Deputies weigh factors when tracking suspects

SHEMIR WILES Staff Writer

The recent death of Hernando County Deputy John Mecklenburg, who was pursuing a suspect when he died in a car crash over the July 4 holiday weekend, has drawn attention to the longstanding law enforcement issue of when should officers give chase and when should they stand down. Cmdr. Wayne Burns with the Citrus County Sheriff's Office said when a deputy attempts to initiate a traffic stop, he or she never knows if the person is going to stop or take off. If a suspect decides to flee, it becomes that deputy's responsibility to notify dispatch and make a decision on the necessity to pursue.

"The authority to initiate emergency operation of an agency vehicle will be at the discretion of the deputy, based upon available information and the deputy's training and experience," the sheriff's office pursuit policy states.

However, Burns said there are important factors deputies and patrol supervisors, who are in charge of ORLANDO — For nearly two months, the murder trial of Casey Anthony was a living entity. It breathed daily across national television airwaves, then was reinforced nightly on cable TV programs that dissected every word uttered in the courtroom and fueled speculation on her fate. When Anthony was acquitted of murder in the death of her 2-year-old daughter, Caylee, hundreds of thousands of people captivated by the case — and certain of her guilt poured their rage into postings on Facebook and the micro-blogging site Twitter. Those and other social media sites provided a platform and a large audience for a decibel level of vitriol seldom seen before. The threats, both veiled and blatant, were disturbing enough to make the judge hold off on releasing jurors' names, and to make it all the more likely that Anthony will be secretly whisked away upon her release next week. Postings continued to fill one "I hate Casey Anthony' Facebook page on Saturday morning, with nearly 39,000 people having "liked" the page. In reaction to Anthony's July 17 announced release date, one person wrote, "... maybe she won't even make it out of jail vironmental Protection has decided to pull back on plans to use private corporations to build and operate campgrounds on portions of up to 56 state parks after pushback from the public.

A.B. SIDIBE

Staff Writer

The Florida Department of En-

DEP came up with a plan to "expand and add additional family camping facilities to increase recreational opportunities for Florida's citizens and visitors."

The only park on the 56-site list in Citrus County is the Crystal River Preserve State Park. The 25,000-acre park has hiking and birding trails and fishing, but does not offer camping.

However, the department initially identified four state parks to get started on immediately: De Leon Springs State Park in De Leon Springs, Fanning Springs State Park in Fanning Springs, Honeymoon Island State Park in Dunedin and Edward Ball Wakulla Springs State Park in Wakulla Springs.

Public hearings took place last week in all four counties in which the parks are situated, and the public opposition was swift and harsh, especially at Honeymoon Island.

Hundreds packed the hearing and voiced concerns about several 160 parks spanning 700,000 acres and 100 miles of beach.

issues, including potential environmental degradation and losing picnic areas to campsites. Several political representatives from the affected areas wrote to the DEP expressing concern.

"After seeing the public's reaction, it is clear that this is not the right time to expand camping at Honeymoon Island State Park," Gov. Rick Scott said in a prepared statement to Department of Environmental Protection.

"These natural treasures belong to all the tax-paying citizens of this state and it would be unfair to proceed with a plan that so many Floridians are so adamantly opposed to."

Late Friday, DEP Secretary Herschel Vinyard Jr. released a statement scrapping the effort at Honeymoon Island and promising to take a different approach for the rest.

In a letter to Sen. Mike Fasano, R-New Port Richey, and copied to 13 other state lawmakers, Vinyard noted that after gathering feedback from the four hearings, the DEP "Well, I am relieved they came to their senses on this," said Fasano, whose district includes part of Citrus County.

"But, while I am glad they are no longer moving forward on Honeymoon Island, I am still concerned about the rest of the places on the list," he said.

He said his opposition to the parks plan also stems from his concern for existing RV parks which would now have to compete with these new facilities.

"Now that they are going to evaluate the rest, (this) leaves the door open, and I hope they will listen to the people," Fasano added.

DEP Secretary Vinyard Jr., in his letter, added Florida Park Service offers camping at 53 of the 160 state parks.

"The fact that many of our park campgrounds are often fully occupied tells us that Florida's citizens enjoy being outdoors with their families in a tent, a pop-up trailer

The kidney stone weighed 18.9 milligrams. It would take 1,500 of them to make an ounce. At 4 millimeters in diameter, it was only twice the size of the head of a pin.

Yet its owner, Janet DeRosa, gave it 10 out of 10 on a pain scale.

"It was more painful than childbirth," said DeRosa, a retired schoolteacher and mother who lives in Crystal River.

Pain was caused when a 4-millimeter kidney stone tried to move down a 3-millimeter wide ureter, a tube that propels urine from the kidney to the bladder. The nearly impossible mission would be similar to forcing a golf ball through a garden hose.

With intense pain, DeRosa went by ambulance to the emergency department of Citrus Memorial Health System in Inverness, where she said she waited about nine hours in pain before getting treatment.

DeRosa spoke recently to the Chronicle's editorial board and published a letter to the editor in the June 30 edition. She de-

Aging boomers strain cities built for the young

NEW YORK — America's cities are beginning to grapple with a fact of life: People are getting old, fast, and they're doing it in communities designed for the sprightly.

To envision how this silver tsunami will challenge a youth-oriented society, just consider that sensoon will outnumber iors schoolchildren in hip, fast-paced New York City.

It will take some creative steps to make New York and other cities age-friendly enough to help the coming crush of older adults stay active and independent in their own homes.

"It's about changing the way we think about the way we're growing old in our community," said New York Deputy Mayor Linda Gibbs. "The phrase 'end of life' does not apply anymore."

With initiatives such as using otherwise idle school buses to take seniors grocery shopping, the World Health Organization recognizes

New York as a leader in this movement.

But it's not alone.

Atlanta is creating what it calls 'lifelong communities." Philadelphia is testing whether living in a truly walkable community really makes older adults healthier. In Portland, Ore., there's a push to fit senior concerns such as accessible housing into the city's new planning and zoning policies

Such work is getting a late start considering how long demographers have warned that the population is about to get a lot grayer.

"It's shocking how far behind we are, especially when you think about this fact — that if you make something age-friendly, that means it is going to be friendly for people of all ages, not just older adults,' said Margaret Neal of Portland State University's Institute on Aging.

While this fledgling movement is

By 2050, 1 in 5 Americans will be seniors. Worldwide, almost 2 billion people will be 60 or older, 400 million of them over 80.

That's almost always viewed as a health issue, preparing for the coming wave of Alzheimer's, or as a political liability, meaning how soon will Social Security go bust?

"We think this is something we should be celebrating," says Dr. John Beard, who oversees the World Health Organization's Global Network of Age-Friendly Cities. "They need to live in an environment that allows them to participate."

In East Harlem, a yellow school bus pulls up to a curb and 69-yearold Jenny Rodriguez climbs off. The bus had already dropped a load of kids at school. Now, before the afternoon trip home, it is shuttling older adults to a market where they flock to fresh fruits and vegetables.

