Board revises wetlands ordinance

Issue presented as property rights vs. environmental protection

By AMANDA MAYOR
amayor@thewakullanews.net

On Monday, June 17, county commissioners voted in favor of moving forward with a comprehensive plan revision that allows the board to draft a variance procedure as it applies to the county's current wetland ordinance.

The current policy provides for a 75-foot buffer zone, which is considered a preservation or conservation area.

The buffer is broken down into two parts, where the outer 40-foot band may only be disturbed by residential development if absolutely necessary and the 35-foot closest to the wetland is considered a "no touch" and "no development" portion.

Chairman Randy Merritt, whose idea it was to bring the issue to the table, prefaced the discussion with a clarification to his proposal and pointed out that the county's comprehensive plan specifically grants the board of commissioners permission to establish a variance procedure that grants "reasonable use of residential and non-residential properties in relation to the buffer."

"There seems to be a lot of misinformation going around about what I'm proposing," Merritt began. "What I'm proposing is to allow a variance inside the 35-foot buffer zone if and only if the only option you have to be able to use your property is to get inside that 35-foot zone."

For such a case, Merritt said, he wants to set up a procedure to allow a variance.

Merritt addressed the public's concerns that this variance would allow developers to fill in the county's wetlands, producing disproportional storm water runoff, flooding and destroying the ecosystem.

To which Merritt contended that wetlands are governed heavily by the state and that filling them simply wasn't an option.

"You cannot just go fill in a wetland no matter what we say," Merritt assured the audience. "We don't have that authority."

Another part to Merritt's suggestion was a proposed change in the comp plan language that made county wetland restrictions apply only to those wetlands whose surface waters are connected to waters of the state - in other words, to remove language relating to the county's protection of isolated wetlands as "isolated wetlands are protected under state jurisdiction," said Merritt.

Citizens for and against the variance got up to speak - more than 60 speaker cards were handed in. A majority of the speakers opposed the proposal, expressing concern for the unique natural habitats of Wakulla as well as the fishing industry.

Those who were for the change seemed to be united under one idea - an idea which would later prove to be the reason for a board majority vote - property rights.

FCAT TEST SCORES

Wakulla schools score superior in state, region

By BETH O'DONNELL
Assistant Superintendent

Wakulla School District students placed top ten in the state for 18 of 20 areas tested on the 2013 Florida Comprehensive Assessment Test state assessments in Reading, Math, Science and the new United States History End of Course (EOC) exam.

Rankings are based on the percent of students who score proficient, which is at or above grade level.

Wakulla students ranked number one in the region consisting of Wakulla, Leon, Calhoun, Liberty, Taylor, Jefferson, Franklin, Gadsden, and Madison on nine of the areas tested and were in the top three for all Reading, Math, Science and U.S. History scores.

Wakulla ranked first alone in the region on 4th, 6th, and 7th grade Reading, tying for first in 8th grade Reading with Liberty County.

In Math, Wakulla students ranked first alone in the region in 6th and 7th grade, tying with Leon in 8th grade. Wakulla also stood alone in first place on 8th grade Science and on the 9th and 10th grade Biology EOC exam.

CITY OF SOPCHOPPY

Election generates controversy

Three new city commissioners elected; two incumbents swept out - complaints of voting irregularities

By AMANDA MAYOR
amayor@thewakullanews.net

On Tuesday, June 11, the city of Sopchoppy held an election that would determine the fate of two city commissioners up for re-election as well as one open seat on the council.

Sopchoppy Mayor Colleen Skipper-Mitchell and Commissioner Anginita Rosier were both on the ballot. Skipper-Mitchell had made history in 2001, as she was the first African American female to be elected to any office in Wakulla. Nine years later she would be given the honor of becoming the first female mayor of Sopchoppy.

Rosier took her own seat on the council in 2010. Both, however, were swept from office in an election of small margins. Skipper-Mitchell lost re-election by one lone vote and Rosier by a margin of 15.

This means that Sopchoppy has three new city commissioners: Eddie Evans, Nathan Lewis and Glenn Rudd join Lara Edwards and Martha Hodge Evans to form a brand new board. The election final vote results were Eddie Evans - 89; Nathan Lewis - 75; Glenn Rudd - 66; Colleen Skipper-Mitchell - 65; Anginita Rosier - 40.

As reported in last week's News, there were complaints about the election procedures carried out by city officials. Allegations included the mishandling of absentee ballots, voter suppression tactics and canvassing board irregularities - allegations that Lara Edwards says are unwarranted.

"It upset me to hear (and read) the allegations in regards to the recent City Council election in Sopchoppy," Edwards wrote in an email. "This claim is entirely unfounded and ridiculous. We support and encourage every citizen of Sopchoppy to participate in our elections and I am confident in the integrity of our electoral process."

Edwards wrote that Sopchoppy is an honest city with "good, hard-working people who went out and voted for who they wanted."

Sopchoppy City Clerk Jackie Lawhon says that no official election complaints were made to her office. "I would not have even known about the complaints if it had not been for the media calling and asking," she said.

Supervisor of Elections Buddy Wells, who helped the city with the election, also said that he had received no such complaints.

This week, on Tuesday, June 18, Rosier said she filed an official complaint with the Florida Division of Elections and that it is currently being reviewed. She added that hers wasn't the only one filed as, according to her, other citizens also submitted complaints.

"All I wanted was a fair election," said Rosier. "I certainly understand and accept that in politics there are winners and there are losers. However, when individuals feel the need to resort to malicious tactics that not only violate a person's civil rights but violates the law in the process, it becomes a problem that affects this community as a whole."

Rosier touched on the time she served as a city commissioner.

Wakulla TDC pushes ahead without a director

By AMANDA MAYOR
amayor@thewakullanews.net

Wakulla County's Tourist Development Council is down a director, but the show must go on – and it is.

The advisory council held their first meeting since Director Pam Portwood's resignation at the end of May. With a call to order, Chairman David Moody got the early morning ball rolling and the council seemed to hit the ground running.

With grant money to spend and future RESTORE Act money hopefully coming their way soon, the TDC discussed advertising dollars first. Billboard purchasing options in the Panama City, Perry and Jacksonville area were on the table, but steep monthly price quotes from one company left the council hesitant to commit before first seeking better prices.

The Tallahassee Democrat's annual publication of "Living Here" was discussed as well.

"This will be similar to a phone book in how it's used," said Moody. The council was in favor of the idea of being stationed in a publication that could be referred to throughout the year. They plan to promote the county's seafood resources with an advertisement containing information on where and when to find Wakulla's seafood and contact information for those providers.

Other publications that the council seemed to be in favor of were "Bird Watchers Digest" and the 2014 edition of the "Travel Guide to Florida."

Wakulla scalloping and other seafood promotion will appear in ad form in "The Angler."

Pending the decision by county staff to install them, the county should have new gateway signs going up soon as a vote by the council allowed Moody to spend the money required to pay permit fees.

Also up for discussion was the $10,000 that the TDC has available for county promotional videos.

According to TDC members, four videos are currently in progress through a hired videographer. They are part of a series named "New Moon in June" and feature the county's fishing and other marine activities which are slated to go up on the website, Facebook and YouTube.

The TDC plans to make more videos focusing on things such as the Wakulla blue crab industry, scalloping, flounder gigging and more.

An idea for a "Hook to Cook" series where a short video follows the process from catching the fish to preparation and cooking it was suggested.

The TDC also heard a presentation from the Historical Society's Murray McLaughlin on the society's current outreach efforts. McLaughlin presented a project currently in the works that makes a push to promote the county's cultural heritage and therefore boost Wakulla's tourism.

According to McLaughlin, a donation has been made of about 40 acres off Zion Hill Church Road that will serve as the site for the future open-air museum called the Heritage Village.

The village will eventually house historic homes that will be relocated to the site, a farmstead, Native American and African American interpretive trails and campsites and other historically accurate aspects of Wakulla County.

Other plans for the Heritage Village include 6-8 annual festivals, seine yard recreation and a no-vehicle, pedestrian only atmosphere. Completion of this project will take anywhere from three to ten years depending on endorsement and volunteer efforts.

The TDC's meeting wrapped up with reminders to go over the proposed by-laws which, according to Moody, will help the council achieve its goal to increase the precision on how they operate and a reminder that the county's new seafood logo will be unveiled on June 20. "We hope to see this logo go far and wide," said Moody. "Both in the county and out of the county."

The TDC will hold its next regular meeting on July 11.

School board moves ahead with automotive program

New teacher contract also discussed

By WILLIAM SNOWDEN
editor@thewakullanews.net

The Wakulla school board approved a lease to take over a closed automotive repair shop for the new automotive repair vocational program set to start in the fall.

At their meeting on Monday, June 17, school board members approved the lease, said to be less than $1,000 a month, for the closed shop behind the Crawfordville Super-Lube.

School board mem-

"With all of the increased rigor and constant changes in education, our school district continues to perform well," said Superintendent of Schools Bobby Pearce. "Wakulla students, teachers, staff, administrators and parents are to be commended for their hard work."

"We are very pleased with these results," he said.

Wakulla County School District has also been named an Academically High Performing District by the state for the sixth consecutive year based on last year's district "A" grade, good financial audit, and meeting the class size requirements.

Individual student scores have been mailed home or are available at the child's school, plus they can be viewed on the parent portal where parents are able to view their child's grades at www.wakullaschools.org.

bers and Superintendent of Schools Bobby Pearce praised Super-Lube for working with the school district on the lease, and helping in other ways – such as putting school officials with a national tool company to supply the shop.

Pearce said that the district has already saved an estimated $30,000 from the anticipated costs of starting the program.

At the meeting, it was reported that 90 students have signed up for the automotive repair program – more than can be taken into the class.

School board member Greg Thomas urged school staff to make the automotive program like the very successful medical academy program, in that students must be competitive to be admitted.

Pearce said he is hopeful the program will be successful and the district can add more vocational programs in the future – welding and heating/ventilation/air conditioning and cosmetology were some programs he mentioned.

In another matter, Missy Rudd, who heads the local teachers' union, the Wakulla Classroom Teachers Association, praised the district for its efforts in negotiating a new teacher's contract.

Rudd praised Karen Wells, the district's human resources director, and Randy Beech, the district financial officer, for presenting a plan that gives teachers a "fair salary raise" while allowing them to get merit bonuses.

There had been some anticipated conflicts around the state with teacher conflicts over the merit pay issue.

Rudd and Superintendent Bobby Pearce said the Wakulla contract has become a model throughout the state – and credited Beech with working through the merit pay issue.

Pearce called the Wakulla position "groundbreaking."

What exactly is in the teacher contract wasn't revealed: the school board is scheduled to vote to give its approval to the contract in July, and teachers will vote on it in August.

Ham radio operators will hold field day this weekend

Special to The News

This weekend, June 22 and 23, the Sportsman's Paradise Amateur Radio Club (SPARC) will hold its annual Ham Radio Field Day at the Wakulla Station Trail Head Park, which is located less than one mile north of Highway 267/Bloxham Cutoff in Wakulla Station on Old Woodville Highway.

The park is part of the Tallahassee-St. Marks bike trail.

The event is held from 2 p.m. on Saturday to 2 p.m. on Sunday, and the public is welcome to join in on the fun, to learn, and even get a little hands-on experience with radio, talking to others at distant stations (possibly on the other side of the world!).

The hobby is for all ages. It is not uncommon to have radio operators as young as 15 years old, but don't be too surprised to find one that is 6.

The hobby is also known for including rock music stars, country music stars, actors, etc, but is mostly comprised of everyday people looking for a fun hobby that is rewarding, allowing for meeting new people, interesting discussions, and even getting involved in helping in the times of disaster when other forms of communications fail, such as phone lines, cell phone towers, and the internet.

Hams have helped out in emergency situations in our country and around the world, in the wake of hurricanes, tsunamis, earthquakes and terrorist attacks. Hams are working in local public service agencies, hospitals, shelters, search and rescue as volunteers.

But another facet to the hobby is just plain fun, be it just talking to others while on the daily commute locally, or "contesting" against other ham radio operators, attempting to make the most contacts with folks in other areas of the USA, as well as almost every country in the world, and those that are 'out of this world' on board the International Space Station.

This year's Field Day site is being made possible by the DEP, Dept. of Florida Greenways and Trails, Wakulla County Sheriff's Office Emergency Management, the Wakulla Department of Public Safety, and The American Red Cross.

I would like to thank and express great appreciation to the citizens of Sopchoppy for allowing me to serve them for the past 13 years, with the last three as Mayor.

The citizens gave me the distinct honor of becoming the first female to serve the city as Mayor.

WE MADE HISTORY!!!

I have enjoyed being a public servant. Thank you again and God Bless,

Gov. Scott to speak at Wakulla GOP fundraiser

Special to The News

The Wakulla County Republican Party will host Florida Governor Rick Scott at the Fourth Annual Ronald Reagan Blue Jeans and Black Tie Affair on Monday, July 8, at the Wakulla Springs Lodge.

The event is open to the public and, prior to his speech, the Governor will be available to meet and be photographed with attendees of the VIP Reception at 7 p.m.

Tickets include a barbeque dinner, cash bar, and live entertainment and are $50 per person for dinner, $25 per person for VIP Reception, or $125 per couple for dinner and VIP reception ($25 discount).

Table sponsorships are $1,200 for eight seats including dinner and VIP

Reception for each.

Table sponsors will be recognized in the program.

The event also includes a silent auction of Ronald Reagan memorabilia.

Because seating is limited, advance ticket purchase is recommended and may be obtained at www.wakullaGOP.com or by calling (850) 926-4402.

Wakulla Democrats host gathering in Panacea

By RACHEL PIENTA
Democratic chair

On Tuesday, June 4th, more than fifty area Democrats gathered at Posey's Dockside Cafe in Panacea. Local Wakulla Democrats were joined by guests from Jefferson, Bay, and Leon counties, many of whom said they were looking forward to hearing congressional candidate Gwen Graham that evening.

Featured speakers for the evening included state Sen. Bill Montford, who represents the new District 3 which includes Calhoun, Franklin, Gadsden, Gulf, Hamilton, Jefferson, Leon, Liberty, Madison, Taylor and Wakulla counties.

Montford provided a legislative review and report of how District 3 fared during the 2013 legislative session. Montford noted that the area still faces hard times on the road to economic recovery and told stories of parents without jobs and hungry children across the rural district that go to bed without supper.

