Storm slams coast with 155 mph blast

Record-breaking hurricane crashes into Panhandle.

Associated Press

PANAMA CITY — Supercharged by abnormally warm waters in the Gulf of Mexico, Michael slammed into the Florida Panhandle on Wednesday with potentially catastrophic winds of 155 mph, the most powerful hurricane to hit the U.S. mainland in nearly 50 years.

Michael blew ashore near Mexico Beach, a tourist town about midway along the Panhandle, a lightly populated, 200-mile stretch of white-sand beach resorts, fishing towns and military bases.

Its winds roaring, it battered the coastline with sideways-blown rain, powerful gusts and crashing waves. It swamped streets, bent trees, stripped away limbs and leaves, knocked out power, shredded awnings and sent other building debris flying. Explosions apparently caused by blown transformers could be heard.

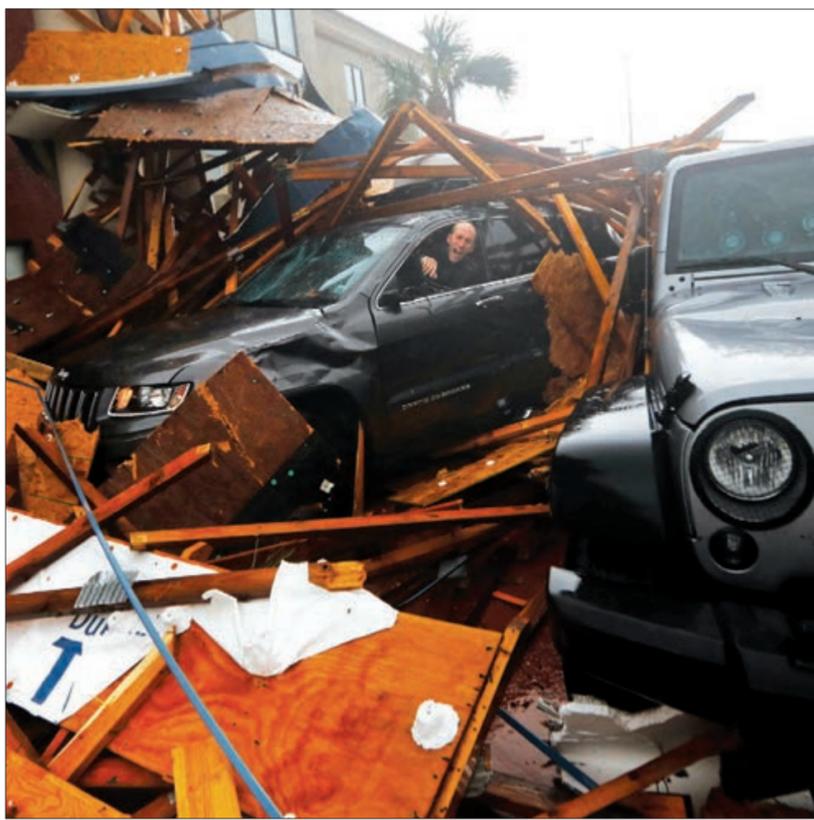

"The window to evacuate has come to a close," Federal Emergency Management Agency administrator Brock Long said.

The meteorological brute quickly sprang from a weekend tropical depression, becoming a furious Category 4 by early Wednesday, up from a Category 2 less than a day earlier. It was the most powerful hurricane on record to hit the Panhandle.

"I've had to take antacids I'm so sick to my stomach today because of this impending catastrophe," National Hurricane Center scientist Eric Blake tweeted as the storm — drawing energy from the Gulf's unusually warm, 84-degree water — grew more scary.

Based on its internal barometric pressure, Michael was the most powerful hurricane to blow ashore on the U.S. mainland since Camille in 1969. Based

Lake City hadn't felt the physical wrath of Hurricane Michael by Wednesday afternoon, but the storm did impact the town economically.

One hotel had to turn away evacuees due to an influx of line workers renting rooms, while other local businesses shut down as Lake City became host to scores of utility trucks.

Walmart closed its doors to customers Wednesday, but the parking lot was a staging ground for OSR, a power line contractor with workers from multiple states.

A group of line workers waited for orders beside a truck late in the morning, hours after arriving at a local hotel.

"I'm from Arkansas," one of the men said. "Where y'all from?" "Mississippi," two shouted back.

Florida Power and Light turned the Columbia County Fair Grounds into a staging ground for power-recovery operations, bringing a steady flurry of activity as utility trucks left in teams.

City looks to weed out defendants in election lawsuit

By CARL MCKINNEY
cmckinney@lakecityreporter.com

In a civil suit mounted to nullify the results of the Lake City Council District 10 race, the city is seeking to narrow down the lengthy list of defendants.

The lawsuit was mounted by Vanessa George, who lost to incumbent Eugene Jefferson during the Aug. 28 primary. It names as defendants Jefferson, both as an individual and in his official capacity as a City Council member, and council members Melinda Moses, Stephen Witt, Jake Hill and George Ward in their official capacities only. The lawsuit also names as defendants the City Council itself, the city as a whole, the Columbia County Canvassing Board, and each canvassing board member in their official capacities.

