The Lake City-Columbia County Chamber of Commerce held its annual Business and Citizen of the Year Awards Luncheon Wednesday, with two local financial institutions and the president of Altrusa International taking top honors.

Campus USA Credit Union earned recognition as Small Business of the Year (10 or fewer employees) with TD Bank sharing the limelight as Large Business of the Year.

Local Altrusa International chapter president Mantha Young of Jasper was named Citizen of the Year, earning the esteem of the local business community that considered 11 other active community members also nominated for the distinction.

"We send out an open nomination to all our chamber members and we ask them to submit a business they think would be a great choice," said Chamber of Commerce Director Dennille Decker.

Nominated businesses then fill out a five-part questionnaire that demonstrates how they innovate in the workplace, overcome hardships and adversity, and contribute to the local community.

A 10-person panel including current and past chamber presidents, previous award winners and other members at large then independently make their decisions for who they believed embody the chamber's definition of Business of the Year.

Guns in schools one step closer

Bill would allow trained personnel to be armed.

By KAREEM COPELAND
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — The debate whether safety is worth the risk of having more guns on school campuses took center stage in a Florida House committee, which approved a bill Wednesday that would allow trained officials to carry weapons in schools.

'I think the schools themselves would appreciate knowing that somebody highly trained was there.'

— Rep. Charles Van Zant (R-Palatka)

This issue has been argued nationwide since school shootings at Sandy Hook Elementary in Connecticut, Virginia Tech University, Columbine High School in Colorado and others. One side believes armed officials are better equipped to handle an emergency situation. The other argues that more guns in schools only increase the odds of something happening.

The bill (HB 753) approved 8-4 by House Justice Appropriations committee is sponsored by Greg Steube, a Republican from Sarasota. It gives schools the option to appoint former or current law enforcement officers and former or current military officers with state-legislated training to carry firearms on campus.

They would be required to go through 40 hours of school-safety training and eight hours of active-shooter training each year. They also would need four hours of firearm qualification annually.

They'd be required to have a carry-and-conceal permit. Local school boards or principals would make the appointments. Next up for the House bill is the Judiciary Committee.

Steube argued that school-shooting incidents such as Sandy Hook take place in a matter of minutes that is less than many average police response times. A trained, armed official on the property could save lives before police arrive.

"I think the schools themselves would appreciate knowing that somebody highly trained was there," Rep. Charles Van Zant, R-Palatka, said, "so that some idiot that brought a gun to school with the intention of killing people could be stopped at a far sooner place than calling law enforcement, which might take a good long time to get there."

Representatives for the Florida School Board Association and Parent Teacher Association opposed the bill. The PTA would rather have further investment in school resource officers and intervention programs.

"FSBA believes that only highly trained professional law enforcement officers can be entrusted with weaponry on our school grounds," said school board representative Ruth Melton.

Disney attack suspect sought

LAKE BUENA VISTA

The Orange County Sheriff's Office is investigating after an employee says she was attacked at a Disney resort.

Authorities say the alleged attack happened in a room at the Art of Animation Resort on March 28.

According to deputies, a man confronted a housekeeper when she went inside a room that had its door open to clean. Deputies say the woman fought off the attacker, who fled the area. The woman was scratched during the attack and taken to a hospital for treatment.

In a statement, Walt Disney World said it is working closely with the sheriff's office to find the suspect.

Rescuer of three children gets college scholarship

DAYTONA BEACH — A 21-year-old college student is getting a scholarship for his role in rescuing three children whose mother drove their minivan into the surf off Daytona Beach.

The executive board of the Foundation for Seminole State College of Florida surprised Stacy Robinson with the award Tuesday.

Robinson told the Daytona Beach News-Journal he had no idea when he was invited to the board meeting that he would receive the $1,000 scholarship.

Robinson ran into the Atlantic Ocean March 4 when he was Ebony Wilkerson's van drive into the water. He helped pull the children — ages 3, 9 and 10 — from inside the submerging vehicle.

Coast Guard responds to boat fire

JACKSONVILLE — U.S. Coast Guard crews taking place in a mock drill involving a fire on a ship were instead diverted to an emergency on a boat some 50 miles off of Fernandina Beach.

