School Board approves budget, decreases millage

CHIPLEY - Eyeing the horizon for future funding of new and current projects, Washington County School Board still did not budge on its decision to decrease its property tax levy. However, the amount of the decrease was debated at a recent final budget hearing.

At the final hearing held Monday evening to approve the tentative millage and budget, the School Board voted down Superintendent Joseph Taylor's recommendation to decrease the capital expense millage rate to 1.25 mills - a quarter less than the maximum amount of 1.5 mills, which the district has usually held.

However, after School Board member Milton Brown made the motion to approved Taylor's recommendation, School Board members Terry Ellis and Dr. Lou Cleveland were silent, causing the vote to die for lack of a second. School Board member Vann Brock was absent at the meeting.

"My personal opinion is it's too early to be taking a further hit on the millage rate," Ellis said. "I think the needs are going to be there - especially if we're going to continue to have student growth. It would be better to hold the line in the reduction of over the last few years. Let's see what we can do to move forward - not just to the line and tread water."

In addition to stating that the half-cent sales tax monies should be used for "enhancements ... rather than going towards supplanting what we could've done maintenance wise with our 1.5 mills," Ellis pointed out the state required millage rate has decreased by about 1.5 mills over the course of three years.

'This is for our future'

CHIPLEY - In the short time since school has started at the newly opened Washington Academy of Varying Exceptionalities, four-year-old Lilith has learned how to say quite a few words.

"She doesn't really talk yet, but coming here, she has learned to say 'more' in sign language, she says thank you," said Lilith's mother Melissa Nowell.

"She is progressing more," she added.

Nowell's excitement about the new school is a testament of the impact of the School Board's decision to open a school designed to meet the needs of students with a range of abilities.

Washington County Chamber of Commerce held a ribbon-cutting on Monday afternoon for the new school, which is housed at the former 5th grade wing of Roulhac Middle School.

The event also served as a moment of gratitude from school district officials.

"This is for our future," said Superintendent Joseph Taylor. "This is something the district wanted for our own community, for our own needs, for our students' needs more than anything else."

Washington County School Board Chairwoman Susan Roberts gleefully cuts the ribbon Monday afternoon during a ceremony hosted by Washington County Chamber of Commerce in honor of the opening of Washington Academy for Varying Exceptionalities.

"When we talked about this in the beginning of the summer, it was like 'well, we're looking at maybe 30,' but now we're sitting her with 52 students," he said. "Obviously there's a need here. It benefits the students and the family."

In addition to adding new students to the program, the school offers a qualitative learning environment for optimal academic and social and behavioral success.

The school has its own administrator, speech therapist, behavioral specialist, and a number of ESE-dedicated teachers and paraprofessionals.

Each classroom has an interactive touch-screen board and five computer stations.

Narcotics operation leads to multiple arrests

Staff report

CHIPLEY - A recent undercover narcotics operation has led to multiple arrests in Washington County. A number of suspects are still being sought after. "During this operation, we maintained a focus on those who are dealing drugs within Washington County," Sheriff Kevin Crews said in a statement. "Not only are we effectively removing dealers from the streets, who are continuously preying on the vulnerability of those battling addiction, we have also experienced a significant decline in overall crime rates as a result."

The Washington County Drug Task Force, a collaborative team of law enforcement officers from the Washington County Sheriff's Office and Chipley Police Department, spent the last few months working several undercover cases within the county, according to the WCSO news release.

The collaborative effort sends the signal that local law enforcement is committed to ensuring the county is "a safe county to live, work, and raise our children in," the release stated.

Dunn's Veterans STEM Education Bill passes Senate Commerce Committee

Office of Congressman
Neal Dunn

WASHINGTON, DC - Congressman Neal Dunn's (FL-02) legislation to expand veterans' job and educational opportunities in the sciences passed the U.S. Senate Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation. Senator Dean Heller (NV) introduced companion legislation in the Senate similar to Dr. Dunn's bill. Dr. Dunn's bill, H.R. 4323, Supporting Veterans in STEM Careers Act, passed out of committee with minor changes authored by Chairman John Thune (SD).

"Our veterans deserve every opportunity to succeed when they enter civilian life and this important legislation is a step in the right direction by expanding educational and job opportunities for our heroes. With the surge in technology over the last decade, we desperately need more experts in the science and math fields. Our veterans are equipped to take on this challenge and many have already worked in the technology field while serving our country," said Dr. Dunn. "Thank you to Senator Heller for working with me on this important legislation and getting it one step closer to President Trump's desk."

The Supporting Veterans in STEM Careers Act requires the National Science Foundation (NSF) to develop a veterans outreach plan and publish data on veterans' participation in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM) fields in its annual "Indicators" report. The bill updates the NSF Noyce Teacher Scholarship program, fellowship program, and cyber grant programs to include outreach to veterans. Additionally, the bill tasks the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy with examining how to increase veteran participation in STEM career fields.

The Supporting Veterans in STEM Careers Act is cosponsored by House Science, Space, and Technology Committee Chairman Lamar Smith (TX-21), as well as several veterans who serve on the committee, including Reps. Barry Loudermilk (GA-11), Mark Takano (CA-41), Jim Banks (IN-03), Brian Babin (TX-36), Ralph Abraham (LA-05), Steve Knight (CA-25), and Roger Marshall (KS-01).

However, Taylor rebutted Ellis' statement, reminding the board the state required rate does not reflect a conscious decision by the School Board and is only the result of the decline in property value.

"We haven't done anything," Taylor said. "We've done what the state has told us to do. The state has said this is what you levied. I don't want us to take credit for something we haven't done."

Brown articulated his support for the decreased 1.25 mills under the School Board's repeated assurance to voters to decrease millage rates if they were to vote in favor of the Half-Cent Sales Tax - which passed Aug. 28 referendum with 2,646 votes or 58-percent of the vote and 1,931 against.

"I agree with all of that, I agree with the need, and I've agreed with it all along as far as not cutting back," Brown said. "However, it was stated we'd take a serious look at it and my fear is that people might say 'well, we supported the half-cent sales tax' based on what might've been said at some of the meetings."

