CGH Trustee: 'Our neighbor stepped up and helped us'

Northwest Florida Community Hospital acquires Campbellton-Graceville Hospital

GRACEVILLE - All members of the Campbellton-Graceville Hospital Board of Trustees exhaled a solemn sigh of relief after voting unanimously to approve the sale of the hospital property.

The vote came during a public hearing held Monday night at Campbellton-Graceville Hospital, 5429 College Drive, in Graceville.

"We live in a small community, where you rely on your neighbors in tough times. And what we did, we reached out to our neighbor," said Trustee Chris Jernigan, who made the motion for the final approval of the resolution to sale the property to Chipley-based Northwest Florida Community Hospital. "Our neighbor stepped up and helped us out and will carry us on to the future."

The approval of the resolution served as the final hurdle for the district to return much needed medical services back to the community.

The hospital closed down a few years ago and filed for bankruptcy, which involved about $120 million in claims. Most of the claims were in relation to insurance companies that had asserted claims for alleged over-billing related to a lab processing scheme, according to the hospital's bankruptcy lawyer Brian Rich of Berger Singerman, a business law firm out of Tallahassee.

The scheme hit a number of rural hospitals across the country.

"We were at our wits end on what we were going to do, how were we going to continue some kind of health care," Jernigan said.

CHIPLEY - Washington County unemployment rate crept up slightly over last month, though down by year-over-year.

The unemployment rate in Washington County was 3.9 percent in June, which was .5 percentage point higher than the previous month and .4 percentage point lower than the county's rate a year ago.

Florida Department of Economic Opportunity releases seasonally adjusted unemployment data each month.

In June, Washington County saw the lowest unemployment rate out of the five-county CareerSource Chipola region, which includes Calhoun, Holmes, Jackson, Liberty and Washington.

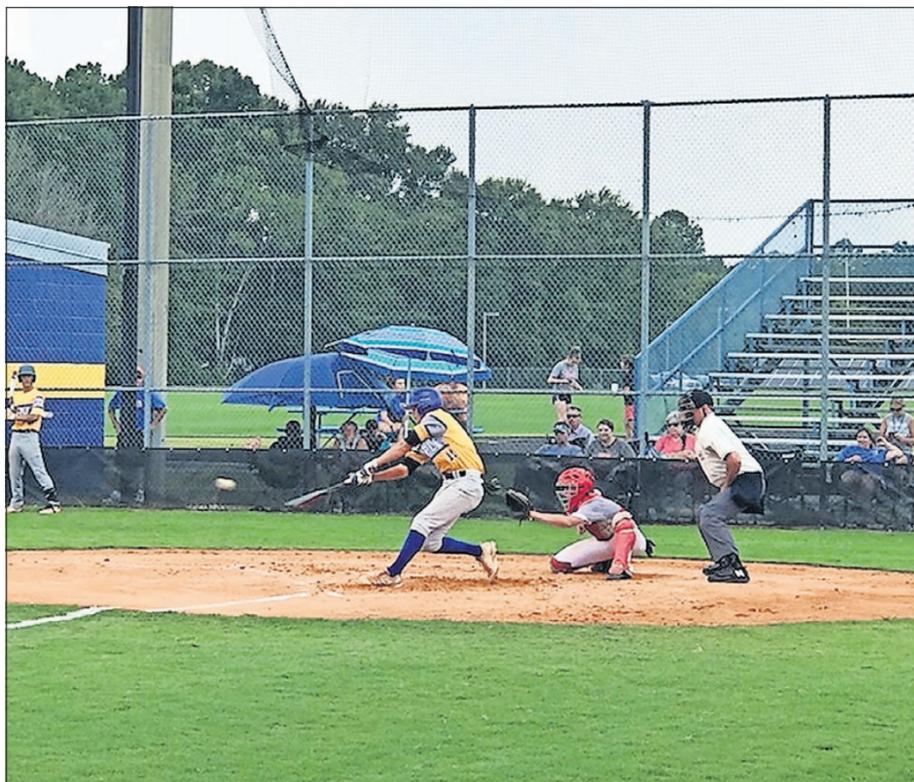

The county also had a lower unemployment rate than the region's rate of 4.4 percent.

The data showed an overall trend, including for the region, of slightly higher unemployment rates from May to June.

Liberty County had a June rate of 4.2 percent and the rest of the counties in the CareerSource Chipola region showed a rate of 4.5 percent.

The state's rate was 3.8 percent in June, which was constant with the May rate and down .3 percentage

CHIPLEY - Flashes from bolts of lightning that ripped the skies over the baseball fields at Chipley High School during Saturday's game signaled only one thing: baseball is baseball.

Although they got off field immediately, the five-day Dixie Pre-Majors World Series continued on throughout the weekend. The crowning game will be held today at 10 a.m. on the field. A second game, if necessary, will be held at 4 p.m.

"In Chipley, there's only one thing going on right now: it's the World Series. And we're here to play baseball," said Ronnie Jackson, Deputy Commissioner of the Majors Program and Chairman of Board of Dixie Boys Baseball. "You'll see some great baseball. Most of these are high school kids. It's very good talent."

School Board approves tentative millage and budget

By Diane M. Robinson

Drobinson@chipleypaper.com

CHIPLEY - At a meeting held Monday, Washington County School Board tentatively approved a millage rate of 6.4400, down from last year's rate of 6.663.

District Director of Finance Lucy Carmichael presented the millage rate to the board for approval.

"The millage rate is lower than the rolled-back rate," Carmichael said. "That rate is 6.6014."

That proposal includes a 4.1920 required local effort rate, a discretionary rate of 0.748, and a 1.5 mill property tax for capital outlay projects.

Superintendent Joe Taylor said the 1.5 mill property tax could be decreased during the final budget hearing. By law, rates can be lowered not raised after advertisement.

Carmichael also presented a proposed $83,403,304 budget, of which $36,640,390 would go into the general fund.

The board approved the proposed budget unanimously.

The final budget hearing will be held September 10 at 5:05 p.m.

Thomas Voting Reports

WASHINGTON D.C. — Here is how area congressmen — Rep. Neal Dunn, Rep. Matt Gaetz, Sen. Bill Nelson and Sen. Marco Rubio — voted on major issues during the week ending July 27.

HOUSE BAN ON 'JUNK INSURANCE' HEALTH PLANS: Voting 224 for and 184 against, the House on July 24 blocked a Democratic attempt to call up a bill (HR 6479) designed to gird the Affordable Care Act (ACA) against a new order by President Trump that would circumvent many of the law's core provisions. The bill would effectively prohibit a revival of health insurance plans that do not meet ACA requirements such as coverage of pre-existing conditions and "essential health benefits" including maternity and pediatric care. A yes vote was in opposition to bringing the bill to the floor.

Voting yes: Gaetz, Dunn

EXPANSION OF HEALTH SAVINGS ACCOUNTS: Voting 277 for and 142 against, the House on July 25 passed a bill (HR 6199) that would add payments for fitness-center fees and over-the-counter drugs to the list of medical expenses reimbursable from tax-advantaged Health Savings Accounts (HSAs).

A yes vote was to send the bill to the Senate.

Voting yes: Gaetz, Dunn

REPEAL OF MEDICAL-DEVICE TAX: Voting 283 for and 132 against, the House on July 24 passed a bill (HR 184) that would repeal a 2.3 percent excise tax levied by the Affordable Care Act on manufacturers

Dunn Gaetz

and importers of medical devices used by hospitals and doctors, from CT scanners to surgical tools. A yes vote was to send the bill to the Senate.

Voting yes: Gaetz, Dunn

BROADER ACCESS TO CATASTROPHIC PLANS: Voting 242 for and 176 against, the House on July 25 passed a bill (HR 6311) that would expand access to the Affordable Care Act's catastrophic, or "copper" health plans. A yes vote was to send the bill to the Senate.

Voting yes: Gaetz, Dunn

U.S. PUSHBACK ON ELECTION ATTACKS: Voting 226

for and 183 against, the House on July 26 blocked a Democratic attempt to call up for debate a bill (HR 6494) imposing economic sanctions on any country, individual or other entity found to have interfered with a U.S. federal election in 2015 or any later year. A yes vote was in opposition to allowing debate on the Democratic bill.

Voting yes: Gaetz, Dunn

$717 BILLION FOR MILITARY IN 2019: Voting 359 for and 54 against, the House on July 26 approved the conference report on a bill (HR 5515) that would authorize a $717 billion military budget for fiscal 2019, including $69 billion for war in Afghanistan, Iraq and other overseas theaters and $57 billion for active-duty and retiree health care. A yes vote was to adopt the conference report.

Voting yes: Gaetz, Dunn

MEDICARE SOLVENCY VS. GOP TAX CUTS: Voting 187 for and 229 against, the House on July 25 defeated Democratic attempt to delay a GOP-sponsored healthcare bill (HR 6311, above) until Congress scales back a 2017 package of corporate and individual tax cuts projected to increase annual deficits by at least $1 trillion over 10 years.

A yes vote was to adopt the motion

Voting yes: Gaetz

Not Voting: Dunn

SENATE ROBERT WILKIE,

SECRETARY OF VETERANS AFFAIRS: Voting 86 for and nine against, the Senate on July 23 confirmed Robert L. Wilkie, 55, to head the 360,000-employee Department of Veterans Affairs. A yes vote was to confirm Wilkie as the nation's 10th secretary of veterans affairs.

