County: Fireworks displays still on

CHIPLEY — Local burn bans won't put a damper on upcoming fireworks displays by local municipalities. That was one of the announcements given by Interim County Manager Steve Joyner during the Washington County Board of County Commissioners' regularly scheduled meeting on June 27.

"There will be local fire departments on hand at the public functions," Joyner said. "Though a local ban on fireworks hasn't been issued, I would still like to strongly urge everyone to be careful while operating fireworks."

As of now, a burn ban has been put in place and will remain active until July 17.

Commissioner Joel Pate reminded everyone that Commissioner Charles Brock's grandson, Karsten Whitson, would be pitching for the Florida Gators as they go on to the College World Series.

Commissioner Todd Abbott said he had a concern with the meetings being available to everyone.

"More people are attending our morning meetings than at night," Abbott said. "It's also costing the county more money to have evening meetings because of the employees that have to attend."

Brock made a motion to move the meetings back to 9 a.m. with an amendment that they remain at the Washington County Annex starting in August, which was approved.

The next county workshop will be at 5 p.m. July 18 in Ebro.

Commissioner Donnie Strickland said Sunny Hills has had an issue for several months about a sign on county property, being run by the Civic Association, that doesn't allow for announcements by anyone outside of the board to be posted.

"It's a community board; therefore it should be able to be used for the community," Pate said.

Abbott added, "It's on county property. It's OK if one organization monitors what's being put up to avoid profanity and negativity, but everyone in that community has the right to post on that board."

Fire Chief Al Gothard said the Sunny Hills Fire Department tried to get an announcement placed on the community board about the new fire department's grand opening.

55TH ANNUAL WATERMELON FESTIVAL

Thousands turn out for festival

THE CELEBRATION CONTINUES

Thousands participated in this year's 55th Annual Watermelon Festival. The event, a staple in the summer calendar of the area, featured a country music concert kickoff, parade, antique car show and arts and craft show among several fundraising events for local organizations.

Judge Colby Peel, festival chairman, said the concert alone drew more than 3,000 people to Pal's Park in Chipley. The downtown parade and events saw at least that many again.

Based on the work of the festival committee, all events at the Watermelon Festival were free to the public. In addition to the opening concert on Friday and the parade, antique car show and arts and crafts show on Saturday, free concerts Saturday featured Big Bend Bluegrass and Wilson Fairchild. A Saturday ceremony recognized the watermelon queens.

Friday night was described as "the perfect evening" for an outdoor concert. A cooling rain shower swept the area some time before the concert began.

"And there was the aroma of fresh cut watermelon in the air."

For a while, it appeared the parade along Main St. in downtown Chipley might be delayed by a stopped freight train.

"I've been coming to this parade all my life — at least 45 years," said Belinda Holman. "This is the first time I've seen anything like this."

Luckily, the train moved just in time.

Organizers said a large number of runners participated in this year's 5K race. They estimated the number as more than 135. The winner of the race was Jay resident Matt Dobson.

FWC focuses on boating safety, fishing regs

Staff report

Ten wildlife officers and two lieutenants met recently at the Pensacola office, then divided into five groups as part of a special detail targeting boating safety, federal and state fisheries violations. The effort yielded a number of warning and citations in this area, according to a release from the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC).

The detail was organized by Officer David Jernigan. The teams of officers positioned at 12 boat ramps in area counties. During the detail, officers inspected 76 vessels, checked 187 users and issued two boating safety infractions, 14 boating safety written warnings and six resource written warnings.

Officers received numerous complaints recently regarding boating safety and alcohol-related issues on Holmes Creek near Cypress Springs in Washington County. During the last two weekends, Lt. Hampton Yates and officers Kathy Jackson, Lane Kinney, Warren Walsingham and Larry Morris focused on the area at different times. The officers issued several dozen warnings and citations for boating safety violations and three citations for littering on the creek. Jackson cited an individual who was not wearing a personal flotation device while operating a kayak. His wife and 10-month-old baby were also onboard. After issuing a warning to another subject, Walsingham learned the individual had provided a false name. Walsingham arrested the subject and charged him with resisting an officer by providing a false name and issued a safety equipment citation.

Nonprofit 'An Angel's Haven' to teach performing arts

Staff report

A new nonprofit organization is being established to educate children in the performing arts.

The motto of An Angel's Haven is "Where children's dreams become their reality."

The organization's mission is to educate, support and guide children in the performing arts. An Angel's Haven will offer children an opportunity to learn and excel in drama, modeling, music, dance, drawing, photography and creative writing. The staff at An Angel's Haven believe there is so much life, hope and opportunity running in and out of our homes, schools and churches on a daily basis, yet studies show that young people from all communities, backgrounds and walks of life are often robbed of the life, hope and opportunities their talents offer them.

Part of the reason has to do with expectations on the part of our young people themselves, with difficulties that many of our youth have adjusting to the behavioral norms of the world that surround them. Other reasons are the lack of guidance, motivation, love and support.

"These are our children. If we don't give them the love and attention they need, someone else will — the street," organizers said.

"At An Angel's Haven, we will address these issues and others in our offered programs. The intent of the organization is to assist the children in maximizing his or her potential with the gift that God has bestowed upon them by

Robinson new Commissioner of Education

TAMPA (AP) — Virginia's current education secretary, Gerard Robinson, has been named Florida's new education commissioner.

The five finalists for Florida's top education post spoke with their prospective employers June 20 during interviews in which each one endorsed openness, collaboration, communication and achievement.

The six members of the State Board of Education conducted the interviews in the Hillsborough Grand Ballroom at the Tampa Airport Marriott, allowing each candidate up to an hour to answer questions and make the case for his or her selection as Commissioner of Education. None took the entire time allotment, and all enjoyed cordial exchanges about their qualifications, goals and management styles.

First up was Stacia A. Smith, an Ohio educator who earned her bachelor's degree at the University of Florida.

"I embrace change, and I communicate well with legislators, parents and teachers," she said. Her plan for Florida's schools would be to, "stay the course, with revision and refocus. Everything depends on data. We have to compare the data to our strategic plan. A leader must pull people into the same vision and plan."

When asked what her critics might say of her, she replied, "I ask questions, and I don't always accept the status quo."

Perhaps the most controversial candidate was former New Jersey Commissioner Bret Schundler, who was fired by Gov. Chris Christie last August because of an improperly completed grant application that cost the state some $400 million in federal aid. Schundler, a Republican who was elected three times as mayor of heavily Democratic Jersey City, said some critical data was omitted from the application. He relied on a consultant to fill in the form, "but it was my mistake, and I'll never make that error again."

His strengths, he said, include his ability to bring different interests together to encourage improvement in the schools. It's important to address their concerns, keep them informed and involve them in decisions. He said he believes troubled schools can be turned around with "accountable leadership."