The city filed a motion on Oct. 3 to dismiss from the lawsuit specific council members in their official capacities and the council as an entity unto itself, arguing it's redundant to include the council and each member when the city is party to the litigation.

Jefferson would still be party to the suit, since he is the only council member to be targeted both as an individual and as an official.

Aside from George, numerous other individuals are listed as plaintiffs in the suit.

In a response also filed Oct. 3, the city denied all substantive claims made in on wind speed, it was the fourth-strongest, behind Andrew in 1992, Camille, and the biggest one of all, an unnamed 1935 Labor Day storm that had winds of 184 mph (296 kph).

More than 375,000 people up and down the Gulf Coast were urged to evacuate as Michael closed in. But emergency authorities lamented that many people ignored the warnings and seemed to think they could ride it out.

"While it might be their constitutional right to be an idiot, it's not their right to endanger everyone else!" Walton county Sheriff Michael Adkinson tweeted. Diane Farris, 57, and her son walked to a high school-turned-shelter near their home in Panama City to find about 1,100 people crammed into a space meant for about half as many. Neither she nor her son had any way to communicate because their lone cellphone got wet and quit working.

"I'm worried about my daughter and grandbaby. I don't know where they are. You know, that's hard," she said, choking back tears.

Hurricane-force winds extended up to 45 miles (75 kilometers) from Michael's center. Forecasters said rainfall could reach up to a foot (30 centimeters), and the life-threatening storm surge could swell to 14 feet (4 meters).

The storm appeared to be so powerful that it is expected to remain a hurricane as it moves over Georgia early Thursday. Forecasters said it will unleash damaging wind and rain all the way into the Carolinas, which are still recovering from Hurricane Florence's epic flooding.

Meteorologists watched satellite imagery in complete awe as the storm intensified.

"We are in new territory," National Hurricane Center Meteorologist Dennis Feltgen wrote on Facebook. "The historical record, going back to 1851, finds no Category 4 hurricane ever hitting the Florida panhandle."

Colorado State University hurricane expert Phil Klotzbach said in an email: "I really fear for what things are going to look like there tomorrow at this time."

Scientists say global warming is responsible for more intense and more frequent extreme weather, such as storms, droughts, floods and fires. But without extensive study, they cannot directly link a single weather event to the changing climate.

With Election Day less than a month away, the crisis was seen as a test of leadership for Scott, a Republican running for the Senate, and Tallahassee Mayor Andrew Gillum, the Democratic nominee for governor. Just as Northern politicians are judged on how they handle snowstorms, their Southern counterparts are watched closely for how they deal with hurricanes.

Hours ahead of landfall, seawater was already lapping over the docks at Massalina Bayou near downtown Panama City, and knee-deep water was rising against buildings in St. Marks, which sits on an inlet south of Tallahassee, Florida's capital.

Huge waves pounded the white sands of Panama City Beach, shooting frothy water all the way to the base of wooden stairs that lead to the beach.

More than 5,000 evacuees sought shelter in Tallahassee, which is about 25 miles from the coast but is covered by live oak and pine trees that can fall and cause power outages even in smaller storms.

Only a skeleton staff remained at Tyndall Air Force Base, situated on a peninsula just south of Panama City. The home of the 325th Fighter Wing and some 600 military families appeared squarely targeted for the worst of the storm's fury, and leaders declared HURCON 1 status, ordering out all but essential personnel.

The base's aircraft, which include F-22 Raptors, were flown hundreds of miles away as a precaution. Forecasters predicted 9 to 14 feet of water at Tyndall.

Evacuations spanned 22 counties from the Panhandle into north-central Florida.

"We've told those who stayed to have their life jackets on when the storm comes," Tress Dameron, Franklin County emergency management coordinator, told The News Herald in Panama City.

In St. Marks, John

Hargan and his family gathered up their pets and moved to a raised building constructed to withstand a Category 5 after water from the St. Marks River began surrounding their home.

Hargan's 11-year-old son, Jayden, carried one of the family's dogs in a laundry basket in one arm and held a skateboard in the other as he waded through calf-high water.

Hargan, a bartender at a riverfront restaurant, feared he would lose his home and his job to the storm.

"We basically just walked away from everything and said goodbye to it," he said, tears welling up. "I'm freakin' scared I'm going to lose everything I own, man."

the lawsuit.

George's attorney filed the lawsuit in early September, laying out three main reasons for nullifying the results of the District 10 race.

The first reason, according to the lawsuit, is the city is required by its own charter to conduct its elections, but instead allows them to be administered by the Columbia County Supervisor of Elections.

The suit also contends that the city must have its own qualifying period for candidates, but it currently uses the same one as the county.

The county's qualifying period was June 18 through June 22, but the lawsuit argues it should have been July 9 through July 13, in accordance with the charter.

Finally, the lawsuit asserts that the race should be nullified due to absentee ballot fraud.

In August, the Third Circuit State Attorney's Office launched an election fraud investigation after a District 10 voter filed a complaint alleging Eugene Jefferson's wife, Betty Jefferson, confronted her with an improperly obtained absentee ballot and asked the voter to check the box for Jefferson.

