The Lake City Fire Department and Gainesville Fire Department hazmat teams made an emergency withdrawal at a local bank Friday after several bank employees became sick following transactions made by a customer, according to a release from the Lake City Police Department.

At around 3 p.m., police said hazmat teams entered the Columbia Bank, at 173 NW Hillsboro St., to retrieve money that had been deposited after two transactions from an unnamed customer earlier that week.

The bank contacted the FBI after employees became ill, LCPD said in the release. Investigator David Greear identified and spoke to the customer, Lester and Anne Scaff, owners and founders of S&S Food Stores, gave generously to causes throughout the community for decades, and earned a reputation for kindness that remains unmatched.

But Lester Scaff says his wife, who passed away at the age of 77 Friday morning, deserves most of the credit.

"She was the charitable one of us," he said.

Scaff said it was a blessing his wife was no longer in pain and knew she was in a better place, but wasn't sure what he would do without her.

"I don't really know how to describe this, but we were joined together as one, and I found out what it was like when you lose one," he said.

They were married for 54 and a half years and built a convenience-store empire in North Central Florida. Their holdings include 45 convenience and grocery stores and two Wendy's franchises. The company has consistently been among Florida Trend's Top 200 privately-owned companies since 1999.

A local mother became concerned with conditions at one of the recently-shuttered group homes owned by Janice Summers after her autistic child residing there was sent home with a tackle box full of medications, she said.

The owner of the homes, Janice Harrell Summers, 63, was arrested Wednesday on charges of failure to report suspected child abuse and destroying evidence after she ordered an employee at Dogwood Group Home to disable the home's surveillance cameras while the Columbia County Sheriff's Office was actively investigating claims another employee beat a child there with a belt, according to CCSO public information officer Murray Smith.

All four group homes — Dogwood Group Home, Open Arms Group Home, Summers Group Home and Open Heart Group Home — were issued a 30-day no-cause termination order

Lake City will be getting a new hotel and its owner is hoping to have it up and running by late 2015.

Nick Patel, owner of several Lake City hotels including the Hampton Inn and Suites, Comfort Inn and Country Inn and Suites, announced Friday he's bringing a new Hilton Hotel to town.

The new hotel will be a Home2Suites by Hilton and the hotel will sit in the space currently occupied by the Red Roof Inn on Florida Gateway Boulevard. The Red Roof Inn building will be demolished to make room for the new hotel. The Red Roof Inn was constructed in the 1990s and is a 60-bed hotel.

"Our plans are to demolish the Red Roof Inn early next year in January and begin construction of the new, four-story, 86-room hotel," Patel said. "This is the first time in the history of Lake City that an extended stay brand is being built with a kitchen facility. We're excited to add this

Officers pepper spray women in hair weave melee

ORLANDO — Orlando police officers used pepper spray on a crowd of women outside a beauty supply store after the women started pushing and shoving in an attempt to get inside.

Police officers were called to the Beauty Exchange store Friday after a crowd outside the store grew to several dozen women.

Orlando television station WKMG reports that the store was giving away free hair extensions that normally sell from $55 to $100.

Surveillance video shows two police officers shooting the pepper spray at the crowd after the women ignored orders by the officers to back up. Some customers say the officers overreacted.

A police spokeswoman says the pepper spray was used to gain control of the crowd.

Radiologists examine 2,100 year-old mummy

WEST PALM BEACH — A

South Florida hospital is examining its oldest patient.

The radiology team at St. Mary's Medical Center is running tests on a 2,100-year-old mummy to figure out how she died.

The mummified girl, thought to have been between 4 and 9 years old when she died, received a CT scan Friday. The team will announce the results next week.

The Palm Beach Post reports the mummy will be on display at the South Florida Science Center and Aquarium as part of "Afterlife: Tombs and Treasures of Ancient Egypt" exhibit.

The mummy has no organs because ancient ritual required removing them before mummification. But she still has several baby teeth. Doctors will make their diagnosis based on her bone structure, which was almost intact.

Curators believe she lived sometime between 30 B.C. and 200 to 300 A.D.

Teens charged with making school threats

CORAL SPRINGS — Authorities have arrested two teenage girls they say threatened to light fires and start a shootout at two South Florida schools in social media posts.

Coral Springs Police said parents contacted them about multiple threats on Instagram that instructed Coral Glades High School students to pull fire alarms to create a distraction at a certain time Friday. Other shootings threats were posted about a nearby middle school.

Authorities said 25 percent of students ended up staying home Friday.

Earlier this week, fires were intentionally set and a large fight broke out at nearby Taravella High School.

Authorities tracked the postings to a 16-year-old and 12-year-old, who did not appear to be working together. One said the posting were a joke, another said she was trying to get her school on the news.

Two medical clinics target of fraud probe

ST. AUGUSTINE — Authorities are investigating two north-east Florida medical clinics for Medicaid and health care fraud.

Agents with the state attorney general's office served search warrants for two Medi+M.D. clinics co-owned by St. Johns County Commissioner Bill McClure.

The St. Augustine Record reports that McClure is named in the search warrants.

According to the warrants, officials are investigating the clinics for state and federal charges including health care fraud, grand theft, falsifying death certificates and practicing medicine without a license.

No charges have been filed, and McClure told the newspaper he is cooperating with the investigation.

Investigators took Medicaid and Medicare billing documents, prescription medications, financial records and computers.

Man convicted of killing sister, parents

LAKE SARASOTA — A 61-year-old man has been convicted of killing his sister and elderly parents at their home in southwest Florida.

A jury found Thomas Moak guilty on three counts of second-degree murder Friday in the February 2012 slayings.

Authorities said Moak told investigators there were escalating issues between him and his sister and that he "snapped." Defense attorneys argued Moak was insane at the time of the crimes.

Eighty-two-year-old Isabelle Moak, 80-year-old Thomas Moak, Sr., and 62-year-old Renee O'Connor were all killed.

Moak will be sentenced in November.

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

Former 'SNL' cast member Jan Hooks dies

NEW YORK — Former "Saturday Night Live" cast member Jan Hooks, whose impressions ranged from Nancy Reagan to Sinead O'Connor to Tammy Faye Bakker during a five-year stint on the show, has died.

The 57-year-old Hooks died Thursday in New York, according to her agent, Lisa Lieberman. She had no other details.

Hooks, a Decatur, Georgia, native, moved into prime time in 1991 as a cast member on the sitcom "Designing Women." She later did an Emmy Award-nominated turn on "3rd Rock From the Sun."

She also appeared in 1992's "Batman Returns" and voiced convenience store owner Apu's wife on "The Simpsons" for several years.

On "SNL," she was part of a 1986 cast infusion that included fellow standouts Dana Carvey and Phil Hartman that helped the show after the previous season's ratings dive.

Chelsea Handler special debuted Friday on Netflix

NEW YORK — Chelsea Handler is proud of herself for knowing when to say when.

And the outspoken comedian says she knew when it was time to say goodbye to her E! talk show, "Chelsea Lately."

Handler ended the seven-year run of the show in August.

"The last two years were not pleasant for me," she said in a recent interview. "It wasn't brutal. It was an easy job, but I was just bored. I was bored of myself. I was bored of the topics. I was bored of being at work and I just needed to spread my wings. I just needed to get out of there."

Handler announced in June that she had struck a deal with online TV network Netflix. A stand-up performance based on her best-selling book and comedy tour "Uganda Be Kidding Me" debuted Friday.

Burnett returns to Broadway, happily

NEW YORK — This month Carol Burnett returns to Broadway in the show and opposite a familiar face — Brian Dennehy. It will be the third time in a quarter of a century that they've played the would-be lovers together onstage.

The first time the couple did it was in 1993 in Telluride, Colorado. The second time was at Sundance, Utah, at an outdoor stage. Naturally, it rained. And not just a gentle mist, either.

Burnett, 81, will be replacing Mia Farrow on Saturday, and she and Dennehy pair up until Nov. 8.

IRS phone scam has hit county, CCSO says

Scammers tell victim to pay for back taxes owed.

From staff reports

The Columbia County Sheriff's Office is warning residents about a nationwide phone scam that has hit the county.

The scammers call and fraudulently identify themselves as the IRS, then say you owe back taxes and demand immediate payment via a prepaid credit card. The Columbia County Combined Communication Center took six calls reporting this scam on Friday alone, according to a CCSO news release.

According to the IRS website, the callers may demand money or may say you have a refund due and try to trick you into sharing private information.

"These con artists can sound convincing when they call. They may know a lot about you, and they usually alter the caller ID to make it look like the IRS is calling," the website says. "They use fake names and bogus IRS identification badge numbers. If you don't answer, they often leave an 'urgent' callback request."

The website listed five things the scammers often do but the IRS will not do. Any one of these five things is a sign of a scam, the website said. The IRS will never:

- Call you about taxes you owe without first mailing you an official notice.
- Demand that you pay taxes without giving you the opportunity to question or appeal the amount they say you owe.
- Require you to use a specific payment method for your taxes, such as a prepaid debit card.
- Ask for credit or debit card numbers over the phone.
- Threaten to bring in local police or other law-enforcement groups to have you arrested for not paying.

If you get a phone call from someone claiming to be from the IRS and asking for money, here's what you should do:

- If you know you owe taxes or think you might owe, call the IRS at 1-800-829-1040. The IRS workers can help you with a payment issue.
- If you know you don't owe taxes or have no reason to believe that you do, report the incident to the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration (TIGTA) at 1-800-366-4484 or at www.tigta.gov.
- You can file a complaint using the FTC Complaint Assistant; choose "Other" and then "Imposter Scams." If the complaint involves someone impersonating the IRS, include the words "IRS Telephone Scam" in the notes.

The IRS does not use unsolicited email, text messages or any social media to discuss personal tax issues, the website says.

For more information on reporting tax scams, go to www.irs.gov and type "scam" in the search box.

FORT WHITE — A Fort White man, along with two men from Tampa, were arrested Thursday after 73 marijuana plants were found after detectives from the Columbia County Multi-Jurisdictional Drug Task Force obtained a search warrant for a Fort White home, according to a media release from the Columbia County Sheriff's Office.

