All 6 fired in connection with Aug. 5 incident

From staff reports

CHIPLEY — Six correctional officers have been arrested in connection with a prison beating and fired from their positions with the Northwest Florida Reception Center in Chipley.

Florida Department of Corrections officials have arrested Sgt. William Finch, Sgt. James Perkins, Sgt. Robert Miller, Sgt. Christopher Christmas and Sgt. Dalton Riley on charges of malicious felony battery on an inmate. A superior officer, Capt. James Kirkland, also was arrested with additional charges of official misconduct.

All six have been dismissed as a result of their actions, DOC officials said.

The arrests stem from an Aug. 5 incident involving 31-year-old inmate Jeremiah L. Tatum. Tatum currently is serving a seven-year prison sentence for cocaine trafficking.

CHIPLEY — Chipley Mayor Linda Cain will officiate her last council meeting when the City of Chipley convenes in special session Monday, Sept. 29.

Cain's departure, made necessary by mandates from Florida's retirement system, will mark the end of more than a quarter century of service to the Chipley City Council.

The mayor addressed local residents in a recent letter.

“With deep personal sadness, I am unable to continue my service on the city council,” Cain said. “My heart is not in this, but due to the rules of the Florida Retirement System, it has to be. It has been a pleasure to serve on your council for the past 26 years. In those years, I have many pleasant memories of the people who have served with me. I give a heartfelt thanks to each employee, past and present, for their dedication and service. Chipley is a great place to live and will always be so if we continue to work together.”

Brett Butler, who qualified to represent Ward 4 earlier this year, will step in Cain's place on the council in October.

A new mayor and mayor pro-tem, a post currently held by Councilman Lee Dell Kennedy, will be appointed at that time.

WAUSAU — The Wausau Town Council hosted the first reading of an ordinance to adopt the town budget for the 2014-2015 fiscal year when they met in regular session Thursday.

Highlights of the budget include an increase in insurance premiums through the Florida League of Cities from $13,853 to $16,020 as a result of adding coverage for new buildings not previous included in the town's coverage. Health insurance cost decreased slightly, however, because the town clerk no longer was covered under the town's policy.

Other anticipated changes include that elected officials will have to be covered under Florida retirement until after the Video from the prison showed Tatum being slammed, face first to the concrete floor by Finch and Riley while Tatum's hands were restrained behind his back and his ankles restrained. The three other officers then jumped on Tatum and pinned him to the ground, according to arrest records.

Each of the subordinate officers told investigators the attack was designed by their supervisor. Kirkland told them he wanted Tatum taken to the ground during an escort, and that he would prompt the attack by yelling Tatum spit on him, investigators reported.

However, the five subordinate officers told investigators none of Tatum's actions justified the use of force. They were booked into Washington County Jail with a $2,500 bond.

Kirkland was given a $25,000 bond, which he posted, resulting in his release about 4 p.m. Thursday.

Kirkland was charged with two counts of official misconduct for orchestrating the incident and then allegedly pressuring the officers to sign fictitious reports. The conditions of his release were unclear Thursday.

"These arrests and terminations send a very clear message: we have zero tolerance for criminal activity by our staff," DOC Secretary Mike Crews said in a press release. "I expect everyone to do what is right, and I have restated my commitment to hold those who do not to meet our expectations accountable for their wrongdoing."

As investigations proceeded last week, DOC announced a strict zero-tolerance policy for employee misconduct. DOC employees who commit a criminal act will immediately be placed on administrative leave and the Department will initiate disciplinary action for their dismissal.

Crews and Deputy Secretary Tim Cannon met today with the command staff at Northwest Florida Reception Center as part of Crews' commitment to personally visit every Department of Corrections institution to emphasize his expectations for transparency, accountability and professionalism, DOC officials reported.

"Our staff should be held to the highest standards, and those who fail to do the right thing will no longer work for this agency," Crews said. "As I have emphasized to our staff in my meetings around the state, we will not let the bad actions of a few undermine our culture of professionalism and tarnish the reputations of all the hard working men and women in our Department."

Tatum entered the Dept. of Corrections System March 3, 2014, and has a listed release date of April 23, 2020.

probationary period ends in February. The maintenance assistant also will receive a 50-cent hourly raise.

The town is expected to grant City Clerk Margaret Riley's request for annual and sick leave in lieu of a salary increase. The leave would accrue at a rate of eight hours a month with the stipulation she not be paid for the leave in the event she resigns or is terminated.

The new budget also earmarks $3,000 for the hiring of a part-time recreational director.

A public budget hearing will be at 5:01 p.m. Monday, Sept. 22.

In other action, the town also set the community's official Trick-or-Treat to take place from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday, Oct. 31.

Caryville discusses zoning

CARYVILLE — Washington County's Senior Planner Michael DeRuntz hosted a review of the county's comprehensive plan with the Caryville Town Council during the Sept. 9 meeting.

DeRuntz explained there are properties in the county comprehensive plan which needed updating. Some properties have been added in some zones, and others are noncompliant with their zoning location.

"We're correcting and updating," DeRuntz said. "Our maps haven't been updated in 20 years. There are businesses in residential zones and (those businesses) can't expand due to old mapping. We're hoping to have this all corrected as soon as possible."

DeRuntz recommended the town draw out a comprehensive plan of their own for potential growth, with President Henry Chambers quipping, "It was easy because the entire town is in a flood zone."

DeRuntz agreed to review the new information for the town of Caryville and collaborate with the council if there are any alternatives available for the town.

The county also approved to finance fixing the leaking roof of the Caryville Civic Center in the amount of $4,600.

The next scheduled meeting of the Caryville Town Council is set for 6 p.m. Oct. 14.

Police: Teen injured protecting mother

Officers said they overheard man threatening to slit woman's throat

By ZACK McDONALD
747-5071 | @PCNHZack
zmcDonald@pcnh.com

PANAMA CITY — Police have arrested a Callaway man they saw beating a juvenile after he allegedly threatened to slit the throat of the teen's mother, officials said Thursday.

When Panama City Police were called to a wooded area near Bay Medical Sacred Heart Health Center at 10:15 a.m. Wednesday, bystanders directed them to a ditch on the east side of Palo Alto Avenue below Sixth Street.

The woman was screaming, "He's beating my son," according to police.

About 40 feet across the murky, water-filled ditch, officers said they could see 41-year-old Christopher Michael Milwicz Sr. standing over a young man, hitting and kicking him. As police crossed the ditch they ordered the man to stop, but Milwicz rubbed dirt in the young man's face and then ran into woods, according to police reports.

After a 30-yard chase, officers caught Milwicz after shooting him twice with stun guns.

Police also were called to the hospital area Tuesday about Milwicz, but he escaped.

Milwicz's ex-girlfriend called officers. She told them he had made several threats to kill her over the phone and through text messages. Milwicz, the ex-girlfriend and her son lived together for about two years but had ongoing domestic issues.

While officers were taking the mother's statements, Milwicz called her. Officers could overhear Milwicz threaten to "slit her throat" over the phone, police reported.

Although his vehicle was spotted in the area and towed from a nearby gas station, police were unable to find him. They did obtain a warrant to arrest him for aggravated assault.

