Officers located the vehicle at a Hoyt Street residence. After officers made contact with the suspect, the release stated, George made statement that led CPD officers to believe they were illegal or dangerous items in the vehicle.

The search of the vehicle resulted in the discovery of a several bags of marijuana totaling to about a half of a pound, digital scales and two firearms.

George was arrested and charged with the following charges: carrying a concealed firearm, display of firearm during the commission of a felony, possession of marijuana with the intent to sell within 1000 feet of a school, possession of marijuana over 20 grams and possession of narcotics equipment.

Gov. Rick Scott stopped in Washington and Holmes counties Monday afternoon to let local voters know why they should vote him to represent the state as Senator in Washington, D.C. Gov. Scott makes local stop on campaign trail

Staff report

WASHINGTON AND HOLMES COUNTIES - Knocking on a million dollars across the state, Gov. Rick Scott visited the area Monday afternoon to remind voters of his track record and why they should open the door for him to represent the state as Senator at the nation's Capitol.

"When you hire somebody you look at their background and say 'do you get stuff done,'" the governor said following a meet-and-greet held with the Washington County Chamber of Commerce, held at Hard Labor Creek. "It's the same with this, you say 'I'm going to hire somebody - because that's what you're hiring when you elect someone - 'are they a doer, are they getting anything done.'"

With the unwavering backing of Rep. Brad Drake and Sen. George Gainer, Gov. Scott has approved about $2.8 million for local projects that will lead to economic growth in both counties.

"I think that's why people will vote for me because they'll look at my track records over the last seven and a half year and they'll see all of the results we've done - for jobs, for education, for the environment, transportation," he said. "I'm going to do the same thing in D.C."

About an hour earlier, the Scott had visited at the same kind of event, hosted by Holmes County Chamber of Commerce at That Place Downtown where he gave a brief speech to constituents after shaking hands with those in attendance. "I have shaken over 540,000 peoples hands," he said.

Scott said by shaking that many hands, he learned what people care about - jobs, primarily.

He reminded those in attendance about 832,000 Floridians were jobless when he came into office; and at the closing, more than 1.5 million people have entered into the workforce.

EBRO — For the third year in a row, Washington County students benefited from players who pressed their luck.

Ebro Greyhound Park

collected about $3,500 worth of school supplies for county students.

Organizers said the players continued commitment to supporting education has shaped the annual drive into a tradition.

"We can't say enough about our players when they support things like this," said Cage Manager for the poker room Nichole Kennedy. "We feel like we should do this to support the county, especially the children in school."

"We're now calling it a tradition," she added.

Extra playing chips were given to players who brought in school supplies at tournaments. Park staff also made donations. In addition to support from the park, Kennedy said the establishment is grateful for the support of Washington County Sheriff's Office in delivering the supplies to schools.

"We serve an amazing community that continually gives back," said Kristin Martin, WCSO's Public Information Officer. "Ebro Greyhound Park's annual school supply drive is just another act of love that we are so grateful to be a part of."

The Park collected supplies from July 17-27 and had them delivered to schools Tuesday, Aug. 7.

"We were able to give a cross the board items for students that need it," Kennedy added. "This is one way of us giving back."

SCOTT

Along with being second in the state for affordable education and hitting a 47-year low in crime rates, Scott also pointed to the decrease in debt the state has achieved.

"In the seven and a half years I have been in office our revenues have increased by 20 billion and we have cut over 10 billion from the debt," Scott said.

"Government has to be accountable."

And that what he plans to do in Washington if voters select him at the booth.

"I'm absolutely committed to representing the state; the state needs better representation," he said at Hard Labor Creek. "

We all pay our taxes, we ought to be treated as the same way as places like New York."

"I'm absolutely committed to representing the state; the state needs better representation."

Outcry must persist once red tide fades

If history repeats itself, the red tide plaguing a large swath of our inshore Gulf coast will eventually go away. The dead fish and other marine life that succumbed to the harmful algae will be removed from beaches and basins. The respiratory irritation experienced by humans will subside.

And legions of Floridians will forget the anger and dismay they now feel while viewing photographs and watching video of the impacts of red tide.

It happened after the 2005-06 red tide, one of the worst in Florida's recorded history, that resulted in a "dead zone" the size of Rhode Island on the Gulf bottom and caused massive losses of fish and marine mammals.

It happened after a two-year episode, from 1994 to 1996, and following the 1953-54 red tide that was, at the time, the longest on record.

As the blooms faded, so did the negative environmental and economic impacts that generated public outcry.

That's not to say steps aimed at reducing the intensification of red tide, a naturally occurring phenomenon, haven't been taken for the past three decades. They have occurred, and outbreaks have sometimes provided the impetus for incremental action.

But Florida continues to lack a science-based, fully funded plan for controlling pollution — from human-made nutrients — that, according to the scientific consensus, can fuel the inshore growth of microscopic red tide organisms that originally develop 10 to 40 miles offshore.

One problem is that, in general, when red tide is out of sight (and out of smelling distance), it is out of the public's mind and, thus, not a political priority.

Another challenge is the complexity of the matter. There are different species of red tide algae; the bloom currently affecting the west coast is known as K. brevis, or Florida red tide. The vastness of the Gulf, the length of Florida's coastline and the diversity of conditions on the mainland make it difficult to reach sweeping conclusions about causes and effects.

There is debate about if nutrient pollution impacts the frequency of red tides. However, scientists do believe once red tides are transported inshore, they are capable of using man-made nutrients for growth.

Pictures of bright-green, algae-laden water released from Lake Okeechobee toward the west and east coasts have fueled public outrage and reinforced the widely held belief that red tide outbreaks are being lengthened and intensified by pollution from development, septic tanks and agriculture north of Lake Okeechobee.

Regardless of red tide, this pollution should be dramatically reduced and water management practices dramatically overhauled. Doing so will take money and commitment.

Could outrage over red tide force Floridians and their leaders to take pollution seriously? Perhaps but, as history has shown, only if it is sustained — after the red tide goes away.

Monopoly or democracy?

Jim Hightower

America's political history has been written in the fierce narrative of war — not only our country's many military clashes with foreign nations, but also our own unending war for democracy in the U.S.

Generation after generation of moneyed elites have persisted in trying to take wealth and power from the workaday majority and concentrate both of those things in their wealthy hands to establish a de facto American aristocracy. Every time, the people have rebelled in organized mass struggles against the monopolist and financial royalists — literally battling for a little more economic fairness, social justice, and equal opportunity. And now, the time of rebellion is upon us again, for We the People are suddenly in the grip of a brutish level of monopolistic power.

Corporate concentration of markets, profits, workplace decision-making, political influence and our nation's total wealth is surpassing that of the infamous era of robber barons. Apple, which just became the first U.S. corporation to reach a stock value of a trillion dollars, is now larger than Bank of America, Boeing, Disney, Ford, Volkswagon and 20 other brand-name giants combined. Just five tech superpowers — Apple, Amazon, Facebook, Google and Netflix — have raked in half of this year's stock price gains by the 500 top corporations ranked by the S&P index. A recent gold rush of corporate mergers has created mega-firms and shriveled competition in most industries, including airlines, banks, drug companies, food, hospitals, hotels, law firms, media, oil and more.

