COUNTY COMMISSION PREVIEW

New water plant on table

Ellisville facility needs replacing, but funding comes up short.

By STEVEN RICHMOND
srichmond@lakecityreporter.com

The Board of County Commissioners will this evening discuss a $210,437 funding deficit hampering construction of a proposed replacement to the Ellisville wastewater treatment plant.

The new plant, which would be located on 22 acres near SE Giles Martin Ave. roughly one mile southeast of the existing facility, would serve as a replacement to the 40-year-old original located near the intersection of I-75 and US 441.

"The longevity expectancy for a plant like this is about 20 to 25 years," Operations Manager Kevin Kirby said. "It has extremely outlived its shelf life to the point of disrepair."

'It has ... outlived its shelf life to the point of disrepair.' — Operations Manager Kevin Kirby However, Columbia County Operations Manager Kirby sent a memo explaining that funding for the estimated cost of construction wasn't entirely present as of Nov. 7.

"The county has approximately $539,563 available through State Revolving Funds (LP 6025)," Kirby's memo reads. "The cost for replacement is estimated at $750,000 leaving a deficit of $210,437. To proceed with replacement of the plant, an additional funding source of $210,437 will need to be identified."

The proposed replacement facility would initially operate at a 0.015

Is track the next big thing in sports tourism?

The Columbia County Tourist Development Council is considering the possibility of making Columbia County a center for youth track and field in much the same way it has become a hub for baseball and softball.

Bill Jones, owner of Habitat Investors, made a 20-minute presentation at the TDC meeting Wednesday where he promoted an idea of hosting youth invitational and potentially regional high school track and field events at the Columbia High School football stadiums, track and field area.

Jones said the move would have to be approved by school officials and approximately $1.4M worth of improvements and renovations made at the local high school track and field.

Jones said his children participate in cross-country events and he thinks Columbia High School could be a suitable venue if the changes were made and an agreement could be reached for use of the facility.

The $1,430,000 worth of improvements Jones spoke of included approximately $1,240,000 for physical improvements and equipment purchases and $190,000 for aesthetics. He said he the figures came from an architect in another

Fun on Friday before football

Pinemount Palooza set for 4-7 p.m.

Hayrides and bounce houses, science experiments and photo booths — the Friday evening Pinemount Palooza festival offers Columbia County an evening of wholesome, family fun before the football game.

Held at Pinemount Elementary School, the festival lasts from 4 to 7 p.m. Parents can enter free, but children's arm-bands cost $10 for an unlimited evening of fun activities. Food and tickets for raffle items — two bikes and a stocking stuffed with toys — are not included in the admission price.

The event supports the elementary school by providing funding to teachers and students after the school experienced a recent budget cut, said PTO president Sarah Sandlin.

"The whole community is invited to come out and enjoy," Sandlin said. "The weather is supposed to be nice. We're excited to have a night of fun with friends and family."

This is Pinemount's first year holding the Palooza, but they already have an evening packed with entertainment. As guests arrive, Pinemount's cupstackers will entertain by speed-stacking pyramids of cups around 5:15 p.m. After they finish, Pinemount teacher Jeremy Striebel "The Science Guy" will wow the audience with nitrogen-based science experiments at approximately 5:45 p.m., and at 6:15 p.m. magician Brandon Chapman will perform card tricks. The drawing for the two children's bikes and stocking of toys will take place at 6:45 p.m.

"It's fun, it's entertaining, but there's learning as well," Sandlin said. "We think a lot of our Pinemount family will

Putnam pushing for a statewide water policy

By JIM TURNER
The News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE — Agriculture Commissioner Adam Putnam continues to push for lawmakers to remember that South Florida isn't the only part of the state where water quality and quantity have become dire issues.

"There is an extraordinary bias to the south at the expense of the springs and Apalachicola Bay," Putnam told reporters in the Capitol this week.

As the Florida Legislature is being asked to consider a $220 million package to redirect water and reduce pollutants flowing from Lake Okeechobee, Putnam wants lawmakers to consider other issues. That includes the challenges of pollutants entering the state's springs, the St. Johns River and Tampa Bay, reducing pollution entering Lake Okeechobee from the north and the declining conditions of Apalachicola Bay in the Panhandle.

