School Board to vote May 14 on paying teachers' grad tuition

Drobinson@chipleypaper.com

CHIPLEY - A program regarding teacher graduate tuition reimbursement that has been discussed by the Washington County School Board for over a year has once again been put off for a vote. Superintendent Joe Taylor tasked Attorney Matt Fuqua with reworking the contract details before the board makes a final vote on the issue when they met in regular session May 14.

The program is designed for teachers who already have masters degrees to go back to school to earn the 18 graduate hours in math or English in order to teach college level courses for dual enrolled students in the district.

Dr. Lou Cleveland has been spearheading the topic and says it's an crucial program because of the need to keep the students in the district and to save money.

"If we have teachers who are qualified to teach college level courses then our students can stay here in our district and in the process save the money we are paying to Chipola for their tuition," said Cleveland.

Reimbursement issues are the main cause for the reworking of the contract for school board members. Trying to find a balance between what is paid out by

Putnam pitches 'Florida Jobs First'

CHIPLEY - Republican gubernatorial candidate Adam Putnam appealed to the grass-roots as more than a hundred gave ear at a Monday night campaign stop in Chipley.

"You can't have a cookie-cutter approach in a state as diverse as Florida is," Putnam said. "You want the flexibility for employers who have job vacancies that they can't fill, to have a seat at the table in helping the high school, vo-tech and the community college prepare students for the jobs that are in that region."

The barbeque-style event was held in a barn on Hard Labor Road.

Putnam spoke in context of his Florida Jobs First Agenda that he rolled out Monday as he made stops across the state. The policy announcement focused on economic development through expanding vocational and technical skills training for students and support for training programs at institutions.

The proposal is aimed at the 28 percent of Florida's workforce who do not go on to earn higher education degrees. More than half of the jobs expected to be created in the state's fastest-growing employment sectors by 2025 will require advanced training but less than a four-year college degree, a News Service Florida article stated.

Traffic stop ends in drug charges

Staff Report

EBRO - A Vernon man has been taken into custody after law enforcement stops him for speeding on State Road 79.

According to Washington County Sheriff's Office news release, David Randal Lackey, 40, of Vernon, was arrested following the traffic stop on S.R. 79 near Potter Spring Road at about 6:15 a.m. on May 1 after a WCSO deputy observed his Toyota Camry traveling south at 80 miles per hour on the state road.

The deputy noticed a strong odor of marijuana as he approached the vehicle while conducting the traffic stop, the release stated. Lackey was found to be driving with a suspended license. Following a search of Lackey, the deputy discovered a plastic bag of methamphetamine in a metal cylinder which was found in his pocket, the release stated.

A subsequent search of the vehicle resulted in the deputy locating two glass pipes.

Lackey admitted to the deputy that he had used the methamphetamine along with one of the glass pipes just prior to the traffic stop, the release stated.

Lackey was arrested and transported to the Washington County Jail where he was booked on the charges of driving while license suspended/revoked, possession of methamphetamine, and possession of drug paraphernalia.

Wausau board approves location of new fire station

WAUSAU - Wausau Town Council members decided on the location where the new fire station will be built when they met in regular session May 10.

The new location is set directly across the street from City Hall on Second Avenue. After seeing site plans from engineering firm Dewberry, and speaking with members of the fire department, the council voted on and approved the location in a 3-1 vote.

The sole vote against was cast by Dewayne Carter who said it was because of parking.

"I did not vote against this because I don't want the fire department to have a new facility," said Carter.

"I voted against this location because I fear it will interfere with parking for town hall."

The Wausau Fire Department are the recipients of $985,500 in allocated state funds with which they will be building the new facility.

The department is hopeful construction will begin by the end of the year.

“There is an inherently local aspect to workforce development because all of us want the same thing: we want our students, our kids and our grandkids to be able to grow up, graduate and not have to leave our community to find a good career,” he added. “Some of them may choose to, but you don’t want that to be forced on them because there are no good paying careers left in that county.”

Putnam, who is currently the state’s agriculture commissioner, also highlighted the need for rural economic development. He noted his office had for the last two legislative sessions tried to push “a revamping of rural economic development in Florida.”

“Rural economic development is something I will continue to work on,” he said. “As a guy from a small town, I know exactly what we have to do and a big piece of what we have to do is infrastructure - broadband infrastructure, digital infrastructure, utilities, access to highways and rail spurs.”

the district and what the options are should a teacher decide not to finish their schooling is what Fuqua has to figure out with the help of Cleveland.

The board will vote on the issue next month should Fuqua have a completed contract by the June meeting.

Cleveland says there is an urgency for passing this because one of the two dual-enrolled certified teachers is set to retire in two years.

“It takes two years for the 18 graduation hours to be completed,” said Cleveland. “Our only dual enrolled certified English teacher, Carol Schimpf retires in two years and our math certified teacher Susan Saunders isn’t far behind that.”

In other business, Cleveland brought up the board placing a half cent sales tax on the August 28 primary ballot. The funds raised from the tax would be earmarked for technology and purchasing those type of items for the district.

While it is the consensus of the board to move ahead with the action, Taylor and Cleveland will be looking to see if the board has enough time to set a detailed plan of how the funds would be spent before the deadline to place the item on the ballot runs out.

The Washington County School Board will meet in workshop at 4 p.m. May 29.

The council approved signing a contract with Point Broadband in order for the company to have backing in gaining a federal grant that will allow the company to bring broadband internet to small rural counties in the southeast.

The contract, should the council so choose, would permit the company to place computers in town hall as a testing site for the company. The council however, is leaning towards not utilizing that clause as they are in an exclusive contract with

Congress should pass DACA compromise

U.S. Rep. Dennis Ross recently made his first public appearance since announcing he was retiring from Congress. And the Lakeland Republican's comments reminded us that a prickly issue remains unresolved.

Ross said participants in the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals program, or DACA, ought to have an avenue to earn U.S. citizenship, according to Floridapolitics.com. "We have to make sure those who came here of no accord of their own are treated fairly. Let them earn their way to citizenship. ... That's not amnesty; it is earning their way," he said.

Ross indicated he was "disappointed" that such a view had garnered criticism from immigration hardliners in Congress. After all, those who follow Ross closely know that he's no softy on dealing with illegal immigration. Ross has supported measures to crack down on sanctuary cities and also has favored constructing a wall along the Mexican border.

DACA, crafted as protection against deportation by the Obama administration, covers roughly 800,000 people whose parents entered illegally and brought them to the United States as children. Last September the Trump administration announced the end of the program, giving Congress until early March to craft a legislative solution.

As Congress dawdled, 15 states sued to prevent the administration from ending DACA. Week before last, however, seven states sued the administration from the other side, for failing to end DACA, which they argue is unconstitutional. Louisiana Attorney General Jeff Landry told NPR lawmakers could settle this dispute. "Our objective," he said, "is to get Congress to act." Good luck with that.