Eduardo Leiva, 74, of 1839 SW Wilson Springs Road, Fort White, Alberto Perez Broche, 45, of 9058 E 25th Ave., Tampa and Mario Tretro-Canepa, 50, of 2620 W Rio Vista Ave., Tampa, were charged with cultivation of marijuana, possession of over 20 grams of marijuana and possession of drug paraphernalia, the release said.

The task force received information earlier in the day about an indoor marijuana grow at a Fort White home, the release said. Detectives initiated an investigation and developed probable cause

Clyde Varnes Road under construction

Traffic must detour to Gum Swamp Road.

From staff reports

Forest Road 236 (Northeast Clyde Varnes Road) is closed for a month of bridge work.

Construction is taking place at the overpass where Clyde Varnes Road crosses Interstate 10.

All traffic is to detour to County Road 250 (Gum Swamp Road), Forest Road 234, Forest Road 263 and back to Forest Road 236.

The closure is necessary while the overpass is raised as part of a $24 million project by the Florida Department of Transportation (FDOT) to improve drainage between U.S. 41 and County Road 250 in Columbia County.

The elevation of the roadway is being raised approximately one-foot in locations and large drainage structures are being installed under sections of the interstate to prevent flooding which causes the closure of the interstate. The last closure occurred in June 2012 as a result of flooding from Tropical Storm Debby.

Forest Road 236 over-pass over Interstate 10 is being raised to maintain a minimum 17-foot vertical clearance between the roadway and bottom of the overpass.

FDOT hired Anderson Columbia Company Inc., of Lake City to do the work, which began last December. About 45 percent of the work has been completed.

For more information, contact FDOT toll-free at 800-749-2967 or follow FDOT on this project and others in Northeast Florida on Twitter at @MyFDOT_NEFL.

Sending an innocent man to jail is the stuff of nightmares, and what makes the recent episode with the Columbia County Sheriff's Office so frightening is that it could just as easily have been any one of us.

This wasn't a man up to no good, hanging out in the shadows of some gangland lair and getting caught up in something beyond his control.

Nelson Ernest Ward was shopping at Walmart for a cell phone for his fiancée late one Monday afternoon. He bought a Galaxy 3 with his debit card, and, by all accounts, made his fiancée very happy with it on her birthday.

Four months later he was in jail, falsely accused of having bought the phone with someone else's card, which a sheriff's investigator wrongly claimed he stole.

Terrifying.

And easily avoided as well. The crime occurred in June and an arrest wasn't made until four months later. Yet it took only four hours from the time of Ward's arrest to secure bank records proving his innocence. We're still not sure why that added bit of investigative work couldn't have been done before slapping on the cuffs.

If there's any solace in this story, however, it's in the reaction of Sheriff Mark Hunter, who came forward instantly to offer a forthright apology and make amends to Mr. Ward as best he could.

Hunter did not waffle or make excuses. He publicly admitted the grievous error on the part of his investigator and vowed to do better.

That should be standard practice for public officials who fall short of the standards of their job — or whose staff does.

It was a horrible thing that happened, and inexcusable. But we do appreciate, and respect, the sheriff's quick and honest response to a nightmare for one local man and his family.

His handling of this matter is an example for other agencies.

Always remember our firefighters

Today is National Fallen Firefighters Memorial Day, a day we should pause and remember during the course of our busy lives. American and state flags across the country should be flown at half staff today as a solemn tribute.

The day marks a point of remembrance for all of us that firefighting is more than shiny trucks in a parade. Firefighting is life-risking every time the bell goes off and an emergency call is underway. Whether it's a vehicle accident or a structure fire doesn't matter. The men and women in their protective turnout gear get there quickly, use their training and do their job.

The men and women of our state and federal forestry services also answer the distress calls when fires erupt in the thousands of acres of nearby public lands. Firefighters protect life, property and natural resources.

Everybody is most always excited to see a firefighter. I think it goes back to when we all were children. Who doesn't think a fire engine is cool? Something that big, with that much power, spraying water, carrying tall ladders, and with flashing lights and a siren? It's awesome.

And, protective turnout gear and the firefighter's respirator, boots and traditional helmet bring visions of a space suit. Again, very cool.

What we all must remember is, while all of this is appealing and good natured at the station and at public events, residents must realize that when the alarm sounds any time day or night, these men and women allow their training to take over and they put their lives on the line for the benefit of each of us.

The situation of a violent fire can change in seconds and cause us to lose these dedicated public servants. They face danger and put themselves in these situations every day and without reservation.

Today and always, remember those who answered the final bell and never returned. Thank you, firefighters.

Panetta's memoir gives Obama a legacy preview – and a chance to improve it

The capital cognoscenti are again engaged in their ritual of fast-thumbing, speed-reading and savoring at least the choicest bits of the latest ex-official's memoir — this one by President Obama's former CIA director and secretary of defense, Leon Panetta.

But there is only one Washington luminary for whom Panetta's book, titled "Worthy Fights," should be must-reading: his ex-boss. And if Barack Obama cares enough to look at it, he'll come to view Panetta's memoir not as a book but a bathroom mirror.

Because, if Obama wants to still make something of his legacy lap as president, he can start by understanding that Panetta has done him a potential great service by painting that sometimes critical portrait now staring him in the face. Because it gives Obama a chance to see himself as only those who are high and inside have really seen him — but are too timid or too consumed by the need to suck up to speak up.

Panetta has painted an honest picture of what officials in Washington and around the world have been thinking of Obama. Namely: Too often, in foreign and domestic crises, the ostensible world leader doesn't seem to be leading.

At home, Panetta faulted his boss for the disastrous congressional budget sequester — those automatic cuts Congress enacted not because anyone really wanted them but because lame-brained congressional leaders figured the cuts, especially defense cuts, were so awful Congress would force itself to compromise. But Congress never did.

"President Obama bore some responsibility ... for failing to lead Congress out of it," Panetta wrote.

Martin Schram
McClatchy-Tribune News Service

"Indeed, that episode highlighted what I regard as his most conspicuous weakness, a frustrating reticence to engage his opponents and rally support for his cause." Panetta added: "...on occasion he avoids the battle, complains, and misses opportunities."

Globally, Panetta faults Obama's reluctance to push Iraq's Nouri al-Maliki to approve a basic pact giving U.S. troops legal protection from prosecution so a larger U.S. residual force could have remained there to help Iraq prevent sectarian violence. Panetta, former Defense Secretary Robert Gates and former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton have all said in memoirs that they urged a larger force remain — a position Obama's White House resisted.

"To my frustration, the White House coordinated the negotiations but never really led them," Panetta wrote. "...without the president's active advocacy, al-Maliki was allowed to slip away. ...To this day, I believe that a small U.S. troop presence in Iraq could have effectively advised the Iraqi military on how to deal with al-Qaida's resurgence and the sectarian violence that has engulfed the country."

Panetta believes that failure enabled the Islamic State to rout Iraq's army. "In my view, the ISIS offensive in 2014 greatly increases the risk that Iraq will become al-Qaida's next safe haven," Panetta wrote. "That is exactly what it had in Afghanistan pre-9/11."

Telling tough truth to power is nothing new to Leon Panetta. I remember the day we first discussed that. Panetta was sitting in his office, a small, cramped room decorated with old files in cardboard boxes. He'd just told the White House a number of things the president and all his top men didn't want to hear. It was 1970 and Panetta, then a moderate Republican, was coordinating civil rights for President Richard Nixon's Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Panetta had opposed Nixon's determination to slow Southern school desegregation — a payback for the once-Democratic South's votes that elected Nixon. Nixon's White House responded by announcing Panetta's "resignation" before he'd offered it.

Panetta never lost sight of his true priorities, as we saw this week, when Vice President Joe Biden opined: "Former administration officials, as soon as they leave, write books, which I think is inappropriate." Asked about that, Panetta told CNN: "You know, I'm of the view that you don't put a hold on history. History is what it is."

But history doesn't have to be what it once seemed destined to be. If Obama recognizes the validity of Panetta's critical portrait of him — he has one last chance to bring new leadership luster to his two year presidential legacy lap.

Anne Scaff

Mrs. Anne Scaff, 77, of Lake City, Florida, died early Friday morning, October 10, 2014, at Haven Hospice in Lake City, Florida. Born on July 24, 1937, in Simcoe, Ontario Canada, Anne was the daughter of Charles and Rose Cserscsics and was one of three children. She was educated in the Simcoe School District and graduated from the Delhi School District. Her family owned a farm in Norfolk County where her future husband went to work in tobacco during the summer. They courted under the big maple tree. Anne and Lester were married on December 12, 1959 and moved to Lake City, Florida. Together with her husband Lester, Anne started Scaff's Inc. dba, S&S Food Stores in Lake City in 1961. They now own 45 convenience and grocery stores, located throughout Northeast Florida as well as two Wendy's locations and have consistently been in Florida Trend's Top 200 Private companies since 1999.

Anne was a member of Epiphany Catholic Church in Lake City, Florida. Her faith drove her many charitable works in Lake City, which included serving as a member of the Financial Council of Epiphany Catholic Church. She served on the Foundation for Florida Gateway College Executive Board of Directors and was a Finance Member for over 30 years. Along with her husband Lester, she co-founded the S&S Charities Golf Tournament and the Lester and Anne Scaff Foundation Inc. Anne also founded the Anne C. Scaff Take Stock in Children Endowment Scholarship and was a member of Altrusa International. One of Anne's favorite and had until yesterday to relocate their residents, said Melanie Ethers, the communications director at the Agency for Persons with Disabilities. The group homes weren't meeting the agency's expectations, she said.

Christina Christie, the mother of 14-year-old twin boys, with one staying in Dogwood Group Home and the other in Open Arms Group Home, said she became concerned with all the medications one son was prescribed by a pediatrician in the group home and decided to take him to a psychiatric clinic in Gainesville.

"My son, Erick, was on nine sleeping pills," she said. "He is a 80-pound, 13-year-old (now 14) child, who even on nine sleeping pills, he still wasn't sleeping."