Florida native Loretta Costin, now the state's Career and Adult Education Chancellor, emphasized her own schooling and long service in her home state's educational system. She mentioned her success in managing the state's vocational rehabilitation programs, and she offered strong support for continued expansion of apprenticeships as well as post-secondary and pre-kindergarten programs. Her main fault?

"I'm impatient," she replied. "I have high expectations for myself and those I work with."

Thomas P. Jandris called himself "the hybrid candidate," because of his experience as an entrepreneur, educator, consultant and political advisor. Currently the vice president and dean of the College of Graduate Programs at Chicago's Concordia University, Jandris expressed an interest in improving Florida's data systems for analysis and accountability in the system. His worst weakness, he said, is "my desire to move fast, to get the work done. Some are left in the dust. I tend to take on too much."

The last interview went to Robinson. From a working-class Los Angeles upbringing to a master's degree in education from Harvard, Robinson told the board, "I don't have a career. I have a calling." A strong supporter of school choice, he said it is a priority to find common ground with various groups and to listen to their concerns before making a decision. His style, he said, is "to lead without running over" people. He said he believes in a variety of public-private partnerships to help solve problems in supporting and improving schools. "Always look, listen and learn," he added.

COUNTY from page A1

"We got a nasty letter back saying it was absurd that we even asked," Gothard said.

The BOCC approved to have a letter sent by County Attorney Jeff Goodman to have the board removed by a certain time or the county would have it removed for them.

The board approved of the resignation of Lt. Comm. Kenneth Gainer at the airport and approved of Curtis Snell replacing him.

The board approved of Sal Zurica as the newest member of the Value Adjustment Board.

The board also approved of the Consent Agenda, which includes adopting minutes from May 9, 16 and 26 board meetings; for the Clerk of Court to pay vouchers for May 2011 in the amount of $1,724,600.60; to adopt a resolution acknowledging that the counties and cities approved of a joint effort to adopt the Washington County Local Mitigation Strategy (LMS); 2012 State Emergency Management Preparedness Assistance Base Grant Contract and Annual Scope of Work; 2012 Federal Emergency Management Performance Grant Agreement and Scope of Work; Lease Agreement between Washington County Board of County Commissioners and Habilitative Services of North Florida's Healthy Families Program; Single Lot Subdivision Exception and Variance for Minimum Lot Area Requirement - Richard Howell and Rhonda D. Kirk; Rural Works Program, Bob Baronti, Jr. AICP, West Florida Regional Planning Council, Senior Planner/TPO Coordinator; and Chipola Regional Workforce Development Board Re-Appointment of members Gloria Potts and Zena Corbin.

Pause to remember a sacrifice that counts

Stop. In the midst of drought, unemployment, drooping prices or whatever is your most pressing, worrisome problem of the moment, it's time to pause and reflect on the greatness that is America and your neighbors.

Stop. As the author Isaac Singer wrote, "good news will stay and bad news will refuse to go away."

My Dad, who was one Iwo Jima and had destroyers shot out from under him and his platoon-mates during World War II, made it a point to pause.

Next Monday on July 4 we should all stop. Stop crabbing about America today – the president or Congress or governor or Legislature. Refuse to worry about greatness lost or power past.

Plan instead what you like best about family and community. Celebrate what is best about America. Cook the steaks (or hot dogs or burgers) on the grill or whatever speaks to you about summer, childhood, relaxation.

The good will wait and the bad will, too, while we pause to celebrate.

We celebrate that 235 years ago most of the colonists on this continent decided that they would join as equals to fight social, political and class tyranny, laying their liberty and what little wealth they had on the line to make a new nation, as Abraham Lincoln said, "conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal."

We celebrate that the fight has been rejoined by Americans again and again over those two-plus centuries.

Faced with the pressures of today, we may debate the intelligence of "America as policeman of the world," but even today we do not debate that freedom is an in-born right of all humankind.

Soon, like the Doughboys before them, the GIs of WWII and Korea all will have gone to their reward. We need to pause to thank those that remain for giving us a modern-day example of selfless patriotism. And even now the numbers of once-reviled and ignored veterans of Vietnam are beginning to shrink.

Yes, we need to pause for us and our country this year. In the midst of the worst financial struggle since the Great Depression, we owe it to ourselves and our heritage to stop. Praise God and hold on, planning for better days.

For at the end of it all, what we share as the American experience is what all people need: hope.

From this hope our strength and goodness have sprung for 235 years.

Stop. Hope.

Voter suppression in Florida

By Dr. Robert Watson
Special to the News

America's journey to voting rights for all was long and bloody. When the nation was founded, not everyone was able to vote on account of religious clauses and property requirements that limited full enfranchisement.

By the 1850s provisions requiring citizens to own property and pay taxes in order to vote were eliminated. Not long after the end of the Civil War black men won the right to vote with the 15th Amendment, while women would have to wait another half-century until the 19th Amendment in 1920 assured their right to vote.

Along the way, southern states like

Florida used an array of devious mechanisms to deny voting rights to certain groups. This included literacy tests, grandfather clauses, poll taxes, "whites only" primaries, and outright intimidation.

During the 1960s, the nation moved closer to becoming a representative democracy. The 24th Amendment in 1964 outlawed underhanded efforts to limit voting and the 1965 Voting Rights Act assured the right to vote to all citizens. Subsequent years saw the voting age lowered to 18 and efforts to promote voter registration.

It has been two centuries of difficult progress but America is right to be proud of its political maturation; which is why Floridians should be up in arms over the recent actions of Governor Rick Scott and the State Legislature to weaken the integrity of the state's election system.

After long opposing election reform, Scott and the Republican leadership, fresh off impressive victories in the 2010 election that gave them full control of the state, suddenly found the issue. The problem is that their version of "reform" is anything but.

Their plan by Reps. Dennis Baxley and W. Keith Perry makes it more difficult for Floridians who move prior to the election to vote on Election Day and for independent groups to register voters. These groups could face fines if they do not submit voter forms within an impossibly brief 48 hours. Even though Florida's early voting system has been praised as a positive new reform, the plan cuts early voting from 14 to 8 days

For all Scott's free market rhetoric, he has ended up promoting a more monopolistic political system and is even allowing the Secretary of State to impose written opinions and guidelines on local supervisors of elections, including those who are elected. This is another power grab at the expense of local voters.

What the "reforms" do not do is address any real problem: It does nothing to improve voting technology; assure better designed ballots; reform ballot access; limit the impact of outside money; and improve voter education and turnout. The net result will be lower voting rates and an increased cost to local election offices. Not surprisingly, every non-partisan election group in the country opposes Florida's new plan.