Rodriguez usually goes shopping on foot, pulling along a small cart. It can be a hike. Supermarkets aren't too common in this lower-income part of the city, and there's less to choose at tiny, pricier bodegas.

CAPE CANAVERAL -The space shuttle Atlantis hasn't performed like a ship ready for retirement.

The first full day of the final flight of the aging space shuttle fleet — the most complicated machines ever built — was practically flawless.

NASA officials say the unusually small four-person crew of Atlantis worked through lunch Saturday and finished their tasks in near-record time. After Friday's launch they inspected the shuttle's heat shield for launch damage and prepared for Sunday morning's docking with the International Space Station.

So far Atlantis doesn't even have minor glitches. The worst problem is that the crew could not find an eye chart for a vision test, something that caused a chuckle among ground controllers.

"We couldn't be more happy with what we've seen from the crew and Atlantis," Flight Director Kwatsi Alibaruho said.

Often the first full day in orbit for shuttles has nuisance-type" "little glitches in setting up life in space and is usually one of the most difficult days in a flight, said shuttle mission management team chairman LeRoy Cain. He said hard work and good luck have paid off for Atlantis this time.

Under a canopy of gray skies Saturday morning, a group of bikers left Williston for Kentucky with the ashes of veteran John Waddy Jr.

The Patriot Guard Riders, a national volunteer group of motorcyclists to honor those who have fought for freedoms, were taking Waddy's remains to his family some 600-plus miles away in London, Ky.

A dozen bikes headed north to meet another group at the "Flying J" at the second exit in Georgia off Interstate 75. Only one bike, ridden by drive captains Sue Sakers and Mike Engles, will make the entire trek from Florida to Kentucky.

Divers listen to underwater music

More than 500 divers and snorkelers descended Saturday in the Florida Keys National Marine Sanctuary for an underwater concert.

The Lower Keys Underwater Music Festival offered an offbeat salute to rock with divers costumed as "Eel-vis Presley," "Bob Marlin," "Joss Stone Crab" and other famed musicians.

Staged by radio station WWUS, the event took place at Looe Key Reef, about six miles south of Big Pine Key. The station's four-hour commercial-free broadcast was piped underwater via speakers suspended beneath boats positioned above the reef. Organizers said the sound quality was clear, with an ethereal effect caused by the sound waves' transmission through water.

"The sound of the music underwater is glorious," Laura Bohdan, of Ithaca, N.Y., said.

The broadcast playlist included ocean-themed offerings such as the Beatles' "Yellow Submarine," Jimmy Buffett's "Fins" and the theme song from Disney's "The Little Mermaid."

"The fish seemed to enjoy the music as much as I did,' snorkeler and first-time festival participant Gail Coad of Sarasota said.

"They almost were dancing in unison to the melody, and the music just kind of surrounds you."

The 30year-old space shuttle program is ending as NASA hands over the task of flying astronauts to the space station to Russia and private U.S. companies. NASA will shift its efforts to deep space missions to an asteroid, and eventually Mars.

"Instead of focusing on the irony, I tend to look at the opportunity on this, the last shuttle mission of the program," Alibaruho said. "I'm very grateful the shuttle is finishing as it is."

Cain said mission managers focused on "finishing strong."

"We wanted the last flight to be the safest flight that we fly. We wanted the performance of the vehicle to be the best it's ever been," Cain said. "I think you're seeing it play out.

The great condition the shuttle is in "helps us enjoy the mission more" because flight controllers don't have to worry as much about little glitches, Alibaruho said Saturday in a press conference.

It also keeps the crew from having to divert from their tasks to fix problems, he said.

Another big factor is that the four astronauts are all space veterans who know what they are doing, Alibaruho said. With four astronauts instead of the normal seven, there "are fewer bodies for the crew to trip over" and there is less heat inside the shuttle, making it more comfortable, he said.

The veteran astronauts felt so good that they canceled their normally scheduled private conferences with mission control's doctors, Cain said.

Wait, body camera?

"It feels uncomfortable when I don't have it,' Nguyen said of the video camera that is smaller than a smartphone and is worn on his chest. "You can never be too safe."

Oakland and hundreds of other police departments across the country are equipping officers with tiny body cameras to record anything from a traffic stop to a hot vehicle pursuit to an unfolding violent crime. The mini cameras have even spawned a new cable reality TV series, Police POV, which uses police video from Cincinnati, Chattanooga and Fort Smith, Ark.

Whether attached to shirt lapels or small headsets, the cameras are intended to provide more transparency and security to officers on the street and to reduce the number of misconduct complaints and potential lawsuits.

"First and foremost, it protects the officers, it protects the citizens and it can help with an investigation and it shows what happened," said Steve Tidwell, executive director of the FBI National Academy Associates in Quantico, Va. "It can level the playing field, instead of getting just one or two versions. It's all there in living color, so to speak."

partment is still under federal supervision because of a case in which four officers were caught planting drugs on suspects a decade ago, the cameras are like another set of eyes, said Capt. Ed Tracey.

Last year the department began a pilot program with about a dozen patrol officers wearing the VIEVU (Veeview) body camera, and now officials hope to equip at least 350 officers by the end of summer.

Tracey said the cameras are proving helpful to a budget-strapped police force that has reduced staff while covering what is still one of the country's most though overall crime has trended downward.

The cameras, which run about $125 apiece, were brought instead of purchasing video equipment for squad cars, he said, noting ness development director that the smaller devices can for In Oakland, where the de- also be mounted on a patrol car dashboard.

Officers are required to turn on their cameras for calls including traffic stops and possible searches. They are also required to download their video within a day and they are not allowed to edit or manipulate it. The video can be stored up to five years.

However, Tracey acknowledges some officers have had a hard time adjusting to the cameras.

"I commend the officers for their adaptability and professionalism. If they fight it or resist it. then our jobs become harder." Tracey said. "It's not an easy sell, and I get some resistance, but others see the value in them and won't go on the street without it.'

Turning on the camera has become second nature, Nguyen said. "If the suspect takes off, the camera is on to capture it," he said. "You have to train yourself to remember, 'Lights on, camera on."

Camera footage came in handy last year, Nguyen said, after a man complained he and another officer were rude after pulling him over.

"We summoned a supervisor to the scene and took the man's complaint. Internal Affairs reviewed the video," the officer said. "The complaint was dropped.'

Police officials from Seatdangerous cities, even tle and Queensland, Australia, have recently visited Oakland to check out the cameras, which are used by more than 700 departments in the United States alone, said Heidi Travero, a busithe Seattle-based VIEVU.

He said his regret was that the DEP's desire to meet the demand and provide this amenity to more Floridians was overshadowed by the timing of the process.

However, Vinyard Jr. said going forward, "we will be taking a different approach and I have asked staff to meet with local communities, state park citizen support organizations and other park stakeholders before formally proposing the addition of amenities or services, including family camping, at any of our state parks.'

Annette Long, who along with husband Mark, belong to a group called Save Our Suwanee, said dozens turned out for the hearing regarding Fanning Springs and many regarded the state plan as flawed.

