County to approve 'rollback' millage

By CAROL KENT
638-0212 | @WCN_HCT
Ckent@chipleypaper.com

CHIPLEY — The Washington County Board of Commissioners is expected to officially approve a rollback millage rate of 9.252 and a $27.9 million budget when they convene in their final budget hearing Monday, Sept. 15.

The figures were tentatively approved in Thursday's public budget hearing, with Chairman Alan Bush being the sole "no" vote on the proposed one-mil increase rate.

Commissioners stressed the proposed rate increase is in proportion to the three percent dip in the county's 2014 property tax digest, that when property values decrease, so does the amount of tax collected. A millage rate to bring the same amount of property tax revenue as the year before is the "rollback" rate.

Commissioner Bush says his concern is that not everyone will see a decrease in property values, and therefore the rollback rate could mean some residents will see a higher tax bill this year.

"I don't have a problem with the budget, just the increase in millage," said Bush. "It's a rollback rate, unless your property values went up. In that case, the increase in millage will mean an increase in your tax bill."

The total budget, excluding the Sunny Hills and Oakwood Hills Municipal Service Benefit Unit (MSBU), is $27,928,025, and was tentatively approved 3-2, with Bush and Commissioner Joel Pate voting no.

The MSBU budget, tentatively set at $569,540, passed with Commissioner Pate being the sole no vote.

Commissioner would not comment on his reason for voting against the budgets.

Look for a detailed report how the final budget is set in the Sept. 17 edition of the Washington County News.

BIG LEAGUE STAR, HOMETOWN BOY

CAROL KENT | The News

CHIPLEY — 2010 Chipley High School graduate Karsten Whitson may be flying high in Major League baseball, but he hasn't forgotten his hometown roots. The recently drafted Boston Red Sox player flew home for a visit this week, stopping in to see his grandfather, District 3 County Commissioner Charles Brock, during the county's budget workshop. Whitson, who went ninth overall to San Diego in 2010 straight out of high school, turned down more than $2 million to pitch for the University of Florida and was later selected by Boston in the 11th round of the Major League Baseball Draft as the highest-drafted player with area ties. Clockwise from left, Karsten Whitson poses with Washington County District 2 Commissioner Joel Pate and District 3 Commissioner Charles Brock, who is Whitson's grandfather, at the county's Thursday budget meeting.

Both men are charged with armed burglary and two counts of burglary of a dwelling or conveyance.

Sheriff Bobby Haddock asks that anyone with information on any illegal activity contact WCSO at 638-TIPS (8477) or by email at tips@wcco.us.

Commissioners won't impose 5-cents fuel levy

By CAROL KENT
638-0212 | @WCN_HCT
Ckent@chipleypaper.com

CHIPLEY — The five cents gas tax previously considered by county officials to help generate more revenue here won't be coming any time soon.

The tax, commonly called the ELMS Nickel, allows counties to levy a fuel tax of up to 5 cents and would have required approval by a supermajority vote from the Board of County Commissioners.

Interim Clerk of Court Harold Bazzel previously suggested the levy as an option to fund road projects as allowed by the state, freeing other funds to be allocated to repay the county's debts.

Washington County Commissioners failed to make a motion requesting County Attorney Jeff

Goodman proceed with the legal steps of the measure, which have an Oct. 1 deadline, when they meet in called session Thursday.

If the tax had been approved, it would have begun Jan. 1, 2015, and generated about $458,000 a year, which would have been distributed between the county and its municipalities through an interlocal agreement.

While the board stated it would not pursue the levy at this time, commissioners didn't say they wouldn't consider the levy in the future.

CVS changes name, stops tobacco sales

The Associated Press

As CVS sharpens its focus on customer health, the nation's second-largest drugstore chain tweaked its corporate name and stopped the sale of tobacco almost a month sooner than planned.

CVS Caremark said it now will be known as CVS Health, effective immediately. The signs on its 7,700 drugstores won't change, so the change might not register with shoppers.

However, those customers will see a big change when they check out. The cigars and cigarettes that used to fill the shelves behind store cash registers have been replaced with nicotine gum and signs urging visitors to kick the tobacco habit.

A store in downtown Indianapolis also stocked free tobacco quit packs where cigarettes used to sit. The red-and-white boxes, almost the size of a cigarette pack, contain coupons, a card showing how much a smoker can save by quitting and a booklet with games to distract someone fighting the urge to smoke.

CVS and other drugstores have delved deeper into customer health in recent years, in part to serve the aging baby boom generation and the millions of uninsured people who are expected to gain coverage under the federal health care overhaul. While competitors Walgreen Co. and Rite Aid Corp. still sell tobacco, they have started offering more health care products and added walk-in clinics.

Interim president applies for FSU job

By JIM TURNER
The News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE — The search for the next president of Florida State University, widely believed to be lined up in favor of influential state Sen. John Thrasher, drew applications before a Tuesday deadline from a number of academics with extensive resumes.

The university's 27-member Presidential Advisory Search Committee will have 39 resumes to weed through during a meeting Friday, as it prepares to call back a shorter list of candidates next week for a first round of interviews. Among the applicants is Florida State's interim President Garnett Stokes.