It is especially sad that this is happening in Florida because of the state's recent struggles with elections. It is also ironic that Rick Scott came to power (without a majority of the vote) with supporters calling for reform. He and his backers dumped tea on issues regarding government spending, at times even labeling it "tyranny". Yet, they are silent over voter suppression.

Robert Watson, Ph.D. is Professor and Coordinator of American Studies at Lynn University; Yury Konnikov is President of the Florida Initiative for Electoral Reform.

Jenny Wells started life late in 1916

When a baby girl was born into the household of James Thomas Wells and Hannah Malinda Brock Wells on Dec. 9, 1916, it was the arrival of their sixth child and an absence of seven years since the stork had last visited this pioneer Washington County family.

To commemorate the event, this young lady was loaded down with names. She became Virginia Annie Jane Wells, in honor of her mother's oldest sister, Annie Virginia Brock Anderson, and the maternal grandmother, Jane Yates Brock. She was immediately called "Jenny," a name she carried throughout life.

Jenny's oldest brother, William Perry Wells, married the year his baby sister was born. Other brothers John Alex Wells married in 1920, Hugh in 1925 and Josh in 1926. Her only sister, Lela Aseneth Wells Harris, seven years her senior, married in 1929, leaving Jenny as the only child in the home for five years before graduating from Holmes County High School in 1934 and marrying James Arthur Hinson in May of that year.

Getting married was not exactly in the ambitious plans the parents had for their daughter. She was the only one in her family to complete high school and one of the few grandchildren of the Thomas Jefferson Brock, the family patriarch, to accomplish this achievement. Her parents envisioned that, somehow and someday, their daughter would find a way to enter college, receive a degree and pursue her already manifested talents in homemaking through her membership in the 4-H Club and from caring for her ailing mother, Hannah, who was already experiencing failing health.

The "prattler" vividly remembers aunt Jenny's ability to make unusual trinkets, obviously learned in her 4-H endeavors. One such item was taking a discarded 78 rpm phonograph record, applying heat and shaping the disc into a decorative bowl to adorn some of the finer pieces of furniture in the somewhat modest home where the young lady was reared.

Another innovative project her early years was to whitewash the bottom portions of trees in the yard of a family home giving them face lift from the otherwise drab appearance. Your writer recalls that he, along with brother, Jim Wells, was called upon to assist in this project where our job was to remove the masses of locust shells that had been deposited on the trees when the bug shed his covering in early springtime.

way of education, gift development training, career guidance, love and total support."

The staff at An Angel's Haven are professionals in their chosen field. Guidance counselors, instructors, educators, spiritual advisors and other supporters have agreed to volunteer their efforts to the success of the organization.

The organization also will implement a program component based on the big brother, big sister concept, composed of accomplished young men and women who are positive figures in their community.

"Here, at An Angel's Haven, we strongly believe that we are all created by God and afforded the necessary gifts and talents to excel to the success of our created purpose," organizers said in a prepared release. "This would include our physically challenged children who wish to confront the challenges of their chosen careers. Here, we will meet their needs and give them love and tools they need to succeed.

"It is anticipated by the founder that after the initial startup funding, the organization will have established and annual funding support that will allow the organization to continue for many years to come. Measurable results of the program will include a strong outreach campaign and an overall recruitment effort gendered toward offering our Angels an opportunity to be educated in one or several of our offered programs. Salvation for many of these children are in the hearts and actions of those who share their pain, and care enough to extend a helping hand, weather by volunteering time, in-house contributions, donations or financial support."

Fireworks maker urges caution

Special to The News

As Floridians plan their patriotic celebrations this summer, experts urge consumers to consider safety this Independence Day. And remember that many jurisdictions, such as Chipley, are restricting firework use.

"Fireworks, sparklers and novelties are integral to any Fourth of July celebration, and Americans enjoy the tradition of lighting them to make the festivities brighter," said Tommy Glasgow, president of TNT Fireworks East, the largest distributor of consumer fireworks and sparklers in the United States.

Nationally, fireworks consumption increased 635 percent between 1976 and 2008 (29.0 million pounds versus 213.2 million pounds respectively), while fireworks-related injuries decreased dramatically from 38.3 injuries to 3.3 injuries per 100,000 pounds of fireworks during that same time period, according to the most recent data available from the American Pyrotechnics Association.

John Conkling, a nationally renowned fireworks expert and spokesman for the APA, attributes the steep decline in injuries over the years to the fireworks industry's consumer safety and education initiatives during the last three decades.

Despite the decline in injuries, however, Conkling said consumers should resolve to use only devices permitted by state law while adhering to safety warnings and instructions that appear on product packaging.

"For decades, fireworks, sparklers and novelties have enhanced countless celebrations. To continue the downward trend in fireworks-related injuries, though, consumers must prioritize safety and have a general understanding of how these devices function," Conkling said. "Following a few simple guidelines — such as only using fireworks, sparklers and novelties outdoors in clear areas away from buildings and dry grass and always keeping a bucket of water on hand for emergencies — will help people stay safe."

While consumers consider which products will add the most sparkle to their Fourth of July celebrations, Conkling recommended they check the credibility of the distributor to make sure its products are reliable and come from a credible source.

"Not all fireworks, sparklers and novelties are the same," Conkling said, "and consumers should purchase only legal products that are distributed by a trusted, established company, like TNT Fireworks, that puts people and safety above all else."

Here are a few fireworks, sparklers and novelties safety tips to consider this Fourth of July:

Adult supervision: Adults should always be present when fireworks, sparklers and novelties are being lit or handled. Never allow young children to light or handle them.

Look for labels, read instructions: Instructions and warnings are required by law. Check the credibility of the distributor to make sure their fireworks, sparklers and novelties are reliable, legal and that they come from a licensed source.

Stay alert: Never mix alcohol and fireworks, sparklers and novelties.

Take precautions: Always keep a hose and a bucket of water nearby in case of emergencies.

Outdoors only: Use fireworks, sparklers and novelties outdoors, only in clear areas, away from houses, buildings and dry grass. Be sure to use them only on flat hard surfaces.

Let sleeping sparklers lie: Don't try to relight fireworks, sparklers and novelties that don't ignite. Wait 15 to 20 minutes, then douse and soak them with water and throw them away.

Protect your pets: Animals are often frightened by the sounds of fireworks, sparklers and novelties. To protect your "best friends," keep them indoors, away from the loud noise and secure.

Keep clear: Never hold a lit firework or novelty in your hand. Keep as far from the firework or sparkler as possible when lighting.

One at a time: Light only one firework, sparkler or novelty item at a time.

Obey all laws: Please obey Florida state laws regarding the use of fireworks, sparklers and novelties.

BP issues plan to settle lawsuits

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A BP PLC contractor has agreed to pay the British oil giant $75 million to settle all potential claims between the companies over last year's deadly rig explosion and the massive oil spill it spawned in the Gulf of Mexico.

