

BoCC Special Meeting Monday Oct. 24 at 9 a.m. about Grant Monies

Levy County Commissioners scheduled a special meeting for 9 a.m. Monday to consider applying for a $1.6 million federal grant that would allow the board to remodel the former warehouse facility of Central Florida Electric Cooperative in Chiefland for a Levy County Transit facility.

But there is one catch. The county commission would have to purchase the $1.2 million warehouse with county funding. The grant can be used only for remodeling and renovation. That caveat may throw cold water on the idea of applying for the grant.

Commissioners grumbled about not having that kind of money to spend on buying such a facility. Commissioner Danny Stevens also noted that the county has property available in Bronson at the county road department to build such a facility if money ever becomes available.

Stevens was also miffed that commissioners were being pressed to consider applying for the grant on short notice when they had never discussed the matter previously.

Port Citrus Presentation to BoCC Offers Jobs and Industry to Levy and Citrus Counties

By Terry Witt
Contributing Writer

Most people in Levy County probably have never heard of Port Citrus. The port is a mile south of Yankeetown on the Cross Florida Barge Canal, and while it's not a booming commercial entity yet, the Citrus County Commission has high hopes that one day soon it will become a job magnet and a popular shipping center. The hope is that Levy County will also benefit.

Citrus County Commission Chairman Dennis Damato and County Administrator Brad Thorpe appeared before the Levy County Commission Tuesday to showcase the already active port on the Cross Florida Barge Canal. They asked Levy County commissioners to support the port. They weren't disappointed.

"Conceptually it sounds great," said Commissioner Ryan Bell, although he would like more information.

Levy County Commission Chairman Danny Stevens said the communities of Williston, Montbrook, Morriston, Raleigh and Newberry once shipped vegetables by rail and he can envision the port as a spinoff facility that could be used for the same purpose, benefiting all those communities.

"This could be one of the best opportunities in a while," Stevens said.

Port Citrus has existed on the Cross Florida Barge Canal since 1984. An act of the Florida Legislature last year named Port Citrus as the 15th port in the state, making it eligible for grants and creating the potential for development.

Thorpe said limestone mining companies currently ship limestone into the Gulf of Mexico using Port Citrus, but Citrus County believes the

Commission Decides to Continue Hearing Non-Agenda Items

By Terry Witt
Contributing Writer

A longtime observer of Levy County Commission meetings asked the board Tuesday to stop the practice of discussing business items that are not placed on the agenda in advance, but the board said it needed flexibility to consider unexpected issues and declined to act.

Chiefland area resident Renate Cannon, who has observed the board for many years and is not shy about asking questions, said she could understand the board considering items for discussion that were true emergencies, but nothing else.

Placing items on the agenda is fairer to the public and board members because it allows both to review matters before the meeting.

"In my opinion it's the right thing to do," Cannon said.

Current policy allows the board to consider non-agenda items only if a majority of the board votes to hear the issue.

Commission Chairman Danny Stevens said he understood Cannon's suggestion, but he did not think it would be fair to department heads or members of the public if non-agenda

Levy County Ranks High in Peanut Production This Year

A combine harvests peanuts on the Mark Graham field along Levynville Road east of Chiefland.

By Terry Witt
Contributing Writer

Levy County produced 20,711 acres of peanuts this year, giving it a ranking of 2nd in Florida and 9th in the nation, according to the Farm Service Agency in Bronson.

"We grow a lot of peanuts here. It's big business," said Levy County FSA Executive Director Steve Maddox.

Higher than normal market prices for peanuts and reduced production in Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Arkansas where many farmers there switched to growing cotton instead of peanuts encouraged local growers to invest more acres to peanuts.

The drought in Texas also took its toll on peanut production in that state. Many fields, even the irrigated acreage, produced nothing, according to Maddox. The lack of Texas peanuts influenced the market because fewer acres were being grown in the Southeast United States.

Many local farmers signed contracts in advance of the planting to grow peanuts for $600 a ton. Two or three years ago they were getting $350 a ton.

Maddox said most producers will sell half of their peanuts by contract but will "play the market" with the remaining half of what they produce. Some farmers are making quite a bit more money from non-contract peanuts.

Yields in some cases were down in Levy County because of early heat this summer. When temperatures in June reached the high 90s peanut plants in some fields had difficulty inserting their production stems into the hard soil. Peanuts grow on stems the plant inserts into the soil. Peanuts grow well in sandy soil.

Not everyone had bad luck with yields.

"I heard of one producer the other day that got 6,200 pounds to the acre; that's 3 tons to the acre," Maddox said. "At these prices, that will give them money back."

Irrigated fields typically produce 3,500 to 4,000 pounds of peanuts. Maddox calculates the out-of-pocket costs to produce an acre of irrigated peanuts is about $700. Yields and prices have to be good to produce a profit.

Farmers added acreage all over the county. Williston, which is traditionally the peanut capital of Levy County, grew more acres this year. The sand hills south of Williston with silicone sand are particularly well suited to peanut production. But Chiefland producers also grew more acres.

Some farmers were using all the acreage they could find to plant peanuts. Maddox said the smallest peanut field he measured was 2.1 acres.

Commissioners Vote to Follow That Dream for County Road 40

By Terry Witt
Contributing Writer

In 1961 Elvis Presley starred in his famous "Follow That Dream" movie, filmed mostly in Yankeetown, a sleepy little coastal town on the Withlacoochee River in southern Levy County.

The movie's 50th anniversary arrived this year, and for the occasion, the mayor of Yankeetown, Dawn Clary, asked Levy County commissioners Tuesday to extend the Follow That Dream Highway designation for County Road 40 all the way to the Gulf of Mexico.

Commissioners voted to honor her request. County Road 40 is now the Follow That Dream Highway from Inglis and through Yankeetown to the Gulf of Mexico.

A number of years ago former Inglis Mayor Carolyn Risher convinced Levy County commissioners to name the portion of the road running through Inglis after the movie. Yankeetown was opposed to having the highway named for the movie. Only the Inglis portion of the road was named.

But times have changed and Yankeetown has a new city council that favors the idea of renaming the road, according to Clary.

Commissioner Marsha Drew, who lives in Yankeetown, said she likes the idea of renaming the highway.

"I personally think that's a great honor," Drew said. "I will live off Follow That Dream Highway. You can't get better than that."

In other business, commissioners scheduled a special meeting for 9 a.m. Monday to consider applying for a $1.6 million federal grant that would allow the board to remodel the former warehouse facility of Central Florida Electric Cooperative in Chiefland for a Levy County Transit facility.

But there is one catch. The county commission would have to purchase the $1.2 million warehouse with county funding. The grant can be used only for remodeling and renovation. That caveat may throw cold water on the idea of applying for the grant.

The ACLU vs. Religious Liberty

By Matt Barber, Vice President of Liberty Counsel Action

One of the most recent abuses of the constitution involves an ACLU assault against a group of Christians in Santa Rosa County, Fla.

An ACLU-crafted Consent Decree has been used as a weapon to threaten school district employees with fines and jail time for merely praying over a meal, and for exercising -- even while away from school -- their sincerely held Christian faith. You read that right. The ACLU is literally seeking to criminalize Christianity.

In August of 2009, Liberty Counsel successfully defended staff member Michelle Winkler from contempt charges brought by the ACLU after her husband, who is not even employed by the district, offered a meal prayer at a privately sponsored event in a neighboring county.

Liberty Counsel also successfully defended Pace High School Principal Frank Lay and Athletic Director Robert Freeman against criminal contempt charges, after the ACLU sought to have the men thrown in jail for blessing a lunch meal served to about 20 adult booster club members.

Under the Consent Decree teachers are considered to be acting in their "official capacity" anytime a student is present, even at private functions off campus.