The results of fewer and bigger corporations is that those few attain overwhelming power over the rest of us. They are able to control workers' pay, crush unions, jack up prices, squeeze our smaller businesses, dominate elections, weaken environmental projections... and become even fewer, bigger and more powerful. Thus, they are waging all out corporate class war on American people, and on our democratic ideals, and they're winning.

These monopolies are not merely un-American, they're virulently anti-American, suppressing our fundamental values of fairness and opportunity for all. That's why, throughout our history, the people have instinctively rebelled at the arrogant assertions of monopoly avarice — the Boston Tea Party, the Populist Movement, the rise of unions, Teddy Roosevelt's trust busters, the Progressive Party, the muckrakers, the New Deal, Ralph Nader and on and on. Yet, in the stunningly short period of the last couple of decades, corporate political money and the public officials it bought have enshrined monopoly power as a legitimate form of business in our land, aggressively protected from public "meddling" by lawmakers, regulators and judges. For example, after our grassroots economy was crushed in 2007 by the greed of too-big-to-fail Wall Street banksters, officials bailed out the villainous banks at the taxpayer expense and deliberately made them bigger, more powerful and more dangerous than ever. Today, just five banks control nearly half of all financial assets in the U.S.

You'd think such a massive power grab by bank monopolists would produce an equally massive, 24/7 barrage of coverage by the nation's multitude of media outlets, which purport to be our defenders of democracy. And sure, an occasional story pops out here or there about monopoly abuse, but nothing comprehensive and cohesive to rally a public rebellion against what's become the United States of Monopoly Rule.

As a paragon of journalistic integrity, A.S. Liebling, warned nearly 40 years ago, "Freedom of the press is guaranteed only to those who own one."

Can The Beer Industry Still Brew Up A Comeback?

Danny Tyree

It's a drastically different world than when I was working a summertime job during college. The first summer, a middle-aged co-worker would proudly pat his ample stomach and announce, "This is my baby - Bud Miller!" The second summer, my boss (hi, Elgin!) tried (unsuccessfully) to get me to drink my first beer. (I know quaffing that first brew is supposed to be an indispensable "rite of passage" into adulthood, but over the decades I've been too busy with a mortgage, in-laws, pallbearer duties, job changes, diaper changes, male pattern baldness and prostate exams to mourn the missed opportunity. Adulthood?

I sometimes long for a "rite of return passage" to my teddy bear!) As I was saying, nowadays smokers are marginalized. Daytime soap operas are almost extinct. Salsa has eclipsed ketchup. Miss America is relegated to obscurity. Kids would rather play soccer than baseball.

And, according to the Wall Street Journal, as of last year, U.S. drinkers for the first time are more likely to choose wine or a cocktail over beer.

Health-consciousness by millennials, a "bourbon renaissance," the end of a voluntary liquor industry ban on radio and TV advertising and other factors have left brewers crying in their beer, the WSJ reports.

Oh, drinkers still chose beer 49.7 percent of the time and the decline represents only one less bottle per average consumer per week (versus 20 years ago). But the dollars add up and the milestone is a big psychological blow to brewers. ("Our coffers get less filling!") Beer executives who used to be cutthroat rivals are now pooling their resources to promote beer in general.

One of my anonymous sources has revealed some of their ideas, including a patriotic appeal to the core loyal market ("When the going gets tough, the tough get older and whiter"). "I just realized: baby Bud Miller must be pushing 40 now! ("Hey! I think I barfed up salsa on Miss America at a soccer game! Dad would've been so proud. Next year, I'll dedicate my Arbor Day tuba and lederhosen routine to him!")

LOCAL & STATE

Environmental crisis takes center stage in tight Senate race

By Brady Dennis
and Lori Rozsa
The Washington Post

In recent days, the U.S. Senate race in Florida has turned decidedly slimy.

Incumbent Sen. Bill Nelson, D, and his Republican challenger, Gov. Rick Scott, have taken turns blaming each other for the toxic blue-green algae blooms plaguing parts of the state, which have killed marine life, raised public health concerns and threatened the Sunshine State's tourism industry. And even as they accuse each other of inaction, both the two-term governor and the three-term senator have scrambled to prove how dedicated they are to addressing the problem.

In a campaign season dominated by talk of immigration, trade tariffs, the Supreme Court and all things President Donald Trump, the clash in Florida over an unfolding environmental disaster could prove a pivotal issue in one of the nation's most closely watched Senate races this fall.

The state has wrestled with serious algae blooms before, including in 2016, when the toxic goop invaded waterways along Florida's coast, forcing the governor to declare a state of emergency. Then, as now, the state's largest freshwater body, Lake Okeechobee, was at risk of overflowing because of massive rains. That led the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the federal agency charged with monitoring water levels, to open levees surrounding the lake and dump the water that had been polluted by runoff into rivers and estuaries that lead toward the ocean.

On Florida's southeast coast, the result has been a gooey, smelly blue-green-brown algae that has closed businesses and sickened dozens of people. Along more than 100 miles of the southwest coast, meanwhile, a bout of red tide has killed thousands of sea animals, including dolphins, manatees and endangered sea turtles. Scientists are continuing to research the underlying causes of that problem.

The problem has become a focus in the contentious Senate contest as business owners have raised complaints and some families have been temporarily driven from their homes because of the foul smell.

The blame game hit the airwaves last week when Scott put out a television ad — titled "More waiting, more talk, more algae" — that criticized Nelson and the federal government for allowing discharges of tainted water from Lake Okeechobee that have led to ugly, smelly and potentially dangerous algal blooms on the state's St. Lucie and Caloosahatchee rivers, among other spots.

"Washington politician Bill Nelson made a pledge 30 years ago to solve this problem," Scott's ad says. "But Nelson's a talker, not a doer." The ad concludes with Scott saying, "I don't wait for Washington."

Nelson hasn't taken such criticism quietly. He has visited areas affected by the toxic gunk, which thrives when warm, nutrient-rich water combines with runoff from agricultural operations and other development, and he faults Scott for systematically dismantling the state's capacity to head off environmental calamities during his eight years as governor.

Nelson also unveiled his own ad this week: "Florida's algae bloom crisis is a man-made crisis, made by this man," it says, as a picture of Scott flashes across the screen. "The water is murky, but the fact is clear. Rick Scott caused this problem."

Frank Jackalone, director of the Sierra Club's Florida chapter, said that although Scott is trying to shift the blame to Nelson, the governor is the one largely responsible for the crisis.

"The fact is, Rick Scott has had far more power to deal with these issues than Bill Nelson," Jackalone said. "Bill Nelson has one vote in the U.S. Senate. Rick Scott is the governor of Florida and has had the power to enforce the Clean Water Act in the state. He could have enforced pollution regulations. Instead, he cut back funding, rolled back regulations, and eliminated a large part of his enforcement staff."

During Scott's tenure, budgets for environmental agencies have been slashed. The South Florida Water Management District, which oversees water issues from Orlando to Key West, had its budget slashed. Many of the more than 400 workers who lost their jobs in the $700 million cut were scientists and engineers whose jobs were to monitor pollution levels and algae blooms. Scott also abolished the Department of Community Affairs, which oversaw development in the state.