Columbia County Commissioner Ron Williams applauded Putnam's push.

"We may not be the biggest populated area, but our quality of life depends on the quantity and quality of the water sources in our region," he said. "It's just as important to protect these resources in North Central Florida as it is in South Florida."

Florida has filed a federal lawsuit against Georgia about a shortage of freshwater flowing into Apalachicola Bay. Florida argues that heavy water consumption in the metro Atlanta area has reduced downstream flows into the bay, endangering Apalachicola's oyster industry.

"If the Everglades were suffering from inadequate freshwater flows coming from Georgia, the whole state would have a level of interest, and a level of decibels, much higher than what they seem to have for Franklin County, and that's not right," Putnam said.

Putnam addressed his concerns about the need for a statewide water-management plan in October to members of the House and Senate.

The appearances before House and Senate committees came before the Senate Select Committee on Indian River Lagoon and Lake Okeechobee Basin proposed a $220 million package that stems from pollutants being discharged from the lake into waterways such as the St. Lucie and Caloosahatchee rivers.

The Senate's package includes a wide range of projects, such as $90 million that would be spread over three years to bridge a 2.6-mile section of the Tamiami Trail west of Miami. Groups such as the

The Rolling Stones are headed to Australia, and they’re taking Mick Taylor along.

The enduring rock ‘n’ roll favorites announced Tuesday they’ll be playing a gig March 22 at the Adelaide Oval. They haven’t played in Australia since 2006. A news release says ex-member Taylor will be a special guest for the concert.

The Stones will be the first entertainment event at the Oval, a sports field that’s undergone a refurbishment. It’s been nearly two decades since the band visited Adelaide, leading Richards to say, “It’s been awhile, right?” in a promo video.

Woman sues BET over ‘The Game’

MIAMI — A South Florida woman is suing the Black Entertainment Television network in a dispute over a Facebook page she developed to promote the show “The Game.”

Attorneys for Stacey Mattocks, who lives in Broward County, say in court papers that BET wrongly took control of the page after the two sides failed to reach a financial agreement. BET wants the lawsuit dismissed, contending Mattocks hasn’t raised any valid legal claims.

Mattocks says one measure of her page’s value was the 7.7 million “likes” it amassed by summer 2012. BET counters that the number of “likes” are not grounds for her to win damages in the lawsuit.

A preliminary scheduling hearing on the case is set for Thursday in federal court in Fort Lauderdale.

According to BET, “The Game” is a show that “follows the lives of professional football players and their significant others as they navigate game, family and friends.” It has been renewed for a seventh season in 2014.

pleaded guilty Wednesday to a misdemeanor charge of cocaine possession and was sentenced to a year’s probation.

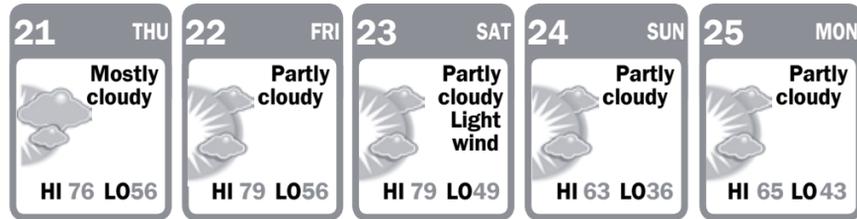

“I’ve hit a bottom where I realize I need help,” Radel told a judge in acknowledging that he purchased 3.5 grams of cocaine from an undercover police officer.

As part of a plea agreement Radel acknowledged he agreed to buy the cocaine for $250 in a Washington, D.C., neighborhood on Oct. 29. After the undercover officer gave Radel the drugs federal agents confronted him, court documents show. Radel agreed to talk with the agents and invited them to his apartment, where he also retrieved a vial of cocaine he had in the home, the documents said.

The charges against Radel were made public Tuesday, and Radel said in a statement then that he struggles with alcoholism and will seek treatment and counseling.

state based on retail costs, but he's been told the project could be done for less money.