In exchange for the payment, BP has agreed to cover Weatherford U.S. LP for compensatory claims related to the disaster, including those over environmental damage and economic losses. Civil and criminal fines and penalties and claims for punitive damages aren't covered by the indemnity agreement.

BP said in a June 20 announcement that it will apply the money to the $20 billion fund it created to compensate individuals and businesses after the Deepwater Horizon rig exploded, killing 11 workers.

Weatherford, a Swiss-based oil-field service company, manufactured the float collar used in BP's blown-out well. The device was designed to help contain the cement at the bottom of the well.

Weatherford isn't the first company to settle out of court with BP. MOEX Offshore 2007 LLC, one of BP's minority partners on the project, agreed last month to pay BP $1 billion to settle all claims between them.

"This settlement allows BP and Weatherford to put our legal issues behind us and move forward together in strengthening processes and procedures, safety and best practices in offshore drilling," BP America Chairman and President Lamar McKay said in a statement.

BP said the two companies agree with a presidential commission's conclusion that the disaster "was the product of complex causes involving multiple parties." Weatherford said the companies have agreed to work with each other to improve the safety of offshore drilling.

"We are extremely pleased to have reached an amicable resolution with BP, a valued customer, that gives our shareholders finality with respect to the vast majority of any potential exposure Weatherford might have from last year's incident in the Gulf," Weatherford president and CEO Bernard J. Duroc-Danner said in a statement.

Weatherford said its insurance policies will cover the entire $75 million payment.

Hooked on Outdoors

Two men were fishing 25 miles off Delray Beach when they experienced engine trouble, but they were able to contact a towing company. When it showed up, it was four hours later and the driver of the boat sent to tow the fishermen back in hooked his boat to theirs and proceeded to shore.

It was dark and the men couldn't see land, so they didn't worry too much about the trip home. They proceeded to relax and let the towing company do the work. They might not have been able to see the lights on shore, but they could see the stars and it seemed they were seeing different stars as the night went on. As it turned out, the boat towing these two fishermen was going in circles.

The operator of the tow boat confessed he must have had a little too much to drink. The men got aboard his boat, which by now had traveled many miles and run out of gas.

It was calm enough for the men to get back alongside their own boat, from which they retrieved enough gas to get the tow boat back in action. Somehow the stranded fishermen got their own engine running again and switched places with the tow boat and started pulling it back to shore.

They thought it all was going a little slow, so they cut the tow boat loose along with the drunk captain. They called the towing company informing it of the situation and came in on their own.

Another tow boat came to help the first one, and the FWC got in on the act by arresting the drunken captain, who said he also was on prescription drugs. The fishermen, after cooling down, had a pretty good story to tell their grandchildren.

Sturgeon: I mentioned the sturgeon jumping on the Choctawhatchee River and I went to Cedar Tree landing last weekend and saw and videoed several leaping clear of the water. It is thought that the Suwannee River has about four times as many sturgeon as the Choctawhatchee, and the incidents of collisions with boats supports that contention.

On June 19, a woman was hit in the head by a sturgeon and knocked into the boat's windshield, breaking her jaw. On June 20, a man and his girlfriend were riding in the river when a sturgeon jumped and hit the man on the top of his head, cutting him. He bled quite profusely, and was lucky his girlfriend was a nurse. She administered first aid. The next day a sturgeon jumped into a boat and caused more than $4,000 in damage.

Surf fishing offers its share of fun

By Pat Kelly
Florida Freedom Newspapers

PANAMA CITY BEACH — Kerry Stroud said he's not trying to chase anyone away from pier fishing, but surf fishing can be another enjoyable way to wet a line. Stroud, currently the supervisor at the city's Russell-Fields Pier, recalled recently how he and his buddies would ride along the beachfront looking for a cut in the sand bar, the best place to drive in a sand spike and set up shop.

"That's where the fish are going to be, where the fish are being washed in and out through the cuts," he said.

From just west of Philips Inlet east to St. Andrews State Park, with many spots in between, including both sides of the city or county pier or along Bid-A-Wee Beach, surf fishing can be another alternative for anglers who don't have access to a boat.

"What a lot of people do is get up early, set down some sand spikes and then sit back in a little ol' easy chair," Stroud said. "Mexico Beach is also terrific." Sand spikes can be pieces of PVC pipe used to hold a fishing pole in the sand.

Both Stroud and Justin Hamilton, an employee at Half Hitch Tackle in Panama City Beach, said the best time for surf fishing is early in the morning or late in the evening, when the water is cooler and the beach is not crowded.

The best time of the year is spring and fall, Hamilton said, when there is a good chance you'll catch a mess of pompano or whiting, or maybe some redfish. During the summer, look for ladyfish or Spanish mackerel, he said.

In addition, "blues will sometimes come in close," Stroud said.

The best type of equipment is a pompano rig, Hamilton said, with the weather and type of surf determining the weights. Both men said the best bait to use would be shrimp, squid or cut-up fish. For a school of blues, a lure might be preferred.

Pier surfing may be easier, Hamilton said, but surf fishing can have its own unique enjoyments.

With boat fishing, the technology used to find the fish can give you an advantage. Surf fishermen must study the tides, surf and weather conditions to find their fish and must know the types of fish and the best times of year.

There is something special about standing in or near the edge of the water, and then depending on instinct and a fine-tuned sense of the water, surf and sand. Surf fishermen can also employ a two-handed casting method that employs a greater use of the body and legs in order to get the bait out to where the fish are waiting, experts say.

"A lot of people will go to the second sand bar," Hamilton said, adding that Half Hitch Tackle patrons often ask about surf fishing, and "we have everything they will ever need."

Stroud said a Gulf beach angler doesn't need the kind of big, heavy rig that might be needed in Atlantic surf, and in the summer the trick is to go "really early" because the heat and sun will drive the fish to deeper water.

Be sure you have the proper fishing license, he said, even if you are not in a boat, but just standing or sitting on the beach and testing your skill against the surf.

Scallop season opens with promise

By Tim Croft
Florida Freedom Newspapers

Bay scallop harvest season should be much like last year in St. Joseph's Bay — just 20 days longer. That's what researchers with the Florida Marine Research Institute have determined after their annual survey of Florida bay scallop populations.

"St. Joseph's Bay should be about like last year, maybe up a little bit," said Steve Geiger with the Florida Marine Research Institute in St. Petersburg.

Scallop harvest season began June 25, one week before the typical July 1 start, and will end Sept. 25, about 15 days later than the usual Sept. 10 end of harvest season.

Surveys taken in recent weeks show the St. Joseph's Bay scallop population holding fairly steady over previous seasons.