"Having corporations build and run these places will make it all about profit and not about what is necessarily good for people or the environment," she said.

She said she hopes while the DEP is evaluating its next move, they would respect the wishes of the communities near these parks.

"Because it will bring more traffic and more stress to the environment," she added.

Fanning Springs is a 198.37-acre park in northwestern Levy County and is part of the lower Suwanee River drainage basin. The proposed facility at Fanning Springs will consist of 30 campsites and will cover 16.5 acres with water, electricity and sanitary sewer connections for a variety of camping equipment ranging from tents to larger self-contained recreational vehicles (RVs). The camping area will also include paved or stabilized roads and camping pads.

Dr. Phyllis Chesler, a psychologist who authored "Mothers on Trial," said the case connected with people by the millions because it taps primitive instincts rejecting the thought of a mother ever doing anything to harm her child.

"Once a mother is merely accused, she stands convicted, because the instinct is to blame the mother," she said. "She's an outlaw even though she was found innocent."

On Yahoo!, Casey Anthony was a top search the week of her acquittal. The case was also fueling the popularity of those closely associated with it. Searches were up 1,000 percent for cable host Nancy Grace, who made almost nightly pronouncements insisting that "Tot Mom," her nickname for Anthony, was guilty.

Also by Friday, more than 700,000 people had signed an online petition at Change.org calling for a federal "Caylee's Law" making it a felony to not report a missing child in a timely manner.

The strong reaction has left its mark on the courtroom.

During a hearing Thursday, several media groups, including The Associated Press, asked the judge to release the names of jurors in the Anthony trial. Judge Belvin Perry said he normally doesn't have an issue with releasing names, but he was mulling a delay to allow the anger - some of it pointed at the jury — to dissipate.

"You realize there are folks out there who want to do crazy things, like fillet people open, pour salt on them, and feed their legs to the piranhas," Perry said.

He said he doesn't want public reaction to translate into harm for people who "don't have a choice about serving on a jury."

Sandy Lisella of Hartland, Conn., said in a Facebook messaging conversation that while many posts she's seen have simply been rants, others "are more substantial and thought-provoking, trying to make sense of how our legal system could conclude these results."

"The way the story unfolded was unfathomable to the masses. It was like watching a sick movie!" Lisella said. "Social media, in a roundabout way, allows everyone to get involved in the causes that strike a chord in us.'

WAIT TIMES AT OTHER LOCAL HOSPITALS

- HCA Oak Hill Hospital in Spring Hill posts its emergency department wait times to see a qualified medical practitioner on its website at www.oakhillhospital.com. It is updated about every 30 minutes using an average from the previous four hours.
- According to Richard Linkul, spokesman for Oak Hill, in most cases HCA hospitals rank below the national wait time average of one hour.
- Seven Rivers Regional Medical Center in Crystal River also posts its emergency wait times on its website at www.sevenriversregional.com.
- "It gives the community some buy-in to decide whether to go immediately or wait until later," said Dorothy Pernu, spokeswoman for Seven Rivers.
- The time given, four minutes on one weekday afternoon, meant the amount of time a patient would need to wait to receive an initial assessment. The wait time for initial assessment averages between three and 10 minutes, Pernu said. Then, the patient could be directed to an area of the department that treats non-emergency injuries.
- According to Pernu, Seven Rivers has a system called ER Extra, which sets a goal for every emergency department patient to be seen, treated and discharged or admitted to the hospital within two hours. Often, the staff hits that goal. The average for the past month was two hours and 20 minutes.
- Seven Rivers also has a smartphone app to give wait times.

Remembering Betty Ford Nancy Reagan calls her 'an inspiration' Key moments

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - Former First Lady Nancy Reagan said Friday she was deeply saddened by news of Betty Ford's death, calling her an inspiration to many. Ford died Friday at the age of 93.

In a statement Friday, Reagan praised Ford's efforts to educate women about breast cancer and her work at the Betty Ford

Center, a rehabilitation center. Reagan praised Ford's courage in facing and sharing her personal struggles with Americans. Though talking about addiction was taboo, Ford faced her struggles with drugs and

Reagan said Ford was former President Gerald Ford's "strength through some very difficult days in our country's history."

(On meeting Ford)

Fall 1947: "Once I'd said marriage was the last thing on my mind, and he'd made it clear it was no part of his program either, we could relax, have a good time, go to all the football games. He wanted a companion, and I filled the bill. As for me, I liked handsome blond men, I found him physically attractive; I enjoyed his company and his friends."

November 1948: "When he first told me he was going to run for Congress, I didn't know what running for Congress meant. I was very unprepared to be a political wife, but I didn't worry because I really didn't think he was going to win. At that time, only old men went to Congress.

HPH Hospice is a We Honor Veterans Program Partner

HPH Hospice has been accepted by the National Hospice and Palliative Care Organization (NHPCO) and Veteran's Administration (VA) as a partnering agency in their We Honor Veterans Program.

Serving Those Who Served Us

America's veterans have done everything asked of them in their mission to serve our country and we believe it is never too late to give them a hero's welcome home. That's why HPH Hospice is joining a national movement to take part in the We Honor Veterans program. Our staff will understand the unique needs of veterans and prepare to meet the specific challenges that veterans and their families may face at the end of life.

We have embraced our mission to serve our local veterans. It's our way of saying thank you for the sacrifices they have made in serving us.

streets, the cracks are so bad, you're pushing the shopping cart and almost go flying,' Rodriguez said, examining sweet potatoes that she profresher nounced and cheaper than at her usual store. "This is so much easier.'

More than 200 times, school buses have taken older adults from senior centers to supermarkets in different neighborhoods. It's just one of a variety of initiatives begun in 2009 by the New York Academy of Medicine and the city's government to address the needs of older residents. Already, they're showing results.

A city report found the number of crashes has dropped at busy intersections in senior-heavy communities where traffic signals now allow pedestrians a few more seconds to cross the street.

Benches have been placed in nearly 2,700 bus shelters to give waiting seniors a place to rest

The city's aging taxi fleet is scheduled to be replaced by a boxier model designed to be easier for older riders and people with disabilities to open the doors and slide in and out.

On the Upper West Side, seniors snapped up a report card of grocery stores deemed age-friendly because they offer deliveries, have public bathrooms — a rarity in the city — and sell single portions of fresh meat, poultry or fish, important for people who live alone.

Artists volunteer to teach at senior centers in return for space to work on or display their own creations.

And a "Time Bank" is letting hundreds of people of different ages and with different skills essentially barter services. A retired English teacher may do some tutoring, for example, and use the credit she earns to get computer help from another volunteer.

Aging expert Andrew Scharlach of the University of California, Berkeley, sees a common thread in these changes and the work of other cities. Combat the social isolation that too easily sneaks up on older adults, and it has a huge impact not just on how many years they will live, but how well they live them.