Jackson County Commissioner Jeremy Branch spoke as a special guest from the western reaches of Congressional District 2. Branch is serving his second term in office, and spoke about the need to stay focused on local government issues that impact our day to day lives – like pocketbook issues related to the economy.

Gwen Graham, who has filed to run for Congressional District 2, was also on the program to speak.

Florida's 2nd congressional district consists of the eastern part of the Florida Panhandle. It includes the counties of Washington, Bay, Jackson, Gulf, Calhoun, Liberty, Gadsden, Leon, Jefferson, Wakulla, Franklin, Taylor and part of Madison.

Graham discussed what it was like to grow up in a political atmosphere as the daughter of former Florida Gov. Bob Graham and how her life experiences have led her to seek public office.

"It was great to see so many area Democrats turn out on a Tuesday night," said Wakulla Democratic Executive Committee Chair Rachel Pienta.

"This was the first big gathering we've had since November. After listening to the questions raised by audience members during tonight's question and answer session, I think local Democrats are ready to make some changes when they go to the polls in 2014," Pienta said.

Board revises wetlands ordinance

The main argument against which seemed to be the claim that, as some citizens put it, people know if they have wetlands on their property when they buy their property.

But no argument against granting Merritt's proposal would prove solid enough to crack the foundations for three other commissioners' votes.

"For me this is a matter of property rights," stated Commissioner Richard Harden. "I believe one of the most basic freedoms of living in our country is having the ability to own property and to do what you would like to do with your property. There are people dying every day for that freedom."

Commissioner Ralph Thomas concurred with Harden.

"This is a freedom issue," said Commissioner Thomas. "If I make a mistake I'm going to make a mistake on the side of freedom every time."

Thomas said he understood and was for the science behind the conflicting argument, but that for him it comes down to freedom.

"I dare say that each and every one of us can name examples of where we think the government oversteps," he said. "Well, this is just another one of those examples. When we live in a free society, sometimes we have to support something we disagree with for the sake of freedom and that's where I am on this."

On June 13, Commissioner Howard Kessler hosted a town hall meeting in order to allow citizens to express their concerns on the issue and to discuss the agenda item as a whole. Most of those that showed up were on the opposing side of Merritt's proposal and that was the side Commissioner Kessler went to bat for during Monday's meeting as he argued money, the environment.

"We know more about how these wetlands are vital to our best interest than we did in the past and we should act differently," Kessler said.

Commissioner Jerry Moore attempted to put some of the public's mind at ease.

"The damage that we're talking about is a perceived damage," Moore said. "It is not a damage that actually happened or will happen, it's what some few people think may happen. I support Commissioner Merritt on the elimination of the isolated wetlands."

Moore also said that the county was crying wolf if it thinks that this change in the ordinance will lead to a massive amount of developing near wetlands as there are very few instances where a wetland lot is even developable.

With that, Chairman Merritt's proposal to allow staff to prepare a comprehensive plan amendment that would allow wetland variances within the entire 75 foot buffer, remove isolated wetlands from county wetland regulations and to grant him permission to work with staff on changes was motioned, seconded and passed with a 4-1 vote.

"I exit my tenure on the commission with my dignity intact because I know that the decisions I made while in office were made with the citizens' best interest in mind," she said.

Rosier added that this experience has not deterred her from politics or from running for other offices in the future.

In an advertisement in this week's Wakulla News, Skipper-Mitchell thanked the citizens of Sopchoppy for the 13 years she was granted by them to serve the city – three of which were as mayor.

"I enjoyed being a public servant," she said.

Sopchoppy will hold its next city commission meeting on July 8 in the city hall chambers at 6:30 p.m.

What it means to be an American

By CHARLIE CREEL
Wakulla County Sheriff

Many times over the years we have heard someone ask the question: What does it mean to be an American?

We probably don't think about the answer as often as we should but I will attempt to answer the question for you tonight through my eyes.

Many Americans have given their lives for the privileges we enjoy as American citizens. Our nation has fought hard and paid a very high price over the years to maintain the benefits of being Americans that we enjoy today.

I have my own personal experience that helps me relate to being a proud American. My father helped fight tyranny in the 1940s as a member of our military.

He was asked to take part in the Battle of Normandy where scores of brave military men knew there was a good chance that they would not be coming back from Europe after being asked to fight Germans on the French beaches.

Many brave Americans died on the beaches as they fought bravely for their country. Many more men and women have paid the ultimate sacrifice in other conflicts as well.

My father waited until I was a teenager until her told me a little about his Normandy experience. He would never go into details about what he saw on the beaches and what he was forced to witness.

Back at that time you knew you had only three ways to get out of the war – either the war ended, you got injured or you were killed.

He would never speak about it. But he fought everywhere, all over Europe and in Africa.

It was a difficult time for those at war and those at home.

But as Americans it was what we were asked to do and we did it willingly.

As Americans we sometimes forget just how fortunate we are to live in one of the finest countries in the world.

We may get angry and bitter about issues that divide us, but we always seem to come together as an American family whenever disasters or threats to our nation threaten our well being.

We love our nation because there is room in our hearts to love other places and countries and help them whenever needed.

We live in this country because we believe in our hearts that America is good and exceptional.

America is different from other countries across the world and we know that we have a special role in the world.

As Americans we feel like it is part of our fabric to help other countries and fight what we perceive as injustice.

President John Kennedy reminded us that "civility is not a sign of weakness and sincerity is always subject to proof. Let us never negotiate out of fear. But never fear to negotiate."

President Abraham Lincoln governed at a time of great strife within our country but he understood where we needed to go.

To quote Lincoln, "With malice toward none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in, to bind up the nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle and for his widow and his orphan, to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and a lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations."

No other country is as exceptional as the United States of America. Americans have hope and opportunity that others do not.

We should be proud of our country and the role it has played in shaping the history of the world.

We should be proud of our troops and the sacrifices they have made and the enormous resources that were expended in Europe after World War II. It was American leadership that led to the alliance that was formed that allowed Europe to become more unified after a decade of tyranny.

As Americans we should be proud of the enormous economic power we have and the military strength that allows the world to live in a certain degree of peace.

We have core values that are in our Constitution, our body of laws, our democratic practices and our belief in free speech and equality that make us imperfect at times but still exceptional and proud.

As Americans we do not allow our government to exploit the people of our country, but make sure we help those who need assistance. We have a care for our neighbors, both near and far, which makes us exceptional.

When you also consider that we have been able to keep our American vision alive for centuries is not only a testament to the wise men who crafted our government and our nation but also an amazing achievement of longevity.

Other governments come and go but the United States has remained in much the same form that our forefathers perceived in the 1770s.

We are a melting pot of culture that has been mixed into a large bowl to create a mixture of talents and knowledge that keeps our country strong.

As Americans we are entitled to certain rights and the belief of equality.

We have the right to cast our vote in every election and have a say in who governs at the federal, state and local levels.

Our country is temporarily ruled by representatives of the people and elected by them.

The rights of minorities are guaranteed by law and are not subject to being voted away by the majority.

As a resident of Florida and a citizen of the United States, I was born here and understand the culture and values of American exceptionalism that is deeply ingrained in our psyches and hearts.

As the Sheriff of Wakulla County, I have taken an oath where I have been sworn to protect and defend the U.S. Constitution. It is our constitution that is intended to protect American citizens from government.

Being an American is far more than the citizenship listed on a birth certificate or Passport. It is far more nuanced and complicated than a simple denotation on a state-issued document. It is a way of living believing and even dreaming.

Republicans and Democrats may battle for their ideologies to be adopted in Washington, D.C., but the bottom line is that these political parties have the same goals for their America.

Although their ideologies differ, they both embrace and represent America.

America's beauty lies in its multitude of differences and complexity and our military has fought for centuries to uphold these differences as one nation.

It is the freedom that we enjoy in our country that makes it possible for America's oneness to encompass and protect the many.

Benjamin Franklin may be the epitome of an American. He pioneered the spirit of self-help and with little schooling he taught himself many things he needed in life.

He was a printer, newspaper editor and magazine publisher. He helped launch the first police force in Philadelphia along with the first volunteer fire company, the first fire insurance firm, the first hospital, the first public library and the first institution of higher learning that became the University of Pennsylvania.

He also served as Postmaster and tripled the frequency of the mail delivery. He was a scientist, inventor and a diplomat.

It was Franklin's can-do spirit that captured the imagination of the nation at the time.

His inspiration led to advances by American scientists in the years that followed and inspired the United States of America into becoming known as the greatest nation on earth.

And that is what it means to me to be an American!

Editor, The News:

What's the scene in Wakulla? Destroy wetlands? Encourage construction jobs? Honor the skill and tradition of boat building?

Yes, those are in the air, but I'm learning from Palaver Tree Theater that the scene in our county is supporting our local seafood industry, and it's learning to realize our long-forgotten dreams of being really involved with films – directing, performing, meeting actors, and just plain enjoying the stories.

Many events associated with Scene in Wakulla are free. Go to www.PalaverTreeTheater.org for time and place of these special events from Thursday night through Saturday.

"Wildflowers in the Median" is a free event.

I just finished reading the book. Can you imagine being both furious and also understanding?

Agnes Furey was both as she corresponded with the man who murdered her daughter and grandson.

This true tale provides a new perspective on the humanity of all. Come feel the agony and hear the understanding emerge.

Learn what restorative justice can mean to victims and criminals.

Scene in Wakulla is this weekend

By HERB DONALDSON

The SCENE in Wakulla Playwright-Filmmaker Fest begins this Thursday.

The three-day event of workshops, film-screenings, play readings, and forums is a first-time endeavor for the Palaver Tree Theater, and is sponsored by Best Western Plus Wakulla Inns & Suites.

The opening night part, originally scheduled at Best Western, has been moved to Panacea as part of the Fresh From Wakulla seafood promotional campaign presented by Wakulla County Tourist Development Council, and Wakulla Chamber of Commerce.

What better way to introduce artists to the county than to invite them to support its local seafood industry partners?

This event is FREE but reservations are needed. RSVP by calling (850) 926-1848.

Workshops, panel discussions, and readings begin the Friday and continue through Saturday. The schedule of events include:

Friday, June 21

- Directing for Film Workshop with writer and filmmaker, Ka'ramu Kush. Noon to 3 p.m. at the Wakulla County Public Library.

- On-Camera Performance Workshop with veteran actor, master teacher, and FSU alumni, John D'Aquino. Noon to 3 p.m. at the Best Western Plus Wakulla Inns & Suites conference room.

- The 'DIRECTING' Con-Sequence panel discussion will feature Ka'ramu Kush, and Tallahassee director F.C. Rabbath, followed by a select screening of their works. At 7 p.m. at the public library.

- Saturday, June 22
- Directing for Film workshop continues from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the public library.

- ALIVE OnStage Workshop for stage actors will be taught by the Canopy Roads Theatre Company, actor Summer Hill Seven, and the cast members from their latest "A Raisin in the Sun" production. A second ALIVE OnStage workshop will be held on June 29. Old courthouse, top floor from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

- The ACT WRITE panel discussion: A talk with actors and writers about their careers, performance, and art's ability to help shape and change communities takes place at 3 p.m. and will include writer and activist Agnes Furey; director Ka'ramu Kush; actor and author of the Poemedy Project Trilogy, Summer Hill Seven, and others at the public library.

- "A Matter of Seconds" play reading, written by Herb Donaldson, begins at 5 p.m. at the public library.

- "Wildflowers in the Median" play reading, written by Agnes Furey and Leonard Scovens begins at 7 p.m.

Directly following the 'Wildflower' reading, March for Life and Justice spokesman Kurt Wadsworth Jr., who is currently walking 2,000-plus miles to help bring an end to the death penalty in Florida, will be on-hand to join writer Agnes Furey to discuss restorative justice, the death penalty, and the art of creating awareness and change through creative action.

Both the 'Wildflower' reading and discussion will take place at the Wakulla Library.

There is a cost for all workshops, but readings, screenings, and panel discussions are free and open to the public.

Visit www.palaver-treetheater.org for more info and registration.

Riversprings seventh grader shares her experience with bone cancer for Children's Miracle Network

AMANDA MAYOR
Brinda and Tori Hillmon outside Wal-Mart.

By AMANDA MAYOR
amayor@thewakullanews.net

On Friday June 7, outside the Crawfordville Wal-Mart Supercenter, a rising Riversprings Middle School seventh grader shared her story amidst the sound of karaoke performers and the smell of grilled hotdogs and hamburgers.

On May 16, 2011, 12-year-old Tori Hillmon was diagnosed with osteosarcoma which, research shows, is the most common type of bone cancer and the sixth most common type of cancer found in children.

It led to the amputation of her right leg, but if you never looked down, you would never know this child has faced tragedy.

When asked about her diagnosis, Tori called it "the C word," but with a smile on her face as she seemed to only be focused on the future.

"What happens in the past stays in the past," she said. "When you bring up the past it's past tense."

Tori explained that her battle involved chemo, during which she said she was frequently tired and nauseated, but that today she is not only "C word" free, but she's involved in cheerleading, loves to dance and is working hard to hopefully play volleyball as well.

Tori's mother, Brinda Hillmon, says her daughter went through a tough challenge, but she persevered.

She encourages other little girls like Tori, whose physical appearance may be altered due to illness or accident, not to worry about their outward appearance.

"Don't ever think this is the end," she urged.

The Hillmons were at the event to help represent the Children's Miracle Network (CMN) and were joined by representative Development Associate Stephanie Nicholas of Shands Hospital for Children and CMN. Nicholas had met the Hillmon family at a CMN event two years back.

The Children's Miracle Network constantly works to raise funds and partners with over 170 children's hospitals all over North America.

It began as a small televised fundraiser in 1983, founded by Marie Osmond and John Schneider, but now serves over 170,000 children each year. CMN not only helps cancer patients, but also those with AIDS, birth defects, accident victims, organ transplant patients and more.

Brinda Hillmon attests to the legitimacy of the organization and the extent to which they help children and the community.

"When a donation is made," she says. "It really does stay in the community."

In regards to hosting the event, Crawfordville Wal-Mart Supercenter

Manager Richard Russell said it was an honor to be able to help the children.

"They're our future," he said. "We do what we can."

For more information about the Children's Miracle Network or to donate visit their website at childrensmiraclenetworkhospitals.org.

Donations may also be made at the register during your next trip to Wal-Mart or Sam's Club.

HEAVENS TO BETSY

Rejection can sting

By DR. BETSY GOEHRIG

Rejection. Just hearing that word carries a sting.

