Public weighs-in on half-cent tax proposal

WASHINGTON COUNTY - The Washington County community took to social media to weigh-in on the possibility of the half-cent sales tax.

Washington County School Board Superintendent Joseph Taylor, as well as, School Board chairwoman Susan Roberts have called the tax "a fair tax." The School Board in general favors the tax. However, the public has differing views.

"Enough is enough on the tax hikes. Manage the money better with what you got," wrote Billy Worley. "There's too much tax being robbed from the hard working people in this county already."

Taylor has repeatedly stated that no one likes taxes; however, advocating for the tax, he has reminded School Board members and the public that the district has shown itself responsible and accountable over existing funds - something a recent state mandated audit on technology and capital projects demonstrated. He said he planned to schedule school tours to further illustrate how and where the funds could be used.

Vernon City Council Mayor Tina Sloan spouted words of confidence in the commitment of the school district to use the tax money in a way most beneficial to students and the future of the county. She also curbed some of the political angst popping up on the thread.

"No one wants more or increased taxes; but we all want our children and grandchildren to be educated and successful," Sloan wrote. "I've heard people say 'But I don't have kids in the school system.' Where do people think our leaders, our doctors, our builders and our dreamers of tomorrow are coming from?" Politically speaking, she added, "The commissioners are not assessing the tax - they are giving us - the citizens - the opportunity to decide. The school board are doing their job. They are looking to the future of our children."

One issue on the Facebook thread birthed the notion that the money would be used to fund athletics in some way. It's important to note that is a false idea; the monies garnered from the surtax would be earmarked for capital outlay projects and technology improvements.

The surtax is a common one several school districts pick up in order to make improvements - mostly capital improvements - across their districts. Washington County School District recently made the proposal to Washington County Board of Commissioners in order to get the referendum on the August ballot.

Other opinions varied, including contempt for taxes in general and nods to civic engagement that informs the democratic process.

"Taxation is theft," Chip Goodson wrote.

"For everyone saying the taxes keep getting raised or there is no transparency or you have no voice...my question to you is, when is the last time you sat in a (Washington County Board of Commissioners) meeting? The board is really good at soliciting and listening to the community inputs," wrote former County Administrator Hank Hamilton. "Be active in your local government," he wrote at the end of his post.

The recommendation passed its first public hearing. Superintendent Joseph Taylor has been making the case for the tax at municipal meetings, and is scheduled to do a presentation at Thursday's Washington County Chamber of Commerce meeting to be held at 12 p.m. noon at Northwest Florida Community Hospital.

Wausau to be recognized at FRWA conference

Florida Rural Water recognizes 20 year membership

WAUSAU - The Wausau Town Council is set to be recognized at the Florida Rural Water Association Conference for their 20 years of membership with the association. Councilman Dewayne Carter will attend on the town's behalf.

The council approved a request to amend the Florida Recreation Development Assistance Program grant for their splash pad project when they met in regular session July 12.

The amendment includes adding batting cages as an element to the existing project.

Updated plans for the new firehouse are set to be reviewed at the August meeting. A second public hearing concerning a Community Development Block Grant is also set for next month's meeting but will be held at 5:30 p.m..

A budget workshop is also set for that same day at 4:30 p.m.

Wausau Town Council will meet again in regular session at 6 p.m. on August 9.

24 trailers arrive for Eastpoint victims

County leaders: State settlement dollars unlikely for years

By David Adlerstein
dadlerstein@starfl.com
850-653-8894

EASTPOINT — The light at the end of a long, dark, fire-ravaged tunnel is reflecting this week off the shine of a new trailer.

Through a coordinated effort assisted by Franklin County, state and federal officials, more than two dozen trailers for temporary housing began arriving Wednesday, to help shelter the 36 families displaced by the Lime Rock Road fire that ravaged Buck Street, Ridge Road and Wilderness Road on June 24.

Twenty-four trailers had all arrived and were being cleaned and prepared Saturday at the Franklin County Sheriff's Office. An additional three travel trailers have been donated by individuals.

At a special meeting Monday afternoon, county officials voted unanimously to approve the purchase of 24 surplus mobile homes from the federal General Services Administration. The mobile homes were used by the Federal Emergency Management Agency to shelter victims of Hurricane Irma in the Keys.

The price tag for the temporary units $8,500 each, for a total cost, including transportation from Homestead, of $204,000. This represents a savings of 37 percent over their market value.

The county fronted the money for the trailers, but they won't be owning them long, as they will soon be transferred into the hands of the Capital Area Community Action Agency, which will be administering their usage. Regulations restrict the purchase to government entities, which is why the county had to serve as a middle man for the transaction.

The nonprofit Capital Area will oversee the units for up to six months and provide case management to help the displaced families, including 83 children, find permanent housing, said Tim Center, CEO of the Community Action Agency.

"We're excited that this could be a potential model for other community action programs in the state and country," Center said. "And we're also excited about being able to help the displaced families rebuild after the disaster."

County commissioners sounded a hopeful note at the Monday special meeting, pleased at the comparative swiftness the deal had been completed with the help of both U.S. senators, the governor and the staff at the Florida Division of Emergency Management.

But they weren't without their anger, led by Commissioner Noah Lockley, who argued that Wildlands Service Inc., the Tallahassee company that handled a controlled burn that ultimately got out of control and triggered the whirlwind blaze, should be doing more.

Commissioner Cheryl Sanders said the controlled burn had been done on land owned and administered by the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission.

Chairman Smokey Parrish said once investigators from the Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services determined that the cause had been from the controlled burn, supposed to have been completely extinguished six days prior, Wildlands Service Inc. "lawyered up," and it could be as long as four years before any settlement dollars flow into the affected property owners.

"We're never going to make them whole again," Sanders said.

"We got a lawyer," Lockley said. "Let him send them something, and let's we lawyer up. Let them know we ain't playing."

Commissioners stressed that Capital Area would be in charge of determining who would receive the FEMA trailers, with property owners topping the list. Lockley stressed that he felt renters, and even those without a documented claim to residency, should be giving priority as well.

"They didn't ask for this," he said. "If they were on the books or not, they were there."

Commissioner Ricky Jones, who has served as point man on the ground for the county while the other commissioners were away at a Florida Association of Counties meeting, told Commissioner William Massey he estimated the county also had lost as much as $20,000 in asphalt road work because of the fire.

Jones, who as a child experienced a fire that burned his family out of their home, served as a quiet, reassuring presence in the days immediately after the fire, even though the affected areas are just outside his district. He told his colleagues he was grateful to see their unified effort at this stage. "This was no tabletop exercise," he said.

While there was not an extensive discussion about the legal ramifications of the fire, County Attorney Michael Shuler advised commissioners they would not have legal standing in matters that involve private property owners.