Some student and faculty groups have repeatedly criticized the search process, raising concerns about Thrasher and pushing for more representation on the search committee. But a timeline remains for a president to be named Sept. 23 by the university's board of trustees.

Trustee Ed Burr, the chairman of the search committee, said he had yet to review all the resumes but expressed confidence Wednesday that an impressive pool of finalists will be asked to return next week for the initial interviews.

"It's hard when just looking at the resumes, but some of them look very qualified," Burr said.

As expected, the number of applications grew during the past week from 22, as last-minute interest came from academics.

Among those whose applications were posted Tuesday and Wednesday on the search committee's webpage were Colorado State University System Chancellor Michael Martin; former Vermont University President Daniel Fogel; University of South Carolina Executive Vice President for Academic Affairs Michael Amiridis; and former West Virginia University Provost Michele Wheatly.

Thrasher, a former House speaker who is chairman of Gov. Rick Scott's re-election campaign, said Wednesday he's refrained from personally speaking with members of the committee and didn't go to the FSU football team's season opener Saturday in Texas because he thought it would have been inappropriate while the search is underway.

"I've hung in there this long, I'm going to hang in until they tell me I'm not a candidate anymore," Thrasher, R-St. Augustine, said. "I'm at peace. I've been through a lot of these things, elections and that kind of stuff, but what happens, happens. I'm going to give it my best and let the chips fall where they may."

Thrasher, who holds bachelor's and law degrees from the university, has been a major supporter of FSU in the Legislature, including helping the university establish a medical school.

While the latest batch of resumes drew a number of applicants from major universities, something that was missing in initial submissions this spring, not all of the recent applicants have lofty academic resumes.

One of the newer applicants is a former substitute teacher who works in residential contracting. Another applicant noted she is "working as a school bus driver while conducting research about the impact of administrator attitude toward bus drivers on academic achievement."

Still, the entry by Stokes and other academic professionals adds some additional pressure on the committee, which has envisioned the next president to be able to enhance the university's academic reputation, to be an "energetic fundraiser," to project optimism for the school's future, and to provide "leadership for a highly successful intercollegiate athletics program."

Stokes said Wednesday that applying for the position wasn't her intent when she moved into the "interim" job in March, after former President Eric Barron, an academic with a track record in fundraising, accepted the position of president at Penn State University.

"I came here to be a provost and (have) enjoyed that," Stokes said Wednesday. "I had started thinking about the fact that I would want to be a president. That was in the back of my mind, something I wanted to do. Whether or not I would apply at FSU wasn't immediately apparent."

Stokes has been provost and executive vice president for academic affairs at FSU since 2011.

She credited search consultant Alberto Pimentel for being able to bring about an impressive pool of applicants.

The search was highly criticized after the prior search consultant, Bill Funk, advised the committee to pause the process in May. Funk at the time warned the committee that Thrasher was casting a "long-shadow," keeping other qualified candidates from wanting to apply for the job.

But that created an outcry from faculty and students and ultimately led to the Funk's resignation and a reopening of the application process a month later.

The springtime pause drew Florida Supreme Court Justice Ricky Polston and state Rep. Michelle Rehwinkel Vasilinda, D-Tallahassee, to apply.

Rehwinkel Vasilinda, an attorney who has taught at Tallahassee Community College since 1989, said she was glad to see the interest from people with academic backgrounds in the more recent resumes, something considered missing when the process was shut down.

However, she continues to consider experience with Florida's Legislature as a high priority for those seeking the position.

"If Thrasher is still in, I'm in," Rehwinkel Vasilinda said Wednesday. "Whether you're president of Vermont or a provost in Virginia, the thing to understand is the need to have a relationship with the Legislature. The Florida Legislature really gets their hands deep into higher education, which is unlike other places. And that is a skill set that can't be overlooked."

The whittled-down pool will be asked to come to Tallahassee for interviews Monday and Tuesday.

A smaller group of finalists would be asked back for additional interviews the week of Sept. 15, during which time the finalists also would meet with groups on campus.

The committee is scheduled to make a recommendation to the board of trustees on Sept. 22.

The trustees, which still would have to forward the final choice to the university system's Board of Governors, are scheduled to meet Sept. 23.

How to protect your data in the cloud

NEW YORK (AP) — The circulation of nude photographs stolen from celebrities' online accounts has raised questions about the security of storing information over the Internet, a growing practice known as the cloud.

Apple confirmed Tuesday that some celebrity accounts were compromised by a targeted attack on usernames, passwords and security questions. Although Apple said there was no general breach in any of its systems, such as the iCloud storage service, it appears hackers were able to gain access to individual accounts simply by figuring out passwords and answers to security questions.

So if celebrities' information isn't safe, then whose is? Here is a closer look at how safe data is when stored remotely on these services.

Q. What is the cloud?

A. The cloud is a way of storing photos, documents, email and other data on computers located elsewhere, so you're not using space on your computer, phone or other device. Amazon, Apple, Google and Microsoft all offer cloud-based storage. Smaller companies like Dropbox and Evernote do, too.

The advantage is that you can access the same information from any device. And if you lose your phone, for example, you don't lose your vacation pictures.

The drawback is that you are putting your information somewhere else, so you run the risk of a hacking attack on those systems and accounts.