It's such a harsh, painful word. Such a harsh, painful reality.

Nobody likes to be rejected. Yet everyone at some time has been rejected by someone.

Some of you know what it's like to be rejected for a part in a play or a band or a chorus.

Some of you know what it's like to be rejected for place on a sports team. Or to be picked last when choosing teams.

Some of you know what it's like to be rejected for a college. Some of you know the discouragement of rejection after rejection for a much needed job.

Or most painfully, some of you know what it's like to be rejected by someone you love.

Some people who are scared by rejection have come to see everything in life in terms of acceptance or rejection.

Rejection can drive people to some pretty dark places. But rejection can also fuel people to do amazing things with their lives.

In my own life, I've certainly not been immune from rejection. I've experienced rejection because I'm a woman.

When I first started seminary, I preached a couple of Sundays to try out at a little country church for my first student pastorate. One couple threatened to leave the church if a woman was called, which influenced the decision of the whole congregation.

That's OK, God led me elsewhere, and my commitment to ministry only deepened, and it helped make me a better and stronger pastor, and God has used me in ministry for 32 years now.

It also positively impacted that little country church, because four years after that, they called a woman minister, with the seeds having been planted by my visit.

There have also been times of rejection when I was single because I'm a minister. Just imagine how fast some men can run when they discover their date is a minister.

One guy said, "You know, no man ever thinks, 'Gee, I wonder if she's a minister.' It's just not even on a guy's radar."

And there were those I rejected who were not a good fit with my ministry and values.

But that whole dating/rejection thing was only a self-screening process, that eventually led me to the very best man for me, chosen by God, who would consider himself mutually blessed and called to be the Minister's Mister.

Stories abound of people whose victories in life have been fueled by rejection.

Early in his career Walt Disney's company was forced to file for bankruptcy because of rejection by his financial backers who pulled out.

Disney then headed to Hollywood, where he launched an amazing unparalleled career in animation that spread into international acclaim.

OUT TO PASTOR

Go ahead – make Dad's day

By JAMES L. SNYDER

Throughout the year, many days of celebration are tucked capriciously into the calendar. So much so, it is hard to find any day of the year where something or someone is not being observed, which has benefited the greeting card company, you can be sure. I am not positive, but I think they have had a great deal to do with designating these days.

Some days are celebrated a little more enthusiastically than others. The Fourth of July has firecrackers; Halloween has funny and scary costumes, not to mention bags of candy; and Christmas boasts the Christmas tree and jolly old St. Nick with all his presents, and it is hard to compete with Christmas parties when it comes to celebrations.

And we come to Mother's Day. According to experts, more telephone calls are placed on Mother's Day than any other day of the year. Also, try to walk into a restaurant and get a seat on that certain Sunday.

There is a theory, which I subscribe to personally, stating the reason Father's Day is so lame is because so much has been spent on Mother's Day, there is nothing left.

I think there should be a rule that says, whatever Mother's Day costs fathers, mothers should spend on Father's Day. This would do one of two things: decrease Mother's Day or puff Father's Day spending. Personally, I am in favor of puffing.

Perhaps with some effort, Father's Day could be a little more exciting. I am not saying this just because I am a father. Well, maybe I am, but if I don't who will?

Fathers in general are rather humble and hesitant to speak about themselves. Contrary to popular opinion, every father knows talk is not cheap, and because he has spent so much on Mother's Day, he simply is practicing good manners and shuts up.

However, every father needs to know he is truly appreciated by his family. Although you cannot buy a father, it is possible to rent him on occasion.

I am in favor of celebrating Father's Day any which way you can. It really does not matter to the father involved. Any father would consider his child a "million dollar baby" if he or she would just give a Father's Day card to him, along with a nice hot cup of coffee while sitting in his favorite chair reading the newspaper.

As it stands, Father's Day is celebrated "every which way but loose," and I believe it is time this has stopped. Too many loose ends concerning Father's Day. It is a "true crime" the way certain things are left hanging concerning fathers. Some fathers have felt like "the dead pool" around Father's Day, not knowing exactly what to expect.

Mother's Day is rather simple. Every mother knows that she will get certain things: flowers, a Mother's Day card and dinner at her favorite restaurant.

By the time Father's Day comes around everybody is so exhausted from Mother's Day, not to mention most fathers are broke, nobody knows exactly how to make dad's day special or, more importantly, who will finance it.

Too many people are uptight about Father's Day and feel like they are running "the gauntlet." When I say people, I am referring primarily to Yours Truly.

Fortunately, I have some ideas along this line.

With some of the presents I have received over the years, I am beginning to think my children imagine me as a "space cowboy," or maybe a "high plains drifter" driving around in a "pink Cadillac" heading for "the bridges of Madison County."

When it comes to being a father, I assure you I am not "the rookie" walking on a "tightrope," directly "in the line of fire" running toward "heartbreak ridge." I have quite a bit of experience being a father, going back more than 40 years.

As a father, I have three children notched on my belt. At times, I have felt like "the enforcer" and the only way to deal with those children was to use "magnum force" and "hang 'em high."

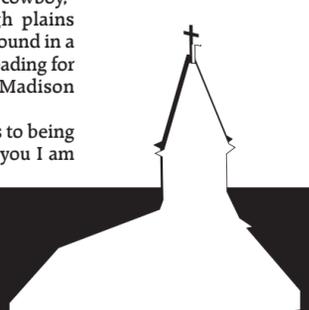

I must confess at times I felt like a "pale rider" sweating it out in the "city heat," realizing no matter how hard I try it is not "a perfect world" we live in. What would make my day, and other fathers' day, would be a present I could really use, or at least understand without spending an entire day reading the directions.

In spite of all this, I have discovered one thing: being a father is its own reward. The Bible puts fatherhood high on the list of important positions in life.

David, the Psalmist, put his feelings about being a father into familiar words to all who have read the Bible. "Lo, children are an heritage of the Lord: and the fruit of the womb is his reward. As arrows are in the hand of a mighty man; so are children of the youth. Happy is the man that hath his quiver full of them: they shall not be ashamed, but they shall speak with the enemies in the gate." (Psalm 127:3-5 KJV.)

This year, my advice is, whatever it costs, go ahead and make dad's day. He deserves it.

Michelle 'Shelly' Lines Day

Michelle "Shelly" Lines Day, 66, of St. Marks, passed away Saturday, June 15, 2013.

She was a native of New York and moved to Florida in 1972. She worked as a beautician for many years and with her husband for the last 15 years in the seafood industry.

She was known for her kindness and acceptance of everyone.

She was always willing to help those in need whether it was a place to stay, food to eat, or words of wisdom or comfort. She was a loving wife, mother, grandmother, sister-in-law, and friend who will be missed by all who knew her.

The family received friends from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. on Tuesday, June 18, 2013 at Bevis Funeral Home, Harvey-Young Chapel, in Crawfordville. Graveside services were held Wednesday, June 19, 2013 at 10 a.m. at St. Marks Cemetery in St. Marks. In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to Big Bend Hospice, 1723 Mahan Center Blvd, Tallahassee FL 32308.

Survivors include her husband of 21 years, Ronnie Day; four children, Corrine Lines Shappard Hampton (John Hill) of Tallahassee, Chris Lines Tumlin (Ronnie) of St. Marks, Jimmie Lines Jr. (Sonja McCown) of Tallahassee, and Tracy Lines of Crawfordville; five grandchildren, Shane Shappard, Josh Hampton, Brett Lines, Jordan Lines, Justin Lines and one great-grandchild, Shayla Shappard; two brothers, George Decker of Massachusetts and Steven Decker of Warwick, N.Y.; two sisters, Doris Hammond of Worcester, Mass., and Theresa Decker of Warwick, N.Y.; a host of nieces and nephews; and a close friend, Darcy LaMere.

She was predeceased by her mother, Rita Bedford; father, George Decker; and a brother, Robert Decker.

Bevis Funeral Home, Harvey-Young Chapel, Crawfordville is assisting the family with arrangements (850-926-3333 or bevisfh.com).

Shelly Elizabeth 'Beth' Revell

Shelley Elizabeth "Beth" Revell, 46, passed away Sunday, June 16, 2013 at her home in Tallahassee.

The memorial service will be held at 2 p.m. on Thursday, June 20, 2013 at Faith Presbyterian Church in Tallahassee. The family will receive friends immediately following the service in the church parlor. Interment will follow in West Soppchoppy Cemetery.

Beth was a native and lifelong resident of Tallahassee and a graduate of Leon High School, Class of 1984. She was the owner of the Blonde Iguana Beauty Shop in Tallahassee. Beth was also a member of Faith Presbyterian Church.

Survivors include two children, Lexi Gray and Saxon Gray, both of Tallahassee; her mother, Ann Curry of Tallahassee; her father, Guy Revell of Ochlockonee Bay; two sisters, Leigh Graves Kraynak (John) and Allison Green (William), both of Tallahassee; and her best friend, Mitch Drake of Tallahassee. Also surviving are a nephew, Gus Graves; and three nieces, Gracie Graves, Emily Green and Caroline Green, all of Tallahassee.

Bevis Funeral Home of Tallahassee (850)385-2193 or www.bevisfh.com is assisting the family.

Charles Otis Houston

Charles Otis Houston, 79, died on June 9, 2013 at his home on Lake Talquin.

He was born in Leon County on May 29, 1932 to Searcy Otis and Francis Elizabeth Williams Houston. He was a Southern Baptist minister and served in many churches, including First Baptist Church in St. Marks.

The family received friends from 5 to 7 p.m. on Tuesday, June 11, 2013 at AmeriCare Funeral Home in Quincy. Funeral services were held at 11 a.m. on Wednesday, June 12 at Santa Clara Baptist Church in Quincy, with burial to follow at Oakland Cemetery in Tallahassee. In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to Big Bend Hospice, 1723 Mahan Center

Blvd., Tallahassee FL 32308 or Santa Clara Baptist Church General Fund.

Survivors include his wife of 14 years, Sandra Sammons Houston; daughters, Debby Miller (Freddy) and Brenda Wood (Mike) of Tallahassee; stepson, Rick Sammons (Deborah) of Atlanta; five grandchildren; brother, Frank Houston (Irma); two sisters, Hazel Benton (Dick) of Crawfordville and Mary Bradley (J.M.) of Tallahassee; and numerous nieces and nephews.

He was predeceased by his parents; his wife of 42 years, Nell Roberts Houston; his daughter, Theresa Ann; his sister, Inez Nolan; and brother, Edwin Houston.

AmeriCare Funeral Home (850) 627-1111, www.americarefc.com, was in charge of the arrangements.

Heavens to Betsy: Rejection can sting

Edmund Hillary's gym teacher said of him, "What will they send me next!" when he was a puny school boy.

Edmund later was known as the man who conquered Mount Everest.

Beethoven's music teacher declared him "hopeless" at composing, yet became one of the world's most famous and influential of all composers, as well as a virtuoso pianist.

Thirty-eight times, publishers rejected Margaret Mitchell's "Gone with the Wind."

Charles Dickens secretly mailed off his manuscript, petrified that his friends would find out and ridicule him. The manuscript was rejected, and so were others, before he won the hearts of millions with such classics as "Oliver Twist."

An invitation was extended to witness one of the world's most historic moments - the Wright brothers' first flight. Only five people showed up.

As Billy Graham preached, a missionary's daughter battled an uncontrollable urge to run out of the meeting. It wasn't conviction that made her squirm, but her response to what she considered appalling preaching.

That girl was his future wife.

It is so easy to allow rejection to defeat us. Rejection can often become the gateway to greatness and extraordinary achievements.

The life of Christ is the greatest example of rejection turned into victory.

If you are facing rejection, do not give up. While humans may hurt and disappoint us, God will never leave us, never reject us, but offer us a love that is unconditional and everlasting.

Allow God to use whatever pain, rejection and suffering you may experience to help you rise above it and grow stronger.

Allow God to use your rejection to turn it into compassion that makes a difference in the lives of others.

Rejection can become a blessing that brings out the best in us.

Thomas attends Emergency Management Training

Special to The News

On May 16, Commissioner Ralph Thomas attended Emergency Management Training hosted by the Florida Association of Counties designed to help county commissioners, county staff, and others understand how to evaluate a county's risk and vulnerability to natural disasters and how to identify appropriate measures that will reduce that risk.

The course covered state and federal resources which are available to counties to implement wind mitigation measures and how to evaluate and measure a county's risk and vulnerability to high wind events, with a particular emphasis on hurricanes.

For counties interested in increasing the number of evacuation shelter spaces within their community, the course discusses funding sources that may be used for retrofitting public facilities for shelter space purposes.

The University of Florida/IFAS Extension sponsors this program.

Training was conducted by Joe Myers, CEO/Vice President, Disaster Strategies and Ideas Group, LLC and Frank Koutnik, Senior Homeland, Security/Emergency, Management Consultant, Disaster Strategies and Ideas Group, LLC, Tim Alexander, Director of Dixie County Office of Public Safety/Emergency Management, Scott Nelson, Wakulla County Emergency Management Director, Preston Cook, Director of Hillsborough

County Office of Emergency Management.

"I'm glad I was able to attend this training. Hurricane season starts June 1st. We hope the storms will miss us, but we owe it to our citizens to be prepared for the worst," said Commissioner Thomas. "The training was excellent and I'm confident it will help me better serve the citizens of Wakulla County."

Commissioner Thomas received a scholarship that paid for the full cost of the training. He personally paid all of his own travel and lodging expenses without tax payer's dollars.

Scouts serve Sheriff's Office

Special to The News

Cody Franklin with his parents.

Special to The News

Cody Franklin, 16, of Tallahassee and a member of the Boy Scouts Troop 115 in Tallahassee, created an Eagle Scout project at the Wakulla County Sheriff's Office Training Center and Range on Saturday, May 25.

Franklin and his fellow scouts built the WCSO Range a new flag pole while also landscaping the area in front of the facility's office. Cody is home schooled and has lived in Tallahassee for two years after moving to Leon County from Naples.

To achieve the final rank of Eagle Scout, the scout must show that he can prove himself through leadership and helping the community.

The project followed several steps as Cody created the project in his own mind and contacted Sgt. Dale Evans at the WCSO Range to see if the project would work for the sheriff's office. He took the potential project through an Eagle Scout committee who approved his plan.

His next step was to raise the funds necessary to pay for the project and organize the entire operation before going back before the committee a second time. On May 25, Cody and his fellow scouts and scout leaders were joined by his parents, Tony and Dawn Franklin, at the range as they completed the project.