Liberty Counsel describes this unconstitutional decree:

Teachers cannot pray, bow their heads, or fold their hands to show agreement with anyone who does pray. Teachers and staff cannot 'Reply' to an email sent by a parent if the parent's email refers to God or Scripture. Teachers either

WPD Puts an End to Ongoing Check Cashing Scheme

Williston Police arrested two suspects today in a check cashing scheme that has been going on for two years.
 Asia Frazier and Michael Aurilio were arrested on several counts of Forgery, Uttering a Forged Instrument and Theft. Frazier also faces charges of Scheme to Defraud and Criminal Misuse of Personal Identification.
 Investigator James Bond added the other two charges to Frazier as she was allegedly intercepting restitution checks meant for another person and cashing, or having them cashied by others. The restitution checks came from Department of Corrections to be paid to a victim who is living out of state.

 Aurilio is the man arrested last week for trying to steal the "Give Kids the World" donation jar from the Kangaroo Store on East Noble Avenue. Aurilio was stopped by an off duty Marion County Deputy and then arrested by Williston Police after Aurilio had a short but fruitless struggle with the deputy.

facility has a much greater potential. The Port Authority is about to request documents from firms that could perform a feasibility study that would show what the port would look like when it is developed and how it could be used.
 Damato, who represents northwest Citrus County, which is south of the Levy County cities of Yankeetown and Inglis, said he believes the area contains many under-used public works type facilities that could complement the port, including the railroad used by Progress Energy, U.S. Highway 19, and the two airports in Citrus County, one in Crystal River and the other in Inverness. The Inverness Airport has a 5,000-foot runway. Damato said there are plans to expand the Crystal River Airport from 4,650-feet to 5,000 feet.
 Damato added that Progress Energy brings a train load of coal to the Crystal River Energy Complex every 18 hours, but the rail cars leave the site empty. He believes those empty rail cars could be used for shipping. Damato said

Levy County is rich in timber. Those timber products could be shipped out of the port.
 "A lot of existing assets are available in both counties," Damato said.
 Thorpe and Damato believe the timing is right for attempting to expand the port facility. Gov. Rick Scott is promoting his jobs program and the federal government is also interested in creating more jobs. The two men said central water and sewer is readily available to the port. Central water would come from the Charles A. Blackwell field in Citrus County. Central sewer would have to be developed on site.
 Damato sees the potential for partnerships with Inglis, Yankeetown and south Levy County. He asked the commission to consider rejoining the Withlacoochee Regional Water Supply Authority. He said the authority has an approved 30-year water use plan that affects south Levy County.
 "Conservation strategies and grants, regional water supply issues, alternative water supply

Dixie County PD Arrests Chiefland Woman with Multiple Drugs

A 55-year-old Chiefland woman was arrested during a traffic stop in Old Town on Thursday night, Oct. 13, 2011, when she was stopped for suspicion of driving under the influence while traveling in the area of SE 201 Avenue and SE 908 Street. The subsequent investigation revealed the driver, Pamela Sue Smith of Chiefland, to be in possession of multiple controlled substances. Smith was arrested and booked into the Dixie County Jail for Possession of Controlled Substances: Methadone, Hydrocodone, Xanax and Hydromorphone.

Sheriff's Office Employee Recognized for $1 Million Upgrades through Grants

The Levy County Sheriff's office would like to take this opportunity to recognize one of its own in a milestone achievement of financial relief to the citizens of Levy County in these tough economic times. The E911 is funded with a $.50 per month fee collected on telephone lines. With the advent of cell phones many people have chosen to drop their landline phones thereby reducing revenue to support E911.
 However, due to Florida's Rural Grant Program for E911 counties with a population under 75,000, Levy County can receive funding for projects unattainable with only the monthly revenues.
 Today we honor Christine Sheppard, the Database Manager of the Levy County E911 department. Due to Christine's hard work the citizens of Levy County now have a modern, cutting edge, state of the art 911 call center and VoIP (Voice over the internet protocol) delivery system that saves our office thousands of dollars monthly over the previous system.

 Grants have also provided for mapping the entire county with road centerlines and GPS points for addresses and cell tower sites. All of these technological upgrades were done without cost to the taxpayers of Levy County with the over $1 million dollars of grant funding awarded to our office through Christine's hard work and dedication over the last few years. Christine's actions reflect great credit on herself, the Sheriff's Office and the Public Safety Community as a whole.

FDLE Tips to Stay Safe in Cyber Sphere

The Florida Department of Law Enforcement (FDLE) is recognizing October as National Cyber Security Month. Floridians are encouraged to educate themselves about Internet safety and review tips for keeping children safe online.

"Simple steps, such as having a strong password and keeping it private, can protect us from a number of risks like identity theft and cyber bullying," said Special Agent Supervisor Mike Phillips of FDLE's Computer Crime Center.
 Parents are encouraged to discuss the dangers of the Internet with their children and develop guidelines for using it safely. Some helpful tips include:

- If it looks too good to be true, it probably isn't true.
- Cyber crooks are everywhere. Scams occur in nearly every auction, dating, and classified site on the Internet. Social networks are especially targeted. Be vigilant and do some research before you buy or sell online. And keep in mind that wiring money to online acquaintances is very risky.
- Avoid responding to emails from strangers, or strange emails from people you think you know.
- Cyber crooks often try to trick you into sending them money or your personal information by pretending to be someone else. These attempts used to be crude, but they have become very sophisticated and difficult to identify.
- Use strong passwords - Don't make your password easy to guess, easy to find, or easy to lose. The only way your computer knows who you are is by your password. Make sure your confidential information is protected by a password that is long and complex.

 • Use antivirus and keep it up-to-date - Antivirus software can protect you from a number of different cyber attacks. But you have to keep it updated. Selecting "automatic updates" is a good way to insure that all the patches get installed.
 • Know what your kids do online - Your kids are still learning what is safe and they need your guidance.
 Find ways to talk about the Internet with your kids and use it with them whenever you can.
 FDLE recommends Floridians visit www.secureflorida.org or www.missingkids.com to learn how to minimize the potential risks of instant messaging, social networking, online gaming, and more. Citizens may also go to www.flsexoffender.net to search an e-mail or instant message address to determine if it may belong to a registered sexual predator or offender. Florida's Sexual Offender/Predator Registry is maintained by FDLE and currently houses data on more than 57,000 registered sex offenders and predators. Florida law requires all registered sexual offenders and predators to register their e-mail and instant message addresses prior to using them. Additional tips for keeping children safe online may be found at <http://www.netsmartz.org>.
 FDLE is an active member of the three Internet Crimes Against Children Task Forces in Florida. There are 63 federally-funded task forces nationwide created solely to investigate Internet crimes against children that include the online sexual exploitation of children and child pornography.

Ex-Chewing Tobacco User and Cancer Survivor Gives Testimony Nov. 15

My name is Rick Bender, and some call me the man without a face. Let me tell you a little about myself. I was born in San Diego, Ca. in April of 1962. I now live in Kentucky. At the age of 12 I started using Spit Tobacco, commonly known as Chewing Tobacco. There were several things that influenced me in its use, probably the biggest was the game of baseball. At the age of 26, I was diagnosed with cancer because of my use of Spit Tobacco. In April of 1989, I underwent my first of four major surgeries to remove the cancer. I lost 1/3 of my tongue, 1/2 of my jaw, 25 percent use of my right arm, as well as almost my life. I am still fighting the effects of my tobacco use today.

Since my last operation in June of 1990, I have devoted my life to educating others about this tobacco product that is widely thought of as a safe alternative to smoking. I have worked with the Office of the Surgeon general of the United States, Major League Baseball and many other organizations across this great country of ours. My efforts have included testifying at a Congressional Sub-Committee hearing on the subject as well as my own prevention/cessation lectures to people of all ages (mainly school age young people) across America.

