Board to discuss half-cent tax

By CAROL KENT
638-0212 | @WCN_HCT
Ckent@chipleypaper.com

CHIPLEY — The Washington County School Board will meet at 3:30 p.m., Monday, July 28, to discuss the proposed half-cent sales tax and to give the public a chance to give their input. The meeting was scheduled when they met in regular session Monday.

The tax is, which will be used primarily to update technology in schools throughout the system, is expected to generate between $750,000 to $800,000 annually. That revenue would be used for upgrades, such as broadband and computer replacement and capital outlay projects, such as expanding outside cafeteria areas and covering walkways from parent drop-offs to school offices.

Board members have not yet approved the proposal, but are expected to request the Board of County Commissioners place it as a referendum on the November ballot.

From there, commissioners would have to agree to place the referendum on the ballot for November's General Election.

In other action, board members heard a report from Washington-Holmes Technical Center Martha Compton, who reported 33 students attended the "Rock-in' Robotics" camp, which was a joint effort of WHTC and the Washington County Extension office.

Board members also heard an update on construction at Vernon Elementary School and were told the project is "on time and on budget" with a final walk through inspection scheduled for the first week in August.

Board members also took the following action on human resource items:

School lunches to revert to old policy

By CAROL KENT
638-0212 | @WCN_HCT
Ckent@chipleypaper.com

CHIPLEY — The Washington County School District has formally decided to amend its school lunch policy and opt out of the Community Eligibility Option (CEO), a U.S. Department of program that allowed schools to provide meals to all students, regardless of household income, at no charge if at least 40 percent of enrolled students are low income.

School board members decided to make the program countywide last year, but now explain it has come at an expense-costing the school board and taxpayers about $100,000 during the 2013-2014 school year.

"We thought it was going to be a 'break even' situation and even save us on administrative costs," said School Superintendent Joseph Taylor. "Instead, the USDA reimbursement (left us with a shortfall.)"

Taylor stresses free and reduced lunches will still be available for income eligible families.

"There will still be free lunches and reduced lunches; parents will just have to submit an application as required before we implemented this program."

The Community Eligibility Option was offered as a four-year program, but the school board had to option to opt out after a year.

Students will continue to eat free for the first 30 days of the 2014-2015 academic year as schools prepare for the transition and give parents a chance to complete free and reduced meal applications. After that time, students who have not turned in an application will be charged full price.

Meal charges have reverted to their previous rates, which is as

1 arrested on felony drug warrant

Staff reports

CHIPLEY — A Chipley man faces felony drug charges after appearing on a Panama City featured "Wheel of Justice."

LEXU RAYNEX ROULHAC

The Chipley Police Department secured a felony arrest warrant for Lexu Raynex Roulhac, 20, of Chipley in February after he sold cocaine to undercover officers. Roulhac continued to elude arrest, but a tip lead officers to him after the "Wheel of Justice" spot aired.

At the time of Roulhac's arrest, he was found to be in possession of marijuana.

Chipley Police Chief says the arrest was a joint effort of local law enforcement and the community.

"With the help of our community and the assistance of the Jackson County Sheriff's Department, Roulhac was taken into custody without incident," said Police Chief Kevin Crews.

2 suspects sought in separate Walmart thefts

Staff report

CHIPLEY — The Chipley Police Department appealed to the public earlier this month for help identifying a suspect who entered the Chipley Walmart Saturday, June 28 and stole two car stereos, valued at approximately $500 before leaving in a gold minivan.

Information from the community help investigators identify the man as Derrick McCallister, 23, of Graceville.

McCallister is still at large, despite a request by the Chipley Police Department to turn himself in, which he promptly declined.

The department is asking the community to be on the lookout for the suspect.

Officers are also asking the community to help identify another suspect in a separate theft which occurred July 2.

According to police reports a white male entered the Chipley Walmart and stole a computer and a back pack, valued at $400.

Anyone with any information on either of these suspects is asked to contact the Chipley Police Department at 638-6310, or to remain anonymous, contact Crime Stoppers of Washington County at 638-TIPS.

Derrick McCallister was identified, but is still at large.

Chipley Police are asking for help identify this suspect.

P.C. police major is demoted, suspended

Software misused, investigators say

By ZACK McDONALD
747-5071 | @PCNHzak
zmcDonald@pcnh.com

PANAMA CITY — A Panama City police officer has been demoted and suspended for misusing police software to scan confidential documents of citizens for personal reasons.

Mark Aviles was suspended without pay and demoted from major to captain in June after he misused his rank and authority to access the driver and vehicle information database (DAVID) files of multiple citizens for personal reasons. The search was conducted while Aviles was off-duty and was not for law enforcement purposes, internal investigators found, which opened PCPD up to penalties that could've affected their law enforcement capabilities, city records state.

Aviles told internal investigators he was concerned an ex-boyfriend of his neighbor could have a history of nefarious activities. His daughter had stayed the night while the ex-boyfriend was in the neighbor's home before the couple separated. Once his neighbor told him she suspected her ex recently placed a tracker on her car, Aviles became suspicious and checked into the ex's background for red flags.

"If at the time, I thought that this was a misuse of the DAVID system, I wouldn't have done it," Aviles told internal investigators. "... What was occurring in my mind was there was an issue, I'm a cop, let me see what I can find out."

Aviles requested a subordinate officer run the ex-boyfriend's name through the program, since he was off duty and only certain terminals have access to DAVID. He then accessed 34 confidential reports on at least six people connected to the ex-boyfriend.

Each time DAVID is started, the system explicitly notes that use for personal reasons could result in civil or criminal proceedings against anyone involved. When the program questioned Sgt. Phil Himes about the purpose of his search, Aviles told him it was to verify an identity.

Himes said he assumed the request was legitimate and obliged.

"In my mind, I believed it was," Himes said. "I would hope my peers above me would understand the use of the system and so I personally took it on his word that's what it was for, but I didn't ask him."

Aviles was unable to find any records substantiating his concerns and told investigators he didn't realize until later he made a mistake.

"I just wasn't thinking about it," Aviles told investigators. "It didn't occur to me ..."

Aviles' letter of suspension and demotion, dated June 13, said his misuse of the PCPD computer systems opened the agency to civil litigation. His actions also could have jeopardized the entire department's access to confidential records through DAVID adversely affecting law enforcement throughout the city, according to Police Chief Scott Ervin.

"This conduct certainly is not reflective of the rank of major, the goals and objectives of this agency, as well as the professionalism that the organization works hard to maintain," Ervin wrote.

Aviles was suspended for five days without pay and demoted to captain. His employee records do not indicate a history of similar incidents. The demotion reduces Aviles' salary from $62,175 a year to $59,214. Aviles also was removed from access to all external privileged computer databases until further notice.

