CHIPLEY — The Chipley Police Department asks residents and local businesses to be on the lookout for bogus bills.

The department arrested three suspects for distributing counterfeit bills in the Chipley and surrounding areas Thursday, but warns the counterfeits could still be circulating.

According to the reports, police here have been investigating a case involving someone passing counterfeit bills to businesses in Chipley over the past two weeks.

"We have determined, fortunately, only two stores were victim to the fake money," said Police Chief Kevin Crews. "On March 19, we caught a break in the case and were able to stop a vehicle we felt was possibly involved in the passing of the fake money. As a result of the traffic stop, investigators with the Chipley Police Department were able to arrest three suspects who were allegedly passing the counterfeit money in the City of Chipley."

The suspects are also being investigated for counterfeiting by several other area law enforcement agencies, including the Bonifay Police Department, and the Holmes and Walton

A relieved but emotional Sheriff Bobby Haddock holds Baby Shannon just hours after the Washington County Sheriff's Office rescued her from am enclosed cedar box in 2009. Baby Shannon, pictured shortly after her rescue (at right), was characterized as "unusually quiet" during the ordeal, but is now a bubbly, energetic five-year old.

CHIPLEY — It's been nearly five years since the eyes of the nation were fixed on Chipley, watching as the search for 7-month old Shannon Dedrick unfolded.

The conclusion was a rare happy ending, with Washington County Sheriff Bobby Haddock reporting "Baby Shannon", as she became known worldwide, had been found.

"We are the proud papas of a baby girl," Haddock said in a national press conference. "There were a lot of grown men crying and shedding tears. Percentage-wise, we usually don't get this kind of ending."

But Baby Shannon's story had just begun.

Now living with a family member in a another state, she celebrated her fifth birthday while in Chipley Thursday, surrounded by her newly adoptive mother and the men and women who came to know her as their own. Law enforcement "family" who helped celebrate included Sheriff Haddock and Investigator Kenny Brock, who discovered Shannon hidden in a 2x3 locked cedar box in culmination of a search that took a total of four thousand man-hours and the involvement of numerous local, state and federal agencies.

Proposed farm co-op moves forward

By CAROL KENT

It's been less than a month since local resident and community activist Karen Schoen announced she was looking for farmers in Washington, Holmes, Jackson, and Walton counties to participate in a pilot program she hopes will change the face of local agriculture.

The multi-phase project, which would serve as a cooperative of local landowners, is meant to be an opportunity for residents to venture into aquaponics, a method of growing crops and fish together in a recirculating system.

Counties report Guardian ad Litem shortage

By CAROL KENT
638-0212 | @WCN_HCT
Ckent@chipleypaper.com

CHIPLEY – Judge Chris Patterson of the 14th Judicial Circuit praises volunteers with the Guardian ad Litem program as the ears and ears of the court – and the voice of the state's at risk children. However, Judge Patterson and 14th Judicial Circuit Director of GAL Recruiting and Training, Theresa Roberts, say a volunteer shortage can make the voices of Holmes and Washington counties' children more difficult to hear.

By law, every child under state supervision must have a guardian ad litem.

"Guardian ad Litem volunteers are the boots on the ground for the judge," said Roberts. "But (one person) can't possibly visit all 70 kids in Washington and Holmes counties."

"There is a tremendous need for volunteers in Holmes and Washington counties," agreed Judge Patterson. "They serve as the child's advocate and conduit for me in court. The parents have representation, the Department of Children and Families have representation, and the children need representation, too."

enthusiastically played with her birthday gifts, showing no signs of her ordeal.

Sheriff Haddock says there's no doubt of Shannon's resilience.

"The raw emotion we felt finding Shannon alive five years ago pales in comparison to the joy we experience watching this child grow and experience life with uninhibited hope," stated Sheriff Haddock. "Shannon is happy, thriving and taking on the world with the same feisty nature we saw all those years ago. There is a light in her eyes and that is our definition of success."

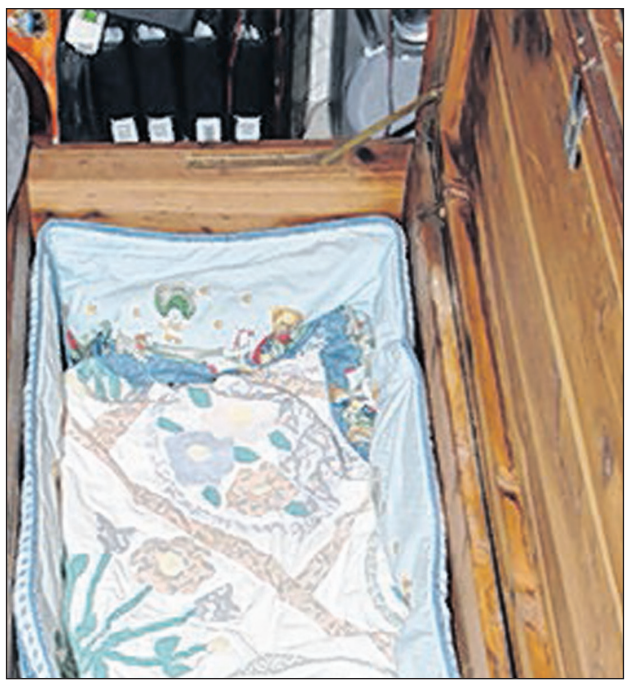
Like most girls her age, she enjoys playing with Barbies, watching movies starring the Disney® princesses and going to DisneyWorld, a past time her mother indulges every chance she gets.