This has become my life's work. You see I shouldn't be here. My doctor after seeing how big the cancer was did not expect me to see my 30th birthday. But I am still here, and have a second chance at life. The way I look at it is, we are all here for a reason, and maybe mine is to educate people about the dangers of Tobacco. If I can get just one individual each day to quit using, or never start using Tobacco, maybe it will save their life and make the second chance I have received worthwhile.

Mr. Bender will be visiting two schools in Levy County to give his story and will be at the Capital City Bank in Chiefland on Nov. 15 from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. at the Levy Coalition Against Tobacco event presented by the Levy County Health Department. For more information visit: www.tobaccofreeflorida.com

BES Family Learning Nights Currently a Happening Thing

Bronson Elementary is happy to announce that our Family Learning Nights have started again! In September many parents had the opportunity to see what the 2nd graders are working on in their classrooms. Students recited poems they've been working on, as well as reciting poems that they wrote themselves. After hearing the poetry presentation, parents were able to hear the information from our Annual Title 1 Back to School Open House meeting that was held in August. Mrs. Wiggins had a presentation on the inquiry-based learning method that is taking place in our classes at Bronson Elementary School.

This year at Bronson Elementary we have revised our Accelerated Reader program with hope of motivating students and parents to read together. Each grade level has a required amount of points that they must earn in order to meet their goal every nine weeks. Not only do these points count towards their reading grade, but they also help the students work towards recognition at our end-of-year awards ceremony. In order to receive an AR trophy or their name on The Wall of Fame, students must meet the points requirement set slightly higher than our classroom points goal. It is exciting to see how many parents are bringing their students to Family Learning Night to read with them, as well as coming afterschool to read and take AR tests with their students. The library is available afterschool every day, with the exception of when we have meetings being held after school. If the library is closed, Ms. Carlisle's classroom is located in the corner of the library. Her room is set up with computers and a cart of books from the library, so the option of reading and taking comprehension tests on AR with your student is still an option.

We are looking forward to increasing our students' interest in reading! If your child is interested in reading a book that is not an AR book, each reading teacher has book report/comprehension sheets available for your student to still earn AR points towards their goal in the classroom. Please check with your child's teacher for the forms they have available! We hope to see you at our next Family Learning Night, TONIGHT, October 20, 2011 from 6 to 8 p.m. In addition to the projects and Accelerated Reader testing, information will be presented on Next Generation Sunshine State Standards, information about programs, curriculum, academic assessments used to measure progress, as well as expected proficiency that students are expected to meet. We hope to see you at Family Learning Night!

Milton Angler Lands Record Flathead

Milton resident Eric Auston Jr. now holds the distinction of having landed the largest flathead catfish ever caught with a rod and reel in Florida waters.

Auston, who is 33, was fishing with his good friend Brandy Wallace Oct. 9 at 2:30 a.m. in the Yellow River when he caught a flathead catfish weighing 55.05 pounds. He used a rod and reel with 25-pound-test line and a small bluegill as bait.

His fish was substantially larger than the existing Florida record flathead - a fish that weighed 49.39 pounds, caught in the Apalachicola River in 2004. Auston said he fishes for flatheads only a few times each year. His biggest flathead prior to last weekend weighed 42 pounds, but that fish was caught on a bush hook.

The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC) maintains records for most species of freshwater fish. The FWC will present Auston with a certificate of his record catch for display.

State record fish must be legally caught in Florida, identified to species by a fishery biologist, and weighed on a certified scale. Auston said he was especially grateful to the FWC for its efforts to get the fish certified.

Anglers can also participate in the Big Catch angler recognition program. Anyone who catches a fish above the minimum qualifying weight for that species can submit a Big Catch application. Information about the State Record and Big Catch programs is available at MyFWC.com/Fishing.

Flathead catfish are not native to the eastern United States. In the 1970s, they made their way to one southeastern state after another. First identified in the Apalachicola River in 1982, they are now found in every Panhandle river from the Ochlockonee River west to the Florida-Alabama line. They are significant predators and should be harvested when caught. There are no bag or size limits on flatheads in Florida, and they are good for eating.

In Midwestern waters, flatheads are native. The world record is a 123-pound monster caught in Kansas in 1998, according to the International Game Fish Association. Fisheries biologists expect flatheads may eventually grow close to that size in Florida waters.

have to delete such references from the original email or reply by initiating a new email. Teachers and staff are also required to stop students from praying in their own private club meetings.

Although the case continues, the ACLU suffered a tremendous setback while freedom took a significant step forward. Federal District Court Judge M. Casey Rodgers granted in part a Preliminary Injunction in favor of Liberty Counsel's twenty-four Christian clients.

Judge Rodgers concluded that even though "a preliminary injunction is an extraordinary and drastic remedy," one aspect of the Consent Decree -- its attempt to prohibit school employees from fully participating in private religious events -- is so flawed that it must be immediately halted.

The Court thus enjoined the School Board "from enforcing any school policy that restrains in any way an employee's participation in, or speech or conduct during, a private religious service, including baccalaureate" pending a trial on the merits.

Frank Lay, mentioned above, and Liberty Counsel Director Allan Erickson, Pastor Mike Brown of First Baptist Church in Cross City, Mr. Joe Anderson, and Harry Mihet, lead counsel of Liberty Counsel will all be apart of a Rally at the County Courthouse in Cross City on November 27 at 4 p.m. to continue to inform freedom-loving Americans why this fight is so important. Come and Stand Up for America.

items were banned except those the board deemed an emergency.

"Their perception of what is an emergency might be different than ours," Stevens said.

Stevens said the previous policy allowed non-agenda items to be heard only with a unanimous vote of the board.

Commissioner Marsha Drew agreed, noting people have different ideas of what constitutes an emergency.

"We have the option of agreeing or not agreeing to hear non-agenda items," she said.

The commission declined to act on Cannon's suggestion.

All Hands on Deck to Preserve the JAGM Program

By Rebecca Grant

When Washington, DC spins into a frenzy over defense cuts, even good programs can be ditched in a panic. Sadly, at times like this joint programs and supposed "extras" like new missiles are particularly vulnerable.

That's the case with the Joint Air-to-Ground Missile program, known as JAGM. JAGM does not have a zippy name or a big marketing campaign behind it. Basically, it's a replacement for three famous but aging missile types: the Hellfire, the Air-Launched TOW and the Maverick. Despite incremental improvements over the years, there's no getting around the fact that all three of those missiles are 1960s-era designs at the end of their service lives.

Enter JAGM, a nearly $1 billion dollar initiative to develop a single missile that all branches of the military can share. Because it's a joint program it has to make it through triple the budget reviews to survive. Fear is spreading that the Navy or Army will pull out, try to stick the other service with the whole bill, and end up collapsing the JAGM program like a house of cards.

That would be a mistake, because JAGM comes with important new capabilities that the warfighter has long been asking for. And it does so at lesser cost to the taxpayer than the legacy missiles it replaces.

JAGM beats Hellfire on the battlefield because it can be used night or day, in all types of weather. Add in smoke or bad weather and government studies show that four JAGMs can neutralize as many targets as seven Hellfires under those conditions.

Here's the good part for the men and women carrying out these missions. The JAGM's maximum range is greater than Hellfire's. At 28 kilometers for fighters and 16 kilometers for helicopters, JAGM can launch from safely outside point area defenses. And the JAGM is lethal against a static or moving target, from advanced armor to small boats and troops in the open.