Compared to races in other city and county elections, the ratio of absentee ballots to polling-place votes was unusually high, said Third Circuit State Attorney Jeff Siegmeister.

Jefferson won with 360 votes to George's 339.

The incumbent's victory came through 249 mail-in votes, 70 early votes and 41 election-day votes.

George had 98 mail-in votes, 121 early votes and 120 election-day votes.

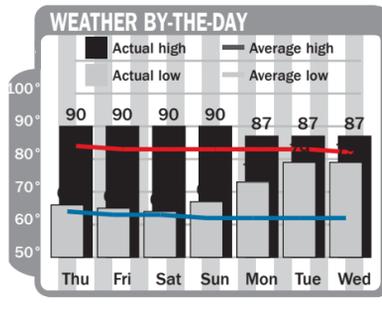

The complaint that sparked the probe came from Gladnell Jackson, 73, whose great nephew, Sylvester Warren, is in a relationship with candidate George.

Jackson alleges she was walking to her house when Betty Jefferson approached her on the street.

They went back to Jefferson's vehicle, where the candidate's wife pulled out an absentee ballot with the 73-year-old's name printed on it, Jackson alleges.

Jefferson asked her to sign the ballot and vote for her husband, Jackson alleges.

Jackson has never requested an absentee ballot and always votes at her polling place, she told authorities and the Lake City Reporter.

them to either west Jacksonville or Gainesville," Butler said.

About a dozen rooms were taken by evacuees who arrived early enough, Butler said.

In the lobby, 19-year-old FSU student Elle Ewing gazed at a laptop screen. She left Tallahassee with her older sister around 6:30 a.m., after their parents asked the them to ride out the storm at their home in Destin.

"I don't really know how it's going to be when we get back," Ewing said.

Strong winds were already blowing through Tallahassee when they left, Ewing said.

"I was just scared it was going to get bad," she said.

The sisters stopped in Lake City for food and rest.

"We thought it was out of the way enough," Ewing said.

Columbia County officials opened three emergency shelters at Fort White Community Center, Westside Community Center and Winfield Community Center.

Only four people checked into the shelter at Westside.

Two of them were Lake City residents April Williams and her 12-year-old Nephew, Tyler.

Williams said she was worried about the trees on her property near Long Street and decided to check into the shelter to be safe, despite forecasts showing Michael's path wouldn't directly cross through the area.

"I'm one of those people, I don't care if it was a Category 1 storm," Williams said. "I don't play with storms."

Power trucks — 300-plus — were gathered Wednesday at county fairgrounds, ready for dispatch.

Only an occasional store front was shuttered, and common mantra among workers at local restaurants was, "we're here until the power goes out."

But multiple downtown businesses did shut down Wednesday, including Halpatter Brewing Company.

Elsewhere, the Lake City Mall, Walgreens, Lowe's, Batteries Plus Bulbs, Central State Feed and numerous others shut their doors as locals made last-minute preparations.

Columbia County Public Works employees and county jail inmates worked side-by-side to distribute sandbags to residents at Columbia County Construction Yard.

Road Construction Supervisor Corey McCray said they delivered around 2,000 bags by Wednesday morning.

The Columbia County

Emergency Operations Center was partially activated Wednesday morning, manned by personnel from the county's fire department, local Florida Department of Health office, the state National Guard and other entities. The crew there kept track of the storm as it approached landfall.

The Army National Guard 2nd Battalion of the 116th Field Artillery Regiment out of Dade City had driven over two hours north on I-75 to await orders in Lake City. Sgt. 1st Class Anthony Riviera couldn't say where they were going, but said they were here to help with Hurricane Michael relief efforts wherever they may be needed.

The 12 or so Guardsmen and women had stopped at a convenience off U.S. Highway 90, near a Cuban food truck to snag an energy drink or two before taking off.

OBITUARIES

David Carl Crews, Jr.

Mr. David Carl Crews, Jr., age 62, of Pittsburg, Pa. died Tuesday, Oct. 9, in the Suwannee Valley Care Center, Lake City, Florida following an extended illness. He was born in Wiltshire, England while his father served in the U.S. Air Force. He attended high school at Boca Raton High School (Fla.) and Columbia High School in Lake City, Florida. David joined his father at R.E. Grace & Company. He later worked for a short time with the Boynton Beach Police Department before enlisting in the U.S. Army in 1985. ANOTHER VIEW

Singing only sad songs isn't any fun

Politics is fun, but not when you're losing. Then it hurts. When Adlai Stevenson lost his first race for president in 1952, he said it "hurts too much to laugh and I'm too old to cry." But it didn't hurt too much to not try again (and lose again).

The campaign to confirm Brett Kavanaugh for a seat on the U.S. Supreme Court was something less than a campaign for president, but it eventually felt that way. The Democrats obviously felt like Adlai Stevenson did on that long-ago election night.