Public Affairs Specialist Anthony Soto says the Coast Guard got word Wednesday morning that five people were on board a boat that was taking on water in the Atlantic.

The 70-foot Belle-Amie reported a fire on board about 8:47 a.m. The occupants extinguished the fire, and donned life jackets as the boat took on water.

Emergency guns measure clears committee

By JIM TURNER
The News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE — A National Rifle Association-backed measure to allow people without concealed weapons licenses to pocket their guns during emergencies squeaked out of the Senate committee where it has been on hold for two weeks.

The Senate Military and Veterans Affairs, Space and Domestic Security Committee spent less than 15 minutes on Tuesday primarily taking public testimony on the emergency-carry measure (SB 296) before approving it with a 5-4 vote and no debate.

The measure still has one scheduled stop before reaching the Senate floor. A similar House proposal (HB 209) is ready for a full floor vote.

Both proposals are opposed by the Florida Sheriffs Association, but have found support from the Florida National Guard, under pressure from Gov. Rick Scott.

Senate sponsor Jeff Brandes, R-St. Petersburg, twice delayed votes on his proposal because he lacked the support to carry the measure forward.

But on Tuesday, Sen. Joseph Abruzzo, a Royal Palm Beach Democrat who was absent from the prior two meetings, gave Brandes the swing vote he needed. Abruzzo's vote was needed to offset a "no" from Sen. Charlie Dean, an Inverness Republican and former Citrus County sheriff.

Abruzzo, who served in the military reserves, said there was no arm twisting for his support.

"I am where I am, I think the legislation meets a purpose," said Abruzzo, "I supported it right off the bat."

Currently, people can bring their guns with them when following evacuation orders, but the firearms must be securely encased and not in the person's physical possession.

Brandes's bill would create an exemption to state law regarding concealed weapons by allowing individuals who have not qualified for the licenses to keep their guns with them when ordered to relocate after a governor-declared state of emergency, such as a riot, hurricane or wildfire.

"I just needed everybody to show up to vote," Brandes said after the meeting.

GUNS

Some opponents preferred preventative measures instead of allowing more firearms. There was also concern with having volunteers in these positions regardless of their training.

"There are things we can do other than adding more guns to the school that can keep our children safe," said Rep. Darryl Rouson, D-St. Petersburg, who has sheriffs in his district on both sides of the issue.

The accompanying Senate bill (SB 968) was approved by the Criminal Justice committee and is waiting to be heard in the Education committee. It wasn't brought up at the last two education meetings.

"If they don't want to do it, they don't have to do it," Steube said. "My local school board members, who I just met with last week, they had a very different opinion on the legislation and they might actually take advantage of it.

Vehicle fee cuts 'right the wrong'

By JIM TURNER
The News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE — During a politically charged bill-signing ceremony, Gov. Rick Scott gave final approval Wednesday to rolling back vehicle-registration fees that were increased in 2009 amid state budget woes.

Scott repeatedly noted that the unpopular fee increases were enacted under former Gov. Charlie Crist, who is seeking to unseat Scott during this November's election.

"We're going to right the wrong of this 2009 tax increase that Charlie Crist enacted," Scott said.

The bill (SB 156) signed by Scott, one of his "critical" priorities for this spring's legislative session, is expected to save Floridians between $20 and $25 per vehicle registration, with the total depending on the size of the vehicle.

Kevin Cate, a spokesman for Crist's campaign, responded to Scott's announcement by saying the "ridiculous press conference" exposed the current governor's "political desperation."

"Everyone knows that Charlie Crist signed one of the largest tax cuts (a property tax cut) in the history of Florida and was also forced to make tough decisions to prevent devastating blows to teachers, students, first responders, and our most vulnerable Floridians," Cate said in an email.

The fee cuts will take effect Sept. 1.

police say shot Patel to death during the robbery.

According to police, Johnson and Grandison entered the store at about 1:30 p.m. and demanded at gunpoint that Patel's wife, Daxa Patel, give them money from behind the counter. She complied, but when Rajni Patel entered from a back room, Grandison allegedly shot him.