Currently, a Raytheon-Boeing team and Lockheed Martin are developing competing missiles for the JAGM program. This competitive prototyping is a new way of acquiring weapons has yielded solid results. To date, the Raytheon-Boeing missile has gone 3-for-3 in government flight tests, and Lockheed has also had a successful test. Tests like these dramatically lower program risk and keep both contractors fighting hard to deliver best performance and best price.

JAGM in the Army, Navy and Marine Corps inventory saves money by cutting back on maintenance, replacement and inventory costs. Because JAGMs are more effective than Hellfires the taxpayer over time will pay for fewer of them to be produced.

So what's the problem? It's the risk of a panic default to just upgrading Hellfire. New motors and seekers for that venerable missile still won't deliver the better performance of JAGM. Worse, scrapping JAGM and investing in upgrades wouldn't save money in the long-term. In the end, we'd still be using multiple Hellfires to do the job of a single JAGM.

The U.S. Military has already invested $912 million developing the JAGM -- including $372 million spent by the Army and Navy before the Joint Common Missile program was initially canceled in 2005 for going over budget. But the program was soon resurrected. Why? Because the need for the missile did not go away. What makes us think that the outcome this time will be any different? For nearly $1 billion, the military deserves to end up with a fielded product.

And if this program is killed, what next? Do we want to send the message that important R&D programs can be killed anytime and never mind the sunk cost? There is a chilling effect when we abandon a program like this -- particularly the prototyping program that should serve as an example of how to run future acquisitions. It needs to survive in order to spawn others like it.

Guess what. This actually is rocket science. We're talking advanced seekers, exploiting several chunks of the electromagnetic spectrum in the guidance, detection and warhead targeting. It takes time and persistence and dollars. But that's all worth it when JAGM allows a helicopter crew to shoot from safer range or the Reaper operators to get the target they've been watching for hours.

Protecting the JAGM program is important because we can't afford to lose it. The short-term savings gained from dropping the program now wouldn't begin to cover the added expense of starting it up again later or fielding multiple alternatives. If the goal is saving money, the plan should be to keep this program funded.

Parent Rights and Children's Health: Inseparable

The American College of Pediatricians (The College) is alarmed by California's recent enactment of a law that disrespects the parent-child relationship and under cuts parental authority in the management of healthcare for the child.

On October 9, 2011 California's Governor Brown enacted a law that allows children as young as twelve to receive vaccinations and other medications to prevent STIs, including the Human Papilloma Virus (HPV) vaccination, without parental knowledge or consent. While the College is committed to the prevention of sexually transmitted infections (STIs), and to the immunization of children, this law wrongly places the responsibility for important healthcare decision-making on a generally immature adolescent and excludes those who know the child best -- the parents.

HPV is the most common sexually transmitted infection in the United States and also the cause of many cancers. Vaccines against HPV were introduced in 2006 for females and in 2009 for males. Thus far the vaccines have been found to be safe and effective at preventing infection by some strains of HPV. It will be several years, however, before science can establish whether or not there are long-term side effects and if the vaccines actually prevent cancer in-situ or cancers themselves better than current screening and treatment methods. The adolescent brain is not developed or mature enough until the mid-twenties to process these uncertainties and to think through the potential consequences.

Parents rightly bear the primary responsibility for their children's health. Consequently, government should enact laws to assist parents in making the best decisions for their children, especially regarding matters of sexual health. Bypassing parental involvement eliminates one of the most powerful deterrents to sexual activity - communication of parental expectations. Firm statements from parents that sex should be reserved for marriage have been found to be very effective in delaying sexual debut thus protecting against STIs.

For these reasons the College favors offering HPV vaccination as an option to parents but does not support mandating vaccination or bypassing parental consent. The College recommends age-appropriate sexuality and relationship education that partners with parents to promote the knowledge and skills necessary to delay sexual involvement, with the goal of preparing for sex exclusively within the context of marriage as the optimal response to this country's present STI epidemic.

The mission of the College is to enable all children to reach their optimal physical and emotional health and well-being. ## Obama's Teachable Truthiness Moment

Michelle Malkin
Creators Syndicate

President Obama blames Republicans for the collapse of his latest government jobs bill. But in the end, he has only his tall tale-telling tongue to blame.

After hyping the TARP, Obamacare, Stimulus I and EduJobs spending behemoths as economic saviors, Obama just couldn't help overselling his half-trillion-dollar American Jobs Act. The teachable moment of "truthiness" for this taxpayer-subsidized scam came last week when Obama made an unwitting Boston teacher the botched poster child for his campaign.

"Hundreds of thousands of teachers and firefighters and police officers have been laid off because of state budget cuts. This jobs bill has funding to put a lot of those men and women back to work. It has funding to prevent a lot more from losing their job," the Pinocchio of Pennsylvania Avenue told reporters during his East Room press conference in Washington, D.C., last Thursday.

For example, Obama spelled out: "I had a chance to meet a young man named Robert Baroz. He's got two decades of teaching experience. He's got a master's degree. He's got an outstanding track record of helping his students make huge gains in reading and writing. In the last few years, he's received three pink slips because of budget cuts."

Going in for the heartstring-tugging kill, Obama lamented: "Why wouldn't we want to pass a bill that puts somebody like Robert back in the classroom teaching our kids?"

Well, for one thing, Obama never "met" Baroz. They were in the same place at one point for a jobs bill rally at the Rose Garden in September. But the two never shook hands, never took photos, never spoke and never communicated with each other in any way that might be even remotely construed as "meeting."

Which would help explain why Obama got the most basic fact about his sob story wrong: Baroz doesn't need Obama's jobs bill to "put him back in the classroom teaching our kids" -- because he already has a job. As the Boston Herald reported, Baroz "works as a literacy and data coach at the Curley K-8 School in Jamaica Plain, analyzing MCAS data and applying it to teachers' everyday lessons."

Let me spell that out again for the reading comprehension-challenged: Baroz doesn't need Obama to redistribute other people's money to get him a job. He already has one.

White House press secretary and former Time magazine journalist Jay Carney attempted to gloss over Obama's crystal-clear whopper about having met Baroz and his transparent insinuation that the teacher would benefit from passage of the bill:

"The president -- as you know, he was in a group of people that were -- I think he was this close to the president as you are to me. And the president knows his story. ... I mean, it's just indisputable -- as we found out again this morning -- that all around the country, teachers are being laid off. The president has a plan to solve, OK, or to address that problem. ... So I think the principle is just indisputable, as Mr. Baroz himself makes clear."

How would Carney have reported on such narrative-stretching spin when he was covering the Bush administration for Time magazine?

Obama's tall teacher tale is of a piece with the rest of his economic stimulus fables -- from the Ohio bridge he stood in front of that wouldn't see any jobs-act money until 2015, if ever, to the thousands of promised construction jobs that would only go to a sliver of union-exclusive projects, to the pie-in-the-sky green jobs funding for weatherization projects that have mostly benefited Obama cronies.

All the little lies serve the larger Obama fraud of endless Keynesian intervention as a "cure." It's a deception even Senate Democrats refused to whitewash: "If spending money would solve our problems and crisis in America, we wouldn't have a problem right now because we sure did our share of spending money in the last few years," West Virginia Senate Democrat Joe Manchin said last month in casting doubt on the doomed Obama jobs bill. "It's just common sense to me. If some of the recommendations that are out there hadn't worked in the past, why would we do them over again?"

For his part, as an Obama true believer, the teacher Robert Baroz is excusing his hero's fabrications because they serve a supposedly higher truth: "To me, the question he posed to the people was a rhetorical question. The emphasis was on 'like Robert.' It's people who are like me, highly qualified, and are not working. That's the spirit of it."

Egad. If Baroz uses the same logic in his "literacy and data" coaching methods in the Boston schools, perhaps students would be better off without him.