Ross is solidly in the mainstream on DACA. In fact, it's one of the few things most Americans can agree on. A month ago a Quinnipiac University poll revealed that 71 percent of Americans believe illegal immigration from Mexico is an "important problem." Yet 77 percent thought DACA enrollees should be allowed to remain in America and apply for citizenship.

To that end, Ross is one of 59 sponsors — 29 Republicans, 30 Democrats — of the Uniting and Securing America Act. The measure would permit DACA participants who have been in the country at least four years to gain permanent legal status if they enroll in higher education, join the military or are gainfully employed, among other requirements. Once they achieve that, they could pursue citizenship just as immigrants who utilize existing legal channels.

The bill offers a fair compromise, contains similar provisions as other DACA relief bills floating around Capitol Hill and has a solid base of bipartisan support in the House. Yet it hasn't moved an inch through the legislative mill since being introduced in January — which suggests the competing lawsuits will force the Supreme Court, and not our lawmakers, to do the dirty work for DACA enrollees.

It's perplexing why this can't get done, but the DACA stalemate demonstrates the political process is as broken as our immigration system. No wonder Dennis Ross wants out.

Feds Sanction Slave Labor, 21st Century Style

Joe Guzzardi

With President Trump, you never know." Those were the exact words a U.S. Senate legislative aide said to me when we were talking about President Trump's immigration views. The specific topic at the time was deferred action for childhood arrivals, DACA, which candidate Trump had vowed to end on "Day 1" of his presidency, but didn't. In part because of President Trump's DACA dithering, the program and its future have since devolved into a political and legal quagmire.

President Trump's most recent fumbling and bumbling came during a Michigan rally when he said, to his base's horror but to the powerful agricultural lobby's delight, that "we have to have your workers come in," a reference to issuing H-2A agriculture visas, a program that its critics say is systematically abused.

As President Trump spoke, the Washington, D.C.-based National Council for Agricultural Employers, WAFLA, formerly the Washington [State] Farm Labor Association, the Washington [State] Growers League and the Fresno [California] County Farm Bureau could barely contain their collective joy. In fiscal year 2017, the U.S. Department of Labor approved 200,049 H-2A visas for foreign-born agricultural guest workers, up 20.7 percent from 165,741 in FY 2016.

Just days before President Trump's speech, the Labor Department settled with G Farms, a Maricopa County, Arizona, agribusiness, on the grounds that it had subjected its grossly underpaid workers to "simply inhumane" conditions. G Farms had housed 69 guest workers in overcrowded, unsanitary semi-truck trailers and school buses, where they were exposed to Arizona's summer heat without proper ventilation, and with dangling gas lines fed through bus windows.

The no-cap H-2A visa should be a national embarrassment because it enables agricultural employers to import vulnerable, easily exploitable individuals. The farm industry takes advantage of the susceptible while neglecting its own responsibility to enter the 21st century through mechanization. Sharing in the blame is the federal government which, through the H-2A, sanctions modern day cheap, pliant slave labor. In 2014, Indiana University published its study which found that, because employers control their visas, legal temporary guest workers are guaranteed to be underpaid and can't advance in the labor market.

Growers contend that without easy access to cheap labor, "crops will rot in the field." Crops that don't rot, agricultural representatives claim, will soar to unaffordable retail prices, the mythical $20 avocado. A wealth of nonpartisan academic research undermines the advocacy groups' allegations. In its 2016 overview of the effect of farm labor costs on consumer prices, National Geographic reported that if workers' wages increased by 47 percent, grocery bills would go up just $21.15 a year, or $1.76 a month. Those findings are consistent with other academics' conclusions, including those from Iowa State, the University of California Davis and the Economic Policy Institute.

The H-2A visa and the ample supply of cheap labor it makes readily available have slowed mechanization's progress and eliminated growers' incentive to pay wages high enough to attract American workers. Historically, the solution to labor shortages, assuming employers can document their existence, is to pay more, not to hire illegal immigrants, a crime, or lobby for more employment-based visas.

Case in point: In 2017, Christopher Ranch, which grows garlic on 5,000 acres in Gilroy, Calif., announced that it would hike pay for its farmworkers from $11 an hour to $13 an hour that year, or 18 percent, and then to $15 in 2018. The result: the ranch went from having a worker shortage to having a 150-person employment waiting list.

Created in 1952 as part of the Immigration and Nationality Act, the H-2A requires employers to seek Americans first, a condition that they've ignored too long, in large part because of the federal government's willful blindness towards its abuses.

The Deal with Singapore

Michael Reagan

So Donald Trump has a date with Kim Jong Un in Singapore on June 12. Good deal — so far. As long as the president doesn't get arrested for chewing gum or hanged for spitting on the sidewalk, his meet-up with North Korea's "Rocket Man" in that spotless city might actually become a historic summit. Singapore 2018 might even become one of Trump's legacies, though I suspect at this point he's not as fixated on legacy building as most presidents. He's more focused on making a deal with a nasty communist regime that no previous president has been able to make. We'll know soon enough if Singapore is for show or for real.

Meanwhile, I hope when Mr. Trump sits down to negotiate with Kim Jong Un he'll remember what happened when Ronald Reagan went to Reykjavik in October of 1986 to meet Mikhail Gorbachev. The hope was for the two superpowers to discuss ways to put limits on strategic nuclear weapons arsenals and to come up with a sweeping arms-control agreement that would bring about the major mothballing of their nukes and missiles.

Everyone in the administration — including Nancy — was excited because they thought Reykjavik was going to be Ronald Reagan's greatest legacy. Everyone was pushing him — relentlessly — to make a deal with Gorbachev. Almost any deal.

But when Mr. Gorbachev said he wouldn't sign the document unless the United States gave up the Strategic Defense Initiative — the proposed "Star Wars" ballistic missile defense system — my father said "Nyet." "He got up and walked away from the table."

Everyone was shocked and concerned by what my father did, but the rest was history. The Berlin Wall came down. The Cold War was over.

"Michael," he said, "for too long I've watched presidents of the United States meet with Secretary Generals of the Soviet Union." "Every time we sit down with them they're asking us to give up something to get along with them." "I want to be the first president who says 'Nyet.' That's the reason I wanted to run for president."

"In order for President Trump's meeting on June 12 to be a success, and he certainly has it in him to make it one, he also has to be willing to walk away."

You can't make a deal just because you're thinking it's going to be good for your legacy. Your legacy might be when you stand up and walk away from a bad deal. The only way you'll ever win real victories against the people who run hellholes like the USSR, North Korea and Iran is if you're willing to walk — and they know it. Anyone can make a bad deal — look at the one President Obama made with Iran. So my suggestion to the president is, "Don't make a deal with North Korea just to make a deal."

Sometimes the best deal is to walk away." And anyway, Mr. Trump, with three American prisoners safely back home from North Korea, you've already got a win.

Traffic stop leads to arrest

Staff Report

CHIPLEY - A Graceville man is in jail after a traffic stop led to the discovery of drugs.