Sheena Marie Grandison, Johnson's wife and Ernest Larry Grandison's daughter, was also facing first-degree murder charges for her role in the robbery but was allowed to plead guilty to a charge of aiding and abetting and received probation.

Sheena Marie Grandison, who was present at Wednesday's proceedings, drove Johnson to the store and left the scene without Johnson or Grandison Sr. in her vehicle, investigators say.

Sentencing in the case has been deferred until later this month.

If Judge Julian Collins is inclined to deviate from the terms of the plea agreement, Johnson can withdraw his plea.

"Mr. Johnson accepted the plea because he felt it was in his best interest," Defense Attorney Cliff Wilson said, deferring any additional comments until after sentencing.

Johnson answered "no sir" when Collins asked whether he was pressured into accepting the plea deal.

Ernest Grandison

Sheena Grandison

"A plea offer has been made by the state and accepted by the defendant," Prosecutor John Durrett said. "The matter was reset until April 21 to insure the victim's family can be present should they so desire."

Durrett declined to speak further about the plea.

Johnson was arrested by Florida Department of Law Enforcement agents on May 19, 2012, in Jacksonville. He was later transferred to the Columbia County Detention Facility.

Johnson married Grandison's daughter, Sheena Marie Grandison, in Ohio on Sept. 19, 2011.

A woman identifying herself as Jo Ellen Poindexter Roberts, Johnson's mother, called the Lake City Reporter from Ohio in 2012.

She said her son had no previous criminal history "because he is not a bad kid," she said. "He didn't have a bad life and he didn't grow up in a bad home His family loves him. Unfortunately, he just got around some bad people."

Johnson was working at UPS when he and Sheena Grandison were married, records show. She was self-employed.

Roberts said after their marriage, the couple moved to Florida. Up to that point, Johnson had lived his entire live in Ohio.

Under terms of the deal, Johnson would also have to pay court costs but he will get credit for the time he has already served. He is currently being housed in the Hamilton County Jail.

Johnson agreed to the terms of the plea agreement during court proceedings Wednesday afternoon in Courtroom 2 of the Columbia County Courthouse. The proceeding began at 2:30 p.m. and lasted approximately 15 minutes.

ANOTHER VIEW

Political meddling ill serves state colleges

Perhaps state Sen. Joe Negron is right that some state colleges are guilty of mission creep in rushing to offer four-year degree programs. But his solution — to strip authority from the Board of Education to approve new bachelor degree programs for state colleges and force them to reduce their tuition for those programs — is another example of bad higher education policy on the fly. More than 10 years after embarking on this experiment, it is time for a thoughtful assessment of how four-year degrees at state colleges are working. But Negron, the powerful chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, would further politicize and diffuse higher education governance when what is needed is a common vision and more financial investment.

Negron added language to a Senate bill dealing with tuition increases that would prevent the Board of Education from approving more four-year degree programs at state colleges, formerly known as community colleges. A dozen years after St. Petersburg College first won the right to offer a limited number of bachelor's degrees, 24 colleges now have approval for 175 different degrees. Negron contends at least some of those programs have strayed from the Legislature's original intent that colleges would offer four-year degrees to meet workforce needs in their communities, such as in nursing or technology....

Negron wants ... state colleges to charge the same tuition for both upper and lower-level work and strip $3.4 million from state colleges' four-year degree budgets to give to the University of Florida and Florida State University. He says more investment is needed there to build elite universities that compete with those in other states. But the answer is not to take from the colleges to give to two universities with powerful supporters in the Legislature.

Negron's singular focus on state college's offerings — without consideration of what needs they may be fulfilling or how they have increased higher education access — illustrates how Tallahassee micromanages education. Florida should be less concerned about where students are getting bachelor's degrees and more concerned with making those degrees accessible. Even as Tampa Bay has the University of South Florida, for example, St. Petersburg College has a niche that overwhelmingly serves working students over 25 years old. Last year it awarded 1,200 bachelor's degrees, mostly in fields like nursing, education or business.

Negron, R-Stuart, is right that Florida needs to invest more in state universities. But he should push for better coordination throughout the higher education system to eliminate duplication. The universities' Board of Governors should also have authority over state colleges, because the state's public school system is plenty of work for the Board of Education. Negron even could lead the charge among his Republican colleagues to forgo special interest tax breaks so that Florida collects the state revenue needed to adequately fund education, including higher education. Robbing from Peter to pay Paul while further politicizing the process only makes things worse.

