Crime creeps up in county

Rises 2.1 percent in first half of 2013, state figures show.

By STEVEN RICHMOND
srichmond@lakecityreporter.com

The Florida Department of Law Enforcement said Columbia County's crime index has risen approximately 2.1 percent, according to the semi-annual Uniform Crime Report released Tuesday.

The county's crime index was determined by the number of reported murders, forcible rapes, robberies, aggravated assaults, burglaries, larceny and motor vehicle thefts between Jan. 1, 2013 and June 30, 2013. All of the following figures reflect that six month period, as well.

There were 1,334 such crimes reported throughout the county, up from 2012's 1,306 and down from 2011's 1,411 for the same period.

However, much of that increase came from the larceny category, according to the report. FDLE reported that forcible rapes, robberies and burglaries all decreased from the year before. Murders (two, both in the city), aggravated assaults (193) and motor vehicle thefts (25) were the same in the first half of both 2012 and 2013.

Sheriff's Office

"We've had 41 additional crimes reported in 2013," Columbia County Sheriff Mark Hunter said. "Certainly we always want the crime index to go down, but if people are reporting more, I'm OK with that. It means they're more comfortable contacting the sheriff's office."

The percentage of incidents cleared by the sheriff's office has Lights out in Emerald Lakes?

Streetlights may be snuffed out in 3 local subdivisions.

By TONY BRITT

The streetlights in Emerald Lakes subdivision could be turned off unless at least 75 percent of the subdivision's parcel owners agree to pay for them.

Tuesday night more than 50 people met with county officials at the Lake City Shrine Club building where county officials gave them an option which could keep their street lights on if 75 percent of parcel owners agreed to pay for the service. A number of residents in a Westside neighborhood said they were willing to pay a $38 non ad valorem assessment to keep the street lights on in their neighborhood.

Parcel owners were sent letters from the county Nov. 5 indicating that Florida Power and Light was threatening to turn the street lights off in the neighborhood.

Approximately 215 parcels in Emerald Lakes phases 1, 2, 3 and 4; Arbor Green at Emerald Lakes phases 1 and 2; and Kelly Lake replat subdivisions will be impacted by the proposal, even though the majority of the people at the meeting seemed to favor keeping the lights on and even having new lights added.

There are 29 existing streetlights and five additional streetlights proposed for the neighborhood.

"Earlier in the year, I started getting calls that some of the people in your neighborhood want to add lights," said Columbia County commissioner Bucky Nash, as he explained the purpose of the meeting. "We thought it was appropriate to sent out the ballot to see what you all wanted to do."

Nash said the county

Damage control continuing for Obamacare

Sebelius in Florida to deflect criticism of botched rollout.

By KELLI KENNEDY
Associated Press

MIAMI — Department of Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius said Tuesday that eight of 10 people will be able to use the government's health care website to sign up for insurance by the end of the month.

The Obama administration's top health care official was at Florida Technical College in Orlando Tuesday morning making her first of two stops in the state to talk up the Affordable Care Act as fallout of the new law grows. She was visiting Miami's North Shore Medical Center later in the day.

Sebelius

During the Orlando stop, counselors from the Center for Medicaid and Medicare Services talked with students about insurance they could purchase on www.Healthcare.gov. Sebelius and President Barack Obama have repeatedly apologized for a dismal launch of the website, which consumers in 36 states were supposed to use beginning on Oct. 1 to sign up for coverage.

Despite the issues with the website that have stymied the rollout, Sebelius implored students in Orlando to "Come back and see the site again" once it re-opens.

Sebelius had been traveling regularly as the administration has been in emergency mode, trying to fix its health care website and to beat back criticism that could make Americans leery of using it.

"The only way to win back the confidence of consumers and the American people is to have the site working," Sebelius said.

Radio City Santa learning to hydrate

NEW YORK

Forget the cookies and milk. What Santa really wants for Christmas is water — and lots of it.

"Hydrate, hydrate, hydrate," says Charles Edward Hall, who has donned a sweat-creating fat suit and heavy fur coat to play Mr. Claus in the "Radio City Christmas Spectacular" for 27 years. "I'll come offstage and literally wring water out of my shirt."

Hall is in his element these days, ramping up for Christmas as he and the Rockettes play up to six shows a day. No wonder his dressing room has crates of Perrier, Gatorade, Poland Spring and cranberry juice.

"It is one of the challenges of the role," says Hall, who hails from Frankfort, Ky. Like a marathon runner, he gets in shape to play the famously overweight present-giver. "I actually try to lose weight when I do Santa because it's just easier to move around."

Does he ever have bad days? "I do, but Santa doesn't," Hall answers with a laugh. "I always say, 'Santa's a much better guy than I am.' I am but a mere mortal."

Santa is now a full-time gig and Hall takes it very seriously. How many department store Santas can quote from "My Life in Art" by Konstantin Stanislavsky or reference the acting techniques of Sanford Meisner? Hall is a character actor who's landed an iconic role.

"I love doing it. When I first started doing it, I said, 'Well, I'll do this for a couple of years.' And it's become a part of my life in a huge way," he says. "It is magic for me. Like Santa, I'm a big kid."

'Selfie' is declared word of the year

LONDON — Michelle Obama shared one with her "first dog" Bo, Hillary Clinton tweeted one with her daughter Chelsea. Now "selfie" — the smartphone self-portrait — has been declared word of the year for 2013, according to Britain's Oxford University Press.

The publisher of the Oxford dictionaries said Tuesday that "selfie" saw a huge jump in usage in the past year, bursting from the confines of Instagram and Twitter to become mainstream shorthand for any self-taken photograph.

Researchers behind the renowned dictionaries pick a prominent word or expression in the English language each year that best reflects the mood of the times. Previous words of the year have included "unfriend" in 2009, "credit crunch" in 2008, "carbon footprint" in 2007 and "Sudoku" in 2005.

Judy Pearsall, the editorial director for Oxford Dictionaries, said "selfie" appeared to have been first used in 2002 on an Australian online forum, and the hashtag #selfie appeared on Flickr in 2004.

"But usage wasn't widespread until around 2012, when 'selfie' was being used commonly in mainstream media," she said.