On Wednesday, Milwicz again confronted the mother and son near the hospital and the skirmish ensued.

The 17-year-old told officers

Milwicz aggressively approached his mother, so he attempted to protect her by putting him in a bear hug. Milwicz broke away and slammed the juvenile to the ground before hitting him multiple times on his face and chest, according to police.

Onlookers called police, who arrested Milwicz.

The juvenile was treated at the hospital and released.

Milwicz was taken to the Bay County Jail, where he was charged with domestic battery, child abuse, aggravated assault, harassing phone calls and resisting a law officer with violence.

It was unclear whether the teen's mother worked at the hospital or was a patient.

State seeks death for slayings suspect Thompson

By ZACK McDONALD
747-5071 | @PCNHZack
zmcDonald@pcnh.com

PANAMA CITY — Prosecutors in the 14th Judicial Circuit will seek the death penalty for triple-homicide suspect Derrick Ray Thompson, according to court documents.

The State Attorney's Office filed notices Tuesday saying that, if convicted, they will seek capital punishment for Thompson, who is accused of the July 21 killing of 66-year-old former BCSO officer and businessman Allen Johnson. The state also filed a notice of aggravating circumstances it will have to prove for jurors to levy the death sentence. They include proving the alleged murder was "cold, calculated and premeditated."

Prosecutors in the 1st Judicial Circuit also are exploring the death penalty against Thompson and have recently indicted him for the fatal shootings of Milton residents Steven Zackowski, 60, and Debra Zackowski, 59, on July 19.

Because the incidents are two crimes, the 14th Judicial Circuit's decision to seek Thompson's death does not influence the 1st Judicial Circuit's pursuit of capital punishment.

Thompson, a 41-year-old Pensacola resident, was considered a person of interest in the Zackowski slayings when investigators found Johnson in his

Lynn Haven home with a single gunshot wound to the back of the head and a spent .380-caliber casing beside his body.

The truck Thompson was believed to be driving following the first killings was found at the scene.

State attorneys are not allowed to discuss an ongoing case. But law enforcement agencies have released evidence that indicated Thompson was motivated by a quest for prescription narcotics and planned to amass a stash of drugs following the Zackowski slayings.

Thompson stayed overnight in a Chipley motel, where he borrowed a phone from the motel clerk and called Johnson to ask if he could come to his home on Wilson Avenue to borrow money.

Before fleeing the state to a Troy, Ala., hunting lodge, Thompson used money and a cellphone he allegedly stole from Johnson to buy numerous prescription narcotics in Panama City, investigators reported.

He confessed to the three homicides after his capture, investigators said, but recently pleaded not guilty to the charges.

Thompson is being held without bond in the Bay County Jail. A trial date has not been set.

Murder suspects plead not guilty in Tavish Greene case

By ZACK McDONALD
747-5071 | @PCNHZack
zmcDonald@pcnh.com

PANAMA CITY — Two suspects pleaded not guilty Tuesday to shooting Tavish Greene multiple times and concealing his body in a car trunk before fleeing the state.

Darryl Mack, 22, and Tyricka Woullard, 20, pleaded not guilty to second-degree murder charges in the slaying of 24-year-old Greene. The two fled to Covington, Ga., as police discovered Greene's body in the trunk of a car behind an abandoned

East Eighth Court home on July 24. Police say Greene's death came at the end of a botched robbery involving three people.

The third suspect who remained behind in Bay County, 22-year-old Dontavis Thomas, has been charged with accessory after fact to homicide but has not filed a plea, according to court records.

Police reports said the three suspects lured Greene to Woullard's home at 3710 W. 21st St., where they planned to rob him the morning of July 19. Thomas and Mack allegedly used phone calls and text messages to draw Greene into a trap through Woullard, his ex-girlfriend. The three hid inside, waiting to ambush Greene for money and drugs. Woullard and Mack then fled to Georgia the day after, police reported.

Greene was discovered in the trunk of his Chevy Malibu five days after the attempted robbery. He was shot multiple times, medical examiners said.

Mack, Woullard and Thomas already had been arrested and charged with conspiracy to commit armed robbery. Mack also was charged with possession of a firearm by a felon.

New charges were brought against Mack and Woullard last Thursday of second-degree murder and principal to second-degree murder, respectively. A day before Thomas was charged as an accessory. The suspects also heard reopened cases for probation violations Tuesday. Woullard is accused of violating her probation from a May 2013 scheme to defraud a bank, charges to which she pleaded no contest. Thomas allegedly violated his probation from a November 2009 burglary in which he stole firearms. He also pleaded no contest.

Regional VA director gets earful at meeting

PENSACOLA — About 100 veterans and family members came out for a face-to-face meeting with the leader of the Veterans Affairs Gulf Coast Health Care system Monday night.

The meeting was one of the first steps taken by Bob McDonald, the new director of the Department of Veterans Affairs, who ordered all VA health-care systems to host town hall meetings to hear veterans' concerns. The VA has been scandalized in recent months by reports of exceptionally long delays in care and some cases in which veterans died while waiting for appointments.

"It is my honor to be here and listen to you to hear how we can do things better," said Mark Morgan, acting director of the Gulf Coast system, which serves about 66,000 veterans and their families from Panama City to Biloxi, Miss.

A long line of veterans spoke, detailing various medical issues and concerns, including delays in accessing mental health-care, difficulty obtaining prescriptions and allegedly neglectful care. The most common issues raised were with disability claims, which fall outside the healthcare system's oversight.

Gary Cooper, a 62-year-old Vietnam veteran from Mobile, Ala., asked whether a new Mobile facility was in the works to replace the existing one, which is about 50 years old. Morgan said there was but acknowledged that with a patient population growing by 1 to 3 percent a year, often by the time clinics are built they already have been outgrown.

Cooper, who has advocated for better medical care for veterans for years, said he was thankful for the opportunity to address the system's leadership.

"I was never told in my military career — and I was in Vietnam — that the hardest fight was going to be getting veterans benefits," he said.

Morgan, who has held his post for less than a month, tried to address some of the veterans' concerns, but mostly he listened and thanked them for their input.

After the veterans spoke, staff members pulled them aside to get their contact information and find out what they could do to help.

Simone Rich, 45, who came to the meeting with her father, a 70-year-old veteran who lives in Pensacola, was concerned with a prescription issue.

She said a staff member did get their contact information and promised to call her back. But Rich said she was hoping veterans would get more specific answers at the meeting. "I think it's a good thing they are doing this, but they are still not addressing our issues," she said. "It seems like they are just trying to appease us."

Paul Goodin, a 79-year-old vet from Pensacola, said he was happy with the care he has received from the Pensacola VA clinic, where the meeting was held.

"They're doing a good job for me," he said. "My concern is they are getting too big, it's going to cause more problems."

Thrasher among finalists for FSU job

By JIM TURNER

The News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE — Despite opposition from students and faculty, state Sen. John Thrasher, a well-connected Republican from St. Augustine, remains in the hunt to be the next president of Florida State University.