Bay Med: Layoffs imminent before going private

By JACQUELINE BOSTICK
747-5081 | @PCNHJBostick
jbostick@pcnh.com

PANAMA CITY — About 100 employees of Bay Medical Center Sacred Heart Health System have lost their jobs since the hospital went private in 2012, but hospital administrators said layoffs had been imminent before the transition.

"We assumed operation of a hospital that was already losing money, and on top of that, there were huge budget cuts from the federal and state government," CEO Barry Keel wrote in an email. "When Bay Medical transitioned to Sacred Heart and LHP, it was largely because the hospital had been losing money for quite some time."

"There has been no choice but to reduce our expenses to be more efficient in everything we do," he said.

A wave of layoffs started after Bay County Commissioners voted 4-1 to approve the 40-year-lease, giving joint venture partners LHP Hospital Group and Sacred Heart Health System shared control of the hospital. The joint-venture partners paid the hospital $154 million upfront; Bay Medical had $120 million debt.

County Commissioner Guy Tunnell said the declining financial situation at the hospital would have led to staff reduction had the hospital remained a public entity, and the commission followed directives of Bay Medical's former Board of Trustees, which recommended the lease be signed.

A "gentlemen's agreement" not to lay off employees was supposed to be in place for a year after the private companies took over, according to Tunnell. However, "it's a hard business decision that the folks over at Sacred Heart had to make."

The downsizing affected nonclinical areas, including administration, management, construction and support personnel. No bedside nursing staff was cut.

"Bottom line, it's not our prerogative to second guess" the former Board of Trustees. "They know the hospital business," Tunnell said. "Worst case scenario: We'd have to run that hospital, shut it down or require a tax in order to support the hospital."

About 3 percent of the hospital's staff, 58 employees, were cut November last year. Keel, who became CEO just six months before that layoff, said health-care reform had caused the hospital to "restructure."

Most recently, effective last month, 30 employees were laid off due to the hospital outsourcing its billing department. Employees were told to apply for other Bay Medical openings and available positions at Navigant Healthcare Cymetrix, which took over billing services.

"These have been extremely difficult decisions, but we have a responsibility to our patients and our workforce to keep our doors open and continue serving this community," Keel said.

Since 2012, Bay Medical has reinvested $10.2 million in tax revenues, $13 million in capital improvements and provided charity care that totals about $54.8 million, according to Keel. Along with reducing expenses, the hospital has increased revenues, improved patient satisfaction and operated within its budget.

"We are making the changes needed to keep (Bay Medical) viable not only today but for generations to come," he said.

Bay Medical spokeswoman Christa Davis wasn't clear on whether more staff cuts are to come.

PLEASE WITH DOCTORS MEMORIAL HOSPITAL'S I-STAT MACHINE

Dear Editor,
Are you one of those people who must get a regular pro-time to check the clotting of your blood? If you are here is some very good news for you.

Did you know that that our own Doctors Memorial Hospital of Bonifay now has an I-STAT machine? Well, they do! You no longer have to ride to Dothan or Panama City to be able to have this service performed.

The I-STAT machine can get all the blood needed for testing by making a pinprick in the end of any finger, and all it takes is just a few drops. If you have rolling veins, or it is difficult to draw blood from your veins, then this is the test for you! The technician in charge will call in test results to your physician. Your doctor will then call you back, same day, with results and adjust Coumadin dosages as needed. This has proved wonderful for my wife, Celedia.

Gary Ayres is the technologist in charge of this service. He is assisted by Nancy Ayres, Irman Suva, Arthur DeSampardo and Emelyn Elumir. Services are provided from 7 a.m. until 6 p.m., and arrangement for working people can be provided by calling the laboratory to set up the appointment.

Since the program is located in Doctors Memorial Hospital, it is especially convenient for Bonifay and Holmes County residents. Others in the surrounding area should check out this program it can be of service to you. Being able to get this service in Bonifay can have many benefits for the people who use it. Examples being, less wear and tear on your vehicle and the time it takes to commute, also you'll be able to save on gasoline; we travelled to Dothan for 18 years to have my wife, Celedia's PT. tested, at times we went up to once a week.

You will find the people in the laboratory very professional, kind, caring and interested in helping you, the patient.

Must go now - We're on our way to Doctors Memorial Hospital to get Celedia's PT. tested now. Thank heavens they're so near to us!

IT'S TIME TO PROTECT OUR BORDERS

Dear Editor,

The issue of immigration law change is one that needs to be put to a stop, except to make the law require that out borders be protected more and totally closed to all illegal crossing. The Obama administration and the liberals and free loaders want to keep violating our current border laws. Legal immigration is ok as it has always been, but not illegal. If it is ok to cross the border illegally, then why not drugs, murders, and etc.?

Did you know that if one crosses the North Korean border illegally one gets 12 years of hard labor? If one crosses the Afghanistan border illegally you get shot. Two Americans just got eight years for crossing the Iranian border. If you cross the U. S. border illegally, you get a job, a driver's license, food stamps, a place to live, health care, housing, child befits, education, and a tax free business for seven years. No wonder we are a country deep in debt. Legal immigrates ok. Illegal immigrates no, no.

The Rev. Billy Bruner, Th. D.

Finding an unexpected connection

I fully expected to enjoy working with Pat Aukema Dickson recently to learn more about restorations going on now at the First Methodist Church in Chipley, as well as more about the church's rich history. What I didn't expect was to learn I have a couple connections of my own to the century old church.

My only memory of the church was of field trips taken as a Kate M. Smith Elementary student before the Christmas holidays to learn about the Chrismon Tree - field trips that I'm told still take place today.

As Dickson showed me several old photographs, one from 1907 - the first year the current church held services - caught my eye. The photo showed the original parsonage, as well as another building standing next to the church. One was the original parsonage, which as it turns out, later served as the childhood home of my mother's best friend, Patricia Harden Hardy.

According to church records, Rev. G. N. Winslett began building that first parsonage, and construction was completed during the tenure of Rev. R. C. Williams, who served as minister from 1907-1910.

A new parsonage was built in 1956. After a short time being used to house Sunday school classes, the old parsonage was purchased by A.C. and Lizzie May Harden.

A.C. and Lizzie May's daughter, Patricia (Pat) Harden (now Hardy), and my mother, Martha Bowen (now Kent), became friends sometime while attending junior high in Chipley. From then on, the families would be forever intertwined.

I have many fond memories of sitting at the Hardens' dinner table, having both southern cooking and conversation. Both were served warm and with love.

I marveled as a child at the many nooks and crannies, including a rather odd-shaped closet in the sitting room Ms. Lizzie May kept filled with books and toys for us kids. I stopped by for a visit when my oldest daughter was around three and noticed happily that many of those old toys were still there, awaiting the newest generation of children.