Landscaping and lights were included in the project and the old flag pole was converted for use at the entrance of the range to tell visitors whether the range is "hot" or "cold." A flag ceremony was held at the end of the work day to note the completion of the project.

Cody was joined by his grandfather Ron Franklin and great-grandmother Frances Franklin as they worked near the blasts of guests using the various sections of the range.

Sgt. Evans said he was pleased with the maturity and dedication shown by Cody and his scouting friends. The Franklins are members of the WCSO Range and Cody said he wanted to do something to improve the appearance of the facility while also honoring America.

"I just wanted to thank Cody Franklin for his dedication and hard work to get our new flag pole and American Flag at the range," said Sgt. Evans. "I also wanted to thank Boy Scout Troop 115 for their hard work assisting with the project. It will be nice to see the great job the guys did every day I go to work."

Cody Franklin has a Facebook page that shows what it takes to become an Eagle Scout. It can be found on Facebook at: EagleScoutProjectofCody.

WHS Salutatorian speaks at graduation

By JONATHAN CHUNN

Good evening the class of 2013, friends, family, and faculty.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank my Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, the parents of this graduating class, our retired Superintendent of many years, David Miller, our new Superintendent Robert Pearce, our principal Mike Crouch, administrators, and of course our teachers. I wish I could name every person who has helped me succeed, but for the sake of time I will not. Our parents and teachers have provided the stepping stones for us to succeed and for that we are eternally grateful. Our school system has remained at the top of our state year in and year out, and this is a testament to the faculty and staff across the board. It has been a pleasure to have been a part of this family.

We are all here tonight in celebration of what we, the class of 2013, have accomplished. Although we all have experienced some unfortunate losses, the moments each of us share will be looked back on with pride and joy. As War Eagles our class has been a part of a state championship in cheerleading, we were state runner-ups in football, state semifinalists in baseball, we had countless district championships in various sports, and we had several individual champions in sports like wrestling, cross country, track, and tennis. Some of my favorite memories have occurred beyond the classroom, something I believe almost all of us can agree on.

I'll never forget Coach Klees having us practice football on those wonderful Saturday mornings. All of us players remember the "on the line" prior to the numerous gassers we were about to run. The memories of playing under the lights, with a packed stadium on the very field we stand on tonight will stay with me forever. Whether it was a win or loss, which most of the time it was a win, our band would play our alma mater, a shared jubilation that we all hold dear. Members of our class also set milestones through clubs like SWAT, and the Interact Club. Our NJROTC put forth long hours, and their work paid off without question. FCA has made a difference in our school. Our Model U.N. team has won many distinguished delegations, and our Academic Team has been state finalist all four years.

For me it feels as if just yesterday I was dropped off in front of Wakulla High School for the first time in 2009. At that point we were all placing school maps in our binders, and praying we knew where we were going. Our world has changed dramatically since then, our nation has announced the withdrawal from the longest war in our history, but we are still getting out of this recession. Our class, too, has changed. I have made connections with teachers whose influence on me will last a lifetime. I have made friends that will be irreplaceable. We all have grown closer together, and have made bonds that will stand the test of time. My hope is as a class, over the last four years we have developed and matured into adults.

How we look back at the memories we've made on this campus will differ for each individual here tonight, but we all should be proud of what we have accomplished. In just a few moments we will have our diplomas in our hands, and our caps will be in the air. Regardless of the path each individual body, the Wakulla High School class of 2013.

Moving forth into tomorrow each of us will have an opportunity to make a difference. My goal in life is to leave wherever I've been, better than it was before I arrived. If everyone here does just that, we the class of 2013, here tonight has taken, take pride, you've earned it. Some of us remember those nights out; others similar to me remember football practices until 6:30, and then hitting the books. Our accomplishments in high school will not be forgotten. This diploma represents the times where we fought to pass that test, the moments where we raced to get there before they ran out; but most importantly, the War Eagle family we are officially a part of. No matter what we do from here, we all share one thing, the diplomas that will tie us together in a bond that we could never break.

SPECIAL TO THE NEWS

Each person here today is about to start their own new path. Some of us are going to continue our education at a post-secondary institution; others will be entering the workforce. I know guys who are flying out tonight to begin the next phase of their life, and others who will be leaving shortly thereafter. Whether you will be becoming a doctor, an engineer, a politician, or a fisherman, you have an opportunity to make a difference in your own sector of society. Some of us here tonight are scared for the challenges ahead, and others wish they could just get out of here as quickly as they can. Regardless of where each of us are about to go, we are a member of the same can change this world for the better. Whether you are part of the brave few who will serve our nation, or innovating new forms of energy, do the best you can, and like we say in football: "leave it all on the field." Alas, one day you will look in the mirror and see your reflection; make sure you can look at that mirror with pride. Life is not guaranteed to any of us tomorrow, and it is vital that you put forth the effort on a daily basis that you can be proud of. My friend is in a fight against cancer, with a family to support. He understands the obstacles that lie before him, but they do not slow him down. Your legacy will be determined not on how you act in times of triumph, but in times of struggle. Each of us here can be proud of the race we ran to this point, but the rest of the marathon is left to run.

Again I would like to speak for my class in appreciation for our teachers, parents, administrators, school board, and superintendent for providing us with an unparalleled school system in which we can all be proud. Regardless of whether next fall you will be a Seminole, a Gator, an Eagle, or an Argonaut, we are all War Eagles, and that we will be forever. Go forth class of 2013, and make a difference.

Thank You and God Bless!

Walk-to-School Day observed on May 6

Special to The News

Superintendent Bobby Pearce and Sheriff Charlie Creel joined staff, parents and students from Crawfordville Elementary School on May 6 as they participated in a Walk-to-School Day event.

This year the students, parents, administrators, community leaders and teachers started their walk in the Audubon

Forest Subdivision.

With the kick-off to summer right around the corner, The Walk-to-School Day was designed to emphasize the importance of physical activity among children, pedestrian safety, traffic concerns, as well as walking and bicycling safety.

The event was a cooperative venture between the School District Transportation Department, Crawfordville Elementary School, the Wakulla County Sheriff's Office, the Wakulla Community Traffic Safety Team and the Florida Department of Transportation District Three Safety Office.

Participating students received school supplies including backpacks, notebooks and pencils, for participating in the event.

Robby Coles selected by Mets in MLB draft

Special to The News

The 2013 Major League Baseball First Year Player Draft came to a close on Saturday with four Seminoles selected on the third and final day of the draft.

A total of five Florida State players were chosen in this year's draft including Stephen McGee, who was taken on day two in the ninth round by the LA Angels.

Joining McGee as the Seminole draftees in 2013 were Wakulla's Robby Coles (28th rd, 836th pick - NY Mets), along with Peter Miller (16th rd, 484th pick - LA Dodgers), Marcus Davis (24th rd, 718th pick - San Diego Padres), and Scott Sitz (28th rd, 846th pick - Detroit Tigers).

Quoting the 2013 Florida State draft class:

Robby Coles, Jr. (28th rd, 836th pick - NY Mets): "I am just happy to have this opportunity. I've been in contact with the organization so it wasn't a surprise that they picked me. To be honest, I was more surprised just to be drafted because it is such a big thing."

Coles, from Crawfordville, is a graduate of Wakulla High School and attended Chipola on a baseball scholarship before transferring to FSU.

Stephen McGee, Jr. (9th round (277th overall pick), LA Angels: "I am just ecstatic. I can't really explain it. This is the first time that I have been drafted. It's awesome; it's a dream come true.

"I was actually at a movie when I found out," he said. "Luckily it was right at the end of the movie when all the calls, emails, text messages and tweets started coming in. I had talked to the Angels prior (to the draft). Actually, I talked with one of their scouts when we played down at Stetson earlier this year. I knew they were looking at me but I had no idea when I was going to go."

Peter Miller, Jr. (RHP - 16th round (484th overall pick), LA Dodgers: "It's exciting (to be drafted); it's been a long journey. I am definitely excited but I'm just trying to focus on finishing this year off first before I even worry about the draft. It was a complete surprise to be selected by the Dodgers."

Marcus Davis, Jr. (OF/DH - 24th round (718th overall pick), San Diego Padres: "I was happy to see my name come across the screen. I'm grateful for the opportunity. I just want to thank the Padres for giving me this opportunity, so we will see what happens. But there is still some work to be done in Tallahassee."

Scott Sitz, Sr. (RHP - 28th round (846th overall pick), Detroit Tigers: "I actually didn't see my name pop-up as I was in the shower after today's game. Hunter Scantling was actually back in Tallahassee for today's game and he was the one who told me Detroit drafted me. This is something that I have worked my whole life for; I've never been drafted before so I am really excited about it."

THE COOL DOWN LAP

Johnson denied, Biffle wins at Michigan

By ALAN ROSS

Jimmie Johnson relentlessly clawed his way back toward the front for a fourth time Sunday at Michigan, but his charge to overtake Greg Biffle failed when a right front tire blew with three laps to go, handing the Roush Fenway driver the Quicken Loans 400. Biffle's first Cup victory of the season.

The first quarter of the 200-lap race around Michigan International Speedway's 2.0-mile oval was a revolving door up front. But on Lap 64, Jimmie Johnson, who had started 36th, took over the top spot, leading a Hendrick Motorsports contingent of Kasey Kahne and Dale Earnhardt Jr. into the top five.

Though he lost the lead on a restart following the fifth caution - in fact, dropping all the way to 12th - Johnson, by the race's midpoint, had caught back up to his HMS buddies then running 1 and 2, Kahne looking especially solid.

Earlier the trio's fourth mate, Jeff Gordon, endured the ignominy of being the first car to exit the race, when the 24 was collected on Lap 6 by backmarker Bobby Lebonite after the latter spun out.

But then, suddenly, Kahne was out, blowing a right front tire before careening into the outside wall and catching fire. For the second time in the race, with 87 laps to go, Dale Jr. took the front, beating the troops off pit road following the sixth caution brought out by Kahne. He then aced Matt Kenseth on the restart.

Just as Earnhardt fans everywhere were rejoicing and universally aghast at the outright ownership that Earnhardt seems to hold over MIS, the 88 slowed, a cylinder lost. You could almost feel the wind taken from the race's sails at that point.

Earnhardt's blown engine brought out a caution, his lead quickly passing through Johnson and Joey Logano, before Carl Edwards settled things on the restart.

Edwards held the lead to the three-quarter pole, surrendering to Greg Biffle's inside pass with 50 laps to go.

As it turned out, that would be the move of the race, aided by a huge break Biffle caught when the yellow came out during his green-flag pit stop.

The untimely yellow could have sent Biffle to the rear of the lead-lappers, perhaps even put him a lap down, but officials quickly declared his position had not been jeopardized...a race turner, for sure, for the 16.

Johnson, now on his fourth assault to the front, caught Harvick for second with nine laps to go before setting his sights on Biffle. But the 48's final charge came up just short when, with three laps left, Johnson rolled off line, having blown a tire. With the win, Biffle notched his 19th Cup victory - a milestone as it turns out, in that it also gained the Ford Motor Company its 1,000th NASCAR victory. It was also the second time that Biffle had recorded back-to-back wins at this race, having won in 2004 and '05 at MIS in addition to last year. And for the first time in eight years (Sonoma, 2005), all four hard-luck Hendricks cars finished outside the Top 25, a rarity indeed.

Despite the 28th-place finish, Johnson still maintains a 31-point lead over Edwards in the points race, as the series heads to Sonoma's road circuit this Sunday.

MILWAUKEE INDY-FEST: On Lap 181, race leader Takuma Sato lost it, skidding up into the marbles but somehow miraculously retaining the race lead over Helio Castroneves, before defending champion Ryan Hunter-Reay passed them both by Lap 197 and never looked back. It was the third career win at Milwaukee for Hunter-Reay and second in a row at the facility (2004, 2012). Series points leader Castroneves lifted his lead over Hunter-Reay to 16.

Tournament winners in weekend's Big Bend Classic

Well, I hope you had a nice Father's Day and if you were able to fish in the Big Bend Classic you had a great time whether you won or not.

It wasn't the best weather for offshore fishing but some nice fish were still caught.

In the Junior Division Gage Runyan weighed in a 17.30-pound red snapper which set a tournament record.

In the recreational division, Robert Bass brought in a whopping 66.20 pound wahoo that was weighed in at the Moorings.

Scott Friedman was the point leader in the recreational division. He had a first place dolphin which weighed 24.75 pounds and a second place wahoo which weighed 31.15 pounds.

In the recreational team challenge R.E. Bass Construction finished in first place with a first place dolphin, third place redbreast, third place Spanish, fourth place speckled trout and first place with the only wahoo weighed in the team challenge, which was the largest first of the tournament.

The masters division

From The Dock

was won by team No Patients.

Congratulations to all these and other winners.

On June 8, Beau Turner Youth Conservation Center and Warriors and Quiet Waters Foundation brought about 30 warriors and their families from Ft. Benning, Ga., to enjoy the day at the Youth Center.

Dan Hinchee with Crawfordville Auto and Tire and also a WQW board member said the folks at the Beau Turner Center took care of everything and about all they had to do was meet the warriors.

Again a great big thank you should go out to Ronald Fred Crum for again providing rods and reels for the kids of the Warriors.

John Swanson, founder of Fishing for the Brave lined up fishermen in the Big Bend Classic to take some military service folks fishing but I don't know the results or names of those he took. I will have that in my next report.

On Thursday, June 13, I took Shane Marshall and his sons Dakota and Chase along with a friend Stephen.

Shane returned from Afghanistan in November and is in the Army Reserves. Every month he drives to Ft. Knox, Ky., for training.

When you take kids fishing you never know if you are gonna have to teach them to cast or have to cast for them. These guys were amazing. They could all cast and all were very good fishermen.

I think we had about 19 trout, two Spanish and eight or nine flounder.

This was my first trip for Fishing for the Brave but not my last. Shane

SPECIAL TO THE NEWS

FISHING FOR THE BRAVE: Shane Marsall and his sons Dakota and Case along with friend Stephen. They were fishing out of Shell Point with Capt. Jody Campbell.

was so appreciative and hopefully he and his boys had a good time.

Well, most of the tournaments are over until July 20 when C-Quarters will hold its 9th annual youth fishing tournament, which is open to all kids 16 and younger.

Then on Aug. 3 and 4 will be the 10th annual Kingfish Shootout, with all proceeds going to the Leukemia Research Foundation.