Q. Is it secure?

A. For the most part, yes. Companies invest a lot on trying to ensure that people's private information stays private.

"The short answer is the cloud is often more secure than other storage," says Rich Mogull, CEO of security research and advisory firm Securosis.

But that doesn't mean it is completely immune.

"Like a lot of internet services, there are a lot of attackers who have a lot of time," Mogull said.

Q. How can individuals make their data more secure?

A. You need passwords to access your accounts, so choosing a strong one is important.

Tim Bajarin, an analyst at technology research firm Creative Strategies, recommends having different passwords for each account you hold online, so a breach in one system won't compromise another.

It also is important to have a number and punctuation mark in each password, or a creative spelling of a word to make it harder to guess.

Also, avoid using common words or notable birthdays as passwords. A strong password is particularly important if you store sensitive information online.

Another way to make your information harder to hack is called multi-factor, or two-step, identification. That means the first time you log onto an account from a new device, you are asked for a second form of identification.

Usually, that involves getting sent a code as a text on your phone or an email.

MARIANNA — Marianna Mayor Rico Williams has issued a proclamation making Sept. 17-23 Constitution Week. The tradition of celebrating the Constitution was started in 1890 by the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution (NSDAR.) In 1955, the Daughters petitioned Congress to set aside Sept. 17-23 annually to be dedicated for the observance of Constitution Week. The resolution was later adopted by the U.S. Congress and signed into Public Law #915 Aug. 2, 1956, by President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

VHS theatre announces cast for 'Dearly Departed'

Special to The News

The Vernon High School Theatre Department is currently in full rehearsals for their fall production, "Dearly Departed."

Following three successful days of auditions, Director of Theatre Kevin Russell cast the following individuals:

- Ethan Suggs as Ray-Bud Turpin
- Nicole Middlemass as Lucille Turpin
- Darynne Richardson as Lucille Turpin
- Hunter Farrar as Junior Turpin
- Kaylee Walsingham as Suzanna Turpin
- Stephanie Brinkmeier as Marguerite
- Dennis O'Donnell as Royce
- Sarah Coatney as Delightful Turpin
- Avery Moon as The Rev. Hooker
- Cheyanne Garza as Veda
- Austin Halmark as Norval
- Lynn Barnes as Nadine
- Ty Brunson as Clyde
- Gabby Farrar as Jaunita
- Cassidy Smith, Ruben Salinas Cobart
- Neal Mayo, Avery Hodges
- Erica Cureton, Hannah Jenkins
- Jessie Smelcer, Jayde Coatney
- Tabitha Bourkard as the Joy of Life Singers
- Leana Andrews will serve as stage manager.

In the southern backwoods, the beleaguered Turpin family proves that living and dying in the South are seldom tidy and always hilarious. Despite their earnest efforts to pull themselves together for their father's funeral, the Turpin's other problems keep overshadowing the solemn occasion: Firstborn

Ray-Bud goes crazy as the funeral bills mount; Junior, the younger son, is juggling financial ruin, a pack of no-neck monster kids, and a wife who suspects him of being unfaithful; their spinster sister, Delightful, copes with death as she does life, by devouring junk food; and all the neighbors add more than two cents. As the situation becomes fraught with mishap, Ray-Bud says to his long-suffering wife, "When I die, don't tell nobody. Just bury me in the backyard and tell everybody I left you." Amidst the chaos, the Turpins turn for comfort to their friends and neighbors, an eccentric community of misfits who just manage to pull together and help each other through their hours of need, and finally, the funeral.

Not since "Steel Magnolias" has a more colorful and dysfunctional group of Southern eccentrics gathered below the Mason-Dixon Line. When the patriarch of the Turpin family keels over dead in the first scene, the struggle to get him buried involves the whole clan, including the not-so-grieving widow who wants to put "Mean and Surly" on the tombstone. "If you were amused by the kind of bucolic mayhem of ... "Greater Tuna," this more ambitious trip down a rustic main street could be just your dish of cola."

"Dearly Departed" will take the VHS stage Thursday, Nov. 20, and Saturday, Nov. 22, at 7 p.m. nightly. Tickets will go on sale at Vernon High School to the general public on Monday, Nov. 3. Tickets will be $10 for adults, and $5 for students. Vernon High School is at 3232 Moss Hill Road in Vernon. For more information, visit vhs.wcsdschools.com or email vhstheatre@gmail.com.

Science Fiction Turning Into Fact

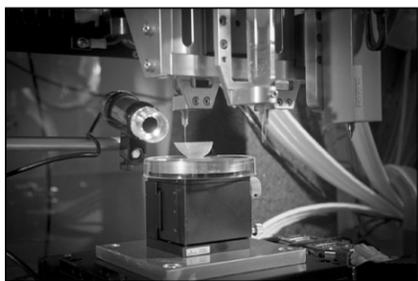

Printing the Future in 3-D

In "Star Trek," if the crew wanted anything — blankets, a special meal, gemstones — the "replicator" could just pop it out. A few years ago, this sounded like far-out science fiction. But today this technology, 3-D printing, is just around the corner.