Machine-Gunning the Moon

Dangerous Beach Liaisons of The 1930s

J.M. "Jimmy" Green was a dapper fellow standing out on the steps of the sprawling house on the beach at 901 South Atlantic Avenue in Daytona. Green was a realtor greeting a handsome young couple from the Midwest, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kirtley. The Kirtleys were well-dressed, if a little flashy, themselves. They drove a brand new 1933 Hudson Essex Terraplane, promoted for speed and excitement by a persistent radio ad of the day that boomed: "On the sea that's aquaplaning, in the air that's aeroplaning, but on the land, in the traffic, on the hills, hot diggity dog, THAT'S TERRAPLANING!"

Green was impressed with the Terraplane parked between palm trees on the drive. He thought the Kirtley's nice enough, though they were certainly tightlipped about their background. Of course Green had considerable experience with "snowbirds" of means. His realty business was associated with a Chicago agency often accommodating wealthy clients, some effervescent about their heritage and others mum.

Either way, the moneyed sort down for the winter was Jimmy Green's forte. Likely these were the typical heirs of farm equipment or medical fortunes. Could be they were associated with Wrigley Field and the Cubs somehow, though the name Frank Kirtley didn't ring a bell as a player or coach. Anyway, they didn't say. Frank, though, certainly seemed a man who knew exactly what he wanted. His wife, a dark-eyed beauty, virtually floated through the three-story, seventeen-room oceanfront manse with euphoric glee. She loved the place. Frank was more restrained, but when the three of them stood out on a breezy balcony with the ocean in full view, he was clearly impressed. The tide was in and the breakers washed up and slid back across the vast ribbon of sugary sand as far as the couple could see.

"We'll take it," Kirtley said to Green.

Jimmy Green was pleased, but he hadn't yet mentioned the monthly rate. "Delighted!" he said above the ocean's roar. Then in a more confidential tone, "And I must say, 209 is a steal at $100 monthly."

"Yeah, swell. A steal, I like that," Frank Kirtley said matter-of-factly as he peeled three crisp hundred dollar bills from a roll he kept plunged in his trousers' pocket. Mrs. Kirtley was more elated yet when her husband handed over the money and announced they might stay three months or so. Yes, he added, and that there'd be "a few friends" coming down.

That detail reminded Jimmy Green of another one necessary to disclose before pocketing the advance. There was an apartment out over the garage separate from the house. It was occupied by Edwin Utter and his wife, an older couple who served as caretakers for the property. The Kirtley's were fine with that, but said they wouldn't require any attention and expected privacy for a quiet winter's stay.

Several days later - a few days before Christmas - the friends Kirtley mentioned began to show up. First a new Ford V-8 arrived. The Utters watched from behind their curtains as a tall, thin man in a double breasted suit and fedora got out. He lit a cigarette before approaching the front door.

A big Buick showed up later with a nice looking couple acting like newlyweds. The woman stood out from the car and twirled in her dress until her husband had her in arm and escorted her to the arched door.

Then a sleek Studebaker slunk into the drive. It was the sloping fastback style, a "streamliner" with a laid-back grille giving it the appearance of being in motion even when parked in the drive behind the Buick. Another couple got out. This guy looked a little older, more cautious than the rest. The woman though, was a vivacious redhead festooned in a satin dress featuring butterfly sleeves and dripping with pearls. She was tiny but loud and profane and carried herself in a way that made her seem larger than she actually was. The bi-speckled Utters were suspicious before, but of this woman they were quite sure: she was not to the manor born.

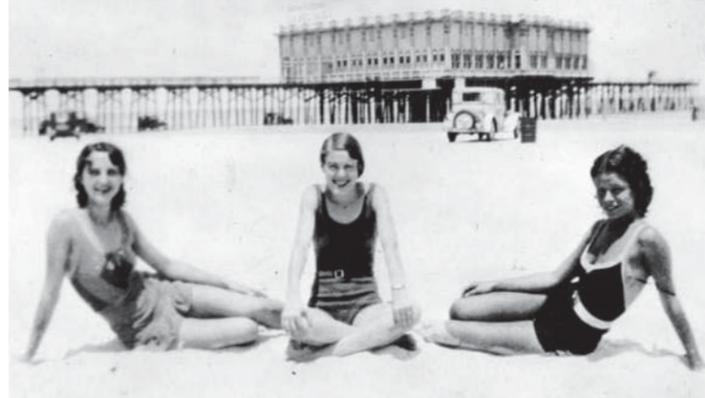

Despite the flash of their stunning new vehicles and expensive habit of ordering in catered meals from local restaurants, the Kirtley's and their guests seemed rather regular otherwise in their vacationing. Most days they enjoyed the beach, the women lounging about in their tank suits, the men wading in the surf or roughhousing up on the sand. Some days the women shopped and sometimes they all went to dinner at a waterfront restaurant or took in a movie downtown.

Early on Christmas Eve the guys left in the more spacious Buick to shop for presents before the stores closed. Lots of cash got flashed about in a hurry as they bought expensive jewelry and watches, elegant accessories and silk lingerie. Frank Kirtley did a double-take at another more unexpected gift idea. He paid more than double ("Keep the change, Kid") for a Boston Bull puppy.

Back at the beach house, Kirtley had the rest wait in the drive while he disappeared around the garage. Up the stairs, he startled the Utters by banging on their door. Edwin Utter finally opened it a crack, his wife in her robe peering nervously from round his shoulder. With his fedora cocked to one side, Kirtley disarmingly held up the dog for Utter and the Mrs. to see. They were about to become the unwitting babysitters for Kirtley's Christmas surprise.

Christmas passed at 209 Atlantic Avenue much as it would across Florida that warm winter's day. Gifts were opened and the cute little Boston Bull appeared on cue. There was feasting and libations, but other than a particularly flamboyant parade of her new finery by the loud redhead, there was little to distinguish that household from any other along the beach.

Several days later, the thin man with the redhead was reading the Daytona Beach News Journal out on the porch. He learned that the new 1934 Buick with "knee-action" suspension would arrive at Carter-Sawyer Buick up in Jacksonville the next day. There'd been considerable talk about heading west, meeting up with pals out in Arizona. The big new Buick would be perfect for the cross-country drive. He had to have it. In fact, he wanted the first one off-loaded to the lot. He made a call to Carter-Sawyer and later wired full payment for the car through Western Union. He gave his name as one J.C. Evans of Indiana, explaining that he was vacationing in Florida at the moment.

Evans sent his wife, the vivacious redhead, up to return with his coveted purchase. Unanticipated, however, was the special event that Carter Sawyer Buick planned for a promotional splash. They had the photographer from the Jacksonville Journal ready with his flash camera for a promo shot. The dealership's cigar-chomping manager pulled the redhead - posing suddenly as if for a glamour shot - into the photograph of a smiling uniformed Western Union man presenting the check for payment.

There were several problems with the attending news story. Evans wasn't Evans. J.C. Evans was in fact the name of the most hated guard at Michigan State Prison. The true identity of the mystery buyer was Harry Pierpont, one of the most notorious gangsters of the 1930s and a former resident of the joint.

Meanwhile, back at the beach, the true identities of the other guests at 209 Atlantic Avenue were about to become known. By News Year's Eve a Daytona Beach News Journal headline ran: "Police Warn Against Kill-Crazy Gangsters." The Associated Press story went on to report that

JBE Celebrates Grandparent's Day

The Joyce Bullock Elementary kindergarten classes invited grandparents in for an afternoon of fun on either Wednesday, September 28th or Friday September 30th. That week we had focused on letter Gg so we read stories about grandparents and why they are so special to our lives, made fall family trees, sang the grandparents a song, and took snack and grandparents out to the playground for some fun in the sun. We want to thank all the grandparents who attended. We had a wonderful turnout.