My conversation with Mrs. Dickson stirred a desire to visit the home again soon and look at it with a fresh vision, one filled with knowledge of its rich history.

a lesser connection, but one that thrilled just the same. My daughter, Taylor, became good friends with a young lady named Kimberly Butler soon after we moved back to the area. The home belonged to an uncle and aunt of Brett Butler, who is her father. Their names were Oscar and Sallie Addie Butler, and Sallie Addie is honored by her name appearing in one of the church's iconic art glass windows.

When I think of the many prayers that have been said for loved ones below those beautiful windows, I understand how their value is far from monetary, and I'm sure the Butlers, like so many others, would be pleased with their preservation.

I know as soon as they're back in their rightful - but more structurally sound - place, I'll look at them each day on my drive to work. And I'll smile as I remember the love, work, and dedication shown to this community by the original parishioners, as well as the wonderful relationships that were connected to or born from a church that had a vision.

That slippery slope

It is a case of Supreme hypocrisy.

The adjective refers to that nine-person tribunal at the top of the American legal system, the noun to its latest act of judicial malpractice. Meaning not the notorious Hobby Lobby decision handed down at the end of June but a less-noticed ruling a few days later:

We have to revisit the former to provide context for the latter. On June 30, the court ruled that a "closely held" corporation can deny employees health insurance covering any contraceptive method that conflicts with the company's religious beliefs. Writing for the majority, Justice Samuel Alito faulted the government for failing, under the Affordable Care Act, to choose the "least restrictive" means of ensuring women access to all FDA-approved methods of birth control. He pointed out that the ACA already makes an exemption for nonprofit groups with religious objections; simply fill out a form certifying those objections and they are relieved from having to provide the disputed contraceptives.

LEONARD PITTS JR.
Syndicated Columnist

Alito saw this as a win-win. Employees get the birth control they want — they pay directly to the insurance company — but the government does not "impinge" the organization's religious beliefs.

Three days later, the court issued an injunction freeing a Christian school — Wheaton College in Illinois — from having to fill out the certification form. The school had argued that simply doing the paperwork — the form asks only for name, contact information, signature and date — infringed upon its religious liberty because it would trigger the employee's ability to get the disputed contraception. So the same form that the court held to be a reasonable compromise on Monday was judged an unreasonable burden on Thursday. Or as Justice Sonia Sotomayor put it in a withering dissent, "Those who are bound by our decisions usually believe they can take us at our word. Not so today."

Indeed, the malleability of the court's logic suggests these rulings are based less in law than in the personal beliefs of the men on the tribunal. One gets the sense they chose the desired result first, then backfilled whatever "reasoning" would get them there.

Which is not just Supreme hypocrisy, but also Supreme faithlessness. And, yes, Supreme sexism.

I once saw a protest sign to the effect that if men gave birth, contraception would be bacon flavored and dispensed from vending machines. Can anyone argue the truth in that? Would we even be having this debate if some company had a religious objection to Viagra — or vasectomies?

And how far down the line must a company's religious scruples be honored anyway? If it is too much to ask Wheaton College to fill out a form because an employee will be "triggered" to buy contraception on her own, does the school also have a right to scrutinize and approve other purchases made with the salary she earns from them? If she buys whiskey or pornography with "their" money, does the school have a right to object?

Not to mention the frightening precedent the court is setting in the name of religious liberty. It makes faith a potential get out of jail free card exempting the holder from any law he finds onerous. Given that Mormons once embraced a theology of racism and evangelical Christians still deny basic freedoms to gay people, the danger of this is obvious.

In its rush to confer personhood on organizations and constrain women's choices, the court steers us toward a day in which corporate rights would trump human rights and you no longer could take for granted that you would be served by a given business without first checking to make sure you didn't offend the owner's religious sensibilities. It's hard to imagine what that world would be like.

Pretty soon, we might not have to.

Citigroup will pay $7 billion in subprime mortgages probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citigroup has agreed to pay $7 billion to settle a federal investigation into its handling of risky subprime mortgages, admitting to a pattern of deception that Attorney General Eric Holder said “shattered lives” and contributed to the worst financial crisis in decades, the Justice Department said Monday.

The settlement represents a moment of reckoning for one of the country’s biggest and most significant banks, which is now accountable for providing some financial support to Americans whose lives were dismantled by the largest economic meltdown since the Great Depression.

In addition to a $4 billion civil penalty being paid to the federal government, the bank also will pay $2.5 billion in consumer relief to help borrowers who lost their homes to foreclosure and about $500 million to settle claims from state attorneys general and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

The agreement does not preclude the possibility of criminal prosecutions for the bank or individual employees in the future, Holder said.

The $7 billion settlement, which represents about half of Citigroup’s $13.7 billion profit last year, is the latest substantial penalty sought for a bank or mortgage company at the epicenter of the housing crisis. The Justice Department, criticized for not being aggressive enough in targeting financial misconduct, has in the last year reached a $13 billion deal with JPMorgan Chase & Co., the nation’s largest bank, and also sued Bank of America Corp. for misleading investors in its sale of mortgage-linked securities.

Yet the settlement packages pale in size compared to the broader damages caused by the Great Recession. The unemployment rate spiked to 10 percent as millions lost their jobs and their homes, causing losses that totaled in the trillions of dollars. Public advocacy groups criticized the settlement as a sweetheart deal.

“In the context of the damage done, the damage even described by the attorney general, we’re not even in the same ballpark,” said Bartlett Naylor, a financial policy advocate for Public Citizen, which represents consumer interests.

The settlement stems from the sale of toxic securities made up of subprime mortgages, which led to both the housing boom and bust that triggered the Great Recession at the end of 2007. Banks, including Citigroup, minimized the risks of subprime mortgages when packaging and selling them to mutual funds, investment trusts and pensions, as well as other banks and investors.

The securities contained residential mortgages from borrowers who were unlikely to be able to repay their loans, yet were publicly promoted as relatively safe investments until the housing market collapsed in 2006 and 2007 and investors suffered billions of dollars in losses. Those losses triggered a financial crisis that pushed the economy into the worst recession since the 1930s.

One Citigroup trader wrote in an internal email that he “would not be surprised if half of these loans went down” and said it was “amazing that some of these loans were closed at all,” the Justice Department said. Meanwhile, the bank increased its profits and share of the market.

“They did so at the expense of millions of ordinary Americans and investors of all types — including other financial institutions, universities and pension funds, cities and towns, and even hospitals and religious charities,” Holder said at a news conference.

Justice Department officials called the $4 billion component the largest civil penalty of its kind. It will not be tax-deductible.

The $2.5 billion in consumer relief is directed at underwater homeowners and borrowers in areas of the country with high numbers of distressed properties and foreclosures. The sum includes refinancing for homeowners struggling with high interest rates on their mortgages, closing cost help for borrowers who lost homes to foreclosure, donations to community development funds and financing for construction and affordable rental housing.