"I don't want people think we're changing things," he added.

After hearing the breakdown of millages from Director of Finance Lucy Carmichael and the dying of the first motion for 1.25 mills, Superintendent Taylor made a new recommendation of 1.35 mills.

With Brown making the motion, and a second from Ellis, the motion passed unanimously.

"I was fine with the decrease, I was afraid decreasing it to the 1.25 was a little bit too much," she said, noting she had previously inquired about reducing the rate by a tenth, but had not received a clear answer.

"I didn't want us to get into our five-year plan of what we have to build and then not have the money to do it because we decreased the millage rate - and then we have to raise it," Cleveland added. "My concern was can we sustain that over the years."

She said she was satisfied with the 1.35 mills, that "it was a reduction that we can sustain."

The .10 increase in recommended millage equals about $134,000 in tax revenue. The breakdown of the School Board's total millage of 6.2900 is as follows: required local effort - 4.1920, discretionary operating - 0.7480, local capital improvement - 1.3500.

Trailing at the end of the millage discussion and vote, the board approved the tentative district budget at $88,276,881.36 with $39,667,731.46 under the general fund and $3,119,922.33 for capital projects.

Also at the meeting, the School Board learned it will not be able to move forward with building ADA complaint restrooms at the stadium. A geo-technician report showed "bad dirt," which would cost the district $61,500 at minimum to dig out and replace. The board scheduled a workshop to discuss the way forward to be held 3 p.m. Tuesday.

Although the school is self-contained, there are opportunities for middle and high school students to interact with their peers outside of the school during lunch and, for some, elective classes.

One recent milestone occurred last week when Teacher on Special Assignment Brenda Bausnaw took students to qualify for the Special Olympics. She said the group will compete against students at Hope School in Marianna.

"We just keep growing and growing," Bausnaw said. "We're excited, the students are excited."

Monday's event was nothing short of a celebration. WAVE student Miranda, 14, played with and followed her little sister Lilith, as the little one energetically ran around and tugged at her mother's gray tank top shirt that read "A proud autism mom" on the outer edges of a colorful heart-shaped puzzle - a symbol of autism. Eventually, they ended up in Ms.

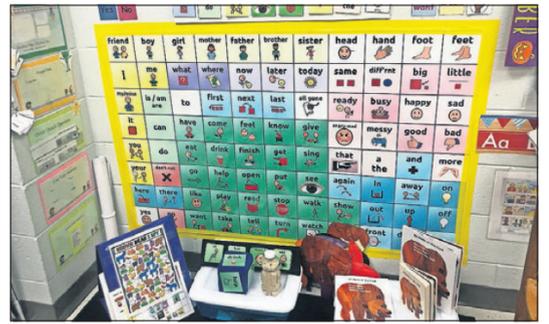

Linda Mincey's pre-K classroom.

"We're replacing a non-communication system with a communication system," Mincey said, pointing at various words on a poster board that give students the ability to communicate how they feel and what they would like to do. "Boards are everywhere in the classroom. Everything we do revolves around the communication system."

Mincey said WAVE is effective because it unites resources and individuals who have confidence in "a like-minded system to help individuals with special needs." She said it is amazing to have a communication system now, because that had not always been available.

As a teacher for 17 years in the school district, Mincey said the opening of WAVE came "full-circle," referencing a former student she taught several years ago, who was non-verbal, is now a senior student at the new school.

"And he's talking to me now, he remembers me," she said with tears in the wells of her eyes. "He comes in every morning. And it's special."

Students learn to communicate their needs using this interactive board in Ms. Linda Mincey's pre-K class at Washington Academy for Varying Exceptionalities. The school had a ribbon-cutting ceremony Monday afternoon hosted by Washington County Chamber of Commerce in honor of its opening.

Decline of bees a major threat

Researchers and government officials have pondered the unfortunate decline in “pollinators,” the term that applies to honeybees and other types of bees as well as birds, butterflies, lizards and other creatures we tend to not think about but are vitally important to our survival.

In May 2016, the National Conference of State Legislatures (NCSL) noted in a report that pollinators are a $24 billion cog in the U.S. economy, with some $15 billion attributable just to honey bees. Roughly one of every three mouthfuls we take results in some way from honey bee production, the report said.

Yet the population of these important links in the food chain is declining. The NCSL reported the number of bee colonies has plunged from 6 million colonies in 1947 to 2.5 million now.

The decrease, according to the NCSL, is blamed on a number of factors — with insufficient diets, mites, habitat loss, disease and pesticides topping the list. A phenomenon known as colony collapse disorder — wherein worker bees suddenly left the hive — also was pegged as a culprit.

But the U.S. Department of Agriculture said it has waned within the last five years. Skeptics also point out, citing USDA data, that managed honey bee colony populations have remained stable for the past two decades.

Still, as the NCSL notes, “The health of bees and other pollinators is an important and growing concern among state legislatures. At least 18 states have enacted legislation on this topic in recent years. Legislation generally falls into one of five categories: research, pesticides, habitat protection, awareness and beekeeping.”

Florida is not among them, but perhaps it should be.

Agriculture, of course, is a critical component of our economy, and bees are important to sustain it. But beekeeping also is rapidly becoming a pastime. In July 2017, the South Florida Sun-Sentinel reported there were 4,400 state-registered “backyard” beekeepers, which was five times the number of a decade earlier, and that the number of managed colonies had rocketed from 158,000 to 520,000.

More bees are good for all, and we need to make sure they remain healthy.

That is what the actor Chuck Norris, himself a beekeeper, is trying to do. In recent pieces about the fate of bees, Norris points out that hobbyists like himself are helping augment an increasingly threatened wild bee population. He noted the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency is reviewing the use of certain insecticides to determine their effect on bee population decline, and that Monsanto and Walmart seek to corner the robotic bee market in anticipation of the trend continuing.

We don’t need to overreact. But all of us, including our policymakers, should take more of an interest in bee health. Albeit important to the livelihood of folks who manage bees and sell honey from their hives, bees make life better for all of us. Let’s keep it that way.