Jones said the invitationals events would be for athletes aged 6 - 18 years old and several of the events could be two-day affairs.

Jones also noted that some Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) and United States Track Association (USTA) events could also be held at the facility.

"These are competitions that we can attract," Jones said. "We feel we can attract these events because UF stopped offering it for youngsters and USF is now charging."

Jones said the facility could also host Florida High School Athletic Association (FHSAA) regional competitions and combined with the invitationals, the site could host 40 events annually.

Dennille Decker, Lake City - Columbia County Chamber of Commerce executive director, voiced her support for the proposed project.

"We feel this would certainly add to the community and what we have here," she said at the meeting.

become Florida's healthiest county and highlighted the Get Fit Lake City initiative and that many residents said unless they have a membership with a local gym they have no place to exercise. She said this venue could offer the locale for residents to focus on their fitness.

"This seems like a win-win for our community," she said.

Scarlet Frisina, who served as the meeting's chairman, said her child also competes in track and field and she's attended a few events in other areas and noted how many people were in attendance.

"We have nowhere in Columbia County to do anything like this except Columbia High School or Fort White High School and we need so much more," she said. "I definitely think there would be support in the community for this."

Jones gave statistics from the cross-county event that was recently held at the Alligator Lake Public Recreation Area, the 2013 Alligator Invitational, and said there was 136 athletes that rented rooms in the local hotels for the event.

Jones also noted once the improvements are made, other events such as middle school track and field events, paralympics, Special Olympics, band competitions, JROTC drill contests, soccer, 7-on-7 football camps, pee wee football and even movie nights for the community could be held at the site.

He said the current facility can hold no such events because upgrades need to be made.

"You have a single use facility. With what I'm promoting here today you're going to end up with a $7 million facility that's a multi-use facility," Jones said.

The TDC Board did not make a recommendation on whether to support the project, but asked Jones to return at a later date so more questions could be asked about the proposal.

"It's an interesting concept," said Nick Patel, TDC member following Jones' presentation. "The board needs to look into it and study it and come up with some funding to get this done."

ANOTHER VIEW

Obamacare: A state of chaos

President Barack Obama's temporary fix to his health care law doesn't really fix much at all. In fact, it will certainly lead to more chaos and may very well result in higher premiums for all consumers.

Obama last week declared that millions of Americans who received cancellation notices because of provisions in his health care law will now be allowed to renew those policies, provided their insurance companies and state insurance regulators agree.

Insurers and some regulators, who according to The New York Times were not consulted in advance of Obama's announcement, immediately reacted with dire warnings.

"This decision continues different rules for different policies and threatens to undermine the new market and may lead to higher premiums and market disruption in 2014 and beyond," said Jim Donelon, Louisiana's insurance regulator.

His frustration is understandable. The industry has been preparing for the law for years and has been implementing new plans that comply with its provisions.

But this is what happens when a president with an exclusionary management style boxes himself into a corner with flawed legislation and empty promises.

Obama was right to honor his promise to let all Americans keep their existing policies. In fact, he had no choice politically as insurgents within his own party were threatening to support Republican legislation that undermines the entire health care law.

However tempting the law's collapse may sound, that's not what is needed now, as indicated by the insurance industry's reaction to this temporary fix. The law's implementation is too far down the road to pull the plug entirely, as Republicans are so eager to do.

Instead, the industry, the administration and the country are left to hope that enough people who are young and healthy, and who were either uninsured or satisfied with cheaper policies that offered substandard coverage, will participate in the new insurance marketplace and provide insurers with the premiums needed to cover the more robust policies Obamacare dictates.

After all, the problem isn't that some people lost their policies. Discarding substandard policies that don't provide adequate coverage is not necessarily a bad thing, considering many of the millions getting cancellations can find better coverage at better prices on the exchanges.

No, the problem was that Obama sold his plan on a false promise that they would not lose their policies....

Obamacare has at its core a noble premise: affordable and good health care for all Americans. Its requirements that pre-existing conditions be covered, and its provision that parents be allowed to keep their children on their plans until their mid-20s, are proving beneficial and popular. The subsidized policies it offers can help the poor and keep them from seeking more costly emergency room treatment.