Lauren Engel, communications director for the Florida Department of Environmental Protection, noted that the blue-green algae is caused by pollution coming from Lake Okeechobee. Like Scott, she pointed to the fact that the Army Corps — a federal agency — is in charge of water released from the lake.

"Pollution buildup in Lake Okeechobee has been going on for decades," Engel said Thursday, calling criticism that Scott's environmental policies have allowed more pollution into the lake and made a bad situation worse "an unfair characterization."

Blair Wickstrom, publisher of the Florida Sportsman, agreed that the problem stretches back at least a decade.

"It's been going on since before Scott, but since he took office, there's been a distinct rise in nutrients from Lake Okeechobee and an increase in algae blooms," Wickstrom said. "This is not an act of God or not because we can't handle the rain. It's the lack of regulation at the state level."

Researchers say they are hampered by the lack of information; Scott's budget cuts have reduced water-quality monitoring stations around the state, as well as the frequency of water sampling. Scientists say the lack of data prevents them from figuring out what has caused these latest toxic algae blooms and providing the sort of early warning that could prompt officials to act sooner.

"It would be interesting to understand why this is happening, but we can't do that with the data we have," said Karl Havens, a University of Florida professor and director of Florida Sea Grant.

Last month, Scott declared a state of emergency for seven Florida counties, as he put it, "to help combat algal blooms caused by Lake Okeechobee water discharges from the Army Corps of Engineers." He ordered the state's Department of Environmental Protection and the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission to ramp up water-quality testing, set up a multimillion-dollar grant program aimed at helping pay for cleanups and directed state agencies to aid local businesses affected by the crisis.

For his part, Nelson has implored the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention to study the potential health effects of the algae blooms. He also has proposed legislation seeking tax breaks to small businesses affected by the situation and to make more federal funding available to research the problem.

Schools struggle to meet security rules

By Terry Spencer
and Gary Fineout
The Associated Press

FORT LAUDERDALE — Florida reacted to the Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School massacre by becoming the first state to require police or armed guards at all public schools. It's a mandate many districts are struggling to meet, financially and logistically.

In the first comprehensive statewide examination of the program, an Associated Press survey of Florida's 67 countywide school districts found all campuses will be covered when they reopen this month, but many districts are having difficulty funding the program and finding enough applicants. About a third are supplementing officers with armed civilian security guards, including, in some cases, school staff members.

Before the Feb. 14 attack, a few districts already had officers at every campus, but the majority of districts didn't cover any or most elementary schools, and some didn't staff all middle schools.

Now every school must have armed protection whenever it's open. In districts that won't have full staffing in place when classes start, local law enforcement agencies are filling gaps by taking officers off the street or paying overtime.

That's happening in Palm Beach County. The district budgeted $9 million to add 75 officers to its 160-member in-house police department, and is asking voters to raise taxes to pay for them. But it isn't getting enough applicants — Florida has several thousand police and deputy vacancies, and not just for schools.

"There simply are not enough officers to go around," said Kathy Burstein, Palm Beach schools' spokeswoman. The district, which has almost 200,000 students at 170 campuses, will not be arming staff or hiring civilian guards.

The Florida Legislature budgeted $165 million to partially cover districts' new security costs, but then cut proposed education spending. Before the massacre, Gov. Rick Scott recommended increasing the districts' base allocation by $152 per student. Legislators, after passing the security package, cut that to 47 cents.

"They robbed Peter to pay Paul," said Jim Norton, superintendent of the four-school Gulf County district. It had two officers but will now have four plus a supervisor at an additional district cost of about $50,000 — the sheriff's office is covering the rest. "We all have the same commitment to safer schools, but we also have a duty to provide something beyond daycare."

The National Center for Education Statistics says a 2016 survey showed two-thirds of U.S. middle and high schools had an assigned police officer at least part-time; about a third of elementary schools were protected this way.

Having an armed guard on campus doesn't guarantee safety. The deputy at Stoneman Douglas didn't confront the shooter who killed 17 people. Ten were killed in May at a Texas high school where two school officers exchanged fire with the suspect before he surrendered. But school officers have stopped other shootings before anyone was killed, such as one in May in Dixon, Illinois.

The AP found 45 Florida districts are solely using police officers for campus protection.

Most contract with law enforcement agencies to hire and employ them, while the few that have school police forces are expanding them. An experienced officer can cost $100,000 annually in salary, benefits and equipment, and any cost not covered by the state falls on local taxpayers.

The staffing increases range from two officers in smaller districts to dozens in larger ones.

Along with protecting students, such school resource officers investigate campus crimes, make arrests and can be reassigned off campus during summer and other breaks.

Flagler County Superintendent James Tager said his district south of Jacksonville felt more comfortable sticking with deputies, many of whom become student mentors. He said little thought was given to arming staff.

“Teachers teach and law enforcement does law enforcement,” he said.

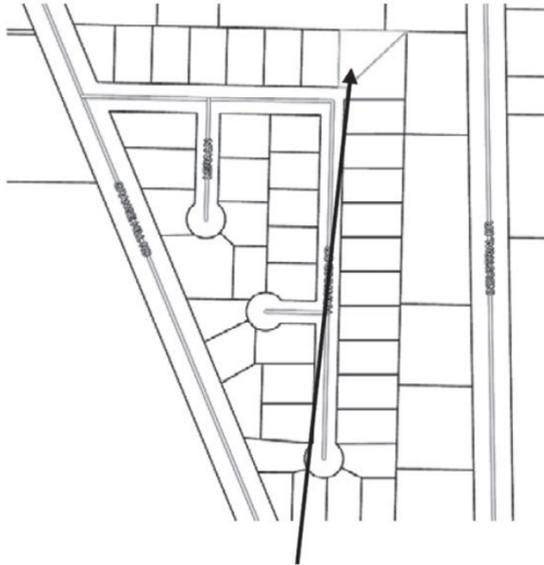

The other 22 districts are supplementing officers with “guardians” — armed civilians or staff. They are vetted, receive 132 hours of training and must attain a higher score on the state firearms test than rookie police officers.

Report finds flaws in Florida’s cancer efforts

By Christine Sexton
The News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE — Florida has received failing grades from an American Cancer Society political-action committee for not taking more steps to prevent cancer and for not expanding access to health care for uninsured working adults.

In the organization’s annual “How You Measure Up?” report, Florida earned a passing, or green, mark in just one of nine categories — for a Medicaid program that treats women with breast and cervical cancer.

Known as the Mary Brogan Breast & Cervical Cancer Early Detection Program, lawmakers reduced funding for the program this year compared to prior year levels. But it’s the first time that the Legislature has agreed to use recurring money to fund the program — named after former Lt. Gov Frank Brogan’s late wife — which means it should be built into the base of future state budgets.

The report measures Florida and other states on where they stand on issues that the American Cancer Society Cancer Action Network says will reduce suffering and death from cancer. The report says the guidelines set by the organization are based on “proven policy solutions.”

According to the American Cancer Society, more than 2.1 million people will be diagnosed with cancer in 2018.

Florida earned a failing, or red, score for not passing a law to ban minors from using tanning devices. Current law allows children under age 14 to use tanning devices when accompanied by adults. Parental consent to use tanning devices is required for children between ages 14 and 18.