Her son's autism keeps him from sleeping at night. "He's never slept at night," Christie said. "This was not a new thing, and this is something the group home had been aware of since the day he had been there."

When Christie said she took her son to a clinic in Gainesville, the psychiatrist who opened her son's tackle box full of medications was dumbfounded. She said the psychiatrist took the medicine and left the room immediately to find the attending doctor.

"They took down the pediatrician's name, took down the group home's name and then they started putting the medications and the dosages in the system, with the weight of my child and his age, and all these red flags started coming up in the computers as overdose," Christie said.

Christie said her son's blood pressure was too high, and they had to take him to an endocrinologist because he had not gained any weight and were concerned he was not growing properly.

"We had to make sure there was no permanent growth damage done to him," she said. "They told me that if I took him off all these medications at one time that he would have to go into rehab and detox. So little by little, they started pulling him off all these dangerous medications."

She said the group home was unhappy she was taking control of the medications that were prescribed through the group home. Christie said she even called a local pharmacy and told them they were not allowed to fill any prescriptions for her son without her permission.

"When I pick my kid up to bring him home and he has to bring his tackle box of medications, and each time I pick him up there's a new medication added or it's increased, something is wrong there," Christie said.

Not only was the tackle box full of medications a concern, but Christie also said group home employees would have their own young children stay in the group homes as well.

"One time I went to pick up my boys and one of the workers were kicked back laying in a recliner with the other one laying on the couch, while her two-year-old was standing next to her and the group home kids were wandering lost not knowing what to do with a young child in the room," she said.

On two separate occasions, Christie said both her sons had injuries that went undocumented while staying in the group homes.

Once, when Christie was told a couple months ago that her son Alec was seen by a doctor during a regular visit, and was told he had a month-old broken nose, she said. She said the employee told Christie over the phone what the doctor had discovered, and said no further medical attention was received.

The second incident happened last spring when she was told her other son, Erick, had to be restrained because he was biting his arm. Christie said she was told by Summers that he had a seizure, but was told by another employee that he passed out and had stopped breathing. Christie said no medical attention was received because she was told by the employee that "if they don't stop breathing for more than two minutes, they weren't required to call EMS."

When Christie and her mother, Faith Haley, went last week to relocate their son Alec, who was staying at Open Arms, they said that many of his belongings were missing except for the clothes he was wearing and a few other pieces of clothing that had been put in a garbage bag along with the other children's clothes.

"They said Alec did not play with toys," Haley said. "For three years they were at the group homes, they claimed none of the kids played with toys, which is a lie."

Christie said Alec was moved to a group home in Daytona last week, where the first thing he did was play with multiple toys in his room.

"They have no explanation for anything," Christie said. "So three years of stuff — for birthdays, holidays, not to mention stuff they came there with — was gone when we moved."

Christie said Erick was moved from Dogwood to Summers Group Home after she was notified of possible abuse at Dogwood, then discharged from Summers.

He has been staying at her home ever since she brought him there, and has not been able to relocate him due to his severe autism.

Summers, also owner of A Plus Learning Academy, LLC, could not be reached for comment.

Council," Dale Williams said. "We're going to remand that over to them."

On Sept. 9, the Lake City Reporter asked Hunter what projects he'd been working on in his first few months as economic development director, and he said he and a "grassroots committee" were working on plans for a tennis complex that would function as a place for leagues to play and as a site for tournaments.

The day after the story was published, Hunter reversed course and said he was working on the project in his role as a private citizen, not as economic development director. He said most of the work on the tennis project was done after 6 p.m. However, he said if he and his committee were able to secure funding for the complex, the project would then qualify as part of his official duties.

At that time, Hunter said, "It will be through economic development if it gels and becomes something."

Rita Swisher said. If you did or made something for her, she would write you the kindest thank you notes, she said.

"They were the kind of notes you saved," Swisher said. "I thank God I did know her. She was a blessing in my life."

Suzanne Norris, who volunteered with her at Epiphany Catholic Church, FGC and at Altrusa International, said Scaff was generous but in a quiet way. She did a lot for the poor and would always help anyone who needed help, but she never wanted credit for that.

"She was one of the most down-to-earth people. An angel on Earth, she really was," Norris said. "She's a person of faith, and we're all comforted by that."

Long-time friend Faye Bowling Warren called her "a kind, gracious lady that will be missed in the community, and a phenomenal businesswoman. She loved being a part of Altrusa. She was very outgoing and very supportive."

Michael Lee, executive director of the Foundation for Florida Gateway College, called Anne Scaff "one of the most remarkable women I ever had the pleasure of meeting."

"The most important thing I learned from her was how to be committed to the community," he said. "I thought I knew what commitment meant until I met her."

Another Foundation board member, Don Kennedy, called her "a beautiful woman inside and out."

"And she didn't just help people in this county, but several counties," he said. "Anne and Lester Scaff were both very giving people. She'll be deeply missed, but she will live on in my heart forever and ever."

Scaff's niece, Jenny Scaff Drawdy, who is vice president and chief financial officer at S&S Food Stores, said she and one of her co-workers tried to nominate Scaff for an award for her charitable acts, but Scaff insisted they not. It wasn't right to claim credit just for doing the right thing.

Gigi Register met Anne Scaff 15 years ago when Register joined Altrusa.

"As a new member, she made me feel welcome," she said. "She treated everyone the same no matter who you were."

Anne Scaff's brother Joe Csercsics lives in Ontario, Canada where he and his sister grew up on a tobacco farm about five miles outside of Langton, and they worked hard there.

Csercsics was one year younger than his sister. "Anne got off a little easier being dad's pet, but she was very sweet," he said. "She was such a kind person that would do anything for anybody. They were well off, but she never put on any airs."

Scaff and her husband were married for more than 54 years, and many of her friends remember their 50th anniversary party in 2009.

Swisher said the love for the couple at that party was apparent and strong. "You felt it throughout the room," she said.

Norris, who also remembers being at the party, said Scaff's marriage was important to her and defined who she was.

"She was very strong-willed but always a lady," Norris said. "She would speak when it was necessary, yet she had the gentility of a true lady."

Scaff had opinions and wasn't afraid to share them, but she didn't push them on others. You would consider her opinions because they were well-thought out, not because she forced them on you, Norris said.

Scaff was a strong, successful woman before there were a lot of strong female role models, she said.

"She was a trailblazer for women," Norris said.

that an application had been sent to USTA and that USTA had indicated it was interested in what the county is considering.

Dale Williams said on Thursday that no application has been sent to USTA on behalf of the county.

Hunter said he'd had no direct contact with USTA but that a member of his "grassroots committee" had. A USTA spokeswoman confirmed that a member of Hunter's committee did speak with USTA about the tennis complex. She didn't know what was discussed though.

beautiful hotel within the next year or so."

Patel said the plans to add the hotel has been in the works for close to a year.

He said it was a conscious decision to go with the extended-stay hotel brand.

"If you look at the mix of the businesses in Lake City, after we all went through the recession, I think the hotel business has stabilized and it's slowly moving in the upward direction," Patel said. "Because of the sports tournaments and the corporate business that we have, which has become steadier, we feel there is a good amount of extended-stay business with two-plus or three-plus nights in Lake City that his hotel can cater to."

According to information from Hilton about the Home2Suites brand, the hotel will offer free amenities like high speed Internet access, complimentary continental breakfast, exercise facilities and offer suites complete with full kitchens, a 42-inch flat-screen HDTV and an abundance of space. The rooms will also include a sleeper sofa, work desk with ergonomic chair and guests can relax in the "Oasis," a community space offering a friendly and casual environment where guests can work or socialize. The "Oasis" will also feature a Home2 MKT, where guests can purchase food, drinks and other essentials.

The hotel will feature business center services, offer a guest laundry service and offer two exterior porch areas — one next to the pool with grills and the other in the front of the hotel.

Patel said the brand is for value-conscious travelers staying a few nights or a few months.

There are 42 Home2Suites hotels in the country, including only one that's currently in the state.

"This is one of the fastest growing franchises in the country," Patel said. "More than 70-plus franchises have already been signed."

Patel said he anticipates construction of the new hotel to take about 11 months.

"Once we finish demolishing the existing Red Roof Inn, we'll probably begin construction in February," he said. (Patel is partner in the ownership of the Red Roof Inn.) "The Red Roof Inn was a hotel we've felt has lived its life and it's time for us to move on."

who said the money came out of a storage container that got moist.

The bank was advised to have the money safely removed by hazmat teams after the initial investigation revealed there was no malicious intent by the customer, according to police.

Police said before the bank reopened, the money was removed and transferred to the FBI where it was delivered to the Department of Treasury.

Craig Strickland, public information officer for LCPD, said the bank's currency scanner has been decontaminated and the branch will be ready for business on Monday.

Strickland said the depositor's account has been credited for the damaged currency.

According to the website of the U.S. Bureau of Engraving and Printing, the Treasury Department replaces soiled, damaged or mutilated currency at no charge.

FORT WHITE HIGH SCHOOL

AVALYN HUNTER/Special to the Reporter

Stephanie Bundy, who has been head of the Fort White High School science department since 2000, is seen in her classroom.

Bundy dispels fear by bringing science to life

By AVALYN HUNTER
Special to the Reporter

FORT WHITE — Stephanie Bundy fell in love with science as an eighth-grade student, and it's a love that has shaped her life. The head of the science department at Fort White High School since the school opened in 2000, she is in her 24th year of trying to pass her passion on to her students.

"It isn't always easy," she said. "A lot of kids don't see the relevance of science to their lives, which makes it hard to engage their interest. Others are actually afraid of it. They see it as being too hard for them, and they're also intimidated by the fact that science requires math skills."

Bundy counters that fear by bringing science to life with hands-on demonstrations and experiments.

"Right now, we have micropipettes loaned to us by the University of Florida. Since these devices are widely used in industry and medicine, I'm letting my students practice with them to get a feel for tasks they might do someday in college or on the job," she said. "It's a matter of getting them exposed to possibilities in the outside world, because chemistry is part of everything from welding to engineering."