Voting yes: Nelson, Rubio

REFUSAL TO CUT 2019 SPENDING BILL: Voting 25-75, the Senate on July 25 defeated an amendment that sought to inflict an 11.4 percent across-the-board cut in a bill (HR 6147) still in debate that would appropriate $58.7 billion for the fiscal 2019 budgets of the Treasury and Interior departments and numerous agencies including the Environmental Protection Administration.

A yes vote was to adopt the amendment.

"We were losing $400,000 a month. We couldn't continue going - to keep the clinic open or anything."

"So, we made a meeting with Mr. Kozar and we talked about it for a couple of hours," he added. "His people responded with 'they need help, they need health care in that community, let's go and help them.'"

The process of acquiring the property has been a lengthy one - with the CGH Board more than two years ago brainstorming on ways to retain medical services, and NFCH diligently working for a little over a year with the CGH trustees, state legislators and legal and financial teams to acquire the property.

NFCH CEO Michael Kozar counted Monday's approval of the resolution for sale as "critical."

"There's some anxiety when your starting a new venture that we're undertaking here, but we feel very fortunate that we can be a part of the community here and to be able to grow the right services that are needed, not only for Graceville, but for the whole region and we're excited about taking on this new venture," Kozar said.

On Tuesday, the entities met at bankruptcy court to approve the transfer of deed and the hospital's state license to NFCH. The license, though having no real value, will enable NFCH to have medical beds for the detoxification program it is looking to establish at the soon-to-be repurposed facility. NFCH also plans to include a geriatric wing.

"We've been working on this for over a year now and we're finally seeing the light at the end of the tunnel, as far as being able to make this a reality," Kozar said. "And it's exciting."

In addition to the aforementioned programs, NFCH will lease - at a nominal rate, according to Kozar - one of the buildings to Jackson County for an emergency medical services (EMS) station. Currently, the county's EMS division operates out of a trailer, officials said.

The EMS station will open as soon as the sale is closed - which will be in about two weeks, according to the attorney - and the appropriate renovations are done to the building.

"We felt it was very important, if they needed the location, that we could accommodate them," Kozar said. "We've very excited about that because it helps us and the citizens of Graceville to continue to expand services in the future. Having an EMS station here that will be able to respond to that need."

Kozar also added that the EMS station would work well with the existing program proposals, allowing patients who need more intense medical attention to be transported to NFCH in Chipley. Also, the station would be in close proximity to local schools, athletic events, the college campus, sawmill, nursing home and clinic.

"I feel good - we hate it had to happen - but I feel good that there still will be some medical stuff going on in the hospital and I thank the Chipley hospital for coming and helping us forward," said Trustee Patrick Pelham.

The fair market value of the property is $485,765.75, according to the resolution. The approval eliminated ad valorem for taxpayers in the district.

"Our objective was to get this off the tax roll and get his into the hands of someone who provides health care for a living - and that's what we've done," Jernigan said.

The tournament brought in 11 teams, with Chipley Dixie Majors, Inc. in partnership with Washington County Tourist Development Council as the host. The teams - ages 13 to 19 - cover the 11 southern states. The program furnishes five World Series tournaments from July to August.

Chipley Dixie Majors, Inc. President Andy Compton has coached with Dixie for several years - including for the Dixie National Team which is affiliated to USA Baseball, a derivative of Major League Baseball.

Jackson said speaking with Compton has encouraged the tournament to continue to come to Chipley.

"Just talking to Coach Compton, you have an overflow of support coming from the community," Jackson said. "It's great for the area to bring all of these people. And, plus, it's great people. Chipley is a small town, but a great town. That's why we come here."

The tournament has made an economic impact. When Chipley hosted it in 2014, it brought in about $360,000 and about $21,500 in state sales tax, according to TDC officials. This year, hotel rooms were scarce or sold-out during the time of the tournament.

"We really like to come to smaller communities because we're here to play baseball - it seems that the smaller communities really buy into that, instead of going to the big communities where there's too much stuff to do," Jackson added.

The organization is all-volunteer. Jackson, who has been with Dixie for more than three decades, contrasted the nonprofit Dixie to travel-bought programs in which kids can play to pay.

"Most tournaments you have, you can buy your way in," he said. "Our World Series, you have to play at the district level, state level and then you can come to the world series. It's a progressive thing where you have to win to get in."

Popular MLB names such as Tom "Flash" Gordon, Mike Hampton and Jeff "Frenchy" Francoeur came out of the Dixie teams.

"Baseball is baseball," Jackson said. "We've been trying to expand, it's hard to expand with all the other organizations. Travel-ball has affected us."

However, "Our thing is we try to teach them to not only be better baseball players, but also to be better citizens," he added. "That's what our purpose is."

Early voting sites belong on campus

A federal judge's injunction temporarily lifting Florida's misguided ban on early voting on college campuses is welcome.

The ruling by Chief Judge Mark E. Walker, of Florida's northern district, dismantles discriminatory and legally indefensible efforts by the state to prohibit county elections supervisors from conducting early voting at public colleges and universities.

The decision underscores how far Florida Secretary of State Kenneth Detzner, appointed by Gov. Rick Scott, went to deter students from exercising their constitutional rights to vote without undue burdens.

The order is also a reminder of the Republican-led Legislature's inexcusable refusal to pass a law overruling Detzner's opinion — despite its overreach.

The immediate, practical effect of the order, which granted the plaintiffs' motion for a preliminary injunction, requires Detzner, who oversees the Division of Elections, to issue a directive rescinding a January 2014 opinion that local election supervisors were expected to follow.

Detzner issued the opinion in response to questions from the Gainesville City Commission, which had been asked to help arrange an early voting site on the University of Florida campus. His opinion referred to a 2013 law passed by the Legislature after complaints about long lines and excessive waiting periods to vote in 2012.

The Early Voting Statute permitted county elections supervisors to designate — in addition to their main or branch offices — “any City Hall, permanent public library facility, fairground, civic center, courthouse, county commission building, stadium, convention center, government-owned senior center or government-owned community center as early voting sites.”

A plain reading of the statute strongly suggests a student union on the campus of a public university would qualify as a government-owned community center. But Detzner didn't reach that reasonable conclusion.

What's more, he ignored that the university campus has multiple stadiums and determined that the law excluded not only the union but “any other college- or university-related facilities” as early voting sites.

As Judge Walker wrote, the statute contains no such exclusions. None.

In the order, the judge emphasized several key points: the size and density of the UF campus warrant an early voting site, based on criteria used to assess whether all voters' access to polling places is adequate and constitutional; college students engage in early voting at higher rates than the general population; mail-in ballots used by students are rejected at higher rates than those submitted by voters in other age groups.

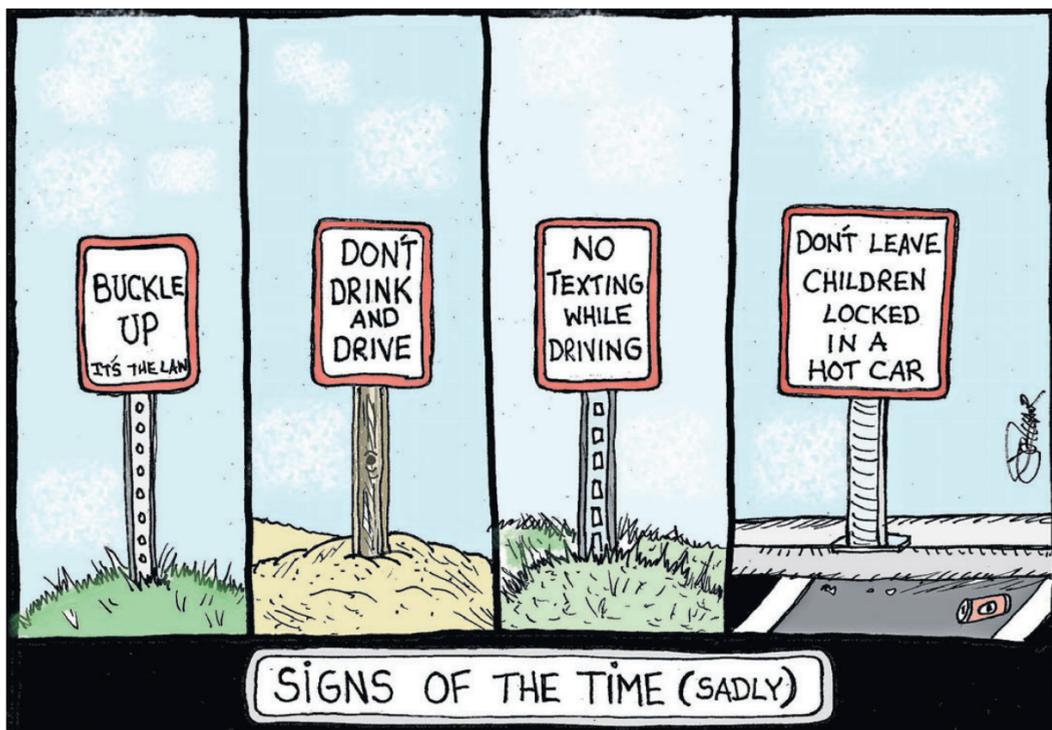

Walker found that Detzner's prohibition “disparately imposes significant burdens on plaintiffs' rights weighted against insufficiently weighty government interests.”