The university's 27-member Presidential Advisory Search Committee on Tuesday named four finalists, including Thrasher, to succeed former President Eric Barron. Barron, an academic with a track record in fundraising, was named president of Penn State University in February.

While Thrasher vowed during his interview Tuesday to make the school "proud" if he gets hired, a number of students and faculty members implored the committee to focus on candidates with strong academic backgrounds.

"Sen. Thrasher meets the qualifications that this board agreed to when we put those qualifications out," university Trustee Ed Burr, the chairman of the search committee, said after the meeting.

The other finalists, chosen after the committee spent two days interviewing a pool of 11 applicants, are Richard B. Marchase, University of Alabama at Birmingham vice president for research and economic development; Michele G. Wheatly, who until June had been provost at West Virginia University; and Michael V. Martin, Colorado State University System chancellor.

FSU Provost Garnett Stokes, who has been serving as interim president, failed in several votes to make the finalist pool, including one proposal backed by students and faculty on the committee for her to replace Thrasher among the finalists.

The finalists will be expected to attend a second round of interviews that will include meetings with groups on campus next week. Background checks are planned.

The committee is scheduled to make a recommendation to the university's board of trustees on Sept. 22.

The trustees, who would still have to forward the final choice to the university system's Board of Governors, are scheduled to meet Sept. 23.

Thrasher, the only "nontraditional" candidate among the 11 interviewed the past two days, has been a major supporter of FSU in the Legislature, including helping the university establish a medical school.

Currently chairman of the Senate Rules Committee and chairman of Gov. Rick Scott's re-election campaign, he is also a former House speaker and former chairman of the Republican Party of Florida.

During his one-hour, 15-question interview, Thrasher talked about his passion for the university and a desire to make a difference at the school where he received his undergraduate and law degrees.

"I want to be president of Florida State University. If you give me the opportunity to do it, I promise you, I will make you proud," Thrasher said in response to a question from committee member and state Rep. Jimmy Patronis, R-Panama City.

Personalized Bible found years later

By BEN KLEINE

LYNN HAVEN — Angela Fernandez believes God is trying to send her a message.

More than 20 years ago, Fernandez was given a black, standard-sized King James Bible on her birthday. It was an occasional companion at Mosley High School, accompanying her to Fellowship of Christian Students meetings in the choir room. Somewhere along the line, the Bible was lost and forgotten in the haze of teenage activity.

Now it has resurfaced, found in the rubble during construction at the school this summer, perhaps where Fernandez left it near the choir room. Deemed unwanted, one of the workers placed it atop a trash pile.

But the construction manager retrieved the Bible — in part because of karmic superstition.

The construction manager brought the Bible to secretary Sheila Cook, who then relayed it to School Resource Deputy Tom Hedges, who happens to be a family friend of the Fernandezes and a pastor at a West Bay church.

"The way I was brought up you never throw away a Bible," Hedges said. "That's like throwing away a Ouija board."

Hedges returned the Bible to Fernandez, who was mystified to see the written note from her mother in the first pages and notes from high school friends serving as bookmarks.

"Maybe it's God's way of saying don't give up," Fernandez said.

"God puts things in your life for a reason," she said.

RadioShack cautions of possible Chapter 11 bankruptcy

NEW YORK (AP) — RadioShack warned Thursday that it may need to file for Chapter 11 bankruptcy reorganization if it can't rework its debt or find another way to ease a cash crunch.

The struggling retailer said in a regulatory filing that it is in talks with its lenders, bondholders, shareholders and landlords to fix its balance sheet, but if it can't, it will try to file a prepackaged bankruptcy.

RadioShack, which is based in Fort Worth, Texas, has been working on turning around its business for the past 18 months. The company's efforts have included cutting costs, renovating and closing stores, and shuffling management. It reported another quarterly loss on Thursday on lower revenue.

CEO Joseph Magnacca said efforts to fix the company's problems could include debt restructuring, closing more stores and other cost-cutting measures. He said the company is reviewing several alternatives, some that would need consent from its lenders.

RadioShack is quickly running out of cash and warned Thursday that it doesn't have enough left to fund its operations beyond the "very near term." The company reported $30.5 million in cash and cash equivalents on hand as of Aug. 2. That's down from $179.8 million at the end of last year.

The company has struggled to find its place in the evolving retail and technology landscape. It's sought to remake itself, focusing on wireless devices and accessories, but growth in that business is slowing as more people have smartphones and see fewer reasons to upgrade. The company says it is working on becoming less dependent on that business.

It is trying to update its image and remain competitive against online and discount retailers. It is also working to add new products, including private-brand and exclusive items.

Noting the company's dwindling cash, Standard & Poor's Ratings Services downgraded its corporate credit rating on RadioShack further into non-investment grade, or "junk," territory Thursday.

"We believe the company will default or restructure in some form that is tantamount to a default within the next six months," S&P said in cutting its RadioShack rating to "CCC" from "CCC."

For its second quarter, RadioShack reported on Thursday that it lost $137.4 million, or $1.35 per share, for the period ended Aug. 2. That compares with a loss of $52.2 million, or 51 cents per share, a year ago.

Stripping out certain items, loss from continuing operations was $1 per share.

Revenue dropped 22 percent to $673.8 million from $861.4 million.

Analysts surveyed by FactSet expected a loss of 66 cents per share on revenue of $735.9 million.

Magnacca said the quarter's performance was mostly hurt by the postpaid mobile phone business, as customers were relatively unenthused about the current phone selections and were waiting for announcements on new devices such as the next generation of iPhones. There were also intense promotional efforts by wireless carriers, he added.

Sales at stores open at least a year declined 20 percent on softer traffic and the weak performance of the mobile phone business. That figure is a key indicator of a retailer's health because it excludes results from stores recently opened or closed.

RadioShack's shares rose 9 cents to close Thursday at $1.02.

New terror fight casts shadow over 9/11 ceremonies

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's gathering war against a new upsurge in Islamic terror hung heavy over the 13th anniversary of the Sept. 11 attacks Thursday, stirring both anxiety and determination among those who came to ground zero to remember their loved ones.

The familiar silence to mark the attacks and the solemn roll call of the almost 3,000 dead came just hours after President Barack Obama told the country he is authorizing stepped-up airstrikes in Iraq and Syria against Islamic State extremists.

"It's an ongoing war against terrorists. Old ones die out and new ones pop up," Vasile Poptean said as he left the ceremony, where he had gone to remember his brother, Joshua Poptean. "If we don't engage them now, there's a possibility there will be another 9/11 down the road."

Victims' relatives and dignitaries gathered in the plaza where the twin towers once stood, an area of shimmering new skyscrapers, including the soon-to-open 1,776-foot One World Trade Center.

The attacks also were commemorated in Shanksville, Pa., where former House Speaker Dennis Hastert gave the flag that flew atop the U.S. Capitol on 9/11 to the Flight 93 National Memorial.

At the Pentagon, where Obama spoke at a wreath-laying ceremony, he didn't mention the rise of Islamic State extremists specifically but noted: "We cannot erase every trace of evil from the world."

"That was the case before 9/11," the president said, "and that remains true today."