A tribute to Bill Glover

Roy Brown

My good friend, Bill Glover, relayed the news to me over the phone: "The cancer is back and I only have a few weeks to live, Roy."

However, the words didn't sound like they were coming from a man who only had a short time to live. His words and tone seemed to echo the finality of a wonderful life, with no regrets and the confidence of where he would spend eternity.

Bill Glover is a man known throughout Columbia County and the state. He spent 34 years of his life working as a law enforcement officer for the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission before retiring in 2001 as area supervisor. Before that he served his country in the United States Army. Many of you that don't know Bill personally may recognize the name from the many Letters to the Editor that he has written in area newspapers over the years since retiring. Bill's articles readily define him as a Christian and social conservative and one that loves his country and fellow man, and the Lord.

Bill has always demonstrated a strong work ethic, placed high value on integrity, and maintained a spirit of volunteerism in his community and church. He was raised hunting and fishing and loved the outdoors. That love of the outdoors drew him to a career in wildlife law enforcement.

It was a perfect match. His outdoor knowledge, coupled with his enthusiasm, made him a force to be reckoned with, as poachers soon learned. His supervisors also recognized this and Bill was quickly promoted to the rank of sergeant and placed over a squad of officers to supervise. His squad worked an area of the state where poaching of deer at night was rampant. This meant working almost entirely at night, which proved challenging for a man with a young family. His hard work and sacrifice paid off and he and his squad dramatically reduced the poaching of deer by making hundreds of arrests over the next several years. The deer herd thrived and Floridians now enjoy an abundance of deer and other wildlife because of the sacrifices of Bill and others like him who worked to protect our wildlife resources.

I have been fortunate to work with and enjoy Bill's friendship for these past 33 years. I have found many qualities in Bill that impressed me but one has stood out above the rest and that has been his role of advocate. We have all enjoyed an advocate in our lives from time to time. Mothers seem to be born advocates and come to our rescue when fathers are quick to administer discipline. At work, Bill was an advocate for his people when they found themselves in trouble. I have heard him argue his subordinates' cause to superiors many a time and even when the subordinate was wrong, he attempted to mitigate the punishment.

Bill's leadership style was more like coaching than supervising and he was well respected by his subordinates. Bill continued in this role as advocate even after retirement, volunteering as a Guardian Ad Litem counselor.

Bill loves sports and people, so coaching came natural to him and he coached everything from Little League to church softball. He was a frequent face at sporting events in Columbia and surrounding counties, serving as an umpire and referee for many years.

Bill has a genuine concern for others and has made countless positive impressions, especially on young people. He is Uncle Bill to many. I can't count the number of young people's lives he has influenced. He taught teenagers in church for years and they loved him. He had an energy about him that was attractive to teenagers and he could hold his own with them physically in sporting events. In recent years, Bill served as leader over a boys' organization in his church known as Royal Rangers. Over many years, hundreds of boys cycled through his classes. All were influenced by the qualities that Bill holds dear, integrity, love for God and country, and fellow man. Bill's efforts will be realized in the lives of these young people for years to come.

Bill has been blessed with a wonderful wife, Sandy, who has stuck by his side for 48 years. They have raised four sons Matt, Brian, Luke, and Phillip. They have nine grandchildren.

Bill has helped so many people financially over his life. I know of one family whose house payments he made for months until they could get on their feet financially. Only heaven knows how many electric and medical bills, groceries, car repairs, bails, and gifts of cash Bill has provided to people in Columbia County.

He has truly demonstrated what it means to be a Christian and an American. I believe when he enters the gates of heaven, our Lord will speak these words to him: "Well done, good and faithful servant."