The injunction enables elections supervisors to consider campuses for early voting. It remains in effect until the case ultimately is decided.

Whatever the case, in its next session the Legislature should make clear in the law that campuses are appropriate venues for early voting.

A version of this editorial first appeared in the Gainesville Sun, a sister paper with GateHouse Media.

ANOTHER VIEW

A Man of God sins against my father

Michael Reagan

If a liberal like Jesse Jackson went on CNN and accused my father of being a “known womanizer” like President Trump, conservatives across America would go off the rails.

They'd defend the reputation of Ronald Reagan to the max and blast Jackson for his false and evil equivalency.

They'd point out that it is totally outrageous to compare the personal lives of President Trump and my father.

Yet look what happened last week when a prominent conservative evangelical pastor from Dallas went on Fox News and called my father a “known womanizer.”

The Rev. Robert Jeffress, who's a Fox contributor, was asked by Ed Henry to respond to another minister who had accused Republican lawmakers of selling their good Christian souls by supporting a serial bed-hopper like Trump.

“You know,” Jeffress responded, “this is not an unusual thing - we've been here before.

Back in 1980, evangelicals chose to support a twice-married Hollywood actor who was a known womanizer in Hollywood. His name was Ronald Reagan. ...

“The reason we supported President Reagan was not because we were supporting womanizing or divorce. We supported his policies.”

When I heard Jeffress say that I blew my top and started angrily tweeting.

The first tweet I fired off to the Southern Baptist minister was pretty blunt - “All I can say is go F yourself.”

My second tweet was “Dr. Jeffress. How dare you compare my father to Trump.”

Apparently, I was the only conservative Reagan Republican in North America who actually cared that Pastor Jeffress was casually throwing my father under the bus to support his beloved sinner-in-chief.

All I heard from my fellow conservatives in the tweetersphere was crickets - and a week later I still do.

What that holy man from Dallas said was absolutely outrageous.

He equated my father - who was divorced from my mother Jane Wyman when he was dating in Hollywood and not yet married to Nancy - to Donald Trump, who was dating Playboy playmates and who knows who else when he was married.

What was more outrageous, however, was that no conservative Republicans or Fox commentators rose up in defense of my father and his reputation.

As I also pointed out in a tweet last week, all those conservative talk show hosts and politicians who keep saying how much they love Ronald Reagan are either lying or have lost their spines and a pair of other things.

I don't believe those so-called “Reagan conservatives” anymore.

If they wouldn't stand up and defend my father against a vile and uninformed statement from someone like Jeffress', there's no reason to assume they love my father at all.

I don't care what the president of the United States does in his personal life. I care what he does as president of the United States.

If you want to defend Trump, fine.

But for God's sake, why would you use my father to make excuses for a president who has cheated on every woman he's been married to?

To rephrase that famous old line, Rev. Jeffress, “I knew Ronald Reagan. Ronald Reagan was a friend of mine. And Donald Trump ain't no Ronald Reagan - a vice versa.”

Lots of Tips on How to Live Sanely in Trumplandia

Dick Polman

The pollsters at Pew recently reported that 68 percent of Americans are suffering from news exhaustion, and that jibes with what I witness on an anecdotal basis. I don't presume to everyone, but many of you probably agree that conversations with friends these days are sometimes strained. The dialogue often goes something like this:

“We've gotta talk about Trump and everything that's going on.”

“I'm so sick of it. Must we?”

“How can we not?”

“Can't we talk about something else?”

Sure we can. But we're also well aware (or we certainly should be) that democracy at home and the western peacekeeping alliance abroad are under unprecedented attack by destructive forces in Washington and Moscow. With each passing week, the challenge facing each of us becomes more urgent: What's the best way to remain vigilant and still lead a sane life? What's the best way to balance obligations to self, friends, and family with the obligations of citizenship? Is it possible to monitor the avalanche of news without going nuts? How can we best calibrate these factors in year two of Trumplandia?

I brought this up on Facebook recently, and not surprisingly, nearly 100 friends shared their angst and exhaustion.

One popular piece of advice, as articulated by Steve Rosenthal: “No cable news. Repeat, no cable news ever.” Peter Landry says: “I never watch ShoutTV on cable.” Karen Rile says: “Something about large talking heads in the house is particularly stressful.” Glenn Burkins says: “In our house, my wife keeps CNN on constantly, but I have limited my time with (cable) to the time it takes me to walk across our family room.”

Some of my respondents gave shout-outs to Rachel Maddow, Brian Williams, and Nicolle Wallace (I do like Wallace, a career Republican who has a great Republican sources), but there seems to be a general belief (which I endorse) that cable commentary is shrill, speculative, repetitive, and therefore easily culled.

As for me, I'm not the best person to advise anyone on the proper calibration. My latest idea of escapist reading was Daniel Silva's excellent new spy novel, “The Other Woman” - which turned out to be a parallel-universe tale of Russia's penetration of America. In the author's note, he writes: “Russia under Vladimir Putin is both revanchist and paranoid, a dangerous combination... When Putin sows political chaos in Western Europe and seeks to disrupt and discredit an American election, he is reaching deep in the KGB's playbook.”

I suppose I can escape, albeit temporarily, by hanging with the grandchildren - another popular tip. But my oldest one, who is five, recently informed me with great solemnity: “There are bad guys in the world. You know that, right?” I managed a reassuring smile. But I said to myself: “Yeah. I think I read something about that.”

Perhaps cockeyed optimism is the best escape of all. As Phaedra Trehan says that “while we all know our history is rife with racism, injustice, corruption and genocide, I still believe that arc bends toward justice. Maybe because if I didn't believe that, I'd have drawn a nice warm bath, gotten in the tub, and opened my wrists by now.”

Parkland students visit PCB on Road to Change Tour

By Eryn Dion

edion@pcnh.com

PANAMA CITY BEACH — The Road to Change Tour, part of the March for Our Lives movement that sprung out of the Feb. 14 Parkland school shooting, made a stop in Panama City Beach Sunday, holding a panel at Arnold High School, a voter registration event at Pier Park, and a more intimate forum at Mosey's Downtown in Panama City.

Survivors of the Marjory Stoneman Douglas school shooting, along with alumni from the school and politically active students from other districts shared their experiences and the hope that their actions will motivate others in their age group to register to vote and exercise their political power. Many stated they hadn't been politically active or politically minded before the shooting, but were called to action, both as a way to cope with the loss and to also enact the kind of change that would prevent future shootings.

"We want to make sure this doesn't happen to other families, they don't lose loved ones in an issue that is completely preventable," said Robert Schentrup, who graduated from Marjory Stoneman Douglas in 2017 and whose 16-year-old sister was one of the 17 killed in the Feb. 14 shooting.

While focusing largely on youth activism, the panel, hosted by the League of Women Voters, did get into gun control, with the students dispelling the belief that they're anti-Second Amendment and how, with an issue as emotionally charged as gun violence and gun control, the biggest enemy in that conversation is "narrow mindedness." The group's position, framed as gun violence prevention, centers around three points — mandatory reporting for gun thefts, preventing those convicted of domestic violence from owning a gun and universal background checks for those purchasing guns.

"If you're amicable of Tyra Simons speaks during the March for Our Lives Road to Change town hall meeting at Arnold High School on Sunday. what we're talking about, you go through the policy points, they tend to agree with you, because every single person, no matter their party affiliation, they want to be safe," said Kayla Dixon, a student from Pinellas County who is traveling with the Road to Change tour. "They want to protect their families and have a good well-being and our push is to do it responsibly and put buffers in order to make that happen."

For many Bay County residents, like John Parker and Darian Furtaw, the Second Amendment, and any perceived threats against it, is deeply personal. Before the town hall, Parker sat in his pickup truck in the Arnold High School parking lot, a flag with a large AR-15 and the words "Come and take it" flying in the wind, fixed to the bed of his truck. Before heading into the event, Parker rolled up the flag and put it in his truck, but not before changing into an army green shirt with the same AR-15 and same motto, and grabbing his GoPro to record the event. Left behind in his truck was a sign, "Criminals for gun-free zones."

"I wanted to come here and tell them they should advocate for the end of gun-free zones," Parker said. "Where they're having this, it's a gun-free zone. The next event is in a bar, another gun-free zone. Nobody is going to protect you in those zones."

Furtaw said they were going into the event with an open mind, and also hoping for the opportunity to educate people on responsible gun ownership. Concealed carry, he argued, helps make sure the elderly and the disabled, who otherwise wouldn't be able to defend themselves, were taken care of. He was, he said, adamantly against any form of gun control, saying irresponsible gun ownership is "a myth."

"There should be no control of a firearm," he said. "I'm tired of going on the defensive about the Second Amendment. I kind of want to go on the offensive."

Despite party affiliations or where they land on the political spectrum, the students spent much of the panel encouraging respectful conversations between students and other students, adults and students and sides that don't agree. They also pushed people, particularly those under the age of 25, to be more politically active, to hold their legislators accountable and to go out into their community and organize. After the panel, the Parkland students met with Arnold students in a small group setting, talking to them about how they feel about school safety and sharing methods and strategies to organize.

"No matter what the issue, people care about other people," said Marjory Stoneman Douglas sophomore Ryan Servites.

The Road to Change Tour continues Monday in Pensacola at the University of West Florida.