"They (Wildland Services) are not going to voluntarily resolve these lawsuits," Shuler said, whose family previously secured a judgment of more than $700,000 for timberlands they owned that were destroyed from a controlled burn by the state.

Shuler said Capital Area will pay for all title costs associated with the trailer purchase, and he expected that to be completed within the next two to three weeks.

He also noted that the county has the ability to buy other equipment, such as air conditioners, from the GSA at a discount.

Massey noted that an enormous amount of household furnishings, from coffee pots and dishes to mattresses, have been accumulated thanks to the generosity of donors from throughout the region.

"We could equip 10 houses," he said.

Tress Dameron, emergency services coordinator, told commissioners that of the affected properties, 16 were residences owned by people who owned the land as well, while another 13 were places rented by families as their primary residence. Four were non-primary residences, she said, with another eight places not destroyed but in need of repair. The remaining damages were of an as-yet undetermined number of sheds, outbuildings, vehicles, boats, tools and other equipment.

Contributions roll in for county District 4 seat

Staff Report

CHIPLEY - Contributions are rolling in for vying county commission candidates of District 4.

According to Washington County Supervisor of Elections Office financial reports for June, Washington County Board of County Commissioners incumbent Todd Abbott (R) reported $2,350 in contributions, and $1,200 in-kind; and contender Wesley Griffin (D) reported $3,631.10, and $684.67 in-kind.

Unopposed candidates for Washington County School Board also reported contributions for the month of June.

Incumbent Vann Brock (NPA) reported $100, Will "Tonka" Taylor (NPA) reported $50, and $850 in-kind; and incumbent Susan Roberts (NPA) reported $100.

State sets deadlines for mail-in votes

By News Service of Florida

The initial window for supervisors of elections to get ballots in the mail to other voters is from July 24 to July 31. The last day for voters to request a vote-by-mail ballot is Aug. 22, and the last day for supervisors to send out the mail-in ballots is Aug. 24.

The first ballots of Florida's Aug. 28 primary election need to be in the mail by Saturday, according to deadlines announced Thursday by the state Division of Elections.

The July 14 deadline applies to ballots being mailed overseas to absent stateside voters as well as overseas uniformed service members and overseas civilians, Secretary of State Ken Detzner announced.

The initial window for supervisors of elections to get ballots in the mail to other voters is from July 24 to July 31. The last day for voters to request a vote-by-mail ballot is Aug. 22, and the last day for supervisors to send out the mail-in ballots is

Aug. 24. Voters can also pick up vote-by-mail ballots from their local supervisors office up to the day before the election. According to the Division of Elections, all 67 Florida counties will offer early voting at select polling locations from Aug. 18 to Aug. 25. The deadline to be registered to vote in the primary election is July 30.

life enjoyed attending bluegrass events and gospel sings. Since 1976, the Wells were actively involved in the Panhandle Watermelon Festival - where one would easily find Hester in her iconic watermelon seed sack dress.

In the 30 years that Judge Wells was chairman of the festival, Hester played an integral role as well.

Current Chairman the Hon. Judge Colby Peel said the loss of Mrs. Hester is deeply felt because of all she has done for the festival over the years.

"No family has meant more or done more for the Panhandle Watermelon Festival than the Wells family, and Mrs. Hester will be greatly missed by all who knew her," Peel said.

Wells attended Esto School through the ninth grade and then transferred to Holmes County High School where she graduated in 1945. She was a member of Mt. Zion Church near Esto, and was baptized in nearby Ten Mile Creek.

After marrying Perry on October 4, 1952 in Cottonwood, Alabama, the Wells bought their first home in Panama City.

Over the years, the family's religious service would extend to Primitive Baptist churches in Panama City, and the Bethel community and Chipley Chapel in Washington County.

In 1970, the Wells

family moved to Chipley to own and operate the Sears Catalog store - something of which Hester was an integral part. The couple later owned and operated a Montgomery Ward Catalog store. Wells later ran the historic T.L. Wells and Bro. department store as well as opened the Northwest Florida Music Park and Campground.

Hester and Perry had four boys, Tim, Grant, Emory and Gordon along with nine grandchildren one of whom preceded Hester in death.

No oversight as opioid epidemic grew

Congressional committees recently brought the executives of opioid manufacturers to Washington to explain their role in America's opioid epidemic.

Sadly, the executives largely shifted the blame elsewhere.

At its peak in 2012, physicians wrote 282 million opioid prescriptions — enough for 8 in 10 Americans, Politico reported.

Fortunately, the latest statistics suggest that the prescription surge has dramatically slowed.

But the surge drove home a somber reality in this country: opioids have been America's national pill. The fact is that other developed nations have not experienced the spikes in opioid use, opioid abuse and opioid-related overdoses that we have in this country.

That's led hundreds of cities and localities to sue opioid manufacturers — in part to obtain funding to treat opioid abuse victims.

If officials and authorities would have followed the money, it should have been easy to spot the tidal wave of opioid use.

In a statement reported by the Hill website, Rep. Gregg Harper, a Mississippi Republican, questioned why drug distributors repeatedly failed "to report suspicious orders of opioids or exercise effective controls" as more and more pills flooded America.

The answer seems pretty clear: because tremendous profits were being made by keeping quiet — and keeping the pills flowing.

The opioid epidemic was also fueled by a dangerous misperception that opioids carried low risks of addiction. To combat this, a trade association for the opioid manufacturers said they support policies that fully reveal the effects of opioids and decrease the likelihood of them being overprescribed.

It's critical that our elected leaders don't overreact to what we now know about the need to control opioid use; they can't go to the other extreme of making opioids nearly impossible to obtain.

Politico identified some of the potential unintended consequences of overreacting to the opioid crisis, it will increase the difficulty of obtaining relief for patients with valid pain issues — and individuals nearing the end of life — and distract us from focusing on the need for more non-drug therapies.

These are all good points.

But the bottom line hasn't changed:

The reason why so many officials are now scrambling to act — and at the risk of doing so in overzealous fashion — is because too few of them took any action as the opioid crisis gathered momentum.

Why weren't questions asked? Why wasn't oversight done? Why weren't whistleblowers taken seriously instead of being turned away, as reports suggest?

When there is an explosion in the use of a particular drug, a governmental agency should know about it right away — and it should report what it knows to Congress right away.

The overdose epidemic is a widespread failure, and government must surely take its share of the blame for it.

(A version of this editorial originally appeared in the (Jacksonville) Florida Times-Union, a sister paper of Gatehouse Media.)

ANOTHER VIEW

America, can we keep it together?

By Charita Goshay

Someone far more clever than me once described the Declaration of Independence as "the world's most famous break-up letter."

Independence Day exists because American colonists, fed up with the British Crown's greed and disrespect, were convinced they could do bad all by themselves, so it was inevitable.