Once the full rollout has occurred next year, and the full consequences are known, the public will have a better sense of where fixes are needed, or whether the entire law needs to be jettisoned. After that, Congress can act accordingly.

Single-payer health insurance a singularly bad idea

The progressives' single-payer solution to Obamacare won't work any better than the president's delay of policy cancellations, but there are some ideas that should be pursued.

As Americans left and right were losing insurance policies because of the Affordable Care Act, some progressives reiterated a plan that would make things worse. In imitation of a slew of European and other countries, they want the United States to adopt a so-called single-payer system in which insurance companies go hang and the government funds all of health care.

It's not that they dislike all of the Obama health law or even that they are entirely wrong about some of the problems we've had in health care delivery. They are right that our health costs are too high and that we've long needed to insure people struggling without success to get insurance for both bodily and financial self-protection. It's still gibberish that micromanaging, all-controlling, hubristic Obamacare or single-payer models in Europe and elsewhere are the solution.

While Obamacare pluses exist, the minuses we have seen so far are nothing compared to what we will very likely see in lost jobs, spiraling premiums for the non-subsidized, governmental overspending, fewer doctors, crippled hospitals and millions still without insurance at the end of the day. And, not so incidentally, none of this was set right by the president's illegal pretense of supposedly doing something meaningful about insurance policy cancellations.

His pledge was that insurance companies can forget Obamacare standards for a year so that people might keep their old policies. Excuse me, but he is obliged under the Constitution to execute the laws, not rewrite them solo. It is true that presidents are given flexibility in putting them into effect, but there was three years preparation for this and a temporary delay likely creates more problems than it solves, assuming it truly creates a delay. What we have here is pure politics to prevent Congress from substantive reshaping of Obama's pride and joy and a further dangerous step into executive branch autocracy.

The single-payer alternative for one and all is also more razzle-dazzle than realistic remedy. Experts from various think tanks have shown it actually can have such bad effects as reducing the quality of care. Among their points is that it leads to long waits for care, often affecting the elderly most of all. One critic argues it only saves money through rationing Americans would not like a bit, and large majorities in some countries with single-payer systems don't like the extensive controls much, either, as polls show. That's one reason many of those countries have been allowing far more private insurance and care than in the past.

Of course, if you don't do the rationing, you have runaway costs with single-payer systems. Our own federal Medicare and Medicaid programs are already in deep trouble, and, without reform, will be unsustainable over the long run. Make Obamacare essentially another version of Medicare (or even leave it alone) and there might be no ark that can save us from the flood of red ink of the sort now drowning so many European welfare states.

Many progressives note we Americans have shorter lives on average than in those welfare states, but that's more likely because of accidents, homicides, lifestyles and genetic inheritance than anything having to do with health care. One expert notes that 90 percent of U.S. adults report themselves as healthy, which is higher than in any other country in the world, and when you look at such a major matter as treating cancer, you find no one does it better.

I am not saying all is rosy or that it is enough for Republicans to just keep kicking the Democratic deed of Obamacare. They need to focus on such possible answers as vouchers for catastrophic coverage, health savings accounts, curbing malpractice suits on a state level, encouraging imitation of some first-class clinics and promoting interstate health insurance competition. And, if they get a chance, they need to address such matters one small, prudent step at a time, not with a leap into a vast unknown that then reveals itself with unending pain.

Hoping 2012 was exception for highway deaths

Traffic deaths rose 1,082 last year to 33,561, a 3.3 percent increase over the previous year. In itself this is not an alarming statistic but it is worrisome in that it reflects the first increase since 2005.

With the exception of that year, traffic deaths have been falling annually since 1950, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. Traffic officials think the annual decrease in fatalities will be shown to have resumed when this year is out. One hopes they're right.

A look at the numbers shows that the fatalities are almost certainly related to the changing ways people have of getting around. Most of the increase — 72 percent — involved motorcyclists and pedestrians and came in the first quarter of the year when the weather is at its worst and there is less daylight. Bicyclist deaths rose 6.5 percent.