GOP primary for governor down to Florida guy vs. Fox guy

By Brendan Farrington
The Associated Press

CHIPLEY — Down a network of dirt roads that defies GPS navigation, Florida Republican gubernatorial candidate Adam Putnam and about 100 supporters gathered at a hunting plantation tucked into the Panhandle's pine trees.

There were no television cameras, no throngs of media — just barbecue and sweet tea for the crowd that clearly hadn't migrated from colder climes. Agriculture Commissioner Putnam introduced himself as a fifth generation Floridian, part of the personal outreach central to his campaign.

"We have a lot of native Floridians here, people who love our state, whose families who have bled and sweat and worked their fingers to the bone to carve out of this beautiful peninsula — the civilization that we call modern Florida," Putnam said. "It sets out a marker that says because of all that my family went through to make Florida Florida, I'm committed to doing the right things for the right reasons."

That same day, primary opponent U.S. Rep. Ron DeSantis appeared on Fox News from Israel, where he defended President Donald Trump amid an FBI investigation of Russian meddling in the 2016 election.

"We're actively trying to get the underlying documents that would tell us, did they (the FBI) spy on the Trump campaign or not?" DeSantis said.

The free airtime is worth millions — putting him in front of large numbers of conservative voters who will decide the Republican nominee to replace Gov. Rick Scott — and, coupled with Trump's endorsement, forms the basis of his campaign.

In a state with more than 4.5 million Republican voters, the candidates facing off in the Aug. 28 primary are a study in contrasting campaign styles. Putnam has been to more than 100 breakfasts, barbecues and parades, talking with Floridians about Florida issues. DeSantis has been on Fox News more than 100 times, usually talking about federal issues and defending the president.

The race will test which strategy works best in these times when White House tweets make international headlines and political divides are as wide as they ever have been: Shaking a lot of hands or shaking things up on TV.

"It's an interesting test," said Rick Wilson, a Tallahassee-based Republican strategist. "Putnam has name ID, he's got experience, he's got money. It's sort of the like the Florida guy versus the Fox guy, and we're going to see if that's sufficient anymore."

During the candidates' first debate, which was broadcast on Fox News, Fox anchor Martha MacCallum asked DeSantis about the criticism that he's campaigning from a Washington TV studio.

DeSantis replied that there have been plenty of times he couldn't be in Florida when he wanted to, like when he spent Christmas 2006 on a Navy assignment in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and the following Christmas in Iraq.

"I would have loved to have been in Florida with my family, but sometimes duty calls and sometimes you've got to step up and do what's right," DeSantis said.

He said that duty now includes supporting Trump's agenda and uncovering the anti-Trump bias at the FBI and the U.S. Department of Justice.

"That's what I'm paid to do, so I'm going to do my job," he said.

Even while campaigning in Florida, Fox and Trump are a theme. DeSantis did a statewide tour with Fox's Sean Hannity, held a rally with Donald Trump Jr. and plans to stand on stage with the president on Tuesday in Tampa.

At Putnam's event in Chipley, Nick Dillard acknowledged that many supporters there were surprised he would bother to come to a town of less than 4,000 people when there were places he could reach a larger audience and raise more money.

"I think it makes him more reachable," Dillard said. "They get it if he wants to go to Pensacola or Panama City, but to come to Chipley — we're a small town. ... Why's he coming here? I think it speaks to his philosophy — the grassroots movement."

Undecided Republican voter Ellen Petrokiewizz, who lives in the Orlando area, said she likes that Trump continues to rally supporters and back state candidates.

"He's going back and saying, 'Hey, get behind your local politician. Support this guy. Support that guy,'" she said. "DeSantis has already been in the Washington element, so he has been working back and forth there, so it's a different style. I do like the true grassroots of going to the average person, and that's what Putnam has been doing. So, there's positives in both approaches."

Spanish Trail Playhouse presents 'Charlotte's Web'

Special to The News

CHIPLEY — A children's classic is set to take stage next month.

The Spanish Trail Playhouse, 680 Second Street, will hold performances of Charlotte's Web at 7 p.m. Friday, August 3 and Saturday, August 4, and at 2 p.m. Sunday, August 5.

Written by E.B. White and directed by Kevin Russell, this classic story of loyalty, trust and sacrifice will come to life in this live-action adaptation.

Fern is one of the only two living beings who sees that Wilbur is a special animal as she raises him, the runt of the litter, into a terrific and radiant pig. As Wilbur moves into a new barn, he begins a second profound friendship with the most unlikely of creatures — a spider named Charlotte. Their bond inspires the animals around them to become a family.

When the news that Wilbur's days are numbered, it seems that only a miracle will save his life. A determined Charlotte, who sees miracles in the ordinary, spins words into her web in an effort to convince the farmer that Wilbur is "some pig" and worth saving. This play is presented by special arrangement with The Dramatic Publishing Company of Woodstock, Illinois.

Tickets are limited. Purchase online at www.spanishtrailplayhouse.com, and the Spanish Trail Playhouse office by calling 850-638-9113. The ticket office is open Monday through Thursday from 8 a.m. to noon.

For more information, email spanishtrailplayhouse@gmail.com.

Emerald Coast Hospice launches food drive

Special to The News

CHIPLEY — Team members from Emerald Coast Hospice will canvass the Chipley area throughout August, distributing food collection bags and gathering donations for Shepherd's Gate Church, one of many benefactors of Kindred's 14th annual food drive.

Emerald Coast Hospice is collecting food for Shepherd's Gate Church to help support that organization's work on behalf of individuals and families in the community unable to afford or access an adequate amount of food.

"Our caregivers often tap into community resources to best serve our patients and their families, so they know firsthand the demand for assistance placed upon food banks, pantries and other charitable organizations," said Sunshine Speers,

Emerald Coast Hospice's Clinical Hospice Specialist. "Making sure that the most basic component of good health, food, is available for those in need is the right thing to do for a health-care company like Kindred at Home and for the community as a whole."

Emerald Coast Hospice Chipley Branch provides a full range of hospice services to patients in Washington and Holmes counties, as well as, in the Graceville area. The Chipley office is an affiliate of Kindred at Home, the nation's largest provider of comprehensive home health and hospice services.

Kindred Hospice and Kindred at Home employees across the country are placing the food collection bags at healthcare and other facilities in their respective communities and will collect their "harvest" during the entire month of August.

They are focused on beating the tally from last year, when the company's annual food drive yielded more than 300,000 meals for donation to food banks and charitable organizations across the country.

To learn more about Emerald Coast Hospice in Chipley, call 850-638-8787 or visit the Kindred Hospice website at www.kindredhealthcare.com/our-services/hospice.

REAL ESTATE

DEAR MONTY

Flip or hold real estate?

Richard Montgomery

Reader Question: I am interested in starting a career as a real estate investor. Both remodeling to flip or hold homes for the long-term interest me. I do not have any construction experience, nor have I any actual real estate experience. I am quick to pick up on training, and I'm people orientated so I feel I can handle renting apartments or houses, and learn what it takes to be a flipper. How would you compare flipping houses to being a landlord?

Monty's Answer: Both methods can be solid roads to wealth building, and both share similar strategies in the acquisition phase. A keen understanding of the market dynamics in the location you choose to invest, knowing how to evaluate a property and selecting the improvements to add value are the keys to minimizing risk. Investors that understand these principal factors will build their nest egg faster and more efficiently than investors who jump in without considering the big picture. Here is a link potential investors may find helpful: <https://dearmonty.com/before-becoming-a-real-estate-investor/>

Pros of flipping
Flipping provides quick returns in the world of real estate. From the purchase to the sale of a home may be within six months. The yield on invested capital is not tracked independently for flippers; anecdotally, 15-25 percent gains are not unusual for skilled practitioners. As a cautionary note, flipping and remodeling may not be as easy as television shows make it appear. The absence of property management is appealing to many flippers. Minor maintenance done while workers complete the necessary fixes and keeping the lawn mowed are the main tasks. Flippers see the lack of duties commonly found in non-owner occupied housing as an advantage. No rental showings, vetting tenants, collecting rent, and other activities present in rental property is attractive.

Cons of flipping

The short holding period means income is taxed as ordinary income rather than the capital gain tax. The dilemma for a flipper owning a property long enough to qualify for capital gain treatment may mean no gain to tax. There is higher risk in flipping; hidden or unknown defects only discoverable when a wall is torn out, cost overruns, scheduling delays, extended holding time, value misjudgments, and more make this a not-for-the-faint-of-heart business. However, despite the risks, the potential for high returns brings competition that affects margins, which margins are necessary to reduce the risks mentioned above. The population of sellers that will sell at a price the flipper can tolerate is small, so there is effort invested in discovery and presentation as most sellers will shop flippers, as they shop for real estate agents. Finally, there is no depreciation allowance to shelter gain on sale.

Pros of buying to hold

One builds a portfolio of property. This method translates to an annual income stream over time that generates cash flow. Renting is lower risk than flipping because there are likely more renters in the market than buyers. The population of qualified sellers is higher because buying to hold the property allows more flexibility on the purchase price. Unlike the flipper, when they make a mistake, they have time to recover through rental income and appreciation. Finally, when it comes time to sell, they have had depreciation to recapture part of their improvement cost and qualify for capital gain treatment.