Some Democrats felt like crying when the Senate confirmed Brett Kavanaugh, and some of them did. Some of them are throwing tantrums like a 3-year-old. Some of them have taken refuge in a vow to get even, which is fair enough if they keep "getting even" cleaner than Chuck Schumer and Dianne Feinstein did over the last days of the confirmation fight. A writer for Stephen Colbert, the late-night television entertainer, takes consoling satisfaction in "ruining Brett Kavanaugh's life."

Making change, and making change last, is what politics is all about. But some Democrats have apparently concluded that they can't win unless they change the rules. Striking out wouldn't be so frequent if the Democrats could get four strikes and white folks only three. Then the radicals could really get things done. All the levers of power are now in Republican hands. That's unfair and in some way that must be rectified.

Phillip Bump, an unhappy columnist at The Washington Post, agrees. Mr. Bump observes that Mr. Kavanaugh was "an unpopular nominee confirmed by senators representing less than half of the total U.S. population (not to mention that he was nominated by a president who lost the popular vote). The Senate these days can reach a majority with the votes of senators representing 17 percent of the population. And besides, most those senators are right-handed. That should tell us something."

Aaron Blake of The Washington Post, who has his own understanding of how things should work, complains that some states have more power than others. He discovered that California has more people than Wyoming, and that raises the possibility that other small states would have more to say about electing presidents and confirming Supreme Court justices than big states like California and New York and Illinois.

"At some point," he writes, "Democrats may need to ask themselves why they are consistently on the short end of that set-up. ... Is it because they have been outmaneuvered at nearly every turn and failed to make sure they turned what has regularly been a majority of the votes for their side into actual political power?"

Or is it that what the Democrats and the liberals are selling has begun to smell bad after all these years, and most voters are not addicted to stink. Saying the elections are rigged against you may make you feel good, in a weird sort of way. But the feeling doesn't last.

The Democrats and the liberals were winning for so long that it never occurred to any of them that the good old days wouldn't last forever. But the good old days didn't, and now they're as ill-tempered as the alligator the day the creek went dry.

Democrats have won many elections under the rules obtaining, and they will one day elect presidents again who nominate men and women to the Supreme Court. The fault, the Bard said, is not in the stars, but in ourselves. That can be a painful lesson, but not learning it will be most painful of all.

■ Washington Times

Conservatives the real 'liberals'

Occasionally I tune in CNN, actually appreciate some of its news discussions and otherwise grin and bear it. The other day, though, I frowned and decided not to bear it because here was this hoity-toity guy telling us how freedom would be endangered with Brett Kavanaugh on the Supreme Court because the conservatives would outnumber the liberals.

Excuse me, but, with exceptions, liberals are among the worst enemies American freedom has. It's true that the words "liberal" and "liberty" emerge from the same root word, namely "liber," meaning free. In fact, when liberalism began in the 18th century Enlightenment era, its foremost plank was liberty. We had inalienable rights, you see, and this philosophy was at the heart of America's beginnings just as the current, refashioned version could propel our ending.

What happened was "the Great Switch," a phrase used by the historian Jacques Barzun in his book "From Dawn to Decadence." In the late 19th and early 20th centuries, he wrote, socialist enthusiasms began to creep into liberalism, causing ideals to bend in coercive directions. Grant accomplishments but wade through to our 21st century, and we find liberals forever fencing us in. Our big-government superiors, you see, are trying to deliver a centrally planned utopia on the way to being an authoritarian dystopia.

A major means for this undertaking is regulations, and there are multi-thousands of pages of them telling us what's best for us, only it often isn't. Businesses get smashed, your choices are more limited, legal threats start sneaking up on you. And guess who loved this stuff?

Jay Ambrose
speaktjay@aol.com

President Barack Obama. He set all kinds of records giving us new regulations now being undone by President Donald Trump to the benefit of a booming economy and human flourishing.

The left is not restricted to government. At a vast number of ultra-liberal universities, another group of our betters limit free speech by students to designated zones, impose speech codes and skip due process when a female student accuses a male student of sexual abuse. Back to Washington, Democrats in Congress have proposed that gangster laws be employed against corporations questioning catastrophic climate change. A few years ago, as a show of virtue as they understood it, all the Democratic members of the Senate voted for rewriting a portion of the First Amendment to further empower Congress to control political speech.

Never tiring in such efforts, liberals in and out of politics are also encouraging the prohibition of hate speech. Hate, of course, could be so vaguely defined as to curtail any speech insufficiently euphemistic to meet liberal tastes.

One of the scariest things of late occurred when liberals were outraged by two free-speech rulings by conservatives on the Supreme Court. One decision said it was wrong for the state of California to require pro-life organizations counseling pregnant women to put up posters telling them where to get abortions. In other words, the state legislature thought that, if a private group advocated a cause it did not like, it could force it to promote the opposite cause. Nope, said the court.

The court also ruled that government employees refusing to join public unions should not be forced to help pay for their costs, including TV ads supporting political causes they might not agree with. Does that make you stomp your feet and insist the government darned well ought to have the prerogative of making you help finance any private group you deign not to join? I hope not.

The amazing thing is how five conservative, majority justices in these rulings were excoriated for "weaponizing" free speech. A front-page New York Times story quoted law professors and others as saying the powerful should not have free speech and that free speech was only legitimate when used to defend liberal causes. It shows you where the left is today and underlines how conservatives, especially those who are libertarians, of course, are now the true liberals.