Dale McFeatters
mcfeattersd@shns.com

One doesn't have to look far for the causes.

Motorcycle rider fatalities were up 7.1 percent, increasing for the third straight year. Ten times as many riders died not wearing helmets in states without helmet laws than in states with universal helmet laws.

Deaths in crashes involving drunk drivers increased 4.6 percent to 10,332, and most of those involved drivers who had blood alcohol levels of about twice the legal limit.

For whatever reason, motorists are inclined not to use seat belts at night. Almost two-thirds of those who died in nighttime crashes were not wearing seat belts. NHTSA says more than 3,000 people are killed in crashes they would have survived had they been wearing a seat belt.

NHTSA is pushing technology to make driving safer — devices that prevent drunks from starting their cars; crash avoidance monitors to alert drivers of impending hazards; and warning devices to prevent rear-end collisions.

Still, the solutions to fewer highway deaths remain simple: seat belts, sobriety and common sense.

BIG SHOTS IN BRANFORD

From staff reports

BRANFORD— The Branford Camera Club hosted their 2nd Annual Photo Show on Friday, Nov. 15, at Cuzin's Restaurant in Branford.

There was a fantastic variety of subjects with over 110 entries on display and examples of several different photographic techniques, include HDR (high density resolution) and some photoshop creations. The images on display also included black and white photos, panoramic views, nature/animal photos, and people subjects. Photographs captured moods from serious to contemplative to whimsical — almost anything you can imagine.

The members who participated had a really great time, and guests were impressed by the local talent represented by the images displayed. There were entries from members who are new to photography, from amateurs and advanced amateurs, and from several professional photographers. By the end of set up, we actually ran out of room to display all the photos what were entered, but we made sure everyone had the opportunity to have their work shown.

Needless to say, we're already making plans for an even bigger and better show for next year, so watch for the announcement coming up.

Crawford selected as Superintendent of Year in Georgia

Nomination and selection was surprise to former Lake City resident.

From staff reports

Florida Gateway College alumnus Mike Crawford has been named the Georgia Golf Course Superintendents Association Superintendent of the Year.

Crawford, the director of golf course operations at Georgia's TPC Sugarloaf and a 1990 graduate of then Lake City Community College, was honored with the award during the association's annual banquet at the Atlanta Athletic Club earlier this month.

Crawford has been at TPC Sugarloaf for 18 years. Nominations are made by others in the industry, and a finalist from those nominees is selected by the association's board of directors, Crawford said. When attending the banquet on November 4, Crawford said he was unaware that he had been nominated for the award, much less the selected winner. But when he entered the room and saw his wife, daughter, and co-workers, he knew something was up.

"It's a very special award," he said. "In the state, there are some very good golf courses and some very good golf course superintendents. And the list of people who have won this award before, it's like a who's who of superintendents in our state. To be included in that list, it's a really special honor and means a lot to me."

The fact that the award nominees are voted on by peers in the industry makes it even more special, Crawford said.

Crawford came to Lake City in 1987 by way of Iowa. He had completed three years of college already, but found that he wasn't in love with his future profession. After working on a golf course one summer, he changed his major and enrolled at Iowa State University, though he quickly found out much of his future studies involved corn and soybeans.

"That just really wasn't what I was looking for," he said. By chance, a friend of his mother's had a connection in Lake City and told Crawford about Lake City Community College. While he couldn't enroll immediately for that semester, Crawford packed his bags and moved to Florida, where he worked on a golf course in South Florida until he was able to enroll.

Crawford graduated in 1990 and went to work at the Atlanta Athletic Club for Ken Mangum, another FGC alumnus and the college's 2012 Alumnus of the Year. A few years later, Crawford was called on to manage TPC Sugarloaf and became the golf course's first employee.

Crawford credits FGC with giving him a firm foundation that helped him get to where he is today.

"The education that I received there was fantastic, and the people there running the program have made it what it is today," he said. "There isn't a thing I would change in my career, and I'm very grateful for the opportunities that I've had thanks to my education."

A chilly reward for blood donors

From staff reports

Columbia Correctional Institution Warden Monroe Barnes joked that when he agreed to the challenge of jumping into the prison pond to encourage blood donors, he candidly thought his chances of getting wet were slim.

