

Bass Tournaments Cause Friction with Neighbors at Inglis Area Boat Ramp

By Terry Witt
Senior Staff Writer

Bass fishing tournaments are as much a part of Florida's cultural landscape as live oak trees and cabbage palms, but the tournaments are becoming a nuisance in one Inglis area lakeside community.

Levy County Commissioners were asked Tuesday by resident Richard Hill if they could at least post no parking signs along residential streets in Peaceful Acres that are often clogged by bass fishing vehicles and trailers.

Commissioners said they would take a look at the problem but made no promises.

Hill said boat ramp in Peaceful Acres became a favorite site for bass tournaments when Dunnellon and Citrus County began charging for the use of their boat ramps.

He said bass fishermen are parking in front of mailboxes and using the bathroom outdoors because there are no restrooms at the rural boat ramp on Lake Rousseau.

Recently he said a bass fisherman left toilet paper on the ground after relieving himself outdoors.

"It's out of control," he said.

Hill approached commissioners with the problem because the boat ramp is owned by the county. It is a county easement.

He said the boat ramp has about 10 to 15 parking spaces, hardly enough to accommodate a large bass fishing tournament on Lake Rousseau, a clear water lake fed by the Withlacoochee and Rainbow rivers. Some call it the

County Forces Bronson to Postpone Decision on Williston Fire Agreement

By Terry Witt
Staff Writer

Bronson Town Council members reluctantly postponed a decision Monday on whether to hire Williston firefighters on an as needed basis after receiving a letter from the Levy County Department of Public Safety saying the county coordinator must approve the agreement first.

Public Safety Director David Knowles advised council members in the April 4 letter that a 2007 Fire Protection Agreement signed by the town and the county commission says if any of the town's firefighting obligations are transferred to a subcontractor it must first be approved by County Coordinator Freddie Moody or his designee.

Knowles said Levy County could provide the same services offered by Williston if it was given adequate notification.

"Since the interlocal agreement between the Town of Bronson and the City of Williston proposes that Williston perform some of Bronson's obligations, we will need to discuss this arrangement with the County Coordinator prior to Bronson being able to use Williston's services. Please contact me so that we can arrange to discuss this issue further," Knowles wrote in the April 4 letter.

The letter didn't sit well with two council members. Councilman Berlon Weeks said Municipal Home Rule in Florida means counties can't tell cities what to do. He said the clause in the fire protection agreement giving the county commission authority to tell Bronson whether it can use Williston firefighters as backup will have to be fixed. But he acknowledged the county has the upper hand at this point.

"It seems we won't make a decision until the county tells us what

Bronson Farmer's Market Gets OK from Council

Bronson Town Council members gave approval Monday to the start of a Bronson Farmer's Market to be held on the first Saturday of every month at the Gazebo.

The council approved closing Main Street between Oak Avenue and North Court Street during the hours of 7 a.m. to 1 p.m. for the Bronson Farmers Market.

Councilman Bruce Greenlee, who heads the new industrial committee, said the Bronson Farmer's Market was the first invention of the committee. Committee members hope it will bring people into Bronson, a first start toward improving the local economy.

Judge Tim Browning Swears in Four Williston City Council Members

By Terry Witt
Senior Staff Writer

Four members of the Williston City Council were sworn into office Tuesday by County Judge Tim Browning.

Council President Jason Cason, Vice President Charles Goodman, Mayor Gerald Hethcoat and the most recent addition to the council, Matt Brooks, took the oath of office.

None had opposition in the municipal election. The council reappointed Cason as president and Goodman as vice president.

Council members voted unanimously to permanently repeal the city's impact fee ordinance that charged new development for the cost of capacity used at the city's wastewater and water treatment plants.

The council made a decision several years ago during the peak of the recession to place a moratorium on impact fees in an effort to stimulate economic development. The moratorium expired on March 20.

The impact fees had produced relatively little income. Council members decided to scrap them entirely and refund the money collected.

In other business, council members approved a supplemental agreement with the Florida Department of Transportation for the design and rehabilitation of Taxiway F at the Williston Airport.

The total cost of the project is $2,580,000. The

Reddick Firm Apparent Low Bidder on Bronson Sewer Project

By Terry Witt
Staff Writer

Town officials in Bronson opened bids Tuesday for a project that will connect many businesses and the courthouse to municipal sewer for the first time.

The apparent low bidder was Commercial Industrial Corp. of Reddick in Marion County with a base bid of $2,370,183.77, more than 900,000 below the high bidder.

Jason R. Shepler, senior project manager for Mittauer and Associates, the town's engineering firm, said he was aware of the big price spread among bidders, but he said he has worked with Commercial Industrial Corp. on other projects.

Shepler told bidders gathered in the town council's chambers that town officials would be reviewing the bids over the next several weeks, but the apparent low bidder is Commercial Industrial Corp.

The project is being funded by a grant and loan from Rural Development, an agency within the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The grant is for $1,269,600 and the loan $1,596,000.

Chiefland headed for Debt-Free Status in Near Future

By Terry Witt
Staff Writer

Chiefland is moving rapidly toward debt-free status after tightening its belt for more than five years as it weathered a lingering recession.

When September rolls around the Chiefland City Commission will make the last of its payments on the only remaining big loan.

In 2007 the City Commission made a decision to consolidate loans for a well field property, a property for emergency services and a sewer plant expansion. The loan was for $879,197 at an interest rate of 5.15 percent for 7 years.

The city agreed to make 84 monthly payments of $12,500.

The loan will be paid off in September.

After that, the only remaining loans are for a couple of used vehicles.

Mayor Teal Pomeroy said he would like to see the city continue its conservative approach to managing the budget.

But tight budget management came at a cost.

The city has eliminated five or six employee positions as part of its budget-saving moves over the past five years. Employees haven't received a pay raise in five years.

Chiefland hasn't purchased a new car in

Old Town Man Dies of Injuries from March Crash

An Old Town man died Monday of injuries he suffered in a March 28 crash at the corner of State Road 349 and NE 878th St. in Dixie County.

The Florida Highway Patrol said Lawrence Allen Hazen, 52, died at Shands Hospital in Gainesville.

Hazen was a passenger in an S-10 Blazer that was struck from behind by a vehicle driven by Sean Michael Cornine, 19, of Old Town.

FHP said Cornine was traveling behind a car driven by Frances Debra Hazen McDonald, 54, of Plant City. Both vehicles were driving south on SR 349 when McDonald began turning left onto NE 878th Ave.

Cornine failed to slow his Yukon XL and struck McDonald's vehicle from behind. Both vehicles traveled in a southeasterly direction coming to a final rest on SR 349's northbound shoulder.

McDonald suffered minor injuries. Her other passenger, Sara Jo Hazen, 74, suffered serious injuries.

Cornine, McDonald and Sara Jo Hazen were wearing seatbelts, according to FHP. Lawrence Hazen was not wearing a seatbelt.

Charges are pending in the 5:45 p.m. fatal crash.

backwaters. Commissioner Danny Stevens said the county commission is trying to figure out a way to handle the situation. As soon as they figure out a solution, they will announce what they plan to do.

Hill suggested there are waterfront lots on Lake Rousseau the county could purchase, but he said the main thing is to post no parking signs.

But Stevens said erecting no parking signs might interfere with the ability of Peaceful Acres residents to hold family gatherings.

Hill said the final straw was when he realized he wasn't getting his mail when the tournaments took place. He said bass fishermen would park directly in front of his mailbox and the mail delivery people wouldn't go around the obstruction to give him the mail.

Old Florida Celebration of the Arts Showing Off April 12 and 13 in Cedar Key

The 2014 Old Florida Celebration of the Arts will be here with all the color, seafood, music and quaintness of Cedar Key on Saturday and Sunday, April 12 and 13 from 10 AM - 5 PM. This will be Cedar Key's 50th Annual Spring Arts festival.

Tony Krynsky's engraved wood painting entitled, "Honeymoon Cottage 1959," was chosen as the 2014 Design Contest Winner for the 2014 Old Florida Celebration of the Arts. The Honeymoon Cottage was originally known as the Thomas Guest House. Built in 1958 as a get-away for the Thomas Family of Gainesville, Time and mother nature have taken their toll on this iconic structure which sits in the Gulf just off 1st Street in Cedar Key.

The Cedar Key Art Festival is free with booths for the 120 artists lining the quaint historic main street. At the beachfront city park, only local non-profit vendors are allowed to sell food. As a result, little old church ladies, high school kids and the town's leaders are all there selling foods you won't find anywhere else.