Australian English sometimes uses the suffix "-ie" — such as barbie for barbeque and tinnie for a can of beer — which helps to explain where "selfie" may have come from, Pearsall added.

Oxford usually assigns a separate word of the year to the U.S. and to the U.K., but it said "selfie" captured the imagination on both sides of the Atlantic this year.

"Selfie" was added to the online Oxford dictionary in August.

Zimmermon bond set at $9,000

SANFORD — A prosecutor says George Zimmerman's girlfriend claims he choked her about a week ago but she didn't report it to police at the time.

The prosecutor told a judge about the allegation during a first appearance Tuesday on domestic violence-related charges of aggravated assault, battery and criminal mischief.

The judge set George Zimmerman's bond at $9,000 and ordered that he not possess guns or ammunition. He was ordered to stay away from the girlfriend's house and wear a monitoring device.

Zimmerman was taken into custody Monday after girlfriend Samantha Scheibe told deputies he pointed a shotgun at her during an argument.

In a 911 call, Zimmerman denied pointing a gun at Scheibe.

The 30-year-old former neighborhood watch volunteer was acquitted earlier this year of criminal charges in the fatal shooting of Trayvon Martin.

Harris' husband in apparent suicide

SARASOTA — Sarasota police say the husband of former Florida Secretary of State Katherine Harris was found dead of an apparent suicide at the couple's home.

Police spokeswoman Genevieve Judge said Tuesday that Harris' husband, Anders Ebbeson, committed suicide.

Officers were called to the home between 7:30 and 8 a.m. Tuesday.

During a news conference at the police station, Pastor William Hild of Sarasota First Baptist Church confirmed that Ebbers had taken his own life.

School to keep using history book

DELTONA — A central Florida school board has decided to keep a world history textbook that some parents wanted pulled from classes because they say it offers a pro-Islamic worldview.

The board made its decision Monday after hearing four hours of public comment. The Daytona Beach News-Journal reports the board didn't take a formal vote after hearing from some 80 speakers. Only board member Linda Costello pushed for a more thorough review.

"I'm still confident with the book and its presentation to our students," said school board chairwoman Diane Smith. Board members Candace Lankford, Stan Schmidt and Ida Wright agreed the book should remain in the classrooms.

"It's kind of what I would have expected," said Walter Hanford, a book opponent who attended the meeting. During the meeting he told the board the "World History" textbook published by Prentice Hall "whitewashes" the history of Islam and its Muslim followers.

Teen caught after Ocala escape

OCALA — A teenager who briefly escaped from the Marion County Judicial Center has been apprehended.

Officials say the 17-year-old was unshackled Tuesday morning when he shoved a bailiff and ran from the building. Extra security was called and Ocala police officers spotted him running south from the courthouse.

The Ocala Star-Banner reports the teen ran behind a pawn shop when he saw the officer.

Officers followed and quickly took him into custody. He was originally booked into the center on a violation of probation on a battery charge. He's now been charged with escape as well.

Fire in bedroom caused by candle

No one injured in Monday night blaze at mobile home.

By AMANDA WILLIAMSON
awilliamson@lakecityreporter.com

An unintentional fire originating from a candle burned the bedroom of a Lake City home on Monday night, according to the Lake City Fire Department and Lake City Police Department.

Luverna Hawkins, 65, of 602 NE Center Ave., lit a candle in her bedroom after the electricity kept flickering on and off, according to reports from the LCPD and LCFD.

She dozed off, but woke at approximately midnight to find her bedroom on fire.

The LCFD responded to find a doublewide mobile home with heavy dark smoke escaping from its windows and eaves.

The fire department extinguished the fire, determining that the initial cause was a burning candle.

Hawkins said she did leave the candle burning because of her concerns about the electricity.

CRIME

fallen from 49.3 percent in 2012 to 42.2 percent in 2013. However, that figure remains well above the statewide average of 25.8 percent.

The decrease may be linked to a roughly 50 percent drop in arrests by CCSO, dropping from 1,311 in 2012 to 637 in 2013. Much of that change arose from a sharp decline in "miscellaneous" arrests, such as probation violations and routine traffic offenses.

Large variability in year-to-year numbers such as those could be attributable to the relatively small size of Columbia County's population.

Hunter said the sheriff's office is utilizing new technology in order to tackle crime more efficiently.

"Say someone reports something stolen from their yard. We can map that now and we can study crimes in a given radius," he said. "It'll put a pushpin in a specific area of the county that'll show all the thefts in the area. We then develop a 'weather map' of where criminal activity is taking place for various crimes and we can do targeted law enforcement in those areas."

Lake City Police Department

FDLE reported a 2.9 percent decrease in the city's crime index, sliding from 580 in 2012 to 563 in 2013.

Reports of forcible rapes, aggravated assaults, burglaries and motor vehicles thefts in the city all decreased between the first half of 2012 and 2013. Reported cases of robbery and larceny edged up slightly from last year's numbers.

However, LCPD's number of arrests jumped roughly 31.5 percent, climbing from 311 in 2012 to 409 in 2013. The percentage of cleared cases also improved from 16.9 in 2012 to 24.9 in 2013—just shy of the 25.8 percent statewide average.

"We are encouraging our citizens to be vigilant in reporting suspicious persons or incidents in their neighborhoods and businesses," Chief Argatha Gilmore said in a prepared statement. "Additionally, our crime prevention officer is working with neighborhoods and community groups to educate them on how not to be a victim of a crime of opportunity."

FWC and FHP

The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission and Florida Highway Patrol posted higher arrests in Columbia County since last year.

The FWC recorded 25 more arrests, rising from 79 in 2012 to 104 in 2013.

The FHP recorded 38 more arrests, rising from 238 in 2012 to 276 in 2013.

The number of DUI arrests have risen countywide as well, climbing from 58 to 72 over the first halves of the previous two years. FHP made the largest portion of those arrests, totaling 44 for the first half of 2013.