The state also failed to meet the organization’s benchmark for Medicaid smoking-cessation policies. According to the report, not all Medicaid patients are entitled to counseling or have access to tobacco-cessation medication approved by the Food and Drug Administration.

Florida is one of 17 states that have not passed a Medicaid expansion under the Affordable Care Act. The refusal to do so earned the state a failing grade in the report.

Meanwhile, the report said Florida made improvements in such ways as introducing the American Cancer Society Cancer Action Network’s model legislation to create a statewide expert advisory council on end-of-life care.

Also, the group gave Florida improvement scores for its 2018 tobacco-control funding, $68.6 million, and for its cigarette tax rate.

This year’s report includes information on how Florida’s new policies related to opioids affect cancer patients. Cancer society executives have included the information in a “Hanging in the Balance” section of the report and say it will be a recurring feature in future reports.

One South Bank announced today that it has entered into an agreement to be acquired by a central Florida-based investment group. The investment group, comprised of experienced community bankers, is led by Orlando businessmen and bankers, Randy Burden and Rick Pullum.

While One South Bank was not actively for sale, the team from Orlando identified the bank as a potential acquisition because of One South Bank's impressive financial health, strong leadership and engaged shareholders.

"We evaluated numerous banks throughout Florida and the U.S., and it became clear that One South Bank was a leader in their category. After meeting the team in Chipley, we knew this was the type of group that we wanted to join," said Rick Pullum.

"We were not for sale, but when we were approached by the team from Orlando, we were so impressed with their community banking experience and plans for growth, we knew we needed to seriously consider this opportunity. This is a win for our customers, shareholders and employees," said Kim Davis Wilson, CEO of One South Bank.

As part of the acquisition, all employees of One South Bank will be retained and the current CEO, Kim Davis Wilson, will serve on the Board of Directors of the new company and retain her role as CEO of One South Financial, Inc. and its subsidiary, Bank of Early. The current office in Chipley will continue to serve the local market area, and all existing One South Bank board members have been invited to serve on an advisory board for that location.

"We are very pleased that this partnership provides a strong return for our shareholders and will benefit our customers and the communities we serve. This team will bring expanded lending capacity and a broader offering of products and services, all with a focus on community," continued Wilson.

Regulatory applications have been filed with the FDIC and the State of Florida's Office of Financial Regulation, and responses are expected in the coming months.

Thank you to our friends and neighbors in Washington County and the surrounding communities for making One South Bank your trusted community bank partner. We are honored by the support of our community and the growth we have experienced over the past decade.

As we begin a new chapter in our story, we are pleased to announce that One South Bank has recently entered into an agreement to be acquired by a central Florida-based community banking investor group. The group is comprised of an experienced team of community bankers led by Randy Burden and Rick Pullum of Orlando.

We are proud to say One South Bank is a sound, thriving institution, and because of that, this acquisition creates a strong return for our shareholders and presents many exciting opportunities for our employees and the Washington County community.

The only changes you will see are positive! Every team member of our Chipley office will remain onboard and continue to serve as your personal banking team. Our CEO, Kim Davis Wilson, will continue to be engaged in our community and the bank, including serving on the Board of Directors of the new company and continuing in her role as CEO of One South Financial, Inc. and its subsidiary, Bank of Early. The members of our current Board of Directors have also been invited to serve on an advisory board based in Chipley. Lastly, we are excited for you, our customers, as we will now have expanded lending capabilities and a more robust offering of products and services.

Washington County and the surrounding community is our home, and our customers are our friends and family. It is not often that you have the chance to welcome new members into your family, but we are excited to do just that. Randy, Rick and their entire team have proven themselves as lifelong community bankers who believe in the power of personal relationships and building a great bank by helping to build a great community.

Please join us in welcoming our new partners to Washington County.

Q&A with Washington County Superintendent Joe Taylor

On the half-cent sales tax

By Jacqueline Lindsey
Washington County News

Why should voters vote 'yes' on the surtax?: Voting "yes" will be for the benefit of the school system in preparation for the future. The half-cent sales tax will provide funding to replace devices on a rotating basis; Maintain and Expand Technology infrastructure; Remodel/Renovate and Expand School Facilities

How much money would it generate for the school district (annually)?: The half-cent sales tax will generate approximately $1 million annually.

Where can people see this additional tax added

(receipts, utility bills, etc.)? Who will be/can be taxed: If approved, the levy will begin in January 2019 of all sales taxable expenditures up to $5,000 purchase.

It is limited to the first $5,000 of any expenditure, should a car purchase or large material purchase additional cost will be no more than $25.

Half a cent doesn't sound like much. Will it truly be a .005 surtax? Will the amount of the surtax change or increase?: Yes, it will be .005 sales tax increase. No, it will not increase.

What are the top five projects the School Board has slated for these monies?

AMENDMENTS OF INTEREST

Florida's voters will see a range of hot topic issues this November. Here are a few our readers may show heightened interest in.

Amendment 1:

Increased Homestead Property Tax Exemption, which increases the homestead exemption by exempting the assessed valuation of homestead property greater than $100,000 and up to $125,000 for all levies other than school district levies. The amendment shall take effect January 1, 2019.

Amendment 3:

Voter Control of Gambling in Florida, which gives Florida voters exclusive right to decide whether to authorize casino gambling.

Amendment 7:

First Responder and Military Member Survivor Benefits; Public Colleges and Universities Grants, which assesses a mandatory payment of death benefits and waiver of certain educational expenses to qualifying survivors of certain first responders and military members who die performing official duties.

Amendment 8:

School Board Term Limits and Duties; Public Schools, which creates a term limit of eight consecutive years for school board members and requires the legislature to provide for the promotion of civic literacy in public schools. Currently, district school boards have a constitutional duty to operate, control, and supervise all public schools. The amendment maintains a school board's duties to public schools it establishes, but permits the state to operate, control, and supervise public schools not established by the school board.

Amendment 13:

Ends Dog Racing, which phases out commercial dog racing in connection with wagering by 2020. Other gaming activities are not affected.

Campaign message: A county should be run as a business, and, working with the Board of County Commissioners, we have succeeded in paying down the county debt, and we are slated to be debt-free in this fiscal year. This has been possible by eliminating waste and maximizing the potential of all County offices and departments, thereby balancing the budget and being good stewards of the county taxes. As your County Commissioner, I look forward to continuing to work with the team we have assembled to further improve life for Washington County.

Cite three priorities you would have as a commissioner: Over the past eight years we have improved roads in Washington County, balanced the budget and devised a plan to be debt-free this calendar year, and we have overseen improvements to many of our natural resources, buildings, and assets. These three elements will remain key, and the focus of my position on the Board of County Commissioners of Washington County going forward.

3. Provide for digital technology for support at the schools
4. Upgrade capabilities for internal communications at schools
5. Future facility renovation and remodeling based upon growth

How will projects be prioritized to receive the money and who determines what's most important?: As needed, digital devices within the district will be upgraded and replaced; the School Board - based upon the stated needs of the schools.

What local referendums are on the ballot?

WASHINGTON COUNTY - There's only one local referendum on the ballot and voters will have to choose whether they want to levy the half-cent tax.