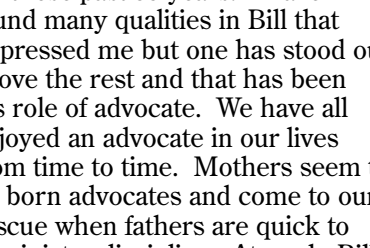
Checks and balances not working



Jay Ambrose
SpeaktoJay@aol.com

It was 40 years ago. The scandal was called Watergate. The president was Richard Nixon. He had delighted in some dirty political tricks, was abusing power left and right, and had even helped cover up a crime, a break-in by political operatives at headquarters of the Democratic National Committee.

Then, wham, the press was on his case, his own party was on his case, Congress was on his case and the courts were on his case. Nixon resigned.

"The system worked," observers said over and over again, reflecting pride that constitutional safeguards had thwarted these machinations as all sides stood up for what's right.

Now we're in another era. Barack Obama is president, and no, he is not engaged in Nixonian criminality, but he is rewriting laws without congressional approval, otherwise kicking the Constitution in the teeth on a regular basis and merrily getting away with it....

The system is not working.

Even one prominent liberal agrees.

"What also alarms me, however, is that the two other branches appear not just simply passive, but inert in the face of this concentration of authority," said Jonathan Turley, a law professor at George Washington University, when he was testifying before the House Judiciary Committee this past February.

"The fact that I happen to think the president is right on many of these policies does not alter the fact that I believe the means ... is wrong, and that this can be a dangerous change in our system. And our system is changing in a very fundamental way. And it's changing without a whimper of regret or opposition."

Turley is not bashful in his facts – pointing, for instance, to administration surveillance of the press; the unilateral rewriting of parts of immigration, health-care, education and other laws; questionable regulatory enthusiasms; and the illegal shifting of money from one government fund to another.

Neither is he bashful in his rhetoric as he worries about "a usurpation of authority unprecedented in this country," or refers to the "land of the sorta, kinda free" or says we are at a "constitutional tipping point" that could bring us "an uber presidency unchecked by the other two branches."

Listen folks, despite the yelps of the uncaring, intellectually mystified branch of liberals, this is not about impeachment or a conservative agenda or anything like that. It is about preserving a constitutional order meant to protect all of us. And do the Democrats not get it that if this precedent stands, a Republican president could also indulge his autocratic impulses someday?

4,000 square foot service center near the end of 2013, putting to work local contractors such as North Florida Glass, Parrish & Son Painting and O'Neal Roofing.

Campus USA is also an active supporter of charitable efforts and community events such as the Cattle Baron's Ball, Diva Days, the Olustee Festival and the "Fill the Baby Bottle" campaign with the Pregnancy Center.

"We're just honored and excited to be selected to win," said Service Center Manager Diana Parker. "I think the chamber saw our stability and that we're committed to the community. We want to continue to be a strong supporter of the community."

The Lake City Advertiser and Teeko Graphics Inc. were runners-up for the title.

Large Business winner

Large Business of the Year winner TD Bank operates four offices in Columbia County, providing career opportunities to over 40 employees.

The institution has contributed over $20,000 to the local community through the TD Foundation, supporting organizations such as Catholic Charities, Habitat for Humanity, the Ichetucknee Partnership and the United Way.

In addition, local TD Bank managers serve in various leadership positions at Florida Gateway College, United Way, Altrusa and Habitat for Humanity.

"We want to thank the Chamber of Commerce and the community," said Regional Vice President Suzanne Norris. "We strive to uphold the highest level of service and commitment to the chamber and the community."

The Lake City Reporter and PCS-White Springs were finalists for the title.

Citizen of the Year

Following the business awards, last year's Citizen of the Year C. Dennis Roberts introduced Mantha Young, the chamber's latest member to receive the honor.

"[Young] has dedicated her life to helping others," Roberts said. "She selflessly gives up her time and is always willing to lend a hand and do a good deed... She is truly one of those people who leaves a little bit of sunshine wherever she goes."

Young actively serves on many community organizations including Haven Hospice, the Meridian Healthcare Board of Associates, the Early Learning Coalition, the Chamber of Commerce Ambassador Committee, the Florida Gateway Coalition, the United Way Challengers Club and the LAD Soup Kitchen, among others.

"I do love Lake City and Columbia County and I do love people," Young said in a teary-eyed acceptance speech. "Mamie Bass, the founder of Altrusa, said, 'It's not enough to be good — you have to be good for something.' I do strive to live by that."