Cities and suburbs were designed for younger people, full of stairs and cars, he explained. As they become indifficult creasingly to navigate, older people gradually retreat. Revamping a lot of infrastructure may not happen in a tough economy. But some communities are building age-friendly changes into planned upgrades or maintenance, such as New York's street crossings, or into requirements for future development. The WHO's Beard says some changes aren't that costly, noting that seniors around the world say more benches and access to bathrooms will help them get out and about. Among other cities' work: ■ The Atlanta Regional Commission's Lifelong Communities Initiative is pushing communities that help people age in place. Efforts are under way in six metro areas,

The Mableton community of suburban Cobb County is planning that kind of a town square, and has opened a farmers market — on a weekday morning when seniors preferred to shop - and intergenerational community garden. To the east, DeKalb County is building a library near a senior center, planned senior housing and a bus stop. One town pilottested a shuttle for seniors to supplement bare-bones public transit.

The Atlanta Housing Authority is working with the commission to retrofit highrise apartments that house a lot of older residents, with the goal to improve access to the surrounding community. At one site under construction, changes include a ramp entrance, safer sidewalk to the bus stop and more time for pedestrians to cross the street

The overall move isn't without controversy.

Sometimes younger residents misunderstand and say they don't want to live in a retirement community, said

She said boomers, who are classified as being born from 1946 to 1964, and millenials, the children of baby boomers who came of age in the new millennium, ultimately want the same things: access to shopping, green space, more freedom from the car. The idea is a mix of ages but where older residents don't need to move if their health fails

Keyes became interested in age-friendly communities when visiting friends in nursing homes built in commercial districts — and saw that they had nowhere to take a walk.

Philadelphia is the oldest of the nation's 10 largest cities, with 19 percent of its residents over age 60 — and lots of multi-story rowhouses where seniors are stuck on one floor. "They become prisoners in their homes," said things interested in shaping Kate Clark of the nonprofit the city they'll age in by rais-Philadelphia Corporation for Aging.

including work to adapt zon- commission urban planner that a certain amount of new housing be what's called "visitable" — with such things as ramp entrances, wide hallways and at least a half-bathroom on the main floor, she said

With funding from the National Institutes of Health, the aging group's Allen Glicksman is studying if seniors who live in a walkable neighborhood really are healthier as a result. He has found that social capital – think friendly neighbors, low crime and good sidewalks that encourage getting out is as important to older residents as access to supermarkets, public transportation and good housing.

Also, there are calls for age-friendlier parks, with safer steps and places to walk apart from bikers.

To sustain momentum, Clark created GenPhilly, a network of 20- and 30-someing senior issues in varying Portland was part of WHO's initial study of what makes a city age-friendly, an initiative that helped bring about more handicapped-accessible cars for the city's light-rail system, Neal said.

Now, aging experts are among the advisers as the city develops a master plan for the next 25 years. One issue, Neal said, is how to develop more accessible housing when the city's anti-sprawl policy means a lot of narrow, multistory houses are being squeezed into empty city lots - near transportation but still not age-friendly with all the stairs.

Integrating senior-friendly changes into everyday city policies is less visible than, say, a new retirement home but it's ultimately the goal, says Scharlach, the aging expert.

New York also hopes for some economic return.

Consider La Marqueta in East Harlem. Fifty years ago, it was a bustling, five-block market, a weekly gathering spot for families. But economic downturn left the cityowned building mostly empty for years. Now, as part of a $1.5 million economic revitalization project, an industrial kitchen in the building will train low-income women to start their own food businesses. It joins the fish and butcher shop, a farmer's market, and a high-end food importer — and busing in the seniors once a month boosts the still thin customer traffic.

But it's more than a shopping day. A quick check from a health department nurse reassured 73-year-old Maria Ilarraza that her blood pressure was OK, and she sat to catch up with friends over coffee. In another corner, a crowd listened as a university nutritionist explained how to safely freeze and thaw meat.

Art teacher Piedad Gerena showed off some of the bold landscapes and modern images her students at a nearby senior center learned to paint, and, to her delight, sometimes sell for up to $200 apiece. "Many of these people have no families," Gerena said. "The art makes them feel happy.'

Chilling effect on women reporting rapes

Associated Press

NEW YORK — When Kristen Bakalar was pulled into a wooded area by a stranger and raped, she didn't think twice about reporting it.

It was only on the witness stand, as the 18-yearold was being quizzed about her sex life and about the precise color and length of her pubic hair, that she fully realized just how brutal the experience of bringing her rapist to justice would be.

Bakalar, now 30, doesn't pretend to know what happened between former International Monetary Fund chief Dominique Strauss-Kahn and the hotel maid accusing him of attempted rape. But she does know what it's like to be the accuser in a rape investigation. "I can see victims out there contemplating coming forward, and saying, 'What's the point?'" said Bakalar, whose attacker is serving a 20-year sentence for the rape. "If they're on the fence, and they see this, instead of taking a step forward they might take a step back." Advocacy groups for victims, as well as women's groups like NOW, share that fear. "This certainly makes it a more challenging environment, both for victims and on the prosecution side," said Scott Berkowitz, president of RAINN, the Rape, Abuse and Incest National Network, of the troubled Strauss-Kahn investigation. Like Bakalar, Berkowitz doesn't want to make judgments about the case against Strauss-Kahn, which prosecutors had insisted was strong before backtracking. He said it's important to look at the broader context of sexual assaults in the United States not the ones involving famous people, but the ones you never hear about and the startlingly low percentage that ever get prosecuted to begin with. According to Department of Justice figures compiled by RAINN, six out of 10 assaults are never reported to police. "Of the 40 percent that are reported, roughly half will never will never lead to an arrest — and of the cases remaining, many of those won't lead to prosecution," Berkowitz said.

Major shootout erupts in Mexico

MEXICO CITY — Mexican media is reporting a major mass shooting in a strip club in the northern Mexico city of Monterrev.

The newspaper Reforma said gunmen opened fire on the club's clientele Friday night and killed 20 people.

The strip club "Sabino Gordo" is in Monterrey's redlight district.

Police would not confirm the death toll with The Associated Press and referred the AP to local prosecutors, who are not giving an official account of the shooting.

High-powered weapons used in the shooting indicated it might have been a drug cartel confrontation.

Israel blocks airborne protest

TEL AVIV, Israel — Aided by Facebook, Israel on Friday prevented scores of pro-Palestinian activists from boarding Tel Aviv-bound flights in Europe, questioned dozens more upon arrival at its main airport and denied entry to 69, disrupting their attempts to reach the West Bank on a solidarity mission with the Palestinians.

Israel tracked the activists on social media sites, compiled a blacklist of more than 300 names and asked airlines to keep those on the list off flights to Israel.

Rally for reform Police fire tear gas at protesters, arrest 1,667

Associated Press

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia - At least 20,000 Malaysians defied government warnings by marching for electoral reforms Saturday, as police fired tear gas and detained more than 1,600 in the country's biggest political rally in four years.

The crackdown on the opposition-backed demonstration in Malaysia's main city, Kuala Lumpur, triggered criticism that Prime Minister Najib Razak's longruling coalition was unwilling to allow public dissent or make election laws fairer ahead of national polls widely expected by mid-2012.