By the numbers: Statewide crime

FDLE reports the following figures for the entire state of Florida between January and June of 2013:
- Total Crime Index: 340,392, down 5.2 percent;
- Murders — 428, down 10.6 percent;
- Forcible Sex Offenses — 5,031, down 1.9 percent;
- Robberies — 11,026, down two percent;
- Aggravated Assaults — 28,765, down 4.2 percent;
- Burglaries — 68,139, down 9.5 percent
- Larceny — 209,959, down 3.7 percent;
- Motor Vehicle Thefts — 16,864, down 9.6 percent;

Illegal dumping at community centers a concern

By STEVEN RICHMOND
srichmond@lakecityreporter.com

Columbia County staff discussed concerns and possible solutions to a recent increase in illegal dumping cases at local community centers during Tuesday evening's Sports Advisory Council meeting.

"Lately there's been a concern... that people take their household trash or whatever and put it in the dumpsters at the community centers," Landscape and Parks Director Clint Pittman said. "We have addressed this issue in the past. There are some signs in place saying it's illegal. This is one of those things we're aware of and we want to address it. It's becoming a real problem."

He added that illegal dumping becomes more of an issue during this time of year due to individuals bringing waste from hunting camps and trips.

A member of the advisory council asked if it were possible to lock the dumpsters to prevent illicit dumping.

"You can do an enclosure around the dumpster, but...usually the dumpster man shows up, goes out to unlock the gate and will leave it wide open," Pittman said. "We've run into that before. Or as soon as we put enclosures up, [people] start throwing things between the dumpsters and the wall. It's a constant battle."

According to FS 403.413, illegally dumping any amount of trash under 15 pounds is punishable by a $50 civil penalty. Trash loads between 15 and 500 pounds could bring a first degree misdemeanor and up to one year in prison. Over 500 pounds could land someone with a third degree felony. In addition, the violator may be required to perform an arbitrary amount of community service to rectify the behavior.

"We do report problems to law enforcement...during their patrols, they may drive by and see if they can catch anybody," County Manager Dale Williams said at the meeting. "[Another] thing we can do is send a code enforcement officer out [who] will literally sort through the garbage and look for names and try and make a case out of it."

According to Pittman, violators have been caught in the past due to the routine nature of their dumping.

"If it's becoming a real problem, contact our office [(386)-719-7545] and we'll see if we can catch the individual who's doing it," Pittman said.

The public may legally dump large quantities of trash at the Winfield Solid Waste Facility located at 1347 NW Oosterhoudt Lane just west of US 41 and north of I-10.

LIGHTS

is acting as the middleman between FPL and residents who want the street lights to remain on in the neighborhood. He said FPL contacted the county and told them about turning the street lights off and the county asked FPL to leave the lights on until the situation could be resolved.

"It will adjust every year," he said of the $38 rate. 'We're (Columbia County) not collecting it and making money off of it. We're doing this as a conduit between you and FPL."

Lisa Roberts, Columbia County Administrative manager who gave the presentation, said the lights are owned by FPL and were originally installed at locations decided by the developer. The developer had an agreement with FPL so that the lights would operate through Nov. 2013.

The deadline for returning the ballots was extended a month to Friday, Jan. 10. If adopted the $38 annual bill will be added to the ad valorem tax bill for a minimum of 10 years.

Buddy Hines, a neighborhood resident, asked several questions during the meeting and collected names following the meeting to begin a push for residents to return the ballot.

"I think it's obvious we need to maintain the streetlights, we just have to figure out the best way to go about doing it," he said. "In reality to looking at the attendance of the meeting tonight, you're not going to get 75 percent of the people to respond positively or negatively. I think it would be more appropriate to count the ballots of people that submit them, than to allow people to vote 'no' simply by ignoring it. I think it's obvious that everybody here tonight was interested in maintaining the street lights. Our job now is to go out and reach those neighbors that weren't here, or may have not gotten the notification."

Hines asked people are interested in keeping the street lights on to contact him by e-mail at: ALH4FSU@comcast.net.

Ethel Hazelwood, a resident in the neighborhood, said she had concerns with the neighborhood's lighting because not all areas of the neighborhood are adequately lit.

"The area by my house I have a light, but as you come into my development, those people do not have a light. It's hard to see as you're coming in," she said. "The light is for walking, driving and safety. We have people who comb the neighborhood for thievery, so if there's no light, that's going to give them a better chance."

However, Hazelwood said she didn't believe that people would think it was fair to pay the $38 annual fee if they weren't going to benefit from the lights.

"If we're not going to protect everybody, then why protect anybody," she asked the audience. "It's unfair for us to pay for something we don't have."

Roberts said the county engineer and FPL representatives determined the location of the five new lights. Several residents questioned the light locations and Roberts said the potential locations will be re-assessed, however, any additional lights would cause the $38 fee to increase.

The county plans to send out additional letters in the near future notifying residents about the proposal and the possibility of the street lamps being turned off.

Baker woman faces vehicle theft charge

By TONY BRITT
tbritt@lakecityreporter.com

A Macclenny woman, arrested Friday, faces vehicle theft charges for allegedly taking the car of an acquaintance's overnight guest to run errands.