According to a Washington County Sheriff's Office news release, 43-year-old Phillip Sean Langston was arrested May 10 and charged with possession of methamphetamine, possession of marijuana less than 20 grams, possession of drug paraphernalia, and driving while license suspended or revoked. A WCSO deputy observed Langston speeding on State Road 77 near Falling Waters Road, and during the stop, Langston advised the deputy that his license had been revoked, the release stated.

Langston

As a search of the vehicle was conducted, deputies uncovered three needles, a wooden pipe containing marijuana, and a green plastic container of methamphetamine.

Florida delegation holds hearing on oil drilling

News Service Florida

Visit Florida President Ken Lawson and Brig. Gen. Evan Dertien, commander of the 96th Test Wing at Eglin Air Force Base, are among scheduled panelists for a Florida congressional delegation hearing Thursday on drilling off the state's coasts.

Also scheduled to appear during the hearing in Washington are Mark Alderson, executive director of the Sarasota Bay National Estuary Program, and Ken Milito, director of upstream and industry operations for the American Petroleum Institute.

The hearing comes amid continued debate over plans by President Donald Trump's administration to allow oil and gas drilling in federal waters off various parts of the country. U.S. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke appeared in January in Tallahassee and said drilling would not occur off Florida's coasts. He repeated his stance last Thursday before the U.S. Senate Appropriations Committee. However, the administration's stance has continued to draw questions as the waters off Florida's coast haven't officially been removed from the proposal. The issue involves waters beyond the nation's outer continental shelf - a jurisdictional term describing submerged lands 10.36 statutory miles off Florida's West Coast and three nautical miles off the East Coast. Thursday's one-hour hearing in the Rayburn House Office Building is set to begin at 8:30 a.m.

State braces for rain, flooding

News Service Florida

TALLAHASSEE - The Florida Division of Emergency Management and Gov. Rick Scott issued advisories Monday about a severe weather system developing in the Gulf of Mexico that could bring rain and flooding to parts of the state.

The system is getting extra attention as it has potential to develop into a subtropical or tropical storm and comes as the state prepares for the six-month hurricane season, which begins June 1.

The National Hurricane Center said it anticipates the system to produce widespread cloudiness, showers and thunderstorms across much of Florida and southeastern Georgia. "Regardless of subtropical or tropical cyclone formation, this system will produce locally heavy rainfall and possible flash flooding across portions of Florida and the southeastern United States during the next few days," the Hurricane Center said in an advisory Monday.

The extremist family next door

Neighbors say family that bombed Indonesian churches well off, friendly

By Niniek Karmini
The Associated Press

SURABAYA, Indonesia — The Muslim family that carried out suicide attacks on three churches in Indonesia's second-largest city, killing a dozen people as well as its two young daughters, lived comfortably in an upper-middle class suburb and was on friendly terms with a Christian neighbor.

The coordinated bombings on Sunday, followed on Monday by a suicide attack by another family on police headquarters in Surabaya, have horrified Indonesians who typically see their Muslim-majority country as diverse and tolerant.

Neighbors said there were no signs members of the family were planning the acts of violence that President Joko "Jokowi" Widodo condemned as "barbaric" and "beyond humanity." They had lived in the leafy Wonorejo Asri residential community since 2010 and had a good income from the father's business selling herbal medicines, the neighbors said.

According to police, on Sunday morning the two sons, aged 16 and 18, rode a motorcycle into a church courtyard and detonated their explosives.

Puji Kuswati, the mother, attacked worshippers at another church with her daughters, aged 9 and 12, who police said were all wearing suicide vests.

The father, Dita Oepriarto, detonated a car bomb outside a third church. Police initially gave his name as Dita Fitrianto but corrected that based on his national identity card.

All six died.

Raith Yunanto, who lives two houses from the family, said they were always welcoming to her, a minority Christian. She said she went shopping with Kuswati at the local market and they often exchanged different types of food and fruit.

"There was nothing strange about the family, they were like other devout Muslim families," she said. "Their attitude and manner of dress were just like common Muslim people."

"It's difficult for us to accept how they can commit such a barbaric act against Christians," Yunanto said. "The couple visited me when I gave birth and when my children were sick."

She said she last saw members of the family when the daughters were riding bicycles with other children in front of her house on Saturday afternoon, the day before the bombings.

The eldest son, she said, was seen coming home from school activities wearing a colorful batik shirt that's symbolic of diversity in Indonesia, a country of more than 260 million with dozens of ethnic groups and languages.

Dendri Oemiarti, Oepriarto's younger sister, was wracked with grief when she spoke to The Associated Press on Monday and said her elderly parents were in a state of shock.

"What he has done has hurt us so deeply," she said as tears flowed down her cheeks.

"What thoughts have influenced him? I do not understand. I do not know what changed my good brother to be so sadistic."

Oemiarti said she was very angry when she first heard about the church attacks and that children had been used to carry them out.

Neighbors said there were no signs members of the family were planning the acts of violence that President Joko "Jokowi" Widodo condemned as "barbaric" and "beyond humanity." They had lived in the leafy Wonorejo Asri residential community since 2010 and had a good income from the father's business selling herbal medicines, the neighbors said.

on Sunday night.

The family's nextdoor neighbor, Abi Akbar, said Oepriarto and his sons, Yusuf and Firman, like nearly all Muslim men in the neighborhood, usually attended dawn prayers at an unremarkable local mosque.

But Akbar, 23, also said he had heard older men in the community comment that Oepriarto wasn't a mainstream Indonesian Muslim and objected to secular rituals such as raising the national flag or singing the Indonesian national anthem.

In retrospect, Akbar said, one thing was different at dawn prayers on Sunday. Instead of customarily kissing their father's hand after prayers, the boys and father hugged for a long time.

"They hugged like they were going to be separated," Akbar said. "But at that time we were not suspicious of anything because they are a family that is well known and normal."

Just a few hours later Oepriarto and his family and 12 other people were dead. More than 40 were injured.

Kenzi Tapy Gani, a 21-year-old university student who lived near the family, described Oepriarto as a "friendly and nice guy."

"We really didn't see it coming," he said.

Investigators travel across a huge field to a dig site along a rural wooded area Wednesday in Macomb Township, Mich. Authorities were set to resume excavation work in a wooded area northeast of Detroit for the remains of a 12-year-old girl and the bodies of up to six others missing for decades, after police said Wednesday a Michigan man serving life in prison for killing a 13-year-old girl is a suspected serial killer. In this frame from video released by the U.S. Geological Survey, gases rise from a fissure Sunday near Pahoa, Hawaii. The new fissure sent gases and lava exploding into the air, spurring officials to call for more evacuations as residents waited for a possible major eruption at Kilauea volcano's summit. Overall, nearly 2,000 people have been told to evacuate since May 3, and lava has destroyed more than two dozen homes. [U.S. GEOLOGICAL SURVEY VIA AP]

What does your mother mean to you?

Special to The News

What she meant to me and still does. I’m blessed she is living and well. Mom saw to all y needs, she took me to church, taught me the first verse I ever remember “Be kind to one another” and “Do unto others as you would have them do to you”. She spanked my backside when I needed and she taught me to be a good mom, a lady, a good wife and a God fearing woman. Thanks to her I have raised to very responsible children, no adults themselves and who have children also. Thank you, God for my mom.