Najib's administration declared the rally illegal and warned people repeatedly during the past month to avoid it. Officials insisted it was simply an opposition scheme to spark chaos and stir anti-government sentiment, while activists accused authorities of being afraid of a protest that could undermine their authority.

Authorities blocked roads, shut rail stations and deployed trucks with water cannons near the Independence Stadium in downtown Kuala Lumpur where activists sought to gather. More than 200 activists had been arrested over the past two weeks for promoting the rally.

The large number of demonstrators who showed up despite the threat of arrests and the disruptions in transport links bolstered claims by activists that the government had misjudged public opinion by not allowing what they insisted would have been a peaceful rally.

The crackdown "stirred a sense of outrage against the exhibition of simple portrayal of the extent of over the weekend in foreign cities.

raw power by our government," said Ambiga Sreenavasan, head of the Bersih coalition of civic groups that organized the rally.

'What is the necessity for a show of might against right? No matter what, right will always prevail," she said

Police said in a statement they detained 1,667 people Saturday in a "Operation clampdown called Erase Bersih." Those arrested included several senior opposition officials. Some were released after several hours, with police indicating most would not be held overnight.

Thousands tried to reach the stadium from various parts of Kuala Lumpur, chanting "Long live the people" and carrying yellow balloons and flowers as they marched.

Police fired numerous rounds of tear gas and chemical-laced water in repeated attempts to disperse the crowds, causing demonstrators to scatter into nearby buildings and alleys before they regrouped. Police helicopters flew overhead as a brief downpour failed to deter the protesters.

Witnesses said riot police armed with batons charged at some protesters and dragged them into trucks. Some were seen bleeding, but police could not confirm any injuries.

Anwar Ibrahim, Malaysia's top opposition figure, was being treated at a hospital for a "minor injury" he said he received when his group was hit by tear gas. The Malaysiakini news website said he had a knee injury.

'We were attacked from both corners but what was horrifying is that the police shot directly at the protesters, some of them clearly aimed at me personally, so my security assistants had to cover me and one was badly injured because the canister was shot direct, he is badly injured," Anwar told Associated Press Television News. "This is a desperation of brutal action approved by the Prime Minister Najib.'

The demonstrators dispersed after a five-hour standoff with police. Only several hundred reached the stadium.

Prime Minister Najib insisted Saturday the protesters only represent a minority, and that most Malaysians support his administration.

'If there are people who want to hold the illegal rally, there are even more who are against their plan," the prime minister was quoted as saying by the national news agency, Bernama.

Organizers said 50,000 took part in the rally, but police claimed there were only up to 6,000. Other observers and participants said the total was between 20,000 and 30,000, noting that it was highly unlikely that police could have arrested a quarter of the demonstrators. An accurate count was impossible because they were scattered in various areas.

The rally has galvanized the opposition and has been credited for a surge in political awareness among the public in recent weeks.

Opposition leaders accuse Najib's National Front coalition of relying on fraud to preserve its 54year grip on power, which has been eroded in recent years amid mounting complaints about corruption and racial discrimination. The government insists the current electoral policies are evenhanded.

The activists' demands include an overhaul of voter registration lists, tougher measures to curb fraud and fairer opportunities for opposition politicians to campaign in government-linked media. The National Front's mandate expires in mid-2013, but many analysts expect elections to be called by next vear.

Supporters of the Bersih coalition were also planning solidarity marches

"So when you boil it down, 15 out of 16 attackers will never spend a day in prison," he said.

Park rangers: No search for bear that mauled hiker

MATT VOLZ Associated Press

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. — Yellowstone National Park authorities will not try to capture a female grizzly that killed a backcountry hiker because the bruin was trying to defend its cubs when it was surprised by the man. a spokesman said Thursday.

The mauling of Brian Matayoshi, 57, of Torrence, Calif., was a purely defensive act, park spokesman Al Nash said. He added that Yellowstone typically does not try to capture or remove a bear in what he called "a wildlife incident.'

It was the first fatal grizzly attack inside the park in 25 years but the third in the Yellowstone region in just over a year.

The attack occurred Wednesday, about 1 1/2 miles up a popular backcountry trail and not far from an area that is one of the park's top attractions. Busloads of tourists normally gather there to take in the view from iconic Artist Point.

A stunning waterfall drops hundreds of feet in the Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone, and trails along both canyon rims are normally crawling with tourists. Authorities closed the area but planned to reopen it in a few days, Nash said.

Matayoshi's wife, Marilyn, escaped serious injury and no longer was at Yellowstone, park officials said. They declined to reveal her whereabouts.

Nash said the couple saw the bear twice on their hike.

The first time, they continued hiking. The second time, the grizzly charged them and Matavoshi told his wife to run. She called 911 on her cell phone, and other hikers in the area responded to her cries for help.

The woman told park officials she didn't see the bear attack her husband. When the bear went for mans. That attack was considered natural behavior and officials didn't believe the bear was any more dangerous than any other sow grizzly in the region.

This summer, the same bear and her cubs have drawn crowds of tourists to roadsides in the park.

Yellowstone and surrounding areas are home to at least 600 grizzlies — and some say more than 1,000. Once rare to behold, grizzlies have become an almost routine cause of curious tourists lining up at Yellowstone's roadsides at the height of summer season.

LIMA. Peru — Tourists love the enigmatic Inca citadel of Machu Picchu high in Peru's Andes. They may love it too much.

As the country prepares to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the rediscovery of the "Lost City of the Incas" on Thursday, archaeologists are warning that a heavy flow of visitors and poor administration are threatening one of the wonders of the world.

The Incas built Machu Picchu atop an Andean peak 7,970 feet (2,430 meters) high, with a breathtaking view across the inhospitable abysses that surround it. Some experts believe it was a refuge for one or more Inca rulers, others that it was a religious sanctuary.

Lawmakers seek new immigration museum

WASHINGTON - Several members of Congress called Thursday for a presidential commission to study the formation of a "melting pot museum" in Washington to tell the history of immigration and migration that formed the nation.

Democratic Virginia Rep. Jim Moran introduced legislation Thursday that calls for studying the creation of a National Museum of the American People without any federal taxpayer funds. The bill had 11 other co-sponsors.

"The people of the United States do not have a comprehensive and accurate picture of all the peoples who created and continue to build the nation," the bill says.

The Smithsonian is developing an African-American history museum that is scheduled to open in 2015. Other groups have proposed museums devoted to the history of women, gays and other groups.

Any well-done museum can draw a broad audience of those interested in history, he said, but cautioned any museum that simply celebrates different groups.

NH's Hampton Beach rated water 'superstar'

HAMPTON, N.H. - Consistently clean water at New Hampshire's Hampton Beach State Park has helped the beach receive a "superstar" beach ranking from a national group. The National Resources Defense Council released this year's water quality report and rated Hampton Beach one of four Superstar beaches because they have a perfect recording of water quality tests over the past three years, indicating good water quality.

Two other beaches are in Delaware. The fourth is in Minnesota.