The text of the referendum will read as follow: Shall a one-half cent sales surtax be levied in Washington County, Florida, for a period of ten (10) years, effective January 1, 2019, and expiring on December 31, 2028, to provide for improvements and construction of school capital outlay projects, including construction, additions, and replacements of school facilities as well as to finance the educational technology needs of the District?

What can the money be used for? What are some things that the money cannot be used for? It can be used for technology and facility expansion as allowed by Florida Statute section 212.055(6)(b) and 212.055(6)(c) which authorized the referendum.

It cannot be used for stadiums or constructions not related to educational purposes.

Since this is a 10-year commitment, what is the recourse if I do not like how the money is being spent?

The School Board provides for citizen input at all meeting for any concerns to be expressed. Annually, the School Board holds public hearing on its budget and future plans.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. IndyCar leader Dixon signs extension with Ganassi

Scott Dixon will likely finish his career with Chip Ganassi Racing under a new contract for one of IndyCar's greatest drivers.

The extension announced Monday puts Dixon behind the wheel of the PNC Bank-sponsored entry and ends all speculation he'd leave Ganassi after 17 seasons to join Fernando Alonso on a new McLaren team. The McLaren entry has not been announced, but Dixon is among the top IndyCar drivers who had been targeted to team with Alonso.

It's unclear if the McLaren team will come to fruition for 2019, but Dixon will be back behind the wheel of Ganassi's No. 9 Honda.

FLORIDA Former WWE star 'The Anvil' Neidhart dies at 63

Jim "The Anvil" Neidhart, who joined with brother-in-law Bret Hart to form one of the top tag teams in the 1980s with the WWE, has died. He was 63.

The Pasco Sheriff's Office said Neidhart fell at home, hit his head and "succumbed to his injury" on Monday in Wesley Chapel, Florida. No foul play was suspected.

Neidhart's daughter, known as Natalya, wrestles for the WWE and is a former women's champion. Neidhart made appearances with his daughter on the WWE reality series "Total Divas."

"My dad was always a fighter," she wrote in an Instagram post.

Neidhart, Bret "Hitman" Hart and manager Jimmy "The Mouth of the South" Hart made up the Hart Foundation stable in the 1980s and 1990s, and the tag team won two WWE championships.

MINNEAPOLIS Lynx star Whalen to retire from WNBA

Minnesota Lynx star Lindsay Whalen will retire after the WNBA season, ending her stellar 15-year career.

The gritty point guard announced her plans on Monday. She's led the Lynx to four WNBA championships and appeared in six All-Star games.

Whalen has been balancing a new job that begins this fall as the head coach at her alma mater Minnesota. The Lynx won WNBA titles in 2011, 2013, 2015 and 2017.

Whalen was the first player in WNBA history with 5,000 points, 2,000 assists and 1,500 rebounds.

Her legacy in Minnesota has long ago been established, as a native of Hutchinson, leading the Gophers to their only Final Four in 2004.

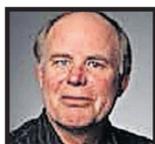

Whalen started her professional career with the Connecticut Sun before being acquired by the Lynx in 2010. With 322 victories and counting, no player in league history has won more games.

Is there a path forward in NFL protests?

Tim Dahlberg

The players kneel. The president tweets.

And the great divide over protests during the national anthem at NFL games grows even wider.

So far the players — at least a handful of them — aren't backing down. A few took a knee in the first weekend of exhibition games, at least two raised a fist during the anthem, and several stayed in the locker room as their way of making a statement.

The NFL reacted by doing nothing, at least publicly. The league's hastily adopted new policy on protests during the anthem is on hold while it holds talks with the players' union on an issue that figures to grow more contentious with every game.

That didn't stop President Donald Trump from weighing in on Twitter, calling for any player who doesn't stand during the national anthem to be suspended without pay.

For Trump, it's an issue that resonates with his base. For the protesting players, it's an issue of social injustice that needs to be raised.

The divide is not only splitting the country, but splintering the NFL.

"I think there are a lot of people that are supportive of the players and then there are a couple of people that have been very vocal against it," said Duane Brown, one of three Seahawks who protested. "Those people have power. We'll see what happens."

What has happened so far is that the protests that began with Colin Kaepernick taking a knee before a 49ers game two seasons ago show no signs of disappearing entirely. If anything, the first preseason games show that while most teams fell in line with the desires of their management, there are some players who aren't going to back down.

And that could cause major problems not only for protesting players but a league trying to keep its dominant place in American sports.

"The NFL is caught, they can't really win either way," said Eric Schiffer, the CEO of Reputation Management Consultants, a Los Angeles-based brand and crisis management firm. "They've now come to the conclusion they were alienating conservatives and attempted to mitigate it. But they have only so much they are able to do without alienating the core of their product, which is the players."

The fact the protests have been turned into something they were never intended to be is a big reason why a resolution will be so difficult. Kaepernick began kneeling during the anthem to protest social injustice against minorities, but Trump and others have portrayed it instead as a protest against the anthem itself and the country it stands for.

Still, an NFL spokesman said the league and the players' union are involved in "constructive" talks to resolve the issue. But they're in a battle with time, with the start of the regular season just a few weeks away.

They might want to start with one of the few good suggestions offered publicly so far. It came from Kenny Stills, the Miami wide receiver who took a knee during the national anthem in the Dolphins first preseason game.

Give Kaepernick and former teammate Eric Reid jobs, Stills said, and let players know you're serious.

"You can't say as a league you support the players and their protests and then blackball the players who initially started the protests," Stills said. "To come to the drawing board and talk about solutions, we need to start there as a league, and then we can start drawing up other solutions to some of these other problems."

Employing Kaepernick and Reid shouldn't be that much of a problem. Both are NFL players at the highest level, and both seem to have been blackballed from the league — at least unofficially — because of their protests.

Offer them up to every team in the league. Waive any salary cap to do it, and there should be some takers.

If no team bites, assign them through a lottery.

After that, it gets easier. Offer players something in exchange for not protesting during the anthem — perhaps a 30-second commercial spot to highlight social injustice at halftime of every nationally televised game.

The guess is players would respond favorably, partly because they have little alternative. By now they surely understand that their original cause has been hijacked and that they — along with the NFL — are in no-win situations.

Their points can still be made, and perhaps find a more receptive audience.

And, just maybe, the tweets will stop.

Keep bribes quiet for 10 years, FIFA won't punish you

By Rob Harris
The Associated Press

LONDON — FIFA has officially eradicated corruption. All it took was pressing the delete key.

Soccer officials and players who bother checking out the new code of ethics governing their conduct will find the word "corruption" missing. They will also discover how to now avoid being banned for paying and receiving bribes.

Corruption was scrubbed as an official misdemeanor during secret meetings where executives executed the first overhaul of the code since a wave of scandals left soccer's governing body "clinically dead" by 2015. That was the hyperbole used by Gianni Infantino during a speech at the World Cup in June boasting of his own apparent achievements cleaning up FIFA.

But in two years as FIFA president, Infantino has been accused of violating governance rules and forcing out officials who threatened his position.

It will be even easier now for FIFA to banish critics.

A new offense has been introduced in the ethics code — defamation. There are no specific examples, providing flexibility for the ethics committee to decide on the burden of proof — as with all cases.