ANOTHER VIEW

Are we headed for a constitutional crisis?

By Mark L. Hopkins

Every week that passes it seems that we read yet another major issue with our president and the operation of our government. This past week, we had the publication of Bob Woodward’s book, “Fear,” that called activities in the White House chaotic and the president, “unbalanced.” Many top officials were quoted, lending credence to Woodward’s findings.

Later in the week there was an op-ed published in the New York Times that was supposedly written by a White House insider who said there were several close to the president who were attempting to deal with the erratic actions of the president in order to protect the country.

The talking heads on the TV news shows say that (choose one) 1) such behavior by White House staff personnel is treasonous; 2) The groundwork is being laid for impeachment by Congress; 3) We are headed for a major “Constitutional crisis.” The crisis they are talking about is a direct confrontation between the Executive branch of the government with the Legislative and Judicial branches.

So, are we headed for a Constitutional crisis? The answer is a resounding “YES.” However, it won’t be as debilitating as the talking heads think. This isn’t a “first” for us. We have had many Constitutional crises over the years and have weathered every one. Our Constitution was born in crisis. It was written in secret and in violation of the existing document, the Articles of Confederation, at a time when we didn’t even have a president.

Many of our founding fathers were skeptical that this new democracy could even exist for more than a few years. After all, this was a government without precedent in the history of the world. It was just a theory advanced by the ancient Greeks. Benjamin Franklin wasn’t sure it could work at all. Alexander Hamilton wondered whether Washington should be appointed King. Thomas Jefferson, our first Secretary of State and third president, wasn’t even sure of the constitutionality of his own Louisiana Purchase. The wheels of government had just started to turn when the details of running a government reared their ugly heads. Somehow the devil is always in the details.

The current crisis has its foundation in the limitation of the power of the presidency. From time to time in our history, a president will be elected who envisions himself as having more power than the office is allowed by the Constitution. When that occurs trouble quickly follows.

The framers of the Constitution did not envision an all-powerful presidency. When they were writing our Constitution, they looked closely at the monarchies of Europe and decided they did not want a king like George of England or Louis XVI of France. Instead, the powers of the government were centered in Congress and our forefathers designed a relatively weak presidency, an administrative post to carry out the will of Congress. That means that any president has limitations on what he/she can do from the White House.

Our last two presidents had to resort to executive orders to get anything done because our two political parties have forgotten how to work together thus creating gridlock in Congress. In the recent past conflict seems the order of the day in Congress. We have a president with “possibilities,” who is caught up in that conflict.

So, are we headed into a Constitutional crisis? Oh, yes. We get one of those about every decade. But, our Constitution can handle ambiguity and it can handle change. It has flexibility. As written, it is a set of principles not a code of laws. We just have to remember to live by those principles. And, it is perfectly capable of handling conflict at the highest levels.

McCain’s best legacy

Arthur Cyr

U.S. Senator John McCain (R-AZ), Vietnam War hero and POW, 2008 Republican presidential nominee, committed but pragmatic conservative legislator, has concluded a remarkable career with the grace of his departure. He was hardly a saint, but unlike many politicians — and other people — never pretended to be one.

Senator McCain was at his most eloquent when under duress. For example, while in the Hanoi Hilton prison in Vietnam, he refused any special privilege even though tortured by North Vietnamese captors. He was at his best when he went out of his way to praise rival Democratic presidential candidate Senator Barack Obama (D-IL), and when he lost that election and called for national unity.

McCain was at his most inspiring at the end; facing death, he praised our great country and the opportunities Americans enjoy. During McCain’s life, he could be angry, confrontational, rough and sarcastic, but not at the important times when behavior most mattered.

Finally, he was not a hater. Famously, in the intense 2008 presidential campaign he corrected a woman clearly highly upset regarding Democratic presidential nominee Barack Obama. She declared that she could not trust Obama, “an Arab.”

Without hesitation, McCain defended his election campaign opponent as “a good family man, a citizen” who was on the other side of policy and political fences. That was an exemplary act.

Senator McCain was extremely active in both domestic and foreign policy arenas. Regarding the former, he and Senator Russ Feingold (D-WI) cosponsored bipartisan legislation to try to rein in the influence of money in politics. He was also extremely engaged in immigration reform, a complex subject that involves both domestic and foreign policy dimensions. Arguably, he was most effective on a sustained basis in foreign policy.

Influential and prolific journalist Max Boot, an expert on foreign and especially defense policies, served as an adviser in McCain’s 2008 presidential campaign. Boot has written an analysis of Senator McCain’s legacy in The Washington Post that stands out in the flood of current commentaries about this important leader. Above all, he praises the man’s sheer physical courage. Additionally, he emphasizes an authenticity that contrasts with other politicians, past and present.

He describes Senator McCain’s serious, sustained study and knowledge of history. While they were both on a flight to the Munich Security Conference, he found McCain focused on reading a challenging history book, for education and not for show.

Up until a few decades ago, the vulgarity and simple-mindedness of what is termed “reality” television excluded such programming from major media. Now, reality TV is mainstream, and reality TV personalities are in our national and presidential politics, and now in the White House. That trend stands out as disturbing for our nation.

In complete contrast in terms of commitment and purposes, declared 2016 presidential candidates included four military veterans: Former Governor Jim Gilmore (R-VA), Senator Lindsey Graham (R-SC), Governor Rick Perry (R-TX), and former Senator Jim Webb (D-VA), a highly decorated Vietnam combat veteran.

Chipley resident issues $75k bad check, arrested

Porter

CHIPLEY - A recent $75,000 bad check has bounced a Chipley resident back into the hands of law enforcement.

Tyler Porter, 35, who listed an address of 855 Hwy. 277 in Chipley, was arrested Aug. 31 in Washington County on a warrant out of Bay County for grand theft of over $100,000, issuing worthless checks and scheming to defraud a financial institution.

According to the Panama City Police Department arrest affidavit, Porter knowingly gave a $75,000 worthless check to the branch manager at the 23rd Street Suntrust Bank from his personal checking account at People's South Bank - in which he had less than $2,000.