A constitutionalist majority on the court is no threat to freedom. It is a boon to freedom even it brings tears to the eyes of liberals who are no longer liberal.

Where's Jamal? Saudis owe world an answer

Where is Jamal? That's what his fiancée, Hatice Cengiz, wants to know. It's what Turkey and the rest of the world want to know. Only Saudi Arabia has the answer.

Cengiz was the last person to see Saudi dissident Jamal Khashoggi alive before he walked into the Saudi Consulate in Istanbul on Oct. 2 to pick up documents he needed before their wedding. As he walked toward the entrance, she said she would wait for him outside. The Washington Post reported. "Fine, my darling," he told her. Turkey says he never came out.

Worse, Turkish officials suspect he was murdered by a Saudi regime that claims to embrace reforms but cracks down on any glimmer of dissent. Has Saudi Arabia joined the club of thug nations, locking arms with the likes of Russia, Venezuela, Iran and North Korea? Khashoggi's fate will help the world decide.

For years, Khashoggi, 59, was widely seen as a cogent, clear-thinking voice on Saudi affairs. As of late, he had been a contributor to The Washington Post's Global Opinions section. Earlier in his career, he served as an aide for the Saudi regime's intelligence chief, then established himself as a respected Saudi journalist. He even had on his resume an interview with Osama bin Laden in the 1980s when bin Laden was a militant leader fighting the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

But he also became a critic of the Saudi regime and its day-to-day leader, Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman. Prince Mohammed's rule has had a Jekyll-and-Hyde cast to it. At the same time he has touted reforms such as allowing women to drive, he has overseen the arrest of activists and critics. He also has prosecuted a brutal, Saudi-led intervention in Yemen, where civilian casualties continue to mount.

Turkey's suspicions aren't certainties, but neither are they preposterous. Khashoggi first went to the Saudi Consulate on Sept. 28 to get the documents but was told to come back in a week. In between, a team of 15 Saudi agents arrived in Istanbul on two planes, Turkish officials say. According to The New York Times, Turkish investigators say the agents killed Khashoggi inside the consulate and dismembered his body.

Saudi officials say Khashoggi left the consulate, but they haven't offered any evidence. Turkish

President Recep Tayyip Erdogan has pressed the Saudi regime to come clean, saying Saudi consular officials have access to security cameras that could either prove or refute their claims. "Do you not have cameras and everything of the sort?" he said of consular officials. "Then why do you not prove this?"

In contrast to Erdogan, President Donald Trump's reaction has been subdued. "I don't like hearing about it," Trump said Monday. "Hopefully that will sort itself out." Since taking office, Trump has coddled the Saudi regime. He sees the Saudis as valued allies against Iran. He may have a soft spot for the crown prince, but if Khashoggi was murdered by Saudi assassins, Trump will have to hold Riyadh accountable.

The Saudi royals covet relations with the West, so they know that Khashoggi's disappearance marks a crossroads. They can continue to hide behind the facade of reform, or they can embrace real change by freeing dissidents and activists. They also should allow journalists to do their jobs. Most urgently, they owe the world an answer about what's happened to Khashoggi.

UWSV campaign luncheon set for Oct. 19

All community members and business representatives are invited to join United Way of Suwannee Valley for its October community fundraising campaign report luncheon at Riveroak Technical College at noon on Friday, October 19.

During each month of United Way's annual community fundraising campaign, the local United Way conducts a campaign report luncheon to provide an opportunity for campaign team volunteers, community citizens, business representatives and agency personnel to learn more about partner agency services, United Way community impact initiatives and businesses supporting our community's well being through their support of United Way.

The organization's communications committee established a local theme of "Building a Strong Community" for this year's campaign. Throughout this campaign season, the events will highlight local community agencies affiliated with the United Way to underscore how their services contribute to building a strong community and community member support through the donation of time, talent and financial resources supports these agencies' efforts.

The event includes a lunch of turkey with gravy and cranberry sauce, mashed potatoes, asparagus, yeast rolls, chocolate delight, iced tea and water prepared by the culinary class at Riveroak Technical College. The cost of the luncheon is $13 per person. Reservations for the luncheon are needed and may be made by contacting the United Way office at 386-752-5604 x 102 no later than October 12.

United Way of Suwannee Valley fights for the health, education and financial stability of every person in every community. We are a part of a network of 1,800 United Ways in 41 countries and territories. The place that needs you the most is right here at home in the Suwannee Valley. Join us. Live United.

Florida trying to avoid letdown vs Vandy

Mullen wants Gators to stay level-headed, focused on Saturday.

By MARK LONG
Associated Press

GAINESVILLE — Florida coach Dan Mullen opened his first team meeting this week talking about handling success.

He'll find out Saturday if anyone was paying attention.

Coming off the program's most significant victory in three years and with a rivalry game against No. 2 Georgia looming in two weeks, the 14th-ranked Gators are facing the sometimes-daunting task of avoiding a letdown at Vanderbilt.