Dean Duvall

My mother was a Godly woman. She was a loving woman and she passed away to soon.

Jamie

Helen Gibson is my mother. She means everything to me. She is a two time breast cancer survivor. She has done without for me and my sister to have. I love her. She is my best friend; she is a blessing from God!

Donna Gibson

My mother is a strong woman and I look up to her every day.

Makayla

My mother was the best mother that me and my sister’s ever had. She did her best to make sure that we were happy. There is not a day that I don’t miss her, me or my two sisters. Thank you for being the best mother we ever had. Love ya Rih Katharine B. Gone but not forgotten May 7, 2018

Lashonda, Latnsa, Shonria

Mama she was there when Daddy was out. She is the only one left in Chipley. She is 90. Her name is Emma Ulene Finch.

Bill Finch

Words can’t explain the love of a mother because she is the rock of a household and I than God everyday for the blessing her has given me through her.

I am who I am because of my mother, Joyce. She is the most Godly woman I know prayed into salvation. Without her I would be lost. Thank you, momma for my salvation.

Robert Brooks

My mom, Wanda, means the world to me. She’s always been there for me. She’s a godly woman who has led by example for her kids. She has a big heart and her faith in God is strong. I’m blessed when people say I am like my mom. I love her more than anything!

NASCAR THIS WEEK

The Daytona Beach News-Journal's Godwin Kelly & Ken Willis have covered NASCAR for nearly 60 years combined. godwin.kelly@news-jrnl.com ken.willis@news-jrnl.com

SPEED FREAKS

A few questions we had to ask ourselves

How many wins will Harvick end up with this season?

GODSPEAK: Answer: How many more races on 1.5-mile tracks? By that measure, he could reach an even dozen.
KEN'S CALL: The way he toyed with Martin Truex Jr. at the end of Kansas, I'm upping all previous suggestions and saying 10.

Restrictor plates at Charlotte?

GODSPEAK: If this works out, it could be a sneak peek at the near future of Cup Series racing. Hey, it works at Daytona and Talladega.
KEN'S CALL: Well, it's only for the All-Star Race. For now, anyway. It'll bunch the cars together, which everyone seems to like. I'm done fighting it and have fallen into grudging acceptance.

FEUD OF THE WEEK

RYAN BLANEY VS. KYLE LARSON:

Two of NASCAR's bright, young, new talents wrecked each other, but Blaney immediately took the blame and Larson gladly pointed the finger of blame.
GODWIN KELLY'S TAKE: So Larson said, "Blaney was side-drafting really hard and I was as high as I could get, and we made contact, whatever, and we had a bunch of damage."

GODWIN'S PICKS FOR ALL-STAR RACE

WINNER: Kevin Harvick
REST OF TOP 5: Martin Truex Jr., Kyle Busch, Joey Logano, Kyle Larson
FIRST ONE OUT: Ricky Stenhouse Jr.
DARK HORSE: Kurt Busch
DON'T BE SURPRISED IF: Kansas was a preview of Charlotte, then see you later, Harvick.

MOTOR MOUTHS PODCAST

It's All-Star week, and we're strapping on the restrictor plates for some close-quarters podding.

KANSAS

THREE THINGS WE LEARNED

After running poorly and then wrecking at Kansas, Matt Kenseth says there is work to do on the No. 6 Roush Fenway Racing Ford. [AP/COLIN E. BRALEY]

1. Kenseth's debut

Matt Kenseth made his debut in the No. 6 Roush Fenway Racing Ford — his first start since November — and ran poorly before wrecking out. "I expected us to be a little more competitive than that, so it was a really tough weekend all around," he said. "We obviously have some work to do."

2. Secret sauce

All that preseason talk about young guys must have motivated 42-year-old Kevin Harvick, who has equaled his career-best five wins in only 12 races. Three of those wins have come on the 1.5-mile tracks, which means the No. 4 Ford has found the secret sauce recipe.

3. Larson's laps

Team Chevy may be lagging, but not Kyle Larson's No. 42 machine. He led a race-high 101 laps before contacting Ryan Blaney on Lap 248 (of 267). Larson said he was as fast as Kevin Harvick. He finished fourth. "It was a fun race but a little bit disappointing there in the last 20 laps," he said.

— Godwin Kelly, godwin.kelly@news-jrnl.com

THREE THINGS TO WATCH

1. Pedal to metal

Kevin Harvick says it is pedal-to-the-metal time after winning his fifth Cup Series race in 12 starts. Harvick passed Martin Truex Jr. on the penultimate lap for Win 5. "We know that we're riding a momentum wave that is hard to come by, and you need to capitalize on it as many times as you can because it may never come again," Harvick said. "I've never had it in my career, and I've been doing this for 18 years."

2. Funk continues

After winning the season-opening Daytona 500 (doesn't that seem like a year ago?), Team Chevrolet continues to struggle. Seven-time NASCAR champion Jimmie Johnson has yet to lead a lap in 2018, and Chevy's other top drivers are struggling with the new Camaro body style, the exception being Kyle Larson. Chase Elliott was 12th at Kansas. "Just scratching and clawing to run mediocre," Elliott said.

3. All-Star weekend

The attention turns to Charlotte Motor Speedway for the next two weekends. This is a time where the team airplanes

Don't be surprised to see more Kevin Harvick race-victory celebrations. After just 12 races, he has already matched his career high of five wins in one season. [AP/CHARLIE RIEDEL] stay in the hangar and everybody sleeps in their own bed because this is more or less the home track for almost every race team (sorry, Denver's Furniture Row Racing). Saturday's Monster Energy Open and All-Star races will have a new wrinkle: The Cup cars will be fitted with restrictor plates.

— Godwin Kelly, godwin.kelly@news-jrnl.com

QUESTIONS & ATTITUDE

Compelling questions ... and maybe a few actual answers

Is this the birth of a new restrictor-plate era?

Possibly. In the entertainment world, people fall in love quickly with anything that "works," which, in this instance, would mean anything that brings a lot of paint-tradin' and a three-wide dash down the stretch on the final lap. If it works, many in the corner offices will surely say, "Why didn't we think about this sooner?"

When will the NASCAR "for sale" talk simmer down?

That fire will remain stoked until something major happens to douse it completely: Either news about a transaction, or news that it was all just a fishing expedition and the lines are being pulled from the water. For the sake of the industry, one of those needs to come by midsummer.

IN BRIEF

ROME Nishikori beats Lopez for first win in 3 weeks

Looking to revive his clay-court game ahead of Roland Garros, Kei Nishikori defeated Feliciano Lopez 7-6 (5), 6-4 Monday in the first round of the Italian Open.

It was Nishikori's first victory since reaching the final of the Monte Carlo Masters last month. In his previous two matches, Nishikori retired against Guillermo Garcia-Lopez in Barcelona and lost to Novak Djokovic in Madrid.