Beating Suwannee C.I. in the number of blood donations at this year's blood drive was all Columbia had to do for Barnes, Col. Ben Godwin, Maj. Carlos Norman and Maj. Laurie Owens to jump in the pond.

Tuesday, a dripping wet Barnes grinned big, with three of his soaked and chilled officers at his side.

COURTESY

The men were the first to hit the water and Maj. Laurie Owens quickly joined the group.

"Today we fulfilled our bet," Barnes said. "Everybody had to step up."

On paper, Suwannee looked to have the edge. The two prisons challenged each other to see which could have the most donors. In August the two had tied at 87 donations each, but on Oct. 1, 2 and 3, Suwannee pulled in 123 donations, far above Columbia's typical drive.

LifeSouth Donor Recruiter Tony Hudson said Columbia took the challenge seriously.

"It was like a war room in there trying to figure out how to beat Suwannee," Hudson said.

And by the time the bloodmobile rolled away on the third day of the blood drive, Columbia totaled 139 and the officers' fate was sealed.

With the sun shining bright on the 62-degree Tuesday afternoon, prison staff gathered by the wooden hand-painted sign that pointed to "pond jump" to see the action. There was no tip-toeing, but a running plunge and quick exit, as the four gathered for photos.

"I think I'm going to need a penicillin shot," Godwin joked, as he wiped the brown pond scum from his shorts.

Tigers chilled by Chiles, 4-0

Columbia High back in action at home on Friday.

By BRANDON FINLEY

The weather was cold and Columbia High's soccer team couldn't get warmed up in a 4-0 loss to Chiles High at the Columbia Youth Soccer Association fields on Wednesday.

Chiles scored two goals in the first half and added another two goals in the second half for the 4-0 final.

"It wasn't for a lack of effort," Columbia head coach Trevor Tyler said. "We played with a lot of effort — a lot of effort. We only had 13 kids tonight, so we were down to two subs."

Darren Brock came close to putting the Tigers on the board in the final seconds of the game with a shot that went off the crossbar, but Columbia was held scoreless.

The junior varsity played to a 1-1 tie.

The Tigers (1-3) will host Gainesville High at 7 p.m. on Friday.

Bears bring in six-game win streak

By BRANDON FINLEY

Columbia High's football program may come into the FHSAA Class 6A Region 1 Semifinal as the heavy favorite when looking at records on paper, but that doesn't mean the Tigers are buying into the hype.

Head coach Brian Allen won't let the Tigers look ahead with the Bartram Trail High Bears coming in winners of six-straight contest.

The Tigers have a 9-1 record, while the Bears have a 6-5 mark. Still, Allen knows that the Bears are a fierce foe after facing off against Bartram Trail in each of the last two years in playoff contests.

Allen feels that the Bears are fully capable of knocking off the Tigers if Columbia looks ahead.

"I know we feel that way for sure," Allen said. "I said it last week about them against Ed White.

They're a good football team and a well-coached football team. They have been through the tenure of Darrell Sutherland. It's the same thing as St. Augustine, because the kids believe what they're doing. You throw those records out."

The Bears will come in looking for revenge, but Allen said the thought of revenge will only help before the first whistle.

"It doesn't have much to (do with the game)," Allen said. "At this point in the season, you're trying to go out and play your best football. That determines the victor. That's what I expect out of them this week."

Bartram Trail is a versatile team with led by dual-threat quarterback P.J. Blazejowski. Allen only gave high marks to the signal caller.

"He's a tough little nut," Allen said. "I remember being in college and after the game you go to different guys and say you could play with us. You could play at Florida State. He's one of those kids that you say could play here. He's not super big in stature, but his play on the field looks like he plays with a ton of heart. He is a kid that could play in this program from what you see from him on tape. He gives 100 percent of what his frame gives. He gives every bit of it. He's a dual-threat kid. He has the ability to run the ball and is an efficient passer as well. They come out in the spread and try to establish the run, but he can make the throws from what I've seen as well."