The seafood is especially worth trying, because Cedar Key is the east coast's biggest producer of clams. As a result, you'll find fresh Cedar Key clams for sale by the clam association and oysters by the oyster association.

On D Street in the historic "downtown" you will be able to sample the best clam chowder in the world, verifiably. For the last three years, the clam chowder served at Tony's Seafood Restaurant at Second and D street has won first place in the Great Chowder Cookoff in New Port, Rhode Island — the World Cup of chowder. Tony's offers samples to all comers at the art festival, and there is always a line.

Thelma McCain will be there selling her homemade crab cakes for the same $2 each as in the past to benefit the Lioness club. That is 30 years of selling the best crab cakes you will ever eat.

The Cedar Key Garden Club will sell fresh-squeezed lemonade. The Cedar Key Future Farmers of America will sell fresh-fried grouper.

You can even rent a kayak from Kayak Cedar Keys outfitter Tom "Tomyakker" Leibert right from the beach.

And, of course, the Art. Original, colorful, varied, scenic funds come from federal and state grant funds. The Florida Department of Transportation will pay $950,000 of the project and the Federal Aviation Administration $1,630,000.

Council members postponed approval of a special exception permit to establish the new Williston Middle High School on a piece of residential property at the corner of County Road 316 and U.S. 41.

City staff said the school district had not provided all the information needed for the legal advertisement. The issue had to be tabled.

Cliff Lowry, the new head football coach and athletic director at Williston High School introduced himself.

He said he was looking forward to earning the support of the community. He said spring football practice begins on May 1 and the spring game is May 23 at Interlachen.

Lowry said if people will give the program a chance he believes they will be happy with the results on and off the field.

As a final matter, council members received a summary of the budget. Most departments were in good shape and budget spending is within the expected range except for Williston Fire Rescue.

The fire department is 25 percent over budget at this point in the fiscal year. The department was hit with 14 calls as a result of a storm that passed through. The high call level may be part of the problem.

Cason said he wouldn't mind the department being 12-14 percent over budget at the end of the year if the overspending was the result of a heavy call load.

"But if it's just overspent I have a problem with that," Cason said.

Cason added that sometimes when he is signing checks for the city he sees expenditures that make him scratch his head, and "sometimes it's in the fire department."

Hethcoat defended the department, saying the leadership is careful with spending.

"They're too careful watching the budget to just go and overspend," Hethcoat said.

Town Clerk Kelli Brettel said construction activities should begin in June. Most residents will see no construction along the highway frontage on U.S. 27A, the main highway through Bronson.

The town clerk said the Kangaroo convenience store and Cameron Asbell Insurance Agency will connect through the back side of their businesses, as will McKenzie's Bar, the Bronson Motel and Bronson Restaurant.

Some business, such as the new Dollar General Market, won't get sewer through this project. The sewer line will extend to the Levy County Courthouse, up North Court Street, and along Marshburn Drive, according to Brettel.

The town is hoping that the additional sewer lines will improve economic development changes and bring jobs to the county seat.

The other bidders were Osteen Brothers in Gainesville with a base bid of $3,036,485; Art Walker Construction in Lowell with a base bid of $3,152,307; Worth Construction and Development Inc. in Live Oak with a base bid of $2,547,870; Andrews Paving of Gainesville with a base bid of $2,271,387; and American Construction of Panama City with a base bid of $2,983,636.

decision to make from what I'm reading in this letter right here," Weeks said.

Councilman Aaron Edmondson said the town doesn't want to be pushed "or held hostage" by the county. He said the town wants to work with Chiefland and Williston on firefighting issues and he said the town doesn't want its fire department to go to the county.

"To me this is just a tactic," Edmondson said.

Clerk Kelli Brettel said the town was unaware it needed county approval before it could contract with Williston to hire firefighters when they were needed.

Town Attorney Steven Warm said the letter from Knowles "seems to be saying, don't do anything until we look at it and put a rubber stamp on this, and I would get the impression they would feel we had defied them if we did something affirmative."

County Commissioner John Meeks was seated at the back of the council chambers listening to the discussion. He wasn't on the agenda. Weeks asked him if there would be a problem if the council approved the agreement to hire Williston firefighters on an "as needed" basis.

"I personally don't want to comment on it," Meeks replied, calling himself an observer. "I know other members of the board will have a problem with it because it can escalate into an issue like the one that's been dealt with in the past."

Meeks did not detail what problem the county commission has dealt with in the past. The biggest firefighting issues faced by commissioners has been criticism leveled by Chiefland that the county is dictating where Chiefland can fight fires and also cutting Chiefland's firefighting revenues. The latest grievance by Chiefland is that the county doesn't want to license an Advanced Life Support non-transport vehicle for Chiefland Fire Rescue. The county commission holds the certificate of need for emergency medical services in the county. The commission would have to grant a CON to Chiefland. Knowles would advise county commissioners on what he thinks should be done.

The city is planning an April 22 public workshop at 5:30 p.m. at the Tommy Usher Center to demonstrate how an Advanced Life Support truck could save lives before a county ambulance arrives and to allow the Chiefland public to comment on the issue.

Edmondson and Weeks eventually agreed at Monday's meeting that the town should table the issue and obtain more information from the county. Councilman Bruce Greenlee, administrator of the Levy County Road Department, said the bottom line is that the town has signed an agreement with the county requiring prior approval by Moody of any contract with Williston. He said the town can deal with changing the language of the contract at a later time.

Williston Fire Chief Lamar Stegall urged the council to go forward with the agreement, or at least approve it with the condition that final approval would rest with the county. He said he had talked to Moody and Anne Bast Brown, the county attorney, and neither of them had a problem with the town inking the agreement with Williston. Stegall said he thought the issue would be mentioned at Tuesday's county commission meeting, but the subject wasn't discussed.

The town council anticipates taking up the issue again at the next council meeting on April 21.

Search Warrants Served on Internet Cafés

The Illegal Gaming Task Force serves warrants in five counties

The Illegal Gaming Task Force served search warrants today in five Florida counties targeting internet cafés owned by Ivan Vega, 1873 Pine Bay Drive, Lake Mary, Fla., and Peter Miller, 120 Sand Castle Way, Neptune Beach, Fla. These warrants represent a continuing crackdown on the operators of illegal gambling centers around Florida known as internet cafés. Along with today's operation, Ivan Vega was also arrested on a warrant from an earlier investigation conducted by State Attorney Willie Meggs of the 2nd Judicial Circuit. Vega was charged with keeping a gambling house, manufacture, sale, possession of coin operated devices, lottery, and plays at games of chance.

"These warrants are a key step in investigating organizations claiming to be 'internet cafés' but actually conducting illegal gaming. My Office of Statewide Prosecution will continue to collaborate with law enforcement on these cases," stated Attorney General Pam Bondi.

Search warrants were executed in Duval, Columbia, Marion, Brevard, Lake and counties. During the execution of warrants, Gaming Task Force investigators seized computers, cash related to the illegal activity, banking records and employee rosters.

"These warrants will likely lead to the arrests of key figures within these organizations for racketeering and money laundering," said Florida Department of Law Enforcement Commissioner Gerald Bailey. "This is a warning to other so-called internet café operators. If you operate outside the law, you are a target."

Members of the Illegal Gaming Task Force include FDLE Agents, Seminole County Sheriff Donald Eslinger, Volusia County Sheriff Ben Johnson and the Office of Statewide Prosecution.

"This Task Force is sending a message to internet café operators who operate outside of the law. We are going to continue to enforce the laws of the state and you will be held accountable," said Seminole County Sheriff Donald Eslinger.

In addition to warrants served by the Illegal Gaming Task Force, local law enforcement agencies served additional warrants in their jurisdictions, including Lake and Brevard County Sheriff's Offices and Rockledge, Palm Bay and West Melbourne Police Departments and in Monroe County by State Attorney Catherine Vogel. State Attorneys Brad King, Phil Archer and Willie Meggs are assisting in the investigations along with the Columbia and Marion County Sheriff's Offices. The Brevard County Sheriff's Office arrested five internet café site managers as part of the operation.

A Halo for Selfishness

Thomas Sowell

The recent Supreme Court decision over-ruling some Federal Election Commission restrictions on political campaign contributions has provoked angry reactions on the left. That is what often happens whenever the High Court rules that the First Amendment means what it says -- free speech for everybody.

When the Supreme Court declared in 2010 that both unions and corporations had a right to buy political ads, that was considered outrageous by the left. President Obama called the decision "devastating" and said it "will open the floodgates for special interests."