People are making houses, toys, jewelry, airplane parts and exact copies of dinosaur fossils with 3-D printers. NASA is running experiments on printing a moon base out of lunar soil, or any meal an astronaut wants. It is sending a 3-D printer to the space station to learn how astronauts can create replacement parts and tools.

But the most exciting possibilities for 3-D printing are in medicine. Scientists are testing hundreds of different ways 3-D printing could help heal people. It could create exact artificial copies of a damaged arm or leg. It could copy cancer tissue so doctors could figure out the best way to kill it. Someday, we may even be able to re-create whole organs for people needing a new liver or heart.

To learn more about this amazing new technology, The Mini Page talked with an expert on 3-D printing from the Medical University of South Carolina in Charleston.

A 3-D printer at the Wake Forest Institute for Regenerative Medicine in Winston-Salem, North Carolina, prints an experimental kidney.

In 2000, a medical researcher, Thomas Boland, invented the first general bioprinter by remodeling a regular inkjet printer. He replaced the ink in the cartridges with living cells.

When 3-D printing uses living tissue, it is called bioprinting. The material used to print the living tissue is called bioink.

What's the difference?

In 2-D printing, the letters or pictures are printed on a flat sheet of paper. They are in two dimensions: length and width.

In 3-D printing, objects have a third dimension: depth. Objects printed in 3-D are more like sculptures.

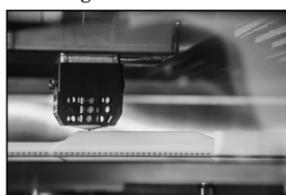

A 2-D printer receives computer commands telling it where to place tiny bits of ink. One by one, these ink drops create letters or pictures.

A 3-D printer receives computer commands telling it where to place tiny bits of materials. The materials can be almost anything, from plastic, to living cells, to metal. The 3-D printer puts down the materials one layer at a time, building up the object.

Adding layers

Objects can be made in almost any shape. Because material is added in layers, this type of printing is also called additive manufacturing.

The first 3-D printers came out in the 1980s, but in the last few years, the equipment has become much better and much less expensive. New, inventive ways to use this technology are being discovered all over.

A 3-D printer head drops bits of plastic to build layers of a tool.

Meet Cozi Zuehlsdorff

Cozi Zuehlsdorff stars as Hazel in the movie "Dolphin Tale 2." The movie is based on a true story about a rescued baby dolphin. When she was 8 years old, Cozi got the part of Annie in the musical of the same name at her community theater. She discovered that she loved performing. She has appeared in several other community musicals. She has also acted in TV commercials and shows and in the movie "Dolphin Tale." She is a voice actor with the chorus that sings in TV animated shows such as "Sofia the First" and "Jake and the Neverland Pirates." Cozi lives in Orange County, California, with her parents and older sister. She loves to sing, act, play the piano and make movies with her friends. She is home-schooled.

Micha Hancock

Micha (MIKE-uh) Hancock is a setter for the Penn State Nittany Lions women's volleyball team. Her job is to make pinpoint passes — or assists — for her teammates to "kill" with smashing hits over the net. On defense, she is a "dig" specialist — keeping the opposing team's attacks in play. Micha's play is championship caliber, and she has the hardware to prove it. Last season, Micha set the table as her Nittany Lions devoured the competition, compiling a 34-2 match record and capturing a record-tying sixth NCAA championship in program history. Micha's play in the postseason, including a championship game victory over conference rival Wisconsin, earned her the NCAA Tournament Most Outstanding Player honor. Now Micha and the Nittany Lions are poised to defend their national title as the 2014 season gets underway.

From Plastics to Living Tissue

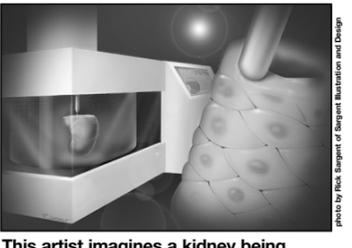

Artificial body parts

With 3-D printing, making prosthetics (prahs-THEH-tiks), or artificial body parts, is much cheaper. For example, with traditional manufacturing, a prosthetic child's hand might cost $25,000 to $50,000. As the child grows, the hand would have to be replaced over and over. This could get very expensive.

With 3-D printing, a prosthetic hand might cost $5. Experts believe such inexpensive prosthetics will be easily available within 10 years.

A 3-D printed part can be made to fit each person's body exactly. This means the body part will work better and be more comfortable. A part could be built in a day.

Already, people are using 3-D-printed hands, arms, hips, teeth, skulls, knees and ears. These prosthetics are not living. Printing live limbs is many years away. But prosthetic 3-D body parts that move well could be available in a few years.

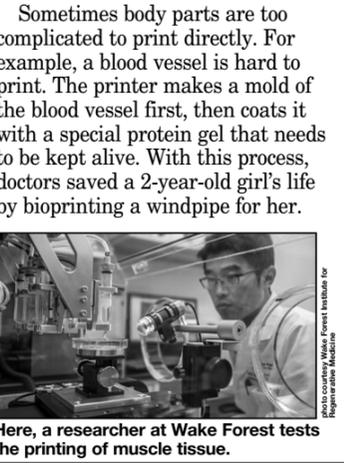

This artist imagines a kidney being printed inside a special chamber on the left. To the right, a printer is putting down layers of cells to build a blood vessel at the Medical University of South Carolina.