Cons of buying to hold

Property management is necessary for holding property. An investor has to maintain, rent, and service property. Property management services add cost against the income, or if you self-manage, it becomes a second job. There is a learning curve in buying to hold. Property management, landlord-tenant laws, tenant selection, qualifying tenants, best practices in maintenance and repair, and more. If a landlord does not do well in this area, the degree of success diminishes. Investors here must be patient as the returns are slow to materialize, but comes two ways. While there is rental income, the total return is unknown until the property sells years later. Buying to hold is more complicated. Houses and components wear out, vacancies, evictions, and more. Here is a link to an article about what it takes to be a good landlord: <https://dearmonty.com/avoid-tenant-complaints/>

Many flippers are also landlords; some not by choice. The lack of a timely sale caused them to become landlords to recover over time. Either choice, or even both combined is a satisfying endeavor. You are in business for yourself, and you are improving neighborhoods.

DEAR MONTY

Why a partnership agreement is needed with inherited property

Reader Question:

My wife and her three siblings inherited the family home when their mother died. My wife was 20 years old at that time, the eldest, and invested 10K in keeping the house. It is now 39 years later, and the siblings want their share. My wife is the only one who has remained living there and has paid over $700K in upkeep, mortgage, property taxes, etc. She also refinanced the home many years ago because each sibling wanted cash for personal reasons. My wife has paid all the interest and principal on these refinances. Another 250k was refinanced to care for their father. Again, my wife is the only one who paid anything. How does one divide the shares in this situation?

Monty's Answer:

Assuming your wife has been keeping good records on the costs and the refinances, here are some suggestions to consider going forward. Assuming the relationship between the siblings is positive, the goal might be to ensure they are still talking to each other after they reach a settlement. If each sibling's percentage interest is in the title, there is still a long history here with conversations that were likely oral, and today, remembered differently. Whenever money is involved transparency and experienced counsel is often useful in keeping relationships intact.

Call a family meeting

It would be beneficial if the siblings could agree up-front on a plan to sort out and decide on how to proceed to avoid any misunderstandings. Create an agenda and appoint someone to take notes in the meeting. After the meeting send a memo of the discussion that includes the plan agreed upon to each sibling.

There is no mention of a partnership agreement established when the siblings inherited the house. It will be helpful if one exists. Was probate involved in transferring the title? The more detail on costs and timing you can furnish the less time a consultant will have to spend reconstructing a forty year history. The more uncontested data you can produce, the more unlikely you will encounter impediments.

Your wife's training is unclear, but making the calculations on her own, she may overlook certain components. Has your wife been deducting mortgage interest on your income tax returns? An accountant will also be able to guide you with tax advice.

Seek outside counsel

Seeking competent advice that is outside the family can prevent future misunderstandings that change the family dynamics. Were the siblings named on the mortgage? Consider retaining a certified public accountant (CPA) to recommend the best way to approach the expenses, the payouts, and the refinances from the date the siblings received the title. It may be helpful to engage a CPA that is also an attorney. The CPA will know how to account for the periods of time all the siblings, including yourselves, lived in the home. With the amounts and the dates of distributions and shared expenses, or other items, the consultant may utilize time-value-of-money calculations. The accountant may have alternate ideas on the best methods for making these calculations.

Because the CPA is a knowledgeable outsider acting as a consultant, engage her or she to represent all of the siblings. Guidance on the calculations from an experienced accountant with no financial interest in the outcome will be very helpful in avoiding suspicion about the fairness of the results. Your wife sought outside advice because she is a fair person.

Consider exiting ownership together

It is not clear if you plan on continuing to live in the home. If you and your wife continue to live in the house, the siblings will need to establish a value for the CPA to use in making calculations. Should all the siblings contribute to deciding on the amount? If two appraisals are obtained and averaged (they will be different values) to set value, what happens if the estimates are far apart? Do you then get a third appraisal and average to two closest? Do you choose the two highest; the two lowest; the average all three? Determining the approach can be influenced by the motives and beliefs of each sibling. Also, if you stay in the home, should future selling expenses be considered in calculating the current buy-out price?

By selling the home in a simultaneous exit the transaction may be less complicated because the market itself sets the value of the house as opposed to paying for and relying on appraisals.

NASCAR THIS WEEK

The Daytona Beach News-Journal's Godwin Kelly & Ken Willis have covered NASCAR for nearly 60 years combined. godwin.kelly@news-jrnl.com ken.willis@news-jrnl.com

SPEED FREAKS

A few questions we had to ask ourselves

A runner-up for Daniel Suarez. Is he now on the "watchlist" for victory?

GODSPEAK: Yes, he is gaining momentum at a really, really good time. But I think Chase Elliott beats him to the checkered flag.

KEN'S CALL: Obviously, there's only one place better, but I still think Aric Almirola wins under green before Suarez breaks the seal.

Better career: Kyle Busch or Tony Stewart?

GODSPEAK: Call it a tie. Busch is closing in on 200 overall national series wins, which is impressive. Another Cup title puts him over the top.

KEN'S CALL: Good question. They're tied in Cup wins (49), and Kyle is light-years ahead in overall NASCAR wins, but Tony has those three Cup titles, compared with Kyle's one. Until further notice, Tony.

FEUD OF THE WEEK

MATT DIBENEDETTO VS. ARIC ALMIROLA:

The two drivers were fighting for position on the last lap when Almirola's No. 10 Ford and DiBenedetto's No. 32 Ford tangled. Almirola spun. Matty D. was 27th.

GODWIN KELLY'S TAKE: NBCSN caught DiBenedetto walking aggressively up to Almirola on pit road, issuing a complaint and walking away. They run races in different ZIP codes, so this won't escalate.

GODWIN'S PICKS FOR WATKINS GLEN

WINNER: Martin Truex Jr.

REST OF TOP 5: Kyle Busch, Kyle Larson, Joey Logano, Clint Bowyer

FIRST ONE OUT: Matt DiBenedetto

DARK HORSE: AJ Allmendinger
DON'T BE SURPRISED IF: The "Big 3" surge continues as Truex, with "only" four wins, plays catch-up to Busch and Harvick.

MOTOR MOUTHS PODCAST

WATKINS GLEN THREE THINGS TO WATCH

Kyle Busch celebrates his sixth win of the season with a burnout at Pocono. [AP/DERIK HAMILTON]

1. NASCAR 'Tres Grandes'

Yes, we are growing weary of the term "Big 3," which describes the trio of drivers (Kyle Busch, Kevin Harvick, Martin Truex Jr.) hogging NASCAR Cup Series wins. When asked about tying Tony Stewart on the all-time wins list with 49 victories, Busch said he wants to keep climbing and added this: "What's crazy is how this year keeps going. It's like Harvick gets one, we get one, Truex gets one and we're all back and forth." We get it.

2. Bodine's strategy

Driver Geoff Bodine and crew chief Paul Andrews devised a winning Watkins Glen strategy in 1996, which many teams use as a guideline for the 2.45-mile road course. Bodine simply divided the 90-lap race into two pit stops at predetermined times and beat the likes of Terry Labonte, Mark Martin and Jeff Gordon that day. And just for the record, it was Bodine's last career win in the Cup Series. He ended with 18 total wins.

3. One eye on AJ

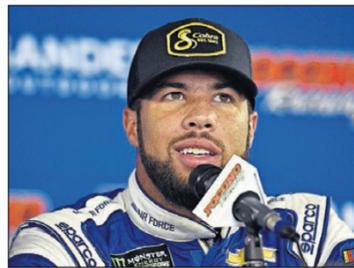

With a lack of road-racing ringers participating in one-off races these days, the victories usually get pocketed by NASCAR elite. Not so fast, my friend. AJ Allmendinger's name has become synonymous with The Glen. The 36-year-old driver pulled off the upset win in 2014, and when Cup Racing heads to upstate New York, AJ's name gets tossed in the hat. In nine starts, he has that win and five other top-10 finishes.

— Godwin Kelly, godwin.kelly@news-jrnl.com

POCONO THREE THINGS WE LEARNED

1. Hold your breath

Bubba Wallace provided the hold-your-breath moment at Pocono when he crashed hard into Turn 1, destroying his No. 43 Chevy. "Hardest one of my career," the rookie said. "There is no feeling like being helpless in that situation going off into Turn 1, and it scared the hell out of me."

Bubba Wallace said he was OK after his violent crash at Pocono. [AP/DERIK HAMILTON]

2. Showing improvement

Hendrick Motorsports is showing signs of improvement. It had three drivers score top-10 finishes, with Alex Bowman leading the charge, producing his career-best third-place effort. William Byron had his best finish, too, a sixth. Jimmie Johnson? He wound up 17th.

new words. Driver Sterling Marlin came up with "frustrated," while Larry McReynolds, who was making a point on TV, invented "interate." While talking about Bubba Wallace's crash, Dale Earnhardt Jr. used the word "frighteningness."

3. Changing lexicon

NASCAR folk are famous for inventing

— Godwin Kelly, godwin.kelly@news-jrnl.com

QUESTIONS & ATTITUDE

Compelling questions ... and maybe a few actual answers

When do we start paying attention to Christopher Bell?

Good question. The 23-year-old Oklahoma native has won the past three Xfinity Series races in Joe Gibbs' No. 20 Toyota. He has four overall wins this year after a five-win 2017 in the Truck Series. Several years ago, when sponsors grew on trees and lower-level victories often meant an eventual promotion, there would be plenty of speculation as to how Bell would be worked into Gibbs' Cup plans for next year.

Any chance of that?