Those unfamiliar with political rhetoric may not know that "special interests" mean people who support your opponents. One's own organized supporters -- such as labor unions supporting President Obama -- are never called "special interests."

All politicians are against "special interests," by definition. They all want their own supporters to have the right to free speech, but not those individuals and groups so benighted as to support their opponents.

Even in an age of polarization and gridlock, the one area in which it is easy to get bipartisan support in Congress is in passing campaign finance laws, restricting how much money can be spent publicizing political candidates. What Congressional Democrats and Republicans have in common is that they are all incumbents, and they all want to keep their jobs.

Publicity is necessary to win elections, and incumbents get millions of dollars' worth of free publicity from the media. Incumbents can all pontificate in Congress and be covered by C-SPAN. They can get interviewed on network television, have their pictures in the newspapers, and send out mail to their constituents back home -- and none of this costs them a dime.

Congressional staffs, paid by the taxpayers, are supposed to help members of Congress with the burdens of their office, but a major part of their staff's work is to help get them re-elected.

That's not just during campaign years. Everything members of Congress do is done with an eye toward re-election.

Any outsider who wants to challenge an incumbent at the next Congressional election has to pay hard cash to buy ads and arrange other forms of publicity, in order just to get some comparable amount of name-recognition, so as to have any serious chance of winning an election against an incumbent.

Few people have the kind of money it takes for such a campaign, so they have to raise money -- in the millions of dollars -- to pay for what incumbents get free of charge.

Campaign finance laws that restrict who can contribute how much money, who can run political ads, etc., are all restrictions on political challengers who have to buy their own publicity.

If truth-in-packaging laws applied to Congress, a campaign finance law would have to be labeled an "Incumbents Protection Act."

The very high rate of incumbent re-elections, even while polls show the public disgusted with Congress in general, shows how well incumbents are protected.

The media are accessories to this scam. So long as the information and opinions that reach the public are selected by mainstream media people, whom polls show to be overwhelmingly on the left, the left's view of the world prevails.

Hence the great alarm in the media, and in equally one-sided academia, over the emergence of conservative talk radio programs and the Fox News Channel on television.

No longer can the three big broadcast television networks determine what the public will and will not see, nor two or three leading newspapers determine what is and is not news. Nobody wants to give up that kind of power.

When businesses that are demonized in the mainstream media, and in academia, can buy ads to present their side of the story, that is regarded in both the media and academia as distortion. At the very least, it can cost the left their self-awarded halo.

It is fascinating to see how some people -- in both politics and the media -- can depict their own narrow self-interest as a holy crusade for the greater good of society. The ability of the human mind to rationalize is one of the wonders of the world.

Attention, class: A Common Core mouthpiece wants to rap my knuckles with his Gates Foundation-funded ruler. In response to my column two weeks ago about the marketing overlords pushing the Fed Ed racket, Chad Colby of Achieve Inc. demanded corrections. Let's go to school.

"I wanted to take a moment to highlight two points that were incorrect regarding Achieve," Colby complained. "Contrary to Ms. Malkin's assertion, Achieve employs no lobbyists and we never have."

No? Never? Someone didn't do his homework. Mr. Colby, meet Patricia Sullivan. She's the founding executive director of Achieve and a career lobbyist who has bounced around D.C. for the past quarter-century in influence-peddling positions for the Gates Foundation-funded National Governors Association, Council for Chief State School Officers and Center on Education Policy. She has "advocated" for trade groups, a teachers union and her own "consulting firm." That's Washington-speak for "lobbying."

And let me introduce Mr. Colby to Ronn Robinson, a founding senior vice president of Achieve and veteran Democratic and corporate education lobbyist for former Washington Gov. Booth Gardner and Boeing. According to The Hill newspaper's column titled, ahem, "Lobbying World," Not-a-Lobbyist Robinson left Achieve several years ago to lobby for the D.C.-based National Center on Education and the Economy (NCEE).

NCEE is the multimillion-dollar Gates Foundation-funded advocacy (read: "lobbying") group founded by Marc Tucker, the godfather of Common Core-style schemes and top-down control masquerading as "reform." He has dominated the D.C.

education-lobbying scene since before Bill Clinton was in office. Like Achieve, Tucker's NCEE is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit that crusades for ever-increasing federal involvement in every aspect of education while denying its brazen lobbying activities.

In the early 1990s, NCEE (established with $5 million in New York taxpayer-funded seed grants) paid Hillary Clinton more than $100,000 to direct the group's "Workforce Skills Program" while she worked at the Rose Law Firm in Arkansas. After the Clintons moved into the White House, Tucker sent a now-infamous letter to Mrs. Clinton outlining a radical progressive plan "to remold the entire American system" through a centralized national-standards Trojan Horse.

Tucker's proposal represented "a new approach to government" by elitist bureaucrats to "create a seamless web" that "literally extends from cradle to grave." The Clinton White House soon after delivered federal Goals 2000 and School-to-Work laws. Tucker has explicitly advocated that the United States "largely abandon the beloved emblem of American education: local control." Today, his acolytes hail the creation of a "P20W" system to groom students from "prenatal" ("P") through graduate school ("20") and into the workplace ("W").

Tucker's close ally, Mike Cohen, was one of the cadre of education radicals called on to shape his plan and was name-checked in his letter to Hillary. Cohen served as a top education adviser to Bill Clinton and his Education Secretary Richard Riley, and as a Don't-Call-Me-A-Lobbyist lobbyist for the NGA before becoming president of Achieve Inc. in 2003.

And that brings us back to Mr. Chad Colby and Achieve Inc.'s second complaint. As I reported in my column, the incestuous relationships among these lobbying groups and their Common Core boondoggle partners are deep and wide. I noted that in addition to staffing the Common Core standards writing committee and leading the public relations campaign, Achieve Inc. "is the 'project management partner' of the Common Core-aligned, tax-subsidized PARCC testing conglomerate."

Colby protested that "Achieve is no longer affiliated with the Partnership for Assessment of Readiness for College and Careers (PARCC)" and that its "contract ended with them in December of last year." Clean break? Hah. Achieve and PARCC are inextricably intertwined.

Don't take my word for it. Take PARCC's. Though the contract with Achieve "ended" last year, a PARCC letter to Arizona education officials explains that no one's really going anywhere:

"The Achieve staff members that have conducted the work of PARCC over the last several years are transitioning to PARCC, Inc. so that they can continue to maintain the leadership and programmatic expertise that will see the project through the end of the development period, as well as the sustainment of the assessment moving beyond the grant. Many of them have been involved in work surrounding student assessment and academic standards for 15 or more years..."

Moreover, PARCC makes crystal clear that "the Achieve staff members that will make up PARCC, Inc. ... have been intimately involved in the development of each of PARCC's procurements, subsequent contracts and contract management."

Despite spending tens of millions of dollars on advocacy along with millions more in federal and state taxpayer grants and subsidies, the Beltway educrats' propaganda machine is crumbling. Tens of thousands of parents and students are now boycotting the racket's PARCC/Achieve field tests. States are withdrawing from standards, technology and data-collection plans in droves.

Looks like it's time to ask the Gates Foundation to pour more money down the Common Core/Fed Ed Not Lobbying vortex, Mr. Colby. Class dismissed

UN, Obama, and Gates Are Globalizing Education Via Common Core

Written by Alex Newman

For over a year now, Americans have been up in arms over the Obama administration's unconstitutional efforts to bribe and bludgeon state governments into surrendering control over K-12 education through the controversial so-called "Common Core" national standards -- and the outrage is still growing. A peek beneath the surface, however, reveals that the nationalization of American schools is actually just one component of a much broader global agenda being pushed by the Obama administration, the United Nations, Bill Gates, and others: the globalization of education.

In fact, just this week, an invitation-only conference hosted by former Florida Governor and pro-Common Core ringleader Jeb Bush entitled "Globalization of Higher Education" took place in Texas. Among the attendees: Hillary Clinton, U.S. Education Secretary Arne Duncan, former World Bank President Robert Zoellick, UNESCO officials, university presidents, and more. While higher education appears to be the next target of reformers, the globalization of K-12 schooling is on the verge of completion -- at least if the American people do not rise up and stop it.