Scallop season opens on July 1. Bucky at Shell Island Fish Camp said he has talked to several folks that have seen them both in close and out on the big sandbar out from the mouth of the St. Marks River.

The FWC usually does a report but as of yesterday had not been posted on their website.

We haven't had much rain so it should again be a banner year.

Let's hope so.

Remember to know your limits, wear that sunscreen and leave a float plan.

Good luck and good fishing!

FWC Law Enforcement operations

From FWC News

This report represents some cases the FWC handled recently in the Northwest Region, but it does not include all actions taken by the Division of Law Enforcement.

WAKULLA COUNTY: During the Memorial Day weekend, Officer Charlie Mallow made one BUI arrest, one DUI arrest, three underage alcohol arrests, and issued four UBCs while working core mission activities.

LEON COUNTY: Officer Greg Louque was dispatched to a complaint regarding a subject keeping small alligators in an ice chest behind his residence. Officer Louque arrived at the residence and made contact with two subjects who tried to hide six hatchling alligators. A third subject was involved with possession of the hatchlings. Officer Charles Higman assisted with the investigation. Two citations and one warning were issued for possession of six alligator hatchlings.

FRANKLIN COUNTY: FWC officers and deputies with the Franklin County Sheriff's Office conducted an operational detail for the 2013 White Trash Bash held on Memorial Day weekend. The detail was designed to protect Florida's boating public through enhanced boating safety patrol, increase voluntary compliance from the boating public through education and enforcement of BUI laws, provide a highly visible law enforcement presence, and increase our multi-agency working relationships. During the detail, 86 vessels were boarded with 374 users being checked resulting in issuance of 24 boating safety warnings, five citations for boating safety violations, four resource warnings, two warnings for alcoholic beverages in a state park, and two BUI arrests were made.

• While on patrol in the Tate's Hell Wildlife Management Area, Officer Terry Martin heard dogs running in the Apalachicola WMA. Officer Martin responded to the area and located an individual who was actively running dogs. The individual was cited for allowing dogs to pursue wildlife during the closed season, driving with a revoked drivers' license, and warned for not having a valid hunting license.

JEFFERSON / LEON COUNTY: On Memorial Day weekend, officers conducted and coordinated patrols on the lakes and rivers, which resulted in 98 warnings and 14 citations being issued. Some of the more notable violations included jugging fishing on Lake Talquin, discovered by Officer Greg Louque and Officer Stefanie Wilcox who found minors in possession of alcohol.

GADSDEN COUNTY: Officers Ben Johnson and Matt Bell have been working complaints of illegal fishing in the Little River area of Lake Talquin. They cited three men in separate incidents involving the taking of freshwater game fish by illegal method and possession of undersized speckled perch.

OKALOOSA COUNTY: Lieutenants Philip Glover and Mark Hollinhead, along with Investigator J.W. Armstrong, requested the assistance of Officer Alan Kirchinger, Reserve Officer Jeff Hahr, and Capt. Mary Sumner with the recovery of a kayak and an uncooperative, extremely intoxicated female in the Crab Island area. Glover, Hollinhead and Armstrong successfully recovered the kayak in the swift current. The officers located the female walking away from the scene in chest deep water, occasionally swimming. She was shouting obscenities and making threats of physical harm to every vessel she came in contact with. After determining the female was not a passenger on any vessel or with any remaining party on the sandbar, the officers attempted to persuade her to come aboard the patrol vessel. She refused to cooperate, stating she wanted to kill others and herself. She then ventured into deeper swift waters. The officers quickly maneuvered their patrol vessels to cut off her avenue of escape and continued to encourage her to come to the patrol vessel. She ventured even further into deeper swift current and was in water over her head. Captain Sumner observed the female go under for a second time. Officer Kirchinger and Reserve Officer Hahr were able to grab onto the female when she resurfaced. Her weight made it extremely difficult to pull her aboard the patrol vessel. Armstrong entered the water and physically pushed the female, while Officers Kirchinger and

Hahr assisted with pulling her into the patrol vessel. As soon as she was onboard, she immediately became physically combative, yelled profanities, and continued to state she was going to kill everyone and she wanted to die. Hollinhead boarded the patrol vessel to assist with controlling her violent resistance. Capt. Sumner proceeded to the

USCG Destin Station and requested EMS to meet them at the dock. Due to the female's continued physical resistance and combative manner, she was strapped to a backboard and lifted from the patrol vessel where she was delivered to awaiting EMS personnel and transported to the Ft. Walton Medical Center under the Baker Act

Coast Guard Auxiliary Reports

By Carolyn Brown Treadon

Members of Flotilla 12 are sons, daughters, fathers, grandfathers and great-grandfathers.

We sincerely hope that every one enjoyed and celebrated the fathers and father figures in your life this past weekend!

When talking to our Flotilla Commander Duane Treadon about important information to share with you all this week, he thought it would be good to talk about the Founding Fathers of the United States Coast Guard given it was Father's Day.

It has long been believed that the Revenue Marine, signed into law on Aug. 4, 1790 by Congress under the direction of Secretary of the Treasury Alexander Hamilton, was the beginning for what is currently the U.S. Coast Guard.

However, the discovery of letters between Hamilton and Col. Sharp Delaney, a Customs Collector at the time, bring the beginning into question.

Prior to the official formation by Congress, Col. Delaney was using a fleet based out of Philadelphia, and monitoring up to Newcastle, Conn.

In several letters between Hamilton and Delaney, they were discussing using ships to enforce new customs laws and thwart smuggling, piracy and evasion of customs. However, several miscommunications and other unforeseen circumstances, led Delaney to use a barge with sails to patrol the Delaware River without the consent or endorsement of Hamilton.

Once the two discussed the success Delaney had made with the single vessel, the controversy was born.

Although it was never formally established as an entity, Delaney, his officers and crews were collecting duties owed to the Federal Government as the future Revenue Marines would do.

Which came first, the Colonel or the Revenue Marines?

The official historian for the Coast Guard does not recognize Delaney's efforts as a precursor to the Coast Guard, but rather an administrative tool not a member of the official fleet of first cutters.

If you would like to read more about this ongoing debate, you can access information at <http://www.navalhistory.org/2011/08/04/founders-of-the-u-s-coast-guard>.

This coming weekend, members from all five Flotillas will come together at the Naval Station Pensacola Yacht Club for our summer division meeting.

Check back next week for highlights from our meeting!

If you are interested in becoming involved in the Auxiliary, check out our website at www.uscgaux.net for membership information or contact our Flotilla Staff Officer for Human Resources Fran Keating at fso-hr@uscgaux.net.

Underwater Wakulla

By Gregg Stanton

Underground storm driven tidal bore.

Tropical storm rain that falls to our north, in Georgia and Alabama, comes down hill and often underground to us in North Florida.

Our rivers to the east, such as the Suwannee and Santa Fe, typically fill up and backflow into local springs. This flushing event recharges the local aquifer with valuable water and nutrients for the cave animals.

Our early season Tropical Storm Andrea recently brought 50 mph winds and a sea surge of around 3 feet, but more importantly, plenty of rain. Wakulla received 2.5 inches of rain, with more falling to our north.

Much of that rain went right into the ground locally, but that our north is now flooding dive sites at Madison Blue Springs, and Little River to our east.

When Tropical Storm Debby visited us last year in June we had a flooding event in Wakulla County, recording nearly 29 inches of rain falling in the county over two days. The winds were 55 mph with a sea surge of 2 to 4.5 feet.

While flooding occurred during the storm, there was a post-storm groundwater level rise of an estimated 4-plus feet at my house days after the storm passed. This post-storm flooding caused me more damage that the rain during the storm! Rain that falls must also make it to the sea, creating a second flooding event.

Now imagine a storm that drops a whole lot of water to the north of Wakulla County (as it skirts our coastline) followed by another storm hitting a week later running to the south of Wakulla sending its surge northward. The effect of the high water table load going south and the surge pushing north on the coast would be disastrous.

Such may have been the case, we are told by a Wakulla County landowner, in the summer of 2008.

Tropical Storm Fay cut across North Florida in late August 2008, dropping nearly 28 inches of water in Thomsville Ga., just to our north, before making landfall in Carrabelle (fortunately with a low surge of 1 foot).

Hurricane Gustav however, arrived in the Gulf of Mexico one week later making landfall in Louisiana on Sept. 1 as a category 2 storm with an effective radius of 200 miles towards the east into our coastal arena. While we did not see the 10 foot surge reported in Louisiana, coupled with our high September tides, and the prevailing high ground water levels headed for the Gulf, water very likely backed up in our underground caves.

Today the water in his sinkhole resides at 30+ feet below ground level. Today his sinkhole has a tidal rise and fall that is six hours behind that of the Gulf of Mexico. He once had a beautiful bridge that spanned this feature. He tells a fascinating story of groundwater during Hurricane Gustav, suddenly rising over the banks of his sinkhole, washing away the bridge and docks and flooding his property.

What a fascinating research site this could become, to better understand the performance of our groundwater in Wakulla County.

FWC promotes dive flag awareness

From FWC News

With people out enjoying the warmer weather, it is important to remember to stay safe - and that goes for both on and in the water.

The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission reminds boaters and divers of the importance of using a divers-down flag.

"Divers-down flags are not only required by law, but they are necessary to stay safe, particularly in areas of high boat traffic," said Major Bruce Cooper, commander for the FWC's Northwest Region.

Divers-down flags help both divers and boaters. Divers use them to notify boaters that they are in the water. Boat operators see the flags and know to steer clear.

"The Emerald Coast is a beautiful spot to snorkel and dive to see dolphins and other marine life in their natural environment," Cooper said. "Everyone just needs to remember what to do to keep themselves and others safe. Boaters should be particularly vigilant of swimmers and snorkelers in and around these dolphin-viewing areas."

Divers must do their part by ensuring the flag is properly displayed when divers are in the water, and removed when they exit the water. Boaters need to be aware at all times, scanning the water for dive flags.

The specific regulations regarding divers-down flags are as follows:

- Divers-down flags displayed on vessels must be at least 20 inches by 24 inches, and a stiffener is required to keep the flag unfurled. Dive flags carried on floats must be at least 12 inches by 12 inches. Also, divers-down flags on vessels must be displayed above the vessel's highest point so that the flag's visibility is not obstructed in any direction.
- Divers must make reasonable efforts to stay within 300 feet of a divers-down flag on open waters and within 100 feet of a flag within rivers, inlets or navigation channels.
- Vessel operators must make a reasonable effort to maintain a distance of at least 300 feet from divers-down flags on open waters and at least 100 feet from flags on rivers, inlets or navigation channels. Vessels approaching divers-down flags closer than 300 feet in open water and 100 feet in rivers, inlets and navigation channels must slow to idle speed.

When divers are out of the water, a dive flag must not be displayed.

To view a video about divers-down flags, visit YouTube.com/MyFWC-Videos.

Hand-built wooden boats

Campers learn how to build a boat, and launch the craft, which they christened the “Chum Bucket”

Boat builders Conner Fisher, Coleson Davis, Hayden Martin, Roger Pinholster, Alex Thompson, A.J. Slaymaker and Logan Fisher pose with the boat they built at Rock Landing in Panacea on Saturday, June 15.

The Big Bend Maritime Center in Panacea held a boat building day camp for youth June 10-14.

Volunteer Roger Pinholster, a retired educator, taught six boys, ages 10 to 13, how to use tools, read plans and parse together a wooden boat from scratch in five days.

The boys learned how to use modern tools such as electric sanders, drills, and a chop saw, as well as old tools such as planes, chisels and hand drills. In addition to building a boat, the boys also learned how to throw a cast net, visited the Gulf Specimen Marine Lab and had a water balloon fight.

The campers who attended the camp were 13-year-old Coleson Davis and Hayden Martin, 12-year-old Alex Thompson and Logan Fisher, and 10-year-old Conner Fisher and A.J. Slaymaker.

On Saturday, June 15, parents were invited to watch the boat launch. The boys put the finishing touches on the boat then hauled it to Rock Landing boat ramp for the maiden voyage.

They poured champagne over the bow and took turns rowing the small craft. The boys named their boat “Chum Bucket” from the popular children’s cartoon, Spongebob Squarepants.

The camp will be held again next summer and there are plans to hold a boat building camp this fall for families. For more information about the BBMC, go to www.floridaforesight.org.

Master boatbuilder and BBMC board member Larry Tucker came by to see the progress the campers were making.

Law Enforcement and Courts reports

Sheriff's Report

On June 12, Deputy Alan Middlebrooks was on patrol on Old Shell Point Road when he observed stop signs were missing. All of the signs on the road were missing from Highway 267 to Highway 61. Side streets signs remained in the ground. The missing signs were observed thrown over a fence line. The county road and bridge department was notified to replace the signs. Lt. Sherrell Morrison also investigated.

In other activity reported by the sheriff's office this week:

JUNE 7

- Lt. Sherrell Morrison conducted a Crawfordville traffic stop for speeding and discovered marijuana inside the vehicle. The passenger allegedly admitted the marijuana was his and Jesse Raymond Zurlino, 19, of Atlanta was issued a notice to appear in court for possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana. The driver, Sommers McCall Coleman, 18, of Hahira, Ga. was issued a traffic citation for unlawful speed as he was driving 57 mph in a 35 mph zone.

- Nicholas Ryan Sluis, 34, of Crawfordville was allegedly observed attempting to dispense gasoline from a closed business. Deputy Alan Middlebrooks investigated and discovered that the driver did not have a valid driver license. The deputy also determined that the tag was not attached to the correct vehicle and drug paraphernalia was discovered inside the vehicle. Sluis was charged with possession of narcotic equipment, operating a motor vehicle while license was suspended or revoked with knowledge and attached tag not assigned.

- Debra Compton of Crawfordville reported a fraud. Someone opened a satellite network account using the victim's personal information. The victim discovered that there was an unpaid balance of $805 from Ocala. Sgt. Danny Harrell investigated.

- John Delgado of Crawfordville reported a criminal mischief to a residential subdivision gate. The chain of the gate was broken during the night. Damage was estimated under $200. Deputy Sean Wheeler investigated.

- Justin Casey of Crawfordville and John Roberts of Tallahassee were involved in a two-vehicle crash in front of Walgreens. There were only minor injuries reported. Deputy Vicki Mitchell investigated.

- Joshua Bryant Sparks, 21, of Panacea was allegedly observed driving 49 mph in a 25 mph zone in Medart. Sgt. Lorne Whaley conducted a traffic stop and smelled a strong odor of marijuana. A marijuana cigarette was discovered in the ashtray. Sparks was issued a notice to appear in court for possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana and was issued a Uniform Traffic Citation for unlawful speed.