In essence, the letter reads: "Dear George: Drop dead."

Even so, it wasn't easy. We tend to think the Declaration was printed and signed, someone lit fireworks and that was that.

Apart from the sure threat of being hanged for treason, the Founders also bickered and argued among themselves about what kind of country they wanted.

Some called for George Washington to serve as king. He didn't even want to be president. Others laid bare their hypocrisy when they demanded freedom from the British, while compromising on slavery. It would come back around to bite, inflicting wounds unhealed to this day.

In some ways, the question of our national identity remains unanswered — and therein lies our genius. We Americans can pivot and reinvent ourselves better than anyone on Earth. Though our core tenets remain, we are not remotely the same country we were in 1776, or even 1976.

What would they think? We can only guess what the Founders might think of the America of 2018, and how we've evolved from being a country in which only white men with land could vote to one in which practically anyone can be elected president — and practically anyone has.

They would be astonished that a nation that couldn't pull the trigger on slavery elected a black man president. Twice. They would not be at all shocked, however, that a woman has not been elected president because it never would occur to them that such a thing was possible.

So far, they appear to be right.

They'd likely be thrilled at their own brilliance in devising a system that has withstood the foolishness and abuses of their descendants, all while maintaining its central purpose: self-governance and the preservation of individual rights.

We have to suppose that some of them might be surprised we're still here, though it sometimes feels as if we, too, are breaking up.

A new Gallup Poll finds that for the first time in years, less than half of us describe ourselves as "extremely proud" to be American. Just 47 percent of those polled identified themselves as such, down from 70 percent in 2004.

Torn fabric

Our "common garment of destiny," as the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. described it, is at risk of unraveling; its threads being stressed by anger and resentment; the fabric being soiled and torn asunder by fear and demagoguery.

Among extremists and fear-mongers, there always has been talk of secession and even a second civil war. It all sounds silly on its face, but we know what happens to a house that remains divided.

We've been so good at democracy for so long, we've taken for granted it never will come undone. That a foreign adversary unleashed an army wielding laptops and false ads in 2016, and made the kind of inroads that no bombs ever could, should give us all nightmares. It exposed our arrogance in thinking that no one would dare, and our failure to learn the lessons of Sept. 11, when a small group was able to wield online propaganda like a sword and inflict grievous harm.

Can we keep it together? The question has been posed before, with the answer written in the blood of more than 600,000 lives lost to preserve it between 1861 and 1865, and just as many in its defense during World War II.

But our current state of deep divisiveness is cause for renewed concern. The real question: Do we have the courage, resolve and faith to save ourselves from ourselves?

Summertime dinner calls long overdue

Tom Purcell

Maybe a new Utah law will revive the lost art of parents calling their children home for dinner.

Utah recently passed the nation's first "free-range parenting" law to protect parents from prosecution for allowing their children to play in nearby parks, walk to school, go to the store or rumble through a neighborhood creek — without adult supervision.

It's a shame that it now takes passing laws to allow kids to enjoy childhood activities without adult supervision, but we must.

We must because, according to Parents Magazine, nearly 75 percent of parents fear their children are at risk of being abducted.

Some 30 percent of parents fear child abduction more than they do car accidents, sports injuries or drug addiction involving their children. Parental fears have been stoked for decades by sensationalistic news stories on the internet and cable television, 24/7 — fears that, regrettably, are woefully out of sync with reality.

According to The New York Times, among America's roughly 40 million elementary school-age children, approximately 115 are abducted by strangers each year — while 250,000 are in car wrecks.

According to The Washington Post, "children taken by strangers or slight acquaintances represent only one-hundredth of 1 percent of all missing children." Such abductions are also on the decline.

In any event, media-stoked fears have changed childhood forever, prompting "helicopter parents" to "hover" over their children every moment of every day — placing undue burdens and stress on children and parents alike.

Lenore Skenazy says the heck with that.

Skenazy, an American blogger, columnist, author and reality-show host, wrote a newspaper column in 2008 that explained her decision to allow her then-9-year-old son to ride on the New York City subway alone.

The column sparked a flood of outrage among stressed-out parents and won her the label of "America's Worst Mom." It also led to Skenazy penning the book "Free Range Kids: Giving Our Children the Freedom We Had Without Going Nuts with Worry."

Some 10 years later, Skenazy's advocacy culminated in the passing of Utah's new "free-range parenting" law, which hopefully will enable children to enjoy the sort of unsupervised freedoms we baby-boom kids experienced in abundance — and bring back the lost art of parents calling their children home for dinner!

In the '70s, after we spent the day outdoors building shacks, going on bike hikes, swimming in a neighbor's pool or enjoying dozens of other activities without adult supervision, our parents called us home for dinner.

Every parent's dinner call had a unique sound. My father went with a deep, booming "Tom, dinner! Tom, dinner!" I could hear him a mile away or more.

Sheriff's Corner

With WCSO Sheriff Kevin Crews

Let's clear the air on law enforcements views of substance abuse.

You often see arrests made within our county due to drug use in our communities. As your Sheriff, I understand that we cannot "arrest" our way out of this problem.

So, let me be clear when I say that we do not view an arrest as the answer to an epidemic that is sweeping our nation.

The sole purpose of a drug arrest is not to punish or humiliate the addict or their families, yet the responsibility to uphold and enforce the laws, which keep our communities safe.

The consequences of violating the law are clear and concise and we hope these arrests are informative to the community, as well as a deterrent for others during decision making processes, which could lead them to abusing, possessing, or selling drugs in our area.

Controversially, people have voiced that the offense of drug possession is a victimless crime. Let me assure you that the hearts of those protecting and serving our great county cry out when this comment is so loosely thrown around. The user is battling the addiction, but others left in the wake of its destruction are also engulfed in the wretched cycle of substance abuse, at no choice of their own.

The children. The family. The community. No one is immune to its wrath; It has no boundaries.

The poor condition of homes, increased crime rates in drug prone areas, and neglected children in drug-related environments is a short list of what law enforcement sees every single day when responding to those "victimless crimes."

As we continue to make these arrests, to ensure the safety of our communities, we can only hope that they will be used as a stepping stone towards the individual finding relief in sobriety and the acceptance of help through rehabilitation. However, we cannot force them to participate in programs that are encouraged, even if ordered by the courts - this often lands them back behind bars.

With all of this said, I will never feel sorrow for dealers who prey on the weakness of those addicted to drugs, nor will I ever succumb to the beliefs that we are fighting a losing war on drugs.

With just one child saved, we have already won.

Sheriff Kevin Crews

One in custody and one at-large after pursuits

By Staff Report

CARYVILLE - A deputy's attempt to stop a vehicle during the course of searching for a man with an outstanding warrant led to the pursuit of a second subject.