His Suntrust account was already $36,875.97 in the negative.

"The defendant lied to the branch manager that the funds were available in his People's South account, and requested immediate access to the deposited funds in his Suntrust account," the affidavit states. "The defendant immediately made a series of wire transfers and withdrawals which again brought his account into the negative," leaving his account balance at $103,023.91 overdrawn.

Porter gave several stories on why he couldn't repay the money, however, "those stories have been debunked and the defendant has further refused to cooperate" with the bank, the affidavit states.

Calls to Porter for comment were not returned Monday or by press time Tuesday. According to court records, Porter's bonds totaled $80,000 and he was released after posting a surety bond. His next court appearance is set for Oct. 2 for first arraignment in Bay County.

This isn't the first time Porter has faced a bad check allegation for a large sum.

According to officials in Mississippi and an affidavit, there is an active investigation there into a March 2 check for $107,222 Porter drew at Suntrust Bank "for the purpose of obtaining money from Lonnie Alton Roberts at a time when he knew he did not have sufficient funds on deposit."

On June 4, an affidavit by Roberts and Justice of Court of Clerk in Greene County stated Porter had attempted to intimidate Roberts in order to influence Roberts' testimony against him. The State of Mississippi Greene County Justice Court confirmed last month that law enforcement was continuing to investigate that case.

Porter attended high school in Marianna but was arrested after authorities said he made a series of bomb threats to the school - including one on Sept. 11, 2001, the day hijacked jets were flown into the World Trade Center in the deadliest terrorist attack ever on U.S. soil, according to a News Herald story from Sept. 14, 2001.

Though he was initially ordered to serve five years in prison, the Department of Corrections sent him to a boot camp and he was released in June 2002, according to records. In October 2006, after he violated probation in 2004 and was ordered to serve eight years in state prison, the District Court of Appeals sided with his appeal on the grounds that he had completed his requirements as a youthful offender and therefore could not be punished as an adult.

Court rejects school proposal, keeps dog-racing ban on ballot

By Lloyd Dunklebrger
News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE - Florida voters will get a chance in November to ban commercial greyhound racing but will not vote on a measure that could have led to the expansion of charter schools, the Florida Supreme Court decided in a series of rulings on Friday.

In all, the state's highest court decided the fate of four proposed constitutional amendments slated for the Nov. 6 general-election ballot.

The court: --- Approved Amendment 13, which would ban commercial greyhound racing in the state after Dec. 31, 2020.

--- Rejected Amendment 8, which would have imposed term limits on school board members, required civic literacy to be taught in schools and taken away the exclusive power of local school boards to oversee charter schools.

--- Approved Amendment 6, known as "Marsy's Law," that would create a series of constitutional rights for crime victims and would also increase the retirement age for judges.

--- Approved Amendment 10, which would require all local constitutional officers, including sheriffs, to be elected, and would remove the ability of charter counties to modify those offices.

All of the proposed amendments under scrutiny were approved by the Florida

Constitution Revision Commission, a 37-member panel that meets every 20 years and has the unique power to place constitutional changes directly on the ballot.

The most significant ruling came in a 4-3 decision removing Amendment 8 from the ballot.

Without issuing an immediate opinion, the divided court upheld a ruling from Leon County Circuit Judge John Cooper that found the school-related ballot measure was misleading because it failed to inform voters of the "chief purpose and effect" of the proposal.

The proposal was challenged by the League of Women Voters of Florida, which argued that a provision in the amendment that would allow the state to operate and control public schools "not established by the school board" would have led to the expansion of charter schools.

Supporters of the measure said it would expand educational choices in Florida and was aimed at overturning a 2008 appellate court decision that found the Legislature's creation of a statewide commission to authorize charter schools was unconstitutional.

The court will issue a full opinion later. But in Friday's split decision, justices Barbara Pariente, R. Fred Lewis, Peggy Quince and Jorge Labarga voted to affirm Cooper's ruling. Chief Justice Charles Canady and justices Ricky Polston and Alan Lawson voted to overturn the lower court's decision.

Patricia Brigham, president of the League of Women Voters, praised Friday's court ruling, saying it removed "a proposal that was blatantly and intentionally misleading."

"The backers of this proposal on the CRC went to great lengths to hide the ball because they realized that Floridians would never knowingly forfeit their right to local control over their local public schools," she said.

But Erika Donalds, a CRC member and Collier County School Board member who helped craft the measure, said students and parents "lost today."

"Florida voters deserved to decide on Amendment 8, not activist judges," she tweeted. "Defenders of the education monopoly prevailed this time, but we will continue to fight for education."

In a separate 6-1 decision, the Supreme Court upheld the placement of a greyhound-racing ban on the ballot, overturning a ruling by Leon County Circuit Judge Karen Gievers, who found Amendment 13's ballot title and summary --- which is what voters see --- was misleading.

The justices rejected the argument that the proposed amendment was deceptive since it would not actually ban all dog racing because it would allow non-commercial racing, and off-track wagering on dog races in other states, to continue.

"The ballot language accurately describes the scope of Amendment 13 as being limited to racing of dogs in connection with wagering," the majority opinion said.

Quince, the sole dissenter, wrote that the ballot proposal was "clearly and conclusively defective" since it did not fully explain its potential impact on other gambling activity in the state, including facilities with slot machines that were authorized contingent on dog racing.

The Yes on 13 Campaign, which supports the proposed amendment, hailed the high court decision.

"This ridiculous challenge was a desperate attempt to prevent voters from having a voice on whether greyhound confinement and deaths should continue," the group said in a statement.

In another 4-3 decision issued without an immediate opinion, the Supreme Court upheld Amendment 6, which would create a variety of constitutional rights for crime victims.

Opponents, including defense lawyers, had argued the ballot language was misleading because it did not fully explain the potential impact on the rights of Floridians accused of crimes.

Chief Justice Canady and Justices Polston, Labarga and Lawson voted to overturn a ruling Gievers, who found the ballot measure was misleading. Justices Pariente, Lewis and Quince voted to affirm the lower court decision.