> Mamie Bass, the founder of Altrusa, said 'It's not enough to be good — you have to be good for something.' I do strive to live by that.
> — Mantha Young, Citizen of the Year

Young spends much of her time serving as manager of the Lake City Advertiser and president of the local Altrusa International chapter, where she and a committee of fellow dedicated Altrusans just wrapped up the community's first concerted health and fitness initiative, Get Fit Lake City.

"I just enjoy what I do, I enjoy making a difference," Young said after the ceremony. "The Bible says, 'Unto whom much has been given, much is required.' I feel it is our duty to give back and pay it forward."

She credited former Lake City Advertiser Manager Lynette Ricketson, mother-in-law Joann Young and her husband of 27 years Rick Young for much of the inspiration that drives her to be so active in her community.

Looking ahead, Young hopes to begin a community effort to support Haven Hospice, which she said is facing "$600,000 to $800,000" in cuts to their federal financial support in the near future.

"I would like to see our community rally around Haven Hospice," she said, adding that donations of just $5 to $15 "can help them get through the next few years."

Hours after the ceremony, Young said she could still "hardly believe" she was named Citizen of the Year and struggled to find the right words, humbled by the title.

"I feel it is our responsibility to try to invest in the lives of others," she said. "We have been so blessed to be born and raised in the United States of America. We need to realize how precious that is and pass that along to other people who need a hand up."

SRWMD designates April Water Conservation Month

From staff reports

LIVE OAK — The Suwannee River Water Management District Governing Board has joined with other agencies and local governments throughout Florida in designating April 2014 as Water Conservation Month. The proclamation requests local governments, residents, businesses, and visitors to protect our precious water resources by practicing and promoting water conservation measures both indoors and outdoors.

The District invites all local governments within its boundaries to adopt a similar proclamation to conserve water. As of April 2, the following local governments have adopted a proclamation: Alachua, Gilchrist, Hamilton, Jefferson, and Putnam Counties; the Cities of Archer, Live Oak, Madison, Perry, and Waldo; and the Town of Branford. Last year, involvement grew to nearly 40 local governments, with 100 percent participation from the 15 counties within the District.

Over the next few weeks, the District encourages other counties and municipalities to adopt water conservation proclamations. All local governments who adopt a proclamation will be recognized on the District's website at: www.mysuwanneeriver.com/waterconservation.

ANNUALS OR PERENNIALS?

That is always the question. The answer is both!

Perennials provide the longevity and durability that everyone wants but most will bloom for a specific period of time.

Annuals are usually for one season but will provide flowers from start to finish. Their jobs are not quite the same so for the very best garden let us help you pick out just the right mix of annuals and perennials for your special situations!

A 'Klassic' opportunity

Columbia begins tournament in Kissimmee today.

By BRANDON FINLEY
bfinley@lakecityreporter.com

Columbia High will get a preview of the state tournament this week against some of the state's best.

The Lady Tigers begin the Kissimmee Klassic today against Central Phenix City High of Alabama.

"There's 14 girls in this tournament going to play at the next level," Columbia head coach Jimmy Williams said. "The competition level is really good. We'll play some of the better teams. It's the Who's Who of softball tournaments. You don't just get to go. You have to submit your request. They tell you if you're good enough. You're not automatically in and it takes credentials."

Williams said it's preparation for what is to come.

"In just about every classification, the top team is there," Williams said. "You go down there to play against the other best teams in the state and it's kind of like a state tournament."

The opening game will be against a state-championship caliber opponent, but

Columbia falls in semifinals at district tourney.

By BRANDON FINLEY

Columbia High's tennis team made its exit from the District 3-2A tournament in the semifinals as Cassidy Lear and Megan Zahnle fell short against Orange Park on Wednesday.

The Lady Tigers' No. 1 team fell in a 6-4, 6-3 match.

"We were playing against juniors and seniors," Columbia head coach Tabatha McMahon said. "It showed on the court. I'm pleased with how things went with this freshman team in their first taste of the district tournament."

Columbia's No. 2 team of Tori Jackson and Brittany Helms fell against Middleburg in a tie-breaker third set.