The incident took place on July 9 after Holmes County Sheriff's Office responded to a request for a civil standby at the Caryville campsite, according to a news release from HCSO.

The report stated that while performing the service, the deputy collected information from the parties and went to his vehicle to conduct a warrants check which confirmed one of the subjects, identified as Steven Pope, had an active felony warrant.

When the deputy returned, Pope had fled the scene on foot, and additional units, as well as the Holmes and Walton CI K9 teams, responded to assist, is the pursuit.

Prior to the arrival of the additional units, a white Nissan Altima was seen leaving the area. When a deputy spotted the vehicle and attempted to conduct an investigative stop to see if the suspect was inside, the driver refused, initiating a pursuit.

The suspect, later identified as Matthew Pate, turned south on County Road 179 and continued toward Caryville where he turned onto Pate Pond Road. The pursuit then continued down River Road where the deputy lost sight of the vehicle in the Hinson

Cross Roads area, according to HCSO.

Washington County Sheriff's Office was notified, and a WCSO deputy located the vehicle on Creek Road, initiating a pursuit that headed north on Pate Pond Road. The vehicle went off the road before coming to a stop, with Pate now fleeing on foot.

Pate was later apprehended by WCSO and the Northwest Florida Reception Center K9 team. Meanwhile, Holmes CI began tracking Pope, a trail which lead the team up to Highway 179 and Bear Hewitt Landing, where the track was lost.

Pope is wanted on a Bay County felony VOP warrant and now faces additional charges of fleeing and eluding in Holmes County. Anyone with knowledge of Pope's whereabouts is asked to call HCSO at 850-547-3681 or their nearest law enforcement agency.

Pate is currently in the custody of the Washington County Jail and also faces fleeing and eluding charges in Holmes County.

Sheriff John Tate would like to thank the Holmes CI, Walton CI and NFRC K9 teams and the Washington County Sheriff's Office for assistance in these pursuits and their continued working relationship with HCSO.

State issues new pot license, gets ready for four more

By Dara Kam
News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE --- Florida Department of Health officials took two major actions in the medical-marijuana sphere Friday, issuing a highly sought-after license to a Miami nursery that successfully challenged the state and laying out the process for four more licenses as the cannabis industry continues to blossom.

In a blistering opinion last month, Administrative Law Judge John Van Laningham recommended that health officials grant a medical marijuana license to Nature's Way Nursery of Miami, Inc. The June 19 recommended order scalded the state Office of Medical Marijuana Use for using a flawed system to decide which applicants were granted the coveted licenses.

While Van Laningham's order was just a recommendation, health officials on Friday issued the license to Nature's Way and reduced the number of available slots as hundreds of applicants are expected to compete to join a highly restricted market in one of the country's most populous states.

At the same time, health officials laid out the framework for a new process to handle what they expect to be up to 400 applications for four licenses that recently became available because the number of eligible patients in a statewide database has exceeded 100,000.

John Lockwood, a lawyer who represents operators in the marijuana industry, hailed the department's moves Friday.

"It takes these four licenses that they have to issue by statute and removes them from the litigious issues. These are just four open, competitive licenses. So in my opinion this is a very, very smart move by the department to get these licenses to market as quickly as possible. This is the way it should be done," he said.

But it's unclear whether Friday's moves by the health department will appease critics --- including legislators, patient advocates and marijuana industry operators --- who have blasted the agency for delays in issuing new licenses.

Florida's medical marijuana industry has been mired in controversy since its inception in 2014, when lawmakers legalized non-euphoric cannabis and authorized five licenses.

The already intense competition for the licenses intensified after voters approved a constitutional amendment in 2016 that broadly legalized medical marijuana.

A law passed last year, aimed at implementing the constitutional amendment, required health officials to issue 10 new licenses, including to applicants who had legal challenges pending as of January 2017 or who had scored within one point of the highest-ranked applicants in five regions.

Health officials initially said Nature's Way was ineligible for a license because its aggregate score of 2.8833 was not within one point of the 4.4 received by Costa Farms, which was granted a license for the Southeast region in 2015.

But as he had previously done in an unrelated challenge, Van Laningham found that health officials' ranking of the applicants --- the method used to determine which ones would get licenses --- was not the same as scoring the applications.

Chipola's Johnson is NJCAA Baseball Coach of The Year

Chipola College baseball head coach Jeff Johnson has been named the NJCAA D1 American Baseball Coaches Association National Coach of the Year.

"It feels good to get it man," said Johnson. "As always when you get an award like that with the many great coaches as there are at our junior college level, it's special. It takes a lot of great players and a lot of great assistant coaches to help as well. I'm just proud to receive the honor."

Johnson led his team to back-to-back JUCO World Series titles after ending the national tournament with six straight wins including two against No. 1 Walters State and one against 2017 runner-up San Jacinto. It was Johnson's third JUCO title

[SPECIAL TO THE NEWS]

(2007, 2017, 2018). Chipola finished the season at 49-17.

Chipola won its second straight title with a 10-7 win over Walters State (TN) in the title game of the National Tournament on June 2. After dropping the opening game of the World Series to Walters, the Indians avoided elimination in six consecutive games to win the title, becoming just the fourth program in tournament history to achieve the feat. Chipola also was the first program to win back-to-back NJCAA World Series championships since Grayson (TX) in 1999-2000.

Chipola Sophomore Morgan McCullough won three individual awards at the tournament - Outstanding Defensive Player, Outstanding Hitter and Most Valuable Player. Philip Sanderson won the Outstanding Pitcher award. He allowed only one earned run in 13.1 innings. Five Chipola players were named to the All-Tournament Team: Edmond American, Trevor Holloway, Morgan McCullough, Francisco Urbaz and Alex Webb. Coach Jeff Johnson was awarded the Bus Bergman Coach of the Year Award for the second consecutive season.

HEALTH

EXERCISE DANCING GOOD FOR THE BRAIN

Researchers at the University of Illinois at Chicago found that older sedentary adults who participated in a Latin ballroom dance program reported improvements in memory, attention and focus.

The Mayo Clinic offers the following tips to get dancing:

- Sign up for a dance class at a community college, YMCA, dance studio or community center.
- Try dancing at home by following along with a free exercise video from the National Institute on Aging's Go4Life YouTube channel.

PSYCHOLOGY IMPROVE YOUR MOOD

The following tips to improve your mind and mood come from onegreenplanet.org.

- Do something you love every day, like writing in a journal or practicing a favorite hobby.
- Ditch the negative self-talk.
- Eat your B vitamins like B3, B5, B6, B7 and B12.
- Eat more plant-based foods to help relieve depression, anxiety and promote mental clarity.

FUN FACT HUG FOR BETTER HEALTH

Embracing activates the hormone oxytocin, which promotes a feeling of trust and social connection. It also lowers your body's levels of cortisol, the stress hormone, according to prevention.com.