For decades now, the globalists at UNESCO and other UN outfits have been openly plotting to impose what they sometimes refer to as the "World Core Curriculum" on all of humanity. According to the agency, it is all linked to UN Agenda 21. In addition to gathering up unprecedented amounts of data on everyone, the global "education reform" movement is essentially seeking to instill radical new values in children -- turning them into "global citizens" with views inherently at odds with Biblical Christianity -- to facilitate the total regimentation of human society. Countless programs and initiatives such as "Education for All" are working toward that goal.

Despite the virtual media blackout, none of it is much of a secret -- even in the United States. In fact, Obama's Education Secretary Arne Duncan even boasts openly that the U.S. Department of Education he leads is "cooperating" with groups such as the United Nations, often dubbed a "dictators' club," to "improve" education in America. In a 2010 speech to UNESCO, Duncan even referred to the UN "education" agency as one of the administration's "global partners" in the

Yoho Supports Eliminating Federal Overreach through Race to the Top in FY2015 Appropriations

Congressman Ted Yoho (R-FL-03) has written a letter to Chairman Jack Kingston (R-GA) of the Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education Appropriations Subcommittee, and Ranking Member Rosa Luisa DeLauro (D-Conn) urging the elimination of funding for the Race to the Top Fund (RTT). Congressman Yoho gave the following statement.

“RTT was established initially as a Federal incentive for the National Governors Association and the Council of Chief State School Officers to voluntarily adopt Common Core education standards. All states that adopt Common Core State Standards compete for grant money based on a point system. If states agree to adopt the Secretary of Education’s standards, they are awarded additional points, thus tipping the scale in favor of those states. This is nothing more than an attempt from the Administration to coerce states into implementing Federal standards. Parents and educators should be making the decisions that shape the curriculum for our children, not the U.S. Department of Education.”

Comm. Putnam Remarks on EPA Withdrawal, Leaving Florida Alone to Continue Protecting State Waterways

Tallahassee, FL – Commissioner of Agriculture Adam H. Putnam released the following statement today, after the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency proposed to withdraw federal numeric nutrient criteria.

“The withdrawal of federal numeric nutrient criteria by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency will enable Florida to manage our unique and diverse waterways.

“The Florida Legislature embraced the state’s adoption of a more comprehensive, science-based approach to managing the health of Florida’s water bodies, demonstrating our commitment to protect our precious natural resources and creating the framework for the EPA to withdraw the overlapping federal standards.”

effort to globalize schooling as part of the “cradle-to-career education agenda.”

“Today, education is a global public good unconstrained by national boundaries.... It is no surprise that economic interdependence brings new global challenges and educational demands,” Duncan told the globalist UN bureaucrats, boasting of the billions of dollars U.S. taxpayers were being forced to send foreign governments and institutions for “educational reform” abroad. “Our goal for the coming year will be to work closely with global partners, including UNESCO, to promote qualitative improvements and system-strengthening.”

The “education” agenda, of course, has less to do with actually educating children and more to do with promoting globalist political goals and values through indoctrination at school. “Education is still the key to eliminating gender inequities, to reducing poverty, to creating a sustainable planet, and to fostering peace,” Duncan continued, with “sustainability” being UN-speak for central planning and global government. Quoting former South African President Nelson Mandela, Duncan noted that education “is the most powerful weapon which you can use to change the world.”

Unsurprisingly, billionaire UN devotee and population-control zealot Bill Gates — the primary financier of all things Common Core, other than U.S. taxpayers via the federal government — is deeply intertwined with the planetary effort. According to the latest estimates, while his own children attend an elite non-Common Core private school, the Microsoft founder has poured more than $2 billion into creating and promoting the dubious national standards for everyone else. Together with UNESCO, though, Gates is determined to impose the globalist vision of education on children worldwide.

In 2004, for example, on behalf of Microsoft, Gates personally signed a “Cooperation Agreement” with UNESCO to accelerate the globalization of education through information technology and communication. “Together, UNESCO and Microsoft aspire for there to be a quantum leap in the quality of courses and in accelerating their uptake by educationalists ... through the availability of standards, guidelines or benchmarks,” the agreement explains, calling for the creation of a “master curriculum (Syllabus).” “UNESCO will explore how to facilitate content development,” the document states.

After signing the agreement, as reported by Eagle Forum chief Phyllis Schlafly in 2005, UNESCO Director General Koichiro Matsuura gave a speech offering more insight into the plot. Among the goals of the partnership, the UN agency boss explained: “fostering web-based communities of practice including content development and worldwide curricula reflecting UNESCO values.” As the document itself explains, “Microsoft supports the objectives of UNESCO as stipulated in UNESCO’s Constitution.”

It may or may not be a surprise to many Americans to learn that in a 2011 document about an advanced training program produced by UNESCO’s International Institute for Educational Planning, the would-be global Department of Education, even uses the term “Common Core.” The course outline, which boasts that the UN institute has trained more than 1,500 “education planners and managers” from around the world, adds under the Common Core header: “Educational planners and managers need insight into the effects of demographic shifts, globalization, and social and political change on education.”

“The fourth part of the course presents the main development frameworks, including the ‘new’ international commitments as part of Education for All/ Fast Track Initiative, Poverty Reduction, Millennium Development Goals, and discusses their impact on the role and methods/instruments of educational planning,” continues the document, which essentially outlines the training program being used to put legions of globalized education bureaucrats devoted to UNESCO’s vision in key positions worldwide.

UNESCO’s vision for a truly global education regime under the “World Core Curriculum” goes back decades, too, as its officials openly admit. “In the middle of my life I discovered that the only true, objective education I had received was from the United Nations where the earth, humanity, our place in time and the worth of the human being were the overriding concerns,” wrote the late Robert Muller, former UN assistant secretary general and the architect of the “World Core Curriculum” plot. “So at the request of educators I wrote the World Core Curriculum, the product of the United Nations, the meta-organism of human and planetary evolution.”

He described his planetary Common Core-like scheme as “a curriculum of our universal knowledge which should be taught in all schools of Earth.” One of his chief inspirations, he said, was former UN Secretary-General U Thant, a Marxist radical, whom Muller quotes as saying: “The world will not change and find peace, if there is not a new education.” Another one of Muller’s major inspirations was UN apparatchik and occultist Alice Bailey, who founded the Lucis Trust (formerly Lucifer Publishing Company) and claimed to channel spirits.

UNESCO’s use of the term “Common Core,” too, goes back decades. In 1984, for example — the same year President Ronald Reagan withdrew U.S. participation from the UN agency — the outfit released a 51-page document entitled “A Methodological Guide to the Application of the Notion of Common Core in the Training of Various Categories of Educational Personnel.” That scheme was aimed at training teachers worldwide using the same standards, so that they, in turn, could fan out across the globe to “educate” students all over the world.

Even as far back as the late 1940s, UNESCO was actively promoting the use of education as a means to achieve what its first Secretary General, Julian Huxley, described as “political unification in some sort of world government,” which he claimed was “necessary.” In a 1949 pamphlet on using the classroom to promote “world understanding,” UNESCO said: “As long as the child breathes the poisoned air of nationalism, education in world-mindedness can only produce precarious results. “So, to deal with that, schools should use various means to “combat family attitudes.””

Critics and analysts have slowly started taking notice. “Some have decried Common Core as the nationalization of American education. Far more dangerous, however, is the globalism of Common Core that demotes American values, undermines American constitutional principles and detaches students from their families and faith,” observed Catholic journalist and public speaker Mary Jo Anderson in a piece for Crisis magazine. “Common Core is simply the newest attempt in the decades-old battle (Outcome Based Education, Goals 2000) to impose a U.N. globalist worldview aimed at ‘peace,’ sustainability and economic stability at the expense of freedom.”

Indeed, Common Core represents merely the culmination of decades of quiet efforts by the globalist education establishment to foist its new values for its envisioned new society on the American people. In 1994, for example, Democrat President Bill Clinton signed “The Goals 2000: Educate America Act” foisting “National Standards” on schools across America. Then, Republican President George W. Bush signed the “No Child Left Behind Act” developing national “accountability” schemes to ensure that government schools were teaching what the federal government demanded.

Before the 1960s, of course, the federal government had virtually no role whatsoever in American education. The Constitution specifically prohibits it by not granting any power over education to the national government, and thus, reserving that sphere for the states or the people. Today, however, schools are largely operating under federal control, despite the rhetoric, as they comply with federal mandates to keep the federal funds flowing. Common Core is merely the next step — but almost certainly close to the end game.

Even before UNESCO came on the scene, tyrants and would-be tyrants always understood that controlling education — and the minds of the youth, by extension — was the key to power. From Marx and Stalin to Hitler, all of them knew corrupting children was their path to total domination. Today, Americans are faced with powerful globalist forces determined to shape the views and minds of their children through globalized “education.” And the outcome of this battle will almost certainly determine the future course of humanity.