Super models

Doctors are printing exact copies of body parts to help them learn. For example, they feed images of an injured heart into a computer. It creates a 3-D model from the images and sends the data to the printer. Out comes an exact copy of the heart, letting the doctor practice on it without worrying about hurting the patient. This is especially valuable with unusual or tricky problems.

Printing with living ink

It is much harder to print with living cells than with other material. Living material needs to be nourished and kept moist. Body cells act together in ways we don't always understand. Sometimes body parts are too complicated to print directly. For example, a blood vessel is hard to print. The printer makes a mold of the blood vessel first, then coats it with a special protein gel that needs to be kept alive. With this process, doctors saved a 2-year-old girl's life by bioprinting a windpipe for her.

Here, a researcher at Wake Forest tests the printing of muscle tissue.

Printing to Heal

Copying a community

Doctors hope to be able to perform tests on 3-D prints of living tissue. For example, they could run tests on copies of a cancer tumor to target the exact medicine for killing the cancer. For years, doctors have been able to grow many copies of the same cell. But every living tissue is made from many types of cells. Cells "talk" to each other. They influence one another's actions. Testing just one type of cell does not give a complete picture. With 3-D printing, researchers can duplicate the actual cell community. Medicines are tested on animals before being given to humans. The ability to test drugs on exact tissue copies would lessen animal testing.

Beyond testing

We are probably more than 50 years away from being able to print whole organs. But we are nearly able to print pieces of organs. If we could implant those pieces into a patient, the body could often heal itself.

For example, if a patient had an injured kidney, doctors could take a sample of the part that was still healthy and print 3-D copies of it. They then would attach, or graft, the printed tissue onto the kidney. After that, the body would be able to do the rest of the repairs itself.

A researcher at Wake Forest works with an artificial hand to learn how to transplant 3-D skin onto a burn victim's body.

Making bioink

To make bioink, scientists would take cells from a person's own body. They wouldn't need a lot of original body cells. The printer could make as many copies as needed.

Our bodies have a great ability to regrow living tissue. In most cases, scientists wouldn't even need special cells such as stem cells. In fact, they would probably just use fat cells.

As with other body cells, fat cells could grow into other types of cells. Few people would be sad if they lost some fat cells!

The Mini Page thanks Dr. Mike Yost, science director of the biofabrication facility, Medical University of South Carolina, for help with this issue.

Look through your newspaper for stories about 3-D printing.

Next week, The Mini Page is about how to behave when going online.

Transplants

Transplanting copies of a person's own tissue is much safer than transplanting tissue from someone else. Your body wants to kill cells that aren't part of you. But it would see 3-D tissue copies as being identical to its own parts.

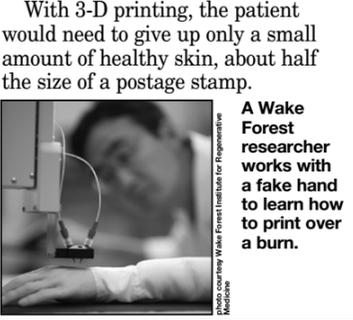

Doctors could transplant the new tissue with a catheter (KA-the-ter), or special tube.

Within a few years, doctors will probably be transplanting 3-D prints of simple tissues such as cartilage to repair joints such as knees.

Writing on the body

The U.S. military and Wake Forest Institute are working to treat burn patients with bioprinting. Now, doctors treat burns by removing healthy skin from a patient's body. They use that skin to cover the burn. This is painful, and when a patient is badly burned, it can be hard to find enough healthy cells to graft.

With 3-D printing, the patient would need to give up only a small amount of healthy skin, about half the size of a postage stamp.

A Wake Forest researcher works with a fake hand to learn how to print over a burn.

FOOTBALL FARE

Score big with savory snacks

By JAN WADDY

747-5072 | @JanWaddy1
jwaddy@pcnh.com

PANAMA CITY — Football season is another excuse to celebrate, especially in the South, where tailgating fans dip into spreads of savory appetizers.

“Everything’s a big deal. My brother played football and we always had a football kick-off party. We celebrate everything,” said Lara Lyn Carter, cookbook author of “Southern Thymes Shared.”

Carter, who also hosts “Savor the Good Life” on WALB-TV in Albany, Ga., shared her recipe for Black Beans Salsa during a cooking class at Somethin’s Cookin’, 93 E. 11th St. in Panama City. The “crowd pleaser” is part of the football kick off party section in her cookbook, which is available at Somethin’s Cookin’.

“This will actually be better tomorrow. It makes a lot. I use half as a dip and then strain it the next day and roll it in a flour tortilla with mozzarella and put it on a panini press and have a vegetarian taco. You can put it on taco salad, too,” said Carter, also likes to put fish or chicken in foil with the salsa on top and set it on the grill.

She rolled the lime with her hand on the counter before juicing it.

“If a lime is not very juicy, you can pop it in the microwave for a few seconds,” she said.

The salsa is not spicy, but you can add a little heat with fresh jalapenos. I love fresh cilantro, but if you don’t, you can use parsley instead.