Save a life

Drowning can be fast and silent, but it also can be prevented

Staying safe in the water

Learn to swim

Drowning is the second-leading cause of death in children between ages 1 and 4.

Teach safety

Talk about risky behavior: diving or swimming in unfamiliar water, and alcohol or drug use while in or near water.

Secure the pool

Install fencing with self-closing gates at least 4 feet high to separate the pool from the house and the yard.

Clear out pool toys

Make sure children aren't tempted to play unsupervised.

NO RUNNING | NO DIVING

Remember life jackets

Half of all boating deaths could be prevented with their use.

Learn CPR

For drowning, the American Heart Association recommends rescue breaths along with compressions.

Sources: Centers for Disease Control and Prevention/National Drowning Prevention Alliance have a pool, they should become familiar and get trained in mouth-to-mouth rescue breathing," said Dr. Michael Sayre, a professor of emergency medicine at the University of Washington in Seattle. "Whereas hands-only CPR is typically focused on someone who is not in the water and collapses suddenly for other reasons, people underwater die because of lack of oxygen."

After Clay's recovery, Metro founded a nonprofit called CPR Party, using the model of at-home shopping parties to encourage people to teach and learn CPR. The lessons aren't equal to official CPR certification, Metro said, but "they will know what to do and hopefully, we create a bridge to certification. We just give them that basic knowledge to empower them."

About one in five people who die from drowning are 14 years old or younger, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. And for every child who dies from drowning, another five receive emergency department care for nonfatal injuries, often including brain damage. The numbers are particularly discouraging, experts say, because in many cases, drowning is preventable.

Drowning is the third-leading cause of unintentional injury death worldwide, accounting for 7 percent of all injury-related deaths, according to the World Health Organization. The agency estimates there are 360,000 annual drowning deaths worldwide.

"The biggest thing we try to get through to people is you need to maintain constant, active supervision when people are in the water," said Adam Katchmarchi, executive director of the National Drowning Prevention Alliance. "Regardless of age and swimming ability, you should never swim alone. You should always swim around someone who's keeping that vigilant watch over the water, whether that be a parent in a backyard pool or whether you're swimming in a lifeguarded area."

On its website, the NDPA stresses what it calls "layers of protection," including swimmer training, facility safety and parental responsibilities designed to prevent drowning. Drowning can happen quickly and silently, without warning, Katchmarchi said.

"We're used to the 'Baywatch' drowning, where people see on TV that someone's going to be waving their arms and screaming for help," he said.

"An actual drowning victim, when they're in that 20- to 60-second fight for survival, they're unable to call for help because all of their energy is being used to keep their head above water. A lot of times they're bobbing up and down, going under and re-emerging and trying to get air, so it's really difficult for them to call out for help," Katchmarchi said.

"It's really easy to say, 'Oh, I'm watching my kids,' but you're scrolling through Facebook or your Twitter feed. ... Even if you're distracted for just a short period of time, it can happen really quickly and really silently."

By The American Heart Association

Just back from a run with her husband, Laura Metro heard her 6-year-old daughter, Maison, screaming, "I think Clay died! I think Clay died!"

Metro's 3-year-old son, who was swimming with family friends, was found at the bottom of the pool with his towel.

One friend started CPR – or the closest thing he knew based on what he'd seen on TV – on Clay's blue, lifeless body.

Paramedics arrived and got Clay's heart beating again. He was taken by helicopter to the hospital and spent two days in a coma before making what Metro calls "nothing short of a miraculous recovery."

"The doctors said, 'We don't know why he's alive. The only thing – the only thing – we can attribute it to is the bystander CPR," Metro said. He didn't see the inside of a hospital for an hour and a half after almost drowning. The bystander CPR "was really what did it."

Drowning is the third-leading cause of unintentional injury death worldwide, accounting for 7 percent of all injury-related deaths, according to the World Health Organization. The agency estimates there are 360,000 annual drowning deaths worldwide.

The Metros' good fortune is anecdotal evidence of the findings from a study published in the June 2017 edition of the journal Resuscitation, which found that chances for neurological recovery from a near-drowning increase when the victim receives CPR from a bystander.

"We would advocate for parents knowing CPR, and particularly if they

TODAY'S WORKOUT

Use this combo move for a quick workout

By Marlo Alleva
More Content Now

On the days you don't feel like working on your fitness, aim for moves that target multiple zones, and you will be done in no time.

Our move today is a wide squat with a side crunch. You will be working your lower body, quads, glutes, hamstrings, inner thighs and also your core.

Begin this combo move by placing your feet out in a wide stance, angling the toes outward. Lower your torso by bending in the knees. Push your hips slightly forward to engage the abdomen and hold your chest tall. Place each hand gently behind the ears or neck and you are ready to move.

Keeping the lower body engaged in a squatting position, begin to bend to one side. Keeping the elbows out from the body, guide the chest with the bent elbow. Once you reach your deepest contraction on one side, return to the start. And continue to the opposite side.

Keep this side-to-side crunch going for at least five to 10 times on each side. Stand from the squat, and give your legs a short break, then return for the next set. Give yourself at least three to five sets of this combo movement.

For variation, you can add light hand weights, or stand from the squat if it becomes too much to hold while you are crunching.

This move can be done on its own, as it is targeting multiple areas, but also great to add into a lower body/core routine.

Whatever you choose, just do it. You'll be glad you did when you are done.

NASCAR THIS WEEK

The Daytona Beach News-Journal's Godwin Kelly & Ken Willis have covered NASCAR for nearly 60 years combined. godwin.kelly@news-jrnl.com ken.willis@news-jrnl.com

SPEED FREAKS

A few questions we had to ask ourselves

Who might possibly crack the current Big 3 and make it a Big 4?

GODSPEAK: Give me "Bad" Brad Keselowski. Shocked? Yes, shocked: He has not won a race this season.

KEN'S CALL: Clint Bowyer is an easy call, and Kyle Larson seems possible whenever he remembers how to win, but I'll go out on a small limb and say Erik Jones.

Two more years on the contract for Jimmie Johnson and Chad Knaus. How impressive is that?

GODSPEAK: "I think this is the beginning of a beautiful friendship," said Humphrey Bogart at the end of "Casablanca."

KEN'S CALL: In NASCAR's long, colorful history, some driver-chief relationships barely lasted through the first green-flag pit stop, so pushing two decades might be their biggest accomplishment.

FEUD OF THE WEEK

KYLE BUSCH VS. RICKY STENHOUSE JR.:

This isn't from Kentucky, but Daytona, where Stenhouse triggered a big crash. There is so much tension in this relationship, it won't take much for either to snap.

GODWIN KELLY'S TAKE: Busch was looking for an apology call from Stenhouse. That never happened. The two had a verbal exchange at Kentucky. "Pick and choose your battles wisely," Stenhouse said.