Protecting Shannon's privacy remains a priority for her mother, especially with the national attention the case received. Shannon, who has a different name for public use, checks in with the 14th Judicial Circuit on an annual basis, making sure she gets a chance to see Sheriff Haddock each time.

While Shannon's nightmare has seemingly evolved into a fairytale, the villain in this real life story has been put away for a long time. Judge Allen Register sentenced Susan Baker to 25 years in prison in 2010, stating her actions were "bizarre and cruel". Authorities discovered Shannon at Baker's home in the closed small cedar chest, shoved underneath a bed. Baker reportedly stashed the baby in the box whenever investigators were near, using baking soda to mask the smell of Shannon's dirty diapers.

Baker, who is Shannon's step aunt, occasionally babysat her, and had been given the child by her mother, who reportedly agreed to give Baker full custody. The motives for her actions are still unclear.

"We may never know why she did it," Haddock told The News Thursday. "The important thing is she was sound safe and is happy and thriving today."



SPECIAL TO THE NEWS

Baby Shannon's step aunt, 50-year old Susan Baker of Chipley, would hide the child in this 2x3 box whenever investigators came near her home on Orange Hill Highway.

Schoen reports community response, especially from Washington County, has been so great that the National Association of Small Farmers (NASF) is having to expand the program and move forward with securing the distribution site before local interviews can begin.

"The news is great," said Schoen. "So far, over 100 potential farmers have signed a letter of interest with the NASF. Based on the level of interest, we have had to re-analyze our original numbers to make sure that everyone can be accommodated."

"In addition, NASF President Bob Malphurs has decided, based on the level of positive response, to procure the site for the distribution center before any interviews begin. This will make it easier to prepare for extensive growth." The site has been narrowed down to just a few properties, and a decision is expected within the next two weeks, after which, the interview and education process will begin.

"Our objective is to create business owners, not laborers," said Schoen.

To be eligible for this program, applicants must own or have lease rights to at least one acre of property and be a resident of the county in which the program is offered.

For more information, contact Schoen by calling (850) 397-4442 or by emailing kbschoen@bellsouth.net

County sheriff's offices.

Arrested were Kevin Andrew Kirk, 25, of DeFuniak Springs, Kevin Nicholas Redmon, 22, of Westville and Kittie C. Vickers, 27, of Ponce de Leon.

Kirk and Redmon are charged with passing counterfeit bills, and Vickers is charged with possession of methamphetamine.

"The bills passed in Chipley were $20 bills," said Crews. "If anyone suspects they were presented with counterfeit money please call the Chipley Police Department immediately at 638-6310.

of cash.

"We are still actively pursuing the suspect," said WCSO Public Information Officer Andrea Gainey.

Thomas is wanted on charges of Home Invasion, Burglary With Battery and Grand Theft.

The WCSO advise citizens not to approach the suspect if they spot him in the area. Instead, contact the WCSO at 638-6111 or anonymously through 638-TIPS (8477).

"They have that through the Guardian ad Litem volunteers," he added. "They're the ones who speak up for the child, and it's a great pleasure for me to serve with those who give so freely of their time for these children. They can tell you how rewarding this process is."

Ideally, there should be one volunteer per household in each county. Amy Griffin, Case Coordinator for Holmes and Washington counties, says the area needs at least ten more volunteers to alleviate the shortage.

To volunteer, candidates must take a 30-hour class and pass an application process.

"We require the children be seen at least once a month, but volunteers can go as often as they like," said Griffin. "We work around the volunteers' schedules, even ensuring they don't have to stay the entire day when subpoenaed for court."

The most recent swearing in of volunteers was held at the Guardian ad Litem office, located at 1352 South Blvd. in Chipley.

To volunteer, contact Griffin at 638-6043.

WCSO warns of phone scam

By CAROL KENT
638-0212 | @WCN_HCT
Ckent@chipleypaper.com

The Washington County Sheriff's Office warns area residents of a phoney phone call that "reeks of phishing" making its rounds in Washington County.

"Never give out your personal information, such as your social security or bank account numbers to anyone you don't know, no matter who they say they are," said WCSO Public Information Officer Andrea Gainey.

Gainey stated one local resident followed that advice recently when she received a phone call at her place of employment from someone claiming to be a representative of JP Morgan Chase Bank.

The "representative" advised the intended victim that her social security number was linked to the opening of a fraudulent bank account, but he could "take care of the matter" if she verified her personal information; otherwise, he'd be forced to close her account.

The victim recognized she was being targeted for identity theft and refused to comply.

When the would-be thief was unable to get the information from the victim, he called back and spoke with her boss, once again asking for the victim's personal information. The supervisor disconnected the call, also refusing to comply.

The WCSO reports a check of the phone number from which the call was generated confirmed the caller was not connected to JP Morgan Chase Bank or any other banking institution.

"If you receive a phone call such as this, hang up immediately," said Gainey. If you are concerned your personal information may have been compromised and used to conduct fraudulent transactions, contact your financial institution, credit card companies, phone companies, and any accounts you suspect may have been opened or tampered with."

The WCSO reminds citizens a legitimate company will never ask for social security numbers, PIN, or passwords over the phone.

Anyone wishing to report fraud, scam or identity theft activity may call the fraud line at 638-8477.

A Fraud Specialist can also be requested to speak to community organizations by calling 638-6111.