"We played extraordinarily well considering this is the first year for many of them playing at the high school level," McMahon said. "I look for only good things to happen in the coming years. We have a good chance to go much further next season."

Gators' senior becomes leader in final season.

GAINESVILLE — Scottie Wilbekin waved off teammates, ignored signals from the bench and backed down his defender as the final seconds ticked off the clock.

Wilbekin pulled up, swished a 3-pointer from well behind the arc and raised his arms triumphantly as he jogged to the locker room for halftime in the South Region final.

It was a game-changing shot against Dayton — one

DEAR ABBY

Readers weigh in on pros and cons of only childhood

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: "Maybe Only One in Georgia" (Jan. 7), who asked whether she should have a second child, needs to understand there are no guarantees. Her 5-year-old could end up hating her younger sibling, or adoring her. Parents create a child because they want to share their union with a new life. Each child is unique and represents a life commitment, not just 18 years of hard work.

I am the youngest of four, the "surprise" baby boy when my parents were in their 40s. I loved them and they never made me feel unwanted. I adore my older sister. We were always close despite the eight-year age difference. My two brothers are very different than I am, and we don't have much to do with one another.

"Maybe" should not produce another child to be a playmate to the one they have. It should be done only if they're financially, emotionally and spiritually willing and capable of rearing another person. If not, they should enjoy the extra time, money and energy they'll have, and perhaps give a needy dog or cat a home. — YOUNGEST CHILD IN SAVANNAH

DEAR YOUNGEST CHILD: I told "Maybe" I couldn't decide this for her, but would open up the question to my readers. And they sure had some comments! Here are a few:

DEAR ABBY: My advice is DON'T! I have two sons, 27 and 31. They hardly know each other and have no interest in what the other is doing. It breaks my heart, as they are the only close blood relatives they have.

I didn't have the younger one so the older would have company. I wanted another baby. I was 29, but wouldn't consider it at "Maybe's" age (38). How long does she think she can run that fast? — MITZI IN DAYTON

DEAR ABBY: Most only children I know are spoiled and used to getting their own way, largely because they haven't had to share. My husband is from a large family and they are all close, even with a 20-year age span.

We recently dealt with issues related to elderly parents, and trust me, I was so thankful to have the help of my siblings. I feel it is unfair to raise a child alone if you're able to add to the family unit. — GRATEFUL MOM

DEAR ABBY: I am a happy only child. I was raised by kind people. I have a positive self-image, was a self-reliant kid and am a confident, productive adult.

As a parent, I had a lot to learn. My husband, one of four siblings, reassured me that the quarreling and jealousy among our three was normal. They learned to fight and stick up for themselves – something I had to master later.

As a child, I wondered what it would be like to have a brother or sister, but my imaginary friends were good company. When my aging parents were ailing, it might have been nice to have a sibling to share that with, but my husband was ample support.

"Onlies" can be very peaceful people. Most of us prefer to cooperate rather than compete. As kids, we're the center of the universe and responsible for everything. That sense of responsibility carries over into adulthood. – ANNE that should have surprised no one.

Wilbekin has become one of the best closers in college basketball, delivering clutch shots and defensive stops in crunch time for the top-seeded Gators (36-2). He's been called the best all-around point guard in the country, and it's hard to argue considering how he's played in the NCAA tournament.

The 6-foot-2 senior is averaging a team-high 16.8 points in four tournament games. He also has 12 assists, eight rebounds, six steals and just two turnovers. Throw in his defense — he frustrated Albany's Peter Hooley, Pittsburgh's James Robinson and Dayton's Jordan Sibert — and it's clear that coach Billy Donovan's decision to give Wilbekin one final chance has been a huge key to Florida's success.

"It's been one of the great experiences for me as a coach going through what he and I have gone through together," Donovan said.

Wilbekin could have his hands full in the Final Four on Saturday night. Not only will he be tasked with directing Florida's offense, but he also will be the primary defender on All-American guard Shabazz Napier of Connecticut.

Napier scored 26 points in the teams' first meeting this season, and six of those came in the final minute with Wilbekin in the locker room with a sprained ankle. The Gators sorely missed him down the stretch in the one-point loss.