"We won, so guess what, Twitter's going to tell you how great we are," Mullen said. "If you like being told how great you are, get back to work and let's win again, OK? If you'd rather be told that you're no good and you stink, well then you don't have to work very hard and everyone will tell us we won't win the game and then everybody will tell us how bad we are."

"When you walk on campus like today, everyone's patting you on the back, right? It's only about six inches lower that they're kicking you in the rear end, right? It's about that much difference. I like the pat on the back rather than the kick in the rear end, so let's just keep working to keep it six inches higher."

Florida (5-1, 3-1 Southeastern Conference) has won four straight since losing at home to Kentucky, none bigger than last weekend's 27-19 victory against then-No. 5 LSU. It's the team's longest winning streak since a 6-0 start in 2015 that included a lopsided win over then-No. 3 Mississippi.

The Gators have been up and down since.

If they want to keep going in the right direction, they have to find a way to get motivated for an 11 a.m. kickoff on the road against one of the five SEC teams without a league victory and in front of an expected crowd of about 30,000.

"We definitely understand," receiver Josh Hammond said. "We're going to treat Vanderbilt as a big game because it's the next game coming up. We've still got to be ready to prepare and treat it as if it's a national championship game and come out ready to practice and continue to get better."

"I think that will be the biggest thing moving forward: just to not let our improvement that we keep making going up and let it slip or plateau. We've got to continue to get better, get better, get better and it will propel us into the game on Saturday."

The Gators have won four in a row and 26 of the last 27 against Vandy (3-3, 0-2).

Instead of focusing on how one-sided the series has been or that the Commodores lost their two conference games this season by a combined 51 points, Mullen pointed to how tough Vanderbilt has played Florida in the past.

"For our guys to have any thought except for how hard I can go on the next play would be us taking a step backwards as a team," Mullen said. "That has to be the focus of everybody within the program."

CHS fits in practice ahead of Hurricane Michael in preparation for Atlantic Coast.

By JORDAN KROEGER

Rain came down and some gusts rolled in.

Neither one was going to stop Class 7A No. 2 Columbia from getting in its normal practice ahead of Friday's District 2-7A road contest against Atlantic Coast.

Hurricane Michael forced the Tigers to change up their practice schedule on Wednesday. They took the field at 8:30 a.m.

until nearly 11 a.m. to finish a full practice before Lake City began to feel the effects of Hurricane Michael in the afternoon.

"We made it a typical Wednesday, just started at 8:30," Columbia head coach Brian Allen said. "We got the same efficiency of a Wednesday practice at 3:30, we just bumped the time up to 8:30 so I'm pleased with the practice we got today."

The question today is whether the Tigers (5-1, 1-0) will be able to hold their walkthrough today for final preparations against the Stingrays (2-4, 0-2), who are scheduled for a 7 p.m. kickoff. Lake City was hit with tropical storm conditions on Wednesday afternoon and into the night as Hurricane Michael pounded the panhandle.

The storm was projected to be out of town by the morning.

"As of right now the plan is to come at 4 and do our normal walkthrough," Allen said.

"Hopefully the elements aren't as bad that we can't but that's the plan, to get here (today) at 4 and do our walkthrough and we'll be ready to go Friday if nothing else changes."

Columbia is coming off of a bye week that Allen says proved beneficial for his players. Allen has always used the off week as an opportunity to give him players some much-needed rest

Columbia sweeps Eastside in regular-season home finale

Lady Tigers wrap up regular season at Fort White on Fri.

Columbia's volleyball team took care of business in its home finale Tuesday night.

After sweeping the Lady Rams earlier this season, the Lady Tigers were victorious again in the teams' second matchup of the season. Columbia capitalized on a bevy of unearned points which helped the Lady Tigers capture a straight set (25-11, 25-10, 25-20) win over Eastside.

Columbia was led by senior captain Erica Faulkner who recorded a game-high eight kills and 10 digs. Asherah Collins tallied five aces and Danielle Thomson added 13 assists as the Columbia volleyball players celebrate after a point against Eastside on Tuesday.

Lady Tigers tallied their second-straight victory. Columbia (8-11) was rarely threatened by a reeling Eastside (1-16) team which was stifled thanks to strong defensive play by the Lady Tigers.

"They had fun and played as a team," Columbia coach Trudy Andrews said after the game. "I was worried that after the first set that they would go flat, but they did just fine. They kept playing their game so I'm proud of them."

Columbia aims for its third straight win when it travels to Fort White on Friday at 4:30 p.m. The Lady Tigers hope to extend their streak before hosting Lake Weir in the district tournament play-in game on Monday night.

Nationals acquire reliever Barraclough from Marlins

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Washington Nationals picked up righty reliever Kyle Barraclough from Miami in their first off-season move to rebuild the bullpen.
 The Nationals said Wednesday that they gave the Marlins international slot value in the deal.
 The hard-throwing Barraclough went 1-6 with 4.20 ERA and 10 saves in 17 chances, with 61 appearances this year. He allowed one hit in 36 at-bats in June, when he was chosen NL reliever of the month, but struggled with his command the rest of the season.
 Barraclough's ERA ballooned to 10.24 over his final 24 games and he lost the Marlins closer's job.
 He has a career ERA of 3.21 with 279 strikeouts and 134 walks in 218 2/3 innings over four seasons, all with Miami.
 The deal helps the Marlins in their pursuit of top international free-agent Victor Mesa, a Cuban outfielder who tried out for major league scouts at Marlins Park last week.

