office and Volusia and Seminole county air support to locate a missing man.

Guss Baker had been missing for several days when FWC officers finally found him shivering in a swamp near the Turkey Island Hunt Camp in Flagler County. The officers warmed him with what they had – their bullet-resistant vests and bug-tamer jackets – for several hours until a helicopter could arrive to lift him out of the swamp.

Last month, after recovering from his ordeal, Baker reached out to the officers to thank them for their actions.

"Those officers saved my life. If it wasn't for them I wouldn't be here," Baker said.

FWC officers Lee Lawshe and Rich Wilcox were the ones called upon to help.

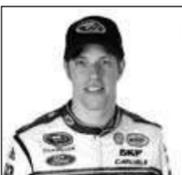

"Even if we have a plan in mind, we never really know what we'll be doing on a given day," Lawshe said. "We are all willing to respond quickly and do what it takes to get the job done and even save a life."

From backing into their driveways at home, to hanging their clothes in the same spot after each shift, FWC officers have many habits. These ensure they can be ready as quickly as possible to respond to those after-hours emergencies when every second counts.

Matt Kenseth makes it two wins in a row in the Chase; is 'the team to beat right now'

After two of the 10 Chase races, Matt Kenseth is batting a thousand and headed to some of his better tracks — two factors that add up to him being a clear championship favorite at this point.

"If Kenseth keeps doing what he's doing, it's not going to matter what anybody else does," Jeff Gordon said after Kenseth rolled to his career-best seventh win of the season and second in a row. "Now we're going to Dover and that's a great track for him. So, yeah, they're definitely the team to beat right now."

For Kenseth, who got his 31st career win in his 500th start and did it at a track where he'd never won and has an average finish of 13.4, his dominant run on Sunday on top of a similar performance in the Chase opener at Chicagoland Speedway doesn't appear to have changed his approach.

"I know it's kind of cliché, but it really is one week at a time, especially right now," he said. "If you get down toward the end [of the season] and you're lucky enough to have a lead or something, maybe you start looking at that more or thinking about it more. But man, two whole months and eight weeks of racing is a lot of racing, and in this system, one bad finish and you're behind."

But he also acknowledged that he's got some of his best tracks coming up on the schedule, including Kansas Speedway, where he's won the two most recent races.

"[I] certainly have a lot of confidence in the next three tracks coming up, for sure," he said of Dover International Speedway, Kansas and Charlotte Motor Speedway, where he has a total of six career wins. "In the past, they've been good tracks for us. I felt like we were real strong at Dover in the spring. And certainly Kansas has been good for us, although we are going there with a different tire, so that might change things up a little bit.

Matt Kenseth takes the checkered flag for the second week in a row in the second race of the Chase.

"And Charlotte, the [Coca-Cola] 600 was good, as well."

Also in Kenseth's favor is the fact that his closest competitor, Kyle Busch, is also his teammate at Joe Gibbs Racing.

"Man, what a terrible problem to have, huh?" Kenseth joked.

NAPA Auto Parts announces end of sponsorship arrangement with Michael Waltrip Racing

The manipulation of the finishing order of the Sprint Cup circuit's regular season finale at Richmond International Raceway by Michael Waltrip Racing has cost the team its sponsorship of the No. 56 Toyota driven by Martin Truex Jr. and has become a concern for many others in the sport.

NAPA Auto Parts, in a statement on its Facebook page, said that "after thorough consideration, NAPA has made the difficult decision to end its sponsorship arrangement with Michael Waltrip Racing effective Dec. 31, 2013. NAPA believes in fair play and does not condone actions such as those that led to the penalties assessed by NASCAR. We remain supportive of the millions of NASCAR fans and will evaluate our future position in motorsports."

The manipulations to try to get Truex in the field for the Chase for the Sprint Cup led to Truex being removed from the Chase field, penalties for the three teams involved and the suspension of the team's general manager, Ty Norris.

But the loss of a major sponsor like NAPA is an even bigger blow to the team. NAPA reportedly spends about $20 million per year on its sponsorship of the team, and that's worrisome, even among other competitors in the garage.

"I was hoping after we got to race at Chicago that all that stuff was in the rearview mirror," said Matt Kenseth. "Obviously, it all wasn't. I think everybody is probably looking forward to getting it behind us as a sport, and certainly I can't imagine being in Michael [Waltrip] and Rob's [Kauffman] shoes the last week and a half. It's certainly been really unfortunate for everybody."

Kenseth said he hopes NAPA will remain in NASCAR as a sponsor.

"Hopefully, they'll still be part of the sport, because it is one of the mainstays of the sport who has always done the whole car and done all that — which is kind of the exception, and not the rule, these days," he said.