The council ranked 200 beaches across the country.

The report found that contaminated runoff is the most commonly reported cause of poor beach water quality.

Boeing: India will need 1,320 new planes

NEW DELHI — Boeing has forecast a $150 billion market for passenger airplanes in India over the next 20 years driven by a booming economy.

Indian airlines will need to buy around 1,320 new airplanes to meet the demand of an expanding aviation sector, Boeing India President Dinesh Keskar said in a statement Wednesday.

"Robust growth with new economic prosperity among a massive Indian population, discretionary incomes, business progress and access to airports will increase airplane demand," Keskar said.

India's burgeoning middle class has switched from traveling by train to flying as an increasing number of private domestic airlines have opened up over the last decade.

Keskar said Indian carriers were becoming profitable and with the economy expected to maintain its upward trend, both air travel and air cargo markets would grow.

This year's outlook is more optimistic than last year's market outlook which had predicted that India would require 1,150 new aircraft worth $130 billion over the next two decades.

Apart from the private airlines, others including state-owned Air India are looking for replacement airplanes as they retire aging and less-efficient jets.

At present, one in 200 Indians flies just once a year. That figure is expected to grow exponentially, with the domestic market recording the highest growth rate for aviation globally, according to aviation experts.

In January, budget airline Indigo signed a mega $15.6 billion deal for 180 A320 aircraft from Airbus Industrie, an order the European aircraft manufacturer hailed as the biggest single order in terms of the number of jets in aviation history. Airbus plans to deliver the jets between 2016 and 2025

Apart from passenger aircraft, India is also shopping for military planes.

In June, India signed an agreement to purchase 10 Boeing's C-17 Globemaster III cargo and troop-carrying planes, making India the biggest foreign buyer of the aircraft.

The planes are expected to be delivered to India's air force in 2013 and 2014.

Blue Angels to perform at Yankee Air Museum

VAN BUREN TOWNSHIP, Mich. -The Yankee Air Museum says the Blue Angels military demonstration team is coming to southeastern Michigan this month.

The museum says the U.S. Navy's Blue Angels will perform during the "Thunder Over Michigan" air show. It's scheduled for July 23-24.

The Blue Angels uses F/A-18 Hornets. The air show also includes the Air Force's F-16 Viper East Demo Team

The museum is at Willow Run Airport, near Ypsilanti in Wayne County's Van Buren Township.

The site receives an average of 1,800 visitors a day and the maximum allowed by authorities is 2,500. Already, the former farming village of Aguas Calientes that is used as a jumping-off point for tourists has grown into a town of 4,000 inhabitants with five-star hotels and restaurants.

In some places, authorities have noticed soil erosion and damage to vegetation, Juan Julio Garcia, regional director of Peru's culture ministry, told The Associated Press.

Tourism companies and some local officials constantly pressure authorities to allow even more tourists, arguing it would benefit local communities.

Cultural guardians fear irreparable damages if the tourist flow surges, and they are especially concerned by official plans to build a highway to the remote 15th-century ruin.

Tourists now must reach Machu Picchu by foot or by a scenic, zigzagging narrowgauge train ride.

By skipping commercials, I can watch the evening news in 22 minutes - usually less because I also skip through the heartwarming stories at the end of each broadcast. I'm not against heartwarming stories, but that's not why I'm watching the news. If I wanted to watch heartwarming, uplifting, human-interest stories, I would watch a show called "Heartwarming, Uplifting, Human-Interest Stories.' not one called "The Evening News.'

I used to think I would spend the time I saved watching commercials to clean the house or write the great American novel, but it in there with the No mess, no fuss. And with old CD player that iPods boxes of printer cables and connectors that wi-fi made obsolete and the giant speakers that earbuds and desktop speakers made obsolete.

When I add up all the money spent on electronics that are too old to use but not old enough to sell as antiques, I want to weep. There are boxes of 156KB floppy disks in there and expensive computer backup devices that can hold 20MB of data, or about 10 times less than the tiny card in my digital camera. That camera will end up in the broom closet of broken dreams soon, along with several first-generation cell phones because they are so hopelessly old-fashioned and out of date. It would cost me money to sell them on eBay. When I finally broke turns out I really use it to down and bought a big flat-than an air conditioner and twice as clunky. It was, after all, 10 years old. How am I ever going to get rid of all this junk? I should ask the producers of "Hoarders" to come visit my house. I would promise to pretend to be very upset when they volunteered to clean out the place for me.

Now that I'm all modern, miniature and up to date, I figured all my technological problems were a thing of the past.

Then I read in the paper that my little DVR uses 10 percent more electricity than a modern refrigerator. It's an energy hog that's on 24 hours a day, even though it's recording only two or three hours a day. You can't really turn it off without unplugging it.

Even though it doesn't make ice cubes or keep my vegetables crisp, it is adding about $12 a month to my electric bill. It turns out that my TV is also on when I'm not watching it, and so is my computer.

I went back and looked at the recordings of my evening news shows on TV. None of them mentioned it. I guess they zip through things they don't want to hear about, just like I do.

Sister not carrying her share of financial load

I offered to let Lois and her four children preferences.) In our case, when the hostmove in with us. I have three teenagers ess learned that the honoree did not like myself, so our house became very her choice, she felt insulted and canceled crowded.

At the time, Lois was attending nursing school. She received government assistance and child support, and offered to help buy food for the household. I watched her kids, fed them healthy dinners and got them ready for bed. When Lois later got a part-time job, we asked her to help pay for a portion of the electric and gas bills (about $125 a month).

Here's the problem: Two months ago, Lois suddenly became interested in the groceries I was buying and how support and government assistance were intended only to feed HER family of five. It felt like a slap in the face. I have stopped buying groceries for her kids, but I have watched her buy them junk food and fatty snacks. When I mentioned the unhealthy choices she was making, she told me to mind my own business.

Since Lois is no longer helping to pay for groceries as she promised or contributing anything other than a small portion of the utility bills, I think she should find somewhere else to live. If she can afford to go out with friends every weekend and rent a car to take vacations, she can pay a decent rent.

My parents and siblings say I'm being selfish, but I haven't seen any of them offer to let Lois live with them for $125 a month. What do you say? — Feeling Used

Dear Used: You are understandably angry with Lois, who doesn't seem to appreciate the kindnesses you have extended. You need to talk to her, in a loving, sisterly way, and explain how you feel.

We agree she should find her own place, and perhaps other family members will offer to help her do that. But if she cannot manage it financially and you are still willing to let her stay, discuss a reasonable amount of rent that she can afford and that will not make you feel like a doormat.

Dear Annie: When inviting a couple to celebrate their anniversary at a local restaurant with a group of people, should

Dear N.Y.: When donating to charity in someone's honor, it is best to select a charity that reflects the honoree's wishes. And while it is nice to consider the honoree's preferences when choosing a restaurant, the person who is paying gets to select the venue. It is rude for the honoree to complain, and much they cost. She told me that her child the hostess should not throw a hissy fit and cancel.