Jags rule out Fournette for game at Cowboys

JACKSONVILLE (AP) — The Jacksonville Jaguars have ruled out running back Leonard Fournette for their game at Dallas. It will be the fourth game Fournette has missed this season.
 Coach Doug Marrone says Fournette (hamstring), left tackle Josh Wells (groin) and cornerback D.J. Hayden (toe) will miss Sunday's road game.
 The Jaguars (3-2) signed veteran Jamaal Charles on Tuesday with the expectation that Fournette would be sidelined for an extended period. They also placed third-stringer Corey Grant (foot) on injured reserve.
 No one would be surprised to see Fournette sidelined until after Jacksonville's bye week, potentially returning Nov. 11 against Indianapolis.
 The second-year pro from LSU already has missed six of 21 regular-season games and left his only two starts this season because of hamstring tightness.
 He has 71 yards rushing on 20 carries this season.

PGA agrees to 11-year deal with CBS, ESPN

(AP) — The PGA Championship will remain with CBS Sports and pick up a powerful partner in ESPN for weekday rounds as part of an 11-year agreement in which the networks will combine to deliver 175 hours of coverage across broadcast, cable and digital platforms.
 The agreement gives CBS and ESPN, which broadcast the Masters, the first two majors of the year.

Columbia quarterback Jordan Smith runs up the field past Trinity Christian defensive tackle Latrell Wade on Sept. 29.

— both physically and mentally — before heading into the home stretch of the season.

For the Tigers, that doesn't include just the four remaining games on the schedule. It also encompasses a deep playoff run that they expect will stretch into December.

"I think they came back with the batteries recharged and ready to pursue this 9-week season that's left," Allen said. "We've played the first six, seventh was the bye and now we've got nine week to get to our best potential that we have out there and I'm excited about where we are at this point."

The Tigers' primary goal this week has been eliminating the mistakes that cost them in their 31-30 loss to Trinity Christian on Sept. 29. There were several uncharacteristic mistakes by the Tigers in the loss from their offense turning the ball over three times to their defense giving up 261 rushing yards to Miami commit Marcus Crowley.

The way Allen sees it, no one is beating Columbia if his team can eradicate those blunders that resulted in its only loss of the season.

"I feel with this team is if somebody is going to defeat us it's going to be ourselves," Allen said. "We want to be more crisp, more sound, (eliminating) turnovers is key and being gap sound defensively. We had an opportunity in that loss to not have given that ball game away but the things you focus on moving forward are the errors that you had in that contest. You come out and you try to make sure you clean those things up so that they don't show up again. That's been the key on both side of the ball as we try to pursue this 9-week season that's left."

INJURY REPORT

Columbia will be without defensive tackle Daylon Lumpkins again on Friday as he continues to recover from a ligament injury in his ankle. Lumpkins was supposed to go to the doctor on Wednesday but his appointment was rescheduled for next Monday.

Allen says he still expects to have Lumpkins back at some point this season.

"He's right on track to be back when we're going to need him most and that's the playoffs," Allen said. "We just don't want him to get to where his conditioning starts to turn backwards on him. We want him to be in football shape when we get there but he's right on pace where when we need him most he's going to be ready to go."

Outside linebacker Le'vontae Camiel is still in concussion protocol but is expected to play Friday, giving Columbia's defense a huge boost to its pass rush.

"That's going to be a tremendous benefit having him back this week and moving forward," Allen said. "We just want to keep these guys healthy as we continue moving forward."

POINTS STANDINGS

Columbia still has a large lead in the FHSAA's Region 1-7A points standings. The Tigers currently sit in first with 47.17 points, more than five points ahead of second-place Buchholz (41.67).

Robert E. Lee (41.17), Oakleaf (40.33), Lincoln (39.17), Edgewater (39.0) and Fletcher (38.0) round out the top seven. Bartram Trail and First Coast are currently tied for the last playoff spot with 37.33 points.

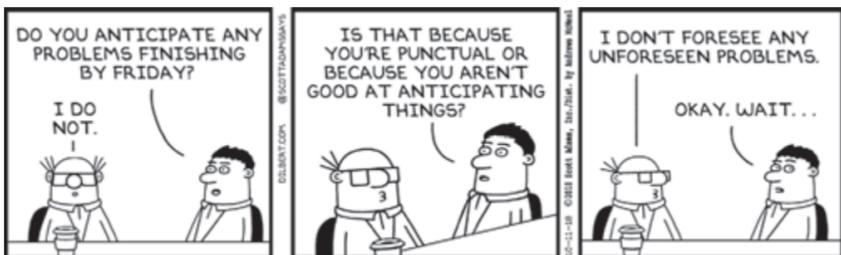

POLLING PLACE

Columbia held steady at No. 2 in Class 7A in the Associated Press state football poll released Tuesday evening. St. Thomas Aquinas (5-1) still sits at No. 1 while undefeated Lakeland (7-0) received a first-place vote and is just seven points back of Columbia at No. 3.