Jimmie Johnson said he, too, was jolted by the news and the implications for Waltrip's team and NASCAR as a whole.

"In this tough economy and tough world right now, we hate to see sponsors leave," he said. "It's going to be very challenging for MWR with the loss of such a major sponsor."

Michael Waltrip Racing issued its own statement: "There is no doubt, the story of Michael Waltrip Racing begins with NAPA

Martin Truex Jr.'s NAPA-sponsored No. 56 Toyota leads the field in the Sylvania 300.

Auto Parts, but there are many more chapters yet to be written. MWR has the infrastructure and support of Toyota for three teams plus three Chase-caliber, race-winning drivers. With the support of our corporate partners, we are preparing to field three teams in 2014."

The departure of NAPA also leaves Truex in a difficult spot, especially with the decision made so late in the year when most 2014 deals are already in place.

Truex told reporters at New Hampshire that his future at Waltrip's team is uncertain at this point.

"I don't know," he said. "It's too early to tell, to be honest with you. I wish I knew and I wish I could say, but a lot of circumstances have to play out, and it's so late in the game and late in the season."

"People already know what they're doing next year. This is definitely not the time of year you want to find out that you really don't have a ride next year, so to speak. It's going to be tough, but we'll have to deal with it, and hopefully, we'll figure it out."

He said he'd like to stay with Waltrip if sponsorship could be secured.

"I really enjoyed my last four years at MWR, and I feel like we're getting to where we wanted to be when we started four years ago," he said. "I would love to be there. There are no guarantees right now. It just depends on how everything goes down."

Kenseth makes his 500th NASCAR career start to win Sylvania 300 at New Hampshire

Points standings and race results from Sunday's Sylvania 300 at New Hampshire Motor Speedway:

1. MATT KENSETH

(finished first) 2,111 points

In his 500th start, he won at one of his worst tracks and heads into the third week of the Chase with back-to-back wins. "For me to win at Loudon, first of all, is more than a stretch and more than a dream," he said. "That just shows you how good this whole team is."

2. KYLE BUSCH

(finished second) 2,097 points; behind -14

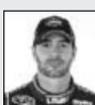

For the second straight week, he was runner-up to his Joe Gibbs Racing teammate Kenseth. "The 20 [Kenseth] just had a special car. We tried everything to get [ours] like theirs. It was just stupid fast. Hopefully, we have one of those magical cars in the next couple of weeks, too."

3. JIMMIE JOHNSON

(finished fourth) 2,093 points; behind -18

After opening the Chase with two top-5 finishes, he's excited about his prospects for the coming week. "We're in a good spot," he said. "We haven't given up too many points, and we're going to one of my best race tracks next week. So I hope to have this Lowe's Chevrolet in Victory Lane over there."

4. CARL EDWARDS

(finished ninth) 2,075 points; behind -36

He said he was "pleasantly surprised" to score a top-10 finish. "We could have had a lot worse day," he said. "Obviously, we want to be better than that, but that's not bad."

5. GREG BIFFLE

(finished third) 2,073 points; behind -38

He was coming on strong at the finish and felt he was as fast as the Joe Gibbs Racing drivers who finished ahead of him. "It was about to be good," he said. "I just wish [the race] was 325 [laps] instead of 300."

6. KEVIN HARVICK

(finished 20th) 2,072 points; behind -39

Handling problems led to a frustrating day. "We struggled with handling issues all day and never could get it figured out. Even though we didn't get the finish we were looking for today, we're not going to let it get us down."

7. KURT BUSCH

(finished 13th) 2,071 points; behind -40

Like many of his fellow Chase drivers, he struggled to make his way through traffic as the race went on. "We didn't hit it right on the adjustments today," he said. "It was nobody's fault; we all agreed what adjustments to make, and it just didn't work out."

8. JEFF GORDON

(finished 15th) 2,069 points; behind -42

He slid through his pit while leading the race and wasn't able to overcome the lost ground. "I hadn't come close to sliding through all day, and I guess I carried a little bit more speed in there and crossed the splitter over the line by an inch, and that's all it takes to make a difference between a chance at winning and finishing 15th," he said.

9. RYAN NEWMAN

(finished 16th) 2,064 points; behind -47

After winning the pole, he had to overcome a loose-handling car and a mistake by his crew on pit road to finish as well as he did. "I still don't understand what happened with the car," he said. "Glad we got back up to 16th after the deal on pit road. We'll head to Dover and see what we can get."

10. CLINT BOWYER

(finished 17th) 2,063 points; behind -48

He's still in the news more for his actions at Richmond than what he's done in the first two Chase races. At New Hampshire, he wasn't able to improve on his 16th-place qualifying effort.