WES Students Go Robotic

Students from Tracy Kirby's 3rd grade class at Williston Elementary School designed and constructed their very own robots! The students were very interested in their reading story this week... "What's in Store for the Future?" and "Will Robots Do All The Work?"

Parents and students worked together on the project and built some amazing creations. Some robots were battery operated, remote controlled, with lights, singing, with expandable or moving parts! What an awesome project! The robots will be used as the center piece for the students' writing workshop next week. Students have already written a narrative about their robots, and now will work on adding details and making their ROBOT STORIES another amazing creation. So Proud of My ROBOTIC Class!

the notorious John Dillinger and some of his gang were rumored to be laying low in Florida after a ferocious crime spree across the Midwest.

That night, as fireworks were being set off up and down the beach, an unusually sloshed John Dillinger, aka Frank Kirtley, meandered out on the wet, moonlit sand with his tommy gun. In full view beneath colorful rockets bursting in air, John Dillinger joined the celebration with repeated bursts of machine gun fire into the starry sky. As with the Utters, now barricaded in their garage apartment, all doubts were shattered as to who the mysterious strangers at the beach house might be.

By daylight the doors of the great house stood open, the sea breeze ruffling the curtains throughout the messy, vacant house. The Dillinger gang was gone long before G-Men out of the Jacksonville FBI office wheeled in, only to find the Utters frantically flagging them up the palm-lined drive.

Female Cadets Meet Congresswoman Kathy Castor

U.S. Naval Sea Cadets Petty Officer First Class Ariana Pusey and Seaman Kimberly Vickers, of Manatee Division, attended Academy Day at MacDill Air Force Base south of Tampa. Congresswoman Kathy Castor, U.S. Representative from the 11th District of Florida, provided an opportunity for interested high school students to learn about various military academies and ROTC programs.

PO1 Pusey, 15 years old from Hernando plans to apply for the Coast Guard Academy. She has been in the Sea Cadet program since 2008 and is currently a leader of her division.

The 14 year old Trenton resident, Seaman Vickers, who graduated from recruit training this summer, has aspirations for the Naval Academy and is intent on medical training.

The girls met up with their division in the afternoon and gave a rundown of all they had learned. They shared with their shipmates when to apply for academy, how to get their approval from a member of congress, and which subjects are most important to study.

The sky is the limit for both of these highly motivated cadets.

Manatee Division drills at Coast Guard Station Yankeetown, in Yankeetown, Florida, on the second weekend of each month. To learn more about Sea Cadets, go to www.manateediv.org or call LTJG Dunn at 352-212-5473.

Guests enjoyed food from the Ivy House, drinks, live music by Dottie South and the Slackers, a live and silent auction as well as interactive cowboy experiences. # Log Cabin Quilters' News

The Log Cabin Quilters met Thursday, Oct 13 at the Levy County Quilt Museum. Our Bible Quilt is getting off to a great start. We have had 11 squares completed so far and we'll need another 30 or more before we can start to assemble the quilt. If we have more squares than we need for the quilt, we'll make pillows with those squares. The quilt will be very colorful with the bright colors that are being used.

We still have many craft magazines and if you need any, they are free. We have so much donated to us and we enjoy sharing with others.

We will soon be sharing our Thanksgiving Dinner on November 16. We have done this for about 25 years. We started when we met at CFEC and shared our dinner with all the employees. We'll be telling you more later on.

Thursday lunch was so good as usual with Kathie's chicken pot pie, chicken noodle soup, baked beans, cheese and noodles, squash casserole, potato salad, devil eggs, banana bread, cake, cream dessert and so much more.

Citizens for an Engaged Electorate Meets in Dunnellon

Dunnellon Public Library patrons were greeted on the library veranda Saturday morning by members of Citizens for an Engaged Electorate, offering information on getting involved in the democratic process. One pamphlet listed ways to contact legislators on the national levels; another gave Websites for contacting state officials. In addition, there was information about how to voice opinions through newspapers, on the phone, through the mail and by e-mail, both locally and nationally.

Present on Saturday were Harriett Jones of Williston, Andrea Bickel of Ocala and Babs Hale and Drollene Brown of Morrilton, part of a group of 12 that met in August to consider the topic - Rebuilding the American Dream. Saturday's event was borne of that meeting and its ensuing discussions among group members.

Nuchnapa Crowther and her seven-year-old daughter came early to thank the group for its presence. Crowther, a student nurse who immigrated to Citrus Springs from Thailand, was glad to find ways to express her opinion. She said she was beginning to think she had left one Third-World country only to land in one that was spiraling down to the same fate. Crowther's daughter brought a sign she had made, thanking the group for speaking up for her generation.

Others from Marion County and beyond stopped to talk, many of them deciding to join the group.

Besides offering methods for voicing opinions, CEE group members spoke with patrons about various issues and legislation that is currently up for vote. Those with internet access were given information on how to quickly and easily find information through the Website PopVox. Topics of conversation included getting America back to work, saving our Postal Service, cleaning up our springs, and repairing schools such as North Marion High, Sparr and Anthony Elementary schools.

CEE is dedicated to informing the public about the importance of participating in the democratic process, offering a summary of significant issues and providing tools for engagement. To become a part of the group, or for information on upcoming events, contact the group by e-mail: citizensengaged2012@gmail.com.

Chiefland High Prepares for Homecoming!

CHS is very excited and anxious to get things going for homecoming. Our theme this year is A Holiday Homecoming. Student Government is planning Pow Wow which will be held on Oct. 22 at 7:30 p.m. The homecoming parade will be held on Thursday, Oct. 27 at 2:00 p.m. where the floats will be judged. CHS will also be participating in a Deck the Halls competition where each grade gets a separate hallway and has the opportunity to decorate the hallway. The classes will be judged on their school spirit and creativity.

CHS always shows our Indian pride by having a spirit week the week of Homecoming. Spirit week is where we encourage everyone to dress up for the appointed days.

The days are as follows:

Monday: Independence Day (Americana); Tuesday: St. Patrick's Day (wear green); Wednesday: Christmas Day (green and red, Santa, elves); Thursday: Halloween (wear any appropriate costume); Friday: No school (no dress up day)

We can't forget about the football game!

The game will start at 7:30 pm on Friday, Oct. 28.

We are very proud of the Homecoming court this year. The king candidates are Deric Allen, Dylan Anderson, Larry Coleman, Robert McCabe, and Matthew Tyson. The queen contestants include Kiara Bell, Karli Bowen, Hailey Gerhard, Maria McGee, and Shelby Mills. The king and prince will be crowned at Pow Wow. ## Firefighters Recognized For Saving Life of Accident Victim

By Terry Witt
 Contributing Writer

Two Chiefland firefighters who pulled off a life-saving rescue in June with help from their chief were recognized by the Chiefland City Commission last week. The 14-year-old accident victim, who was critically injured in the mishap, was there with a smile on her face.

Chief James Harris paid tribute to professional firefighters Daniel Williams and Clint Maldin for pulling Nadia Bailey free from her entanglement with a horse on June 27. The chief used a horse calming trick he learned when he was a teenager growing up in Chiefland from a veterinary intern working for Dr. David Meeks. Harris also worked for Meeks. Harris said the trick was to drape a towel over the horse's head to keep the horse calm. It worked.

After the horse was calmed, Williams cut a rope off Nadia that was tied to the fallen horse. He grabbed her by the ankles, pulling her from between the horse's legs and away from the animal. Maldin stabilized the girl's neck with a brace before an ambulance arrived to transport her to a Gainesville hospital. Harris stood between the horse and the girl while they prepared her for transport, not knowing what the horse might do. Nadia was unconscious through the entire rescue.