Greg Ungru, head of the Marsy's Law for Florida group, said he was pleased the court found the ballot language to be "fair and accurate."

"The decision will give voters the opportunity to decide if they believe our state Constitution should provide victims of crime with rights and protections equal to those already afforded the accused and convicted," Ungru said.

But Howard Simon, executive director of the ACLU of Florida, said he was "disappointed" by the court's ruling on Amendment 6.

"The amendment would upset the balance between the rights of victims and people accused of crimes by deleting part of our Constitution that balances the rights of everyone involved in a criminal case," Simon said.

In other action, the Supreme Court unanimously upheld Amendment 10, rejecting a challenge from Volusia, Broward and Miami-Dade counties.

The proposed amendment would make five constitutional offices -- sheriff, tax collector, supervisor of elections, clerk of the courts and property appraiser -- mandatory and require all of the offices to be elected in each of the state's 67 counties. It would also prohibit charter counties from abolishing or modifying those offices.

Chipley Chief of Police Scott Thompson said he is happy with the conclusion of the operation.

"Cases like these do not stop at the arrest, the damage created by drug abuse goes much further than a criminal record," he said in the statement. "We are working every day to provide a safer and healthier community to raise our families in."

This investigation follows multiple "roundups" that have been conducted since Sheriff Kevin Crews took office in 2018, the release stated.

A closer look at this convenience-enabling phenomenon suggests it was just a matter of time before sales took off.

A simple solution for Americans of all ages -- seniors in particular -- Martha & Marley Spoon is perfect for those who want to enjoy healthy, nutritious and fresh dinners in just 30 minutes a day. Martha & Marley Spoon sends Martha Stewart's trusted recipes and fresh, pre-portioned ingredients directly to your door.

Unlike other meal kit companies, Martha & Marley Spoon works with award-winning producers and purveyors so that you get fresh, healthy, and delicious ingredients in every meal.

Best of all, ingredients go from the farm to your table (instead of spending 2 weeks in a truck traveling to local supermarkets), food waste is reduced (Americans waste 187 pounds of fresh produce annually), and you can save hundreds of dollars per year (Americans throw away $24 billion in produce alone each year).

Martha-Approved Meals In 30 Minutes A Day

The Martha & Marley Spoon culinary team is led by 14-year industry veteran Jennifer Aaronson, who earned her chops in the test kitchens of Martha Stewart Living.

Aaronson has condensed decades of experience into a once-weekly "meal kit" that lets consumers make delicious, restaurant-quality meals in just 30 minutes a day and at a fraction of the cost of eating out -- without planning, shopping, or kitchen stress.

With Martha & Marley Spoon, consumers eat delicious dinners, break bread with loved ones, and feel better about what they're eating.

Best of all is the simplicity of the service.

First, consumers choose from Martha's delicious 30-40 minute recipes. There are 7 new dishes and 3 customer favorites available each week, many of which come from the thousands of recipes Martha Stewart has shared through her television shows, books, magazines, and website over the years.

The team sends the recipes, along with all of the pre-portioned ingredients needed to cook them, directly to customers' doors in a chilled, insulated box. By delivering the exact quantities, there's never any food waste or half-used ingredients rotting in the back of the fridge.

Fans of the product love that all they have to do is cook, relax, and enjoy the experience. Each recipe takes around 30 minutes, which enables households to eat well and have plenty of time for other important things.

As Martha says, "Save time to make time for everything else you want to do."

Why Americans Are Raving About This "Dinner in a Box"

The Associated Press calls Martha & Marley Spoon "the best meal kit," and the company has been featured in the New York Times, USA Today, Fortune, The Today Show, and more. In June alone, news of the service was covered by over 157 media outlets, seen and heard more than 600 million times.

What sets this meal kit service apart? We've boiled it down to 7 simple reasons:

- 1. Trusted, time-tested recipes. While other companies offer unproven meal options, Martha & Marley Spoon sends you the best of Martha's 18,000+ recipes, so every meal you cook is a winner.

NASCAR THIS WEEK

LAS VEGAS

THREE THINGS TO WATCH

1. Sweet 16

The NASCAR Cup Series regular season ended a day late because of rain at Indianapolis Motor Speedway, but produced a 16-driver playoff field. The drivers going through are: Kyle Busch, Kevin Harvick, Martin Truex Jr., Brad Keselowski, Clint Bowyer, Joey Logano, Kurt Busch, Chase Elliott, Ryan Blaney, Erik Jones, Austin Dillon, Kyle Larson, Denny Hamlin, Aric Almirola, Jimmie Johnson and Alex Bowman.

2. Rising, falling

After winning back-to-back NASCAR "crown jewel" events with the Southern 500 and Brickyard 400, Keselowski has suddenly emerged as a championship contender. Crew chief Paul Wolfe used pit strategy to help secure the wins. "He (Wolfe) gave me the ball, and I had to make a play," Keselowski said. Truex finished last at Indy. "Hopefully we'll get this bad luck out of the way before the playoffs start next week," he said.

3. Stewart's four

Of all the teams in the NASCAR Cup Series, Stewart-Haas Racing has the edge as far as pure numbers. SHR saw all four of its drivers make the playoffs, led by Kevin Harvick, who has a series-high eight wins.

As a team, SHR scooped up 11 regular-season victories. Almirola advanced into the playoffs on points. Joe Gibbs Racing and Hendrick Motorsports each pushed three drivers into the postseason.

INDIANAPOLIS

THREE THINGS WE LEARNED

1. Kyle's championship

Kyle Busch captured the NASCAR Cup Series regular-season title, 15 bonus points, and got a trophy. He was not happy finishing eighth at Indy. "Ugly day," Busch said before the award presentation. "That's not what we were hoping for; grand scheme, cool to get bonus points."

Kyle Busch, who drives the No. 18 Toyota, had a rough day at Indianapolis but earned NASCAR's regular-season title. [AP/AJ MAST]

2. Late cautions

Two cautions over the last 16 laps helped Brad Keselowski overtake Denny Hamlin for the win. Hamlin was not happy. He said the yellow flags were shown for "meaningless guys who wrecked." Hamlin got into the playoffs on points.