"Persons bound by this code are forbidden from making any public statements of a defamatory nature towards FIFA and/or towards any other person bound by this code in the context of FIFA events," section 22.2 of the new code states.

Those found to have defamed FIFA will be banned from any football-related activities for up to two years and they can be booted out for five years for repeated "serious cases."

The vagueness provides leeway for FIFA, through theoretically independent ethics organs, to punish detractors.

The ethics code was first introduced in 2004 by Sepp Blatter to provide a veneer of probity for an organization abused for personal gain by so many for decades. Of course, Blatter was expelled from the FIFA presidency for financial misconduct in 2015 by the ethics committees he created. Blatter's toppling came amid the fallout from American prosecutors indicting dozens of football officials and entities for corruption — the concept now erased by FIFA from its principle English-language ethics documents.

Bribery is still prohibited in the ethics code, but the ability to prosecute cases has been weakened.

12-Year-Old Boy Returns Wallet, Gets $5 Reward

When Horace Davis lost his wallet here last week, he figured he'd never see it—nor the $39 it contained—again.

He was in for a pleasant surprise because the wallet and its contents were found and returned by a 12-year-old boy. The wallet was one of three reported lost to City Clerk E. B. Warren the same day. The other two, if found, have never been returned to their owners.

Finder of Davis' wallet was Roy Julian Matthias, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Matthias Sr. Young Matthias got a $5 reward for his efforts—and his reputation for honesty was given a well-earned boost, too.

Demo Primary Out, General Election Next

ChIPLEY CITY elections are becoming tame, disinteresting and lacking in color for most voters. The Democratic primaries are, at any rate.

The one scheduled here Tuesday, August 17, promises to be no exception. That may be because the candidates—all incumbent members of the city council—are unopposed for re-election.

The same thing happened last year, when Mayor Euleus Watford and Councilmen E. A. Tharp and Roland Fowler were re-elected without opposition. Only about 40 voters turned out to cast ballots.

School Teachers Named for Vernon, Wausau, Caryville

Vernon High School has a 27-member staff ready to begin pre-school conferences Monday.

Vernon has the second largest school in Washington County, and the only high school in the county, outside of Chipley. A faculty list, issued by Supt. W. T. McFatter Jr., names a staff of six for the Wausau and five for the Caryville Elementary Schools.

Listed for countywide activities with the school program are Ethel C. Thompson, teacher of exceptional children; and Harmond R. Pierce, general school supervisor.

Staffs listed for Vernon High School and Wausau and Caryville Elementary Schools are:

First day of school: success!

By Jacqueline Bostick
The News

WASHINGTON COUNTY — The first day of school was a true one for one newly opened school in Washington County School District.

Washington Academy of Varying Exceptionalities (WAVE) welcomed 46 students from ages 3 to 22. The school is designated for students with different levels of cognitive disabilities and is housed at the former fifth grade wing at Roulhac Middle School.

“It’s gone very smoothly,” said Teacher on Special Assignment Brenda Bausnaw, who has worked at WCS D for 15 years. “It was everything I could ask for on the first day of school, opening a brand new school.”

The school has its own administrator, speech therapist, behavioral specialist, and a number of ESE-dedicated teachers and paraprofessionals.

Bausnaw said the open house held at the campus helped to build a foundation for close parent-teacher relationships, something critical to meeting the needs of her students.

“We want to partner with them and it’s very important to us,” she said, regarding parents of her students. “I’m very passionate about ESE. They touch a very special place in my heart.”

The first-day transition from summer was equally seamless at other schools across the district from transportation to parental cooperation and support, according to Washington County Superintendent Joseph Taylor.

“We had one of the best that I know of for an opening day of school,” he said.

Vernon Elementary School Principal Griffin also pointed to parental participation at orientation as the line of support that made the difference in the start of the school year.

Of about 540 students, about 85-percent attended orientation.

“It’s been very good - I give it an ‘A,’” Griffin said regarding the first day. “It was packed and overflowing, but by 8:30, 45 kids were in class and teachers were teaching.”

“It was a very good start,” he said. “I feel good about and I hope it continues throughout the year.”

Every move you make ...

AP Exclusive: Google tracks your movements, like it or not

By Ryan Nakashima
The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Google wants to know where you go so badly that it records your movements even when you explicitly tell it not to.

An Associated Press investigation found that many Google services on Android devices and iPhones store your location data even if you've used a privacy setting that says it will prevent Google from doing so.

Computer-science researchers at Princeton confirmed these findings at the AP's request.

For the most part, Google is upfront about asking permission to use your location information. An app like Google Maps will remind you to allow access to location if you use it for navigating. If you agree to let it record your location over time, Google Maps will display that history for you in a "timeline" that maps out your daily movements.

Storing your minute-by-minute travels carries privacy risks and has been used by police to determine the location of suspects — such as a warrant that police in Raleigh, North Carolina, served on Google last year to find devices near a murder scene. So the company will let you

"pause" a setting called Location History.

Google says that will prevent the company from remembering where you've been. Google's support page on the subject states: "You can turn off Location History at any time. With Location History off, the places you go are no longer stored."

That isn't true. Even with Location History paused, some Google apps automatically store time-stamped location data without asking. (It's possible, although laborious, to delete it.)

For example, Google stores a snapshot of where you are when you merely open its Maps app. Automatic daily weather updates on Android phones pinpoint roughly where you are. And some searches that have nothing to do with location, like "chocolate chip cookies," or "kids science kits," pinpoint your precise latitude and longitude — accurate to the square foot — and save it to your Google account.

The privacy issue affects some two billion users of devices that run Google's Android operating software and hundreds of millions of worldwide iPhone users who rely on Google for maps or search.

Google says it is being perfectly clear.

"There are a number of different ways that Google may use location to improve people's experience, including: Location History, Web and App Activity, and through device-level Location Services," a Google spokesperson said in a statement to the AP.

To stop Google from saving these location markers, the company says, users can turn off another setting, one that does not specifically reference location information. Called "Web and App Activity" and enabled by default, that setting stores a variety of information from Google apps and websites to your Google account.

How to prevent further tracking

On iOS: If you use Google Maps, adjust your location setting to "While Using" the app; this will prevent the app from accessing your location when it's not active. Go to Settings - Privacy - Location Services and from there select Google Maps to make the adjustment. In the Safari web browser, consider using a search engine other than Google. Under Settings - Safari - Search Engine, you can find other options like Bing or DuckDuckGo. You can turn location off while browsing by going to Settings - Privacy - Location Services - Safari Websites, and turn this to "Never."

On Android: Under the main settings icon click on "Security & location." Scroll down to the "Privacy" heading. Tap "Location." You can toggle it off for the entire device. Use "App-level permissions" to turn off access to various apps. Unlike the iPhone, there is no setting for "While Using." You cannot turn off Google Play services, which supplies your location to other apps if you leave that service on. Sign in as a "guest" on your Android device by swiping down from top and tapping the downward-facing caret, then again on the torso icon.

Turkey currency worries cause stocks to tumble

By Marley Jay
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stocks fell further on Wall Street Monday as Turkey's central bank was unable to stop a steep plunge in that nation's currency. That's helping to push the dollar higher, which hurts big U.S. exporters.