WES 'Showers' Kudos Upon WES April Students of the Month

by Lisa Statham Posteraro

On Friday morning, April 4th, Williston Elementary School Assistant Principal Chloe Gabriel welcomed into the media center the 20 Wildcats being recognized as the April Students of the Month. There to applaud them were the students' invited family members. The three areas recognized are academics, citizenship and most improved; sometimes a teacher will tap a student in two areas. When she called out each name, Gabriel also read why each classroom teacher had nominated that student, a tradition begun last year.

Fifth graders receiving awards in academics were Emily White and Veronica Houser. Two citizenship awards were presented to Emily Ethington and Tyler Klinger. Dahja Simmons received her award for citizenship and academics, and Isaac Williams was presented a certificate for being most improved. The 5th grade teachers are Nancy Bowman, Jeanne DuBois, Mary Sridhar, Jessica Stevenson, Serena Thiessen and Steve Van Zwielen.

The 4th grade teachers are Michelle Clark, Hillary Cribbs, Rachel Kates, Tina Roberts, Brittney Swink-Perno and Julie Whiteacre. Selected for academics were four students: Isabella Acosta, David Williamson, Paige Chaffee and Ajavien Anderson. Dustin Porter was tapped for most improved and Academics. For academics and citizenship, Jeremy Phillips received a certificate. Kates cited Jeremy as a positive role model and commended him for his improved academic performance.

The 3rd grade team includes Kathy Brewington, Courtney Edwards, Mary Guinsler, Laurie Helgerud, Cindy Hiter, Rowena Rivera, Michelle Ruiz, Marissa Schultz, Renai Sparrow and Becky Ward. Four students also received an academics award in 3rd grade: Eric Harvey, Marium Chowdhury, Mike Hoffman and Christopher Scott. Brewington commented about what a great role model Christopher was in his studies. Austin Fisher was honored for citizenship. Sebastian Emeterio, Joseph Domenech and Xavier Rooney were tapped for most improved. Helgerud touted Xavier for giving 100% effort! Receiving awards for both academics and citizenship were Addison Mayes and Jamari Days.

Chloe Gabriel, Williston Elementary School Assistant Principal, stands behind the group of April 2014 Students of the Month. All but two students were present.

Following the ceremony, Desirée Mills served refreshments to the students and their guests, compliments of the Parent-Teacher Organization (PTO). Mills is one of the PTO leadership coordinators. PAW "drawstring" book sacks were presented to the recipients before they headed back to class after the brief 8:00 a.m. ceremony.

As always, Brewington gathered the names and printed the certificates. Media specialist Donna Lovvorn took the photograph of the proud group. In the absence of principal Marla Hiers (because of a death in the family), Gabriel presented the certificates to the recipients.

Congratulations to these April 2014 Students of the Month! Your positive role modeling is appreciated! Look for your group photo on the Wall of Fame in the Wildcat Café!

Williston Middle High School Faculty Gets First Look at Field of Dreams

Faculty and staff for the future Williston Middle High School got their first close look at their "field of dreams" last week when they visited the undeveloped school site at the junction of U.S. 41 and County Road 316 last week.

The $35 million facility is awaiting legislative funding approval in Tallahassee. Gov. Rick Scott and the Florida House have fully funded the facility in their budgets but the Florida Senate had set aside only half of the funding as of last week.

Superintendent Bob Hastings said he has been assured by the lawmakers representing Levy County that the facility will be funded. Construction would most likely begin after the first of the year.

"I was up there all last week. They are saying it will be fine. Not to worry," Hastings said.

Matt Marino, representing Oelrich Construction, which is partnered with Gilbane Construction to build the facility, was present for the Assistant School Superintendent Jeff Edison points to a drawing of the school's interior as three faculty members watch.

Faculty members chat at the site of the new school. The photo shows the front of the property along County Road 316 in the distance. The school district says it intends to preserve as many of the big trees on the property as possible and most of the trees along the property frontage.

Marino said Oelrich Construction has an outreach program to recruit local tradesman to work on building the new school. Smaller contractors can be used as subcontractors to the primary builder on the large project.

He said tradesman interested in helping build the school should call 352/472-1334, a Newberry phone number.

Oelrich lives in Williston and said he brings the attitude that this project is local. His stepmother is Judy Marino, who works in the Levy County Courthouse. His mother Susan Billings works for Levy County Emergency Medical Services. His father is Vince Marino.

"I live in Williston. I bring the mentality - we live here," he said.

Oelrich was part of a presentation that was made in Bronson to the school board and administrative staff. He noted that the new school will be constructed across the street from Williston Elementary School.

"What's nice is keeping all the education in one spot in the city. I think the school board did a great job of choosing the site," Marino said.

The get-together for faculty and staff took place in the approximate location of the future main hallway of the school. The high school and middle school wings are separated by an administrative open office area. Staff will see down both wings from the office area.

Capt. Frank Clegg, who runs the successful ROTC program at Williston Middle High School closely examined the drawing of the interior of the school and located the portion of the facility that will benefit his program.

"The new high school has an indoor firing range for me," he said. "I'm excited to have a range right next to the classroom."

The ROTC program is a credit course that can be taken as an elective.

Levy County Public Safety Visits Chiefland Elementary

CES students learn 911 and evacuation procedures to keep safe from Public Safety personnel.

April is recognized as National 9-1-1 Education Month. Levy County Department of Public Safety (LCDPS) approached the Chiefland Elementary School to present 9-1-1 information to school-age children. LCDPS invited Chiefland Fire Department to join their team to deliver the information to kids in grades 3 through 5. The two Departments were at the school for three hours on Wednesday, April 2nd teaching the children when to call 911 and what information they would be asked when they call 911. Additionally, kids were taught about what to do if a stranger ever tried to pick them up and how to develop fire escape plans with their families including identifying a meeting place outside their home in the event of a fire. The information was delivered to several hundred children who also had the opportunity to see emergency response equipment up close.

said the new facility will provide a much improved means of moving students around the campus. Some ESE students are disabled and have difficulty moving from one location to another on the current middle school campus.

"We spend a lot of time getting wet at the middle school when there's a rainstorm," she said. "The new school will meet all the handicap requirements."

Sharon Sandlin, who teaches 6th grade at the middle school, was enthusiastic about the new school and what it brings in terms of 21st century computer technology and how technology might be used to teach students.

"I'm very excited. It offers a lot of technology and expansion opportunities, more room and more programs," she said. "Classrooms today are changing and we need to change with them."

Chris Wilder, one of the agriculture teachers at the high school, talked about the new school as being part of the Williston "utopia." The word utopia means paradise or heaven on earth.

"Williston is an awesome place and this is one more feather in our cap," he said.

He said the school district allowed faculty to be part of planning for technology in the classroom. He said the new school will offer more opportunities for students.

"This is going to be amazing. I'm very pleased and feel blessed they care about the kids and what I do," he said.

Questions Remain Despite Preliminary County Approval of Williston Plat

By Terry Witt
Senior Staff Writer

Levy County Commissioners Tuesday unanimously approved a preliminary plat for Legacy Acres near Williston despite questions about whether the road serving the future subdivision was wide enough and whether building a subdivision within 50 yards of peanut dryers was a good idea.

Owner Ronald Gilman answered one question being raised by Commissioner Mike Joyner when he said Legacy Acres would be deed restricted to site built homes, which eliminates the possibility of mobile homes on the property.

Gilman is planning to subdivide his land into ten 2-acre lots.

Joyner said also questioned the wisdom of building a residential subdivision next to peanut dryers. The dryers can be loud during the peanut season. Joyner didn't want taxpayers being held liable for approving the construction of homes close to the farm operation.

"I'm just trying to look out for the taxpayers' money," Joyner said.

Commissioner Danny Stevens measured the road Gilman plans to use as an access road. He said the road is 15-foot wide. Stevens said the narrow road concerns him because buses and vehicles use the road.

When the subdivision is finished, the average household will have two vehicles. Stevens said some residents in the area have expressed concerns about the potential for traffic problems on the narrow road.

Stevens said Gilman may want to use a different road for the exit.

The motion to approve the preliminary plat acknowledged that Gilman still has issues to address and he must impose deed restrictions that limit development to site built homes.