3. Tough brakes

It's rare to see multiple brake-system failures, but Indy produced two that caused the yellow flag to come out of the holster. Martin Truex Jr. and Bubba Wallace each had brakes come apart. Truex maintained control of his car, but Wallace crashed hard into the outside wall.

QUESTIONS & ATTITUDE

Compelling questions ... and maybe a few actual answers

Is Kasey Kahne done, and how big of an issue is it?

Kahne already announced this would be his last full-time Cup season, but then he skipped the Indy weekend after suffering dehydration during the previous week's race at Darlington. "I don't want to create any more damage to myself, to my body, until I understand it better," he said last week.

He's lucky in a sense, because he has built the type of bankroll that allows him to walk away without financial worries.

Will dehydration join concussions as a modern issue?

Anything is possible, but this seems like a case-by-case deal. Everyone's body reacts differently to stressful conditions.

But like the modern focus on concussions, it does make you wonder just how many guys, over the years, toughed it out when their bodies seriously needed a break. Back when "men were men," sure, but how many physical prices were paid in later life? We'll never know.

Bozeman's Tyler Bates confronts Chipley quarterback Isaac Berry during a short gain. [JOSHUA BOUCHER PHOTOS/THE NEWS HERALD]

Bozeman rally stuns Chipley

By Pat McCann
The News Herald

SAND HILLS — It shouldn't come as a surprise that the Chipley-Bozeman football series has been tilted heavily in favor of the Washington County school.

Entering their Region 1-1A collision on Friday, the Tigers had won seven of the nine meetings between the schools as the Bucks were building their program while Chipley had long been established in Panhandle football.

But if the 23-12 win by Bozeman in the latest rendition Friday night is any indication, some parity has come to this series, and in the not-so-distant future it could become a budding rivalry.

If nothing else, Chipley surely will hold a grudge after suffering its first loss of the season, and after building a 12-0 halftime edge.

Bozeman coach Jason Griffin felt his team had given one away in a one-point loss at Holmes County last week. Well, this was a victory that the Bucks stole.

Consider that they compiled 23 points on just 70 total yards as Chipley was more stout up front. Or that the Bucks nearly forced as many turnovers (six) as they had first downs (seven).

Or that defensive players accounted for the go-ahead and clinching touchdowns, and you start to get the picture.

The Tigers not only fell to 2-1, they had some self-inflicted wounds while committing 16 penalties for 102 yards.

And it seemed so far-fetched that Bozeman would rally after halftime as Chipley had controlled the action while outgaining Bozeman 148 yards to 22.

The start of the game was delayed 52 minutes by a thunderstorm passing through the area, and then Chipley's Andrew Lawton returned the opening kickoff 72 yards.

A personal foul penalty on the Bucks on the end of the return gave the Tigers first-and-goal from the 7. It took four runs by Lawton to reach the end zone, but he slid off a hit by linebacker Jaidon Dorsey on fourth down and Chipley scored less than 3 minutes into the game.

Lawton was stopped on a conversion run and Chipley led 6-0.

Bozeman's Hunter Kruger finds some open room to run during the first half.

An interception by Chipley's Riley Gavalier ended Bozeman initial possession, and the Tigers put together the only extended scoring drive of the game to go up two touchdowns with 4:29 left in the first quarter.

Tyler Hall made the big plays on this series. He turned a hitch pass into a 16-yard gain by making a Bozeman defender miss, then took a pitch around the right side for 22 yards to Bozeman's 1.

Dorsey broke through to drop Hall for a 2-yard loss on first-and-goal, but it only delayed the inevitable. Quarterback Isaac Berry kept around the left slide, split two defenders and reached the ball across the goal line to score from the 3.

This time Hall was stopped on a conversion run and Chipley led 12-0.

Bozeman's only threat of the half came when Brian Zerr intercepted a tipped pass and streaked 78 yards, Hall making a saving tackle at Chipley's 15.

Bozeman reached the 8, but on fourth down an attempt to run a reverse was fumbled away and Chipley survived until halftime.

It didn't take long for things to go sour for the Tigers in the third quarter. It began when Bozeman held on Chipley's first series and a high snap went over punter Gage Sims' head. Jesus Garcia and Dorsey combined to keep Sims in the end zone for a safety.

Tyler Bates returned the free kick to Chipley's 38, Gabe Cloud's diving tackle preventing him from breaking free. It was here that the Bucks finally produced a key play on offense.

Quarterback Zac Foster, who splits time with Blake Embrick, ran an option to the right side with tailback

Hunter Kruger trailing.

With Chipley keying on Bozeman's top offensive threat, Foster kept and skirted the visiting sideline for a 29-yard touchdown run. Kruger pounded in the conversion and suddenly it was 12-10 with 7:30 still remaining in the third quarter.

From that stage, Bozeman produced interceptions by Zerr, Lane Kyser, Kruger and Garcia, and a fumble recovery by Chuck Trumbull.

What really was telling, however, was that when Tyler Isenhoff tipped a pass by Berry early in the fourth quarter, Garcia hauled it in and dashed 65 yards to put Bozeman on top 16-12.

The Bucks took over on Chipley's 42 with 6:50 remaining in the game, but produced only one clock-draining first down.

When Chipley regained possession, this time it was Kruger intercepting and returning 25 yards for the touchdown that clinched the outcome for Bozeman.

It was telling that the Bucks' 168 yards of interception returns more than doubled their offensive output.

Kruger was their lone weapon most of the night with 40 yards rushing on 14 attempts. Lawton had 103 yards on 25 carries for Chipley, but already had gained 90 yards by halftime.

Chipley continued to handcuff its cause on both sides of the ball with penalties. The most costly by far was a holding call that negated a 61-yard scoring romp by Lawton that would have given the Tigers the lead following Garcia's interception return.

Bozeman is at Sneads next week. Chipley has a county showdown when it hosts Vernon.