Nishikori hit only 18 winners to Lopez's 26 but had fewer unforced errors — 19 to 31. "It wasn't (an) easy match," Nishikori said. "It was windy. And he used a lot of slice and great serves. ... Luckily I got (the) first set. After that I was more confident and I was playing better tennis."

Lopez argued with the chair umpire after losing a point in which he thought the ball bounced twice before Nishikori hit a half volley. The 24th-ranked Nishikori will next face third-seeded Grigor Dimitrov.

ROME Ciao Roberta: Vinci bids tennis a teary goodbye

Roberta Vinci does not want to be remembered solely for beating Serena Williams in the 2015 U.S. Open semifinals, which prevented the American from completing a calendar-year Grand Slam.

Vinci, who retired after a first-round loss before her home fans at the Italian Open on Monday, was also ranked No. 1 in doubles, completed a career Grand Slam with partner Sara Errani, and helped Italy win four Fed Cups.

"It's not only Serena," Vinci said. "I would appreciate it if I were remembered for a bit more of my entire career." Yet the 35-year-old Vinci acknowledged she still looks back at that match against Williams and wonders how she managed it.

"Ooh, a lot, a lot of times. A lot, a lot. Yes, yes," Vinci said with a laugh. "It was an incredible victory. The best victory of course of my life and probably also the (fans) can remember me with Serena, the crowd and everything. It was an incredible day."

PARIS Tsonga withdraws from French Open with injury

Jo-Wilfried Tsonga has withdrawn from the French Open because of a left knee injury.

The former Australian Open runner-up from France says in a video posted on his Twitter account that he has not recovered following surgery. The 37th-ranked Tsonga has not played since losing in the semifinals at the Open Sud de France in February.

The French Open starts on May 27 at Roland Garros.

NFL footballs sit on the field during warm ups before an NFL playoff game between the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Jacksonville Jaguars, Jan. 14 in Pittsburgh. ## NFL looks to Congress on sports gambling ruling

By Steve Megargee
The Associated Press

The NFL wants Congress to enact a framework for legalized sports betting in the wake of a Supreme Court ruling that clears the way for more states to allow sports gambling.

Supreme Court justices voted 6-3 on Monday to strike down a 1992 law that barred most state-authorized sports gambling. Before the Supreme Court ruling, Nevada was the only state that allowed people to bet on the results of a single game.

"Congress has long recognized the potential harms posed by sports betting to the integrity of sporting contests and the public confidence in these events," the NFL said in a statement. "Given that history, we intend to call on Congress again, this time to enact a core regulatory framework for legalized sports betting."

All the major leagues responded to a ruling that figures to have far-reaching implications throughout the sports world. The NHL noted that "today paves the way to an entirely different landscape — one in which we have not previously operated."

NBA Commissioner Adam Silver, a supporter of legalized sports gambling, said his league would "remain active in ongoing discussions with state legislatures" about expanding wagering options.

Silver also said the league would like to see a federal framework instead of a state-by-state system. The NBA once opposed expanded sports betting but has long said it supports robust regulation.

The NBA and Major League Baseball have argued in recent months for a 1 percent cut of proceeds if legalized sports betting expands across the country, saying part of that money would be needed for additional compliance and enforcement efforts within the game.

"As each state considers whether to allow sports betting, we will continue to seek the proper protections for our sport, in partnership with other professional sports," Major League Baseball said in a statement.

Keith Whyte, the executive director of the National Council on Problem Gambling, believes any governmental body and sports league that receives a direct percentage or portion of sports betting revenue must also dedicate funds to prevent and treat gambling problems.

"Some of that 1 percent of betting fees is going to come from people with uncontrollable gambling problems," Whyte said. "We believe by taking a cut of this money, (the leagues would) put themselves in the position of having to do something to reduce those costs. Great profits come with great responsibility."

MLB said it would "continue to support legislation that creates air-tight coordination and partnerships between the state, the casino operators and the governing bodies in sports" toward protecting the integrity of the game. Major League Soccer issued a statement seeking similar cooperation.

"Although Major League Soccer is supportive of today's Supreme Court decision, we also believe that it is critical that state legislatures and other regulatory bodies work closely with the professional sports leagues in the United States to develop a regulatory framework to protect the integrity of each of our respective sports," the MLS said in its statement. "We look forward to being a part of that process."

Plenty of leagues already have taken steps to make sure its players are educated on the issue.

For example, last year the PGA Tour hired Genesis Sports to help with its new "Integrity Program" that began at the start of the year. The program requires players on all six circuits the PGA Tour manages to take part in an online tutorial that, among other things, illustrates some of the far-reaching effects of gambling.

"We believe that regulation is the most effective way of ensuring integrity in competition, protecting consumers, engaging fans and generating revenue for government, operators and leagues," the PGA Tour said in a statement.

The Supreme Court ruling will impact college sports as well as the pro leagues. Donald Remy, the NCAA's chief legal officer, said the organization is reviewing the Supreme Court's decision and that "we will adjust sports wagering and championship policies to align with the direction from the court."

The NCAA currently doesn't hold NCAA Tournament games or any other NCAA-run events in Nevada because of its legal gambling. Las Vegas is home to the annual Las Vegas Bowl as well as the Pac-12 men's basketball tournament and other tournaments, which aren't run by the NCAA itself.

The NCAA said 24 percent of NCAA male student-athletes and about 5 percent of female student-athletes in 2016 reported they had wagered on sports for money within the previous year, which would violate NCAA bylaws. Just below 2 percent of the men participating in the 2016 survey met what the NCAA termed as standard diagnostic criteria for problem gambling.

Reactions to the Supreme Court ruling across the sports world weren't limited to the league offices. The athletes themselves also were wondering about the possible implications of increased legal sports gambling.

NASCAR driver Brad Keselowski tweeted he was "torn" on the Supreme Court's decision. Keselowski said it "should be great for our sport, but I've also seen gambling ruin lives."

Looking at where legal sports betting is headed

By Ben Nuckols
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court struck down a 26-year-old federal ban on sports betting on Monday, allowing states to decide whether they want to allow legal wagers on football, basketball, baseball, hockey and other games. Here's a look at what that means:

So, when can I bet on sports?

Soon, depending on where you live. Officials in three states — Delaware, Mississippi and New Jersey — have pledged to start accepting legal bets within weeks. Three others already had laws on the books authorizing sports betting in the event of a favorable Supreme Court decision, although there likely will be more debate about the specifics. More than a dozen other states either have active legislation to authorize sports gambling or have considered it in the past. Expect those discussions to ramp up, along with more aggressive lobbying in those states by sports book operators and the professional leagues.

Who will accept bets?

It will vary from state to state. Some have authorized commercial casinos to open sports books, while some will offer sports betting products through their state lotteries. Aside from the few states that have worked out those details already, lawmakers and regulators will be deciding whether to allow bets to be placed at casinos, horse racing tracks, off-track betting parlors or even stadiums, and whether to allow online and mobile betting.

How will this change the fan experience?