Bundy also has her students construct models as an aid to understanding concepts.

Another area that Bundy uses to make science more relevant to her students is cooking. "Cooking is all about chemistry," she said. "Processes that make food taste good are based on chemical reactions. Something as simple as building s'mores can teach about heat transfer and the Maillard reaction." (A chemical reaction that causes browning and a buildup of complex flavors in foods.)

Bundy also plans to do special activities in honor of Mole Day (October 23), an unofficial holiday among chemists. This year's theme is Mole-O'ween, suggesting a Halloween tie-in to activities designed to teach the concept of the mole, a unit of measurement in chemistry.

Bundy owes her own love of science — particularly chemistry — to two special teachers.

"I had Larry Joy as my science teacher in eighth and ninth grade, and he just made it come alive for me," she said. "Then I had Miss Glover at Florida Gateway College, back when it was still Lake City Community College. She's the one who got me hooked on chemistry."

A 1987 Columbia High School graduate, Bundy earned an associate's degree at LCCC and a bachelor's degree in science education at Florida State University. She taught in Baker County and at CHS before moving to FWHS.

Currently, Bundy teaches four sections of chemistry, one section of honors chemistry and one section of advanced placement environmental science. Regardless of the class, her goal is to turn out students who are well prepared for college.

"I've gotten a lot of feedback from students through the years," she said. "Most of them tell me that what they learned in high school was enough to carry them to at least November in their first college chemistry course. I'm especially proud of one former student who's now in medical school at FSU. She told me, 'I was prepared for college.' It really made my day. But day to day, what I live for is those special moments when students' faces light up because they've grasped a new idea. That's my idea of excitement."

Timco looks to add 65 jobs

Grant to help fund hanger renovation.

By TONY BRITT
tbritt@lakecityreporter.com

Timco may be able to add more than 65 jobs as the result of a state grant awarded to the City of Lake City that will help fund renovation of one of city's airplane hangars.

The city was awarded funds from a Rural Infrastructure Grant that will be used to make improvements at one of the city-owned hangars used by Timco for airplane maintenance and repair.

Nick Harwell, Lake City Gateway Airport manager, said the grant is through the Department of Economic Opportunity with Lake City as the applicant.

The total project cost for work at the hangar is estimated at $1.355 million project and the DEO will fund 30 percent of the project's total cost, roughly $406,500.

"The project consists of remodeling the floor in Hangar 3 with some additional upgrades, but primarily the remodeling of the floor," Harwell said.

He said Hangar 3 currently can't support the weight of aircraft and Timco is using the hangar as an area in staging seats, bulkheads and other aircraft parts and equipment.

TONY BRITT/Lake City Reporter

Renovations will be made to one of the city-owned hangars used by Timco for maintenance.

"With the refurbishing of Hangar 3, we'll be able to bring in two additional lines of service," Harwell said, noting two jets can fit in the hangar.

He said the additional space will allow Timco to get additional work because they'll have more space.

"What we're being told by the representatives from Timco is that initially it could create upwards of about 65 jobs," he said. "The potential exists for additional jobs and possibly up to 150 - 200 jobs."

The city received grant award notification in July through a letter from the DEO Review Board regarding grant funds for 30 percent of the project.

The remaining 70 percent of the $1.355 million project will be funded by the City of Lake City and Columbia County.

Harwell said the Columbia County Board of County Commissioners has agreed to a partner in the project along with the city. The two governmental entities have agreed to pay a 35 percent contribution for the remaining project costs, roughly $474,000 each.

Now that the city has its grant award recipient notification, Harwell said the city is awaiting the legal agreement with the DEO that ties their financial commitment to the local governments' contributions.

"The city is the applicant, so we're going to be responsible for the 70 percent, although the county has agreed to partner on this project with a 35 percent contribution," Harwell said, noting there will be a contract between the DEO and the city, as well as an agreement between the city and county.

After the legal agreements are finalized, the project will go out through a competitive bid process. Harwell said the construction should be done fairly quickly.

"We think we can probably have that hangar remodeled to the condition and the state we need so we can start bringing in those jobs any where from 5-8 months," he said. "I feel very confident within the next several weeks we should have an agreement and be able to move forward with getting this through the competitive bid process."

As a result of the floor renovation more aircraft are expected at the facility and Harwell said the level of activity will also increase expanding local economic development.

"The goal was to try to create jobs through the grant process," Harwell said. "The (facilities) over there are the city's assets and the hangars belong to the city. Anytime I, as the airport manager, can apply for a grant to improve not only our assets, but create jobs in the local economy, I understand those moneys as a result of the salaries being paid to those 65 employees, a large percentage of that stays in the local economy. It's just a win-win for all parties involved, not only the airport and Timco, but for the community at large."

Adam Trent brings magic to FGC

From staff reports

It's a magic show for people who don't like magic.

That's how Adam Trent, one of the stars of the upcoming Broadway show "The Illusionists," describes his act that combines a dazzling array of tricks with comedy and music. Trent will kick off the 2014-15 season of FGC Entertainment on Thursday at the Florida Gateway College Levy Performing Arts Center.

The show begins at 7:30 p.m.

"I get people all the time who come up to me after a show, and say, 'I hate magic, I think it's corny, but this is something different and I'm glad I came,'" Trent said by phone on Wednesday from Dubai, where he just completed a two-week run with "The Illusionists." "That's one of the most common comments I get, and I think it's a great compliment."

Trent began his path to becoming a magician as a kid, performing at birthday parties and monetizing his act at a very early age. Even though he graduated from college with a degree in finance, there was never a doubt in his mind about his future career.

"I think magic has always been a cool thing," Trent said. "People have always been interested in it, but unfortunately, there have been a lot of bad stereotypes because of the people who perform it: this dorky idea of magicians who pull a coin out from behind your ear. It just kind of needed a refresh."

Trent did that, combining strong visuals, music, and comedy into a unique routine that has been described as "Justin Timberlake meets David Copperfield" by GP4T Magazine. His talents have taken him on a worldwide performance tour and have also garnered appearances on "America's Got Talent," the Travel Channel's

"Scambushed," and Disney Channel's "Shake It Up."

"I was always interested in the other art forms and I think combining them together made it something that people couldn't really copy or take away from me, because they'd have to go back in time to learn music and comedy as a kid," he said.

His path to Broadway began last year when he was initially invited to perform during the first show of "The Illusionists" at the Sydney Opera House.

"At the time, I'd been doing my own show for years and I didn't really want to do it," Trent said. "I was very happy doing my own stuff. But they kept talking about it, and I didn't have much going on at the time, so I said I'd do the opening at the Sydney Opera House."

The show did well; in fact, it broke sales records at the venue. Since then, the seven-man show has gone on to break attendance records around the world and kicks off its Broadway circuit next month in New York.

Until then, though, the best place to see Trent is at Florida Gateway College and he promises a unique experience for attendees.

"There's something for everyone, and I guarantee people will never see a magic show like it," Trent said.

Tickets are still available for the performance on Oct. 16 and can be purchased by calling (386) 754-4340 or by visiting www.fgcertainment.com. Tickets are $15 for general admission and $10 for FGC students, faculty, and staff.

WEATHER HISTORY

The Columbus Day Big Blow occurred on this date in 1962 in the Pacific Northwest. It is most likely the most severe and damaging windstorm to occur in the Cascade Mountains. Winds reached hurricane force in some areas and more than 3.5 billion board feet of timber were blown down. In the end, 48 people died and the storm caused 210 million dollars in damage.

Ed White knocks off Tigers, 51-7

By BRANDON FINLEY
 bfinley@lakecityreporter.com

It wasn't the worst loss in Columbia High history, but for those born after the second World War, it certainly felt like it.

The Tigers hosted Ed White High in a game billed as the District 3-6A Championship, but it was the Commanders that showed they were the only team deserving the title in a 51-7 win over Columbia.

It was the worst loss for the Tigers since a 47-6 loss against Pine Forest (Pensacola) in the 1988 playoffs.

"There are a whole bunch of reasons this happened," Columbia head coach Brian Allen told his team after the game. "We've got to learn from these mistakes. We have a bye week coming up and then we have to get back to fighting for the playoffs. We have to finish the season strong. We win together, we lose together, but we have to get better together."

Allen took blame for the loss and said that he didn't think it was his best game as head coach.

One notable play that switched momentum in Ed White's favor happened late in the second quarter when the Tigers attempted to fake a punt on 4th-and-7 from their own 23-yard line, but were unsuccessful. It led to Ed White's Taylor Thomas rushing for a touchdown with two seconds to go in the half to make the lead 27-7.

"It's one of those plays where maybe I have to coach a little better," Allen said. "You try to catch someone off guard, get a little spark. For whatever reason, we were unable to convert. I had the feeling, so we went for it. It's one of those plays where if you make it, it's a great call, but if you don't get it everyone in the world wonders what you're doing."

CHS was in the thick of things through the first half and had their chances.

Turnovers hurt the Tigers, however, as Lonnie Underwood uncharacteristically coughed up the ball on the Tigers' first two drives.

The first fumble resulted in Thomas' first home-run score of the night as he burst through the Tigers' front and ran 55 yards for the score.

LSU slips by Gators, 30-27

GAINESVILLE — Two teams fighting to stay alive in the Southeastern Conference did battle and a last-second field goal was the difference as LSU defeated Florida 30-27 off a 50-yard field goal by Colby Delahoussay with three seconds remaining in the game.

Prior to the field goal, it was a back-and-forth spectacle by two teams not expected to score a lot of points.

With fireworks now a part of the Ben Hill Griffin Stadium spectacle, Andre Debose brought out the first display with a 62-yard return at 8:52 of the first quarter for the first score of the contest.

Jermauria Brasco recovered a fumble that bounced right in his hands from Jeff Driskel to set up a two-play drive from

LSU. Leonard Fournette powered through Gator defenders from 12 yards away to tie the game at 6:21 of the first.

Driskel answered with an 8-play, 75-yard drive in which his legs were the catalyst. Debose kick started the possession, but it was Driskel who capped it with a nine-yard score to give Florida a 14-7 lead with 2:32 remaining in the first quarter.