JUNE 8

- Deputy Stephen Simmons observed a vehicle emitting smoke and making loud noises as it was being driven. The plumes of blackish smoke began to obstruct the deputy's view. Deputy Simmons stopped Kasi Waltermo, 27, of Crawfordville who told him she did not possess a valid driver license. Waltermo was arrested for driving while license is suspended or revoked with knowledge. She was also cited for violation of statutes related to her exhaust system and air pollution control equipment.

- Jennifer Carter of Crawfordville reported the loss of a firearm. The firearm and ammunition are valued at $360. The handgun was entered in the NCIC/FCIC data base as lost. Deputy Gibby Gibson investigated.

- Susan Flournoy of Crawfordville reported a criminal mischief, trespassing and residential burglary to a rental property. The victim was attempting to show the property to potential tenants when water was discovered pouring out of the house. An estimated $1,500 worth of damage was done to the home. Suspects have been identified. Deputy Gibby Gibson investigated.

- Wesley A. Stopford, 46, of Thomasville, N.C., was arrested and charged with fleeing and attempting to elude law enforcement officers. Sgt. Lorne Whaley observed a semi truck and trailer operating at 75 mph in a 55 mph zone. The truck traveled 6.5 miles before pulling over. Stopford was also issued a traffic citation for speeding and for an expired tag more than six months. A passenger in the truck was released from the scene. Deputy Stephen Simmons also investigated.

- Taylor Dawn Newsome, 18, of Tallahassee was issued a notice to appear in court for possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana following a traffic stop. Deputy Stephen Simmons conducted the traffic stop due to the vehicle not having working tail lights. Deputy Simmons observed suspect marijuana in plain view inside the vehicle as he approached the car. The marijuana weighed approximately five grams. A verbal warning was given for the faulty equipment.

JUNE 9

- Stephanie Langston of Crawfordville reported a criminal mischief. A suspect, who has been identified, poured a liquid substance into her vehicle gas tank. Deputy Gibby Gibson was able to determine that the substance was a cleaning fluid and it was taken for more analysis.

- A motorist contacted law enforcement about a vehicle in Panacea that narrowly missed hitting her vehicle with a beer bottle. Deputy Mike Zimba conducted a traffic stop in Panacea. Andrew Steven Lazzell, 27, of Crawfordville did not possess a valid driver license as it was suspended in 2006. Lazzell was arrested for driving while license is suspended or revoked with knowledge.

JUNE 10

- Deputy Mike Zimba responded to a residential alarm in Sopchoppy at a home owned by Fay Crum of Jacksonville. Deputy Zimba secured the home and could not determine if anything was missing. The victim plans to visit the home and determine if any property was stolen.

- James McGehee of Crawfordville and Amy Lamarche of Crawfordville were involved in a two-vehicle crash at the Crawfordville Post Office. There were no injuries and minor damage to the vehicles. Sgt. Billy Jones investigated.

- Jason Metcalf of Crawfordville reported the theft of a push mower and gasoline can. The property was stolen from the victim's truck. The mower and gas can are valued at $180. Deputy Mike Crum investigated.

- Edmond Andrew of Crawfordville reported the theft of a lock box and contents from his home. The box and contents are valued at approximately $52. The lock box was recovered and a suspect has been identified. Deputy Mike Crum investigated.

- Michael Bradham of Crawfordville was arrested for driving while license suspended or revoked with knowledge, habitual offender, following a traffic stop. Deputy Ian Dohme reportedly observed an expired tag on Bradham's vehicle. The tag expired in September 2012.

JUNE 11

- A Crawfordville woman filed a complaint of a false report of child abuse to the Department of Children and Families. The victim reported that information was received by DCF falsely accusing her of drinking in excess and using illegal drugs. The victim was contacted by a DCF investigator and directed to file a law enforcement report. Detective Rob Giddens investigated.

- Wal-Mart Asset Protection staff reported a retail theft. A suspect was observed going from department to department. Eventually he allegedly put a weed trimmer in a shopping cart and attempted to leave the store without paying for it. Michael Ray Marks, 26, of Crawfordville was arrested for retail theft and transported to the Wakulla County Jail. Sgt. Mike Helms investigated.

- Crawfordville women filed a complaint over a false report to a law enforcement officer regarding the treatment of her children by herself and her husband. The Department of Children and Families was contacted. A suspect has been identified. Detective Rob Giddens investigated.

- A Crawfordville victim reported that an acquaintance used social media to threaten her home by bombing. The case was forwarded to the Criminal Investigations Division. Deputy Ian Dohme investigated.

- Deputy Alan Middlebrooks initiated a traffic stop after allegedly observing a motorist fail to stop at a stop sign in northern Wakulla County. Jimmy Dewayne Sprowes, 26, of Tallahassee could not produce a valid driver license. He was charged with driving while license is suspended or revoked as a habitual offender. The driver also received a traffic citation for failure to obey a stop sign.

JUNE 12

- On June 12, Patricia Kirton of Crawfordville reported the theft of a floating raft which was tied to her dock. The raft is valued at $250. Lt. Brent Sanders investigated.

- Sabrina Butler of Crawfordville reported the theft of a bicycle from her porch. The bike is valued at $100. Deputy Mike Zimba investigated.

- A 25-year-old Panacea man was arrested for cruelty toward a child after the 4-year-old child's grandparents reported that the child was bruised on his legs and back. The suspect told investigators that he became angry that the child soiled his clothing and spanked the child with a plastic train track. The Department of Children and Families was called to the scene to investigate. Deputy Richard Moon investigated.

- Sgt. Lorne Whaley allegedly observed a speeding motorist on U.S. Highway 319. Michael Stephen Bean, 28, of Tallahassee was observed driving 53 mph in a 35 mph zone.

Sgt. Whaley attempted to conduct a traffic stop but the motorist allegedly increased his speed. Bean was reportedly recklessly crossing travel lanes losing control in the center lane and in the south-bound lane which nearly caused an accident.

Whaley eventually blocked the motorist's escape route from the Huddle House parking lot. Field sobriety exercises were conducted and Bean was arrested for DUI and transported to the Wakulla County Jail without incident.

The Wakulla County Sheriff's Office received 1,106 calls for service during the past week including 22 residential and business alarms; 106 citizen contacts; 10 disturbances; 23 E-911 abandoned cell calls; six E-911 abandoned calls; 42 investigations; 11 juvenile citizen contacts; 50 medical emergencies; 362 residential and business security checks; 23 special details; 39 subpoenas services; 12 suspicious vehicles; 30 traffic enforcements; 153 traffic stops; 14 disabled vehicles; 12 reckless vehicles; and 10 wanted people.

Courts side with smokers' families in tobacco cases

By JIM SAUNDERS
THE NEWS SERVICE OF FLORIDA

TALLAHASSEE, June 13 - Two of Florida's top courts Thursday ruled against the tobacco industry in cases involving the deaths of smokers, including an appeals court upholding a $20 million punitive-damages judgment against R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

The punitive-damages case, decided by the 1st District Court of Appeal, stemmed from the 1995 death of Frank Townsend, an Ocala man who smoked the company's cigarettes and developed lung cancer. Townsend's widow, Lyantia, filed a lawsuit against R.J. Reynolds - one of thousands of tobacco-related cases bouncing through the state's court system.

Thursday's ruling was the second time the Tallahassee-based appeals court has ruled on the amount of punitive damages that could be awarded to Townsend's widow.

Last year, judges said a $40.8 million punitive-damages award was excessive and ordered that the case be sent back to an Alachua County court, where it was originally heard, to determine a lower amount.

A circuit judge set the amount at $20 million, which prompted R.J. Reynolds to appeal again on a number of grounds, including whether it was entitled to a new trial on the damages and whether the $20 million was excessive.

But the appeals court rejected those arguments.

The jury in the case also awarded $10.8 million in separate damages to compensate Townsend's widow for such issues as pain and suffering and loss of consortium.

That total was reduced to $5.5 million because it was determined that Frank Townsend was 49 percent at fault for his death and R.J. Reynolds was 51 percent at fault.

The Townsend case is part of a barrage of lawsuits against tobacco companies stemming from a 2006 Florida Supreme Court decision.

That decision determined such lawsuits have to be heard individually instead of as a class action, but it also established critical findings about the health dangers of smoking and misrepresentation by cigarette makers - findings that have bolstered the cases, known in the legal world as "Engle progeny" cases.

Meanwhile Thursday, the state Supreme Court sided in a Miami-Dade County case with Karen Capone, the widow of Frank Capone, a long-time smoker who died in July 2006 after filing a personal-injury lawsuit against cigarette maker Philip Morris USA.

The dispute focused on whether Karen Capone should be able to amend the case and pursue a wrongful-death claim.

Philip Morris contended that the case needed to be dismissed and that a new wrongful-death lawsuit would have to be filed.

But justices, in a 5-2 decision, sided with Capone.

"When an injured plaintiff in a personal injury action dies, it is both necessary and proper for the personal representative of the decedent's estate to be named a party in the pending action so that a survival damages claim, a wrongful death claim, or both, may continue to be pursued," Justice R. Fred Lewis wrote in the majority opinion.

Lewis was joined by justices Barbara Pariente, Peggy Quince, Jorge Labarga and James E.C. Perry. Chief Justice Ricky Polston and Justice Charles Canady dissented.

WEEKLY ROUNDUP – (Recap and analysis of the week in state government)

Scott blasts off to France

By JIM TURNER
and JIM SAUNDERS
THE NEWS SERVICE OF FLORIDA

TALLAHASSEE, June 14 – As Gov. Rick Scott jetted off to France on Friday, he hoped to showcase Florida's aviation and aerospace industries – and, of course, bring back some new jobs.

But before the trade mission even started, Scott dropped a couple of unrelated bombshells. He announced Thursday that the Internet retailer Amazon could create 3,000 jobs in the state. And Friday morning, he said federal officials had approved a long-debated overhaul of Florida's Medicaid system.

Both announcements could be considered victories for Scott, though he immediately started catching grief about how Amazon building in the state would lead to the company's Florida customers starting to have to pay sales taxes on their purchases.

Regardless of that grief, 3,000 jobs are, well, 3,000 jobs. And for a governor who has pinned much of his re-election bid on creating jobs, 3,000 is a big number.

The Medicaid overhaul, which involves moving beneficiaries statewide into HMOs and other managed-care plans, has long been a priority of Scott and Republican legislative leaders. It remains to be seen whether voters will attach any importance to the overhaul, but Scott, who made his riches in the health-care industry, sees managed care as the way to improve the massive Medicaid program.

AMAZON BACK FROM THE DEAD

A month ago, it appeared that Florida's hopes of landing at least one Amazon warehouse had been dashed because of disagreement about when the retailer would have to start collecting state sales taxes.

Taxation of Internet sales is a complicated and controversial issue. But the bottom line is that Amazon doesn't currently collect sales taxes from Florida customers but likely would have to do so if it had a physical presence in the state, such as a warehouse.

That's why Scott's announcement Thursday that a deal was in the works was a surprise. And it quickly became apparent that community leaders in various parts of Florida would welcome the jobs and millions of dollars in construction spending that Amazon could deliver.

Hillsborough County commissioners next week are set to discuss providing local incentives for an Amazon facility, while economic development leaders across the Interstate 4 corridor and in northeast Florida also could be developing pitches.

The issue is still a work in progress between Amazon and the state's economic-development arm, Enterprise Florida, which will work out the final details for any potential incentives and selection of possible distribution-warehouse locations.

But optimism has at least returned to Winter Haven, which hopes this week's developments will revive previous discussions about building a warehouse near where a new CSX rail terminal is going up.

"We happen to have this piece of land here that is ideal for intermodal, if that plays for Amazon. I think that would be ideal for them," said Winter Haven Economic Development Council President Ingram Leedy. "But I think if a dart hit in Central Florida, its ripple across all our communities would be great for all of us."

Where Amazon builds depends upon economic incentives, but also the e-commerce giant's supply-chain needs. That could mean locating in close proximity to major highways, rail lines and ports.

Ty Rogers, a spokesman for Amazon, responded in an email Friday that the company had no comment regarding potential locations or details beyond the Thursday release from the governor's office. That release outlined plans to create more than 3,000 jobs and spend more than $300 million in investments in Florida.

Leedy said Amazon's new same-day delivery strategy is driving the need to strategically locate its regional hubs, which should be encouraging for both the Jacksonville region and the I-4 corridor.

The Winter Haven plans were halted when the state rebuffed efforts by Seattle-based Amazon to delay collection of state sales taxes. The release from Scott's office on Thursday said Amazon would begin collecting Florida sales tax "at such time as it is required under current Florida law."

The Orlando Sentinel reported that the company intends to build a pair of one-million-square-foot "fulfillment centers" that would include half the envisioned 3,000 jobs.

One of the centers could be located along

Interstate 75 in Ruskin, on the east side of Tampa Bay.

The Hillsborough County Commission will be asked to approve a package for Amazon next Wednesday that would include $225,000 tied to the state Qualified Target Industries Tax Refund Program. Also, the commission would agree to hold a public hearing in July on providing $6.4 million in property-tax exemptions over seven years.

Amazon would be required to create 375 new, higher-wage jobs in return for the $225,000 from Hillsborough's Countywide and Unincorporated Area Economic Development Activity Funds, while the property tax exemptions would require the company to make a $200 million capital investment and create at least 75 well-paying jobs.

MAJOR CHANGES COMING TO MEDICAID

Republican lawmakers have routinely vilified Medicaid in recent years because of its increasing costs and what they have described as lackluster care.

But with the announcement Friday that the Obama administration had signed off on moving almost all Medicaid beneficiaries into managed-care plans, Republicans will have the opportunity to see whether their solution for fixing Medicaid will work.

Scott and the Republican-controlled Legislature approved the controversial change in 2011, and it took nearly two years to finalize the details of what is known as a "waiver" with the federal Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services. Scott touted the approval as a way to improve care.

"Florida is leading the nation in improving cost, quality and access in the Medicaid program," Scott said in a prepared statement. "CMS' final approval of our Medicaid managed care waiver is a huge win for Florida families because it will improve the coordination of care throughout the Medicaid system. Healthcare providers can now more effectively manage chronic conditions and work with families to provide preventative treatments."