Stocks were coming off their worst losses in a month as investors worried about financial and economic upheaval in Turkey and the possibility it will spread to other countries. Asian markets fell overnight, while European markets were slightly lower.

Global markets skidded Friday as investors worried that financial distress in Turkey could affect the international banking system and the broader economy. Many analysts say that isn't likely, but it's caused sharp losses for stocks.

On Monday Turkey's central bank announced measures to help that country's banks, but the Turkish lira and Turkey's stock market continued to slide.

The U.S. dollar is the strongest it's been in more than a year, which could eventually create problems for U.S. companies that make a lot of sales overseas.

Terry Sandven, chief equity strategist at U.S. Bank Wealth Management, said the dollar has strengthened because economic growth has picked up and other regions aren't doing as well.

"The U.S. is a relative beacon of strength with stable to improving economy. That suggests a stronger dollar," he said.

Energy and industrial companies and basic materials companies took some of the worst losses. Technology companies held up better.

Investors are worried about a confluence of factors including Turkey's reliance on foreign loans, which become more difficult to repay when the country's currency is plunging. Also, a diplomatic spat with the U.S. is resulting in sharply higher tariffs on Turkish steel and aluminum.

After a yearlong stretch where much of the global economy was speeding up together and stocks were rising, the recent losses for Turkey and Argentina have caused emerging market indexes to fall out of favor.

Stocks were on a five-week winning streak before last week, and strong corporate earnings reports were a big factor. But most of those reports are done, and Sandven, of U.S. Bank, said stocks may spend the next two months wavering.

In corporate news, German conglomerate Bayer took a dive after a U.S. jury ruled against its Monsanto unit Friday and awarded $289 million to a former school groundskeeper who said that exposure to Monsanto's Roundup weed killer caused cancer. Monsanto said government agencies and hundreds of studies have concluded Roundup is safe.

Turkey tries to contain crisis but currency keeps falling

By Suzan Fraser
The Associated Press

ANKARA, Turkey — Turkey's central bank took action Monday to free up cash for banks as the country grapples with a currency crisis sparked by concerns over President Recep Tayyip Erdogan's economic policies and a trade and diplomatic dispute with the United States.

The Turkish lira has nosedived over the past week, accelerating a months-long decline, and tumbled another 7 percent on Monday as the central bank's measures failed to restore market confidence.

Investors are worried about a confluence of factors: the country's reliance on foreign loans that may stop flowing in as interest rates rise in other economies, like the U.S.; Erdogan's insistence that the central bank not raise interest rates, as most independent analysts say it should; and a spat with the U.S. that has led to sanctions and the fear of greater isolation from longtime allies in the West.

The uncertainty pushed down world stock markets and briefly caused a sharp drop in the currencies of other emerging countries, like South Africa and India, amid concerns that investors might see similar problems in their economies.

The lira hit a record low of 7.23 per dollar late Sunday after Erdogan remained defiant in his economic policies and the standoff against the United States, a NATO ally.

"Turkey is faced with an economic siege," Erdogan said Monday, in the latest of a series of speeches. "We are taking the necessary steps against these attacks and will continue to do so."

He has threatened to seek new alliances — a veiled hint at closer ties with Russia — and warned of drastic measures if businesses withdraw foreign currency from banks.

It's Chipola's own version of "Saturday Night Live" on a Thursday night. This production contains some adult content. Tickets for the Showcase go on sale Monday, August 20 and are not included in the ACT Fund Membership.

Season memberships for the ACT (Applauding Chipola Theatre) Fund went on sale Monday, August 6. Memberships support the Chipola Theatre program. Membership levels include tickets to all three Chipola productions—"Almost, Maine," "Beauty and the Beast" and "The Wee Sing Train Musical." Membership levels are: Sponsor, $25 (2 tickets); Patron, $50 (4 tickets); Benefactor, $75 (6 tickets); Angel, $100 (8 tickets); and Corporate Angel, $300 (12 tickets). ACT Fund members receive early ticket purchase opportunities and special benefits throughout the season.

The 2018-19 season opens with "Almost, Maine," Thursday, Oct. 18 through Sunday, Oct. 21. "Almost, Maine" is a town that's so far north, it's almost not in the United States — it's almost in Canada. And it almost doesn't exist. Because its residents never got around to getting organized. So it's just Almost. One cold, clear Friday night in the middle of winter, while the northern lights hover in the sky above, Almost's residents find themselves falling in and out of love in the strangest ways. Knees are bruised. Hearts are broken. Love is lost, found, and con-founded. And life for the people of Almost, Maine, will never be the same. It's love, but not quite. Tickets are available at the CFA box office or online beginning Thursday, Oct. 4. ACT Fund members may purchase tickets Thursday, Sept. 27.

The Academy Award-winning film "Disney's Beauty and the Beast" comes to life in this romantic and beloved take on the classic fairy tale Thursday, Feb. 21 through Sunday, Feb. 24. The stage version includes all of the wonderful songs written by Alan Menken and the late Howard Ashman, along with new songs by Menken and Tim Rice.

This "tale as old as time" tells of Belle, a young woman in a provincial town, and the Beast, who is really a young prince trapped under the spell of an enchantress. Tickets go on sale Thursday, Feb. 7, with ACT Fund tickets available Thursday, Jan. 31. The "Be Our Guest!" Reception will be held at 5:30 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 23. This is a special benefit for 2018-19 ACT Fund members only. Guests will enjoy a sweet treat and have the opportunity to meet cast members and take photos

All aboard for fun and adventure on "The Wee Sing Train Musical," Thursday, May 9. Children everywhere will clap, move, and sing along to the exhilarating song and dance numbers of Imagine playing with a toy train and suddenly becoming a passenger. This could only happen with a spark of Wee Sing magic. Casey and Carter have finally finished creating their make-believe land when, magically, they're in it.

"The Wee Sing Train" is a charming way to put kids on the right track. Tickets go on sale Thursday, April 25, with ACT Fund tickets on Thursday, April 18.

Church celebrates 38th Homecoming

Special to The News

Matthew 5:19 says “Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and hath had compassion on thee.” On Sunday, Aug. 19, at 11 a.m., Orange Hill Missionary Baptist Church, 816 Sunday Road, under the pastorate of Rev. Malcolm O. Nelson, will celebrate their 38th annual Homecoming.

This year’s theme is “Reconnecting With Our Christian Roots” (Colossians 2:6-7); reconnecting with the Roots of Faith (Hebrews 11:13), Hope (I Peter 1:3), Love (John 15:17), Belief (I John 5:1), Worship (John 4:23), Obedience (Acts 5:29), etc.

The speaker will be the Rev. Donald Bell, pastor of the Metropolitan Missionary Baptist Church of Pensacola. Besides being the nephew of Thelma Bell Farmer, wife of Rev. Luther V. Farmer, he is the great grandson of Rev. Austin D. Bell, Sr. and Nina Wilson Bell. His great-grandfather, John Bell, a sharecropper, was promised land in Florida if he moved his family to Florida from Oakfield, Georgia, and do farming for his overseer. The Bell family therefore moved to Econfina, a little community on the Bay County line. Eventually the family was given a few acres of their own, so they moved to the southeast portion of Washington County, known as the community of Orange Hill.