Inglis Septic Tank Problem Will Cost Federal Taxpayers $50,000

By Terry Witt
Senior Staff Writer

After a year of political wrangling and misfires, Levy County Commissioners took the final steps Tuesday to hopefully solve a messy septic tank problem at a federally rehabilitated home near Inglis.

The septic tank drain field at the home in Peaceful Acres could wind up costing federal taxpayers $50,000, and commissioners are literally ready to wash their hands of the problem.

The Tarafa home was rehabilitated with federal funds from a Community Development Block Grant administered by Levy County, but what the county didn't know was that the septic tank system wasn't working properly.

The grant administrator for the county, Jordan & Associates, attempted a couple of different solutions that didn't work and cost the grant program $20,000. The latest solution, to excavate the entire front yard and replace it with sandy soil, will cost another $30,000. The CDBG grant program will foot the bill.

"We're talking about $50,000 for a septic tank," said Commissioner Danny Stevens.

Commission Chairman Ryan Bell said he is well aware of the cost. He said the county commission did everything within its power to solve the problem. Bell said the county has "reduced our exposure." He was referring to legal exposure if the drain field doesn't work.

"I think everyone in this room would like to wipe their hands of it if they could," Bell said.

Ronald Vanzant, president of Jordan & Associates, won approval to advertise for bids on the project. The bids will go out on April 10. A pre-bid conference is set for 10 a.m. on April 17 and the bid deadline is 4 p.m. on April 22.

The work will involve taking down the carport. Approximately 1,650 square feet of the yard will be excavated down to 4.5 feet.

And what if it doesn't work?

Vanzant said if that happens, he will come back to consult with commissioners. But Vanzant said GSE Engineering & Consulting, Inc. believes the septic tank drain field will work with the new design.

Inglis Sidewalk Construction Begins April 15

Work is expected to begin April 15 on a project that will improve the ability for pedestrians to walk safely along U.S. 19 in Inglis.

A five-foot wide sidewalk will be built along the east side of U.S. 19 from the Withlacoochee River Bridge to County Road 40. It is also being constructed along the west side of U.S. 19 from the Withlacoochee River Bridge to North Inglis Avenue. Crosswalks are going to be installed at side streets and new wheelchair accessible ramps are being added at side streets and driveways.

Daytime lane closures can be expected during construction. Access to businesses and residences will be maintained at all times.

The project, combined with sidewalk construction in Gilchrist and Suwannee counties, should be completed in the fall. Florida Department of Transportation (FDOT) will oversee the project and has hired R.E. Arnold Construction, Inc., of Archer to build these sidewalks at a cost of $592,900.

For additional information regarding this project or other FDOT projects around Northeast Florida, visit www.nfroads.com or call 800-475-0044.

five years. Chiefland Fire Rescue bought a used fire truck in Maryland, drove it to Chiefland and refurbished it using firefighters as the workers. Chiefland police recently purchased two Crown Victoria police cars from Seminole County for a much reduced price rather than buying new police cars. The department used confiscated drug funds to make the purchase.

"It's been lean," Pomeroy said.

City Projects Coordinator Laurie Copeland said the city has made a conscious effort to operate as frugally as possible by not spending money unless it was absolutely necessary.

"We don't even have post-it notes. We cut up scrap paper for notes. We do everything we can to keep the costs down," Copeland said.

The city raised the property tax millage rate last year by 1.25 mills when health insurance costs soared and the Florida Legislature shifted a higher percentage of the cost for the employee pensions to the city. The additional millage is expected to raise $143,000 in this year's budget. The city levies 6 mills.

Copeland said the city is aware that the cost of health insurance could rise considerably this year because of the Affordable Care Act, sometimes called Obamacare.

"We've heard 10 percent on the low end and 40 percent on the extreme. We don't know. It's too early to shop for insurance," Copeland said.

The Legislature may shift more state pension costs to cities.

Chiefland adjusted as best it could to the changing realities of running a municipality during the recession. The budget tightening and the loss of employees were painful.

The City Commission thought the recession would probably last two years, but that turned out to be optimistic. Commissioners avoided raising property taxes for five years, dipping into reserves until those funds were exhausted.

The recession dragged on.

"I don't think anyone thought this recession was going to last as long as it has. When it rocked on five years, the reality began to sink in. When we reached the sixth year, they (commissioners) broke down and raised taxes," Copeland said.

Pomeroy credits his department heads with working together to reduce costs and working within their own departments to cut spending. He gives Copeland praise for writing the state and federal grants that have allowed the city to continue expanding and repairing its sewer and water systems, and improving its parks. He said the City Commission made strategic moves to conservatively manage the city's budget.

Pomeroy said the city wants to keep property taxes as low as possible to attract businesses. The city has expanded its water and sewer lines northward. He believes those moves will eventually attract more businesses. He would like to lower taxes when the city pays off the last of its big loans in September.

But commissioners will have to look first at the city's finances.

Copeland said the city's reserves have not caught up from the recession. She said that may take some time, especially if the Florida Legislature continues shifting expenses to the city taxpayers to make its bottom line look better.

"They are cutting the revenue stream to us. The only revenue stream we have control over is ad valorem. Once again, we are left in the hole," she said.

On the positive side, the city will be virtually debt-free in September.

Copeland says remaining debt free will be challenging.

She said despite the City Commission's best efforts to police spending and in spite of employees rising to the challenge of cutting departmental costs, there is bound to come a time when borrowing money becomes a necessity.

The city hasn't reached the point yet.

It is headed for a different milestone in September as it nears debt-free status.

Congressman Ted Yoho Becomes First Candidate to Qualify for Ballot

Over 4,800 Local Citizens Rallied to get Ted Yoho on the Ballot

On April 3rd, Congressman Ted Yoho became the first candidate in North Central Florida's 3rd Congressional district to qualify for the 2014 ballot. In order to qualify for the ballot it is necessary to have 4,476 signed petitions. Yoho had 4,818 certified petitions which is 300 more than required.

Congressman Yoho said, "I am thrilled that our team is the first to qualify on the 2014 ballot. It is no easy task to collect nearly 4,500 petitions and I couldn't be more humbled by the outpouring of support from our local communities."

Candidates have two options to get on the ballot – petition onto the ballot by collecting 1 percent of the total registered voters' signatures in the district or pay a $10,400 fee to be placed on the ballot. March 31 marked the end of qualifying via the petition process.

Yoho said, "Carolyn, our team and I want to thank all of the hardworking, dedicated volunteers, and supporters that helped us achieve our goal of qualifying by the petition method. It was important for us to qualify via the petition method instead of spending the precious donation dollars received by you, our valued individual supporters. We thank you for both.

"We began our campaign years ago as a small, grassroots movement and remain committed to that still. I look forward to seeing old friends on the campaign trail as well as new ones as we begin a new election year. The issues that impact our neighborhoods each and every day are what I have been and will continue to focus on. It's time to put America first."

Congressman Ted Yoho was first elected in 2012. He represents 13 counties in North Central Florida which include Alachua, Clay, Bradford, Union, Columbia, Marion, Levy, Dixie, Gilchrist, Suwannee, Lafayette, Madison, and Hamilton. You can find more information about Ted Yoho at www.tedyoho.com.

Log Cabin Quilters

The Log Cabin Quilters met Thursday, April 3 at the Levy County Quilt Museum at 11050 NW 10th Ave. Mary was in to sandwich a baby quilt. Donna brought in her completed lap blanket. Others brought in projects to work on.

The ladies had a great time looking at the material that had been donated during the week. These donations of fabric and other craft-related items help fund the Museum's needs.

A group of quilters and friends from the RV Resort in Williston were in for a visit to the area. We hope they will return next winter and join us.

Ida Mae Watson's family donated the display cabinet that was in the Beauty Shop for years. Russell made this cabinet and we've found just the place for it. After Russell died, Ida Mae made replicas of her childhood home and the home that she and Russell lived in when they were first married. Her childhood home had the separate kitchen and eating area. My grandfather had a home like this with a wood cook stove and he probably had an ice box before Grandma got an electric refrigerator and stove. Thanks again Watson family for thinking of us. Come out and see the houses.

Greg and the boys were out this week. The yard is looking great. They boys were able to put up more of the quilt blocks on the porch. Thanks Lancaster.

Come out to see the changes. If you're in the swings or rocking chairs on the porch, you can listen to the birds singing.

Joyce has a lucky grandson. The quilt has many pictures of his favorite things.

Donna's finished her lap quilt. Not bad for a first time quilt maker.

More than 55 motorcycle riders from AmVets Post 88 in Bronson raised $2,000 for the Gainesville Fisher House Foundation in a 147-mile poker run Saturday.