Each spring, researchers survey the bay by setting out 20 300-meter transect lines throughout the bay and then counting the number of scallops along each transect line.

The average of scallops found per station this year was 155, up slightly from the 138 average per transect line in 2010.

The highest station average was 1,000, down from about 1,200 last year, and Geiger said researchers had five transect line that yielded zero scallops; last year there was one station with no scallops.

As for the longer season, Geiger said there are concerns, but the expansion of the harvest season is so unique there is no data to compare.

"It is a concern, instead of one week longer like last year this year the season is three weeks longer, 20 days longer," Geiger said.

In an effort to gather data on this year's harvest, the FWC is asking harvesters to go online to the commission website and fill out a 10-question survey pertaining to where they found scallops, what size were the scallops, etc.

The survey can be found at <http://svy.mk/bayscallops>. Participants can also email BayScallops@MyFWC.com to ask questions or send additional information.

The key for this year, Geiger said, is to only harvest scallops of at least 1.5-2.0 inches in diameter or larger.

There is a daily limit of two gallons of whole bay scallops in the shell or one pint of bay scallop meat per person.

In addition, no more than 10 gallons of whole bay scallops in the shell or one-half gallon of bay scallop meat may be possessed aboard any vessel at any time. Folks are allowed to harvest bay scallops only by hand or with a landing or dip net.

Bay scallops may not be harvested for commercial purposes.

Geiger also emphasized that bag limits are daily limits; it is illegal to take a limit of scallops in the morning and return later in the day and collect another limit of scallops.

Unless otherwise exempt, a regular Florida saltwater fishing license is required when using a boat to harvest scallops. If folks wade from shore, a regular Florida saltwater fishing license or a free resident shore-based license is needed.

Whitson tapped to pitch Game 2 of CWS

Florida Freedom Newspapers

Editor's Note: At press time, Florida pitcher and Chipley native Karsten Whitson was set to pitch against the South Carolina Gamecocks in the Game 2 of the College World Series championship on Tuesday night. This article originally ran in the Panama City News Herald on June 18.

OMAHA, Neb. — Many of the attributes Karsten Whitson brings to bear as a pitcher were honed far away from the baseball field.

The poise and competitiveness that have served the Florida Gator pitcher well this year actually developed in some hard-fought ping-pong matches against his father, Kent, at their Chipley home.

"I guess even doing something as corny as ping-pong sounds, I get into it, and it keeps me on edge," Whitson said. "It helps with your hand-eye coordination, and it's a good little workout."

Kent Whitson brushed off a suggestion that the rivalry is a close one, if it even can be considered a rivalry in the first place.

"It's more like 99 to 1 in my favor," the elder Whitson said, noting the two enjoy competing on the golf course, too. "We're competitive, but we're not insane. We're competitive to the point where each of us wants to out-do the other."

"I'm starting to realize that the older he gets, the more full of it he gets, as well," Karsten retorted. "We've had some ping-pong battles in the past. We have an official-sized table at the house. When my mom (Melissa) goes out with Kyndall, my sister, to go shopping in Dothan or Panama (City), we'll play ping-pong for hours.

Florida's Karsten Whitson (22) celebrates with team after they beat Vanderbilt 5-0 in the championship game of the Southeastern Conference NCAA college baseball tournament at Regions Park on May 29 in Hoover, Ala.

"He's good. His best attribute is defense — I can never get anything by him. I hit bullets at him, and he gets to them. We're pretty competitive guys."

Whitson is 8-0 this year with a 2.43 ERA and a team-high 88 strikeouts in 92 2/3 innings pitched. Opposing batters are hitting just .233 against him.

Whitson, a freshman All-American who was selected ninth overall by the San Diego Padres in the Major League Baseball First-Year Player Draft last year, said he feels like his decision to turn down the Padres' $2.1 million offer has been validated. He said he's felt comfortable with the choice to play at Florida since the day he made it.

"It was my decision at the end of the day, and I knew it was something I had to live with," he said. "I had to make sure I was 100 percent committed to the decision I made, and I was.

(Going to Florida) has been anything and everything I could have imagined. Going to the World Series is surreal."

Florida was bounced quickly from the CWS last year after suffering losses in its first two games. Whitson said his teammates have cautioned him about getting caught up in the raucous atmosphere at TD Ameritrade Park, which replaced storied Rosenblatt Stadium as the home of the CWS. The new park, which cost $131 million to build, can seat as many as 35,000 spectators.

"You have to play within yourself and not play to the loudness of the stadium," Whitson said. "Just stay within myself. One of my greatest attributes on the mound is my poise."

Whitson's arsenal of pitches is considerable. He throws a two-seam fastball at 92-94 mph with heavy sink, a four-seam fastball at 95-97 he can elevate in the strike zone, a power slider at 84-87 and a developing change-up that is quickly becoming one of his favorite pitches.

"I love throwing it to guys; it keeps them off-balance," he said. "I'd rather strike them out with my change-up. A lot of people, especially at this level, are guys who have a good fastball, a good breaking ball. To have a good change-up and strike people out with that, it's knowing I got the guy with my fourth-best pitch."

With a bevy of pitches to choose from, Whitson said he had to transition away from a mentality of striking out everyone and instead using the defense behind him. It's common that pitchers with high strikeout totals often rack up high pitch counts in pursuit of those punchouts.

Florida has been cautious with Whitson all year, holding him to limited pitch counts.

"Being a pitcher, I'm a guy who loves to compete and wants to be out there as long as I can," Whitson said. "Coach (Kevin O'Sullivan) will say I've got 90 pitches today and that's all I'm going. I want to pitch the whole game if I'm able to do that, but that's not realistic. ... (Being efficient) gives me an opportunity to go deeper in the ballgame for the team. I think selfishly I want to pitch as much as I can, and I want to get the win. The longer I can pitch in games gives me a chance to help the team out."

Whitson isn't a finished product, of course. He's walked a team-high 26 batters, and he's uncorked 11 wild pitches. But he said his control has improved as the season has progressed.

"My first couple starts I was walking two guys a game," he said. "Halfway through, I went on a streak where I walked one guy in 20-some-odd innings, and then I didn't walk another for 20-some-odd innings again. ... Everything is really coming together at the right time. That's another reason I'm anxious to get out there and pitch."

"This is something I'll definitely remember the rest of my life," Karsten said. "I'll let it all soak in. At the end of the day I'm just a 19-year-old kid playing baseball. To see all this is definitely a dream come true."

Discover, improve your shooting abilities with these drills

By Tiger McKee
Special to The News

Accuracy is defined by the shot you are attempting to make. Firing from two yards away at the chest of a target can be done quickly, with a flash sight picture and prompt trigger press. As the distance increases or the size of the target decreases, a more precise sight alignment is required, and you must press the trigger smoother to ensure you don't disrupt the sight picture. Accuracy dictates the speed you can shoot and still place the rounds where they need to hit. If I can't predict a hit, then I don't press the trigger.