Since the time of Reconstruction, 1865 to 1877 following the American Civil War, the Orange Hill Missionary Baptist Church has been serving the Orange Hill community. The 13th Amendment, which abolished slavery in the United States, was passed on December 6th, 1865.

The church was established five years after that amendment in 1870; the first year of the U.S. Census to list all persons including former slaves as persons. While the famous Fisk Jubilee Singers were forming on the Fisk University campus in Nashville, Tennessee OHMBC was worshipping and working the works of God in Florida.

The Gospel song writer, Fanny J. Crosby, had just written her famous hymns “Pass Me Not, O Gentle Savior” (1868) “Jesus Keep Me Near the Cross” (1869), and “Rescue The Perishing” (1870) that we still sing our church services today. Recently a church steeple was placed upon the church. The church steeple directs our attention upwards and the end result, hopefully, will be that we are drawn to God and as Jesus said “And I, when I am lifted up from the earth, will draw all people to myself” (John 12:32).

The cross atop is drawing people to Christ; that we might have a heavenly frame of mind upon coming into worship.

Out of Orange Hill sprung the Mt. Ararat Missionary Baptist Church and from them the Jerusalem Missionary Baptist Church.

The first Pastor of Orange Hill was Rev. James Cady from Jackson County. The following pastors have been: Rev. Webb, Rev. Benjamin, Rev. Green, Rev. Gipson, Rev. Linsay, Rev. B. A. Allen, Rev. Blount, Rev. Woods, Rev. Joseph Young, Rev. Jessie Ward, Rev. Jefferson, Rev. Sam Cherry, Rev. Adolphus McLaughlin, Rev. James Johns (longest serving pastor) and the current pastor Rev. Malcolm O. Nelson.

At one point in its rich history the Church gave the Washington County School System one of their 20 acres of land to build a public school for black children in the community.

After the schools were consolidated in Washington County, the school board gave the acre of land back. During Black History Month this historic church celebrated the 50th Anniversary of the closing of T.J. (Thomas Joseph) Roulhac High School (1938-1968); “End of An Era”. Fifty years ago the doors of the beloved T.J. Roulhac High School were closed.

It marked the end of an era of a unique education. With “hand me down books” and second rate materials the students of old TJ Roulhac High received a first rate education. OHMBC certainly is a church on the move, with a message and a mission: “A charge to keep, a God to glorify to serve the present age, our calling to fulfill to do our Master’s will.”

All are invited to join in the celebration on Sunday, Aug. 19 at 11 a.m. There will be a fellowship dinner following morning worship.

TIP OF THE WEEK

MAKE TIME FOR FAMILY

With our busy lifestyles, finding time to meet with our families to enjoy meals can be a major challenge.

Actress, host, food lover and mom Courtney Lopez and Egglard's Best recommend that you make it a team effort. "Getting kids involved in the kitchen could help develop healthy habits for the future. Give them simple, safe tasks to keep them busy," says Lopez.

EASY RECIPE

CRAB CAKES

In need of a healthy summer meal idea? Try these crab cakes recommended by Johns Hopkins Medicine.

- 1 pound crabmeat

- 2 egg whites

- 1/3 cup finely chopped red bell pepper

- 1/3 cup finely chopped green onions

- 1/3 cup chopped fresh parsley

- 3 tablespoons bread crumbs

Shred crabmeat. Mix with all other ingredients. Form into eight patties. Refrigerate for an hour.

Spray a nonstick pan with cooking spray. Heat to medium high and carefully place crab cakes in pan. Let cook for five minutes undisturbed so crust forms. Turn carefully and cook for another five minutes.

TASTE OF TRAVEL

Luxurious London

Markets, music and meals provide a feast for the senses

England's longest river, the Thames, led me to the bridge I knew only from a beloved childhood nursery rhyme. "London Bridge is falling down, falling down, falling down ..."

Contrary to the singing game, it is not made of pastel confections that could collapse on a fair damsel, but is an impressive steel-and-concrete structure that carries cars and pedestrians across the river by the thousands. I crossed this iconic bridge in the direction of one of the oldest and largest markets in London, Borough Market, a popular place to peruse London's culinary highlights in the form of a one-stop shopping experience.

Sausage baps and Balkan bites may be foreign to me, but pies I know, and suddenly, I stood in front of a glass case filled with an assortment of perfectly crisp crusts over an appealing bulge of ingredients. I was drawn to Pieminister's Deerstalker Pie: chunks of local venison with dry-cured bacon, red wine and Puy lentils. Matador Pie was filled with British beef, spicy chorizo, olives and butter beans. I longed to take one home and bake it.

I was, however, on my way to stay at the five-star St. Pancras Renaissance Hotel London, a glamorous Gothic-revival building that also serves as a train station (handy for catching my connection to Paris the next day). The grandeur of the lobby/terminal was filled with the intoxicating aroma of hundreds of orchids; they were everywhere.

To reach my room, I passed wrought-iron balustrades and original gaslights. Up the grand staircase was a vaulted ceiling adorned with twinkling stars and illustrations of the Seven Virtues: Chastity, Temperance, Charity, Diligence, Patience, Kindness and Humility. Once at the top, it became evident why this staircase is considered the most majestic in England. Inside my room, I opened the drapes and a view of the bustling train station below was revealed.

I was on sensory overload, and calmed my mind with a soak in the room's oversized tub, while daydreaming about what life might be like in High Victorian times. I dressed and headed downstairs to discover the hotel's Chambers Club. For an upcharge, this section provides access to a "members only" area for breakfast, light afternoon tea and pre-dinner canapés. The Chambers Club offers a la carte lunch and dinner, as well as a menu of Champagnes and premium wines.

That evening, however, I chose to

Ratatouille-Stuffed Aubergine with Chevre

- 2 medium eggplants (aubergines), halved and brushed lightly with olive oil
- 1 red pepper, 1 yellow pepper, 1 large zucchini and 2 stalks celery, cut into small dice
- 4 oz. soft, fresh chevre (goat cheese)
- Micro Basil leaves, for garnish

Grill eggplants until softened, then scoop out most of the pulp and puree for 45 seconds; retain the outer portion (skin).

Meanwhile, sauté together the diced vegetables in a bit of olive oil until soft, then toss them with the eggplant puree and mound the mixture back into the eggplant skins.

While dish is still warm, crumble 2 oz. goat cheese over each eggplant half and garnish with Micro Basil.

dine at the Booking Office Bar and Restaurant, formerly the train station ticket office circa 1862. Under the restaurant's vaulted ceiling, live jazz was performed, best listened to with a glass of Billy Dawson Victorian punch, whose 1800s recipe is replicated from the very first "punch bar" in London. This tasty elixir combines Thailand cognac and Jamaican rum, aged in barrels made of coconut husk.

Dinner follows suit in high style, plus British-style service and attention to detail, right down to the etched glasses and the best ... truffle chips ... ever. I started with a British tradition of Scotch eggs. How they manage a soft-boiled interior coated with a warm and crisp exterior is a marvel. I then indulged in a perfectly cooked London broil (what else?) with a flavorful eggplant accompaniment. I was so ready for slumber after that hearty meal.