GODWIN'S PICKS FOR NEW HAMPSHIRE

WINNER: Denny Hamlin

REST OF TOP 5: Kyle Larson, Kevin Harvick, Kyle Busch, Brad Keselowski

FIRST ONE OUT: Martin Truex Jr.

DARK HORSE: Jimmie Johnson

DON'T BE SURPRISED IF: Hamlin, who has three wins in Loudon, pushes the panic button and responds with a victory for Coach Joe Gibbs.

MOTOR MOUTHS PODCAST

We look back at Kentucky, we look ahead to New Hampshire, and as always, we look over our shoulders.

KENTUCKY

THREE THINGS WE LEARNED

Martin Truex Jr. confirmed he is part of NASCAR's Big 3 this season by romping at Kentucky.
[AP/ALBERT CESARE]

1. The Big 3

Yes, there is a "Big 3" in NASCAR this season. Martin Truex Jr. made it official with his fourth win of the year at Kentucky. Kyle Busch and Kevin Harvick have five wins each, and the three have combined for 82 playoff points, compared with all other drivers with a total of 44 points.

2. Haunted house?

Some strange things happened Saturday in Sparta, Kentucky. Kyle Larson missed driver introductions and was sent to the rear of the field; the sprinkler system near pit road came on at 10 p.m.; and Truex's No. 78 Toyota rolled away from him when he got out at the finish line.

3. The first loser

In racing they say "second place is the first loser." That's the tone of Ryan Blaney's interview after finishing second to Truex. "It's not a win," Blaney said. "It's a positive, that's for sure. I hate it ... I thought I could get by him, but just couldn't quite get a run on him."

— Godwin Kelly, godwin.kelly@news-jrnl.com

THREE THINGS TO WATCH

1. Unbelievable stat

When you think powerhouse NASCAR team, you don't go much further than Hendrick Motorsports, long considered the New York Yankees of stock-car racing. Well, even the Yankees have down years, and Hendrick is in a slump. If Rick Hendrick's team doesn't win at New Hampshire, then Hendrick Motorsports will have cycled through 12 months with no wins. Its last win was July 23, 2017. Yikes!

2. More Hendrick

With seven more regular-season races before the playoffs, two Hendrick Motorsports drivers are precariously close to the cut line. Chase Elliott and Alex Bowman are 15th and 16th in the playoff rankings. The top 16 drivers go into the playoffs. William Byron is 22nd in points while Jimmie Johnson, a seven-time Cup champion, is hanging on in 14th place. A couple of wins by underdog drivers could spell disaster.

Rick Hendrick, left, with three of his Cup drivers: Alex Bowman, Jimmie Johnson and Chase Elliott at Daytona earlier this year.
[NEWS-JOURNAL/DAVID TUCKER]

3. It ain't over

The feud that started in Daytona between Kyle Busch and Ricky Stenhouse Jr. is not over. Busch complained that Stenhouse didn't apologize after crashing him at Daytona. The two had a verbal exchange at Kentucky while Busch was strapped into his No. 18 Toyota waiting to qualify. "I told him why I didn't reach out," Stenhouse said to NBC. "I felt like he ran his mouth enough that I didn't have anything to say to him."

— Godwin Kelly, godwin.kelly@news-jrnl.com

QUESTIONS & ATTITUDE

Compelling questions ... and maybe a few actual answers

Can the Chad Knaus-Jimmie Johnson combination really last through 2020?

With Chad's new contract announced last week, both the crew chief and driver of the No. 48 are inked for two more years after 2018. They've never had to endure anything like this current winless streak, and as far as anyone knows, there's no tension, only frustration. It's quite amazing, really, given the nature of auto-racing relationships. "He's a very tolerant individual," Knaus says of Johnson. That would make him the rarest of racers.

How's Ricky Stenhouse Jr.'s tolerance?

It's apparently at low tide with Kyle Busch, who verbally dumped on Ricky after the big mess at Daytona two weekends ago. Ricky let Kyle know about it at Kentucky this past weekend, and suggested he should save his more personal critiques for face-to-face meetings. He won't, of course, but it's fun to consider the possibilities.

CHIPLEY - There was a standing-room-only crowd in the Washington County Ag Center on Hwy 90 in Chipley on July 10, as Florida Panhandle Technical College showcased the most recent graduates from the Practical Nursing Program.

Washington County Superintendent of Schools Joe Taylor awarded diplomas, along with a handshake and words of encouragement to the graduates, expressing his remarks the sense of pride and accomplishment which accompanies a well-paid job.

"The entire community is looking at you today," said Taylor. "We are all proud of you and wish you well in your careers."

One of more than 35 degree and certification programs offered at the college, the graduates were accompanied by friends, family and their instructors.

"You should be very, very happy today," shouted Nursing Program Director Shirley Morris to the crowded audience, "because these bright young ladies are now going to get a job!"

"We are so very proud of the accomplishments of this group of students," echoed FPTC Director Martha Compton, "and there is another class right behind this one, for whom we will be applauding in just another few months. We are successfully putting people into our workforce every day here at Florida Panhandle Technical College and we are proud to say so."

Financial aid is available for many of the programs at FPTC. For more information, stop by Student Services on Hoyt Street, visit online at www.fptc.edu or call Student Services at 850-638-1180 ext. 317.

Cara Griffin offered words of encouragement to her classmates at the FPTC nursing program graduation.

Trade troubles

US challenges China, EU and others at WTO over steel tariffs

By Paul Wiseman
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Trump administration on Monday brought cases against China, the European Union, Canada, Mexico and Turkey at the World Trade Organization for retaliating against American tariffs on imported steel and aluminum.

The United States has imposed tariffs of 25 percent on steel and 10 percent on aluminum on the grounds that the imported metals pose a threat to U.S. national security. China, the EU, Canada, Mexico and Turkey have counter-punched with taxes on more than $24 billion worth of U.S. exports.

U.S. Trade Rep. Robert Lighthizer said their retaliation violates the rules of the Geneva-based WTO, which mediates trade disputes.

“Instead of working with us to address a common problem, some of our trading partners have elected to respond with retaliatory tariffs designed to punish American workers, farmers and companies,” Lighthizer said.

In this July 13 photo, Chinese-made children shoes carrying a Chinese map and U.S. flags are on display for a sale at a shop in Beijing. (ANDY WONG/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)

If the WTO agrees that the retaliatory duties violate its rules, it would assess the damage and calculate the tariffs that the United States would be entitled to impose in response — retaliation for the retaliation. But WTO proceedings can drag on for years.

In taxing imported steel and aluminum from some countries in March and others in June, President Donald Trump deployed a little-used weapon in American trade policy: Under the Trade Expansion Act of 1962, presidents are empowered to impose unlimited tariffs on imports that the Commerce Department asserts are threats to America's national security.