Once sports betting becomes more widely legal, fans can expect to have the opportunity to bet on their phones during games, a common practice in countries such as the United Kingdom and Australia. Television ratings and subscriptions to streaming services could increase because fans are more interested in games that don't involve their hometown teams. And discussion of point spreads, over/unders and prop bets could become more common among broadcasters and journalists as they seek to remain relevant to how fans are thinking about sports.

'Bo-D': Doll therapy makes 97-year-old woman's birthday special

May is National Older Americans Month

CHIPLEY — Sometimes baby Bo-D has to be chastised, but, generally, he stays coddled and cosseted in the sweet arms of his 97-year-old grandmother Susan Harris.

The elderly woman helped raise her grandson Joseph, whom she nicknamed "Bo-D" as a child. And when he went to prison in 2013 to serve a life sentence, she visited him as often as she could until last year, when she injured her hip, crippling her mobility. "That was her baby," said Harris' daughter Kathy Downing, referring to the real Bo-D. "That's her baby," she added, nodding to the toy baby doll in Harris' arms.

Harris also suffers from dementia disease.

Dementia is marked by the loss of cognitive functioning — thinking, remembering, and reasoning — and behavioral abilities to such an extent that it interferes with a person's daily life and activities, according to National Institute on Aging. About 5.5 million Americans have the disease.

Doll therapy, which is what Harris receives with the doll Bo-D, is becoming commonplace at nursing homes. The dolls are used as a way to calm residents with dementia and comfort them. The technique has received criticism, a National Public Radio story points out — some taking the position that it "infantilizes" seniors. However, the therapy is a way of "trying to meet them where they are and communicate with them in a way that makes sense to them," a spokesperson from Alzheimer's Association stated.

May is National Older Americans Month.

"When my daughter got her that doll, she said 'Bo-D' and started crying," Downing said. "The doll helps because she loved Bo-D so much - she raised him from a little boy because I worked off shore."

The real Bo-D is 37 years old. He showed up to his grandmother's birthday party in his own capacity - through a Mother's Day and birthday letter he sent through the mail.

"I love you and miss you," Joseph wrote. "Good Lord's willing, maybe they can bring you to see me. Happy Mother's Day and happy birthday. I love you with all my heart."

Harris was born in 1921 close to Washington County and was raised picking cotton in Holmes County. She has lived in the area all of her life. She married Oliver M. Holman, who is the father of the late Charles Holman, a former mayor of Graceville.

She celebrated her 97th birthday Monday at Washington County Rehabilitation Nursing Center with cake, a balloon, her daughter and "Bo-D."

"Cover Bo up mom," Downing told her mom Monday right before the birthday celebration kicked off. Within seconds, Harris gently lifted her blanket just over the doll's shoulders and embraced it a little more, touching her face to its face.

"She loves her youngins and her grandyoungins and great-greatyoungins," Harris said, tearing up. "She's got a heart bigger than this building and there wasn't nothing she wouldn't do for people."

'Get it done'

Trump's bid to help Chinese firm draws fire but raises hopes

By Paul Wiseman
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A long-running dispute between American regulators and Chinese telecom company ZTE may have handed President Donald Trump some unexpected leverage in avoiding a trade war with Beijing.

Trump's tweet Sunday that he was working with President Xi Jinping of China to put ZTE "back into business, fast" after U.S. sanctions threatened ZTE's existence and 70,000 Chinese jobs caught many trade-watchers by surprise.

"Too many jobs in China lost," Trump tweeted. "Commerce Department has been instructed to get it done!"

The overture came just as Vice Premier Liu He is flying to Washington for talks aimed at heading off a mutually harmful battle between the world's two biggest economies and just before U.S. companies plan to plead during three days of hearings for a resolution to the dispute.

Trade analysts say it is highly unusual for a president to intercede in a case brought by the Commerce Department and to mix regulatory sanctions with trade negotiations. But they also note that Trump's offer to rescue ZTE, which makes cellphones and other telecommunications equipment, has the potential to clear the way for progress.

"It's a way to unlock negotiations," said Wendy Cutler, a former U.S. trade negotiator specializing in Asia and now vice president at the Asia Society Policy Institute.

The United States has proposed imposing tariffs on up to $150 billion in Chinese products to punish Beijing for forcing American companies to hand over technology in exchange for access to the Chinese markets. In retaliation, Beijing is threatening tariffs on $50 billion in U.S. products.

"Trump's tweet creates

Chinese men pass by a ZTE building May 8 in Beijing, China. an atmosphere where there's more hope for reaching an agreement on trade," said David Dollar, senior fellow at the Brookings Institution and a former official at the World Bank and the U.S. Treasury Department.

The United States also needs China's support as it prepares for talks with North Korea that are intended to persuade the Pyongyang regime to abandon nuclear weapons.

Commerce and ZTE last year settled charges that the Chinese company sold sensitive telecommunications equipment to Iran and North Korea in violation of U.S. sanctions. ZTE agreed to plead guilty and pay about $1 billion in fines.

Last month, Commerce accused ZTE of violating the agreement and blocked ZTE from importing American components for seven years. The department said ZTE had misled regulators: Instead of disciplining all employees involved in the sanctions violations, Commerce said, ZTE paid some of them full bonuses and then lied about it.

The seven-year ban was tantamount to a death sentence for ZTE.

"It was basically going to put them out of business," Dollar said. "They rely on American technology."

Last week, the company announced that it was halting operations.

Early this month, a high-level U.S. delegation — including Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin, Commerce Secretary Wilbur Ross, top American trade negotiator Robert Lighthizer and White House adviser Peter Navarro — traveled to Beijing to address the trade dispute. There, they heard an outcry about U.S. regulators putting ZTE out of business.

"They were a little bit blindsided," said Paul Triolo, a technology specialist at the Eurasia Group consultancy. "The Chinese reaction was pretty vociferous. ... The U.S. government shooting down the No. 2 telecommunications supplier in China at this sensitive time — it didn't look good."

Now, analysts see the outlines of a potential deal: In return for Trump's lifeline to ZTE, Beijing might agree to buy more U.S. products or take other steps to shrink America's gaping trade deficit with China — $337 billion last year.

Stocks eke out small gains

By Alex Veiga
The Associated Press

The major U.S. stock indexes eked out small gains Monday after a late-afternoon pullback weighed on small-company shares.

The market had been broadly higher earlier in the day on hopes that trade tensions were easing between the U.S. and China. But much of that rally faded, leaving decliners on the New York Stock Exchange outnumbering risers.

Gains by health care and energy stocks outweighed losses in real estate companies and other decliners. Casino operators and equipment companies got a boost from a Supreme Court decision that cleared the way for states to legalize sports betting.

The S&P 500 index added 2.41 points, or 0.1 percent, to 2,730.13. The Dow Jones industrial average climbed 68.24 points, or 0.3 percent, to 24,899.41. The Nasdaq composite rose 8.43 points, or 0.1 percent, to 7,411.32.

Small-company stocks fell. The Russell 2000 index lost its early gains, sliding 6.45 points, or 0.4 percent, to 1,600.34.

The major stock indexes' latest gains add to the market's solid run this month. The S&P 500, the benchmark for the broader stock market, had its best weekly gain since early March last week.