“Cilantro is either something you love or hate,” Carter admitted. “When I have my own vegetable garden, I have canned my own tomatoes. You could do fresh, just not so much juice. You can easily add avocados to that, too. This is designed to be super easy, 5-minute prep. It keeps three to five days in the refrigerator, but it never goes that long. It is gone before that.”

Walt Abbott shares his smoking ideas for tailgate fare during More Smoking with Walt at 10:30 a.m. Sept. 13 at Somethin’s Cookin’. He starts with a variety of smoked sausage, while he demonstrates brining, cleaning meat, smoking and saucing, and always has plenty for his cooking class guests to eat. (Reservations and pricing: 769-8979.)

We have used Smoky Walt’s Rub at home as a flavorful addition to smoked chicken and pork ribs. The seasoning blend (brown sugar, sea salt, black pepper, granulated garlic, paprika, onion powder, chili powder and other herbs and spices), which Abbott sells at the gourmet cooking shop, is mild enough to please all ages.

Smoking meat is done “low and slow,” while more impromptu gatherings call for quicker preparation.

On Tuesday, Somethin’s Cookin’ owner Hannelore Holland served a pork slider special at the bistro, where she also will serve them Wednesday lunch.

Her recipe for Chi Cha Pork can be served on little rolls for a different take on sliders.

“We serve ours topped with our coleslaw, vinegar-based,” Holland said. “It’s easy, it’s tasty, it’s quick.”

Though the recipe says it is best to marinate the pork overnight or at least two hours, Holland said, “I did it in a class for 20 minutes and it was still good. The longer it marinates, the more tender. This is a recipe people who don’t cook a lot will still do.”

QUESTIONS & ATTITUDE

Compelling questions ... and maybe a few actual answers

AP/DAVID TULIS

Does Mild Matt look worried about being winless? Actually, he's deep into his points-gathering zone.

Who will be next to get your reverse jinx?

Yeah, yeah, all it took was a lot of "Poor ol' Kasey Kahne" talk in this corner last week, and wouldn't you know it, he goes out and steals a win at Atlanta. Don't forget, though, in the midst of last week's chatter, it was mentioned that his whole season could turn around in a flash. And it did, thanks to that Hendrick horsepower on the final overtime restart.

Do we now recalibrate our odds board for the Chase?

Let's wait until after this weekend. If Kahne makes it two straight by winning Richmond — certainly a possibility — in a two-weekend span he goes from major disappointment to one of everybody's three or four favorites to run wild in the final 10 weeks. But right now, you have to put the best odds on the two Penske drivers (Joey Logano, Brad Keselowski) and at least two of the other Hendrick guys (definitely Jimmie Johnson, of course, and either Junior or Jeff).

Leaving out your dream champ?

Kinda. Yes, I'm still rooting — in a slightly evil way — for Matt Kenseth to go winless yet win the championship. Don't forget, with all this emphasis put on winning this year, you can still win the Cup without winning a trophy. Weird, huh?

A couple questions we had to ask — ourselves

Getty Images/BRIAN LAWDERMILK

Wasn't Kyle Larson supposed to have a win by now?

Has Kasey Kahne gone from disappointment to Chase threat?

GODSPEAK: If he builds momentum, he may look like Laird Hamilton atop a monster wave in the Chase.

KEN'S CALL: It's all about momentum sometimes, so yes. Don't be surprised if he wins again this week.

If there's a 14th different 2014 winner this week, who's your pick?

GODSPEAK: Kyle Larson would be my first pick with Clint Bowyer a close second.

KEN'S CALL: Since we all assumed Kyle Larson would win somewhere this year, I'll take him.

With laggard Kasey Kahne securing a position in the Chase for the Sprint Cup Sunday night at Atlanta Motor Speedway, Hendrick Motorsports' stock cars now make up 25 percent of the playoff field.

It's no wonder team owner Rick Hendrick had a big smile as he watched the No. 5 Chevrolet flash across the finish line. He now joins Roger Penske (two cars) and Joe Gibbs (three cars) as the only teams with all entries earning postseason berths.

"Just glad to see these guys have some good luck," Hendrick said after Kahne's victory. "They have had a tough year."

The win was so special that Kahne's driver teammates — Dale Earnhardt Jr., Jeff Gordon and Jimmie Johnson — gathered in Victory Lane to welcome the driver to the Chase party. It looked more like a Hendrick Motorsports company picnic than a Victory Lane celebration.

"I think that shows the kind of chemistry we have with our drivers, and they know they got to race each other, and they want to beat each other, but they were pulling for Kasey to get in," Hendrick said.

After the Cup Series pushes through Richmond, the four Hendrick drivers will go back to battling each other for position, points and wins, but the boss likes his chances in this Chase.

"I think when we're tied with three cars for the most wins (three) and the momentum with the No. 5 car going in, I think that we have a really good shot," Hendrick said. "I think that it's the best balance that we have ever had with all the cars going into the Chase."

GORDON UP TO 750

Jeff Gordon continues to amaze as he begins the transition into the twilight of his career, which will continue at least three more seasons at Hendrick Motorsports. Sunday night the 43-year-old made his 750th consecutive Cup Series start, dating back to his debut in the last race of the 1992 season, held at Atlanta that year. "That is a big number," Gordon said. "I hadn't thought about it a whole lot until I saw a decal with it. I thought, 'Man that is a lot of races, especially in a row.' It seems like it was yesterday that it started right here over 20 years ago."