It was a glimpse of where Florida would be without the Gainesville native.

Donovan suspended Wilbekin indefinitely last June for a violation of team rules. It was Wilbekin's second suspension in seven months, and Donovan even suggested that Wilbekin transfer to get a fresh start elsewhere.

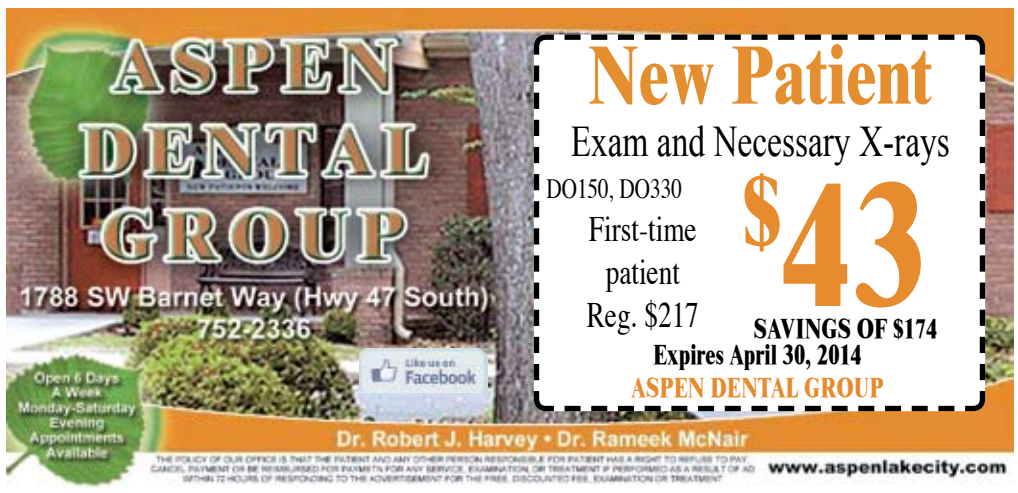
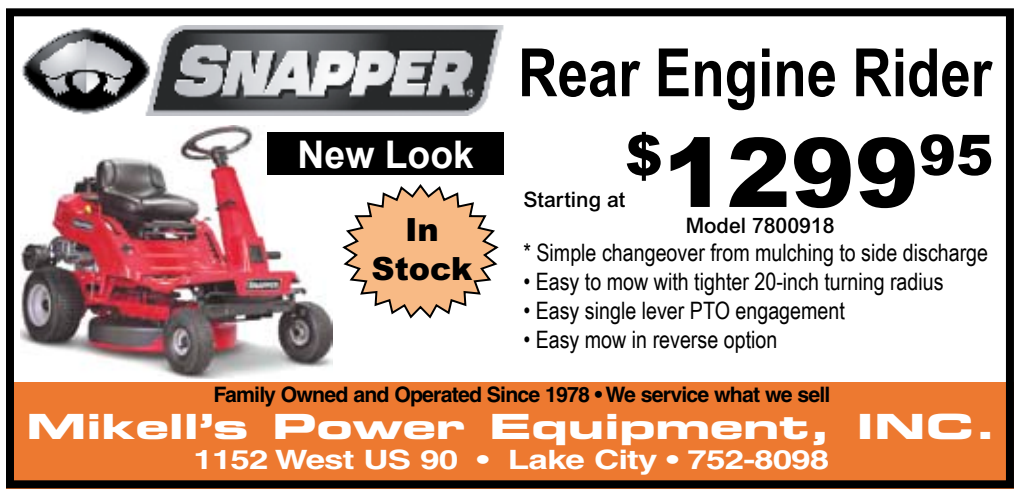
an unknown opponent for the Lady Tigers.

"I don't know much about them," Williams said. "Their pitcher won 31 games last year. It's just some of the best competition."

For Williams, there's no guarantee of winning, but he said the Lady Tigers will approach it like they did the playoffs last season. He hopes it ends the same way.




"When I was talking about somebody last week I told them we just have to do it like we did the state tournament last year," Williams said. "We need to win the game we're in. We just need to win the game we're in and move onto the next game. It's the same approach we took in the regionals. We don't know a lot about you, but we'll try to win the game."