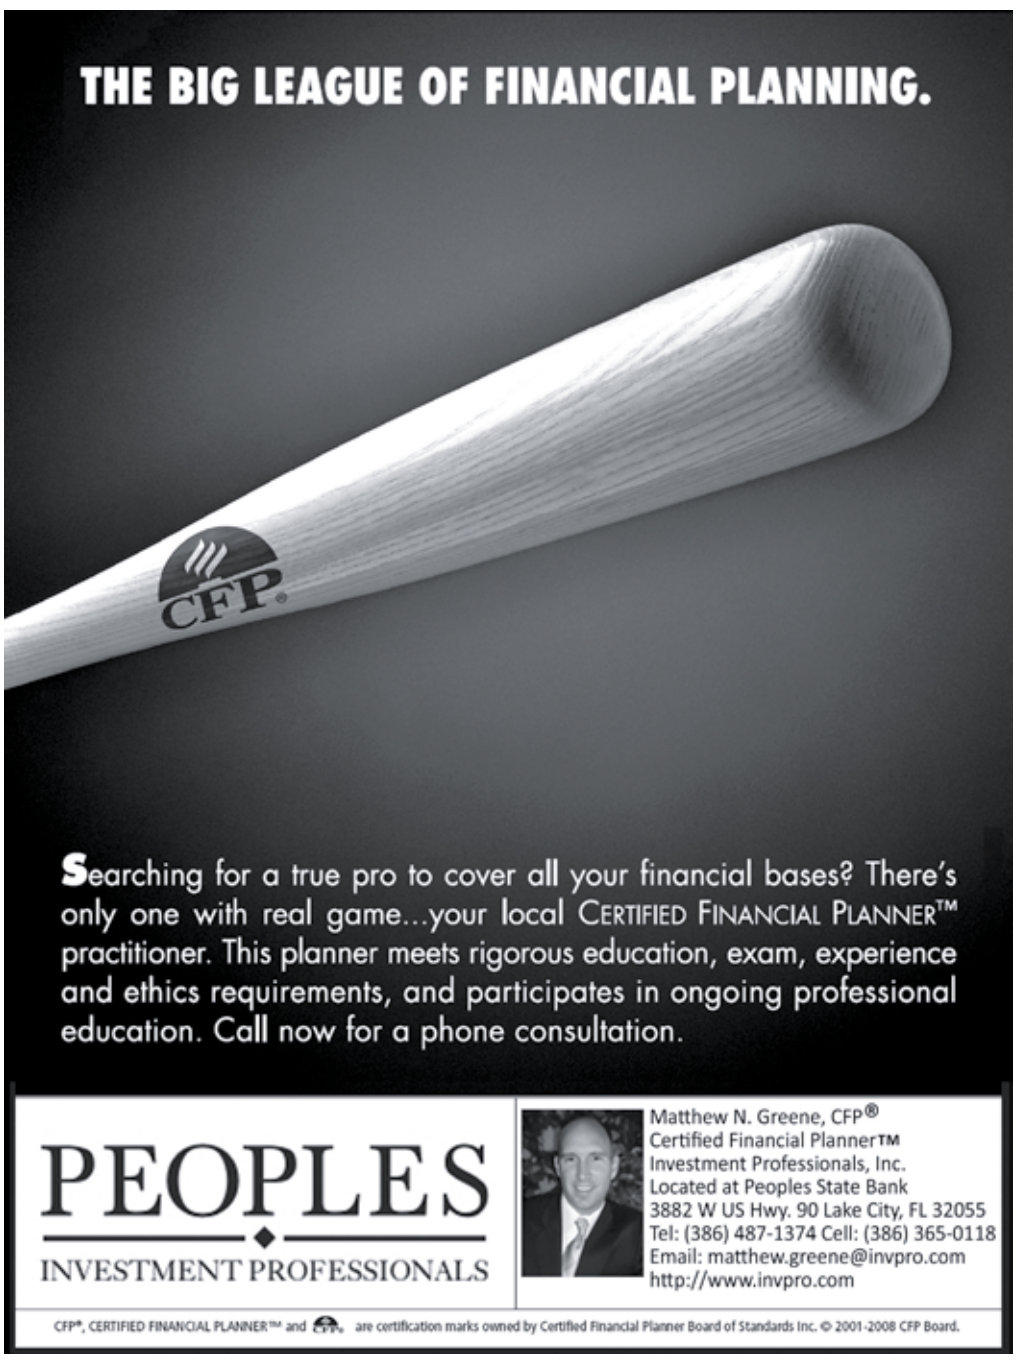
Joevita Ann Staley, 40, 5071 Wilson Road, Macclenny, was charged with vehicle theft and booked into the Columbia County Detention Facility on $5,000 bond.

According to Columbia County Sheriff's Office reports, Deputy Joshua Samson was dispatched to the Quick Stop parking lot near the intersection of Lake Jeffrey Road and Wilson Street to investigate a stolen vehicle call.

While en route he was advised by dispatch that a Lake City Police Department officer had conducted a traffic stop on a silver Mercury Marquis and that the vehicle's owner was also at the scene and said the vehicle had been stolen.

The car owner said when she woke up she realized her car keys were missing and when she went outside she realized her car had been stolen from where she left it parked overnight at Five Points Pawn.

Staley was handcuffed and taken to jail without incident, the report said.



OUR OPINION

Photo ban is bad policy – and against the law

The city council should abandon City Manager Wendell Johnson's wrong-headed proposal to ban photos during public meetings. Not only is it bad policy, it is against the law.

The proposal – to allow photos before and after meetings but not during them, except with permission of the mayor – surfaced Monday at a workshop during which this newspaper questioned the legality of such a measure.

The Lake City Reporter later received confirmation from the attorney general's office that such a move would in fact violate Florida's open meetings law.

Simply put, the public has a right to document a public meeting in photos – so long as it doesn't create too much of a disturbance in the process.

Under different circumstances, one might think it safe to assume the city would now back away from this misguided proposal.

But then again, maybe not.

The city manager generally gets his way, and this time he won't even admit what he did is wrong. According to Johnson, since the mayor or presiding officer can waive the ban at will, it's not really a "ban" at all.

This is strange logic indeed.

Simply including a provision by which a ban can be waived does not make it any less a ban. Beyond that, if a citizen has to get permission to exercise a right, it really isn't a "right" at all.

Johnson says his real worry is with maintaining order and decorum at public meetings.

We agree that no one should be allowed to disrupt a public meeting in any way. We have seen other citizens with cameras move behind city officials' chairs on the dais to get a better camera angle, or to sneak a peek at what's on their desk during a meeting. Disturbances of this nature are unacceptable, but they have nothing to do with the functioning of a free press.

If the city wants to solve its problem, it must simply find the courage to confront such disturbances head-on. Set reasonable rules of conduct, then enforce them.

But barring the legitimate press from doing its job is not the answer.

In this regard, logic, reason – and the law – are not on the city manager's side.

Gratitude is the ultimate long view

Sharon Randall
www.sharonrandall.com

They say farsightedness is one of those gifts that tends to come with age. Maybe so.

In life or landscapes, in vision or vistas, whenever possible, I like to take the long view.

For six weeks, I've been alone on a lake in the mountains where I grew up, watching fall work its magic outdoors, while I try to work indoors on a book.

I wish you could see it.

The lake, not the book, though I hope in time you'll see it, too.