The deal and others like it will probably benefit hundreds of thousands of Americans, said Associate Attorney General Tony West, though Holder also acknowledged that many people would not be adequately compensated.

Citigroup should have the capital needed to absorb the $7 billion settlement, said Gerard Cassidy, a managing director and analyst at RBC Capital Markets. In fact, investors were relieved that the issue was no longer confronting the bank and pushed up Citigroup’s stock price on Monday. CEO Michael Corbat said the settlement ends all pending civil investigations related to mortgage-backed securities.

But the “unintended consequence” of the settlement is that banks such as Citigroup are less likely to lend, hurting would-be homebuyers with student debt who are seeking a mortgage.

“Banks won’t go near those customers because, in our opinion, the severity of the penalties that they paid,” Cassidy said.

The settlement followed months of negotiations in which the two sides were often far apart. The Justice Department prepared to sue the bank last month after it offered to pay under the $4 billion, substantially less than what the government was seeking.

After JPMorgan’s $13 billion deal last year involving similar toxic mortgage-backed securities, Citigroup argued that it should settle for a comparatively modest sum because it issued fewer mortgages than JPMorgan and the subsidiaries that the bank acquired during the recession. But the Justice Department countered that the evidence showed that Citigroup offered a greater share of troubled mortgage-backed securities.

Investors shrugged off the settlement, a sign they expect Citigroup will continue to operate without much disruption. Shares in Citi rose $1.42 — or 3 percent — to $48.42 because the bank beat the expectations in the market, after adjusting for the second-quarter $3.8 billion charge related to the Justice Department settlement.

The bank said its net income dropped in the second quarter after the settlement was arranged. On a per-share basis, net income was 3 cents, compared with $1.34 in the second quarter a year earlier. Excluding the charges and an accounting loss, the bank’s second-quarter profit rose 1 percent to $3.93 billion, or $1.24 a share.

Revenue was $19.4 billion, excluding the accounting loss, compared with $20 billion a year earlier.

Florida’s political landscape upended

Redistricting ruling sets legal precedent

TALLAHASSEE (AP) — Florida’s political landscape is being upended by a landmark court ruling that one legal expert says could influence the way other states draw their congressional districts.

A circuit judge ruled late Thursday that the state Legislature illegally drew Florida’s congressional districts to primarily benefit the Republican Party. Judge Terry Lewis ruled two of the state’s 27 congressional districts were invalid and the map must be redrawn.

Justin Levitt, a law professor at Loyola Law School who tracks redistricting cases, called the decision a “big victory” for Florida’s voters that could be a model for other states to follow. The judge based his decision on the 2010 “Fair Districts” amendment approved by voters that says districts cannot be drawn to favor an incumbent or a member of a political party.

“It does right by the voters who said they want a new way of doing business,” Levitt said.

But on the day after the ruling, many questions remained, including whether it could alter this fall’s elections. Florida Republicans hold a decisive 17-10 edge in the state’s congressional delegation even though the state has gone to President Barack Obama in the past two elections.

It appeared initially that any fallout from the decision would not develop until 2016 because the GOP-controlled Legislature would appeal the ruling. But so far, legislative leaders are being cautious about their next steps, especially since the state Supreme Court has decided against the Legislature in other recent redistricting cases.

“We just want to make sure we understand the ruling,” House Speaker Will Weatherford said Friday.

But the coalition of groups that challenged the Legislature plans to press forward. David King, a lawyer representing the League of Women Voters, said it would be wrong to allow the 2014 elections to go forward with illegally drawn districts.

“Our opinion is that you are not supposed to hold elections based on unconstitutional maps,” King said.

King said the groups will ask the judge next week how to comply with the decision. But state elections officials would likely oppose any effort to change districts now, since ballots for the Aug. 26 primary are about to start going out.

In the immediate aftermath of the decision, one candidate for Congress ended his campaign.

Former U.S. Rep. David Rivera, who is seeking a return to his South Florida seat despite ongoing legal issues, complained that “liberal activist judges” were holding candidates hostage because of the ruling. Rivera said he is suspending his congressional campaign and is now focused on returning to the state Legislature.

U.S. Rep. Corinne Brown, D-Jacksonville, also blasted the decision as “seriously flawed.” Brown’s sprawling district stretches from Jacksonville to Orlando and was one of the two deemed invalid by Judge Lewis.

The groups suing over the districts contended the GOP-controlled Legislature packed Democrats into Brown’s seat to help other Republicans. But Brown maintains the district needs to be drawn that way to ensure minority representation in Congress.

Brown’s concerns were not shared by U.S. Rep. Steve Israel.

Israel, chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, said in a written statement, “We applaud the courts for standing up for fairness by recognizing that the congressional map is partisan and unconstitutional. We will wait to see what the judge says about a new map, but it’s a good day for Florida voters.”

Police make 6th arrest in homicide

News Herald staff report

PANAMA CITY BEACH — Police arrested a sixth suspect Friday in connection to the shooting death of a 20-year-old Panama City Beach man.

The Panama City Beach Police Department and Bay County Sheriff's Department Criminal Investigative Division arrested 34-year-old Clinton Robert Allen at his home Thursday night. Allen was charged with being a convicted felon in possession of a firearm and providing false information during the investigation into Ryan Brooks' death at The Club apartments off Richard Jackson Boulevard early Thursday. Allen was booked at the Bay

County Jail on Friday, where four of the five other suspects are being held.

The five other suspects face various charges:

- Joshua Smith, 22, Panama City, first degree murder and attempted armed robbery;
- Randy Jackson, 24, Panama City, first-degree murder, attempted armed robbery and felon in possession of a firearm;
- Alyssa Watford, 17, Panama City, conspiracy to commit armed robbery;
- Joseph Cannizzo, 25, Panama City Beach, attempted armed robbery, tampering with evidence;
- Nicole Philbrook, 26, Panama City Beach, tampering with evidence.

Police said the slaying appears to be a drug deal gone bad. Authorities said Watford contacted Brooks to arrange to buy 2 ounces of marijuana, but Jackson and Smith intended to rob Brooks.

However, investigators said Brooks and Cannizzo planned to rob Smith when he arrived to buy the marijuana.

They met in The Club parking lot, where Cannizzo and Brooks, who were armed, tried to rob Smith, police said. Brooks then approached Jackson, who shot Brooks several times. Smith fled and Jackson drove away, while Cannizzo shot Jackson's vehicle before also fleeing.

Allen received the gun from Joseph Cannizzo, police said in a news release, after it was used to shoot at Randy Jackson's vehicle as he fled the scene.

Police found Brooks on the ground in the parking lot with multiple gunshot wounds. Brooks died at a hospital soon after.

Panama City Beach Police Chief Drew Whitman said no other suspects are being sought in the case at this time.