David Coleman leads the Bears in rushing with 1,127 yards on the ground. He's a different style from Nick Urburu that the Tigers have faced in the past.

"Urburu was more of an option guy," Allen said. "They had dual-threats with him and (Dillon) Ragusa. They both played the slot position and did different things with them. I don't see that type of kid on film this year. There's definitely nobody with Urburu's speed. As far as looking at them, nobody jumps out as far as a show-stopper. They're just working their butts off every week."

The winner of Columbia and Bartram Trail will take on the winner of Choctawhatchee and Navarre high schools next Friday. Should Columbia and Choctawhatchee both win, Columbia would host a second playoff game. The Tigers would travel to Navarre for a second-straight season in the third round if both Columbia and Navarre win.

Playoff tickets for this week's game are on sale are today and Friday at McDuffie Marine & Sporting Goods. Reserved tickets are $9 and general admission tickets $8.

Carter wins Hurricane Jr. event

From staff reports

Tiara Carter, 13, of Lake City won her age division in a recent Hurricane Junior Golf Tour event.

The Johnson & Wales University Jr. Open at the Amelia River Golf Course in Amelia Island was Saturday and Sunday with more than 100 junior golfers competing in four age divisions.

Carter shot 78-79-157 (plus-13) for a one-shot win over Haley Danford of Longwood in the Girls 11-14 Division. Emily Chu of Bradenton was third at 165.

Carter shot her best-over two rounds, but had to scramble for the win. Holding a one-shot lead on the last hole, Carter hit a bad drive to the right and over a ditch. She hit a pitch shot to 15 feet and drained the putt. Danford missed an 8-foot birdie putt to tie.

Winners in all divisions received an invitation to the 2013 Tour Championship.

Scott, Kuchar favored at World Cup

Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — On current form and on a very familiar golf course, the two top-ranked players in the World Cup — Adam Scott and Matt Kuchar — are heavy favorites for individual honors when play begins today at Royal Melbourne.

The second-ranked Scott has won two tournaments in a row — the Australian PGA and the Australian Masters, which was held last week at Royal Melbourne.

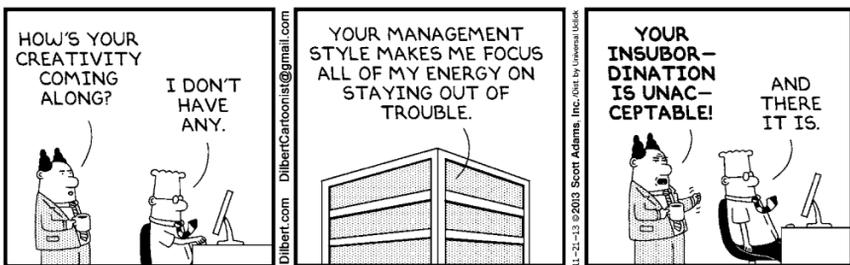

Seventh-ranked Kuchar led by two strokes late in the final round of the Masters before a double-bogey on 18 enabled Scott to successfully defend his title. Kuchar finished second.

"He has been in such good form," Kuchar said of Scott on Wednesday. "To at least give him a run it was awfully good. I stood five back going into Sunday. Unfortunately I got a bad break on 18 and that's part of golf."

DEAR ABBY

Wife feels violated after being awakened by husband's touch

Abigail Van Buren www.dearabby.com

DEAR ABBY: I love my husband very much. Until the last few years there have never been any problems in our 20-year marriage. I have depression and epilepsy, and I am on five different medications for them.

Sometimes when I have come out of a seizure, I have found that my clothes have been removed and my husband is "touching" me. Also, because the medication puts me into a deep sleep at night, I have half-awakened to him having sex with me. I am so groggy I can't respond. Is this right? I feel like I have been violated, but I haven't said anything to him. This causes me to cringe most of the time when he touches me now.

I'd like to get back to a normal love life, but I can't get over what he does to me when I'm not fully aware. How do I tell him I know what he has been doing without ruining my marriage? — FEELING VIOLATED IN RIO RANCHO, N.M.