Not sure, but did you notice the strong second-place showing by Daniel Suarez at Pocono? His No. 19 team has been Gibbs' least-productive car since Carl Edwards' retirement, and on the immediate heels of Bell's third straight win, Suarez produced his career-best finish. Strictly a coincidence? Maybe, but maybe not. Sometimes it's as if a racer-in-need can will a few more horses into the engine.

IN BRIEF

PHILADELPHIA NFL concussion claims hit $500M in less than 2 years

More than $500 million in claims were approved as of Monday under the NFL's concussion settlement, nearly a decade earlier than league officials estimated they would reach that amount.

Claims administrators in the settlement released an updated report on the concussion settlement information website saying about $502 million had been approved in less than two years of the settlement. The original actuarial estimates from the NFL estimated a little more than $400 million would be paid out in the first decade.

Attorneys for the retired players adjusted their estimates on the total payout of expected claims earlier this month, saying the settlement would likely reach $1.4 billion—almost a half billion more than the NFL originally estimated.

Almost 2,000 claims have been filed in less than two years, according to the update filed Monday. Hundreds more of the nearly 20,500 retired players signed up to be prequalified to file claims than were expected, outpacing all previous projections.

NEW YORK Pitino promises to tell all in upcoming memoir

Rick Pitino is ready to tell his story.

The former Louisville coach has a memoir coming in September that will "lay all his cards on the table," Diversion Books announced Monday. "Pitino: My Story," co-written by Seth Kaufman, is coming out Sept. 4. The book will cover everything from his time coaching the New York Knicks and Boston Celtics to his triumphant and troubled career in the NCAA.

Pitino was ousted from Louisville in 2017 amid a multiyear, multi-school investigation into the alleged payment of hundreds of thousands of dollars in bribes and kickbacks designed to influence recruits. The NCAA vacated the Cardinals' 2013 national championship. Pitino, who has denied any wrongdoing, will take on "opportunistic agents" and "predatory apparel companies" among others, according to his publisher.

'This is the only thing we have to show our respect'

At Stoneman Douglas, football season comes with heavy hearts

By Tim Reynolds
The Associated Press

PARKLAND, Fla. — The first practice of the new season was over, and the only sound on the campus of Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School was dozens of football players screaming in delight.

It was 2:15 a.m., and they were having a water balloon fight.

At last, on a campus shaken by tragedy, there was joy.

The Eagles — now ambassadors for a school and community still reeling from the Feb. 14 massacre that left 17 people dead, including assistant football coach Aaron Feis, who was killed while trying to use his body to shield students from the cascade of bullets — took the field for practice at 12:01 a.m. Monday.

Under Florida rules, teams could begin fall workouts July 30. The Eagles didn't wait a minute longer.

"This is the only thing we have to show our respect," coach Willis May Jr. said. "This is the way we can show our respect to those guys, with our great effort and with our great attitudes. Be leaders within the school. I hope we see all that from these kids this year."

Douglas has had the "midnight madness" practice on opening day several times before, but this was different. A uniformed sheriff's deputy was on campus throughout the evening, his patrol vehicle parked adjacent to the field during practice. The site of the shootings — the 1200 building — still stands, cordoned off by a chain-link fence. Many want it leveled, but for now it stands because it's essentially evidence, a crime scene.

Players, as they walked out of the locker room in rows of two shortly before midnight, had to stroll past the 1200 building on their way to the field for practice. Barely anyone seemed to look its way.

"Our community is still very much in the traumatized

Members of the Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School football team pray together as they began practice for a new season just after midnight on Monday in Parkland, Fla.

healing process," said Parkland Mayor Christine Hunschofsky, who sat in the bleachers with about 100 other people for the middle-of-the-night practice. "This is not a sprint. This is absolutely a marathon. And we will never forget. No one who was here will ever forget. But we also have to look at a way forward."

And Monday was a small step forward.

But the reminders of Feb. 14 remain everywhere.

There is one locker with a door painted gold in the locker room — it belonged to Joaquin "Guac" Oliver, one of the 17 victims, the boy who adored Miami Heat star Dwyane Wade so much that his family buried him in a Wade jersey. The fence around the 1200 building is partially covered by banners with messages of support from neighboring schools. Inside the cafeteria, where parents reported for the preseason meeting, another banner still hangs. It's from the students of Columbine High School, where a similar tragedy took place in 1999.

On the field, there are more signs, reminders to play for Feis and how to be "MSD Strong." The shirts most of the coaches wore had some reminder of the shooting. May tugged on a new shirt just before practice, one with "17" in the middle, the reasoning there obvious.

Put simply, there's no escaping what happened.

A school that was a sanctuary is now, in many ways, a memorial.

"Are we perfect? Are we happy all the time? How can we be?" said Johanna Feis, the younger sister of the slain coach whose desk remains next to May's inside a cramped football office and hasn't been issued to anyone else on the staff. "I'm not OK at this moment, but we're pushing through, so we are OK."

The Eagles obviously did not want this attention.

They did not want to be asked to play a Canadian team in Georgia on Sept. 1, but now view the trip as a great opportunity. They did not want to see Feis, athletic director Chris Hixon, cross country coach Scott Beigel — all victims on Feb. 14 — honored with the Best Coach award at the ESPYs. They did not want to turn Feis' name into a motivational acronym, the letters in football parlance now standing for "Fearless, Emotion, Intensity and Sacrifice."

They would rather see things go back to normal, whatever that was before the afternoon of Feb. 14.

"You represent this high school," May told his team just before practice started. "Every time you put that Douglas (jersey) on, make it count for something. Make it mean something. When somebody faces us this year, one thing I want them to know is, you ain't getting an injured Eagle. You're not facing an injured Eagle that's just going to let you roll over them."

MGM, Caesars jump into sports betting

By Regina Garcia Cano
and Wayne Parry
The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Two titans of the casino industry are racing to cash in on the newly created U.S. sports betting market, taking steps to expand their footprint and strengthen their positions as more states approve necessary regulations and people become more interested in legally gambling on pro and college sports.

MGM Resorts International reached separate agreements Monday with a European bookmaker and a U.S.-based regional casino operator that will give it technological expertise and market access in several states where it doesn't already operate casino-resorts. Meanwhile, Caesars Entertainment opened the sports book at one of its New Jersey casinos and will do the same Wednesday at another property.

The moves from the casino operators come more than two months after the U.S. Supreme Court cleared the way for all 50 states to offer legal sports betting, should they desire.

The first of two agreements MGM Resorts announced Monday is a joint venture with the United Kingdom-based owner of Ladbrokes, GVC Holdings, that will lead to the creation of a sports betting and online gambling platform in the U.S. The platform will include a mobile app and website with features like odds and highlights.

The separate agreement with Boyd Gaming Corp. opens markets for both companies, allowing them to offer sports betting and online wagering in 15 states where they operate casino-resorts. Boyd will give MGM access to Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana and other states pending the closure of planned casino purchases.

"We believe the joint venture deal is a net positive for both GVC and MGM as MGM gains the invaluable, and difficult to recreate technology platform and online expertise that GVC possesses in a cost efficient manner," Deutsche Bank analyst Carlo Santarelli wrote in a note to investors. "We also believe the deal helps both Companies in their speed to market, an important element, in our view, of U.S. sports betting as we expect market shares on a state by state basis to be largely concentrated over time."

Library 'rocked' summer programs

Staff Report

WASHINGTON COUNTY – The Washington County Public Library System had a ‘rocking’ time this summer during their activities programs.

There were activities for everyone - and from everyone. The library hosted playful and educational events by Dr. Magical Balloons, Tampa Taiko Japanese Drumming, and the Florida Public Archaeology Network with Underwater Archaeology.

Trips to any of the branches had kids picking out books related to this year’s theme, Libraries Rock. Thirty-six programs have been offered during the summer with 428 kids participating in learning about music history, creating instruments, and the science behind sounds.

Over 2,700 books were checked out since school let out on May 25.

Reading logs were distributed and children completed them to earn prizes from the library, helping children avoid the “summer slide.” Library Director Renae Rountree said the summer slide is a challenge that every child faces during their time off from school.

“The summer slide is not playground equipment,” said Rountree. “It is the drop in educational skills that result in weeks of remediation at the beginning of the school year. This takes away critical time from teachers and students who are looking to advance their education. The library seeks to help fill this gap in Washington County by providing summer programming.”

The library also partnered with Feeding the Gulf Coast to help provide children with good nutrition during the summer months. The Chipley Library, the Sam Mitchell Library in Vernon, Wausau

Library, and Gilmore Park served a combined total of 188 breakfasts, lunches, and snacks in a nine-week period with over 1,000 children receiving free meals.

Washington County Library wishes to send special thanks to their summer supporters, the Friends of the Washington County Public Library, Community South Credit Union, and the Chipley Kiwanis Club this year for helping fund their programming.

function as a community center. This is also evident in the Museum on Main-street exhibit, Hometown Teams: How Sports Shaped America, that will be opening on October 1, at the Chipley Library.

The Washington County Library in partnership with the Smithsonian Institution and the Florida Humanities Council is excited to bring a slice of Americana to Washington County, Rountree said.