Driskel did his best job to silence critics most of the first half and continued to do so on Florida's following possession. The quarterback led Florida to a 17-7 lead on a 53-yard drive in which he used a combination of his legs and arms to move the Gators. He ended the first half with 59 yards on the ground.

But with the good Driskel, also came the bad. He was unable to find a deep connection and threw an interception when he SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Distractions? What distractions?

Florida State quarterback Jameis Winston ignored the controversy from a sexual assault allegation swirling around him and responded with a nearly flawless performance Saturday, throwing for 317 yards and three touchdowns as the top-ranked Seminoles beat Syracuse 38-20.

"He just played ball," Florida State coach Jimbo Fisher said.

Winston, who scooted out of trouble when necessary to extend plays, finished 30 of 36 and earned his fifth 300-yard passing game on the road.

"It's not about distractions," Winston said. "It's about Florida State football."

Mario Pender scored twice, on a 12-yard run to open the scoring in the first quarter and a 4-yard reception in the second as the Seminoles built a 24-6 half-time lead.

Tight end Nick O'Leary had a career-high eight catches for 97 yards and one touchdown, while Rashad Greene returned from a concussion and caught six passes for 107 yards, becoming the school's all-time receptions leader.

"When you have multiple guys making multiple catches, that's doing what we got to do," Winston said. "People can't game-plan us for one person."

Florida State (6-0, 4-0 Atlantic Coast Conference) has won a school-record 22 straight games, the longest streak in the nation, and 19 in a row in the conference.

Lady Tigers hold serve at Fort White on Friday

By BRANDON FINLEY
 bfinley@lakecityreporter.com

FORT WHITE — Columbia High made it 2-0 on "Pink Night" as the Lady Tigers handed Fort White High a loss on its home court on Friday. The Lady Tigers made easy work of the Lady Indians in a 25-17, 25-15, 25-13 victory. It wasn't a clean sweep, however, as Fort White's junior varsity came up with a three-set win against Columbia 16-25, 25-20, 15-12. Jara Courson led the Lady Tigers with 14 kills, 14 digs and four aces. Lacey King had 20 digs and three assists, Glendaisha Johnson had three blocks, six kills and one assist, Morgan Hartopp had 15 digs and Hanna Baker had 1 ace, two blocks, three kills, seven digs and 44 assists. "Our hard work is starting to show on all cylinders of our roster," Columbia head coach Heather Benson said. "Hayes Fulford was out with an injury from the previous game and Glendaisha Johnson stepped up for the team tremendously. I am seeing great things from our back row and am really proud of how far we have come thus far into the season. Our players are finally starting to trust each other on the court and that is what it takes to be a winning team." Columbia continues its season with two games at home next week. The Tigers begin by hosting Gainesville at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday.

17-14 heading into the half. The Tigers went 75 yards on 12 plays, 11 of which were runs, and converted on a fourth-and-goal from the one when Kenny Hilliard ran around Florida defenders for the score.

The second half began with two penalties to help LSU drive 65 yards and take control of the contest. Florida's Brian Poole was hit with a defensive holding penalty on third-and-17 to extend the Tigers' drive and seven plays later Florida was stung by another drive-changing penalty. This time Brian Cox Jr. was whistled for pass interference in the end zone. Fournette rushed for his second touchdown of the game to give LSU a 20-17 lead with 3:42 remaining in the third quarter.

Debose nearly returned a second punt for a touchdown in the fourth quarter but was tripped up at the nine-yard line. Florida lost two yards on a Driskel run the following play, but the quarterback found Robinson on a corner route to give the Gators a 24-20 lead with 6:10 remaining in the contest.

A defense that had been gashed by the run throughout the game had the outcome on its shoulders in the final minutes. There were signs of defiance including a 12-yard loss on a sack by Dante Fowler after LSU crossed midfield. However, there were still signs of Florida's mental errors as Travin Dural came up with a 41-yard reception on third down to keep the Tigers' hopes alive. Dural came up with a one-handed grab from 11 yards out from Anthony Jennings with 2:40 remaining to give LSU the 27-24 lead.

Florida responded with Driskel hitting Robinson for a 73-yard pass to set up a Valez field goal. Driskel hit Tevon Westbrook in the end zone, but the pass bounced off the tight end's hands leaving Florida with a fourth down and the Gators settled on the tie from the one-yard line.

Florida forced LSU into a three-and-out and began play with 54 seconds remaining at their 42-yard line. After converting a first down, a pass bounced off the hands of Latroy Pittman and was intercepted by Ricky Jefferson, who then returned it to the Florida 36-yard line. Pittman was carted off after the play.

Colby Delahoussaye then connected on a 50-yard field goal with three seconds remaining to give the Tigers a 30-27 win.

CHS: Destroyed at home by Ed White

Ed White went with trickery for the second score with a reverse pass from Javonte Ferguson to Dalvin Storey for a 40-yard touchdown connection to make it 13-0.

Austin Harper's fumble recovery set the Tigers up at the 13-yard line with 8:30 remaining in the first half and Underwood was able to convert on a four-yard run to cut the score to 13-7 following a Hunter Houston extra point.

The Tigers wouldn't get any closer.

Javaris Davis made it 19-7 after a 73-yard run with 3:27 remaining in the first half and after the fake punt was snuffed out Thomas ran in from two yards out with 11.3 seconds remaining in the half to make it 27-7.

The Commanders also fired out of the second half.

Thomas ran 65 yards for his third score of the game, to make it 33-7 on the second half's opening possession.

While the Tigers have been good on special teams all year, this was not the night.

Despite a few good kick-off returns, Columbia was hurt more than helped by the game's third phase.

Isaiah Thompson recovered a blocked punt from the Tigers' 31 yard line and made the score 39-7 with 3:10 remaining in the third quarter.

wrong end of a running clock in this game and Thomas brought it out in devastating fashion with a 99-yard run to make it 45-7 with 1:28 remaining in the third quarter.

The final insult came with Isaiah Belton recovering a fumble and running it 62-yards for a touchdown with the clock running in the fourth quarter for the 51-7 final.

Columbia will head into a bye week before returning to play at Lee High on Oct. 23.

The Tigers fell to 5-2 after the loss.

Chris Washington injured

Columbia guard Chris Washington had a compound fracture of his tibia and fibula during the game, along with mild muscle damage. Surgery was performed Saturday morning and the player was listed in stable condition.

The injury was sustained when an Ed White player rolled on his leg during a 26-yard run by Kamario Bell.

Districts coming for Tigers' golf teams

Columbia High's golf team celebrates after winning the Alachua County Tournament at Gainesville Country Club.

Columbia favored to capture titles

By BRANDON FINLEY
 bfinley@lakecityreporter.com

Columbia High's golf teams showed what it takes to defend at districts with wins in the Alachua County Tournament at Gainesville Country Club and in the Jill Darr Invitational at Haile Plantation.

Now, both teams must show what it takes in the District 2-4A Tournaments this week.

Columbia's boys shot 339 to win the Alachua County Tournament. Buchholz shot a 341 to finish second followed by Gainesville, St. Francis, Santa Fe, Eastside, P.K. Yonge and Oak Hall.

Dillan Van Vleck (79) and was the runner-up in the tournament and led the Tigers. Jacob Soucinek finished in third with an 82. Luke Soucinek shot 84, Garrett Finnell carded a 94 and Zane McCranie finished at 96.

The Tigers are 20-2 following the tournament.

"The course was playing tough," Columbia head coach Steve Smithy said. "Gainesville Country Club is a very demanding course and it was playing all the way back. There were only two scores in the 70s in the tournament, which tells you how tough the course was playing. I think we battled back and played much better on the back than the front. We went down two years ago and tied Buchholz, but this is the first time we've been able to win it outright."

The Tigers tee off at Ironwood Country Club at 9 a.m. on Tuesday in the district championship. Columbia goes in as the favorite with an undefeated record in the district and as defending champion. Eastside lost to Columbia by one shot in a match earlier this year and will be the main challenger.

Districts will take place at Ironwood, but it shouldn't be a curve ball for the Tigers as Columbia has experience on the course this season.

"Ironwood and the beautiful part about managing your schedule is you know where the tournament is and can play it," Smithy said. "We'll play it Monday and familiarize ourselves with it. Hopefully there won't be any hiccups. We have to manage our game. We have to map out the course in our head and execute the plan. If we can do that, we have the golfers."

According to Coach Smithy, Van Vleck should be this year's favorite as defending champion.

"I would say that Dillan is the defending champion and second in Alachua, so he's trending the right way," Smithy said. "I have two other golfers who are right there and that can go play and win. Jacob and Dillan are dead even in strokes going into the Alachua County Tournament. That's how close they are. Either can go in there and Luke isn't far behind."

The Tigers will need a fourth score from one of their youngsters and Smithy believes that the freshmen will be ready.

"I have two guys in Garrett and Zane that have never played in a district tournament," Smithy said. "I am definitely looking forward to seeing how they handle the pressure. That's why we started doing the country tournament. It gives an idea how a big tournament is done. It won't be as much of a shock to them on Tuesday."

Meanwhile, Columbia's Gillian Norris made a strong showing by winning the Jill Darr Invitational at Haile Plantation this week. The win sets Norris up nicely heading into Tuesday's District 4-2A tournament, where the Lady Tigers will try to defend their championship.

Norris won the tournament with a 73.

"I'm very proud of Gillian with getting the individual trophy," Columbia head coach Todd Carter said. "I am excited to see how she's going to play at districts."

Brooke Russell shot 83, Shaylnn Barber 100, Abby Blizzard 105 and Sammie Service 111 to round out the Lady Tigers' scoring.

Heading into the state playoffs, Carter feels that Norris has a big opportunity in front of her, but the Lady Tigers should definitely be the favorites in the district with a well-rounded team.

"Leading the Tigers, Gillian Norris is definitely on top of her game," Carter said. "I look forward her to go under par on Tuesday. Brooke Russell has definately got her game back and I look for good things out of her. Shaylynn Barber has been putting in a lot of time and effort practicing and she's getting ready for her first district. Abigail Blizzard is hitting the ball better than I've ever seen. Sammie Service is in her first year playing and she's in our No. 5 spot. She's put in a lot of time to prepare for district."