There are several drills that will help you discover and improve your abilities. I need to know what I'm capable of to know what I can and can't do in an actual confrontation. I also need to know what my limits are so I don't attempt something beyond my skill level. We are responsible for each shot we fire; overstepping the line with firearms can lead to bad consequences.

This first drill shows the effects of distance. Set up a target a couple of yards away. Target two is about six to eight yards away. Work various combinations on the targets, starting with body shots to the closest target then slowing down to hit the back target. (Shots should be within a 4- to 6-inch group regardless of distance.) Then you can start with the longest shots first, speeding up when you transition to the close target.

Work some headshots into the drills to really develop a feel for what an acceptable sight picture and trigger press is for surgical shots. Drills with three targets, all varying in size and distance, are even better. Just be sure to focus on hits, not speed. Only accuracy counts, and the speed will develop as a result of applying proper technique.

If it's not possible for you to set up targets at various distances, then you can use large and small targets on one backer. For example a 6-inch circle works well, and then below that have six small 2-inch circles in two columns or rows. Work various combinations, engaging the larger target as quickly as possible and getting black, and then slowing down for the small targets.

When working these type drills, always vary distances, size and shape of your targets. Short load your magazines so you have to reload at unexpected times. Dummy ammo will create malfunctions at various points. Basically mix it up so you don't ingrain any dangerous "range" habits. The key is to develop your skills, not learn how to fire one drill really fast, which is more like a trick than a skill and might not have application when it comes to actually fighting.

In a fight, your accuracy will be dictated by distance and size of the target. Your job is to learn what is necessary to insure that when the trigger is pressed the bullet goes where you need it. To perform at the level required practice is mandatory.

2 arrested on drug charges during party

By Cecilia Spears
Staff Writer

NICHOLAS SHAWN HOLMES

KAYLA JARIESE LONG

VERNON – Two suspected drug dealers were arrested when Washington County Sheriff's Office was investigating a party that was "getting out of control" at a residence near Pate Pond in Vernon on the evening of Saturday, June 25, according to the WCSO.

When they arrived, they found numerous teenagers with alcoholic beverages and after a subsequent search found two party attendees with 23 individually wrapped bags of marijuana.

The two arrested were Nicholas Shawn Holmes, 20, of Vernon and Kayla Jariese Long, 19, of Chipley, and both are being charged with felony possession of marijuana with intent to sell or distribute.

The sheriff's office also adds that "open house parties are not only a nuisance for neighboring residents, they are also against the law. One of the priorities for lawmakers during the most recent legislative session was to pass tougher penalties for adults who allow these types of parties."

A bill was recently passed that takes the second-degree misdemeanor on the first offense and added that it is now a first-degree misdemeanor on the second offense.

The violation of the house party laws include these adults that have control of the residence, know the underage members are using drugs or alcohol and fail to "take reasonable steps to prevent it."

According to the WCSO, jail time for a second-degree misdemeanor is a maximum of 60 days and for a first-degree misdemeanor it goes up to a year in jail and the fines increase from $500 for the lesser offense to $1,000 maximum for a first-degree misdemeanor.

The WCSO states that under the new Florida law it is also a first degree misdemeanor for the adult if a minor's consumption of alcohol or drugs at the party results in serious injury or death of someone.

This law officially goes into effect on July 1.

Until then, violation of house party laws will result in a second-degree misdemeanor.

Pet TALK

Looking for a special pet? How about a flock?

Special to Extra

Looking for a pet that does not need to be housebroken, groomed or trained? How about a flock of them?

If so, consider making the front or backyard a haven for wild birds. With very little effort, one can enjoy the sights and sounds of these feathered friends all year long.

The best way to attract birds to a yard is by providing plenty of food and water.

"Most commercial feeders will work fine as long as they are sturdy, easy to clean, and have adequate drainage," said Ian Tizard, director of the Schubot Exotic Bird Health Center at the College of Veterinary Medicine and Biomedical Sciences at Texas A&M University.

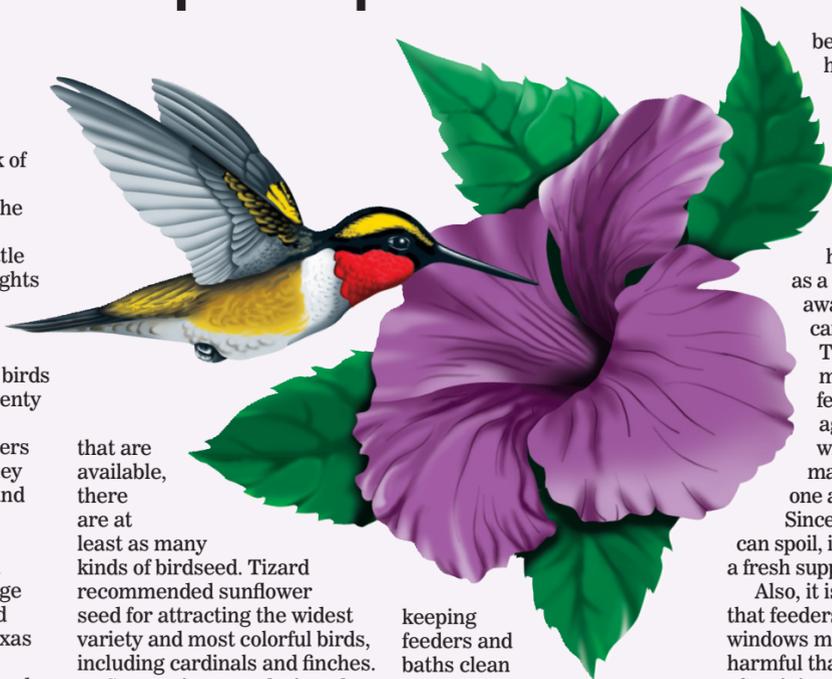

Tizard said where the feeder is placed is more important than what type of feeder it is.

"No bird wants to take the risk of getting ambushed. Feeders should be near enough to foliage that birds might use it to flee from predators," Tizard said.

However, birds will be wary of feeders and baths placed too close to bushes, because predators can easily spring from nearby foliage in a surprise attack.

"Birdhouses should be placed in a way that mimics the location of the birds' natural habitat," Tizard said.

For as many types of feeders that are available, there are at least as many kinds of birdseed. Tizard recommended sunflower seed for attracting the widest variety and most colorful birds, including cardinals and finches.

Some mixes are designed to attract only certain birds, so consult the package labeling for this information.

Keeping bird feeders, baths and houses clean is also crucial to keeping healthy, happy birds visiting the yard.