My desk sits at a window, where I can look down into the water, as if on a boat, or far off at the horizon, as if on the back of a really big bird, to where the lake flows into the next basin.

The view, if spectacular, is ridiculously distracting, with all manner of leaves and birds and fish and beauty screaming for my attention. If I had any sense, I would move my desk to some visually quieter location, maybe in the boathouse or under a bed.

But here I sit staring at leaves so red they look like flames, and flocks of birds that scatter like a fistful of pepper tossed in the air, and fish that swim up to look at me, as if to ask when I'm coming out to feed them.

The last few days put a damper on the view, as rain began to fall and a mist rolled in, muting colors, swallowing images, softening sounds.

I got a lot of work done.

At one point, I took a break and went out on the porch to sit in the rocker and close my eyes and smell the rain and listen to the drumming on the tin roof.

As breaks go, on a 10-scale, I'd give it a 12.

Just as I started back inside, the clouds thinned, and I saw the sun come swimming up from the bottom of the lake. I've seen it dance a thousand times on the lake. This was the first time I saw it dance underwater.

While I stood there, looking down, I noticed something falling up at me, a tiny speck moving like a baseball in slow motion. As it grew closer, it started spinning, taking on a new shape like a star.

I didn't realize what it was until it quit coming toward me and suddenly stopped, just to float on the water.

A maple leaf. What I had seen, of course, was its reflection, as it fell from somewhere far above me all the way down to the lake.

It made me laugh out loud in wonder and surprise, startling birds and frightening fish and feeling happy.

I could've sworn that leaf was falling up at me. But things are not always as they seem. It's all a matter of perspective.

In three days, I will leave the lake to take some time off from writing, to go home and see if my husband remembers me, and spend a week in California, celebrating Thanksgiving with our children and grandchildren and family-like friends.

As always, I will set two Thanksgiving tables for all the people I hold dear: One in my dining room (actually, my daughter's dining room this time) for those who'll be with us; and one in my heart for those who will not.

I'll save a place for you at that second table. Really. You don't need to bring a thing.

I hope your life, like mine, is so full of goodness and grace that when you try to count your blessings you'll have to keep borrowing fingers and toes.

Gratitude is the ultimate long view. It looks beyond the clatter of the moment and the tyranny of the urgent and the temporary setbacks in life – the hurts and fears, loss and disappointment that can seem to go on forever.

Instead, it shows us the sun swimming up from the depths of a lake and a leaf falling down from heaven.

Gratitude opens the eyes of the heart to see in the distance what is real and what is true.

Please know I am always thankful for your readership and especially your friendship.

Here's wishing you and yours a grateful Thanksgiving.

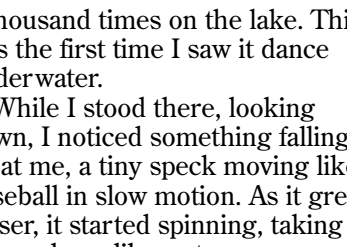
China eases 'one-child' policy but may be too late



Dale McFeatters
mcfeattersd@shns.com

Totalitarian governments pride themselves on thinking Big Thoughts. Unfortunately, totalitarian governments are structurally incapable of thinking through the inescapable consequences of their Big Thoughts.

One particularly apt example of this hubris was China's Great Leap Forward, when Chairman Mao decreed mass collectivization of agriculture and grandiose industrialization schemes like backyard blast furnaces.

Unfortunately, the economy leaped backward for the four years of the experiment and at a minimum 18 million Chinese died by starvation or execution as the Communist Party tried ever more draconian measures to make an unworkable policy work.

Now China's rulers are gently unwinding one of those Big Thoughts – the hated one-child per family policy intended to solve what was seen as runaway population growth.

The policy worked: The birth rate fell from 4.77 children per woman in the early 1970s to 1.64 in 2011, according to the U.S. The policy was enforced through huge fines, official harassment and in extreme cases by forced abortions and unofficially by infanticide of girl babies who were thought less desirable.

The long-term consequences are now becoming glaringly evident: China expects its working-age population, ages 15 to 64, to shrink by 67 million workers over the next 20 years. Fewer workers mean employers will be forced to pay higher wages, depriving the Chinese economy of one of is great cost advantages.

The shortage of female babies – published figures put the male-to-female birth ratio at 1.13 to 1.17, the most unbalanced on earth – means there will be a shortage of marriageable young women when the post one-child generation comes of age in 20 years or so. And there will be the problem, by no means exclusive to China, of a stagnant or shrinking working age population supporting a growing population of the elderly.

The new policy allows couples to have a second child if one of the parents was an only child. The change may add only 1 million to 2 million above normal population growth.

Initial reaction to easing the policy was favorable but as with so many Big Thoughts it might ultimately not work – maybe the Chinese no longer want larger families thanks to affluence and urbanization.

A study by the Shanghai city government cited by The Wall Street Journal said that couples born after 1980, the year the policy went into effect, say that on average couples are willing to have only 1.2 children. And the average number of children born per couple in the city is 0.7, well below the replacement rate.

In solving one problem, China's rulers have succeeded in creating more new ones.

Evelyn Mae (Capobianco) Griffy

Evelyn Mae (Capobianco) Griffy, 57, of Fort White, FL, passed away Friday, Nov 15th, 2013, after an extended illness. Born in Roanoke Rapids, NC, to Evelyn (Browning) Capobianco and the late John J. Capobianco, Sr, on Oct 28th, 1956, Evie graduated from Martin County High School in Stuart, FL, in 1976. She married the love of her life, Daniel Griffy, in 1982 and they lived together in Stuart, FL, where they had one son before relocating to Fort White. Evie was a homemaker and a loving wife and mother. She loved knitting and sewing all kinds of different projects. She also enjoyed drawing and painting, and she completed a large number of posed portraits. She started drawing at a very young age, and despite having to overcome a sight handicap she became an outstanding artist. She was a life-long Elvis Presley fan and was thrilled to finally travel to Graceland with her brother in 2011. She was a very kind and caring person, and despite being sick she maintained a positive attitude and remained in good spirits. She enjoyed all kinds of crafts, spending time with her family, and reading, and she loved watching Star Trek and other classic TV programs. Her loving manner and her smile will be remembered by all. She is survived by her husband, Daniel Griffy; son Adam Griffy; mother Evelyn Browning; brother, John Capobianco, Jr; and a host of aunts, uncles, cousins, nieces, and nephews who she loved dearly. A gathering of family and friends was held at the Griffy home in Fort White, and interment of her ashes will be held at a later date. The family requests that, in lieu of flowers, donations be made to the American Diabetes Association, P.O. Box 11454, Alexandria, VA, 22312; http://www.diabetes.org, GATEWAY-FOREST LAWN FUNERAL HOME, (386-752-1954) 3596 S. US Hwy 441, Lake City, FL, is in charge of arrangements.