As far as competition, Carter feels this should be the Lady Tigers' championship and the focus is already on round two if Columbia can play to their ability.

"Hands down, we should be district champions," Carter said. "In regionals, we should run into some hard teams. It might be hard for us to advance to state, but I look forward to Gillian and possibly Brooke making their way to state."

With the tournament at Quail Heights Country Club, Carter feels it will only play into Columbia's advantage.

"Quail Heights has all their greens reworked," Carter said. "The golf course is in the best shape it's been in. Hosting helps us, because it brings golfers from outside the county and the one biggest thing is we put junior golf No. 1. Quail is going to be hosting in the future."

"Being that this is our home course, this is where we practice. We did a lot of traveling this year, but this is where we practice. We know the areas to play from and we know the greens."

She thinks we're just fishing

Saturday, August 10, 2014 was a day I'll never forget. On this day, my daughter, Lilla Kate Chapman, caught her first fish. It was a perfect 8-pound, 26" upper-slot redfish that tried to steal a pinfish. But this day was much more than just a fishing trip.

This was the culmination of years and decades of dreams, emotions, and reality, all wrapped into a slender 44-pound, 52" blue eyed, blonde haired girl that stole my heart.

There are very few moments that completely change your life. For some, it could be a personal accomplishment, an athletic achievement, a family event, or some will say it's the first time they fell in love.

Personally, athletically, and with my family, everything seemed to be a natural progression. I never had an experience where it felt like my whole world had been flipped upside down. I was blessed with health, as was my entire family. Athletically I set a few school records and won some accolades including "most athletic" at our high school. To be fair, I probably won because our school teams were less athletic than the cast of Golden Girls.

I can rule out the whole falling in love thing while I was in high school, because I was terrible with girls. Maybe it's because I was also built like a long distance runner with a tapeworm, or maybe it was the rust bucket we pulled off the used car lot had been smoked in more than a Cheech & Chong movie.

The transfer to the real world post college was smooth, and I was lucky enough to meet a quality young woman, who was sweet, intelligent, beautiful, honest, and very rarely short tempered — if everything were positive, this would story would be categorized as "fiction." But, marriage didn't completely change my life. We dated for five years, and had a great relationship, so there weren't any surprises. It was a continued natural progression. All of that changed when we decided to start a family.

Robert Edwin Chapman the 5th was my destiny. The friends I grew up with, my family, coaches, teachers, everyone knew — I was going to have a son, and carry on the Chapman name. RC5 would be a left-handed pitching, fishing, hunting, Boston and Tampa sports loving, drawing, slow running, prank playing, life loving goofball, just like his dad.

But life doesn't always go according to plan.

When we first heard we were expecting — after over a year of trying it didn't seem possible. This is how life comes full circle. We needed modern medicine, lots of prayers, and a ton of luck to simply get pregnant. Ask any parent who's unsuccessfully tried to get pregnant, it's an absolute grind. You try, and try, you change things, you eat things, you wear things, and you flip your whole calendar and life upside down. You might as well pitch a tent over your house, because it becomes a circus.

I was fishing a tournament in my hometown (Bradenton) during the summer of 2007 when I received a call from my wife in Lake City. I was knee deep wading on a sandbar at the mouth of the Manatee River, and received the news that our life was about to change.

A few months later we were getting an ultrasound, and maybe it was our wishing and wanting, but there appeared to be something on that little peanut sized human being, so much so, that we even put a little arrow on the black and white photo. I celebrated. My destiny was fulfilled.

I went home and googled how to build a pitchers mound, and bought all the supplies to make one in our backyard for RC5. I had it all planned out. I was going to paint a mural of Fenway in little Rob's room, he'd start pitching at 10 years old (just fastballs and circle change-ups until he was 18), and we'd get a photo of four generations of Rob Chapman's together.

On our next trip to the doctor all of these visions came crashing down like a Wilt Chamberlain free-throw attempt. We were going to have a little girl. Her name would be Lilla Kate (after Andrea's great grandmother). I don't know how to describe how I felt, because during this same scan we were told Lilla might have a heart abnormality.

As first time parents we had no idea what this meant, other than you hope and pray for a healthy baby — that's it. Boy or girl, it no longer matters. We were completely helpless, and scheduled a trip to Winnie Palmer Hospital in Orlando. On that visit we received the best news of our young marriage. Lilla was given a clean bill of health, and on February 6, 2008, we welcomed a healthy, blonde haired, 6-pound 8-ounce little girl into this world.

I'll never forget when the doctor handed her to me for the first time. She had so much blond hair was so tiny, and I just stared in amazement at our daughter. This living, breathing, crying human life was here because of us.

THAT is life changing.

Fast-forward six years, and add another daughter, Molly. Instead of a Fenway Park mural and a pitcher's mound, we have a pink flower covered tree mural (complete with butterflies) and a pink playhouse (complete with a kitchen set). I'm now an expert on My Little Ponies, Princess Sofia, Frozen, Big Eyed Animals, JamBerry nail wraps, and making ponytails (the right way — where it's really tight, and there are no loose hairs).

Getting back to the fishing trip...ALL of these thoughts and emotions came pouring over me during that five-minute battle with the redfish. This was more than a fishing trip — this was a magical moment for someone who loves fishing as much as I do. To be able to give that experience to my own daughter, and see and hear the excitement in her voice, will hopefully lead to a lifetime of similar memories.

LSHA records $6M in savings by steering patients from ER to MDs Millage rate cuts also contributed to reduction in costs.

By SARAH LOFTUS
sloftus@lakecityreporter.com

Lake Shore Hospital Authority has saved Columbia County taxpayers more than $6 million since 2011 by lowering the millage rate after it made indigent care more efficient and cost-effective.

In 2008, LSHA contracted out to seven or eight local physicians who provide primary care for LSHA patients who would otherwise go to the emergency room when sick, executive director of LSHA Jack Berry said. Each doctor is paid $50 per patient visit, slightly above what Medicaid pays, while one visit to the emergency room costs LSHA $2,000. Doing this is what allowed LSHA to lower its millage rate, Berry said.

He said it wasn't until 2011, however, when the primary care program really took and LSHA started seeing the cost of indigent care go down. It took about three years to get patients to understand that they should go to their primary care doctors for everyday illnesses and needs, not the emergency room, Berry said.

When he took over as executive director in 2010, about 300 indigent care patients were going to the emergency room each month, he said. In September, only 29 indigent care patients went to the emergency room, Berry said.

LSHA's primary care program saved LSHA about $700,000 during the 2013-14 fiscal year, which ended on Sept. 30, he said.

Berry said LSHA's indigent care patients were getting sick and going to the emergency room so often because they couldn't afford their medications and weren't taking them. So in 2010, he started a prescription program with local pharmacists called the RX program, which allows LSHA indigent care patients to get up to five generic drugs per month. LSHA pays pharmacists $4 per prescription.

The RX program has helped keep people out of the emergency room, which has helped LSHA save a lot of money, Berry said.

By lowering the cost of LSHA's indigent care by keeping people out of the emergency room, LSHA saved enough money that it was able to lower the millage rate to .962 in 2011. The millage rate is still set at .962.

LSHA has a contract with Health Management Associates, which runs Shands Lake Shore Regional Medical Center, that says LSHA has to give HMA the revenue that would come from 1.5 mills being levied each year. Since LSHA was able to lower the cost of indigent care, it was able to lower the millage rate and still pay LSHA the money that 1.5 mills equals.

Since LSHA lowered the millage rate in 2011, it has saved taxpayers $6,152,842.

LSHA's renegotiation of its contract with HMA in 2010 also helped it to lower the millage rate in 2011. Under the new contract, HMA took over responsibility of hospital maintenance, which had cost LSHA as much as $901,990 in 2008.

Berry said he gives the LSHA board complete credit for lowering taxes. All of the board members are businessmen and women who understand how to use money efficiently, he said.

Berry said he thinks LSHA is the only taxing authority that was able to lower taxes during the recession.

LSHA board member Koby Adams said he's pleased that the board has been able to offer this tax cut to Columbia County residents.

"It is the property/taxpayers' money to begin with," he said. "To be able to give them a little bit of a reduction goes along with the cooperative nature of this board."

LSHA started its 2010-11 fiscal year with $9,041,594 in reserves and ended its 2013-14 fiscal year with $5,650,000 in reserves. It's expected to have $5,800,000 in reserves by the end of the 2014-15 fiscal year.

Berry said he's not sure how much longer LSHA will be able to keep the millage rate at .962, but it will probably be for another three to four years.

Tesla adding safety features

By JUSTIN PRITCHARD
Associated Press

HAWTHORNE, Calif. — Luxury electric car maker Tesla Motors is making its Model S sedan faster and safer in an effort to compete better with other high-end sedans.

At an open-to-the-public unveiling Thursday night that included bumping music, free alcohol and test rides on an airport tarmac, CEO Elon Musk unveiled an all-wheel-drive version of the car that includes self-driving features he called "auto pilot."

The announcement ended a week of speculation following a cryptic Musk tweet that said, "About time to unveil the D and something else."

Taking the stage with hundreds of Tesla fans in the audience, he explained that the "D" stands for "dual motor." The current Model S is a rear-wheel-drive car with one motor. The "D" will have two motors — one powering the front wheels and one powering the rear wheels.

Musk said unlike all-wheel-drive systems on gas-powered cars, which tend to be heavy and make the cars less efficient, Tesla's system improves the speed, acceleration and mileage by optimizing which motor is used.

The all-wheel-drive version of the P85 performance sedan will have a top speed of 155 mph, compared with the current 130 mph. It will accelerate from 0-60 mph in 3.2 seconds, akin to exotic sports cars.

"This car is nuts. It's like taking off from a carrier deck," Musk said at a municipal airport near Los Angeles where another of Musk's companies — the commercial rocket firm SpaceX — is based. The crowd obliged with cheers and applause.