The WTO gives countries broad leeway to determine national security interests. But there was long an unwritten agreement that WTO member countries would use the national-security justification only very sparingly to avoid abuses.

Trump's steel and aluminum tariffs broke that taboo. Now the Commerce Department is pursuing another, bigger national-security case against auto imports. Hearings on the proposed auto tariffs are set for Thursday and Friday in Washington.

Separately, Trump is engaged in a trade war with China over the aggressive tactics Beijing has used to challenge U.S. technological dominance. According to the Trump administration, these include outright cybertheft and forcing U.S. companies to hand over trade secrets in exchange for access to the Chinese market.

Last week, the administration announced 10 percent tariffs on $200 billion worth of Chinese goods, which won't take effect until at least September. On Monday, China said that it filed a WTO challenge against those proposed U.S. tariffs.

Prime Day runs into early snags

By Anne D'Innocenzio
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Amazon's website ran into some early snags Monday on its much-hyped Prime Day, an embarrassment for the tech company on the shopping holiday it created.

Shoppers clicking on many Prime Day links after the 3 p.m. ET launch in the U.S. got only images of dogs — some quite abashed-looking — with the words, “Uh-oh. Something went wrong on our end.” People took to social media to complain that they couldn't order items.

By about 4:30 p.m., many Prime Day links were working, and Amazon said later Monday that it was working to resolve the glitches.

In an email to The Associated Press, it said “many are shopping successfully” and that in the first hour of Prime Day in the U.S., customers ordered more items than in the same time frame last year.

Still, the hiccups could mute sales and send shoppers elsewhere during one of Amazon's busiest sales periods that's also a key time for it to sign up new Prime members. Shoppers have lots of options, as many other chains have offered sales and promotions to try to capitalize on the Prime Day spending.

Analyst Sucharita Mulpuru-Kodali at Forrester Research called the glitch a “huge deal.”

“This is supposed to be one of their biggest days of the year,” she wrote in an email. “I am shocked this caught them off guard. But I guess the lesson is to not have a big unveil during the middle of the day when everyone comes to your site all at once.”

Amazon, which recently announced that Prime membership would be getting more expensive, was hoping to lure in shoppers by focusing on new products and having Whole Foods be part of the process. It was also hoping parents would use the deals event to jump start back-to-school shopping.

Jason Goldberg, senior vice president of commerce at Publicis. Sapient, noted that the problems could turn off shoppers for a while, particularly those who planned to sign up for Prime membership.

“If you were planning to find Prime deals to lower the cost of back-to-school (purchases), you're almost certainly going back to your traditional venue of choice,” he said.

Stocks fall as crude oil prices drop 4 percent; banks climb

By Marley Jay
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Major U.S. indexes closed mostly lower Monday as investors bought banks but sold most other types of stocks, including health care and technology companies. Energy stocks sank along with oil prices.

Oil prices fell more than 4 percent after U.S. officials suggested the U.S. will take a softer stance on countries that import oil from Iran after sanctions on Iran's energy sector go back into effect in November. Banks rose along with interest rates as well as a solid second-quarter report from Bank of America.

A strong forecast gave Deutsche Bank its biggest gain in more than a year.

Amazon jumped in midday trading as investors expected strong sales during the company's annual Prime Day promotion, one of its largest sales days of the year, but the stock gave up much of that gain following problems with the company's website. Most other groups of stocks lost ground, and about two-thirds of the companies on the New York Stock Exchange finished lower.

Stocks finished at five-month highs Friday as investors remained optimistic about the U.S. economy even as they worried about the trade war between the U.S. and China.

“We're coming off of a very strong week last week where the market finally started to focus on the expectation of a very strong earnings season,” said Sunitha Thomas, a portfolio advisor for Northern Trust Wealth Management. She said companies are likely to report big increases in profit and revenue, and while investors are looking for hints the trade war is affecting company forecasts and supply chains, there were no signs of that on Monday.

The S&P 500 index lost 2.88 points, or 0.1 percent, to 2,798.43. The Dow Jones Industrial Average rose 44.95 points, or 0.2 percent, to 25,064.36 as Goldman Sachs, JPMorgan Chase, and Boeing climbed. The Nasdaq composite fell 20.26 points, or 0.3 percent, to 7,805.72.

The Russell 2000 index of smaller-company stocks declined 8.54 points, or 0.5 percent, to 1,678.54.

Bank of America's second-quarter profits jumped, as like other big banks, it got a big boost from the corporate tax cut at the end of 2017 and from higher interest rates.

Unlike Wells Fargo and Citigroup, which disclosed their results Friday, Bank of America did better than Wall Street expected. Its stock rose 4.3 percent to $29.78.

BRIEF CASE

WASHINGTON IMF: World economy likely to grow 3.9 percent

The International Monetary Fund is keeping its forecast for global economic growth unchanged at 3.9 percent this year despite worries about rising trade tensions and higher oil prices. But the lending agency is downgrading the outlook for Europe and Japan.

The IMF now predicts that the economy of the 19-country eurozone will grow 2.2 percent in 2018, down from the 2.4 percent it forecast in April. The fund expects the Japanese economy to expand 1 percent this year, downgrading its 1.2 percent April forecast. The IMF still expects tax cuts to lift U.S. economic growth to 2.9 percent this year, up from 2.3 percent in 2017. The Associated Press

Dr. Roberts is Chipola Administrator of the Year

Special to the News

Dr. Jayne Roberts is the Recipient of the Faculty-Administrator of the Year Award at Chipola College. Roberts presently serves as Vice-president of Student Affairs at the college. She has responsibility over academic advising, student activities, campus security, career center, registrar and admissions, testing, financial aid and has served as the college's Equity Coordinator.

Roberts began her career at Chipola as secretary to the Office of Community Relations and has served as Director of Testing, Registrar, Academic Advisor, Student Disability Officer, Designated School Official for the Student Exchange Visa Information System (SEVIS) and Student Activities Director.

While serving as Compass Club Advisor in 1989, the Chipola Chapter was named the top chapter in the nation. Roberts has also taught several courses at Chipola including orientation, Introduction to Psychology, Career & Life Planning, and Human Growth and Development.

She currently serves on a number of college committees and chairs the Appeals/Grievance, Disciplinary, and Admission Committees.

She is active in the Association of Florida Colleges where she served on the Executive Board and served as co-chair of the audit committee. She has served as a member of the Substantive Change Committee (2004); and as a member of the Compliance Certification Team, achieving the College's most recent Southern Association of Colleges & Schools (SACS) reaffirmation (2008 and 2018). Additionally, she has served as State Chair of the Student Life Skills Committee for the Florida State-wide Common Course Numbering System.