"These are the main players," Whitman said. "We've got it with these six."

Air Force cutting 3,459 positions worldwide

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The Air Force said Monday it will eliminate almost 3,500 positions during the next five years, with Virginia being harder hit than any other state.

The military branch released its plans to save $1.6 billion under a Defense Department directive to slash its costs and staff by at least 20 percent. The plan calls for significant reductions at major Air Force commands around the country, including 742 positions at Joint Base Langley-Eustis. The installation is home to Air Combat Command, which oversees fighter jets, among other things.

The Air Force said it plans to pursue the cuts sooner, rather than later.

"We are aggressively pursuing reductions within the first year, rather than spread them out over five years as allowed by DoD," Air Force Secretary Deborah Lee James said in a statement. "It's better for airmen because it provides them predictability and allows us to re-stabilize our workforce sooner."

Other major cuts include 372 positions at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Ohio; 292 at Scott Air Force Base, Ill.; 429 at Joint Base San Antonio; 275 at Peterson Air Force Base, Colo.; and 238 positions at Hickam Air Force base, Hawaii.

The Air Force also said its headquarters staff would lose 734 positions, including 522 positions in the National Capital Region.

Of the 3,459 positions being eliminated worldwide, 923 of those are coming from personnel who provide installation and mission support.

The Air Force is creating a new center to handle much of those responsibilities, which will have a staff of 350.

The Air Force has not specified where that center will be located, although it will report to Air Force Materiel Command, which is headquartered at Wright-Patterson.

The Air Force has not said how many of the positions being eliminated will be civilians, but said it would offer early retirement and voluntary separation incentive pay program to get civilians to leave.

Murder trial jury selected

By ZACK McDONALD
747-5071 | @PCNHZack

PANAMA CITY — The trial of an Alabama man facing the death penalty for the torture and strangling death of a 90-year-old Lynn Haven man began Monday.

Jurors were selected in the murder trial of Kevin Jeffries, 29, of Hartford, Ala., one of three people implicated in slaying Wallace

KEVIN JEFFRIES

Reid Scott in April 2013. Police discovered Scott's body bound, beaten and strangled at his Lynn Haven home, initiating a manhunt for three suspects that spanned three states. Jeffries and an accomplice face the death penalty if convicted.

Jeffries also faces charges of armed robbery and burglary of a dwelling while armed, each of which can carry life sentences.

The trial will continue today.

A grand jury charged Jeffries and David Challenger, 28, with premeditated murder in the case. A third person, Ashley Griffin, 29, also of Hartford, admitted to driving the two men to Scott's home to coerce bank account information from him.

Officials said Scott was bound and beaten when he refused to provide personal identification numbers, and there was evidence of torture.

Griffin pleaded to a reduced charge of second-degree murder, armed robbery and burglary of a dwelling while armed in June. Part of the agreement, prosecutors said, is contingent on her cooperation. Her sentencing is in October, following the two murder trials, and a maximum penalty of life in prison still is on the table. Challenger's trial is scheduled for September.

Police records indicate each of the three were found with stolen items belonging to Scott in their possession.

Griffin was located in Donalsonville, Ga., on April 13, nine days after Scott was killed, and brought back to Bay County. She was wearing a ring that belonged to Scott, authorities said. Investigators developed her, Jeffries and Challenger as suspects the previous day.

Jeffries and Challenger, both of Vernon, were arrested later the same day; Jeffries was in Holmes County and Challenger was in Caryville.

The recent money giveaway in the NBA shows just how dull-witted I have become. Chris Bosh was offered $88 million last week by the Houston Rockets. His response was something along the lines of "I'll get back to you."

Yeah, me, too, at least until the ammonia capsule kicks in to revive my senses. Then my first response would be, "Anybody have a pen handy?"

Eighty-eight million? Maybe? This from a guy who might be the 25th-best player in the league.

So what happened was that Miami tossed an extra $30 million on the pile and now Bosh has a five-year deal. If he wants to, he can buy Gillette and throw away the company.

It was revealed on Friday that the best player in the NBA is going back to his roots in Cleveland. That prompted the immediate thought that Pat Riley probably isn't about to write an open letter in the Miami Herald condemning the move, ala Cleveland Cavaliers owner Dan Gilbert four years ago.

Neither should the basketball fans in Miami get too demoralized over King James' decision. He helped take them to four consecutive NBA Finals and tripled the amount of titles that franchise has brought home during its existence.

These are the same Heat followers who customarily arrived late for games and left early, if anyone remembers them trying to get through locked doors to return to the arena one night when Miami staged a memorable rally.

This much, too: thank gawd it's over. And where are those idiots among Cavs' fans who burned James jerseys in disgust when their superhero first decided to leave.

Nothing lasts forever, whether it's a lifetime or players' or fans' allegiance. It's not as if anyone in Miami, or Cleveland for that matter deserved to have LeBron James playing for their favorite team.

The most difficult part of the scenario for James most likely is leaving Riley, who is a bit of an alchemist when it comes to the mad science of concocting NBA titles. James departs for a head coach who has never led a team in the league and a front office that hasn't exactly distinguished itself over five decades.

There also is the Gilbert factor. I would advise against him sending another open letter to the Cleveland Plain Dealer, as he'd come off as just as big a creep for fawning over his latest addition.

So much for the era of the Heat, which provided the South Beach set with more than its share of highlights. They can go back to their pina colodas with the assurance they aren't missing anything.

And finally, here's a parting thought that Riley is left with some extra money now James is gone, unless he decides to give it all to Bosh and Dwyane Wade. Could there be a new "Big 3" in Miami?

FSU warned that new search could be a 'sham'

TALLAHASSEE (AP) — Florida State University is trying to jump-start its tumultuous search for a new president, but top officials already have been warned that the process could be viewed as a "sham" because of the candidacy of powerful state Sen. John Thrasher, who is seen as the front-runner.

Late last month, FSU officials agreed to revamp the search and wait until September to find a replacement for Eric Barron, who abruptly left FSU to take the top position at Penn State University.

But emails obtained by The Associated Press show that the consultant first hired to help FSU told the head of the search committee that the university was trying to "concoct a competitive process."

Those same emails show that Thrasher has reached out directly to top FSU officials and that the former campaign manager of Gov. Rick Scott has given advice about the search.

Bill Funk, the consultant who resigned in early June after FSU's faculty questioned his work

"It is my strongly held view that the opportunity for any real competitive process involving John has long passed. To concoct a 'competitive process' from this truly weak field of active candidates would now be a sham ... and would be roundly seen as such."

Bill Funk

consultant who resigned in early June after FSU's faculty questioned his work

Thrasher's candidacy has emerged at the same time that rival University of Florida is searching for a new leader, but it wants someone with academic credentials.