WCCOA kicks off cookbook sale to help elderly

By Jacqueline Bostick
The News
850-630-6167 | @JBostick
jbostick@chipleypaper.com

CHIPLEY - What is the main ingredient in yielding a life of independence and longevity? Anita Clarke, Executive Director of Washington County Council on Aging, says the answer is a consistent stream of support.

"We're here to help the elderly and let them age with dignity," Clarke said. "Most of them like to stay in their own homes."

And an upcoming cookbook fundraiser is set to help WCCOA meet that need in Washington County. The project presents several opportunities to support the elderly: businesses can receive a free ad placement in the cookbook in return for placing the book sale flyer at their place of business and/or invite patrons to purchase the book, individuals and businesses can take out a paid advertisement, also, contribute recipes to the book.

The deadline for ads and contributions is Sept. 26.

WCCOA, 1348 South Blvd., is a not-for-profit organization that provides in-home and onsite services for the local aging and disabled community. The program is funded by governmental grants and programs, private donations and community-oriented fundraisers.

It serves about 125 clients in Washington County, where about 20-percent of the population is 65 years of age or older, according to a 2017 report from U.S. Census Bureau.

Currently, about 90 people are on the waiting list to receive WCCOA services, including the meal program.

"We struggle here because it's so rural and everyone is needing," Clarke said. "So, when you ask [for private financial support], people get tired of it."

"That's why we started our cake auction and our Senior Expo," she said, noting the fundraisers raise about $4,500 combined.

The majority of WCCOA's comes from governmental grants. However, some of them still require matching funds.

"And then we don't get enough funding to see all of our seniors in our county, so then we use that money to put in the pot to help provide services for them," Clarke said referring to fundraisers. "It goes back into the community."

The multi-level services the organization provides include meals, baths, caregiver relief, and homemaker and housekeeping services. WCCOA also offers a free day center for individuals with memory disorders.

Clarke said the primary misconception about WCCOA lies in how people perceive the program. Unfortunately, that misconception results in fewer resources getting to the people who actually need them.

"A lot of people think it's for really low-income people," she said. "It's not. It covers anybody. The only difference is they have a co-pay if they're not eligible for Medicaid, but it is very low compared to the services you receive."

The organization provides opportunities for sponsorship to provide meals to clients for as low as $5 per meal. Other sponsorships for other amounts are available. Volunteers are needed, particularly to deliver meals.

To support the program, cookbook sale or to find elderly services, contact Washington County Council on Aging at 850-638-6216 or wccoa@bellsouth.net.

After Moonves, CBS takeover possible in new media landscape

By Mae Anderson
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The resignation of longtime CBS chief Les Moonves won't likely lead to drastic changes in network programs, but it could make the company ripe for a takeover as traditional media companies compete with upstarts such as Netflix and Amazon.

Moonves was ousted Sunday, just hours after the New Yorker detailed more sexual misconduct allegations against him. A dozen women have alleged mistreatment, including forced oral sex, groping and retaliation if they resisted him. CBS is on the hook for $120 million in severance if its investigation, being conducted by two outside law firms, finds no evidence of wrongdoing. Moonves has denied wrongdoing.

CBS also shook up its board and settled a larger fight with its parent company, National Amusements Inc. As part of the settlement, National Amusements agreed not to push for a merger between CBS and sibling company Viacom for at least two years. As CEO, Moonves had opposed such a merger

On Sunday, CBS said longtime CEO Les Moonves has resigned, just hours after more sexual harassment allegations involving the network's longtime leader surfaced. [CHRIS PIZZELLO/INVISION/AP] on grounds CBS was doing well, while Viacom was not.

The network was struggling when Moonves took over as entertainment chief in 1995. He quickly turned things around and churned out shows appealing to the older, more tradition-bound CBS audience — broad-appeal sitcoms such as “Two and a Half Men” and “The Big Bang Theory” and procedural dramas such as “CSI: Crime Scene Investigation” and “NCIS.” “Survivor” was an early reality show hit, and continues to this day. Moonves became CEO of CBS Television in 1998 and CEO of the newly created CBS Corp. in 2006 after it split from Viacom.

Moonves' temporary replacement, Chief Operating Officer Joseph Ianniello, has steered top projects such as stand-alone streaming services for CBS and the Showtime cable channel. But he doesn't have a creative or sales background, which might make him an awkward long-term leader for the company.

For now, Ianniello is unlikely to make drastic changes in programming, particularly since CBS' formula has been working. Programming changes could be more substantial if CBS chooses someone outside the company as a permanent replacement.

B. Riley FBR analyst Barton Crockett said CBS could remain successful without Moonves. He noted the continued success of other networks that have lost top executives to sexual misconduct claims, including Roger Ailes and Bill O'Reilly at Fox News and Matt Lauer at NBC News.

“Strong performance can continue even when a vaunted, tainted star departs,” Crockett said. “These groups have deep talent pools.”

A broader question is whether CBS will remain standalone company at all.

To better compete with tech companies such as Netflix, companies that have traditionally distributed TV shows and movies have been buying the producers of such programs. The producers, themselves, have been consolidating as well. AT&T bought Time Warner for $85 billion in June, while Disney is in the process of acquiring the entertainment assets of Fox for $71.3 billion.

That makes CBS a hot commodity. With the shake-up of its board, there are 11 independent directors and two affiliated with National Amusements, down from three. One of the new directors, Candace Beinecke, is a lawyer with expertise in mergers and acquisitions. National Amusements agreed to give “good faith consideration” to any offer the new board deems good for shareholders.

News Herald publisher's role expands west

Tim Thompson given regional duties over GateHouse's 2 daily and 8 weekly Panhandle properties

News Herald staff report

PANAMA CITY — News Herald Publisher Tim Thompson is taking on additional duties as publisher of the Northwest Florida Daily News and now will oversee the Panhandle's two dailies and eight weeklies in a move expected to bring even more collaboration between the properties.

Thompson is filling the void created with the retirement of Diane Winnemuller as publisher of the NWFND in Fort Walton Beach.