"Cleaning feeders and houses will keep harmful mold from growing in them. Wood feeders, which can be difficult to clean, are not usually recommended," Tizard said.

"Supplying bird feeders and baths causes more birds to congregate than would under normal circumstances," Tizard said. "For this reason, disease may spread more quickly, but keeping feeders and baths clean can minimize the spread of disease."

Tizard suggested using a solution of one part household bleach to two or three parts water for effectively cleaning feeders and baths. At the very least, they should be cleaned once a year, but they may require cleaning more often where exposure to the elements has fouled the seed and/or water. Birdhouses are usually vacated during the winter, so you'll want to clean them out then to prepare for spring's new tenants.

Hummingbirds require special considerations.

According to Tizard, the best way to attract hummingbirds is to design a garden full of colorful, fragrant flowers.

"It is OK to provide hummingbird feeders with homemade nectar as a supplement, but be aware that the males can be territorial," Tizard said. "Providing more than one feeder will ease the aggression associated with hummingbird males who will claim one as his own."

Since homemade nectar can spoil, it is important to keep a fresh supply in clean feeders.

Also, it is important to note that feeders placed too close to windows may actually be more harmful than helpful. Birds are often injured or killed flying into windows when the birds mistake the reflection in the glass for sky. You can reduce the chances of window injuries by placing stickers or other reflection-marring materials on your windows.

Silhouette bird stickers can often be purchased where birdseed is sold. These window stickers intimidate smaller birds, keeping them from flying into a window.

It is relatively inexpensive to create an environment that will attract wild birds. By simply seeing to their needs, a yard can become a playground that is literally for the birds.

Intercultural exchange seeks host families

Special to the Extra

Foreign high school students are scheduled to arrive soon for the academic semester and year homestay programs, and the sponsoring organization needs a few more local host families. The students are eagerly awaiting news of their new families.

According to Pacific Intercultural Exchange (P.I.E.) President John Doty, the students are all between the ages of 15 and 18, are English-speaking, have their own spending money, carry accident and health insurance and want to share their cultural experiences with American families. P.I.E. has programs to match almost every family's needs, ranging in length from one semester to a full academic year, where the students attend local public and private high schools. "At this critical time in our country's history, hosting an international teen is the best and purest form of public diplomacy the United States has," Doty said.

P.I.E. area representatives match students with host families by finding common interests and lifestyles through an in-home meeting. Prospective host families are able to review student applications and select the perfect match. As there are no "typical" host families, P.I.E. can fit a student into just about any situation, whether it is a single parent, a childless couple, a retired couple or a large family.

Families who host for P.I.E. are also eligible to claim a monthly charitable contribution deduction on their itemized tax returns for each month they host a sponsored student.

P.I.E. is a nonprofit educational organization that has sponsored more than 25,000 students from 45 countries since its founding in 1975. The organization is designated by the U.S. Department of State and is listed by the Council on Standards for International Educational Travel (CSIET), certifying that the organization complies with the standards set forth in CSIET's Standards for International Educational Travel Programs.

Families interested in learning more about student exchange or arranging for a meeting with a community representative may call P.I.E. toll-free at 866-546-1402.

"The Place To Shop, If Money Matters!"

If not Heaven, I want to live in America

The Lord has blessed me in so many different ways, I really can't count them. I say that because as I am writing today, I can begin to remember the many different places that I have been able to celebrate the birthday of this great land in which we live, America. Other than to be in Heaven with my Lord, I would not want to live in any other land. Even with all the social problems, political corruption and a media system that is very biased and actually very corrupt in its reporting, I still believe we live in one of the greatest countries on the face of this beautiful earth.

Just to name a few of the places from which I've been blessed to watch fireworks from while celebrating the birth of this nation, I have sat on the banks of Lake Michigan, the mountain side of the Great Smoky Mountains, the hillsides of Dalton, Ga., the banks of the beautiful Tennessee River, from the coast of the great Atlantic Ocean and the Gulf of Mexico, and such places as Disney World and Dollywood, and even in the United Kingdom of our mother country, England.

This year, again I'm excited, not only to be a spectator, as I was in the first time that I witnessed the fireworks in Bonifay some eight years ago. This year, as last year, I will be able to be involved in the "God and Country Celebration" sponsored by the Holmes County Ministerial Association. And this I can truly say: Of all the places that I have witnessed fireworks, Bonifay knows how to do fireworks and do them right! When you leave, you know you have seen fireworks at their very best.

And though it is the best firework display, bar none, there is so much more. The churches of Holmes and Washington county come together to make it an event you won't soon forget. On Sunday afternoon, this year on July 3, as we always celebrate the Sunday before or on the Fourth, not only will the skies light up in celebration for all to see for many many miles, celebrating how richly God has blessed this land and her people, there will be lots of free food, games for the kids and great entertainment. All because local churches joined by local businesses desire to share God's love and the salvation message, as our forefathers I believed envisioned when they sacrificed everything to bring their families to this great place.

Your eyes read that right: We are able to celebrate the blessings that the Lord has blessed us with in this great nation that day with awesome music, programs, food, games for the children and the "God and Country" presentation, which is given to the community by local churches and businesses, all without any cost to you, except your presence and appreciation, because of their love for Christ and you. (Oh, by the way, there will be donation boxes throughout the fair grounds, so if you feel so led, you can help offset some of the expense and feel as though you are part of making it all happen, which will be greatly appreciated, as we all watch your money go up in smoke.)

The gates open at the Bonifay Recreation Center at 6 p.m. Sunday, and the games, music and food are there as long as they last, with the fireworks beginning around 9 p.m. But you know what I think is the best part of this event? It's the people who are behind the scenes making it all happen. It's the local Ministerial Association, which is made up of many different churches of many different faiths, or denominations, coming together for our God and our country, as we should.

I know that most of those who will be represented there do not hold to the same theology that I do, and I'm sure they believe they are the ones who are right, as I believe I am. But we know we all have One person in common, Whom we love and desire to serve, and that is our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. And we also know it is because of Christians like us, who came before us, with His blessings upon them who have made this country the great country that it is.

We are also reminded of the time that John came to Jesus very upset, because someone who he did not know was basically preaching in the name of Jesus, and John came to Jesus desiring that He would shut him up. But Jesus said to John "Forbid him not: for he that is not against us is for us" (Luke 9:49-50 KJV). From these words of Christ is where I believe the local Ministerial Association gets its thrust. We desire that Satan and the evil that is out to destroy this world and the testimony of Christ know that there is a great force, though we go by many names, coming together in His name, not only once a year, but 365 days a year to lift up His name above all names.

God has truly blessed America! May America bless God, by returning to the God of our childhood and repenting of our sins.