It was Funk who initially suggested FSU interview Thrasher first before considering other candidates.

But FSU officials dropped that plan after other candidates, including state Supreme Court Justice Ricky Polston, applied for the post.

The decision to designate Thrasher, a St. Augustine Republican, as the main candidate created a backlash among some faculty and students.

Now FSU is accepting applications until early September before coming up with at least three candidates for the FSU board to consider.

Two days before Polston applied, however, Thrasher himself forwarded to a top FSU official an email from an FSU professor who complained Thrasher's supporters pushed ahead too quickly.

Thrasher told the professor he had talked to Burr, a Jacksonville businessman, and that he had agreed that the search should be broadened.

Thrasher said Burr had discouraged him from writing a letter to suggest widening the search due to "the concern that some folks had suggested that I was manipulating the process."

Funk quickly fired off a response to Burr and another top FSU official.

"The best candidates will not come into the pool until John's candidacy is resolved — so who are you going to interview?" Funk wrote to Burr on May 29.

"It is my strongly held view that the opportunity for any real competitive process involving John has long passed. "To concoct a 'competitive process' from this truly weak field of active candidates would now be a sham ... and would be roundly seen as such."

Some of the other emails bolster that view.

At least one high-ranking official from the University of Maryland dropped out of consideration amid the tumult.

Funk in an email last week said it would be inappropriate to comment since his firm no longer was involved.

Burr, however, maintained that after talks with the school's new search consultant he remains optimistic that FSU will be able to attract traditional candidates for the job.

"I will run what I believe to be an honest, complete and thorough process in deciding the next best president of Florida State University," Burr said.

Burr also maintained that no one is pressuring him to hand over the job to Thrasher.

Burr's emails show that he has consulted Susie Wiles about the FSU presidency. Wiles, a fixture in Jacksonville political circles, is friends with Thrasher, Burr and Adam Hollingsworth, Scott's chief of staff.

Wiles was the campaign manager for Scott in 2010.

"There never been anyone that has called me, or told me we need to hire Sen. Thrasher as the next president," Burr said.

Former 'Nole Wade named new Gulf Coast softball coach

PANAMA CITY — Gulf Coast found another Seminole to lead its softball program.

Beth Wade was named the school's second head coach on Friday, with the former Florida State standout inheriting a program that hit a rough spell in 2013. Former coach Susan Painter also played softball at FSU of the slow pitch variety and departed in May after her contract wasn't renewed by the GCSC Board of Trustees. Wade has accepted the position, effective on Wednesday pending board approval.

Wade spent the past two seasons as an assistant at Troy University, where she was the hitting coach and aided in recruiting. The Colquitt, Ga., native also was an assistant at Florida schools Lynn University and Tallahassee Community College for one season at each stop. She also assisted at Appalachian State from 2009-2011.

At FSU, Wade played first base and was among the team's top power hitters from 2000-2004. She led the Seminoles in doubles (12) and was tied in home runs (eight) and fourth in RBIs (34) as a senior, as FSU finished 62-19. FSU won three Atlantic Coast Conference titles and made two Women's College World Series appearances in her tenure.

Wade was unavailable for comment on Friday and will likely be formally introduced next week. A GC press release made no mention of possible assistants under Wade.

GC finished fourth in the Panhandle Conference last season and was ousted in the state tournament after four games.

The Lady Commodores were 28-33 and posted their first losing season in program history. Painter led GC for 20 seasons and amassed 895 wins, six conference titles, three state crowns and finished runner-up at the national tournament on three occasions.

Dr. Henry Jack Hudson, Vernon native, died June 23

Dr. Henry Jack Hudson was born on the family farm in the area known as "The Valley", south of Vernon on Sept. 1, 1929 to parents, Robert E. (Rob) Hudson and Annie Ethel Miller Hudson. He passed away June 23 in Atlanta where he and family had lived since he entered Emory University Dental School in 1954.

Known as Jack Hudson in Vernon School, he was reared in a large family consisting of seven brothers and sisters. At the time of his birth, the nation was experiencing a troublesome economic time, which is still referred to as the Great Depression. In addition to farming, his father drove a school bus to Vernon Schools to make additional money to care for his family.

Jack was third in the sequence of children with his brother, Robert Edward Hudson, Jr. being the first born with sister, Margie Lee Hudson Boyette following. After Jack, the other children are Mary Ella Hudson Hodges, who retired as Tax Collector in Washington County. She won over four male candidates and served five consecutive terms without opposition.

Next in the family births were Iris Hudson Moore, Franklin Delano Hudson, Eugene (Gene) Hudson and Audrey Hudson Sexton. The Hudson children seemingly had an uncanny bond to each other and have remained close in their association throughout life.

When your writer graduated from Vernon High School in 1944, Jack Hudson was completing the ninth grade. Fast forward the time to Sept. 1947 when the Prattler arrived at the University of Florida as one of 2500 freshmen entering the school. The campus was overflowing with new students, including many veterans of World War II, enrolling under the GI Bill, plus a host of female entrants as this was the first semester for the University as a fully co-educational institution.

Shortly after arriving on a hot sunny Sunday afternoon where chaos was the order of the day with throngs of new students trying to get registered, and assigned in student housing. Very soon, freshman, Perry Wells, learned that his living quarters were in an old abandoned U. S. Army air-base located mile away out on the Starke, Florida highway. Surplus Army busses had been secured to transport students to and from these far away barracks.

To my surprise, one Jack Hudson appeared in the crowd and was one of the unfortunate ones to learn that the old military base would also be his "home away from home". I don't know that I had even seen him during the three and one-half years since leaving Vernon School. He had grown up and appeared much taller than I had remembered from high school.

I have many fond memories of Jack. He had a job at the College Inn (the CI in student parlance) serving food at the short order counter in the off-campus popular cafeteria. Money was a scarce commodity among our group from West Florida and we looked to Jack to assist when food was running low. At one time, our little fellowship, including Loran Harmon from Vernon, John Pipkin, from Bonifay and maybe others, had a standing agreement to meet at a designated room for Sunday morning breakfast. Jack would serve left-over doughnuts, and a variety of other pastries salvaged from the CI. The others in the group pooled their money and purchased a gallon of fresh milk for the feast.

Jack Hudson excelled academically in school and enrolled in ROTC where he made a little extra money. By being on a Scholarship, which he earned from his high school grade average, this young man was known to do the commendable gesture of occasionally sending a few dollars to his parents back home.

I remember vividly; after Jack had met Dorma, the two them rode in my trusty 1940 Ford Sedan on the trip to Vernon when he brought his girlfriend, and future wife, to meet his parents. They were married after both received Masters Degrees in Education from the U. of F.

After Jack fulfilled his military obligation by serving on active duty in the U. S. Army as a Captain, he entered Dental School. Upon graduation there, he became a professor in Emory University School Dentistry and taught subjects in "crown" and "bridge" dental procedures.