The indexes got off to a strong start Monday, as investors hoped for reduced trade tensions between the U.S. and China after President Donald Trump tweeted over the weekend that he would help Chinese telecommunications company ZTE get "back into business."

BOSTON
Ex-aircraft cleaner files harassment complaint

A 22-year-old former employee of a Logan Airport subcontractor that cleans airliners filed a discrimination complaint Monday alleging she was sexually harassed by a supervisor and unjustly fired when she turned down his unwanted advances.

Rosa Morban, who lost her job with Ready-Jet this year, said her supervisor exposed himself to her, made inappropriate comments and would try to corner her alone so he could harass her.

Speaking in Spanish through an interpreter, Morban said when she tried to speak up about it, another manager refused to take her seriously and joked that she would probably end up marrying her supervisor.

Immigration crackdown causes audits to surge

By Elliot Spagat
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Immigration officials have sharply increased audits of companies to verify that their employees are authorized to work in the country, signaling the Trump administration's crackdown on illegal immigration is reaching deeper into the workplace to create a "culture of compliance" among employers who rely on immigrant labor.

Expansive plans also have been drafted for a long-term push to scrutinize employers' hiring practices more closely.

Under a 1986 federal law, companies must verify their employees are authorized to work in the United States by reviewing their documents and verifying to the government the employees' identity and work authorization. If employers are found to hire someone without proper documents, the employers may be subject to administrative fines and, in some cases, criminal prosecution.

The recent focus on employers comes after a surge of deportation arrests of workers that started immediately after Trump took office in January 2017. The crackdown is likely to please immigration hawks among Trump's supporters but may alienate industries and companies that rely on immigrant labor.

There were 2,282 employer audits opened between Oct. 1 and May 4, U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement said Monday, nearly a 60 percent jump from the 1,360 audits opened between October 2016 and September 2017. Many of those reviews were launched following the January ICE audits and employee interviews at about 100 7-Eleven franchises in 17 states.

There were 594 employers arrested on criminal immigration charges from Oct. 1 to May 4, up from 139 during the previous fiscal year, and 610 civil immigration charges during the same period, compared to 172 in the preceding 12-months.

Derek Benner, head of ICE's Homeland Security Investigations unit, told The Associated Press that another nationwide wave of audits planned this summer would push the total "well over" 5,000 by Sept. 30. ICE audits peaked at 3,127 in 2013.

The agency has developed a plan to open as many as 15,000 audits a year, subject to funding and support for the plan from other areas of the administration, Benner said.

The proposal calls for creation of an Employer Compliance Inspection Center to perform employer audits at a single location instead of at regional offices around the country, Benner said. Electronically scanning the documents will help flag suspicious activity, and the most egregious cases will be farmed out to regional offices for more investigation. Audit notices will be certified electronically, instead of in person.

Box someone today

Kalynn Brazeal

Do you know someone that works away from home? I work in an industry where people usually find themselves working for weeks away from home then taking a few weeks to be home with their families. It's a very common way of life to some people. In fact for several years, we even went on the road with my husband so that every night before my kiddos closed their eyes they could pray with their daddy. It's not an easy life. However, it's the very life that puts food on the table and raises up families. Occasionally there are things, situations in my day that bring me pause, and I see Jesus in my day. The mail that comes through the office is much and after they do a mail run, I usually end up with several boxes on a bench in my office. Boxes from online shopping or catalogs, and don't let men lie to you, they shop just as much as women. I have proof, the boxes are stacked high. In the middle of all those shipping boxes was one that stood out like a sore thumb. It carried a hand written label and it was decorated with bright marker pictures and messages on all sides. The messages when the box was rotated made a little cartoon. It was adorable. I didn't get too close because I try to respect people's privacy but when the worker came to pick up his box, I got to watch.

He literally couldn't wait to tear into it. As he opened it, several of his buddies gathered around to see what he got. From vitamins to chocolates to some movies and then hand written letters, his smile got bigger and bigger as his hand reached time and again into the box. It was a never-ending parade of loveliness. This man and his burly oil field worker friends were literally covered in oil and grease but were ooo-ing and ahhhh-ing over colored pictures torn from a coloring book and all the thoughtful touches his family had included in his box from home.

I had to look away. It's one of those moments that you don't want to intrude on, the pure joy that came from such a simple thoughtful gesture from his family.

Later on though, it kept popping into my head and I remember all the boxes my family and I packed up for our guy when he was active duty.

Back before email was so easily available, we still wrote snail mail letters and assembled carefully thought out packages for him.

The girls were tiny littles, but they were constantly thinking of things they wanted to send their daddy.

Every colored piece of paper, every note from their teachers (good and bad, bless their honest little hearts), we once mailed a half-eaten bag of skittles because "we always share"... it wasn't about the cost involved... it was the time and the thoughts.

Those packages would later evolve to include luxury items such as new pillowcases, the extra soft toilet paper and bags of beef jerky... anything to make his life a little more comfortable as we was away.

It's the same concept when you consider that someone spends a major portion of their time separated from their loved ones.

Watching the happiness it brings got me to thinking? Have I sent the right cards? Have I took the time to pick up a few cards and pick a few people in my life that I think of often but seldom have time to reach out to? Have I made an effort to send them a note or a card letting them know: "I'm thinking of you..." "You popped into my head today and it made me smile..." "I'm sorry we don't talk as much but I still giggle every time I think of you." I need to send cards.

Is there someone in your life that is working away from home? Grab a few things and send them a little package of "love, hope and thoughtfulness." Pick up a few cards and drop a line in the mail so that when someone is going through their bills, they find a little jewel.

Home remedies: Self-care approaches to treating pain

By Mayo Clinic News Network

When you have pain, there's nothing you want more than relief — right now. For many people, that means reaching for the bottle of pain relievers in the medicine cabinet.

Before treating pain yourself, however, you should understand where the pain is coming from. Some sources of pain are easier to decipher: You have a tension headache after a long day at your computer, or back pain after an afternoon of raking the yard or joint pain from arthritis. Other sources of pain are not as evident, especially when you're experiencing the pain for the first time, such as knee or hip pain when you are out for a walk, or when the pain lasts longer than usual, such as a stiff neck or lower back pain that doesn't subside.

In addition to over-the-counter pain relievers, several simple lifestyle approaches also can be effective.

Over-the-counter medications

You'll find a large selection of pain relievers at your local store. These medications — also called analgesics — control pain by interfering with the way pain messages are developed, transmitted or interpreted. Over-the-counter pain medications can be effective at relieving many types of mild to moderate pain.

There are two types of pain relievers:

- Oral pain relievers
That bottle of pain-relieving pills in your medicine cabinet likely contains aspirin, ibuprofen (e.g., Advil and Motrin IB) or naproxen sodium (e.g., Aleve). These medications are most effective for mild to moderate pain that's accompanied by swelling and inflammation, such as arthritis, sprains and strains. However, these types of medications can have serious side effects, including nausea, stomach pain, or stomach bleeding and ulcers. Large doses also can lead to kidney problems and high blood pressure. These risks are higher for older people, especially those over 75. Acetaminophen (e.g., Tylenol) is another commonly used pain reliever.