11. DALE EARNHARDT JR.

(finished sixth) 2,049 points; behind -62

He overcame early problems on pit road and gained two spots in the standings. "Glad we were able to get a decent finish out of it," he said.

12. JOEY LOGANO

(finished 14th) 2,042 points; behind -69

Although New Hampshire is his home track and the site of his first Cup win, it's not his favorite. "It is the hardest race track in the world to pass," he said. "It's the most frustrating place I think I've ever been to, so I'm just glad to leave."

13. KASEY KAHNE

(finished 37th) 2,040 points; behind -71

A hard crash on Lap 253 left him at a loss for an explanation and others wondering about his well-being. "I seriously don't really remember how it happened," he said. "I hit the inside wall, but I'm not sure how I got there."

DEAR ABBY

cially if you leave your job. Expecting him to step up to the plate is not unreasonable. But whether he agrees with you and me is another matter. Please find out before you invest any more money or he impregnates you again.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are well into a relaxed retirement. His successful, middle-aged son "Rory" has developed the habit of stopping by unannounced occasionally on his way home from work. This would be fine except that it falls in the middle of the dinner hour. Although we ask Rory to join us, he prefers to just stand over us and talk about his day while we eat. This wasn't his childhood home, so it's not a matter of an extended familiarity with this residence.

I have asked his father to speak to him about it, and while he agrees that his son's actions are rude, he refused to say anything. To me, it looks like this is the most convenient time for Rory to get the occasional parent visit out of the way while not considering our feelings.

Because I have had a good long-term relationship with my stepson, I took him aside and politely explained that these dinner interruptions are discourteous. Rory blew up at me! I was astonished to see a mature man I respected act in such a childish manner. Now I'm the culprit in a family rift, while my husband remains mute. Should I have focused on digestion and held my tongue? - DISAPPOINTED STEPMOM

DEAR STEPMOM: Because your husband refused to say anything and won't back you up, it appears the answer is yes. While some people consider the dinner hour to be sacred, not everyone does, and your stepson's visits were only occasional. Your request might have been better received had you told Rory that his hovering makes you nervous, and if he didn't care to share the food you had prepared, you'd appreciate it if he would at least sit at the table with you for everyone's comfort.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 14-year-old girl who's having a disagreement with my parents about dating. There's this guy, "Connor," who likes me, and I'm very comfortable with him. His older sister and I are good friends.

The trouble is, my parents have strict rules against dating and I think it's unfair. I think I'm mature enough to date, and I know right from wrong. My friends say I'm very mature for my age, and they approve of Connor because he's friendly and has an outgoing personality. I have tried talking to my parents about this, but I always end up in tears.

Can you tell me how I can convince them to give this guy a chance? - GROWN UP AT 14, PRINCE GEORGE, CANADA

DEAR GROWN UP: A sure way to show your parents you're mature enough to date would be to show them you're a responsible person. Do they know when they ask you a question that they'll get an honest answer with no evasion? Have you shown them that you respect their curfews? Do you do the chores that are expected of you without having to be reminded? Is the same true about your homework?

If the answer to these questions is yes, then do they KNOW Connor? Do they know his parents? If they do, they might feel more comfortable about your seeing him, IF it's in a group rather than one-on-one.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 13 years old and I recently enrolled in a new school. I have met two boys, "Jake" and "Cory," and I have been crushing on both of them.

I really like Jake for everything, but I'm not sure he likes me back. I like Cory for his looks and popularity, and I'm positive he likes me because he said so. Should I ask Jake to go with me first, and if he says no, rebound to Cory? - CONFUSED IN RAYMOND, MISS.

DEAR CONFUSED: The school year has just started and it's a little early to be asking someone to "go" with you. If you take your time - say, wait a month - Jake may find the courage to tell you he likes you, too. If he doesn't, tell Cory you're interested in him and see if he still feels the same way about you. (The odds are 50/50.) And who knows? In another month, there might be a third guy.

DEAR ABBY: My brother thinks I eat too slow, and I think he eats too fast. He claims it's rude to eat slow and make others wait for you. I say eating slowly is healthy, and it's better than wolfing down your food to keep up with the people you're with. Who's right? - AT MY OWN PACE IN EDDINGTON, MAINE

DEAR AT YOUR OWN PACE: You're both right. If you eat so slowly that the rest of the people at your table must wait for you to finish, ask them to proceed with their dessert and coffee so they won't have to sit there and watch you masticate. And wolfing down one's food causes some people to overeat, which is why weight-loss specialists advise against it.

DEAR ABBY: What do new fathers hand out today instead of cigars? - NONSMOKER IN SAVANNAH

DEAR NONSMOKER: Because so much more is now understood about the dangers of tobacco, many new fathers today hand out small gift bags of candy instead - blue for a baby boy or pink for a daughter.