In 1963, he bought farmland on Chamblee-Tucker Road and built a dental office where he practiced for over 50 years. His family and colleagues continue to provide dental service there for that community. Dr. Hudson was a member of the dental honor society and served on the Georgia Dental Board.

This gentleman was fond of singing and playing bluegrass music. Along the way, he underwrote the cost of producing an LP Album for a group of talented young bluegrass musicians. This was on the LeFever Sound label and the band member was Steve Anderson, Ben Pedigo, Walter Asher and Charles Asher. Jack brought a copy this prized album to me, simply entitled "The Bluegrass Band", with a bold notation printed on the album cover: SPECIAL THANKS TO DR. HENRY J. HUDSON. He also played his fiddle on the stage of the Northwest Florida Music Park, along with brother-in-law, Jerrel Sexton, at the time of delivering the above recording.

He is survived by his wife, Dorma, three daughters, twins Marilyn Clow and Marlene Getzendanner and Kathy Franklin. Also surviving are four grandsons, one brother and three sisters.

A memorial service was held on Saturday, July 12, 2014 at 4 p.m. in the chapel of Floral Hills Funeral Home in Tucker, Georgia, who was entrusted with all arrangements.

This man has left an enduring legacy of love, devotion and sacrifice and I am honored to be able to present this tribute to another uncommon man from Vernon. See you all next week.

First United Methodist Church repairs near completion

CHIPLEY — Perhaps you have driven by the First United Methodist Church on Jackson Avenue in Chipley and wondered what became of its iconic glass art windows — and why sets of scaffolding have surrounded the historic building for the past several months.

Church Historian Pat Aukema Dickson said members began to notice water stains on the walls and near the ceilings in the sanctuary, and upon further investigation, considerable structural damage was found around the church's windows. Still more was found in other areas of the sanctuary, and services were temporarily moved to the John Wesley Building so repairs could get underway.

Buddy Dickson serves on the board of Trustees and is helping oversee the $175,000 project.

"As former facilities director for the Jackson County school system, I look at things other people may not," Dickson said. "The cracks on the outside walls near the windows indicated the structure was beginning to give way. After 100 years, especially with decades of vibrations coming from Highway 90 and the nearby railroad tracks, the mortar between the blocks begins to give, and those blocks can slip down."

Built in 1907, the church will soon become the county's only surviving turn of the century public building with the looming demolition of the Washington County Courthouse.

"I got to thinking about what it means to work on a building that's 100 years old," said Dickson. "Today, if I need something, I can order it off the Internet, and it will be here in three days or so. But this — this took true artisanship and patience."

"Before power tools, before telephones, these men laid a plan and formed the blocks on site, and the masonry work is almost true. It's amazing what they could do with just a handsaw and a foot asp. Meanwhile, these windows were crafted in Antwerp, Belgium. Once they knew the size of the window holes, someone or their representative had to travel to have the art glass windows commissioned." Those century old windows are valued about $4 million and are stored in a secured location.

Structural repairs are nearing completion, and the cosmetic work is getting ready to begin, such as re-installing the stained glass windows. Board of Trustees member Buddy Dickson displays one such window in a secured room where the treasured pieces, which are valued at about $4 million, are carefully stored.

"We treat them like they're nitroglycerin," he said. "There's nothing like them. The morning east sun shining through them on a Sunday morning will take your breath away."

Pat Aukema Dickson, who has been a member since she was a child, has her own favorite memories.

"Every year, Winkie VanLandingham directed the children's Christmas program," she said. "She would practice countless hours with us. Daddy would bring hay and make shepherds' crooks, and all the mothers would make our costumes. It was a very meaningful celebration."

The restoration project is slated to be completed by the end of September, and the church plans to invite the community to celebrate with them at an open house event. Details will be printed as soon as they become available.

Craven attends chancellor's leadership seminar

Special to the News

Dr. Bryan Craven, Chipola College Director of Public Relations, was among 35 faculty and administrators from the Florida College System's 28 community colleges, state colleges and colleges who recently graduated from the 2014 Chancellor's Leadership Seminar.

Florida College System Chancellor Randy Hanna offered his congratulations at a ceremony in historic downtown St. Augustine. "We are excited to once again provide this leadership development opportunity to administrators and faculty within the Florida College System who may be interested in a leadership role," said Chancellor Hanna. "The impetus is to promote individuals who may be primed to move into administrative or other leadership roles and are committed to Florida's college system."

The CLS participants attended an all-encompassing four-day seminar, which was held at the St. Johns River State College St. Augustine Campus Tuesday, June 17 through Friday, June 20. Since 2001, the seminar has marked a significant phase in each participant's professional development. This nomination-only event indicates that each class member has been recognized as an individual with the potential for professional advancement within the FCS. Speakers at the seminar included state legislators, CLS alumni, and college presidents, one of whom was Chipola president Dr. Jason Hurst.

Florida's colleges remain the primary point of access to higher education in Florida, with 65 percent of the state's high school graduates pursuing postsecondary education beginning at a Florida college, and 82 percent of freshman and sophomore minority students in public higher education attending one of Florida's 28 colleges.

More Florida schools earn 'A' grades as state prepares for new grading system

Special to the Extra

The number of elementary and middle schools earning a preliminary "A" grade increased by 195 (7 percentage points) over last year in the final year of the current grading system, according to preliminary data released today by the Department of Education. Overall, 962 elementary and middle schools statewide earned the top grade.

The number of schools earning a preliminary "F" grade this year also increased. The Department is focused on ensuring all low performing schools are provided the necessary assistance and support they need to help their students achieve.

"The increase in the number of schools earning an 'A' this year is great news for students and teachers who have worked hard for this success," said Commissioner Pam Stewart. "I appreciate the work by the educators and families and students and know they will continue to improve in the future even as we transition to a new grading system."

This is the final year school grades will be calculated using the current formula. The new grading system next year will support the more rigorous Florida Standards and the Florida Standards Assessment which will replace the FCAT. The new school grading formula will be more simple and transparent.

"The new grading system that will start next year will continue to be crafted with input from parents, teachers and educators," said Stewart. "Its focus on student achievement and gains will help ensure a fair accountability system that helps measure student knowledge of the new Florida Standards."

The Stevenson Companion Animal Life-Care Center

The Stevenson Companion Animal Life-Care Center, located at the Texas A&M College of Veterinary Medicine & Biomedical Sciences (CVM) is a facility quite unlike any other. This unique center provides for the physical, emotional, and medical needs of companion animals whose owners find themselves no longer able to do so. Whether they are entering a retirement home, being hospitalized for an extended period of time, or predeceasing a pet, they can take assurance in the fact that their beloved pets are being well cared for at the Stevenson Center.