Dear Annie: Please tell "Turned Off" not to blame the wives for their husbands' long nose hairs and eyebrows.

My husband has gadgets to trim his nose and ear hairs, but he seldom uses them. He claims he can't see the hairs even though I've given him a magnifying mirror. He doesn't even like to spend money on a haircut, so when I'm tired of the long locks, I cut it myself. He wears faded blue jeans all week, even if we go somewhere special. His dressier clothes only come out for funerals. He threatens to stay home if he can't wear what he wants. Fighting isn't worth the aggravation. Thank goodness he bathes and changes his underwear every day.

So, if you see a neat-looking wife with a sloppy husband who offends your sensibilities, it's not her fault. — N.

obbed by his pinstriped pals after the ball sailed into the left-field seats, showered by ovations from his fans, Derek Jeter stood alone — the first New York Yankees player to reach 3,000 hits. His first home run at Yankee Stadium this year, too. A fitting crown for the captain. With a swift swing of his shiny black bat, Jeter jolted himself into historic company, hitting a solo home run off Tampa Bay ace David Price in the third inning Saturday. He became the 28th major leaguer to hit the milestone and joined former teammate Wade Boggs as the only players to do it with a home run. 'Congratulations, first of all, to Derek Jeter on joining the 3,000 hit club. It is an exclusive honor, achieved by only a select group, that not many people can call their own. It is a monumental achievement," Boggs said in a statement. "I had the opportunity to play with Derek when he was a rookie in 1996, and I had no doubts

SPRING HILL-Alex Atkinson wasn't feeling so good.

He threw up before the Inverness Juniors (13-14) All-Stars baseball game with West Hernando at Freedom Field on Saturday.

So, Atkinson went out and threw 92 pitches in a shutout as Inverness downed West Hernando 14-0 in a six-inning "mercy rule" win. This made Inverness 3-0 in the Little League District 15 Tournament. The other score for Atkinson was mind 1, matter 0.

Atkinson had plenty of help on that sultry summer day. Inverness had 13 hits and took advantage of a problem for West Hernando hurlers. The Spring Hill gang found that the strike zone was a Bermuda Triangle where strikes simply disappeared.

Inverness batters accepted nine walks and four of those bases on balls were with the bases loaded. West Hernando also had three errors.

TOUR de FRANCE Rivals hold fire at Tour Associated Press

SUPER-BESSE, France -The attacks never came on the first mountain trek of the Tour de France, as defending champion Alberto Contador and his main rival Andy Schleck both held fire and let others contest victory during the eighth stage.

There was much hype about the possibility of a first hilltop duel following a crash-marred week of nervous racing on flats roads.

But with much harder climbs to follow in the Pyrenees and Alps, three-time Tour winner Contador preferred to save energy on Saturday's stage in the Massif Central, which Rui Alberto Costa held on to win after a solo breakaway.

When Costa surged ahead late on the 117-mile trek from Aigurande to Super-Besse, the likes of Alexandre Vinokourov of Kazakhstan and Philippe Gilbert of Belgium tried and failed — to chase the Portuguese rider down.

But, with neither Gilbert nor Vinokourov a real threat for the overall title, Contador was not going to follow them for the sake of it. The Spaniard has bigger battles to win later on, harder mountains to climb.

CRYSTAL RIVER - Saturday was "moving day" at Bicentennial Park as a few teams entered the day knowing a win would put them in the driver's seat as they entered the final day of regular pool play on Sunday.

And that's exactly what three area teams did as they stepped up to the plate and delivered in decisive fashion.

In Majors All-Stars, Crystal River and Dunnellon crushed their respective opponents. With Crystal River's win over Lady Lake they have clinched a spot in Monday night's semifinals and if they defeat Central Citrus today they'll clinch the top seed. But it was Dunnellon that won the biggest game of the day. They knew if they stood any chance of making it to the semis they would have to defeat Central Citrus on Saturday – and that's exactly what they did. A win on Sunday against Lady Lake will give Dunnellon the second playoff position.

In Juniors All-Stars it was added seven in the second and Central Citrus capturing the slammed the door shut in the must-win over Lady Lake. The third frame to invoke the Agassi: 'I fell in love with tennis far too late'

Associated Press

NEWPORT, R.I. — The long hair is long gone, the denim shorts have faded to memory, and there was Andre Agassi accepting induction into the International Tennis Hall of Fame on Saturday with an overdue affection for the sport he once resented and a rejection of the "Image is everything" attitude that helped propel him to stardom

In a tender tribute to family and philanthropy, Agassi was introduced by a student at the charter school he opened in Las Vegas and joined on center court by his wife, fellow Hall of Famer Steffi Graf.

TENNIS HALL OF FAME

Gone was the self-styled, longhaired rebel who rose to the No. 1 ranking in the world but, it now seems, didn't enjoy a single moment of it. Instead, Agassi turned his speech into a love letter of sorts for tennis and even the father who pushed him — not alto play, ways gently commanding him, at the age of 5. to someday win Wimbledon.

"I fell in love with tennis far too late in my life. But the reason I have everything I hold dear is be-thank tennis for giving me those moments." Sprinkling his comments with gratitude for fellow Hall of

Famers Billie Jean King, Arthur Ashe and "the woman who still takes my breath away every day, Stefanie Graf," Agassi also recounted a meeting with Nelson

3 years later, Marta gets another shot at Solo

Associated Press

DRESDEN, Germany — Bent at the waist, her back to the goal, Marta buried her face in her hands.

Her left-footed blast from 6 yards looked certain to be a winner, the goal that would give Brazil's women the Olympic gold medal and their first title at a major tournament. How, Marta would ask afterward, did she not score?

Hope Solo, that's how.

"I just remember Marta being point-blank cracking it, and Hope stretching out and getting a hand on it," U.S. captain Christie Rampone said. "Seeing it out of the corner of your eye, yeah, you think it's going in. It gave us that adrenaline going forward.

Fired up by Solo's highlight-reel save, the Americans would go on to claim second straight their Olympic gold medal in Beijing. Brazil, eager to escape the shadow of its brilliant at a major tournament.

The Brazil-United States matchup in Sunday's World Cup quarterfinals is their first since that 2008 Olympic final, and Brazil would seem to have the advantage. Marta remains the most dynamic player in the game, the FIFA player of the year for five years running, and Brazil had little trouble winning its group. The Americans, meanwhile, lost for the first time in World Cup group play and are in danger of making their earliest exit ever from the tournament.

But the Americans still have Hope, and both sides are well aware of it.

"Of course she's a great player," Marta said after Brazil's practice Friday night. "But I hope I would have the opportunity to score."

Marta hasn't scored yet against Solo in international play - but neither have any of her teammates. Solo has started the last four games against Brazil, with the U.S. winning each 1-0. Ironic, men's team, went home bit- considering it was thenBrazil vs. U.S.A.

the semifinals of the 2007 World Cup that sparked such a firestorm.

The U.S. was routed 4-0, its worst loss in history, and Solo ripped Ryan's decision afterward, saying, "It was the wrong decision, and I think anybody that knows anything about the game knows that." Ryan kicked Solo off the team, not even letting her be on the bench for the third-place game. A month later, Ryan was essentially fired.