- Topical pain relievers
Topical analgesics are creams, gels, sprays and patches that are applied to the skin at the area where you feel pain, such as on painful joints or strained muscles. Topical pain relievers, such as diclofenac (e.g., Voltaren and Solaraze) and salicylates (e.g., Bengay and Icy Hot) can reduce mild to moderate pain without serious side effects, in part because they are applied locally instead of being circulated through the body. They often are recommended for older people who have a greater risk of side effects from oral pain relievers.

Applying heat and cold

Sometimes relief can be a frozen bag of peas or a hot bath. This is because applying heat and cold often can ease joint pain, back strains, neck pain and other types of pain.

Here's how these methods work:

- Cold numbs pain by causing blood vessels to constrict, which reduces swelling. That's why, when you experience an injury — whether it's a bee sting or a sprained ankle — icing is often a good first choice. You can use an ice pack or a bag of frozen vegetables, or you can submerge the affected area in a container of ice water.

- Heat, on the other hand, is a muscle relaxer. Heat loosens tense muscles, which relieves pain. Heat also increases blood flow to an injury, which promotes healing. Sources of heat can be a heating pad or a warm bath.

You may find that cold or heat provides more relief. Or you can alternate the two, ending with the cold treatment.

Simply applying heat or cold often doesn't completely resolve pain. It's more likely to lessen its severity and reduce inflammation. But, in many cases, a heating pad or ice pack can be applied in addition to other pain treatments, such as analgesics, to increase the chances of relief.

Tooth whiteners have several pros and cons

By Jill U. Adams

The Washington Post

Walk down the toothpaste aisle at your typical drug-store and you'll see a range of products that promise to whiten your teeth. Whitening toothpaste, whitening strips, a whitening gel that you can paint on your teeth with a cotton swab or use in a mouth tray, a two-step "daily cleaning and whitening system," and more.

"I see a lot more attention on pretty smiles," says Clifton Carey, a chemist at the University of Colorado's School of Dental Medicine. Tooth whitening, in particular, is "a big thing these days. A lot of sellers and a lot of customers."

The products at the drug-store all have essentially the same whitening ingredient — the bleaching agent peroxide. If you go to your dentist for a professional tooth whitening, they'll use a more concentrated peroxide product.

With the in-office procedure, "you get a lot of whitening very quickly, but it requires expertise," says Matthew Messina, a practicing dentist at the Ohio State University College of Dentistry and a spokesman for the American Dental Association. With such a high-powered bleaching agent, he says, "the dentist has to protect the gums."

The over-the-counter products are weaker. That means less active whitening but also less risk to the gums, should the whitening agent come in contact. "All of the products are safe if used as directed," Messina says. Still, they can increase sensitivity of teeth and they can irritate gum tissue. "Anything that doesn't feel right, you should see your dentist."

Tooth whitening is best done in a "healthy mouth condition," Messina says. "Have a thorough exam, make sure your teeth are clean and that plaque and tartar have been removed." Also, be aware that tooth whitening doesn't work on crowns or most fillings.

Professional whitening, which will be immediate and last for years, might cost $500 or more and is not generally covered by dental insurance. Products to use at home usually require multiple applications over a week or two, will have a gradual and lesser whitening effect, and will not last as long. Whitening strips can cost as little as $25.

"The do-it-yourself products can be used as a booster, after a professional treatment, to keep the teeth white," Carey says. "Dentists often recommend this."

How do these products work? "It's a surface-type bleach," Carey says, working on stains that are bonded to tooth enamel. "Bleach is a chemical that breaks those bonds," Carey says. The staining compounds might remain, but the bleach turns them clear.

The concentrated product that dentists use also dehydrate the tooth somewhat. "That's the immediate color change — bleaching plus dehydration," Carey says. As the surface of the tooth rehydrates over the next few weeks, people may notice their teeth's whiteness slip back a couple of shades.

A quick bit of tooth anatomy: Enamel is the thin hard outer layer of the tooth; dentin is the next layer in and is less dense than enamel. In the middle is the pulp, which is the soft tissue that holds the nerve center.

"Enamel is what you're bleaching," Carey says. "It's really thin near the gum line. If you have receding gums, it exposes your root tissues." Dentists try to avoid applying the concentrated product on or near the dentin.

Dentin comes into play for aesthetics as well, because it's got a naturally yellowish hue. As people age, their enamel can become thinner, a result of decades of wear and tear. The thinner the enamel, the more likely the yellowish dentin shows through. That's why older people often have yellowed teeth. Bleaching products won't help in this situation because they don't affect the dentin.

There are a few other discolorations that whitening procedures cannot change. If you took tetracycline as a kid, say for an ear infection, you might have antibiotic staining of the teeth. Or if your teeth suffered trauma when you were young and your enamel was still forming, whitening won't work. Dentists refer to these discolorations as intrinsic stains.

If you spend a little time searching the Web, you'll find plenty of ideas about natural methods of tooth whitening. Use lemon juice or apple cider vinegar as a mouthwash? Scrub your teeth with an activated charcoal product? Messina says those techniques come with risks. The acid of lemon juice can erode the enamel on your teeth, and charcoal is an abrasive that can wear it away. "Your teeth will be whiter initially, but as the enamel wears away, you'll see more dentin," Messina says. "That yellowish color will show through."

Can you prevent your teeth from becoming stained in the first place? Good practices mean avoiding staining substances. The most egregious are red wine, coffee and tobacco residue.

You don't need HIIT to get fit; try this instead

By Carolee Walker

The Washington Post

Sometimes it seems that all I hear about is the magic of high intensity interval training (HIIT). This protocol alternates short periods of intense exercise with longer periods of moderate recovery periods (think sprinting 30 seconds, then walking or jogging at an easy pace for one minute, and repeating for about 20 minutes total) and promises results in as little time as possible. But the concept can be daunting for anyone who is just starting a workout program, recovering from an injury or surgery, or packing a little more weight than ideal.

So I'm here to preach the gospel of LISS: Low intensity steady state.

LISS exercise is any repetitive motion for 30 to 45 minutes at 50 to 60 percent of your maximum heart rate (MHR), according to sports medicine specialist and physical therapist Kevin McGuinness, who practices at Washington Orthopaedics & Sports Medicine.

Typically, this refers to such activities as walking, swimming, or even jogging or biking at an easy pace.

"LISS is any activity that gets your heart rate up just a little bit and for a longer period of time," McGuinness says. If it sounds familiar, that's not surprising: Before the recent popularity of HIIT, McGuinness says, low intensity exercise was simply called "cardio."

McGuinness says in addition to improving your mood and cognition and helping you control your blood sugar, "LISS is one of the best ways to maintain a level of fitness."

Assuming your physician has approved your fitness plan, here's how to practice LISS exercise. Calculate your maximum heart rate (MHR) by subtracting your age from the number 220.