"I believe the Stevenson Center is extremely unique in that it is the only life-care facility for pets that is an integral part of a College of Veterinary Medicine," said Dr. Sonny Presnal, director of the Stevenson Center. "This means that companion animals that are living with us at the Stevenson Center will receive the ultimate in veterinary care which is provided by our Veterinary Medical Teaching Hospital."

The Stevenson Center has veterinary students who live at the center to care for the resident pets at night and on weekends and holidays. "It is unique in another way because four veterinary students live at the center to provide around-the-clock care and companionship whenever the staff is off duty," said Dr. Presnal. "This is an excellent learning opportunity for the students and ensures a high quality of life for our pet residents."

Situated on three acres beside the CVM campus, the total space of the center, including a recent second expansion since its opening in 1993, is about 11,000 square feet and will be able to house nearly 100 pets. A stable behind the main building houses the center's resident llama, with space for other large companion animals when the need arises. Residing in the center at this time are 19 cats, 14 dogs and the llama. There are a total of 480 animals currently enrolled to enter the program, with 173 owners from 26 different states.

"Over the more than 21 years which we have been in operation, many donors have supported the center by making contributions to our building fund, unrestricted gifts, and in many cases creating an endowment from their estate plans in excess of the minimum required endowment to enroll their pets," said Dr. Presnal. "We are extremely grateful for this support, and this support is what has enabled us to create the exceptional facility and care that our resident pets receive at the center."

Enrollment is not a complicated process, and interested donors can contact the center by phone (979-45-1188) or email (<http://vetmed.tamu.edu/stevenson-center>). "We highly encourage anyone that might have an interest in enrolling their pets in the center to visit the center to fully appreciate the compassionate care that their pet would receive," said Dr. Presnal.

Center staff will pick up enrolled animals anywhere in Texas when necessary. The first stop for the pets—before they even enter the Center, is the CVM Small Animal Hospital, where they go through a thorough examination before joining the others. The hospital and its veterinarian's also comprehensive care when a center resident is sick or injured, ensuring the animals get the best care available.

"We believe that the Stevenson Center provides the ultimate in life-care for companion animals comprised of exceptional, compassionate care and the very best veterinary care available anywhere," said Dr. Presnal. "We highly encourage anyone interested in the program to schedule a visit to see the center 'up close and personal.'" late Mildred Brunk Travis.

Denise Wiggins made a lasting impression on this world and she will be dearly missed. She touched the lives of countless others in many ways with her tender kindness, gentle goodness, joyful laughter and selfless service. She harbored no resentment, jealousy, bitterness or envy. She was virtuous, caring, forgiving and sweet. Her whole life was like her work at the nursing home where she would hold the hand of someone needing comfort, read a scripture to someone needing faith and say a prayer for someone needing grace. Her deep love for her husband, daughters, grandchildren and all her family and friends was unconditional and never-ending. She was a lovely flower in this world and now she blooms in heaven where her beauty will never fade away. May she rest in peace in God's eternal loving arms.

She is survived by her husband Robert Jerry Wiggins; daughters, Wendy

'Let It Go, Let It Go, Let It Go'

This year I celebrate my 20th year as a practicing grandfather. I am not sure that after 20 years I know anything more about being a grandfather than I did before. I have not found any books written on how to be a grandfather, maybe I should write one. I have enjoyed those 20 years and it just seems to be getting better.

One of the interesting things about a grandfather is spending time with the grandchildren, especially when they are trying to watch a movie.

I enjoy a movie every now and again, but when it comes to little girls, they do not seem to have the same taste in movies as their grandfather. This is something I will never understand. What is a grandfather to do? The only way to get them to sit still and be quiet is to show one of their movies.

One of the movies so important to little girls these days is the movie called Frozen. As it happened, we had to have a special night set aside to watch this movie with the granddaughters. I figured, how hard could it really be?

I consented on this movie because I thought this would give those tired, overworked little gray cells upstairs a chance to relax and not work so hard. After all, how can you think when you are watching something like a movie for children?

I also thought it would be nice to rest my body as well as my eyes, if I can get away with it.

After all, who wants to follow the plot, if there is any such thing, in a children's movie.

We had settled down to watch this exciting little girl's movie, I was half dozing and then I began to think about the manuscript I was working on. I had been having trouble with a certain aspect of that manuscript and as I sat there, I begin to think about how I could fix that problem. It almost came to me, but then I heard, "Grandpa, grandpa, grandpa look at that, look at that!"

The cheering granddaughters brought me back to the land of the living and the reality as they were watching it. Both of them at the same time begin to explain to me what it happened and what was going to happen.

DR. JAMES L. SNYDER
Out to Pastor

Between the two little chatterboxes, I had no idea what they were talking about. What is a grandfather to do but smile broadly and pretend you are listening. After all, they are only little once.

They soon quieted down and were fixated on the screen watching the movie unfold. I sighed a deep sigh of relief and went back into my previous stupor. I try to follow the movie, but then I remembered that in the afternoon I had to write a column for my newspapers. As of yet, I did not have an idea what that column would be. I like to start with the title and then following that develop a story line. As yet, I did not have an acceptable column title. As I mused about this, thoughts were beginning to gel and that little light bulb began to flicker. Thoughts were beginning to come into place, and then I heard some loud screaming and clapping and two little girls were jumping up and down singing, "Let it go, let it go, let it go."

I sat up in my chair, looking around trying to figure out what in the world they were trying to let go. It is at this point that grandmothers are no help to grandfathers. Grandmothers can say, "You girls watch the movie with grandpa while I make supper."

Personally, I do not think it is fair. I would like to make supper one night while grandma joins the little girls watching a movie. The problem is, nobody would eat the supper that I would prepare, not even Yours Truly.

What these little girls were all excited about was something I was trying to figure out. It did not make any sense to me, but as I watched the little grandchildren, they were excited, laughing, shouting and singing. Of course, it is hard to tell the difference between shouting and singing, especially in today's musical world. They were absolutely enjoying themselves and I tried to focus in on the source of their enjoyment.

"Grandpa," both of them yelled at me in absolute delight, "sing the song with us."

What grandpa's go through while entertaining their grandchildren.

I made a deal with them at that time, "I will sing with you, but I certainly will not dance with you." A grandfather has to draw the line somewhere. And so, I joined in singing, "Let it go, let it go, let it go." I got those words down pretty good, but the rest of the song was a mysterious blank to me. They were excited about singing it and soon I was excited about watching them sing it.

That evening when the little ones were snuggled into bed, I remember what David said. "For his anger endureth but a moment; in his favor is life: weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning" (Psalms 30:5).

In the Hebrew, so they tell me, the word "joy," also means singing. My faith in Jesus Christ has brought me to a wonderful place where I can sing, "Let it go, let it go, let it go."