Obama's nationally televised announcement of his plans to "degrade and ultimately destroy" the militants, coming on the eve of the anniversary, sparked mixed feelings among 9/11 victims' relatives. Some saw it as a sign of determination, others as bad timing.

"We're all walking out the door today with tragic and sad and scary memories on us. ... It's an invitation to fight on a day where we lost," said Ellen Mora, who lost her cousin, Robert Higley. But she noted her mother felt differently, seeing the speech as "us standing tall on the anniversary."

So did Tom Langer, who lost his pregnant sister-in-law, Vanessa Langer.

"Thirteen years later, it feels like the world is still paying attention," he said.

Still others lamented the U.S. still was battling terrorists 13 years after the attacks.

"We're fighting for nothing. We lost so many already, and we will lose so many more," said Gary Lanham, whose father, Michael Lowe, died at the World Trade Center.

While little about the annual Firefighter Tim Millian, rear, rings the bell in honor of the fallen, as Police Officer Evan Rosenberg salutes Wednesday during the town's annual 9/11 Memorial Ceremony in Wellesley, Mass.

ceremony at ground zero has changed, much around it has.

When the underground National Sept. 11 Memorial Museum opened this spring, fences around the memorial plaza above it came down, making it more easily accessible to visitors and passers-through.

Still, "coming down to the area is rough," said Franklin Murray, who wore a shirt with a photo of his slain brother, Harry Glenn, to Thursday's ceremony.

Some victims' family members view the growing sense of normalcy around ground zero as a sign of healing.

"I want to see it bustling," said Debra Burlingame, whose brother Charles Burlingame was the pilot of the hijacked plane that crashed into the Pentagon.

Others said they fear the tragedy that took place in the neighborhood is being forgotten.

"Instead of a quiet place of reflection, it's where kids are running around," said Nancy Nee, who lost her firefighter brother, George Cain. "Some people forget this is a cemetery. I would never go to the Holocaust museum and take a selfie."

Around the country, observances were held in such places as Morrison, Colo., where hundreds of people walked the equivalent of the twin towers' 110 stories by going up and down stairs at the Red Rocks Amphitheatre, and Point Lookout, N.Y., where two 18-foot, sand-covered towers were crafted in remembrance.

In New York City, some relatives who read the long list of names touched on the attacks' legacy.

In one family, two boys are named for an uncle they never met, financial worker Michael Wittenstein. In another family, 17-year-old Jordan Thompson joined the Marines in memory of his uncle, Leon Bernard Heyward, a city consumer affairs worker.

"In your honor," Thompson said, "I have decided to serve our country."

Red Cross launches Blood Donor app

Special to The News

The American Red Cross this week launched a first-of-its kind Blood Donor app that puts the power to save lives in the palm of your hand.

The app allows users to schedule blood donations, track their total donations, earn rewards and invite friends to join them on a lifesaving team. The new app is free and available for download in app stores.

"The Red Cross Blood Donor app is a new way to help meet the constant need for blood," said Alicia Anger, external communications manager, Alabama and Central Gulf Coast Blood Services region. "The app makes it easier, faster and more convenient for users to schedule and manage their donation appointments, track the lifetime impact of their donations, and recruit friends and family to roll up a sleeve with them."

As the nation's single largest supplier of blood and blood products, the Red Cross is uniquely positioned to bring this cutting-edge technology to blood and platelet donors. In addition to scheduling and managing blood donation appointments, other features of the app include a blood drive or blood donation locator; the ability to sync a blood donation appointment with the user's calendar; personalized "selfies" donors can use as they share their donation experience through social media; special badges donors can unlock as they interact with the app, make donations and spread the word; a chance for donors to come together to form teams, tracking their cumulative impact and viewing standings on the Blood Donor Teams Leader board; exclusive offers and discounts from some of America's best brands, including Shari's Berries, ProFlowers and 1A Auto, with new rewards added regularly; and uplifting donor and blood recipient stories that show the power of rolling up a sleeve to help save lives.

The Red Cross has become a leader in putting vital safety information in the hands of people who need it during emergencies, with its award-winning disaster and preparedness apps downloaded more than 5 million times over the past two years. The new Blood Donor App takes it one step further by helping people save lives through blood donations.

The Mini Page

Betty Debnam, Founding Editor and Editor at Large

Your Digital Self

Be a Pro Online

As school gets started again, you may find yourself using the computer, tablet or cellphone more. Experts say that in the United States, more than 70 percent of kids under 8 years old have used mobile devices such as smartphones or tablets. Is your online self as well-behaved as the offline you?

This week, with the help of experts at the Internet Keep Safe Coalition (iKeepSafe), The Mini Page reminds you how to be safe, courteous and responsible when using the Internet.

Six important skills

Do you know what competency is? It means an ability to do something well.

When kids or adults spend time online, we need to remember six competencies. iKeepSafe calls these the pillars of digital citizenship and wellness.

The six pillars are:

- Balance
- Ethics
- Privacy
- Reputation
- Relationships
- Online security

You can remember them by their acronym, BEaPRO™.

Balance

Computers and cellphones have made it possible for people to talk with each other, find information and play games at any time of the day or night. Sometimes we get so excited about these possibilities that we spend too much time looking at a screen.

Kids can become emotionally connected with online activity. For instance, if you post something on Instagram or Facebook and many people "like" your post, it may make you feel great! But if others make fun of your post or don't respond at all, you may be sad.

How you can be balanced

1. Use your electronics away from your bedroom.
2. Don't use electronics at the dinner table. Talk with your family instead.
3. Charge phones and other devices away from bedsides. Beeps or whistles can disturb sleep, which can be unhealthy.
4. Put electronics away one hour before bedtime.

Ethics

Do you know what "ethics" means? Ethics are rules that guide people's behavior.

You use ethics to decide whether something you do or say will hurt someone else. You also use ethics every time you decide not to cheat on a test, or shoplift a candy bar from a store.

When you are online, it's important to remember that everything you post or any comment you make will live on forever. Your online self is a reflection of your "normal" self.

How you can be ethical

1. Think about your audience. Who will see what you post?
2. Even if you think you are posting anonymously, you may not be.
3. Work that other people have done cannot ethically be copied and presented as your work.
4. If you see that someone has been bullied or attacked online, you can reach out to that person with support. Be just as kind to others online as you would be in person.

Mini Spy

Mini Spy is always very careful when she gets online. See if you can find:

Meet China Anne McClain

China Anne McClain stars as Gabby in the Disney Channel TV movie "How to Build a Better Boy." She and co-star Kelli Berglund also sing "Something Real" in that movie.

China is best known for her roles in the Disney Channel series "A.N.T. Farm" and "Wizards of Waverly Place." She began acting when she was 7, in the movie "The Gospel."

China also sings and writes songs. She and her older sisters Sierra and Lauryn performed in their own band, the McClain Sisters.

China, 16, was born in Atlanta and now lives in Los Angeles with her family. She loves to read, sing, dance and create greeting cards. She has supported charities such as the Thirst Project, a student group that helps provide people with clean drinking water.