Florida CHAIN, a patient-advocacy group that has been among the most-vocal critics of the change, said the federal government included safeguards in its approval but that the managed-care program will have to be watched closely.

It pointed, in part, to controversies about a Medicaid managed-care pilot program that began in 2006 and 2007 in Broward, Duval, Clay, Baker and Nassau counties.

"Despite these federal safeguards, the focus now shifts to the state and its efforts to implement this program that will affect access to care for millions of patients in all 67 counties," a Florida CHAIN statement said. "The countless reports of disrupted, delayed and denied care streaming in from the original five counties are still very fresh in the minds of all stakeholders."

HILL BRINGS CONSERVATIVE MESSAGE TO TALLAHASSEE

Count Mike Hill among the people who like the direction Scott and Republican legislative leaders are moving the state. He wants to reduce the size of government, lower taxes and scale back regulations.

And after winning a special election Tuesday to replace the late Rep. Clay Ford in a Panhandle district, Hill will be able to show his support on the House floor.

Hill, a Pensacola insurance agent, easily defeated Democrat Jeremy Lau in the special election in House District 2, which includes voters in Escambia and Santa Rosa counties.

When he takes his seat, Hill will become the only black Republican in the Legislature.

But Hill attributed his win to conservative views that he shares with voters in the GOP-dominated district.

"It's simply a message that resonates in this conservative part of Florida," Hill said.

STORY OF THE WEEK: The federal government gave final approval to a proposal to require that Medicaid beneficiaries statewide enroll in managed-care plans, an idea that Gov. Rick Scott and Republican lawmakers have pursued for two years.

QUOTE OF THE WEEK: "Well, three things are certain in Panhandle politics: The sun rises in the east, it sets in the west, and the most conservative candidate wins." -- Rep. Matt Gaetz, R-Fort Walton Beach, in discussing his planned 2016 Senate bid.

WHITE'S WINES

Wine blogging grows up

By DAVID WHITE

Last week, about 250 wine bloggers gathered in Penticton, a small city in British Columbia, Canada, for the sixth annual North American Wine Bloggers' Conference.

That so many wine enthusiasts would travel to a city five hours east of Vancouver isn't surprising. Held in a different winemaking region each year, the annual conference brings together bloggers from across the world to meet one another, share tips and tricks, and learn from industry leaders.

What is surprising, though, is just how mature this group has become. What started as a small collection of amateur wine journalists embracing a new form of communication has evolved into a group of writers that's virtually indistinguishable from the "conventional" wine media.

The blogosphere has been trending in this direction for quite some time.

Tom Wark, a wine industry publicist who helped start the annual bloggers' conference – and who also runs the popular wine blog Fermentation (fermentationwineblog.com) – wrote about this development two years ago.

"The wine blog is now fully integrated into the world of wine writing," he explained. "If anything of significance distinguishes wine bloggers from traditional wine publishing, it is [that] wine bloggers publish in a now recognizable and predictable diarist format, and that they are largely unpaid. Beyond these two factors, little separates the blogged wine writing from the traditional or commercial wine writing."

Indeed, leading wine bloggers now contribute regularly to traditional media outlets and established print critics feel obligated to write online.

Consider Alder Yarrow, the founder and editor of Vinography.com, an influential wine blog that launched nearly ten years ago. He's on the editorial board for Sommelier Journal, a popular trade publication, and a columnist for Jancis Robinson's Purple Pages.

Or look at Joe Roberts, who founded 1WineDude.com in 2007 to make clear that "learning to appreciate wine does not have to be daunting, expensive, or reserved for some strange elite with magical noses." In 2012, he secured a regular writing gig with Playboy.com.

The list goes on. Kyle Schlachter, author of ColoradoWinePress.com, has contributed to Wine Spectator and Decanter, two of the world's most popular wine publications. Tyler Colman, a lecturer at New York University who writes DrVino.com, has been published in Food & Wine, the New York Times, and countless other outlets.

Conversely, established print writers have turned to the web.

Few oenophiles had heard of Steve Heimoff, the West Coast Editor for Wine Enthusiast, until he launched his eponymous blog in the spring of 2008. This past February, Antonio Galloni, a top critic for Robert Parker's Wine Advocate, left his job to start an online enterprise.

Wine blogs haven't replaced traditional outlets, of course. Publications like Decanter and The World of Fine Wine remain tremendously important. Hyper-specialized outlets like Allen Meadows' Burghound and Peter Liem's Champagne Guide offer material that simply can't be found for free.

Obviously, wine blogs aren't created equal. Today, there are more than 1,500 active wine blogs – while many are worth visiting, few have real reach.

But the blogosphere has grown up – and more and more blogs are worth following. Those who take the craft seriously recognize that if they desire relevance, they have to create content that's interesting, engaging, and frequent.

Just look at Elaine Brown's WakawakaWineReviews.com, a site that launched in the fall of 2011. Elaine generates a herculean amount of material, and everything she writes is a pleasure to read. Plus, her passion for wine comes through in all her work. This is something every writer strives for, but few actually pull off.

In the newest issue of Sommelier Journal, the editor, David Vogels, surveys the blogosphere in his opening essay. "[Wine] blogging has moved well beyond its formative stage," he writes. "You have to be particularly good writer... or a very funny one... to be relevant as a diarist to anyone beyond your immediate friends and family."

Fortunately, today's blogosphere has plenty of good writers – and quite a few funny ones, as well.

Mimickry is a form of imitation for survival

Natural Wakulla

By Les Harrison

"Imitation is the sincerest of flattery," wrote Charles Caleb Colton.

Colton was a sometimes cleric, essayist, wine merchant and gambler who bounced around Europe and North America during the early 19th century.

It is likely many of his financial lenders hoped the public would not imitate his borrowing practices. Aside from his few literary works and the catchy phrase above, he was most noted for running up debts then leaving for parts unknown.

Imitations are not looked upon kindly when lazy students, or journalist for that matter, complete an assignment by borrowing blocks of text. Plagiarism is a flunking and firing offence with career-ending potential.

The concepts of imitation and mimicry date back to the earliest written records of ancient Greece. The philosopher Plato used mimicry to define beauty and truth, and as a contrast to the negative aspects of life.

For the denizens of Wakulla County's untamed regions, mimicry is a form of imitation which assures the survival of some. Survival always beats the alternative.

Insects are particularly effective at using several forms of mimicry to survive and reproduce in a very hostile environment where big hungry creatures always are on the prowl for their next meal. Eyes and disguise are the top tactics for continuation of the species.

Multiple eyes on the bugs face are common in the world of Wakulla County's insects. Large eye-like spots on the rear of the bug are an effective form of defensive mimicry used by several caterpillars locally.

The saddleback caterpillar is a good example of how this deception is carried out locally. There are two color-coordinated

PHOTOS BY LES HARRISON/SPECIAL TO THE NEWS

Though capable of inflicting severe pain on anything which molests it, a saddleback caterpillar prefers to warn off predators with a fierce-looking 'face' on its rump.

ed eye-like spots on the rump of this caterpillar.

These spots are exponentially larger than the saddleback's real eyes which are barely visible without the aid of magnification. An approaching predator will quickly notice the blankly staring spots and likely recall the last encounter with this inappropriately called creature.

It is worth noting the saddleback caterpillar has more defensive weapons systems than an Ageis missile cruiser. The novice predator that attempts to dine on this colorful plump morsel will always remember the experience.

In addition to insects and caterpillars, some spiders have eye-spots on their thorax. Depending on the circumstances, the hunter can easily become the hunted.

Another mimicry tactic is camouflage, the ability to blend into the background and avoid detection. Millions, if not billions, of dollars of hunting clothing is sold annually to provide deer and turkey hunters the perceived advantage over their potential trophy animal.

Moths are quite adept at using this technique to hide in plain sight. In the wild they almost always rest or lay eggs on surfaces which closely resemble their color scheme.

The last form of mimicry occasionally seen in Wakulla County is the lure. This method attracts the prey to its demise.

A prime example is employed by young water moccasins which have a sulfur-yellow tipped tail. The tail is shaken to resemble a wounded insect as the snake hides in the leaf litter.

The unwitting victim is surprised, no doubt, to discover its status as a menu item.

To learn more about how Wakulla County's wildlife employs mimicry contact the UF/IFAS Wakulla County Extension Office at 850-926-3931 or <http://wakulla.ifas.ufl.edu/>.

Les Harrison is the Wakulla County Extension Director. He can be reached by email at harrison@ufl.edu or at (850) 926-3931.

Eye-spots appear on the insect's most vulnerable location as a way of making a weakness appear as strength.

Sopchoppy Fourth of July

Billy Dean will headline show that includes Lari White, Chuck Cannon

Special to The News

This year's Sopchoppy Fourth of July spans three days and is headlined by Nashville star Billy Dean, along with Lari White and Chuck Cannon.

This year's festival is also dedicated to "Mr. Sopchoppy" Bill Stephens, who passed away last year, and who was always promoting Sopchoppy and its Independence Day festival.

Headliner Billy Dean is a talented musician whose insightful songwriting, clear and distinctive voice, and masterful instrumental gifts have earned him accolades from many awards academies and countless devoted fans.

A native of Quincy, Billy was raised appreciating the value of music and has a diverse array of musical influences. After attending college on a basketball scholarship, Billy moved to Nashville in 1983 and by 1990 had recorded his first Top 5 Hit "Only Here For A Little While."

Since then, Billy has transcended genres with his unique repertoire earning numerous awards, including: The Academy of Country Music's Song of the Year "Somewhere In My Broken Heart," ACM New Male Vocalist of the Year, BMI Pop Awards, BMI Song Awards, BMI Million Air Plays Award, Country Music Television Rising Star Award, NSAI Song of the Year, and a Grammy for a Country Tribute "Amazing Grace."

Billy's appeal reaches beyond the music world. He has appeared on numerous television shows as well as made-for TV movies, including: Blue Valley Songbird, A Face to Kill For, Lois & Clark, One Life to Live, Diagnosis Murder, Good Morning America, The Tonight Show, The Montel Show, and many others.

After 12 albums and 11 Top 10 singles, Billy has founded the publishing company BDMG (Billy Dean Music Group).

In 2012, Billy released his latest album, "A Man Of Good Fortune."

"Music has deeply enriched my life," notes Dean. "My fans have waited patiently for this new release because they know this one is for them. It's because of my fans and their support that I've spent most of my life on a musical journey and that's why I truly feel like 'A Man Of Good Fortune.'"

LARI WHITE

Lari White's remarkable range as a singer/songwriter has earned her three Grammys ("The Apostle" film soundtrack and "Amazing Grace: A Country Tribute to Gospel"), RIAA Gold status (Wishes/RCA Records), and Billboard Chart hits.

Her songwriting credits include Tammy Wynette, Toby Keith, Lonestar and numerous film and TV soundtracks.

She has starred on Broadway ("Ring Of Fire"), and received rave reviews for her performances at Carnegie Hall, Lincoln Center, and the Kennedy Center. She's performed with Marvin Hamlisch, Michael Feinstein, the

New York, Boston and Atlanta Pops and the Nashville Symphony, and starred in her solo cabaret shows at the legendary Algonquin Oak Room in New York.

Equally at home on the technical side of the recording industry, Lari made music history producing Toby Keith's platinum album "White Trash with Money," becoming the first female producer of a male superstar.

Lari turned heads around the world with her role opposite Tom Hanks in the blockbuster movie "Cast Away" (as the Angel at the Crossroads in the final scene). Most recently she hit the silver screen in "Country Strong," with Gwynneth Paltrow and Tim McGraw.

Lari is now writing and producing in her Nashville recording studio, The Holler, with a variety of artists.

'Mr. Sopchoppy' Bill Stephens

Chuck grew up in the low country of South Carolina - a Southern boy generations deep. His music echoes the R&B, folk rock, gospel, and country he grew up listening to.

He is a multi-award winning songwriter who has had his songs recorded by an incredibly diverse array of megastars ranging from Paul Carrack (Mike & The Mechanics, Squeeze and Ace) to Merle Haggard, Willie Nelson, Dolly Parton and Toby Keith - to Euro-Pop super-group BoyZone and 80's rock superstar band NightRanger.

With numerous No. 1 and Top 10 songs, he has logged over 16 million airplays with BMI.

His critically acclaimed solo projects, "God Shaped Hole" and "Love and Money" reflect the depth of his art. The production is haunting with wide open spaces that support songs that are quite simply, stunning.

His live performance is riveting - no one interprets a song like the writer of the song and Chuck Cannon will leave you wanting more.

Library News...

By SCOTT JOYNER
Library Director

By the time you read this we are through our second week of the summer program and are having a blast.

The younger participants have been making creative crafts, hearing great stories, and going to fun filled performances!

Our Young Adult program is hard at work on a film that will be debuted and the end of the summer!

We will have many surprises all summer long that go along with the "Dig into Reading" theme so please come by and join us for all the learning and fun. I'm more than happy to email you a brochure with detailed information or you can pick one up at the front desk.

For more info give me a call at 926-7415, email me at scottj@wakullalibrary.org or check out our website www.wakullalibrary.org or Facebook page.

BITS' & PIECES PUPPETS RETURNS TO WCPL

On Thursday, June 27 the Bits & Pieces Puppet Theatre brings their tale of "The Selfish Giant" to the Library as part of our Summer Program.

The Selfish Giant builds a high wall to keep kids out of his garden. Soon after a great wind blows, the frost comes, and snow dances through the trees. Can the giant get past his selfishness so that spring can enter the garden again?

This award winning puppet show also features a Make & Take Puppet Workshop afterwards. Please join us for all the fun at 7 p.m. on June 27.

SCENE WAKULLA AT THE LIBRARY

WCPL's continuous support of the Palaver Tree Theatre Company's efforts to expand the theatrical arts in Wakulla County continues as the Library hosts multiple events as part of the first Scene in Wakulla program.

Ka'ramuu Kush, whose work has been shown on HBO and presented at the Cannes & Sundance Film festivals, is holding a Directing for the Screen workshop on Friday, June 21 from noon until 3 p.m. and Saturday, June 22 from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. in our Main Meeting Room.

There is a cost of $100 for the six hour, two day workshop, but some discounts are available through the Palaver Tree website www.palavertreetheater.org.

At 7 p.m. on Friday, June 21 there will be a panel discussion with Mr. Kush as well as Tallahassee's own F.C. Rabbath which is free and open to the public.

Lastly, there will be a panel discussion on acting, writing, and using the arts to help promote positive change in communities at the library beginning at 3 p.m. on Saturday, June 22.