PEACE, BROTHER

Remember that blowup between Denny Hamlin and Kevin Harvick at Bristol a week ago? Harvick wrecked Hamlin and Hamlin tossed his HANS device in anger at Harvick's car. Harvick wasted no time apologizing to Hamlin immediately after the race. "I think it was like eight minutes after the checkered flag he reached out to me," Hamlin told Fox Sports 1. "He just made a little mistake. We all do it at one point or another." Case closed.

After 24 weeks of acting happy for teammates, Kasey Kahne finally gets to smile for good reason.

ATLANTA REWIND

Kahne's season and outlook turn after Atlanta victory

Kasey Kahne's season could've been labeled a disappointment, considering he was among the championship favorites entering 2014. All that disappointment went away with a Sunday night win at Atlanta. Here's part of the post-victory press conference:

Kasey, you're in The Chase. Tell us about your evening.

"Yeah, it was just an unbelievable way to make The Chase. And to win at Atlanta — it's a tough track, a track that I love coming to. And so, it feels really good to get a victory.

"We had an up-and-down night. We started ... I could barely get through the corner; I was loose. I fell back to about 22nd, I think. Then made some adjustments and got rolling. We got up to about fifth. And then, we kind of dialed ourselves out again. Then, back. Went a lap down. Then came back again at the end. The last 60 laps, I felt really good."

On that last restart, mentally, it seemed you were very confident.

"I felt like that all night. I felt confident. I stayed with it all night. We were good and we were bad and we were back to good. I stayed really under control and positive throughout the race, and the guys just kept working hard, and they kept making adjustments. And at the end we had the speed again.

"I just kept telling myself, 'Do not spin the tires, just take your time on the throttle. And if you do that, you're going to have a great opportunity here' because I knew that everybody was going to spin a little bit.

"Restarts just really worked out for us tonight. We took advantage of those. I was really happy that we did, because I struggle with restarts a lot."

You said that you have struggled in the past with restarts. Why is that? And was it just a matter of having the fresh tires?

"Well, we all had fresh tires that one time. So, tonight my restarts were good. I had good grip when I got to Turn 1 and could run hard through the corner.

"A big part of our racing right now is the restarts. That first lap or two is where you can gain or lose a lot in a run. So tonight we gained and it worked for us."

A SEVERE CASE OF YUCKITIS

My schedule recently called for me to do some travel involving airplanes. I am not a fan of airplanes, but airports are something else altogether. They seem to be like a mall. Whatever you want, you can find it in an airport. The bigger the airport, the more you can find.

I was sitting in an airport restaurant waiting for my plane and simply enjoying myself. I watched the people go by, and inside I was laughing and making fun of them. I play a little game when I am all by myself. If only they knew what I was thinking about as they walked by, they would come over and give me a stern look. I have never seen a person that I cannot make fun of, including that raspy looking person in my bathroom mirror. It is the sort of game you can play when you are all by yourself with nothing else to do.

I was sipping my umpteenth cup of coffee when I happened to notice several people walking by who were sneezing. At first I did not think too much of it, but then I began to notice more and more people sneezing. Is there a sneezing epidemic going on that I have not heard of yet?

Out to Pastor

I tried not to pay attention to it and went back to my game of "Who Can I Make Fun of Now?"

Maybe it was programmed into my head at the time, but I could not help noticing every other person walking by heading for an airplane was either sneezing or sniffing or coughing. I thought to myself, "Self, I sure hope they are not on our plane?" I finally got to my gate and waited to board the airplane and then take off. I was checking some things on my cell phone when I heard a person behind me sneeze. Not only did they sneeze, but they sneezed half a dozen times, and it just about drove me crazy. I know the road to crazy for me is rather a short drive, but I hate taking that road.

It dawned on me at the time that the person behind me doing all the sneezing was also waiting to get on the same plane I was going to board in a few minutes. Why can't they check your sneezing at the gates before you come in so that you do not have to take it on board the plane? I mean, after all, they check for everything else!

Why can't they check your sneezing at the gates before you come in so that you do not have to take it on board the plane? I mean, after all, they check for everything else!

Finally, my number was called and I began boarding the airplane. I noticed in front of me was the man who was going all of the sneezing. I whispered to myself, "Self, I hope he has certainly got all of the sneeze out of him."

We finally were seated and it takes me quite a while to get buckled in. Whoever designed planes designed them with the seven Disney dwarfs in mind. To get that belt around me and buckled is a great accomplishment. I would not say I am oversized, just that I am post thin, and by the time I squeezed myself into the seat and strapped myself in with the buckle it is about all I can do to breathe.

On this flight, I happen to be seated in the middle. There would be a person on my right and a person on my left. It was at that time I prayed that they would be skinny and healthy. Two gentlemen came in, one on my left, the other on my right. By the time we all got in and buckled, none of us could move one way or the other.

We smiled at each other and then the plane took off and we were airborne. I happened to notice at the time that nobody on the plane was sneezing, coughing, or even sniffing. I sighed a deep sigh and then it happened to me.