Robinson Cano

Professional baseball player Robinson Cano packs a punch at the plate. The six-time All-Star has a career batting average above .300, with more than 200 home runs and nearly 900 RBIs. Robinson, a second baseman, has won the Silver Slugger Award for his position four times in a row.

From 2005 to 2013, Cano played for the New York Yankees and was part of that team's 2009 World Series victory. He also won Most Valuable Player honors in the World Baseball Classic representing his home country, the Dominican Republic.

In December 2013, Robinson signed a 10-year contract to play for the Seattle Mariners. Some people were surprised by his decision to play in Seattle, which had suffered four straight losing seasons. But Cano, batting .330 with 64 RBIs as of early August, already has the Mariners contending for a wild-card spot in the playoffs.

Our Online Rules

Work together with your family members to build good online habits.

Research has proven that kids who have positive online experiences:

- feel better about themselves,
- have healthier relationships with others and
- are more successful as adults.

In most families, parents and children are working together to create healthy and safe habits for using electronics.

Cut out this chart and post it somewhere in your house where everyone can see it and be reminded of good practices.

Are You an Internet Pro?

Privacy

Did you know that your cellphone can help someone else see where you are? Many families are choosing to turn off the location services on their phones.

It's also important that you keep private information, such as your birthdate, address and phone number, off the Internet.

How to protect your privacy

1. Ask your parents before downloading an app to any device.
2. Don't share passwords or login names with anyone except your parents.
3. Don't download any software without permission from your parents.
4. Don't take photos of other people without their permission. Doing so can be a violation of their privacy.

Reputation

In just a few years, you may be applying to college or trying to get a job. Colleges and companies have started looking at Facebook and other social media to find out more about possible students or employees.

Kids and parents are learning how to protect their online reputations, or what other people think about them.

How to protect your reputation

1. Ask parents to review posts to Snapchat, YouTube or other social media before you post.
2. Don't "pile on" when others are commenting on someone's post. Use that opportunity to be kind, positive and supportive.

Relationships

Cellphones and social media keep us in touch with friends. But friends can have difficult times when they don't agree or someone is angry.

"When you can't see someone's face, it's harder to work out emotional issues," says an expert from iKeepSafe. Texts and emoticons may not express very well what people are really feeling.

How to protect relationships

1. Before you reply to a post or text from someone you know, ask yourself if that person would really say that. Hackers can post items that look as if they're from one person, but they're really not.
2. If someone does post something mean or hurtful to you, take some time to think about it before responding. Talk to an adult about how or whether you should respond at all.
3. If you're having a hard time with a friend, talk on the phone or in person, or Skype so that you can see each other.

Stay positive online

Experts with iKeepSafe say that 80 percent of kids will experience or see cruelty in social media. Remember, just as kids on the playground can be mean sometimes, so can online "friends."

The important thing is to react in a positive way: Provide support for the target. Most social media have a way to "flag" people who are not following the rules; look for a box you can click that will alert the company about inappropriate behavior.

QUESTIONS & ATTITUDE

Compelling questions ... and maybe a few actual answers

Would the King have been as happy under a Chase format?

Can you remind us again how and why we now go Chasin'?

Since it's now been a full decade since this Chase deal came to life, it's probably a good time for a mini history lesson. Once upon a time, there were memorable and downright historic championship battles that went right down to the final Sunday of the season (Petty-Parsons, Petty-Waltrip, Earnhardt-Martin, Kulwicki-Elliott-Allison), but they were rare. So in an effort to guarantee championship drama, NASCAR birthed the Chase in 2004.

Guaranteed drama followed and all lived happily ever after?

Yeah, right. It's a new world, changing by the second, and you can't risk a moment of tedium. We used to joke (we thought) that NASCAR will eventually reach a point where the top three points leaders are stopped on the final lap of the final race, set side by side just off Turn 4, and told to drag-race to the checkers for the championship. We're getting closer and closer to that.

Is it fair?

Since everyone is playing by the same rules, sure it's fair. The only problem is how it distorts championship history. If this had always been in place, Richard Petty and Dale Earnhardt might have 15 championships ... or they might have none.

Jimmie Johnson was not present for the photo.

The Chase for the NASCAR Sprint Cup field was decided Saturday night at Richmond International Raceway, with Brad Keselowski emerging with the top seed by winning the most races (four) of any driver.

This is what the grid looks like for the playoffs, which start Sunday at Chicagoland Speedway, with driver, make of car, number of wins and a quick comment:

Brad Keselowski

Ford, 4 wins: He ended the regular season with a walk-off victory and a ton of momentum.

Jeff Gordon

Chevy, 3: The "drive for five" is still alive for this 43-year-old, who won his last championship in 2001.

Dale Earnhardt Jr.

Chevy, 3: After starting the season with a Daytona 500 win, can Earnhardt bookend 2014 with a title?

Joey Logano

Ford, 3: Logano? Championship? Anything can happen in the Chase, but this is an unlikely scenario.

Jimmie Johnson

Chevy, 3: Just when you start doubting J.J., he flips on the thrusters of his No. 48 entry.

Kevin Harvick

Chevy, 2: Consistently the fastest car this season, but the team found ways to lose races. Must move foot, then shoot gun.

Carl Edwards

Ford, 2: Lame-duck driver with a team that has struggled throughout stretches of 2014. Easy call here.

Kyle Busch

Toyota, 1: Keep an eye on Busch. He has a solid game plan for the Chase. Winning races is not a priority.

Denny Hamlin

Toyota, 1: Frustrated and unhappy, Hamlin probably won't make it out of the Challenger Round.

Kurt Busch

Chevy, 1: He used the last five races of the regular season as a mock playoff run and did pretty darn well.

Kasey Kahne

Chevy, 1: Just barely squeaked in with a late regular-season victory, then was flat awful at Richmond.

Aric Almirola

Ford, 1: Richard Petty Motorsports is going to throw everything it has into this playoff. He will advance.

AJ Allmendinger

Chevy, 1: The "little team that could" needs a little more speed to keep chugging along.

Matt Kenseth

Toyota, 0: Could be the bracket buster — the guy who wins the crown without winning a race, a bit like his 2003 title run.

Greg Biffle

Ford, 0: Limped into the playoffs with a two-lap-down performance at Richmond. You won't see him in Round 2.

Ryan Newman

Chevy, 0: Richard Childress owns three teams. This is his only car in the Chase. This could happen.

PRETZELITIS

Jimmie Johnson's body was dry as a pretzel after the race at Richmond. He got out of his stock car and collapsed, and was taken to the care center, where he got five liters of fluid. "Just got dehydrated in the car," he said.

MAGIC 400TH

When Brad Keselowski won Richmond, it was Roger Penske's 400th career victory as a car owner. "Wow, what a night!" Keselowski said.

RICHMOND REWIND

Clint Bowyer discusses missing the playoffs and moving forward

Clint Bowyer looked like somebody sent his pet goldfish down the drain after finishing third at Richmond and missing the Chase by seven points. Bowyer, who wheels the No. 15 Waltrip Racing Toyota, talked with the media about missing the 2014 playoffs.

What's going through your mind just missing the Chase after running so well?