An avid Chipola sports fan, Jayne was an integral part of the State JUCO Tournament, serving as a chair of the Team Hosts committee. After being hired at Chipola, Roberts completed her A.A. degree. She then went on to earn a B.S. from FSU, an MS from TSUD, and an Ed.D from FSU. While working on her Doctorate, Jayne was a recipient of the Stickler Award and the Maurice Litton Scholarship from the Educational Leadership Department at FSU.

She has received the Faculty/Administrator of the Month for December 2001, March 2004, April 2013, February 2018 and was the Faculty/Administrator of the year in 2004. Jayne is married to Mel Roberts, who retired from Jackson County in 2015. The Roberts have three daughters—Heather, Heidi and Natalie—all graduates of Chipola and FSU, and four grandchildren. The family is active in the First Baptist Church of Marianna where Jayne serves on several committees and is a member of the Handbell Choir. She has taught Sunday School for the Children's department since 1993.

The Faculty/Administrator of the Year award includes a plaque, reserved parking for a year, $1,000 bonus, and a $100 gift certificate from the College Book Store. The annual award is selected from among the monthly winners.

Chipola announce financial aid deadline for fall term

Special to the News

Tuesday, July 24, is the Financial Aid Application deadline for students planning to use Federal Financial Aid to pay for Fall classes at Chipola College.

Students must complete the FAFSA (Free Application for Federal Student Aid) in order to qualify for Pell, Work Study and other Federal Financial Aid. The FAFSA takes several days to process; therefore, students are encouraged to submit all electronic forms as soon as possible. For information, call 850-718-2366 or visit www.fafsa.gov

The general college Application for Admission deadline for the Fall Semester is Aug. 2. Applications are available in the Admissions Office located in the Student Services Building or online at www.chipola.edu. Regular registration for Fall classes is Aug. 15-17. Classes begin Aug. 20.

There are several steps in the application process: (1) complete the college Admission Application or call 718-2311 for assistance; (2) request a final high school transcript be sent to Admission and Records Office; and (3) take the College Placement Test (non-exempt students); call 718-2284 for assistance.

Chipola offers Bachelor's Degrees, Associate in Arts Degrees, Associate in Science Degrees and Workforce Development programs and certifications.

Bachelor's Degrees include: Education majors in Middle and High School Math or Science, English Education, Exceptional Student Education and Elementary Education; a Business Administration degree with concentrations in Management, Accounting, Information Technology and Engineering Management; and a Bachelor of Science in Nursing (BSN). Additionally, the college offers the Educator Preparation Institute, a Teacher Certification program for those with a B.S. in a non-teaching field.

The Associate in Arts (A.A.) degree is designed for students who plan to complete their first two years of college work and then transfer to a four-year program at Chipola or another college or university.

Credits are transferable and are applicable toward a bachelor's degree. Advising guides that outline requirements for specific majors are available at <http://www.chipola.edu/student-services/cguides/index.html>

Several Associate in Science (AS) and Workforce programs are offered which provide training for high wage jobs.

Workforce programs include: Automotive Service Technology, Correctional Officer, Cosmetology, Firefighter I & II, Law Enforcement Officer, Nursing Assistant and Welding.

Associate in Science (AS) programs include: Nursing (RN), Civil Engineering Technology, Engineering Technology, Business Administration, Early Childhood Education, Computer Information Technology, Fire Science Technology, Criminal Justice Technology, Networking Services Technology, and Recreation Technology.

College Credit Certificate programs include: Emergency Medical Technician (EMT); Paramedic; Advanced Manufacturing; Pneumatics, Hydraulics, and Motors Certification, Child Care Center Management, and Engineering Tech Support Specialist Certificate.

Give your kids a clear alternative

By Shayne Looper

Your teen daughter's favorite show is "Pretty Little Liars." Week by week she learns the singular lesson that her value depends on being beautiful, rich and sexy. Her younger brother hardly watches TV anymore, and you are relieved: Their fights have decreased significantly. But there is a price to pay: He's in his room all afternoon and evening playing "Monster Hunter: World." Though his sister and he are not fighting they are also not talking, and he only talks to you when you ask him a direct question.

It is beginning to dawn on you that your children are immersed in a value system you despise. They are learning that self-fulfillment is the most important — perhaps the only important — thing in the world. The idea that the goal of life is to feel good, or at least avoid pain, and that money is the way to that goal, is constantly reinforced. Sex, as demonstrated again and again in the media they consume, is represented as an exciting and pleasurable, but fundamentally meaningless.

They are learning that rules are made to be broken, which is the recurring theme of the TV shows your daughter binge-watches with her friends. In those same shows, parents are almost always ridiculous and stupid, and religious people are hypocritical and mean. When God is talked about, which is not often, he is portrayed in such a distorted manner that he is unrecognizable: A straw God.

Some parents, when they discover this, try to restrict their children's media consumption, but by then it is too late. And, while limiting exposure to social and other media is a wise thing to do for children, teens, or adults, it is not the answer. What parents need to do is offer their children an alternative to the culture of self-absorption.

Urging children to lose themselves in work or sports is not an alternative. It is the same addictive lifestyle with a different drug of choice. What children need to see is a radically different value system, where life itself is good and people are objects of love. This is certainly not what they see presented in the media.

Nowadays the media, including media targeted at teens, glorifies darkness. Darkness is considered more "grown up," more important, than light. The class of critics that lives in a symbiotic (or perhaps parasitic) relationship to the media are constantly extolling it. It is up to parents to help their children see the joy and beauty — and especially the meaningfulness — of light.

Parents must also demonstrate to their children that doubt is not automatically superior to belief. Contemporary culture regards doubters as more intelligent than believers, and this is particularly true in the academy. As Dallas Willard once quipped, "You can almost be as stupid as a cabbage as long as you doubt." Intellectuals of an earlier generation would have been astonished by such an idea. Doubt may be a shortcut to academic acceptance today, but it was not, and will not, always be so.

Immersed in a culture where dark is light and light is dark, doubt is wise and belief is foolish (or worse, unsophisticated), many young people — the numbers are alarming — are leaving the church and the faith. There are various reasons for this but an important one is that they do not see any connection between the faith their parents espouse and the good life, as they have had it portrayed by the culture around them. Unless they are presented with an attractive and workable alternative, the faith cannot help but seem to them irrelevant or even illusory.

The people best positioned to present that alternative are their parents, but parents need to see it demonstrated themselves. This is where the church comes in. One of the most important things it can offer, more important even than sermons and Sunday School lessons, is the example of the extraordinary man or woman who lives the compelling life of love through faith-filled interaction with God. They shine with a light that makes the self-absorbed life appear petty and drab. In their presence, the life described in the Bible is no longer an abstraction, but a three-dimensional, attractive, real-life possibility.