There are also many other events not being held at WCPL that are part of this great program which you can get more information about through Palaver Tree's website or by giving me a call at the library and I'll be happy to email you a flyer.

SUMMER READING BOOKS

As we do every year, we have ordered multiple copies of all of the summer reading and Sunshine State books assigned by the Wakulla County Schools.

Those that are available from our e-book vendor are available in that format as well.

Please remember that if you have a personal computer you don't need an e-book reader to access our collection. Please ask for details.

We encourage everyone to check out the books early to avoid long waiting lists as the summer moves along. Waiting lists have already begun on many of the books. These books are not eligible for renewal and must be read in the 3 week checkout period in order for the most students to have access.

We appreciate your patience this summer as we continue to do all we can to provide the students of Wakulla County with their summer reading materials.

Keith Padgett

the self-described good ol' boy just doesn't look the part

By JENNY ODOM
Special to The News

The local artist and businessman has striking blue eyes, a crop of shoulder-length silver hair and a solid chiseled chin. He shuffles through his large meticulously designed home wearing Italian leather sandals and a soft indigo shirt.

The house he shares with his wife, Janise, and his sons Sean and Ian, is proudly filled with his artwork depicting Florida's Gulf Coast wilderness. The large oil paintings are rich with detail and depth, and with every painting he creates he writes a narrative.

"Every painting has a story," he says.

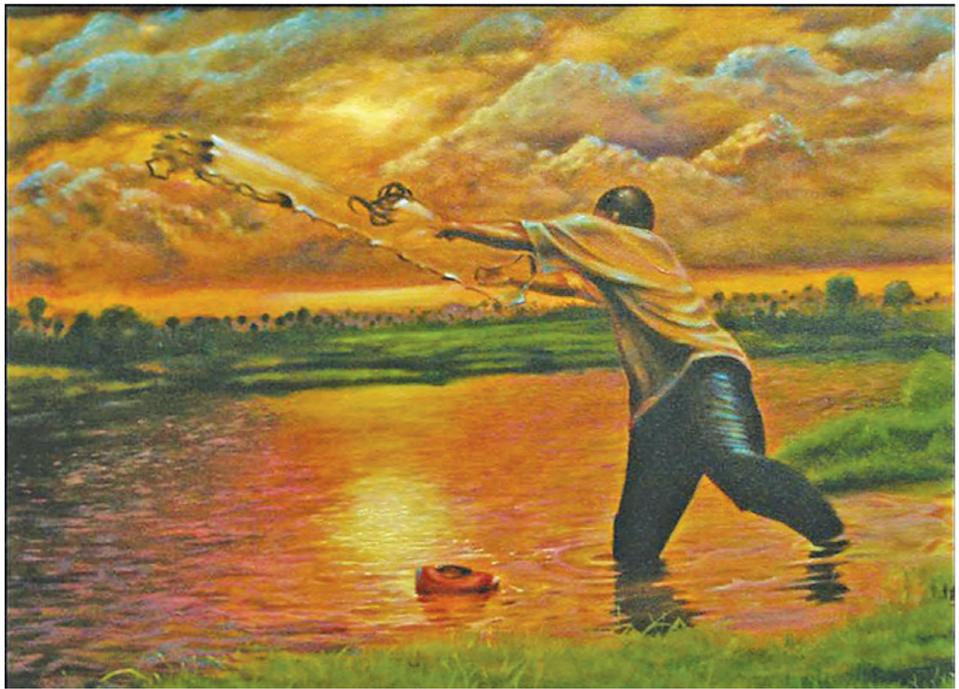

A raconteur with a quick southern drawl, Padgett was born and raised in Perry. He found his creative side and artistic talent when his parents divorced at a young age.

the dining room, which is painted a deep crimson, and pulls an ornately framed canvas from the wall. He sets it on the buffet. It is a painting of a man throwing a cast net at Yates Creek in Taylor County.

"This guy came all the way from Jacksonville to fish at Yates Creek," Padgett recalls. "I asked him if it was okay to take his photograph, and he said yes. I started taking pictures with my camera and he must have thrown it for me 10 times. He was so cooperative.

"I never even got his name," he says, but moves on to tell more about this landscape painting and the rich golden colors that filled the day he met the fisherman.

In his early 20s, and fresh out of art school Padgett sent his resume to Busch Entertainment, owner of SeaWorld and Busch Gardens.

BEHIND 'CASTING CALL': 'Throwing a cast net requires strong teeth and a good sense of timing. While casting the net, you hold the lead weight in your teeth letting go at just the right time. Letting go too soon will result in a flat cast. Holding on too long could result in the loss of a full set of teeth. I painted this man as he threw his net along Yates creek. A native of Jacksonville, he stumbled upon this area south of Perry and decided to see if he could catch some baitfish for use the following day.'

Keith and Janise Padgett.

At 13, he'd retreat to his room, putting on his headphones to play music by Led Zepplin and Jimi Hendrix, and he would draw for hours escaping into his own world.

In middle school, one of Padgett's teachers saw a talent she had not seen in other students. She took the initiative to introduce Padgett to a friend, Jules Rommand Bacot, an art professor from the University of Georgia. With interest, Bacot began teaching technique to the young budding artist and a friendship developed.

"Jules was my friend for 30 years, until the day he died," said Padgett. "He gave me a lot of confidence and he was an excellent teacher."

He wanders off into another room in the house and brings back a small watercolor painting by Bacot.

"I have quite a few of his paintings. He was a huge inspiration to me as a young artist, teaching me technique at a very young age," Padgett reminisces. "But he was my friend for life."

Bacot encouraged the young artist to take classes and to learn as much about the craft of painting as he could.

By the time Padgett entered Ringling College of Art and Design in Sarasota, on a full scholarship, he had taken years of courses and developed into a skilled artist.

Padgett saunters into

"I was pretty sure of myself. I had a lot of confidence in my work," says Padgett.

When he was hired by Busch, he thought he'd hit the big time art biz. However, as he went through orientation for his new job, he was given a set of khakis and was sent out into the blistering summer parking lot to be an attendant.

"I was really crushed. But then I would find out later that everybody at Busch started out their career with parking cars. Even the son of the president started out this way," he says with a smile.

Not long after that sweltering summer of parking cars, Padgett began to use the talent he was hired to do, working in the art department.

Padgett explains that he made a name for himself in Florida working for Busch Entertainment, painting large scale murals for roller coaster rides and other attractions at the amusement parks they owned.

Eventually he left Busch to start his own business, Art-FX Inc. a design and mural company, and he began to make a name for himself outside the sunshine state.

"I've never really advertised. My work has always just come to me by word of mouth," says Padgett about his successful business of 26 years.

Janise is a native of Fort Walton Beach and has an extensive background in retail sales

BEHIND 'AUCILLA SUNRISE': 'Once a year my friends and I try to get together and go cat fishing on the Aucilla and the Econfina in and around Half-mile Rise - "fishing" being the operative word. We'd starve if we had to cook what we caught. The last catfish we caught was on a trot-line belonging to someone else, that we checked by mistake. Located in the Aucilla Wildlife Management area. This part of the rise is only accessible by boat or hiking along the Florida National Scenic Trail. Before sunset hook and lines are attached along the banks and overhanging trees and vines, using lead weights heavy enough to hold the bait far below the surface even in swift currents. Later at night, between a good card game or two, lucky members of crew check the line while the others usually stand around a fire along the bank.'

and handles business details, PR, and the website for their company. The company creates interiors for laser tag arenas, miniature golf courses, amusement parks, museums and exhibits. They also create backdrops for theatrical productions, murals for restaurants, casinos and private residences.

Keith travels the globe to direct the creation, design and installation of paintings and sets. His work has taken him to United Arab Emirates, Azerbaijan, Russia, France, Canada, England, and all over the United States.

"I have used the gift God gave me to see the world," he says humbly.

Padgett has never really stopped learning, still taking classes and workshops to hone his craft when he can fit them into his busy schedule.

In addition to studying as much as possible about painting, he has also taught himself everything from international building code, to CAD design to wine making.

"When I retire, I'm going to fish, hunt, paint and make wine," he says. "And I'm going to do it right here."

Another passion, he and Janise have been bottling wine for the last few years, using their own grapes and supplementing with fruit from other local vineyards.

Self-taught winemakers, they do the entire process at home, calling it Padgett wine, a nickname Keith's dad used to call him when he was a kid.

The accomplished artist discusses the fine line he draws between his commercial business which pays the bills, and his real love, plein air painting. Plein air is French for "in the open air."

"I live here because this is the place I love," says Padgett. "Someday the places I paint won't be here, or they'll be altered. That's why I don't sell my paintings anymore."

Instead, he sells prints of his work, saving the originals for his sons. He worries about the changing landscape of old Florida along the forgotten coast.

"I'm not a tree hugger," he states. "But I do want people to understand what they are losing for the sake of a dollar."

Throughout the year, when he's not traveling the world working for his company, he loads up his canoe with his paints, canvas and an easel and heads for the swamps of Wakulla county. He likes to return to the same spot over and over and paint it from different angles, at different times of the year.

And a glimmer of the country boy emerges as he mentions that during hunting season he also takes along his shotgun.

"Just in case," the man of many talents exclaims, "I do like to shoot turkey, and I can cook a mean turkey breast."

An aerial view of the St. Marks Lighthouse. The island on the right is Whale, and on the left is Mini.

Recalling a very bad night on Whale Island

Red Clay Footprints

By John Roberts

The next time you visit the beautiful St. Marks Lighthouse, go up onto the observation platform and direct your attention out toward the Gulf.

Just to your left, you will see two low lying islands just beyond the salt marsh and sand flats. The island on the right is Whale Island, and the one next to it, on the left, is Mini Island.

Each time I look at those islands, I cannot help recalling a very bad night a friend of mine, Jim Kerce, and I spent out there 58 years ago. I remember that night so vividly and will recount to you what happened.

When I was a little fellow, during the days when my grandfather, J. Y. Gresham, was Keeper, and later, when his son, my uncle Alton Gresham, Chief Boatswain's Mate, USCG, was Officer in Charge of the Lighthouse, I would look out at those two islands and wonder what it would be like to go out there and camp on one of them.

My cousins Joann and Sonny Gresham told a scary story about seeing a half man, half bat, one evening near the Lighthouse, and when they screamed, it flew off in the direction of Whale Island, and seemed to have landed there. They thought maybe it lived there.

They later admitted they just made up the story, but I thought it might be true and they didn't want to frighten me.

So I was fascinated with Whale Island and just had to go out there.

When I was about 13 years old, I talked my good friend, Jim Kerce from Tallahassee, into the idea of a camping trip to the island.

It was the summer of 1955. Jim and I packed up a few things, including two steaks he had sneaked out of his parent's refrigerator, loaded up my old cypress skiff boat and with my 3-horsepower Evinrude, left my daddy's dock on the St. Marks River, bound for Whale Island.

What a great time we were going to have! Little did we know what was in store for us.

We timed it just right, as we approached the island about 2 or 3 in the afternoon, the tide was rising and there was a nice, cool breeze blowing out of the south.

We had a great time swimming and exploring on Whale Island. Before the sun went down we built our campfire and cooked up those two steaks. Life was mighty good! We were having a big time just as we had planned.

That southerly breeze continued to blow gently as the tide reached flood stage. We both noticed that just a little before sunset, as the tide began to turn and start falling, that breeze died down and then it became very still.

We gave that very little thought until about an hour into the falling of the tide when we began to hear a very low, humming sound, at first barely perceptible, then seemingly louder as it came closer. That sound was coming from the direction of the mud banks, salt marsh, and coastal pine forests.

MOSQUITOES!

Now these aren't your ordinary, everyday mosquitoes, the weaklings found in the suburbs of cities and towns, which may occasionally bite and bother you a little at a family barbecue.

No sir, these are their hardy country cousins. Raised on the blood of wild animals, they are a brave, strong breed that will venture out and attack you in broad daylight.

Word had obviously spread among them that there was fresh human blood out there on Whale Island!

Jim and I became enveloped in a steady swarm of mosquitoes and there seemed to be no escape from them. We had not brought any of that sissy mosquito repellent with us. We were real men and could handle a few mosquitoes.

If we were to survive, we would have to forget our camping trip, jump in our boat, and head for home. But by now the tide had fallen just enough that our boat was stuck in the mud and the water was too shallow to float our boat for over a hundred yards out from the island.

Unless we could figure out a way to fight the mosquitoes, we might be doomed to be eaten to death by them.

By now it was getting dark. We pulled together all the damp seaweed we could find that had washed up on the beach and strung it along the beach for a distance of maybe twenty yards. We then set that seaweed on fire, the dampness of it creating a large quantity of smoke. Then Jim and I started running. We kept that seaweed burning and ran up and down beside it almost all night long.

There was a roll of canvas in our boat and when one or the other of us became too tired to run anymore, we took turns getting into the canvas and rolling up in it to rest. Then the other runner would shout that it was his turn to rest, and it was out of the canvas to run some more in the smoke.

Finally, just about sunrise, the tide began to turn and start coming back in.

With it, a slight breeze again from the south, which gave us a little relief and brought in enough water to float our boat.

We had escaped death by mosquito bite and were heading for home.

You can bet we were two mighty tired boys.

Jim and I learned a hard lesson. Having spent so much time in that area, I should have known better, but I guess the anticipation of the fun we were going to have camping on Whale Island had an adverse effect on my judgment.

I knew about the mosquitoes and about how we would not be able to move my boat from the island at low tide, but did not calculate that as I should have.

Sadly, my good friend Jim Kerce has since passed away. He was the editor of a newspaper in Perry, Ga., and I was working in Virginia when he died.

I miss my good friend, but for the brief time it took me to relive and write about this episode, and every time I gaze out at those islands, Jim is again my companion and we are carefree boys outwitting those mosquitoes on Whale Island!

Each puzzle is divided into nine sections, and each section has nine blank squares. Fill in all 81 squares on the puzzle with numbers 1 to 9. You may not repeat any numbers in any one of the nine sections that you've already used elsewhere in that section. Also, you can use each number 1-9 only once in each horizontal line of nine squares, and in each vertical column of nine squares. The puzzle is completed when you correctly fill every square.

Answer

SCRAMBLERS

Unscramble the letters within each rectangle to form four ordinary words. Then rearrange the boxed letters to form the mystery word, which will complete the gag!

SCRAMBLERS

AXYDLBAAXR is LONGFELLOW
One letter stands for another. In this sample, A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each week the code letters are different.