"If you make the Chase you want to compete for a championship, and truth be told, we're not there right now. A lot of work to do. We've got to continue to build on momentum like we had here tonight. You know, it's definitely frustrating not making that Chase, but like I said, when you do make the Chase, you want it to be for a championship, not just ride around in it. We still haven't won a race, and everybody on this 15 team deserves a win by the end of the year, and I'll see to it they get it."

What do you think about your crew chief saying there would be some changes after this weekend to see improvement?

"Well, they say they are. We'll just have to see. Everybody is working hard, everybody at TRD (Toyota Racing Development), everybody at MWR. The No. 2 (Brad Keselowski) and the No. 24 (Jeff Gordon) have pretty much been the class of the field all season long. That was our best effort. That's all I had, that's all we had as a race team. We put it all out there, and still, we were just third-best. Got some work to do, but a lot of racing left."

Were you paying attention to where Greg Biffle was running during the race?

"I didn't even know until I asked there at the end. All you've got to do is ride around back there. That's all we had to do last week and the damn thing broke. It's just the way our luck has been this year. It would've been nice to come here in the same situation he (Biffle) was in and ride around back there and not have to do anything, but unfortunately just that's the way our luck has been this year. Like I said earlier, when you make that Chase you want to be able to compete for a championship, and I'm an optimist but I'm a realist, and right now realistically we don't have a shot at winning that championship against the competition we're running against."

Processing alligators is a growing business

FORT MYERS (AP) — Thousands of hunters are plying Florida waters every night this time of year, searching the swamps for a prize alligator to take during the state's annual 11-week public hunt.

The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission issued almost 6,000 permits to the public this year, with each permit allowing a hunter to take two alligators from an assigned waterway. Private hunts on farms and managed lands occur year-round, but between now and Nov. 1 the public gets its chance at gator glory.

Driven by TV reality shows such as "Swamp People" and "Gator Boys" — which feature Louisiana alligator hunters and nuisance trappers in the Miami area — the sport has grown four-fold in the past decade, from 2,164 hunters in 2002 to 8,103 in 2011. The popularity of such shows has boosted the number of hunters as well as increased demand for alligator products and meat.

"Every little restaurant wants to serve alligator," said Kelvin Townsend, an alligator farmer and processor in LaBelle. "And now that they've seen the TV shows, everyone wants to kill an alligator."

Alligators taken during the public hunt go from the swamp marshes to various markets — leather goods, preserved heads and feet to be sold at gift shops, and as different meat products. All the work that goes into the process, and the number of people involved, make the meat and leather expensive. Cutlet and ribs go for about $18 a pound online and at specialty meat markets and delis.

Hunters can make several hundred dollars during the public hunt, recouping their $272 harvesting permitting with pocket change to spare. The amount paid is based on the size of the alligator and the quality of its skin. Hunters can take their alligator to a processing facility such as Townsend and Sons in LaBelle, keep the meat for themselves and sell the hide.

Hunters also sell to middlemen buyers, companies that wait at public boat ramps, buy alligators from hunters and then take them processing facilities.

Processing facilities must be certified by the USDA in order to legally sell meat to the public or restaurants. Securing the certification — which allows USDA to conduct random testing at meat plants — is not the only challenge. The smell produced when skinning and processing alligator meat is somewhat gamey — somewhere between a fish market and a pile of hamburger meat.

"The blood holds a certain smell on your hands," Shawn Townsend, of Townsend and Sons, says while sorting packages of gator sausage in a car-sized freezer.

When asked if he eats alligator, he says: "We

Mackerel Migration

the Moveable Feast

Fall kings and Spanish have a final fling in Panhandle waters

By FRANK SARGEANT
Frankmakol@outlook.com

It is a migration on a scale seen on Africa's Serengeti Plains, and yet it all goes by almost unseen beneath the blue-green surface of the Gulf of Mexico.

Each fall, the massive schools of king mackerel, Spanish mackerel, little tunny (AKA bonito) bluefish and other gamefish that have spent the summer in Panhandle waters become restless about mid-September with the shortening days and the gradual decline in water temperature. The baitfish they live on are the primary driving factor, vast masses of cigar minnows, threadfins, sardines and other small, silvery creatures that create a moveable feast; where they go, the predators will not be far behind, and as the Gulf temperature drops from the 80s into the 70s — usually around the end of October or the first of November, the race will be on.

The bait often leads the train of predators near the beaches, perhaps because that's where the microscopic plankton they feed on is most abundant, and the massing of the kings and Spanish and other species brings on a similar restlessness in Panhandle anglers — it's time to forsake the air conditioning and head for the boat ramps and marinas once more — the Fall Run is on!

Spanish often travel ahead of the kingfish, perhaps because they prefer slightly warmer water — by Oct. 15, many of the fish that summered off Destin and Panama City will be at Seahorse Reef off Cedar Key, inspiring traffic jams at the boat ramps there.

The run usually arrives off Tampa Bay by the second week of November — there's frequently a "Thanksgiving Bite" that lasts through the month and just about until Christmas in these waters before the first real cold fronts push everything all the way down the peninsula to the Keys and around the tip of the state into the Atlantic, where they mingle to some degree with Atlantic kings and Spanish that summer as far north as Cape Hatteras.

It will be April before they return, but return they will, chasing the edge of increasing water temperature as it progressively warms past 68 degrees, until they finally return to the same summer spawning grounds where they swam the year before.

It's a grand cycle, but not one that has to concern anglers who simply want to get their lines stretched. Simply intersecting the run — right place, right time — is all it takes; when you hit the peak of the migration, there are fish everywhere from right against the beachfront piers to 20 miles out.

How to find the fish
A call to any offshore marina or tackle shop will give you a heads-up on how the run is progressing. If you see anglers standing shoulder-to-shoulder on the big piers, you can bet the Spanish are there, and probably an occasional big kingfish, too, along with a cobia or three. If you're in a boat, the "white tornado" of birds will be your beacon — when the predators drive the bait to the surface, birds arrive from miles around to get in on the feast, and anglers who keep a sharp eye on the horizon can readily spot these flocks. When they're thickest, it's even possible to mark them on radar, so numerous are the gulls and pelicans.

call it gator Jell-O. If you haven't skinned an alligator, it's good to eat because you don't know that smell. I'm just glad I don't cut up lobster and steak."

It's a relatively new business model — creating a demand for alligator leather products made in the United States, but Brian Wood, owner of All American Gator in Hollywood, says he sees great potential. European fashion designers buy alligator skins for a few hundred dollars and transform them into jewelry and clothes that sell for tens of thousands of dollars.

Wood wants to see that business model on a more local level, either cut off the Gucci's of the world or at least give them competition for leather products that originally come from states such as Florida and Louisiana.

He's showed his alligator leather goods and product as the International Boston Seafood show for the past 16 years. He also travels to Las Vegas in hopes of building American brands that will, one day, sit alongside Prada and other European labels.

"I've branched out into the leather because that's where the money is," said Brian Wood, owner of All American Gator. "We do belts and purses, jackets, briefcases. We did a $36,000 three-piece couch. I just got two motorcycle seats in."