After Musk left the stage came the rides, which demonstrated both the car's acceleration and safety features. Attendees, many dressed up and some well-lubricated with free alcohol, were not allowed behind the wheel.

The all-wheel-drive system helps grip slippery roads, and analysts have said Tesla needed it to boost sales in the Northeast and Midwest, as well as Europe. The company sold 13,850 cars in the U.S. through September, down 3 percent from a year ago, according to Autodata Corp.

Tesla is also significantly upgrading its safety features.

The Model S will steer itself back if it wanders from its lane and brake automatically if it is about to hit something. Those features are offered on luxury competitors, as well as mainstream brands such as Ford, Hyundai and Toyota.

But Tesla is going a step further. Its new system will move the car over a lane when the driver uses the turn signal. It will also use cameras to read speed limit signs and decelerate accordingly. Volvo has a system that reads signs and alert drivers if they are over the limit, but does not change the speed.

Musk called the features "auto pilot" but said they do not mean that the car could drive itself — as he put it, a driver cannot "safely fall asleep."

While the addition of all-wheel drive catches Tesla up with other in the luxury car market, pulling together all the driver-assist features impressed Brian A. Johnson, an analyst with Barclay's. "It's a year ahead of the timeframe I was expecting," he said.

Raj Rajkumar, a pioneer of self-driving cars with Carnegie Mellon University, was similarly impressed but wondered about the limitations of "auto-pilot" — how would it perform in different weather and road conditions.

All-wheel drive will be a $4,000 option on the base and mid-range Model S, which start at $71,000. The base price for the P85 with all-wheel drive — which will be known as P85D — is $120,000. The P85D will go on sale in December, while the other versions will go on sale in February.

Japan court: Remove search results

By YURI KAGEYAMA
AP Business Writer

TOKYO — A Japanese judge has ordered Google to remove search results of a man's unflattering past in an order the plaintiff's lawyer compared to Europe's "right to be forgotten" ruling.

The Tokyo District Court ordered Google Japan on Thursday to remove search results that hinted at the man's relations with a criminal organization after he complained his privacy rights were violated.

Google Inc. spokesman Taj Meadows said the company has a standard process for removal requests, and people can come to Google.

"We remove pages from our search results when required by local law, including Japan's longstanding privacy and defamation laws," he said. He said the company was reviewing the ruling.

The plaintiff's lawyer, Tomohiro Kanda said the case addressed privacy, defamation and other issues defined by Japanese law but also took the European "right to be forgotten" ruling in May as an example and used some of its logic and language.

In that case, Europe's highest court ruled Google should delete references to negative past information, including old debts and past arrests.

Looking for a future

Woman with kidney failure hopes for more time with her daughter.

By EMILY BUCHANAN | ebuchanan@lakecityreporter.com

A local mother who was diagnosed with stage four chronic kidney disease was told she needed a kidney transplant to live long enough to see her daughter graduate from college.

Catherine McLaren has dealt with kidney problems her whole life, but recently said she has struggled to afford medical insurance that would allow her to be placed on the transplant list.

"I've basically had kidney problems since I was in second grade," she said. "And it just got worse not too long ago. I ended up on stage four about a year ago."

A person with stage four chronic kidney disease has advanced kidney damage, she said. Basically, it means this person will need dialysis or a kidney transplant in the near future.

"I tried signing up to put my name on the transplant list, but the only thing stopping me was that I can't pay for the insurance that would cover the medications after I got the new kidney," she said.

As a single mother, McLaren supports her 18-year-old daughter and mother from a monthly disability check. She said she receives $1,379 a month.

By raising enough money, McLaren said she can pay off hospital bills and afford medical insurance, "because the hospital won't accept you on the transplant list without it."

McLaren said she was turned down by several hospitals before she became a patient at DaVita, a local kidney specialist center. Lori Spagnola, who works at DaVita, said McLaren is a patient there, but could not continue pursuing a transplant due to financial limitations.

A day in McLaren's shoes consists of following a strict diet, exercise and constantly being conscious about how her body is functioning, she said.

"I was told I wasn't going to have kids, but I had a miracle baby," she said. "My life has been about taking care of my daughter, which I would do a thousand times over again, because that's how it's supposed to be."

McLaren said she was also diagnosed with learning disabilities, which have further affected her handling a steady job and making her way in the world.

"I have a hard time understanding a lot of things, and I can fake most of it until they know me and then people just don't like to deal with that," she said.

"They want people like them who can think the way

High expectations for Leonardo's 706

If you are like me you wonder what the 706 means in the name. Mystery solved, it is the address. Leonardo's 706 is located at 706 W. University Ave, Gainesville. It is a family owned and operated restaurant since 1973. They use the freshest, locally grown ingredients in their dishes and have a broad menu to prove it.

So, a couple of Sundays ago several of us visited there for Sunday Brunch. Let me just say that I love to go to a restaurant that serves brunch. When I worked I rarely had time to entertain at home during the week so I used to entertain friends with brunch at my house on Sundays. My specialty was my Quiche Lorraine or my Crab Quiche with English muffins and a side of sautéed apples. Of course, I always started with Bloody Marys and Mimosas.

I personally don't know too many restaurants that serve brunch in our area. So, I had expectations before I even sat down at Leonardo's 706.

No need to worry. After we were seated our waiter served us a wonderful, complimentary Brunch Punch. Flavors of lemon-lime, ginger ale and orange juice made this an immediate hit with all 12 of us. This was accompanied by crispy, hot latkes and apple, cranberry and chocolate mini-muffins and all complimentary. You've got to admit, this doesn't happen too often. Our wonderful waiter, Paul, was from N.Y. and was a Philosophy student at the University of Florida. Ask for him.

I ordered the Giant Bloody Mary ($6.95). It was gorgeous. Served in a huge stemmed wine glass with a long stalk of celery and a pick full of large green olives, it was a classic. My first sip told me that I had made a mistake. As gorgeous as it was, it was blazing hot with some kind of pepper. Maybe Pepper Vodka? Not to worry, Rosemary volunteered to handle it so I sent it down the table. So, this is a warning, if you order a Bloody Mary make sure you like them hot. Sandra let me sip her Mimosa and it was delicious. I just asked for more Brunch Punch and ate my olives.

The hard part of the visit was trying to decide what to order. There is an International Buffet ($18.95) which has over 40 dishes featuring the spices, herbs and flavors of five continents. Each dish was hand crafted that morning and made a spectacular buffet and very tempting. But we all decided to order from the menu, which had something for everyone.

Several of us ordered the Eggs Benedict. Jamie and I chose the Traditional Benedict ($12.95) which was two poached eggs served on a toasted English muffin and topped with Lemon Hollandaise sauce and lightly seared Canadian Bacon served with Five Cheese Au Gratin potatoes. I ordered my eggs poached medium well so that the whites would be completely done and the yellows just a little soft. I usually end up with runny whites and yolks and I'm an unhappy diner. This time, they were absolutely cooked to perfection. Made me so happy. The potatoes were thinly sliced and cooked perfectly with crispy edges and a wonderful cheesy topping. I wouldn't have changed a thing.

Jenny's Salmon Benedict ($13.95) was exactly like the Traditional but had a huge piece of salmon that was sautéed with red onions, capers and dill. Gorgeous dish. Sandra loved the Crab Meat Benedict ($14.95). The other choice is the Shitake Mushroom Benedict ($13.95) which is shitake mushrooms, red peppers, scallions and spinach sautéed in clarified butter with a hint of pepper and sherry. You cannot go wrong with any of these dishes. They were all served with the five-cheese au gratin potatoes. If none of this suits you there is a Steak and Eggs meal ($18.95) or a Five-Cheese omelette ($14.95)

Tina ordered the Fabulous French Toast ($11.95). It looked like a picture from a magazine. Thick cut Challah bread served with sliced sautéed bananas, toasted pecans and a wonderful raspberry-caramel sauce. The Other Sandra and Rosemary split an order of the Organic Blueberry pancakes ($11.95) and neither one could finish their half. There were three, plate-size organic blueberry pancakes served with Granny Smith apple slices, pecan butter and homemade raspberry/blueberry sauce. I had a taste of both dishes and I guarantee you will not go wrong if you order either of these.

One of the owners, Mark Neuman came by checking on us and when he learned we had a birthday lady with us, he brought her a huge slice of their homemade, made from scratch, seven layer chocolate cake. Every layer had a thick ganache in between and it was drizzled on top. It looked too good to eat but he brought us all forks so we did have a taste. It melted in your mouth and it was delicious. You can always get a slice to go, folks.

DEAR ABBY

Man takes canceled lunch date as personal rejection

DEAR ABBY: My lunch date for today canceled on me. Generally, when a girl does this, I delete her number and move on. But in this instance, it wasn't a first or second date. We have been seeing each other for about a month and have built up some degree of intimacy. Moreover, I know she's not lying when she says she had a busy week. She apologized via text not once, but twice.

Nevertheless, I feel that as genuine as her apology was and as she has seemed in the time we have been together, this incident indicates either a lack of caring or integrity.

Would I be right to forget her? Or is this the one time a cancellation is justified? — CLASSIC OVER-ANALYZER IN L.A.

DEAR OVER-ANALYZER: Your problem isn't that you are a classic over-analyzer; it's that you seem to be extremely insecure to the point of courting rejection when none is there. People cannot always control their schedules. And cancellations can happen more than once without it being an indication of lack of interest or caring. I see no reason why you should "forget" a woman whose company you enjoy, unless you are a masochist.

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a mother of three grown children who all have successful careers. The problem is they seem to have lost touch with the real world. They no longer have compassion or respect for people who must live with less, or who are not as well-educated as they are. This includes my husband and me.

We feel like we no longer fit into their world. It has become hard for us to have any relationship with them. How can I make them see that money and status are not the only things in this world, and that they should show more compassion to others? — IN TOUCH WITH THE WORLD IN OHIO

DEAR IN TOUCH: You have my sympathy, but the lessons you would like to teach your adult children are ones they should have learned during childhood. Sometimes people who are "nouveau riche" try to forget their humble beginnings by avoiding the people who knew them when they were regular folks. It couldn't hurt to remind your offspring that money and status can be lost as quickly as they were earned, but family is supposed to be there forever.