Fed is set to leave rates alone as trade war raises anxiety

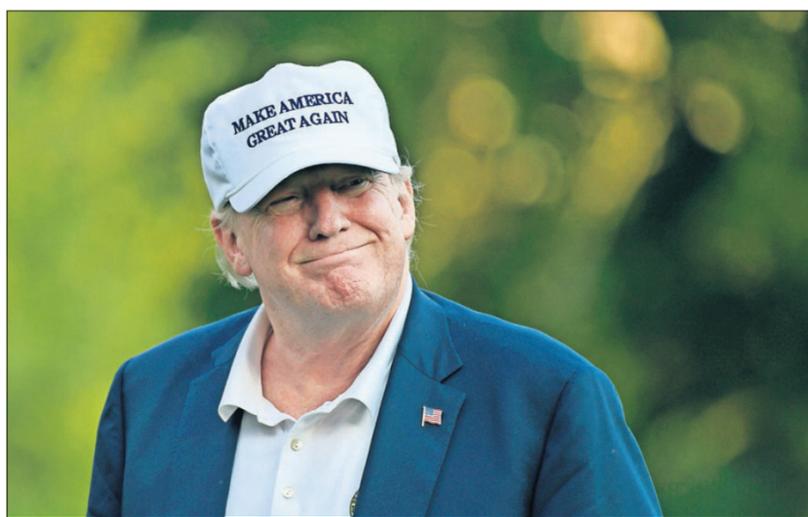

By Martin Crutsinger
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve will meet this week to assess an economy that has just enjoyed a healthy spurt of growth but faces a flurry of trade fights pushed by President Donald Trump that could imperil that growth over time.

If those concerns weren't enough, Trump has openly expressed his displeasure at the Fed's interest rate increases — something no president has done publicly in more than two decades.

No one expects the Fed to announce a rate increase when its latest policy meeting ends Wednesday. But the central bank is widely expected to set the stage for tightening credit again in September for a third time this year and then likely raise rates once again by December. This year's rate increases follow three hikes in 2017 and one each in 2015 and 2016.

The central bank's rate increases — to a still-low level — reflect the economy's resilience and are intended to prevent growth from overheating or inflation from accelerating too high. But higher rates make borrowing costlier for consumers and businesses and can weigh down stock prices. Trump has made clear he has little patience for the Fed's efforts to restrain the economy to control inflation.

"Tightening now hurts all that we have done," Trump tweeted earlier this month, a day after he said in a television interview that he was "not happy" with the Fed's rate increases.

Some of Trump's economic advisers, notably Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin, have tried to strike a reassuring note that the White House doesn't want to interfere with the Fed's policymaking.

"We as an administration absolutely support the independence of the Fed, and the president has made it clear that this is the Fed's decision," Mnuchin said on "Fox News Sunday." "The market expects interest rates to keep going up. So, the only question is how far and for how long? And we think the Fed will be very careful in managing the economy."

The administration's message is that although borrowing rates remain historically low, tighter credit could eventually imperil an economy that grew at a brisk 4.1 percent annual rate in the April-June quarter, the government estimated Friday. Unemployment is at a low 4 percent.

But there is worry, too, reflected in periodic sinking spells in financial markets, often involving developments in the Trump-led trade war, which has resulted in punitive tariffs on billions of dollars of U.S. and foreign goods.

Tech stumbles; indexes plunge

By Stan Choe
and Marley Jay
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Technology stocks tumbled for the third day in a row Monday as a sharp reversal for some of Wall Street's recent favorites worsened. Major U.S. indexes skidded.

Technology companies have done far better than the rest of the market in recent years, but they've fallen after Facebook and Twitter both reported weak user growth in the second quarter. Microsoft and Alphabet slumped Monday and Facebook, Twitter and Netflix have all fallen at least 20 percent from their record highs earlier this month.

Elsewhere, energy companies climbed along with the price of crude oil but industrial companies like Caterpillar continued to lose ground. Meat producer Tyson became the latest company to cut its profit projections and point to tariffs.

The S&P 500 lost 16.22 points, or 0.6 percent, at 2,802.60, and the Dow Jones Industrial Average fell 144.23 points, or 0.6 percent, to 25,306.83.

The Nasdaq composite has more technology stocks among its ranks, and it fell 107.41 points, or 1.4 percent, to 7,630. The Nasdaq has fallen at least 1 percent for three days in a row, which hadn't happened in three years.

Smaller companies fared as badly as larger ones. The Russell 2000 index slid 10.21 points, or 0.6 percent, to 1,653.13.

Twitter dropped 8 percent to $31.38, extending its 20.5 percent plunge on Friday. Facebook fell another 2.2 percent to $171.06. Netflix, which reported weak subscriber growth in early July, fell 5.7 percent to $334.96.

Even with its recent tumble, the technology sector of the S&P 500 is up almost 26 percent over the last year. The S&P 500 itself is up a bit more than 13 percent over that time.

Energy companies climbed as the price of benchmark U.S. oil spurted higher by 2.1 percent to $70.13 a barrel. Brent crude, the international standard, rose 0.9 percent to $74.97 a barrel in London.

Wholesale gasoline lost 0.1 percent to $2.16 a gallon. Heating oil gained 0.7 percent to $2.17 a gallon. Natural gas rose 0.5 percent to $2.80 per 1,000 cubic feet.

50 years on, McDonald's and fast-food evolve around Big Mac

By Candice Choi
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — McDonald's is fighting to hold onto customers as the Big Mac turns 50, but it isn't changing the makings of its most famous burger.

The company is celebrating the 1968 national launch of the double-decker sandwich whose ingredients of "two all-beef patties, special sauce, lettuce, cheese, pickles, onions and a sesame seed bun" were seared into American memories by a TV jingle. But the milestone comes as the company reduces its number of U.S. stores. McDonald's said Thursday that customers are visiting less often. Other trendy burger options are reaching into the heartland.

The "Golden Arches" still have a massive global reach, and the McDonald's brand of cheeseburgers, chicken nuggets and french fries remains recognizable around the world. But on its critical home turf, the company is toiling to stay relevant. Kale now appears in salads, fresh has replaced frozen beef patties in Quarter Pounders, and some stores now offer ordering kiosks, food delivery and barista-style cafes.

The milestone for the Big Mac shows how much McDonald's and the rest of fast-food have evolved around it.

"Clearly, we've gotten a little more sophisticated in our menu development," McDonald's CEO Steve Easterbrook said in a phone interview.

As with many of its popular and long-lasting menu items, the idea for the Big Mac came from a franchisee.

In 1967, Michael James "Jim" Delligatti lobbied the company to let him test the burger at his Pittsburgh restaurants.

Later, he acknowledged the Big Mac's similarity to a popular sandwich sold by the Big Boy chain.

"This wasn't like discovering the light bulb. The bulb was already there. All I did was screw it in the socket," Delligatti said, according to "Behind the Arches."

McDonald's agreed to let Delligatti sell the sandwich at a single location, on the condition that he use the company's standard bun. It didn't work. Delligatti tried a bigger sesame seed bun, and the burger soon lifted sales by more than 12 percent.

After similar results at more stores, the Big Mac was added to the national menu in 1968. Other ideas from franchisees that hit the big time include the Filet-O-Fish, Egg McMuffin, Apple Pie (once deep-fried but now baked), and the Shamrock Shake.

"The company has benefited from the ingenuity of its small businessmen," wrote Ray Kroc, who transformed the McDonald's into a global franchise, in his book, "Grinding It Out."

Franchisees still play an important role, driving the recent switch to fresh from frozen for the beef in Quarter Pounders, Easterbrook says.

BRIEF CASE

SPRINGDALE, ARK.
Tyson cites tariffs in cutting earnings outlook

Tyson Foods is citing higher tariffs and uncertainty about trade policies in cutting its profit forecast.

The Springdale, Arkansas-based company said Monday the tariffs are primarily affecting chicken and pork prices, in the U.S. and elsewhere. President Donald Trump has imposed tariffs on a range of goods, and China retaliated with tariffs on U.S. exports.

Tariffs on steel and aluminum have pressured automakers, and General Motors also cut its outlook for the year.

Tyson Foods Inc. says it now expects adjusted earnings of about $5.70 to $6 for the year. It previously expected $6.55 to $6.70 per share. CEO Tom Hayes said "changing global trade policies here and abroad" and "the uncertainty of any resolution" contributed to lower prices and an oversupply.

Caterpillar has a big 2Q, raises outlook again

Caterpillar's second-quarter easily beat Wall Street expectations thanks in part to the blistering pace of construction and demand for big machines, a the company boosted its full-year earnings forecast again.

Shares rose more than 3 percent Monday in premarket trading. Caterpillar now anticipates full-year adjusted earnings in a range of $11 to $12 per share.

When one child is a better student

By Melissa Erickson
More Content Now

How families react to children's performance in school can have lasting consequences on a child's development and self-esteem, according to experts. What should a parent do when one child is a better student? "In some ways it's complicated, and parents' perceptions are not always accurate," said Alexander Jensen, assistant professor at Brigham Young University's School of Family Life.

In a 2015 study, Jensen asked parents which of their children was better at schoolwork. Turns out, parents believed their firstborn was smarter — unless the firstborn was a son and the second was a daughter. In that case, the daughter was deemed smarter. Between two siblings of the same sex, parents believed the firstborn was smarter. Between female and male siblings, parents on average believed girls were smarter in school regardless of birth order.

While the study didn't ask why, "it may have been that parents conflate age with natural ability. Then, there's the gender issue," Jensen said. "Parents tend to view older siblings as more capable, but on average older siblings are not doing better in school than their younger siblings."