DEAR FEELING VIOLATED: You feel violated because what your husband is doing is called spousal rape, and it's a criminal offense. Having sex with someone who is so doped up she (or he) can't give consent is a sexual assault. Tell your husband you know what he has been doing, how you feel about it and that my mother has decided differently? Or should I just "grow up"? — FRUSTRATED IN NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR FRUSTRATED: If you have discussed with your mother that you are under extreme financial pressure and she has refused to help, then I can see why you might feel some resentment. My question is, HAVE you talked to her about it? That would be the "grown-up" thing to do. The worst she can say is no. If she does, what you will need to do is take a part-time job to help with the bills — even if it means you mow your mother's lawn less often.

DEAR ABBY: Next month will be our 25th anniversary. My wife and I are permanently separated, but will not divorce because she would lose health coverage under my employer's plan. How do I acknowledge this "landmark" — or should I just ignore it, since it isn't really a celebratory event? — NOT QUITE AN EX IN THE SOUTH

DEAR NOT QUITE AN EX: If you and your wife are on speaking terms, call her and say something nice. Or send her a card. If you're not on friendly terms, then diplomatically ignore the landmark.

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

you would prefer that the two of you make love while you are wide awake and able to fully enjoy it. This should be discussed with a marriage counselor and, if necessary, the police.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a married father of two very young children (2 and 6 months). I have excessive student loan debt that is making my life extremely tough, and between that, day care and my mortgage, I'm on the brink of bankruptcy.

My mother is extremely wealthy. She is very involved with my family and we both do things to help each other out. I mow the grass in her large yard every week.

She sees me struggling, yet she makes no offer to help financially. I am becoming resentful about it. If she helped, it would not change her lifestyle at all. My wife's family is the opposite. It was 43-19 at the half and 61-26 at the end of the third quarter to bring on a running clock.

Au'maria Kelly led Columbia with 11 points. Nae Bryant scored seven points including 5 of 7 from the free throw line. Lona Wilson scored her five points in the first quarter. Maci Coker, Akiria Richburg and Jazzlynn Williams each had a basket.

Gainesville's Janiah Williams fired out with 14 points in the first quarter and finished with 18 for the game. Asya Smith also scored 18 for the Hurricanes, whose 3-0 record is all in District 2-6A with CHS.

Quarterback still in question for Florida

By JASON LIESER
Associated Press

GAINESVILLE—Florida might have to rely on its third-string quarterback for the second week in a row.

The Gators expect to start red-shirt freshman Skyler Mornhinweg in Saturday's home game against Georgia Southern, a team from the FCS. Mornhinweg made his debut last week when Tyler Murphy was out with an injury to his throwing shoulder.

Murphy, who sprained his acromioclavicular joint, took over for original starter Jeff Driskel in Week 3. Murphy was unable to practice last week and is unsure when he'll return. Due to the uncertainty, Florida is working under the assumption that Mornhinweg will start.

"If we had to play today, yeah, that would be the plan moving forward," Gators coach Will Muschamp said Monday. "Tyler did some light throwing yesterday, felt comfortable. Not ready for him to practice today. We'll see how far he progresses.

"When you have the situation that he has, discomfort is a huge issue in the throwing shoulder. So if he says, 'I just don't feel comfortable throwing,' then he's not going to play."

Florida (4-6) relied heavily on its running game during Mornhinweg's debut at No. 11 South Carolina last week. The Gators rushed 41 times for 200 yards and asked Mornhinweg to drop back for just 13 passes. He completed 10 of 13 for 107 yards and had an interception in the final minutes.

Mornhinweg said he would prefer to throw more, but was fine with Florida's strategy.

"I'm confident in my abilities and I'm confident in the coaches' game plan," he said Monday. "Whatever they want to run out there, we'll execute it and I think we'll have a shot to win."

The Gators are optimistic that Murphy could return by Saturday or for next week's regular-season finale against No. 2 Florida State.

He struggled to throw last week due to the pain in his shoulder and was ruled out a day or two before the game. The injury affected his velocity and accuracy.

"It wasn't coming out pretty," he said.

Since replacing Driskel in Week 3, Murphy has completed 60.5 percent of his attempts and averaged 135.1 passing yards per game.