DEAR ABBY: I have a wonderful daughter who is a perfect mother and wife. The problem is, she's in her 40s and dresses really inappropriately, sometimes wearing skirts and shorts so short they barely cover her bottom. She's also very voluptuous and always shows cleavage. When she goes out for the evening, she shows practically everything.

She takes lots of photographs with her family, and in all of them she's so exposed that sometimes when she gives me prints, I have to add magic marker so she looks more modest. She is a sweet person who is loved by everyone, so I don't know how to handle this. Please help me. — COVERED UP IN OAKLAND, CALIF.

DEAR COVERED UP: You say your daughter is a perfect mother and wife in her 40s. She may display her assets because it has been a winning combination for her so far or because her husband likes it.

THE LAST WORD Eugenia Word

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Traveling or learning and exploring new people, places and pastimes will add to your knowledge and life experience. Adapting to your environment will open up a window of opportunity to excel. A relationship will move in a meaningful direction. ★★

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take care of personal papers and prepare to replace equipment that is becoming obsolete. A peer will reveal information concerning your job or changes coming down the pipeline in your industry that will require you to update your skills. ★★

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Concentrate on creative endeavors that will bring in cash benefits. Present and promote what you have to offer and be open to the criticism given, but don't let it deter you from moving forward. Deem suggestions made as a contribution. ★★

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Don't feel guilty if you want to take care of your goals instead of helping someone else. Sticking close to home and working on projects that make you happy or add to your comfort will bring the best results. ★★

LEO (JULY 23-AUG. 22): Step into the spotlight and show everyone what you can accomplish. The connections you make by being a participant will lead to a positive change in the way you move forward. Love is on the rise and romance highlighted. ★★

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take care of responsibilities and you will avoid complaints from demanding individuals looking for a fight. Make changes to your personal financial papers to protect what you have worked so hard to achieve. Add extra detail to any job you take on. ★★

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Study the nature of people today. Your involvement in group talks or traveling to see someone in person will bring positive results. You will have a good eye for what will and what won't work. Love is highlighted. ★★

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Keep your money and possessions tucked away in a safe place. Don't take on responsibilities that don't belong to you. Focus on home, family, planning and making your life as convenient and comfortable as possible. ★★

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emotions will instigate serious talks that can improve your life and open up doors of opportunity. Sharing your thoughts will quickly lead to decisions that will bring you great satisfaction at home and at work. Love is in the stars. ★★

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Rethink any plans you have pending. It's better for you to slow down and see what transpires than to jump into something that has the potential to backfire. Put safety first and prepare to encounter the unexpected. ★★

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Mingle with people who have just as much to offer as you. Pregnancy, greater involvement with children and personal financial growth are all highlighted. An innovative career change can be successfully implemented. Romance will bring you closer to the one you love. ★★

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Look out for your financial, medical and legal interests, but don't use emotional blackmail if you want to be successful. Don't feel you have to compromise or deviate from your philosophy, but be willing to recognize and accept that others may differ. ★★

A hybrid of healthcare and business may be the right career path for you

A fear of blood shouldn't keep you out of the medical field if that's where your career goals are.

Some people are destined to be doctors. Others have a temperament that is perfect for being a nurse. Others, such as physical therapy assistants or patient care technicians, just want to be in the field to help other people.

But not all of us are cut out for the daily ins and outs of a job that requires needles or blood. I know I'm not — that's one of the reasons I'm a writer/PR guy. If there's any blood around my daily job, something has gone horribly, horribly wrong.

And that means I'll probably need the assistance of one of those people I mentioned a couple of paragraphs earlier.

But there are other opportunities available in the medical field. Florida Gateway College offers an Associate of Science degree in Health Information Technology, a program that prepares students to work with and manage health-related information.

Troy Roberts
Public Information Coordinator
Florida Gateway College

Health Information Technicians collect, organize, and analyze data used in the healthcare profession. They review patient records for accuracy; they organize and maintain data for clinical databases; track patient outcomes for quality assessment; document patients' health information, including medical history, symptoms, and test results, among other duties.

Think of this job as a hybrid of healthcare and business.

Many of these folks work in healthcare facilities, such as hospitals and doctors' offices, but some also work for insurance companies and government agencies, compiling data used for analysis and research.

It's a growing field. According to the United States Department of Labor, there were approximately 186,300 Health Information Technician jobs in the U.S. in 2012, and the median annual wage is nearly $35,000. Even better news is that this field is projected to grow substantially in the coming years — employment is predicted to grow by 22 percent from 2012 to 2022, much faster than the average for all occupations.

Of course, there are reasons for that, primarily the fact that there will always be sick people. And as the population continues to grow, that means there are more people who will be sick. An aging population will need more treatments, medical tests, and procedures. According to the Department of Labor, increased use of electronic health records, combined with more claims for reimbursement from insurance companies, will likely lead to an increased need for technicians.

Of course, if committing to a two-year program doesn't completely align with your schedule, FGC allows prospective students to get their feet wet with an Applied Technology Degree — which can be completed in one year — as a Medical Coder/Biller. The knowledge acquired here can be used as a base and a stepping stone into the Associate's degree, if you later choose to go that route.

Of course, if you have interest in either program, you'll want to talk to Michele Cuadras, FGC's Health Information Specialist. She'll be able to provide much more information than what I've glossed over here and better prepare you for what you'll face as a student in this program. She can be reached at (386) 754-4261 or michele.cuadras@fgc.edu.

And if you're interested in setting up a guided tour of the Florida Gateway College campus, please call (386) 754-4246.

Feagle and Moore to wed

Ronald Feagle and Sylvia Pepper, of Lake City, announce the engagement and upcoming marriage of their daughter Lillian Feagle to David Moore, son of Timothy and Donna Moore, of Sumterville. The wedding is set for Saturday, Dec. 20 at 2 p.m. at the Bethlehem Lutheran Church. A reception will follow at Jerry and Carolyn Castagna's house. The bride-to-be graduated from Fort White High School in 2013 and is currently working on getting her AS degree in physical therapy. The future groom graduated from South Sumter High School in 2012 and is currently serving in the U.S. Navy. Friends and family are invited to attend the wedding and reception ceremonies and join the couple in this joyous occasion.

TASTE

Mark chatted with us for a few minutes and we told him that we were impressed with the restaurant's beautiful art work. He said that they promote artists from the community. I particularly liked a large framed piece by Scott Meyers of Alachua. It was covered with butterflies made from shaved marble and had lighting behind it that made it really stand out and glow. If you look at their website you can see the butterfly picture. Our room had walls covered by numerous large pieces of art work by Itzchak Tarkey. The paintings were perfect in this room with its black painted walls, black column drapes, huge oval mirror and art deco bar and table tops. Mark said that theirs were from the Thornebrooke Gallery in Gainesville. I really liked his work and checked the artist out a little further. Tarkey and his family spent a year in the Mauthausen Concentration Camp in Austria and afterwards migrated to Israel. He died there in 2012. His work was influenced by French Impressionism particularly Matisse and Toulouse-Lautrec. His paintings were all of women depicted with bright, vivid, colorful clothing often in conversation with each other and in bistro like settings. Numerous sites on the Internet show his work. We can all be grateful he survived the Concentration Camp and then gave us such beautiful art. Pat on the back Mark for your good taste.

We all commented on the booths in the larger dining area which were made from old church benches and looked stunning. Our favorite art was the small mirror in the ladies room that had a painted frame that read "Hello Gorgeous." It was a fun outing and I highly recommend that you put it on your "to go" list. They also have an extensive dinner menu that you should check out on their website. I've already picked out what I'm going to order.

Dinner is served every night as follows:

Monday – Thursday
5:00 p.m. to 9:30

Friday – Saturday
5:00 p.m. to 10:30

Sunday Dinner 5:00 – 9:30

Sunday Brunch is served from 10:30 a.m. – 3:00

Telephone is (352) 378-2001.

can select from such groupings as Thrillers You Must Read, Strong Heroine Series, Best Epic Fantasy, and What to Read After Harry Potter. GoodReads also has their Choice Awards for Best Fiction, Best Science Fiction, Best Nonfiction, Best Humor, Best Young Adult Fiction, Best Picture Books, and many others.

Some public libraries have created their own databases of books in series and made them available to everyone. For example, the Midcontinent Public Library's website, www.mymcpl.org/books-movies-music/juvenileseries, has Juvenile Series and Sequels where you can search easy, juvenile, and young adult literature by series title, author, series subject, or book title.

Are you looking for a romance series? You can find them in the GoodReads website, but also at www.allromancewriters.com/series.cfm. On this site, you can only search by the series author.

After finding titles you want to read, be sure to check the Library's online catalog to make sure the Library owns the titles you want. If we do not have them, you can complete an Interlibrary Loan form and we will try to get you what you want from another library.

Do you have an e-book reader and use the Library's e-book service? You can download your books and audio-books right from the Library's home page (www.ccpl.sirsi.net). You can search by the series name, author, or title of a book in the series. If you need help downloading an e-book, be sure to ask for assistance from one of the staff.

If you are looking for something to read and it does not have to be by the same author you just read or anything in a series, just take a look at the Library's home page for a list of new fiction and nonfiction.

Many radio shows, like those on NPR, and TV talk shows highlight books and you can check to see if we own them. Why not join the Main Book Club or the Fort White Book Club and read books suggested by the other members? There are many ways to find out what to read next and I hope I have given you a few ideas on where to look.

they can — talk big words instead of small ones all the time. It's just not easy being me."

Ellena McLaren, 18, the daughter of McLaren, said she has spent her life helping her mother in and out of the hospital.

"People are very quick to judge my mom," her daughter said. "She has been discriminated her whole life, and I have to be there to talk for her or explain things to people for her."

McLaren said her hopes and dreams are no different than anyone else's.

"I'm just trying to live and watch my daughter graduate from college, get married and have kids one day," she said. "I'd like to be a grandma and live a longer life, just like everyone else does."