The horse was uninjured in the accident. As soon as Harris pulled the towel from the horse's head and removed the rope looped around the horse's neck while wrapped very tightly around Nadia's waist, the horse stood and began grazing in the field as though nothing had happened, according to Harris.

Harris said the intern's advice came to mind when he first arrived at the scene and found the terrible sight in front of him. The horse was lying on its side with Nadia between its rear legs. The horse was kicking her each time someone approached. The rope looped around the horse's neck was tightening and loosening on each kick. The rope extended along the horse's belly and was wrapped tightly around one leg of the animal and Nadia. No one is certain what really happened to cause the mishap. But the ending was a happy one for Nadia and her parents, Beverly and Brian Bailey.

Brian Bailey said the fire chief called him at his work site out of state and told him the situation was serious and it was best for him to come to his daughter's side. Bailey thought before he arrived that his daughter might have suffered some bumps and bruises, but the sight that greeted him at the hospital quickly changed his mind.

"After I got there I realized the magnitude of what happened. I say thanks to God and I say thanks to the officers that saved my daughter," Bailey said. "I am absolutely certain they saved her life."

Nadia spent 9 days in intensive care.

City Commissioner Teresa Barron receives a fireman's helmet for her outstanding service as Chiefland's fire commissioner. Making the presentation are Assistant Chief A.D. Goodman, Chief James Harris, Capt. Ben Lowe and Deputy Chief Gene Stockman.

Harris said the rescue was on the order of miraculous. He doubts the rescue could have been so successful without divine intervention. He said he believes God triggered his memory of the towel trick the intern had taught him as a teenager.

"I'm not taking any glory, for it was all in God's hands," Harris said.

Harris is not sure what caused the mishap, but he said a powerful thunderstorm was approaching when he reached Nadia. The sky was full of thunder and lightning. The horse may have just reacted to the approaching storm.

At the city commission meeting last week, Harris also recognized Cody Basham, an emergency medical technician who also serves as a volunteer firefighter, as the Volunteer Firefighter of the Year. Basham had received the award at a law enforcement appreciation dinner.

Also recognized was Capt. Ben Lowe, the newest captain in the department. Lowe has volunteered and worked as a paid professional with the department for six years.

City Commissioner Teresa Barron is also Chiefland's Fire Commissioner and received a fireman's helmet for her outstanding service in that position.

Newly promoted Fire Capt. Ben Lowe and Volunteer Firefighter of the Year Cody Basham are honored by Fire Chief James Harris.

BHS Homecoming Reunion 2011

In December of 1859 the Levy County Board of Commissioners ordered the establishment of a public school in Bronson, Florida. In 1916, a two-story brick school building was built. In the late 1930s that building was torn down and the current main school building was constructed. Bronson is the oldest public school in Levy County still in existence.

Throughout that time, BHS has seen great times and sad times but through it all BHS has remained true. It has been the starting point for many people, a cornerstone in the construction of lives and it holds many treasured memories. It has given us guidance for our futures, structure for our present and nostalgia for our past. No matter where we go, what we do or who we become we will forever be Bronson Eagles.

It is based on this heritage and love of Bronson High School that a special event has been planned. The 2011 BHS Homecoming Reunion is scheduled for November 11, 2011 and promises to be a day you will never forget.

At 11 a.m. the Homecoming Parade will start along US Alt 27 and make its way through the heart of Bronson. From 1 to 4:30 p.m. we can "Walk the Halls" and visit the old BHS campus for a glimpse of the past and revisit special places and times at Bronson High School. From 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. we will have a Special Dinner with special guests, memorabilia and friends.

There will also be a silent auction and other surprises. And, of course, from 7 to 10 p.m. the Homecoming Game will take place with an Alumni Invasion. Come and cheer on your Eagles in the final game of the season. There will be limited edition t-shirts available for this night. Let's have an Orange out. At 10:15 there will be a Special Announcement. This will be an "I was there when" moment. At 10:30 p.m. a group photo will be taken of all in attendance on this historic occasion. This photo will be published in the yearbook as well as framed and displayed at the new BMHS campus so that this night will be remembered forever.

Angie Phillips and 2011 BHS Reunion Committee, (352) 486-5261.

Sanding Off the Rough Edges

Sure, I still have a few rough edges, and maybe a quirk or two that needs to be sanded off, but overall I'd consider myself a fairly likeable guy. I don't cuss on purpose anymore, I take regular showers, and I always cover my mouth when burping at the table. I'm pretty much fitting right in with regular society these days.

My wife Angie has been a major proponent for my improvement over the years. She's always encouraging me to use better manners, and something she calls social eddie-cut; whatever that is. She's likes to remind me of how little things, like grooming, can affect your success in life. In fact, she was the first to suggest I ditch my mullet.

Angie's always taken a particularly keen interest in my job too. She's very concerned with how well I treat my customers. She's even gone so far as to offer to personally cash my commission checks so she can better gauge my progress. She always quick to offer correction while it's still hot on her mind, many times right there on the spot... no matter where we are.

Angie would've flipped out if she'd seen the e-mail I sent to the purchasing agent of my largest account last week. It was really embarrassing, and the evidence I'd been looking for all my life that proves sometimes you really can get in trouble by accident.

You know how computers are. Grasping a person's mood through an e-mail can be trickier than taking a Hummingbird's temperature with a rectal thermometer. In the long run you're just going to end up guessing. However, this time, after an unusually frank reply from someone I know to be friendly and chatty, I decided I'd better re-read the original message I'd sent. I was shocked. This is the way it was supposed to read:

 [Hello Sarah. The manufacturer is holding us to a 100 piece minimum. This is not a common size bushing. Could you possibly bump up your quantity? Thanks, Guy]

Now that's seems perfectly proper and polite, right? It's all in accordance with the guidelines found in my handy dandy account manager's handbook. Yet this time my trusty old Spell-Check failed me, and I accidentally left out one little bitty letter, albeit, an important one. You can imagine my surprise when I realized the 'o' was missing in "Hello". OOPS!!!

Don't you dare do it, but if you were to revisit that message again, considering the way it was actually sent, you'd see where my gentle inflection might have been ratcheted up a bit. Naturally I quickly shot over an apology. To my relief Sarah graciously accepted. It was a close call. I could have lost the account. But in the end we all had a good laugh. Well... I think we did. Her next e-mail seemed to suggest she was laughing. Surely she would've been. I wonder if she really was??? Maybe I need to go back and read it over again?

But anyway- It all just points to why we should always follow God's standards when communicating others. If we do, any misperceptions and confusion will have a hard time tripping us up. At least we'll always know we tried to stay in the right. (Don't repay evil for evil. Don't snap back at those who say unkind things about you. Instead, pray for God's help for them, for we are to be kind to others, and God will bless us for it. 1 Peter 3:9 Living Bible.)

God's way always works, and though sometimes I still come up "to" so short, I sleep a lot better knowing I'm at least trying to love others unconditionally like Christ loves me. I also sleep a lot better in the house, so don't go telling Angie about what happened, or I'll have to grow my mullet back and come over and whomp you one.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED RULE

The Southwest Florida Water Management District is proposing to amend the following rule(s): 40D-4.331, F.A.C.

The District's Annual Regulatory Plan for July 2011 - June 2012 identifies rulemaking initiatives that are intended to amend or repeal outdated rules, reduce regulatory costs and burdens and achieve other streamlining benefits for the regulated public. One such initiative for Environmental Resource Permits (ERPs) is to allow expired permits to be reauthorized. This will allow permittees with expired permits to reauthorize and extend the permit to allow for completion of the project without having to re-apply and pay the fee for a new permit if their issued permit had expired.