Tampa Bay Tech (6-0), Dwyer (6-1), Plant (5-1), Venice (5-1), Edgewater (6-0), Lincoln (4-2) and Robert E. Lee (6-1) rounded out the top 10.

DEAR ABBY

'Perfect' man vanishes when alcohol loosens his tongue

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating the most amazing man for the past 11 months. As we approach the one-year anniversary of the day we met, this "perfect" man is showing some not-so-perfect traits. I was unlucky in love for many years until he swept me off my feet. We have both become extremely close with each other's respective friends and family.

He's everything I have been searching for in a life partner and husband. But when he drinks, he confides his deep fears of dating me and enumerates each and every one of my relationship insecurities - nagging, anxiety, loneliness, etc. The next day he acts like nothing happened! He swears up and down that it was the alcohol talking and he doesn't mean any of the harsh words he spoke the night before.

Should I believe him? Please don't let me be the naive girl traveling down a dark rabbit hole.

-- SELF-CONSCIOUS GIRLFRIEND

DEAR GIRLFRIEND: Your "amazing" man appears to be a loose-lipped lush. Not knowing him, I can't guess the degree to which he blacks out when he's been drinking. Some alcoholics don't remember what happened the night before. Others simply don't WANT to remember, so they claim amnesia.

Regardless of how you feel about him, for your own well-being, draw the line and tell him he needs to stop drinking. If he's as alcohol-dependent as I suspect he is, he will give you an argument or an outright refusal. And that's your cue to tell him if he wants a future with you, he will have to make a choice.

DEAR ABBY: My in-laws are angry that I have declined to host them over the holidays this year. My husband is never helpful. When company comes, he sits on his mobile phone while I do everything. I told his parents I can't have them over because all the responsibility falls on me. My "no" should suffice, but my mother-in-law hopes to argue me into hosting.

We don't have children because I knew I would end up raising them alone. I don't want the in-laws here "hinting" that they need us to help them when my husband won't lift a finger.

I recently became disabled, and my in-laws keep pressuring me to share my diagnosis with them. They think I should cheerfully do all the work of hosting them as a way to fight my disability!

They are extremely nosy. I am now blocking her calls. I know they will spend their time here trying to get a look at my medications and any financial information left out. What else can I do? -- UNMERRY IN LOUISIANA

DEAR UNMERRY: You should all try to achieve a workable compromise, if that's possible. Ask your MIL if she's prepared to take some of the responsibility off your shoulders if she and her husband visit. Suggest they stay in a hotel or motel rather than burden you. And your husband (their son) should back you up on this.

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

HOROSCOPES | THE LAST WORD BY EUGENIA LAST

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Volunteer your assistance and get involved in activities that require your skills. What you do to help others will have an influence on how you are treated and what opportunities come your way. A favor you offer now will be repaid. ★★★

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Look forward, not backward. In order to bring about positive changes, it's best to let go of regrets. A clean slate moving forward will expand your vision, encouraging you to live in the moment and embrace the future. ★★★

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Pack as much into your day as possible. What you accomplish will make a difference, and it will ward off those who are looking for fault or reasons to complain. Anger and aggressive behavior are a waste of your time. ★★★

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You've got more going for you than you realize. Don't be afraid to offer your thoughts and to work alongside people who are unique. Someone from your past will be a reminder of old dreams that you can turn into new possibilities. ★★★★★

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Give more consideration to what others may be experiencing before you say something you may regret. Problems at home or at work will result in unexpected changes. How things unfold will depend on your attitude and your actions. ★★

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take some "me" time. Visit someone you find interesting or sign up for a course that will broaden your scope regarding what you want to achieve. Networking functions will lead to ideas, partnerships and new beginnings. Romance is highlighted. ★★★★★

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Don't put off what you can do today. You'll feel better once you have laid your to-do list to rest, and you'll ward off complaints from people who like to point out your shortcomings.

Hard work deserves a reward. ★★★

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Emotions will be difficult to control. Consider what others say and do before you retaliate. You'll feel better and accomplish more if you focus on a creative project or something or someone you find unusual or intriguing. ★★★

SAGITARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Concentrate on work and do whatever you have to do to earn your keep. Refuse to let someone who is a poor influence interrupt you or convince you to get involved in something that could tarnish your reputation. Avoid meddlers. ★★★

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Live up to your word. How you conduct your day-to-day affairs will determine how favorably you are received by others. An unexpected or unusual opportunity will change the way you live. Be open to new ideas. ★★★★★

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Don't be gullible when dealing with friends, peers or relatives. Someone will take advantage of you or put you in an awkward position if you don't stand up for your rights and maintain your integrity. Be a leader, not a follower. ★★

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You'll have plenty of opportunities today. Look at the possibilities and consider how they can lead to personal gains. A gift, investment, unexpected find or debt repaid will improve your mood and encourage personal or physical improvements. ★★★★★