Regardless of who's smarter, the social comparison of grades between siblings has negative implications for kids. "It's linked to depression, increased fighting," Jensen said. Parents should minimize comparisons as much as possible, he said.

"Children are vigilant in comparisons, and it can backfire and be a negative. Parents need to be aware of that," said Susan McHale, distinguished professor of human development and family studies, professor of demography and director of the Social Science Research Institute at Pennsylvania State University.

A child can be smart, but if a brother or sister is seen as smarter, "that can have implications as far as future goals and plans, their sense of self, and it can affect their everyday performance," she said.

When a child is seen to be second-best (or third- or fourth-) academically, she may withdraw rather than compete, McHale said. Instead she focuses her efforts toward a different way to compete: If one child is "the smart one," another may be "the sporty one" or "the musical one" or "the one on the debate team."

"It minimizes opportunities, and you really want to avoid this," McHale said.

Parents need to help kids see beyond who's getting better grades.

Pick and praise

"Focus on what the 'less better'-performing child is doing right versus wrong, so to speak," said licensed marriage and family therapist Lisa Bahar. "They are excelling at something — figure that out and nurture it. Focus on their character development versus performance. Build them up on their attributes from small to big things. Remember their actions in the past that had a positive effect on the family and you."

All kids have different strengths, and they need to hear their parents recognize them for it, Jensen said.

Praise effort, not achievement

"Parents should praise a child's effort rather than the outcome," such as grades, Jensen said. That will make the grade comparison conversation come up less often, he said.

Work effort is something that all children can change, while top grades are not always achievable for all students.

"Reinforce kids for what they're doing. If their work ethic is terrific, tell them," McHale said.

Motivate positively

Parents may think comparing grades will spur kids to do better, but it's not effective.

"It may generate motivation, but the long-term effects are mostly negative," Bahar said.

Remember that you're the parent of more than one child, McHale said. Both kids hear what you say to them and their siblings, and that gives them a sense of who they are.

"It's hard for parents to not notice or think about differences between their children; it's only natural," Jensen said. "But to help all children succeed, parents should focus on recognizing the strengths of each of their children and be careful about vocally making comparisons in front of them."

Tax-free weekend begins August 3

Staff Report

Parents can stock up on clothing and school supplies the first weekend in August - tax free.

The back-to-school sales tax holiday, passed by the Florida legislature and signed into law by Gov. Rick Scott, will begin 12:01 a.m. Friday, Aug. 3 and end at 11:59 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 5.

During the tax-free weekend, sales tax will not be collected on certain school supplies for $15 or less per item, as well as, clothing, footwear and certain accessories selling for $60 or less per item. Excluded items are briefcases, suitcases and other garment bags, watches, jewelry, umbrellas, handkerchiefs, skis, swim fins, roller blades and skates.

Watch out for heat stroke

How to protect your heart and health during the sweltering days of summer

By American Heart Association

It's the time of year when temperatures soar, and sometimes to deadly effect, especially for the elderly and very young.

Already this year, sweltering days have proved dangerous as heat waves smother parts of the world. At least 70 people reportedly died this summer from scorching heat and humidity that hit eastern and central Canada, while more than 40 people died in Japan.

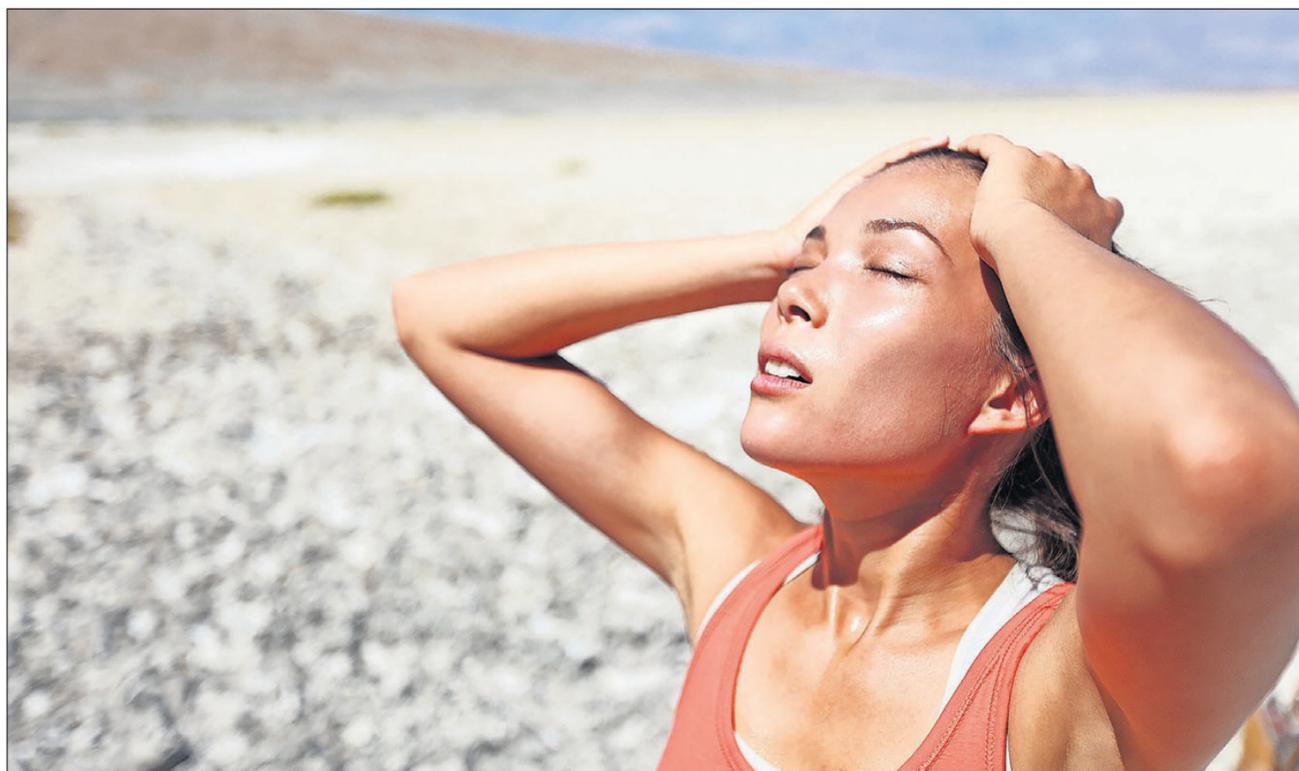

More than 600 people die every year from heat-related illnesses that are preventable, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. The agency estimates more than 65,000 Americans visit an emergency room for acute heat illness each summer.

"I think people underestimate how quickly it happens. And when it starts to happen, if someone is progressing to heat exhaustion or heat stroke, you lose your self-awareness," said Dr. Robert O'Connor, professor and chair of emergency medicine at the University of Virginia. "It's important to keep an eye on those around you for heat-related problems. If someone is flushed, dizzy or uncoordinated, it can be an early sign."

Dehydration can begin within just a few hours of extreme heat, so drinking extra fluids is important, especially when taking certain medications. Fatigue, headaches, muscle cramps, dizziness, sleepiness and dry mouth can all be signs of dehydration.

Dehydration causes the heart to work harder, putting it at risk. Hydration helps the heart more easily pump blood through the blood vessels to the muscles. And it helps the muscles work efficiently.

A 2016 Environmental

Protection Agency analysis of heat-related deaths said high temps could be a factor in many more deaths than officials realize – or count.

"By studying how daily death rates vary with temperature in selected cities, scientists have found that extreme heat contributes to far more deaths than the official death certificates might suggest," the report said. "This is because the stress of a hot day can increase the chance of dying from a heart attack, other heart conditions, or respiratory diseases such as pneumonia."

While infants and the elderly are more vulnerable to problems from heat, O'Connor said sometimes medicines can make someone more sensitive to heat and dehydration.

"They should talk to their doctor and look up their medications to see if it predisposes them," he said.

stroke are serious medical emergencies that require treatment. Both can cause headaches, nausea or vomiting. Heat stroke also can cause a high fever, warm skin with no sweating and confusion or unconsciousness.

Beyond some of the obvious and sometimes extreme physical symptoms brought on by sweltering temperatures, a recent study showed it could affect how we think. And it doesn't just affect the most vulnerable.

A group of Harvard researchers published an observational study in July showing students who lived in dormitories without air conditioning during a heat wave performed worse on a series of cognitive tests compared with students who lived in air-conditioned dorms.

The study was conducted over 12 consecutive days in the summer of 2016. Students in buildings without AC experienced 13.4 percent longer reaction times on color-word tests, and 13.3 percent lower scores on addition/subtraction tests compared with students in air-conditioned rooms. The research showed students in rooms with AC were not just faster in their responses, but also more accurate.

Hot summers and heat waves won't be going away any time soon, according to federal research. In fact, unusually high temperatures have become more common in recent decades, and heat waves are expected to become longer, more frequent and more intense in the future, according to the EPA and the CDC.

O'Connor said thinking ahead and being prepared in the heat will help prevent trouble.

"Drink plenty of fluids and limit the amount of time you are in the heat," he said. "Even if someone comes into a cooler environment for a few minutes every hour, that can prevent a heat-related illness."

"Limit outdoor activity to early morning or late evening, and stay in the shade," O'Connor said. "It might be tough if you are working outside or on the golf course. Soak a towel in cold water and put it around your neck. Evaporative cooling, dousing in cold water and letting it evaporate, is the best way to eliminate heat."