Ed C. Walthall

Mr. Ed C. Walthall, 86, former President and Publisher of The Daily News in Palatka, passed away on November 15, 2013 at HopeWest Hospice in Grand Junction, CO, after a brief illness. Edward Carrey Walthall, Jr., was born October 26, 1927 in Grand Island, Nebraska, to Edward and Marie Walthall. He attended Hastings College in Hastings, Nebraska. Walthall began his newspaper career in Fairbury, Nebraska in 1947, where he met Marion Stafford. They were married six months later, on April 18, 1948. Ed and Marion celebrated their 65th Wedding Anniversary in April, 2013. Ed's newspaper career included papers in Nebraska, Texas, Kansas, Alabama, Louisiana, Massachusetts and Florida. From 1969 to 1974, in addition to his duties at The Palatka Daily News, he was executive vice-president and publisher for newspapers in Lake City, Leesburg, Sebring and Avon Park, all owned by The New York Times. In 1974, Ed was named Corporate Development Director and subsequently Associate Publisher of The Daily Sentinel in Grand Junction, Colorado, until 1977. Then, after a brief absence, Ed returned to Grand Junction in 1981, and was National Co-op Advertising Director for The Daily Sentinel until his retirement in 1992. Surviving are his wife, Marion; daughters Marcia Ottie (Steve), Atlantic Beach; and Karen Thomasson, Grand Junction, CO; a son, Jeff Walthall, Greeley, CO; grandsons Steve Ottie (Amanda), Jacksonville; and Jason Ottie (Jessica), Waynesville, NC; and six great-grandchildren. A memorial service was Tuesday, November 19, 2013 at Redlands United Methodist Church in Grand Junction. These prescription sleeping pills will give you the zzz's

DEAR PHARMACIST

jostery@comcast.net

Dear Pharmacist,
What are the best medications to help me sleep? I've tried all the natural remedies, I need something stronger! — V.E., Sacramento, California

Answer: Why, as a nation, do we have trouble sleeping? It should be such a natural act. I urge you to find the underlying cause of your chronic insomnia and to change your sleep habits because you can't rely on medication forever.

Chronic insomnia may be caused by sleep apnea and sleeping pills in this case are dangerous. For some of you, a deficiency of your sleep hormone, melatonin, causes you to wake up very early. The point is that sleep disorders aren't always related to neurotransmitter imbalances, so sleeping pills are not a 'wet blanket' like everyone thinks. You can take them for awhile, but they just mask the underlying problem. Here are the most popular medications:

Ambien (zolpidem): Introduced in 1992, this helps put you to sleep, and keep you asleep. Many people reported having morning grogginess, so the makers came out with a controlled-release version in 2005 that works longer. Ambien usually puts you to sleep within 15 to 30 minutes. There are other brand names containing the same chemical ingredients such as a sublingual low-dose tablet called "Intermezzo" that you can take in the middle of the night. There's "Zolpimist" an oral spray. Every now and then you hear a report of someone sleep-driving, having sex, making phone calls, sleepwalking and cooking meals.

Lunesta (eszopiclone): Everything I said about Ambien applies to this drug, it is similar in mechanism of action, as well of duration of action.

Sonata (Zaleplon): Again, similar to Ambien, however, it has a very short duration of action. The advantage is you won't have morning grogginess, however the disadvantage is you may be staring at the alarm clock by 3 a.m.

Rozerem (Ramelteon): This is my favorite sleep medication because it affects your melatonin receptors, increasing the length of time you sleep. You can start and stop as often as you wish, since there is no physical dependence. The drug may affect prolactin and testosterone levels, so if you use it long-term (greater than 3 or 4 months), have these levels evaluated.

Silenor (Doxepine): Introduced in 2010, this medication blocks histamine receptors. It contains the same active ingredient as a popular antidepressant, but in a much lower dose. I like that it does not have addictive potential.

Benzodiazepine drugs (temazepam, alprazolam, clonazepam, lorazepam and others): Very affordable, and used for decades, these drugs have strong addictive potential and may cause daytime drowsiness. This category helps with some seizures.

Insurance companies may have restrictions on which sleeping pills are covered, and will obviously expect you to buy generic; they often require you to try other approaches to your insomnia first. If anyone is interested in natural herbs or vitamins to help you sleep, I'll send you an expanded version of this article, just sign up for my free newsletter at www.DearPharmacist.com

Combining medications could put your child at risk

From staff reports

GAINESVILLE — The use of medications to treat mental health conditions in children is on the rise, bringing with it an increase in the combinations of those drugs, an area in which there has been very little research — until now.

Almut Winterstein, Ph.D., a University of Florida College of Pharmacy professor in pharmaceutical outcomes and policy, is conducting a two-year study to identify potentially harmful combinations of psychotropic medications in children who receive Medicaid, and to help Medicaid discourage the use of those combinations. Psychotropic drugs are all medications used to treat mental health conditions, including stimulants to treat attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, antidepressants and antipsychotics.

"There are very few clinical studies that have been conducted really looking at the efficacy or safety of the use of combinations of psychotropic medications," Winterstein said. "Yet many children do receive combinations, and we don't know what that mean."

Many parents and health care providers have been concerned about the unknown effects of children taking multiple medications prescribed by various practitioners, Winterstein said.

"The largest growth in ADHD diagnosis is attributed to pediatricians and not to psychiatrists," Winterstein said. "So you actually have several providers now who prescribe psychotropic medications and coordination between providers and understanding of the various intents when psychotropic drugs were prescribed may be suboptimal."