The Bronson AmVets Rider's Chapter 88 working with the Sons of AmVets Squadron 88 and AmVets Ladies Auxiliary organized the poker run.

Many of the riders are working people willing to give of their time for a worthy cause.

Gainesville Fisher House is a residential facility that provides a home away from home for the families of veterans being treated at the Veterans Hospitals in Gainesville.

For members of the Armed Forces, retirees, veterans and their families, the Fisher House offers shelter and support during a medical crisis. The support is especially important to a family during the hospitalization of a wounded or injured service member involved in current military operations.

No family pays for their stay.

AmVets Post 88 has already raised $10,000 for the Gainesville Fisher House. The goal is to raise an additional $10,000 over the next four years, but the Post is trying to raise the money as fast as possible.

The Fisher House program supports the American military in their time of need and recognizes the special sacrifices of American men and women in uniform as well as the hardships of military service by meeting the humanitarian needs beyond that provided by the U.S. Departments of Defense and Veterans Affairs.

AmVets Post is involved in many community activities. The poker run for the Fisher House being among them.

During the cold winter months, the Post provided coats to children in Bronson schools who came to school without a coat. The coats for kids program was another of the Post's successes.

Bronson Wins Double-Header as District Tournament Approaches

Bronson's varsity boys' baseball team won a double-header against Hawthorne Friday to give the team a 10-5 record as the district tournament nears.

The Eagles are 7-2 in the district and should get a bye in the first round. The district tourney begins April 21 in Trenton. Bronson defeated Hawthorne 19-3 in the first game and 11-1 in the second. It was a home game. One of the games was a makeup for a game cancelled for rain.

Ty Barber started as pitcher for the first game, striking out 6 and giving up no runs. Freshman Wayne Shipp replaced him in the fifth inning. The game ended in the fifth with the mercy rule in effect.

The second game also ended in the fifth for the same reason – the mercy rule. Timmy Gibson went all the way as pitcher, giving up no earned runs and striking out 10 batters.

Coach Allen Strickland used six junior varsity players in the first game. He thinks it may have inspired the older boys to play better ball. The JV performed well as varsity players.

"I told them we were going to use the guys that will produce. It worked on some of the older boys," Strickland said. "It was good to get some wins at home. We've struggled at home. We've been real road warriors." The 10-5 overall record is the best the Eagles has seen in four years. The team will have to continue winning for the season to be termed successful, Strickland said.

"You can throw the records out in the playoffs," he added. "We're playing better, but we've got room to improve."

The season stats show Ty Barber has the best batting average at .474, with Timmy Gibson close behind with .444. Tyler Beauchamp has .417, David Dees .405, Brock Brower .362, Cole Crain .333, Landon Smith .319, Brandon Wachtel .303, P.J. Shipp .273, Jacob Morrison .250, Jason Ranalli .250, Jared McCoy .200, Brandon Mercer .192.

Gibson leads the team in RBIs with 20, Dees with 16 and Wachtel with 13 and a home run. Barber has 14 RBIs, Beauchamp 10, Brower 9, Smith 9, Mercer 6, Shipp 5, Morrison 4, McCoy 2, Crain 1 and Ranalli 1.

Gibson is the team's primary pitcher with 7 games under

Public Safety Expo Gives Close Up View of Emergency Services

It's common to see an ambulance, fire truck or a sheriff's deputy racing toward an emergency on Levy County's roads and highways, but it's rare to see them up close.

The Levy County Department of Public Safety sponsored Safety Expo Saturday north of Chiefland gave the public an opportunity to see the people and vehicles who respond to their emergencies up close.

"We assembled the whole area of law enforcement, fire and Emergency Medical Services to give the public an opportunity to come out and see how it works," said Public Safety Director David Knowles. "No one sees us unless they call 911. This gives us an opportunity to expose what we do in a non-emergency situation."

Agencies represented at the Expo were the Levy County Sheriff's Department, Williston Police Department, Chiefland Police Department, Chiefland Fire Rescue, Williston Fire Rescue, Bronson Fire Rescue, Cedar Key Fire Rescue, Fanning Springs Fire Rescue and Inglis Fire Rescue.

Luther White, the landowner, allowed the Department of Public Safety to use the property off U.S. 19 north of Chiefland for the Expo.

The most popular demonstration was the response to a mock vehicle accident and the use of special equipment, such as the Jaws of Life, to cut the doors off the vehicle and remove the occupants. The actors for the drama were Brian NesSmith as the driver and Devon Jones as his passenger.

Bronson and Interim Fire Chief Dennis Russell donated a used van and a used car for the demonstration.

Paramedics then transported the patient to a waiting

FWC Holding Deer Management meetings

The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC) seeks input and invites the public to a series of meetings starting April 1 on deer management in hunting zones B and C in north and central Florida.

The FWC is in the process of establishing deer management units (DMUs) throughout the state. DMUs are intended to allow the FWC more flexibility with deer management based upon deer populations, habitat conditions and public preference within each of the units.

All meetings are from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the following locations and dates:

Lake City – Monday, April 21, at the Holiday Inn Lake City, 213 SW Commerce Drive;

At the meetings, plans for using DMUs will be explained and all participants will have an opportunity to provide input. Following the public meetings, four technical assistance groups will be formed, made up of members of the public to meet and work to create goals and objectives for deer management in their respective DMUs. Anyone interested in being on one of these groups will get the opportunity to apply.

For those who cannot attend any of the meetings, there will be follow-up opportunities to participate in a webinar and to view an online presentation where comments may be submitted. Information on all of this will be available soon at MyFWC.com/Deer.

Did You Think You Were the Only One with Problems?

There was a whole passel of sour-looking fellows in the room that night, looking like deer caught in the headlights. Even our Pastor wore a plastic smile, and he was the one who'd recommended this twelve session marriage building seminar.
The class began innocently enough, with some little teaching about how we're to love our spouses and all. I kept from nodding through most of it, but then, to my horror, they announced we'd end each night's session with some sappy little share-fest. Oh brother! How in the world had I let my wife talk me into this?
Thankfully we fellows weren't the only ones suffering. I noticed several wives taking light jabs to the ribs for spouting off during their confession session. When it came my turn, I managed to grunt something to the effect of, "Yeah, ahh... Well, ahh... Sure, I'm for all that stuff. I guess..." Believe me...I did good compared to some of the other fellows. One big guy named Jim was brutally honest. "I don't have anything to say," he croaked in a voice low enough to trigger a tsunami. Then he folded his arms and nodded to the poor sucker who was next. "Now that's worth the price of admission," I giggled under my breath.
After a couple of weeks people began to loosen up. I mean really loosen up. They were shedding their steeple people exteriors left and right. I'll be honest; I was getting a little nervous. What if Angie disregarded my warnings and told off on me? Eventually, I must admit, I could no longer deny the teaching was helpful, even if it was causing Angie and me to argue all the way home each night. I was even enjoying my turn during the snitch-fest at the end. Most of all, I was reveling in the fact that Angie and I weren't the only couple at the Church who still had a few issues to iron out. Maybe that's what finally helped old Jim to break his silence. One night, out of the blue, he uncrossed his arms and spoke a couple of sentences. Okay, so it was only an angry response to one of his wife's earlier accusations, but it was a start! The next week he did it again. Too bad it was our last regular class. Jim might have accidentally bubbled over pretty soon.
For the final night they planned a fancy marriage vows renewal shindig. They asked each of us to invite as many people as we could and prepare a few words to say about what we had learned in class. I was nervous for a week. I could only imagine how Jim felt. When that night arrived we all got married again. That was the easy part. Waiting for our turn to speak was nerve grinding. Everyone did fine though, saying wonderful things about the program, eloquently trying to persuade their family members to get some help too. We all held our breath when Jim was called to the podium. To our surprise, that big fellow lumbered up and snatched that microphone off the stand like he had been waiting for this moment all of his life. I don't recall all of what he said over the next ten minutes, but it started with, "I came into the class thinking I was the only one who had problems..." By the time he finished preaching, family members were practically climbing over each other to get back to the sign-up sheet.