Community celebration set for July 4

Special to Extra

Cypress Creek Community Church and the Orange Hill Volunteer Fire Department will present their annual Family Celebration and Fireworks Show at 5 p.m. Monday, July 4. There will be special activities for the whole family. The Drummond Family along with Steve White will join in our entertainment.

At 9 p.m., the fireworks show will begin. This promises to be one of the best fireworks shows in the entire area. The July 4 celebration and fireworks show will be at the Orange Hill Volunteer Fire Department, at the corner of Orange Hill Road and the Alford Highway.

Family Values

People often talk about the importance of family values, sometimes even suggesting that the family is deteriorating. It is perhaps true that the "traditional" family, composed of one man and one woman joined in marriage and having children, is not necessarily the norm nowadays. In fact, statistics indicate a significant increase in the number of single-parent families, blended families, and other permutations of the traditional family in our society today. But is this necessarily a "deterioration" of the family, or is the family structure merely changing to reflect the demands of modern life? If we look to the Bible for enlightenment here, we are unlikely to find any unambiguous help.

Firstly, the Bible itself illustrates an evolution in the concept of the family. In the Old Testament, we see many examples of polygamy, and kinship relations were certainly not what we think of them today. Who could marry each other and how people "got married" has changed considerably over the centuries. In the Bible, Jesus tells us that "whoever does the will of my Father in heaven is my brother, and sister, and mother." (Matthew 12:50). While it may be tempting to see this as signaling Jesus's disdain for the nuclear family, perhaps the more sensible interpretation is that Jesus is trying to extend the concept of the family so that it includes all of our fellow human beings, and that God must come before family. So, the next time we are tempted to judge someone who comes from a nontraditional family, we should consider that they are indeed our brother and sister.

So then, as we have opportunity, let us do good to all men...

Truth's package: plain and simple

Life is way too complicated. Consider:
"I owe, I owe. It's off to work I go."

Or the fact that 21 denominations (and several times that many churches) are listed in the local telephone book.

Or that we can't figure out how to fix the national debt.

Or on and on and on.
What's the common denominator in all this seeming confusion, searching and bill paying? You'll forgive me for pointing out that it's sin. Frankly, we're not satisfied with what we have (and what God has blessed us with).

Now, lest you think I'm judgmental, let me hasten to point out I have spent my entire life chasing a paycheck to get the money to pay the creditor. But my spending my life in that pursuit doesn't make it right.

Debt stands in the way of my readiness to do what God commands. For example, could I leave tomorrow for a mission?

"Just give me a little more time, Lord."

A couple of months ago when I came to town, off I went on my weeks-long journey to find a church. Nothing wrong with that, right? Well, right, as far as it goes. But in the perfect world God envisioned and the perfect church

Jesus called us to serve, there is no difference in beliefs that would cause us to have to worship separately.

God's truth is plain and simple. We've made it something totally different. For heaven's sake, we've even tried to hide God's truth from others!

The truth is our universe is not an accident. It is a complexity of laws and principals that only an All-knowing Creator could conceive. The truth is He wanted relationship with us, so created us in His likeness and gave us this place fitted for all our needs. The truth is that right away we wanted more and better than we had been given and sinned to get it, disobeying His instruction.

The truth is God must be just. That is why there must be a penalty for disobedience. Adam and Eve paid it. Indeed, every man and woman from then until now has paid it.

The truth is Jesus restored our ability to have relationship with the Creator through His payment of the ultimate sacrifice.

The truth is Jesus told us how to be Christians.

And all we, like sheep, have gone astray.

So, it is beyond time for seek within ourselves for plain truth and to simply attempt in awe to grasp the vast truth of God the Father, God the Son and God the Holy Spirit. And, then, obediently follow the call of truth.

Donations made to WHTC Foundation

Special to Extra

Zena and David Corbin, owners of Chipley Gun and Pawn Shop, recently presented a $1,500 check to the Washington-Holmes Technical Center Foundation, and Community South Credit Union contributed $1,000 to assist the foundation in reaching a short-term $6,500 goal of earning its matching grant funds from Consortium of Florida Education Foundations (CFEF). Each year, CFEF provides WHTC with a dollar-for-dollar match for funds donated by business partners. This year's CFEF matching grant allocation to the WHTC Foundation was $11,949.

At the foundation's directors and trustee meeting May 18, it was reported that the foundation was shy of meeting its matching grant funds by $6,500. The 25 foundation members present challenged one another to raise that money and more by June 29, the end of the grant year.

One of the first to step up to the plate was Zena Corbin, who has made substantial contributions to the foundation since 2005. This was Community South Credit Union's second contribution of the year. Five others, including Price Wilson, Pam Cates, Peoples South, Piggly Wiggly and Paula Waller gave $100 each. Raising $3,000 in less than one week has inspired the foundation members to do more for the foundation.

Sheila Sanders, one of the foundation directors and loan manager for Capital City Bank, a regular "big giver," has committed to a personal fundraising effort from area banks and doctors' offices. "These students need our help. They're trying to improve their lives, our workforce and our economy. It's hard enough to pay for their tuition, much less the gas they need to get to school," Sanders said.

The mission of the WHTC Foundation is to assist students in getting an education and training students to enter high-wage occupations. Scholarships for tuition and books from the WHTC Foundation are often the key to enabling many students to enroll in programs or complete their training.

Last year, the WHTC Foundation awarded 37 scholarships to new and continuing students, who were grateful for the financial assistance. One of the students from the architectural drafting program wrote, "I am honored to accept this scholarship. It is difficult for my family to afford even the smallest things while pursuing my education. This scholarship will go far in helping me finish. My children are very proud that their Mom got a scholarship, and the opportunity to provide that example to them means so much to me."

Anyone interested in supporting the Washington-Holmes Technical Center Foundation Inc. may call Stephanie Halley at 638-1180, ext. 303.

AN OPEN LETTER OF APOLOGY FROM THE ECONOMY I'm sorry. To state the obvious, it hasn't been pretty the last few years, especially for the job market. I'm aware of the anger, and I don't blame you. This whole thing got away from me. But I think it's time we made a fresh start. Here's what I propose: 1. If you have a job and you're happy with it, good for you. Keep it up. 2. If you're not happy in your job, it's time to rethink things. I'm not telling you to quit on the spot. But maybe there's a better job out there for you. 3. If you've taken a job that under normal circumstances you wouldn't have, my hat's off to you. You did what you had to do. But now maybe it's time to go back to doing what you do best. 4. If you don't have a job, again, I'm sorry. I know looking for a job can be, to put it nicely, challenging. But know this: it's not you, it's me. And if the recovery is here, I think you can lead the way. So to everyone who's been affected the last few years, which is pretty much everyone, I accept complete responsibility. But now the ball is in your court. You have permission to move on with your life. It's time to move forward, find a job you love and get back to work. Sincerely, The Economy