This study is one of three distinct projects Winterstein is conducting as part of a $510,788 research contract from the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services and the Agency for Health Care Administration. Administered through the Florida Center for Medicaid and the Uninsured at UF, the contract allows Winterstein and her team to purchase Medicaid billing data from 29 states to complete this research.

Study: Kids are less fit than their parents were

By MARILYNN MARCHIONE
AP Chief Medical Writer

DALLAS — Today's kids can't keep up with their parents. An analysis of studies on millions of children around the world finds they don't run as fast or as far as their parents did when they were young.

On average, it takes children 90 seconds longer to run a mile than their counterparts did 30 years ago. Heart-related fitness has declined 5 percent per decade since 1975 for children ages 9 to 17.

The American Heart Association, whose conference featured the research on Tuesday, says it's the first to show that children's fitness has declined worldwide over the last three decades.

"It makes sense. We have kids that are less active than before," said Dr. Stephen Daniels, a University of Colorado pediatrician and spokesman for the heart association.

Health experts recommend that children 6 and older get 60 minutes of moderately vigorous activity accumulated over a day. Only one-third of American kids do now.

"Kids aren't getting enough opportunities to build up that activity over the course of the day," Daniels said. "Many schools, for economic reasons, don't have any physical education at all. Some rely on recess" to provide exercise.

Sam Kass, a White House chef and head of first lady Michelle Obama's Let's Move program, stressed the role of schools in a speech to the conference on Monday.

"We are currently facing the most sedentary generation of children in our history," Kass said.

Expert: Players still in fear of concussions

By DENNIS PASSA
Associated Press

AUSTRALIA — Chris Nowinski, a Harvard graduate and former wrestler, is a co-director of the Center for the Study of Traumatic Encephalopathy at Boston University, otherwise known as the "Brain Bank."

It is one of the leading research groups in the world on the effects concussions are having on athletes, highlighted by recent cases involving NFL players.

Nowinski, in Melbourne meeting with officials from the Australian Football League players association, says "there still has to be a culture change with the players ... they still have that impression that their job or role might be at risk."

Oh, My Aching Back!
By: Brian SGANGA

How many of us have woken up, taken a step and thought, "Oh, my aching back"? We ask "What did I do?" or "How did this happen?" The list of possible causes is almost endless. A good physical therapist knows what questions to ask, and what tests to perform to help provide you with the answers that you need. More importantly, a good physical therapist knows how to treat your pain that could provide you permanent relief with only a brief course of physical therapy.

Your low back complex consists of your spine, pelvis and hips. Any problem in any of these areas can result in low back pain of various types and degrees. Have you had sharp low back pain on one side when you walk or even worse when you try to use stairs and no one can seem to figure it out? It could be a simple, yet painful, imbalance in your pelvic anatomy that can be resolved in 4 – 6 physical therapy sessions. Have you had in your back that is worse in the morning and gets better during the day? You may have some age related problems that can be relieved with a brief course of physical therapy and adherence to a simple home exercise program.

If you have back pain, or have had it and don't want it to return, give us a call. Our business is putting your body back in motion.

Schools sealed for Lady Tigers

Columbia High's Caleigh McCauley, Brandy Morgan and Kayli Kvistad sign softball scholarships on Tuesday.

Kvistad, McCauley, Morgan sign Tuesday

By BRANDON FINLEY
bfinley@lakecityreporter.com

Columbia High head coach Jimmy Williams had mixed feelings about letting his trio of seniors sign to college programs on Tuesday.

Kayli Kvistad (University of Florida), Caleigh McCauley (Valdosta State University) and Brandy Morgan made it official by signing on the dotted line at Columbia High School's Auditorium.

"For them its an exciting time," Williams said. "For us, it's a sad time as we have to let them go."

Williams is proud of the Lady Tigers and said it all starts at home.

"They bring good parents with them that really contributed to our success as a program and that's where they get their working habits," Williams said. "They've been really great the last three years as far doing things that we need to make us be better, so the apple doesn't fall far from the tree."

Williams said that he's been a fan of these girls' play for a long time.

"I've watched them all play since they were 12," Williams said. "Brandy, the first time I saw her play outfield, I thought she might be the best outfielder I've ever seen. McCauley played on my team when she was 14. The better the pitching, the better she hit it. It's just amazing that she has the knack for hitting good pitching. To me, they're like my own kids. Kayli, you get the reputation of being a good ball player growing up and I try to keep track of those things. Her reputation was she was good, but she's way better than her reputation. She's by far the best hitting ball player I've seen."

Williams said it's a good thing for all involved to watch the girls succeed.

"When they sign a college scholarship, it just makes our community, school and program look better," Williams said. "They're just straight up all-American girls. They're the type of kid that you'd be proud to have as your own. Before these three came along, we were happy to win districts. Now the goal is to go to the Final Four and win it. They just changed the whole mindset of the program."

For McCauley, the thing that made her a college

Columbia High's Lonnie Underwood falls foward for more yards against St. Augustine High.

Home again

Columbia returns to Tiger Stadium for second round.

By BRANDON FINLEY
bfinley@lakecityreporter.com

Columbia High returns home for the FHSAA Class 6A Region 1 semifinals with Bartram Trail High coming into the Jungle.

Head coach Brian Allen said it's a great feeling for the team and community to be playing at home.

"It's an exciting feeling," Allen said. "We didn't anticipate having that opportunity. It's a good feeling. It's always good to get one or two of them at home in the playoffs. It's an opportunity for the community to see to us in the playoffs. Over the last three years, we've only had two losses here. It's a nice feeling as opposed to being on the road."

And the Tigers look to be healthier than they've been in a long time heading into the game with Lonnie Underwood back at full strength.

"Looking at that 73-yard run, that was kind of what told me he was back to 100 percent," Allen said. "I wasn't sure he was totally back. He popped that run, turned on the jets and broke a tackle. All those things said he's back and that's what we need at this point in the season. Having him back to form is going to be big for what we do."

Allen also says he's in a good spot with two quarterabacks playing at a high level.