“Tim is a passionate leader committed to strong and direct community engagement and excellence across all our platforms and services,” said Patrick Dorsey, regional vice president of GateHouse Media's Coastal Publishing Group. “He knows the Panhandle very well and will be a strong leader for all our Northwest Florida properties. Tim is a long-time publisher and has excelled everywhere he has been. I know his lively and engaging personality will be well received in Fort Walton Beach as it has been in Panama City.”

Thompson said he is excited at the new opportunity but made it clear his heart and calendar have room for both properties and he isn't leaving Panama City.

“Our role in the communities we serve has never been more important and I have tremendous respect for the hard work our staffs are doing,” Thompson said. “Northwest Florida has obviously become a very important footprint for our company — with eight weeklies and two dailies stretching from Apalachicola to Santa Rosa — and GateHouse Media takes great pride in our connection to all the communities we serve.”

Dorsey called Winnemuller “one of the most creative advertising minds” and noted her dedication to the Emerald Coast since her arrival.

“She has become deeply involved in the Fort Walton Beach area and has ensured the Daily News remains an integral part of the community,” Dorsey said, paving the way for Thompson's new role.

Thompson joined The News Herald in 2014 as publisher and also oversees the region's four “eastern weeklies” in Chipley, Bonifay, Port St. Joe and Apalachicola. In addition to taking over at the NWFND he also will oversee weeklies in Destin, Walton County, Crestview and Santa Rosa.

“I wish Diane the very best in her well-deserved retirement,” Thompson said. “We moved to Fort Walton Beach and Panama City at about the same time, and early on I realized just how important this community was — and is, to Diane.”

“I'm excited about taking on these additional responsibilities. We are fortunate to have so many outstanding leaders at our weekly and daily news organizations in the Panhandle. I consider it a privilege to offer my support on all the efforts at hand.”

The transition, however, does not mean Thompson will be difficult to find in Panama City.

“I'm not going anywhere,” he said. “I love living in Panama City and hold dear so many special relationships here, both business and personal.”

Thompson's fondness for the surf, sand, food and lifestyle of the area extends beyond him, he said, noting this slice of the coast is simply unique.

“I've moved to the top of the list for destinations when the voting takes place on where this year's family reunion will be held,” he said.

POT VAPING:

Savvy teens hacking devices to inhale cannabis

VISUALHUNT

By Ana B. Ibarra
Kaiser Health News

By now, many parents know kids are vaping sweet-smelling tobacco — often using devices that look deceptively like pens or flash drives. And most parents are hip to the prevalence of underage marijuana use.

Now comes a combo of the two: vaping pot. Experts and educators say young people are — once again — one step ahead of the adults in their lives, experimenting with this new and more heady way to consume weed.

“It’s only a matter of time” before adolescents are vaping nicotine and pot in equal measure, said Mila Vascones-Gatski, a substance abuse counselor at Arlington Public Schools in Virginia. “Anything in liquid form can go into a vape, and that’s scary.”

Surveys provide a snapshot of the problem.

Among California high school students who have used an electronic smoking device, 27 percent said they used it with some form of cannabis, according to a report by the state Department of Public Health, based on 2016 data, the latest available.

Nationally, among high school seniors who reported using a vaping device in the past year, 11 percent said they had vaped cannabis, according to a 2017 survey by the National Institute on Drug Abuse and the University of Michigan. More than half said they vaped “just flavoring” and about 33 percent said nicotine.

Controversial and concentrated

The California Department of Public Health says researchers do not fully understand how using cannabis oils and waxes with vapes affects health. What they do know is that vaporized cannabis can contain a lot more THC, the cannabis ingredient responsible for

By the numbers

• Adolescents says vaping devices are easy to get, with 78.2 percent of 12th-graders reporting they could get a device fairly or very easily, ranking slightly behind marijuana (79.8 percent) and alcohol (87.1 percent) and just ahead of cigarettes (77.9 percent).

• Teens are not always aware what’s in these devices as manufacturers don’t have to report e-cig ingredients. 66.0 percent say it’s just flavoring, 13.7 percent don’t know, 13.2 percent say nicotine, 5.8 percent say marijuana, and 1.3 percent say other.

psychoactive effects such as anxiety and paranoia.

“When you make it into an oil or wax, the [THC] concentration can be very high,” Vascones-Gatski said. “This is when psychotic symptoms are intensified.”

Recreational marijuana use is illegal among children in all states. In California, such use was legalized for adults 21 and older beginning this year. Critics argue the change could make pot more accessible to young people, although researchers say it is too early to tell.

Meanwhile, as vaping becomes more popular and socially acceptable, more young people are bound to try pot in this form, said Stanton Glantz, professor of medicine and director of the Center for Tobacco Control Research and Education at University of California-San Francisco.

“You are starting to see the much more aggressive push for flavors” in the cannabis liquids, he said.

Some popular cannabis oil flavors include mint, jasmine, banana smoothie, pumpkin spice and gummy fish, according to industry sites.

Even if the cannabis industry says its target is not youth, there is no denying fruity smells attract kids, Glantz said.

A call for more regulation

Some experts say the dangers of pot vaping among kids are receiving less attention than they should, and that the vaping industry needs more regulation.

“Schools tell us that tobacco prevention is important, but we really need something on marijuana,” said Ryan Crowdis, with the Tobacco-Use Prevention Education program at the Orange County Department of Education. “The problem is our hands are tied because our funding comes from the tobacco tax revenue, so that’s what we have to focus on.”

The California Department of Education said it expects to receive funding from Proposition 64, the ballot measure that legalized recreational pot, in the 2019-20 budget to help fund education and awareness around youth use of marijuana.

Industry representatives deny trying to appeal to youths. “In no way, shape or form do I see brands trying to ingratiate children or underage users. There’s plenty of business in the adult market,” said Farley Cahen, the founder and CEO of Elevated Agency, which does marketing for cannabis companies.

Cahen said the California law legalizing recreational pot for adults came with strict packaging regulations that prohibit language or wrapping that could be attractive to children.

Some of the fruity smells in some cannabis oils come from the manipulation of terpenes, the compound responsible for the plant’s aroma, he explained. But he said that flavorings are in no way promoted like candy-like nicotine juices.