I am not quite sure how all of this happens, but I felt the in the bottom of my lungs a pre-sneeze condition. At that point, I knew exactly what was coming and I did not know how to deal with it.

When you sneeze on an airplane, you cannot turn to your left or to your right because people are sitting there. What is a person to do? If I look up and sneeze, it will all come down on me.

Then I remembered the people I knew when they had to sneeze, sneezed into their arm. I raised my right arm just as I was about to sneeze, and boy did I sneeze.

Whenever I sneeze, it always has to be in triplets. I sneezed three times in my arm and when I come out from that arm, it was drooping and dripping with all sorts of gunk that came from somewhere deep inside of me. What do you do with gunk like that on an airplane?

As I was trying to think about what to do, a verse of Scripture came to my mind. "How is it then, brethren? When ye come together, every one of you hath a psalm, hath a doctrine, hath a tongue, hath a revelation, hath an interpretation. Let all things be done unto edifying" (1 Corinthians 14:26).

It is hard to discipline yourself to do only those things that edify other people. That is the challenge of the Christian life.

BP could face $18 billion in fines

Federal judge finds 'gross negligence' in Gulf oil spill

"Everybody talks about how big they are, but it's staggering," David Uhlmann, a University of Michigan law professor and former chief of the Justice Department's environmental crimes section, said of the price tag for the spill.

BP previously agreed to pay a record $4 billion in criminal fines and penalties for the Deepwater Horizon disaster, plus more than $27 billion in cleanup costs and compensation to people and businesses harmed by the spill.

The company made $24 billion in profits last year but could be forced again to sell some assets to cover the additional fines, analysts said.

Attorney General Eric Holder said Barber's ruling "will ensure that the company is held fully accountable for its recklessness" and will "serve as a strong deterrent to anyone tempted to sacrifice safety and the environment in the pursuit of profit."

Barber held a non-jury trial last year to identify the blowout's causes and apportion blame for the disaster, and on Thursday he ruled that BP bears 67 percent of the responsibility, Swiss-based drilling rig owner Transocean Ltd. 30 percent, and Houston-based cement contractor Halliburton Energy Services 3 percent.

BP made "profit-driven decisions" during the drilling that led to the blowout, the judge concluded in his 153-page ruling. "These instances of negligence, taken together, evince an extreme deviation from the standard

"We hope that today's judgment will bring some measure of closure to the families of the 11 men who tragically lost their lives, and to the thousands of people and businesses still trying to recover from the spill."

James Roy and Stephen Herman represented oil spill victims in the trial of care and a conscious disregard of known risks," he wrote.

Among other things, the judge cited a misinterpreted safety test that should have warned the drilling crew that the well was in danger of blowing out.

In a statement, BP said the evidence did not meet the "very high bar" to prove gross negligence.

James Roy and Stephen Herman, who represented oil spill victims in the trial, said: "We hope that today's judgment will bring some measure of closure to the families of the 11 men who tragically lost their lives, and to the thousands of people and businesses still trying to recover from the spill."

Government experts estimated 4.2 million barrels, or 176 million gallons, spilled into the Gulf. BP urged the judge to use an estimate of 2.45 million barrels, or nearly 103 million gallons, in calculating any Clean Water Act penalties. Barber hasn't ruled yet on how much oil spilled.

If he goes with the government's estimate, BP could be hit with close to $18 billion in fines.

The crude that gushed from the sea floor killed wildlife, stained beaches and polluted marshes. BP ultimately sealed the well after several methods failed.

BP pleaded guilty in 2013 to manslaughter in the rig workers' deaths. Two BP supervisors aboard the rig are awaiting trial on federal manslaughter charges.

Darlene Kimball, who runs Kimball's Seafood on the docks in Pass Christian, Miss., said she hopes Thursday's ruling, and the likelihood of huge penalties, will prompt all oil companies to pay more attention to safety.

"Sometimes something has to happen for people to realize, 'I don't want that to happen with our company. Let's go back and look at how we are doing things,'" she said.

BP faces still another set of potential penalties under the federal Oil Pollution Act of 1990. Uhlmann said those claims could cost BP more than $10 billion.

PANAMA CITY — Police arrested the man they believe pulled the trigger on a man found dead in the trunk of a car in July.

Panama City police announced a second-degree murder charge against Darryl Mack and a principal to second-degree murder charge against Tyricka Woullard on Thursday, just a day after Dontavis Thomas was charged with accessory after the fact to homicide in the slaying of 24-year-old Tavish Greene.

Law enforcement had been investigating Greene's suspicious disappearance when, on July 24, his body was found in the trunk of a car in the yard of a vacant house at 526 E. Eighth Court. Greene had been shot several times.

Before Thursday's announcement, Mack, Woullard and Thomas had been arrested and charged with conspiracy to commit armed robbery for an alleged scheme to lure Greene to a home and rob him of cash and drugs. Mack also was charged with possession of a firearm by a felon.

Panama City Police Department spokesman Officer Richard Thore would not disclose whether Mack's gun was the one used to shoot Greene. The case still is being investigated, and releasing details of an ongoing investigation likely would complicate efforts to prosecute Mack, Woullard and Thomas, he said.

Thore said he believed all the people responsible for shooting Greene had been arrested and charged Thursday.