"It's been the conversation all year and nothing has changed from that," Allen said. "Going into the week we were going to rotate two to one with Nate (Taylor). It'll be similar this week. Jake (Thomas) will probably get the two this week and Nate gets the one. If he's hot, he'll get it. That's how it's going to work."

Allen said it's a good problem for the Tigers to have.

"They all do different things that are beneficial to this program," Allen said. "The hot guy will have the opportunity. You don't know who is hot until you put them in. Hopefully the competition will make them both be efficient and help us win football games with them knowing together we can do something special."

player was her determination.

"I guess the will to win and want to succeed," McCauley said. "I'm a Florida State fan, but they don't have my field of study, Valdosta State was my No. 1 school. I've been wanting to go there for a very long time. I didn't think I could ever do it, and the fact that I am means more than anything."

Morgan said it was the atmosphere that felt like Lake City that made choosing her college destination an easy one.

"I chose my school, because when I got on campus it felt like a second home," Morgan said. "Being a college ball player, you put in the work outside of hours even when practice is over. So it's just the hard work paying off."

Kvistad has been a Florida commitment for some time now, with many colleges offering the star a chance to play at the next level. In the end, it came down to academics and that's why the Gators got the final call from the Lady Tigers' slugger.

"I chose Florida, because if I had the choice, I always wanted to stay home," Kvistad said. "It came down to Florida and Florida State. If I ever got hurt and couldn't play, Florida is where I wanted to be academically. I spent numerous hours practicing and emailing coaches. I just think all the hard and dedication paid off."

Of course the Lady Tigers have one more year with the trio, and they'll look for another state championship.

DEAR ABBY

Wife hoping for baby wants husband to stop using drugs

www.dearabby.com

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I want to start a family, but until now our circumstances have not made this possible. After a big move and starting a new business, we have decided it's about time.

My problem is my husband uses drugs to relieve stress. I don't feel he abuses them; it just takes the edge off after a hard day's work like a glass of wine does for me sometimes.

I would like him to stop taking the drugs while we are trying to conceive in case it could affect the baby. He is unwilling and it makes me crazy. I have decided that if he can't do this, he isn't ready to be a father. On the other hand, he's a hard worker, and I wonder if by asking him to do this I am being selfish. Please give me some advice. — READY FOR MOTHERHOOD IN MISSISSIPPI

DEAR READY FOR MOTHERHOOD: You are NOT being selfish, you are being prudent. According to Dr. June Reinisch, director emerita of the Kinsey Institute for Research in Sex, Gender and Reproduction: "There is some evidence that suggests certain drugs can attach to the sperm and therefore affect the fetus. So the best plan for a healthy baby would be for the man to be as 'clean' as possible before he starts to make a child. This is because sperm are produced about three months before they are released."

DEAR ABBY: One of my husband's relatives is filing for bankruptcy for the third time. His wife recently started to receive disability. I believe they are abusing the system.

I know she was not truthful on her disability application. I work in the health care field and in the past have completed evaluations for disability claims. I know the only way she would meet the requirements would be if she misrepresented her current abilities.

Everyone else in the family works hard to support themselves, so I can't understand how this attitude is tolerated. What has pushed me over the edge is they have announced they're going to have a "bankruptcy party." They have invited everyone over to enjoy food and beverages that will be purchased with a credit card they have no intention of paying.

I feel an obligation to alert the disability office to her misrepresentation. My husband agrees that what they're doing is wrong, but he doesn't want me to do anything about it. This has caused a problem between us because I no longer want to go to family dinners. I know if I keep going and have to listen to them laugh about using taxpayer dollars to support their laziness, I will eventually explode. What do you think about this? — SOMEWHERE IN THE U.S.A.

DEAR SOMEWHERE: I think your relatives are committing fraud and that it should be reported. Disability payments were meant for individuals who truly need them, not those who are gaming the system. And if you choose not to associate with these kinds of morally bankrupt individuals, you shouldn't have to. I can see how it would ruin your appetite. Shenanigans like this should be investigated and the abusers prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

HOROSCOPES

THE LAST WORD

Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don't let emotions push you over the top. The less said, the better. Channel your energy into work and getting ahead, not what someone else is doing to make your life difficult. Refraining from expressing a reaction that will keep an assailant at arm's length. ★★

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A travel destination that promotes cultural differences will be a learning experience. Educational pursuits will enable you to expand your interests as well as use what you have discovered to help you prosper. A property deal or joint venture looks promising. ★★★★

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Embrace change; adaptability is what keeps you in the game. Your ability to multitask along with your unpredictable nature will make it difficult for any opponent you encounter to match your wit, versatility and unique blend of intellect and charm. ★★★

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Easy does it. You need a creative outlet or a way to express your feelings. Impulsive moves based on an assumption must be avoided; however, sharing your intentions and showing affection will help to improve your love life. ★★★

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Keep your intentions a secret until you have every little detail worked out and you are ready to execute your plans. A premature disclosure will lead to conflict and a series of delays. Reach out to someone who has something to offer. ★★★

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Communication will buy you an invitation to a function that will help you advance personally or professionally. The people you meet or share ideas with today will help contribute to your success. Love is in the stars and romance is highlighted. ★★

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Step back from a situation that can lead to relationship problems. Listen to complaints but don't attempt to make sense out of what's going on until you have had sufficient time to gather the facts and consider your options. ★★★★★

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Gatherings will lead to valuable information. Talk to people who can offer an inside view of a situation you don't understand. Romance will ease your stress and improve your personal life. An unusual change at home will turn out to be beneficial. ★★★

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Treat relationships with tender, loving care. Anger or using force will get you nowhere. Back away from any situation that has the potential to explode. Focus on home, family and making your personal environment friendly and welcoming. ★★★

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Sign on the dotted line. Whether you are making a personal or business proposal, you have the upper hand. Your insight, coupled with your ability to handle any situation you face, will make transactions easy. Romance is highly suggested. ★★★

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do what's expected of you and keep moving. It won't pay to get into an argument with someone. Whatever change you want to make, do so quickly and without drawing attention to your plans. Avoid an emotional force play. ★★★

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Implement your ideas and you will receive compliments as well as enthusiasm and whatever assistance you need to complete what you are trying to do. A celebration will turn into a romantic realization that will improve an important relationship. ★★★★★