Amendments are proposed to Rule 40D-4.331, F.A.C., to authorize the reactivation and extension of expired construction and conceptual ERPs for durations up to five years. Permit reauthorization and extension would be allowable provided the activities to be undertaken during the extended period will be in compliance with the District's rules in effect at the time the application seeking reauthorization and extension is submitted. Application would be made using the existing ERP Modification Short Form, as this is the form used by permittees to obtain a permit extension, and it does not require submittal of a fee. The amendments also eliminate the current language that prohibits permittees from submitting a permit extension request sooner than 180 days prior to the permit expiration date, as unnecessarily burdensome.

The Notice of Proposed Rulemaking appeared in the Florida Administrative Weekly, Vol. 37, No. 41, 40D-4.331, F.A.C., on October 14, 2011. A copy of the proposed rule can be viewed on the District's website at <http://www.swfwmd.state.fl.us/rules/proposed/>

Pursuant to the provisions of the Americans with Disabilities Act, any person requiring special accommodations to provide comments on this rulemaking is asked to contact: The Southwest Florida Water Management District Human Resources Director, 2379 Broad Street, Brooksville, Florida 34604-6899; telephone (352) 796-7211, ext. 4702 or 1-800-423-1476 (FL only), ext. 4702; TDD (FL only) 1-800-231-6103; or email to ADACoordinator@swfwmd.state.fl.us. If you are hearing or speech impaired, please contact the agency using the Florida Relay Service, 1(800)955-8771 (TDD) or 1(800)955-8770 (Voice).

NOTICE OF PROPOSED RULE

The Southwest Florida Water Management District is proposing to amend the following rule(s): 40D-1.659, 40D-4.021, 40D-4.101, 40D-4.331, 40D-4.351, F.A.C.

The District is revising some of its Environmental Resource Permit (ERP) application forms and compliance forms to clarify that such forms may be prepared by licensed or registered professionals in addition to licensed professional engineers, as provided by law. The form changes will make District forms consistent with the DEP and other water management districts which have revised their ERP forms and practices to clarify that documents may be prepared by licensed or registered professionals in accordance with law. Amendments are also proposed to the ERP Manual Part B, Basis of Review as well as the following rules which identify or discuss these forms and submittal requirements: 40D-1.659, 40D-4.101, 40D-4.331 and 40D-4.351, F.A.C. Rule 40D-4.091, F.A.C., is amended to incorporate the revised Basis of Review. A definition of "licensed or registered professional," which has been similarly adopted by DEP, is also added to Rule 40D-4.021, F.A.C. The General ERP Application for Modification Related to Outparcel Construction form is further amended to correct a rule citation as to applicable fee and to make the form usable for all projects with outparcels within a permitted system, in addition to commercial and industrial projects. Proposed changes to this form will have cost saving benefits for permittees with systems having outparcels and requiring modifications.

The Notice of Proposed Rulemaking appeared in the Florida Administrative Weekly, Vol. 37, No. 41, on October 14, 2011. A copy of the proposed rules can be viewed on the District's website at <http://www.swfwmd.state.fl.us/rules/proposed/>

CHS Benefits from White Ford Test-Drive Fundraiser

By Andrea O'Ffill

On Wednesday, September 28th, Chiefland High School held a "Drive One 4 UR School" fundraising event sponsored by White Ford of Chiefland and the Ford Motor Company. The fundraiser was to support Chiefland High School's sports and extracurricular activities for the year.

During the event, community members who held a valid driver's license were encouraged to complete a short survey and test-drive one of the new 2012 Ford vehicles. For each person who test-drove a Ford Escape, Fiesta, Fusion, Edge, Mustang, F-150 or F-250, $20 would be donated to the school, and for each person who test-drove the new eco-friendly Ford Focus, $30 was donated. Ford allowed a total of as much as $8,000 to be reached during this event.

In 2007, Ford Motor Company began the program "Drive One 4 UR School", and since then more than 275,000 test-drives at more than 1,500 events have generated over $5 million in donations for high schools across the nation.

In addition to raising money for high school extracurricular activities, the "Drive One 4 UR School" program gives its participants the chance to experience the newest vehicles with leading safety technologies and more eco-friendly mechanics.

An extra $10 per person was donated to those who test-drove the new eco-friendly Ford Focus in order to promote a motivation to take a good look at the more eco-conscious car.

"We want to see that folks make a more conscious effort to save fuel" quotes David Walker, business manager at White Ford of Chiefland.

Since the market crashed several years ago, many businesses have since taken bailout money, Walker said, but Ford didn't take a single penny. Instead, Ford Motor Company has produced more "green" fuel-efficient cars including the new 2012 Ford F-150 EcoBoost truck. This sleek, four-door, versatile, tough Ford truck has a selectable tow/haul mode and a six speed SelectShift automatic transmission with the option of switching to the Full Manual function, as well as trailer brake control and trailer sway control that is class exclusive to the Ford F-150. This feature makes the EcoBoost more preferable than the larger, less fuel-efficient trucks or SUVs for hauling heavy loads in industrial activity.

Among the many citizens who attended the event was City Commissioner Sammy Cason who test drove the Ford F-150 EcoBoost. Walker says that Cason was quite impressed with the truck.

People continued to zoom through the event from the 12 p.m. starting time until 8 p.m. when it ended. Members of the Student Government Association waved signs to advertise the event, while others attended the registry tables and monitored key-exchanges among test-drivers. According to Kelly Varnes, the activities director for Chiefland High school, there were approximately 320 test drives that day which will contribute a large donation to the school from Ford.

Especially in these tough economic times, the Drive One 4 UR School program will be a financial blessing to the school.

"We read the news every single day of budget shortfalls in every area of our lives," said Walker, "and if Ford Motor Company is kind enough to offer this fantastic opportunity we need to go for it. We all must get on board... and help everybody out; we are all in this together."

A Pigskin Reminder: It's Time to Donate Blood

With summer vacations behind us and football season just ahead - it's a good time to think about donating blood.

During the summer the blood supply takes an annual dip. Now, with students back and vacations over, donors are needed to rebuild the community blood supply.

It takes only about 45 minutes. Maybe on Saturday morning before heading out or just before slipping into an easy chair to watch a game on TV is the right time to save a life by visiting a LifeSouth bloodmobile or donor center.

As a community blood center, the blood donated with LifeSouth stays in the communities it serves. Donors are saving lives in their own communities. Their friends, family members and neighbors who find themselves in need are the ones who benefit directly.

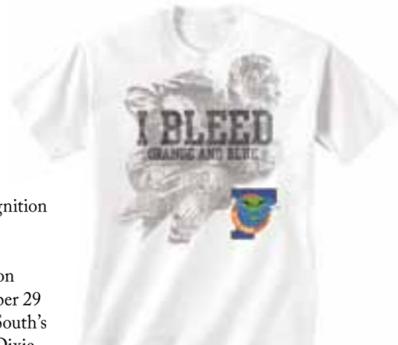

To donate a person needs to be 17 or older, or 16 with written parental consent, weigh a minimum of 110 pounds and be in good health. A photo ID is also required. For more information call toll-free 1-888-795-2707 or visit www.lifesouth.org.

All donors will receive a special recognition T-shirt and cholesterol screening.

Please join us for the:

Chiefland Community Blood Drive on Friday, October 28 and Saturday, October 29 at Walmart on N. Hwy. 19 and at LifeSouth's Chiefland Donor Center in the Winn-Dixie Plaza, Hwy. 19

The bloodmobile will be in the Wal-Mart parking lot between the hours of 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Friday and the hours of 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday. Or, donors may come to the donor center on Friday from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. or Saturday from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.