Although alligator meat sales are small in comparison to beef, chicken, fish and other more familiar meats, some specialty butcher shops in Southwest Florida are seeing an increased demand for alligator meat. The standby "it tastes like chicken" is what most people here say when they ask about alligator meat at a restaurant or market.

Popular ways to prepare alligator include fried (the most popular), braised, grilled and even made into a white breakfast gravy to be put over warm biscuits. The types of cut offered vary from tenderized outlet to alligator sausage.

Jimmy P's Butcher Shop and Deli in Naples carries everything from ground elk to antelope, but gator meat, butcher Leonard Willis said, is king of the game meats.

"We go through a lot of alligator meat," said butcher Leonard Willis. "A lot of people just want to try new things. They want something different. We get a lot of (orders) from people up north who want something different. And people have game meat parties where that's all they serve."

YAMAHA MARINE | Special to The News

Heading offshore at first light is one sure way to get into schools of Spanish and kings that are likely to be in a feeding mood.

MIGRATION from page A9

Early in the morning, before many boats have arrived, the fish tend to be ridiculously easy to catch — even a noisy topwater plug, tossed among the splashing attackers, draws an instant strike — and it had better be a very tough plug, too, or the teeth of the predators will immediately turn the floater into a sinker. Wooden plugs stand no chance at all — they're turned to splinters.

Mackerel lures

The more conventional way of fishing the schools is to put out a spread of single-hook spoons — the Drone in about 6-inch size is the classic, but anything with wobble and flash and adequate size will draw the bite. The fish may hit unweighted spoons at first light, pulled at about 5 to 6 knots — a fast walk.

As the sun climbs higher and more boats arrive on the school, they tend to go down. Then it's a matter of adding several ounces of bead-chain weight, or attaching the spoon to a No. 2 planer or a downrigger ball, to continue the action.

However you get the lure in front of the fish, it's necessary to run it on a piece of wire to prevent cutoffs on the shearing teeth of the kings. (Spanish can sometimes be caught on 30 to 60 pound test hard mono, but kings almost always nip anything but wire.)

Most anglers use No. 6 wire, coffee-colored, with a swivel and snap on the lure, a second swivel between wire and running line. The double swivel setup helps reduce line twist, which can be a big problem in trolling spoons otherwise. Leader lengths vary — charter skippers fishing for school kings prefer leaders about 4 feet long to give them some working room, and the smaller schoolies tend not to be leader shy. Typical charterboat kingfish tackle is a revolving spool 3/0 to 4/0 with 60-pound-test mono. Heavy spinning gear with 50-pound-test braid also is effective.

Live baiting for kings

For catching giant kings, however, tournament anglers sometimes use 12 inches or less wire, connecting it to mono testing just 12 to 15 pounds, and fished on level wind baitcasting tackle that looks more suited for redfish inshore except for larger line capacity. This is the standard setup for live bait anglers trying to fool tournament winners in clear water.

Live baiting kings is a whole book in itself, but basically anglers use blue runners, ladyfish, mullet, menhaden and other baits, typically 6 to 12 inches long. A single hook goes through the nose, and a "stinger" treble, often a No. 6 in 3X strong wire, is dangled along the side on a short piece of wire. Larger baits like ladyfish sometimes get a second stinger added behind the first to prevent cutoffs.

This bait is either drifted or slow-trolled in areas where larger kings like to prowl — around channel markers, off passes, on the break-line where dark inshore water meets clear offshore water, and around all sorts of wrecks, reefs and shoals. The idea is to keep the bait moving just fast enough to keep it swimming — but not so fast it's dragged and "drowns."

Most tournament anglers like to sweeten the waters where they're drifting or slow-trolling by hanging a couple of mesh bags full of fish meal or dog food that has been moistened with menhaden oil off the transom. Fish hit the scent trail and sometimes follow it to the bait, particularly when anglers troll a repeated oval around likely locations. Some anglers also add some natural chum to the mix now and then by tossing over small pieces of chopped menhaden or threadfins, along with the occasional live one. (These same tactics can be very effective on the longer Panhandle piers when current is running along the beach to carry the scent, too.)

Handling big macks

There's no question when a king mackerel strikes. They take at full speed, and the first run of a big one will make a reel appear to smoke as water flies off the line being ripped out against the drag, thus the name "smoker kingfish" applied to kings of about 20 pounds and up. Fish of 40 pounds plus are caught in Panhandle waters each fall, and occasionally 50 and even 60-pound fish are reported. The IGFA all-tackle record for the species is 93 pounds even, caught off Puerto Rico in 1999.

A 20-pounder can readily steal a couple hundred yards of line in seconds—and the best way to catch these fish is to let them go. A light drag will keep the small hooks from pulling free. Once the fish begins to tire—usually after a second big run—the angler can begin to steadily pump it the boat.

Kingfish headed for the cooler are usually gaffed—a small pick-style gaff on an 8 to 12 foot lightweight handle is the typical tournament kingfish killer, allowing a long reach to land big fish with light line. (Though Spanish may reach weights of 6 to 7 pounds, they're usually not so big that a gaff is required; grabbing them in front of their stiff tail is one easy way to handle the larger ones when they're completely tired out, or they can be netted, while smaller ones are typically just hoisted aboard with the spring of the rod.)

Spanish Mackerel tips

Spanish are sometimes found in the same offshore waters as kings, but they also readily prowl into considerably shallower waters, and sometimes push into larger bays. The run on the deep grass at Sea Horse Reef is famed all along the west coast, typically peaking about Oct. 15 when tens of thousands of macks swarm the outside edges of the grass at depths of 8 to 15 feet where ever the baitfish lead them.

Spanish take everything that kings do, but in smaller sizes. Spoons about 4 inches long are best, half-ounce bucktail jigs tipped with a bit of shrimp or mullet (they're active scent feeders) are also effective, and glass-minnow imitations, when they're keyed in on these tiny baits, can also do the job — a fly-rodgers perfect day!

Mackerel cookery

Kings make excellent table fare if handled correctly—bleed them out, ice them immediately and clean them promptly. Steak the larger fish, cutting them into 2-inch-thick slabs. Then remove the skin and cut out the "medallions" or muscles, four round muscles around the backbone, getting rid of the strong-tasting red line and the bones in this step. The remaining pieces of meat are like extra-thick scallops, and are delicious when drizzled with Teriyaki and grilled until done.

Spanish require special care because of a line of bones down each side — best bet is to fillet the fish, turn the fillets skin side down, and make a V cut down either side of this line of bones, separating the fillet into two pieces. Throw away the bone section, which also includes the red line, and grill or bake the narrow, boneless fillets.

Chicken comforts

PANAMA CITY — Chicken is a common staple in many American households, but the preparation can make all the difference when it comes to creating family favorites.

Just the mention of chicken and dumplings can cause many to become overcome with nostalgia for their childhood — even if you call the “dumpling” by another name. Though I heard my grandmother in Texas once made dumplings from scratch, I only remember her making them with flour tortillas cut in strips and dipped in flour.