It certainly was a night to remember, and one that helps me realize why I'm often so open and transparent in these stories. I believe people need to know Christians suffer the same temptations, trials, and hardships as everyone else. Unfortunately, we often sin like everyone else too, despite having all of God's help. Yes, we all fall short of God's glory. One of the biggest ways is when we try to pretend we are holier than thou. Christians are not superior people. We're just plain folks who finally got honest enough with ourselves to recognize our need for help, and finally accepted God's invitation to hide ourselves in Christ.
God is calling you today. Why don't you climb into the ark and be saved with us? Ask Jesus to be your Lord. (For everyone has sinned; we all fall short of God's glorious standard. Yet God, with undeserved kindness, declares that we are righteous. He did this through Christ Jesus when He freed us from the penalty for our sins. For God presented Jesus as the sacrifice for sin. People are made right with God when they believe that Jesus sacrificed His life, shedding His blood... Romans 3:23-25 NLT)
But Anyway- Big Jim is one of my best friends at Church now, though I can hardly get a word in edgeways around him. He's also one of the most devout Christian men I know. He's the real deal. That class really helped him come out of his shell. I guess he just needed to know we Christians are all in the same boat.

April Freshwater Fishing in Florida

The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC) scheduled the first of four license-free recreational fishing days on the first full weekend in April each year (April 5-6, this year), because it coincides with a productive freshwater fishing period, when the weather is usually pleasant. Many of Florida's recreational sport fishes, including black bass, bluegill and redear sunfish, move into shallow waters to spawn during spring, making them more available for anglers to catch.

License-free freshwater fishing weekends are a great time to introduce other family members, friends and neighbors to fishing and see if they and you would like to take up the sport. Besides enjoying the fun of reeling in a fish, many people find recreational fishing to be a good motivator to enjoy the great outdoors and living a more active, healthy and natural lifestyle.

During license-free freshwater fishing weekends (the first weekend in April and the second weekend in June), no recreational fishing license is required. However, all other bag limit and season, gear and size restrictions apply.

To further encourage recreational fishing, the FWC will conduct a special contest during April to collect photos of anglers. All you have to do is post a photo of your family fishing in Florida's fresh waters on Twitter or Instagram with #FLfish (or you can use #FWC-FamilyFishing). In return for your efforts, the FWC will enter you into a drawing for one of six surprise packages, each including a $50 gift card from Bass Pro Shops, thanks to TrophyCatch; a Glen Lau video library on DVD; and assorted fishing lures, hooks, line and goodies to make your next trip even more productive.

Submitted photos must be your own. Editing software must not be used, and the photo cannot include inappropriate content. Photos should be taken during April while freshwater fishing in Florida and include multiple anglers enjoying their day together on the water. The FWC may subsequently use the photos for educational or outreach purposes.

So where will you go for your next freshwater fishing trip? Plenty of resources are available online to help you choose. Start by visiting MyFWC.com/Fishing and under "Freshwater Fishing" pick "Sites/Forecasts." There you can find the top destinations for pursuing bass, bream, catfish and other species in 2014, as well as regional forecasts and tips for local waters; information on all 80 FWC fish management areas; and links to our boat ramp finder and freshwater fish attractor locations. Another good resource is TakeMeFishing.org/State/FL.

Freshwater anglers have enjoyed wonderful fishing so far in 2014 across Florida, and this spring should see a continuation of that trend.

The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission's (FWC) incentive-based conservation program, TrophyCatch, rewards anglers for participating in citizen-science, by catching, documenting and releasing largemouth bass heavier than 8 pounds. Besides the immediate gratification of releasing these older bass to fight another day, anglers provide valuable information about the number and

The Levy County Sheriff's Department was on hand to demonstrate the use of K-9 units in search and rescue situations, as well as take downs involving suspects involved in crimes.

Children were fascinated by the big machines.

Emalie Slusser, 3, of Chiefland climbed in the ShandsCair helicopter.

"She is going to be a Life Flight pilot. She was real excited it was going to be there," said her mother, Elizabeth. Her gather Timothy was nearby watching Emalie sit in the helicopter.

At the Coast Guard site, 3-year-old Alistair Timothy Rogers of Williston eagerly climbed aboard a 25-foot long search and rescue boat while his grandfather, Tim Rogers, watched his enthusiastic grandson.

But Alistair had one observation as he stepped off the boat.

"There's no ocean," he said.

The RBS rescue boat is powered by two 225-horsepower outboard engines and can travel at 51 miles per hour in 4-foot waves. It weighs 9,250 pounds, according to E-4 Petty Officer John Adams. The boat can travel 10 miles into the Gulf of Mexico. Larger ships in the Coast Guard fleet can go out much farther.

He said the boat will soon be replaced by a 29-foot long version. He said the boat performs coastal security work for the Crystal River Energy Complex and also does search and rescues. It handles about 100-125 cases annually.

American Cancer Society Relay For Life of The Tri Counties

The countdown is on for the 'Relay For Life' of The Tri Counties event being held on May 2, 2014, 6:00 p.m., at the Gilchrist County Agricultural Complex (north of Trenton on Hwy 129). One Community, One Mission, One Fight! The power of Relay allows a community to grieve for those lost to cancer and to celebrate those who have survived. For the newly diagnosed, Relay offers an opportunity to meet others who have survived the same type of cancer. For the cancer patient in treatment, Relay offers the opportunity to share experiences with others. For the long-term survivor, Relay brings recognition that the community cares about their struggle and closure to a trying time in life.

Another group finding hope in 'Relay For Life' are the caregivers. These individuals give their time, love, and support of friends, family, and neighbors who face cancer. At Relay, everyone understands the challenges and joys of being a caregiver. There is peace of mind in knowing that together we can face the challenges ahead.

There are lots of activities and fundraising events being held this month. Thanks for all the tri-county community support and work by many individuals. Mark your calendars and plan to attend as there will be lots of fun, activities and food. The next Team Meeting will be held April 15th at 6:00 PM at the Fanning Springs Community Bldg. located behind the Cadillac Motel in Fanning Springs. Let's get ready to Relay as we are "Hunting for a Cure".

distribution of these trophy bass and what it takes to sustain a trophy fishery. Biologists compare the findings to existing conservation programs such as habitat restoration efforts, aquatic vegetation management strategies, bass stocking histories and various regulation management approaches to determine what works best.

Between Jan. 1 and March 23, 2014, anglers entered 220 Lunker Club, 89 Trophy Club and three Hall of Fame bass. That is a three-fold increase over the same period last year. Part is due to simplified rules and more anglers being aware. Nevertheless, it is clear that Florida is producing and recycling vast numbers of trophy bass.

You never know when you may find a lunker on the end of your line. To be prepared, go to TrophyCatchFlorida.com now, register and check out the rules and prizing. Just registering makes you eligible for a random drawing in October for a Phoenix bass boat powered by Mercury and equipped with a Power-Pole. However, every time you have a TrophyCatch bass verified, your name is entered 10 more times. Moreover, every verified bass earns you not only bragging rights on the Web but also a customized certificate, decal and club shirt, plus at least a total of $100 in gift cards from Bass Pro Shops, Dick's Sporting Goods and/or Rapala. Bigger fish earn greater rewards: Anglers who have 13-pound-plus Hall of Fame entries also get a $500 fiberglass replica of their catch.

So far there are already four Hall of Fame bass this season. Joseph "Brooks" Morrell's 14 pound, 9 ounce-bass from Lake Kingsley in Clay County is the current season leader. If it holds up, he will earn the TrophyCatch Championship ring in October, which is donated by the American Outdoors Fund.

However, there is still a lot of fishing to be done before then, so get out there and see what you can catch.

Joan

You know a Wife has to put up with a lot from their husbands so here is a bunch of IOUs that I need to pay off.

- IOU for following me from job to job.
 - IOU for doing without the things you needed, so me and the kids could have things that we wanted and probably didn't need.
 - IOU for being the family doctor, patching me up when I got banged up and sitting up with the kids when they were sick or hurt.
 - IOU for being a good manager, stretching the little money we had to keep the bill collectors off our back.
 - IOU for being such a good cook, making big meals out of little at a time when we had little.
 - IOU for having to drive old junky cars that barely ran.
 - IOU for trying to keep me looking nice, washing my dirty jeans that smelled of horses and cow crap.
 - IOU for buying boots, hats, etc. for me and doing without shoes or clothes you wanted and needed.
 - IOU for keeping house for a bunch of people who didn't pick up clothes or wipe their feet.
 - IOU for putting up with dogs in the house, even cows a couple times.
 - IOU for being the kind, thoughtful person you are, always thinking of others first.
 - IOU for all the Christmas and Thanksgiving dinners you fixed, working late at night so everyone could enjoy the holiday.
 - IOU for looking after Mom and Dad when they needed someone.
- I will never have enough money to pay these IOUs; all I have is four little words -