“I’m from the Ozarks — we called chicken and dumplings ‘chicken and noodles,’” said Amanda Sorenson, whose family opened their first Italian restaurant in Joplin, Mo., when she was 4. “Chicken and noodles was a right of passage in my family. When I was a kid growing up, everyone had to make it with dough by hand. Until I moved to the South 30 years ago, a dumpling was rolled out of pie dough and we put fruit filling in it and folded it and baked it, like an apple dumpling.”

Sorenson, who has worked at Somethin’s Cookin’ on and off for about 15 years, now makes Chicken and Dumplings at the bistro using a recipe from fellow employee Linda Horne. Sorenson and Horne also are graduates of Gulf Coast’s culinary program.

“We do it in a pasta machine, get the pasta dumplings a nice, even thickness. It’s easy and quick to make,” Sorenson said. “It’s much easier with the pasta machine. When I was a kid, we had to do it with a rolling pin.”

The basic Southern recipe for Chicken and Dumplings is just chicken and dumplings in broth.

“We add egg to it on the dumpling, really helps it stay together,” Horne said. “It’s really a pretty simple recipe. Some people put celery and carrots in it when making the broth, but we just boil the chicken and add some of our chicken base to it — makes it so rich.”

Though Hannelore Holland sells grab-and-go containers of the Chicken and Dumplings at Somethin’s Cookin’, 93 E. 11th St. in Panama City, she admits she doesn’t make them.

“That’s one of the recipes I don’t do, but it’s very popular. I didn’t know how to make chicken and dumplings; I am a German,” she said with a laugh. “It’s comfort food. It also can be a soup with more broth. We sell so many it’s ridiculous.”

Holland first realized just how popular chicken and dumplings was in the South when she and Sorenson were asked to cater them.

“We catered chicken and dumplings for 200 people at a wedding in Marianna,” Sorenson recalled.

Though Holland doesn’t make the recipe, she does make dumplings.

“There are many different dumplings,” Holland explained. “In the North, they drop the dough in and it makes little balls. Dumplings can also be made out of potatoes, like German potato dumplings, or out of old bread and there are spaetzle dumplings — traditional German egg pasta.”

Though Kartoffel Knoedel, “potato dumplings,” and Servietten Knoedel, “napkin dumplings,” cannot be used as dumplings in the Chicken and Dumplings recipe, Holland said, the spaetzle can be substituted.

While chicken pot pie recipes might not vary as much by regions, they still conjure up the same warm feelings.

Kathie Riley of My Best Friend’s Kitchen makes a Chicken Pot Pie, “just like mama used to make,” she said, as a lunch special at her restaurant, 401 E. 23rd St. in Panama City, and for customers to take and bake at home.

Chicken and Dumplings is a popular comfort food in the South.

“It was a home recipe that was created before I opened My Best Friend’s Kitchen,” Riley said. “Growing up that was a comfort food. The ones you buy in the store are not very good. I was on a quest to make that and this is what I came up with. There’s nothing to it, no story, just really good food. I tweaked and tweaked and tweaked recipes until I came up with my own. It has carrots, celery, potatoes, peas. We all grew up eating chicken pot pies, and it’s kinda just a childhood comfort thing like meatloaf or fried chicken.”

Chicken and Dumplings

Whole chicken
Dumplings
1 tablespoon chicken base

Place whole chicken in large pot, cover with water (no salt) and cook until the chicken is so tender it falls off the bone. Meanwhile, make Dumplings.

Remove chicken from broth and cool. Remove chicken from bone and set aside.

Heat broth, add large tablespoon of chicken base and bring to a boil. Add prepared dumplings and cook until just tender. Add chicken. When hot, spoon into bowls. (Do not overcook dumplings.)

Dumplings:
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons salt
2/3 cup milk
1 egg
6 tablespoons butter

Mix flour, salt and butter in processor. Add remaining ingredients and process just until dough comes together. Let rest in refrigerator covered with plastic wrap.

Cut into 4 wedges. Run each through pasta machine twice, once on 1 and then again on 3.

Cut into strips with dough scraper. Put on cookie sheet lined with parchment. Can be frozen until needed.

Spaetzle

1 cup flour
2 large eggs
Fresh nutmeg
Salt, pepper to taste
Water, start with 1/2 cup

Mix flour, eggs, nutmeg, salt and pepper. Now add enough water until dough falls easily off the wooden spoon. Press through a spaetzle press, into a pot of hot boiling water that has been salted.* As soon as they come up to the top, scoop out onto a platter. You may dot with butter or Parmesan. I like to brown some fresh bread crumbs in butter and drizzle over; great leftovers.

Somethin’s Cookin’ owner Hannelore Holland, a native of Germany, said Spaetzle can be used in place of traditional dumpling recipes.

*If you are using this recipe as the Dumplings in Chicken and Dumplings, just cook the spaetzle in the boiling mixture of broth and chicken base. Then add chicken and serve.

Kartoffel Knoedel (Potato Dumplings)

8 1/2 ounces potatoes, cooked
3 ounces flour
3 ounces potato flour
1 egg
Little milk, if necessary
Salt, lemon dill, Chercies Pepper
Pizzazz seasoning, to taste
Croutons, optional

Peel and cut potatoes in cubes, then cook in boiling salted water (best the night before; they need to be cold). Push through a ricer, add all other ingredients, except croutons. Taste for seasonings. Now form ball. You may put a crouton in the center of each ball. Bring salted water to a boil and cook knoedel for about 15 minutes until they float to the top.

You may sprinkle them with breadcrumbs that have been sautéed in butter; great with meat dishes with sauce.

Servietten Knoedel (Napkin Dumplings)

1 French baguette, sliced
1/2 stick butter
Salt, pepper, fresh nutmeg (1/2 nut),
1 tablespoon lemon dill
1/2 cup warm milk
3 eggs
1/4 cup fresh parsley

Cube bread, add milk, then let sit for about 10 minutes until soft. Mix egg yolks and butter. Add seasonings and parsley to bread mixture.

Beat egg whites and fold under. Shape into a loaf, then wrap in cheesecloth. Bring water to a boil, tie knoedel to a wooden spoon and lower into water. Let simmer for about 1 hour (check at 45 minutes), let cool, remove cheesecloth, slice knoedel and serve with sauerkraut or a creamy mushroom sauce.

Chicken Pot Pie

1/2 cups diced carrots
1/2 cups diced celery
1/2 cups frozen peas
2 cups cooked chicken, cut up into small pieces
1/4 cup onion
1 cup diced potatoes
1 1/2 teaspoon Best Friend Seasoning
1 can cream of chicken soup
1/8 tsp thyme
1 cup chicken stock
1/2 cup sour cream
1 cup of half and half
1 frozen deep dish pie shell
1 rolled pie shell from refrigerated section

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Mix soup, sour cream, half and half and chicken stock together until blended smooth. Add other ingredients and stir until mixed. Pour into frozen pie shell, then top with rolled shell, crimping edges to seal. Cut small slits in the top shell for steam to escape.

Bake at 400 degrees for about 1 hour. Source: Kathie Riley, My Best Friend’s Kitchen

Best Friend’s Seasoning

1 cup sea salt
1/4 cup coarse ground black pepper
1/4 cup granulated garlic