"We all respect Hope and we all love Hope," Lauren Cheney said. "We know she's great person and a great soccer player."

Just check out that save in 2008 near post, leaned forward, thrust up her right arm and smacked the ball away.

"Amazing. Amazing," Shannon Boxx said, still in awe three years later. "I just remember thinking, 'Oh my God, that's just going in.' And then knowing Hope saved it. ... I'm just glad she's on our side because teams that face us, they know she's the last person before the ball goes in the net. It gives us confidence, and it probably puts a little bit of extra fear into the other team."

Much has been made about the Americans' recent vulnerability, with the twotime World Cup champions losing four games since November after going unbeaten for more than two years. But Solo was the up for the third straight time to sit Solo against Brazil in other. But it looked as if starter for only one of those her back there," Heather O'Reilly said. "It's also nice to see the frustration on attackers' faces when they think the ball's in the back of net and she's able to get her fingertips on a shot that nobody else might be able to."

Of course, Marta can do things nobody else can, either.

She scored twice against Norway, and had a hand in two of Brazil's three goals against Equatorial Guinea in Wednesday's final group game. Despite being tightly defended, she made a low pinpoint cross into the center to set up a score by Cristiane, then won a penalty that Cristiane converted.

"There's a rivalry, definitely," Solo said. "We know each other, we respect one another, we've played on All-Star teams together. Yet we don't speak a lot which is the nature of the mystique of a goalkeeper against one of the top goal scorers in the world.'

Marta did get a goal off Solo in the WPS last year.

"So I hope I can score "We're so confident with again on Sunday," she said. But there's more to this game than simply a Marta vs. Solo showdown.

Brazil-U.S. has developed into one of the game's great rivalries, with Brazil losing to the United States in the last two Olympic finals but knocking the Americans out of the World Cup in 2007. The U.S. beat Brazil in the 1999 semifinals, then beat China for its second World Cup title.

"It's Brazil-U.S. It's a big game," Marta said. "It's special."

SPARTA, Ky. – Kyle Busch won the inaugural Sprint Cup race at Kentucky Speedway on Saturday night, pulling away from Jimmie Johnson on a restart with three laps to go to collect his 99th NASCAR series victory.

Busch won the Trucks race here on Thursday night and had little trouble finding his way to Victory Lane for the second time in three days at the 1.5-mile oval. He started from the pole and dominated long stretches of the 400-mile race to pick up his third Cup win of the season.

course, they will play in the final group together, each wearing red and white pins they created to raise awareness for the thousands of victims in a country ravaged by an earthquake, tsunami and the resulting nuclear catastrophe.

The pins have Japanese characters that translate to "Never Give Up Japan."

For Mika, it goes beyond mere symbols, though. She is donating all her winnings from the 2011 majors to the Red Cross for the recovery cause in her home country. That has already totaled more than $100,000 thanks to top-10 finishes at the first two majors. First place at the U.S. Open is worth around $600,000.

'Winning majors is what I strive for," she said. "And to donate all of my earnings from the majors, I hope to give positive things to the people who are around the disaster area."

What a way to make a name for herself - even though Mika has spent most of her young career being confused with Ai Miyazato. Ai has six LPGA Tour victories to none for Mika and she has spent a longer time on the radar as the best hope to become the next golf superstar in a country that loves the game.

Not that Mika has complained much when people get them mixed up.

"Everybody thinks we're sisters," she said. "That way, everybody can remember me, because Ai is playing great."

For the final 36 holes, the Mivazatos will also be grouped with South Korea's I.K. Kim, who returned early Saturday with the lead, played the last four holes of her second round, then finished the day two shots behind in third ____ place at 3 under.

In an attempt to bring a Sunday conclusion to a tournament that has fallen beafternoons of rain, the USGA will send threesomes off from the 1 and 10 tees Sunday and will not re-pair the groups after the third round. It brings up the prospect, however slight, of having a victory celebration on the ninth green.

Almost certain, though, is that the final 36 holes will be as much a test of endurance as shot-making. Play is set to resume at 6:45 a.m. local time and if there are no interruptions, tournament director Ben Kimbal said the last putt will drop at 7:07 p.m.

The only other players to reach the halfway point under par were Stacy Lewis and Ryann O'Toole, both at 1 under.

Lewis led for much of the second round before making bogey and double-bogey in the hour after play resumed following a rain delay Friday evening. She played the last two holes of the second round Saturday morning and finished with a 73.

champion Defending Paula Creamer was in a sixway tie at even.

'You're either above it and move on and you just kind of accept that this is what it is," Creamer said, "or you dwell about it and let it get to you, and affect your game out there."

Four-time major winner Yani Tseng, trying to complete the career Grand Slam, was 4 over, nine shots out of the lead. After finishing her frustrating round Saturday morning, she said she was having more trouble dealing with the Broadmoor's hard-to-read greens than the weather.

But make no mistake. The East Course is taking a hunk out of these players. It's a 7,000-yard monster at 6,400 feet in elevation — a long walk on a normal day, let alone a multiple-round grind under major-championship conditions. Rounds hind after three straight averaged about 5 ¹/₂ hours Saturday.

Stricker takes 2-stroke lead in Deere Classic

SILVIS, Ill. — Steve Stricker stood in the bunker left of the first fairway, eyed his ball in the rough on the edge of the trap, then looked at the flag 122 yards away.

If it felt like he'd been in that position before, well, that's because he had.

"I had that same stance in my pro-am," he said. "Same bunker, same exact shot. I was right in the same spot."

All he wanted to do was get the ball on the green, which he did. And then came the shot of the day, a 75-foot putt for birdie that led to an 8-under-par 63 Saturdav and a two-stroke lead after three rounds of the John Deere Classic.

"I was just trying to get a two-putt and par and move on," Stricker said. "To make a put like that, you don't expect to, nor are the odds in your favor to make a putt like that. But it went in with perfect

That put Stricker in a good spot because he's won the last four times he held the outright lead going into the final round. Stricker said he often hears stats like that, but insisted he doesn't remember them.

"I don't put a lot of stock in numbers past, present, whatever," he said. "I just try to go out there and do the things that I'm capable of doing. You've just got to stick to your own game and that's what I've been able to do the last four or five years.

Yankees 5, Rays 4

NEW YORK - Derek Jeter homered for his 3,000th hit and raced right past the milestone in a scintillating performance Saturday, going 5 for 5 with a tiebreaking single in the eighth inning that gave the New York Yankees a 5-4 victory over the Tampa Bay Rays.

Jeter doubled and had three singles while starting a pair of Yankees rallies and finishing off their last one. He bounced a single through the left side his first time up to give him No. 2,999, then sent a no-doubt drive into the leftfield seats off Rays ace David Price in the third inning.

That made Jeter the 28th major leaquer to reach 3.000 hits, one of baseball's biggest milestones, and the first to do it with the Yankees.

It also set off quite a celebration in the Bronx, with teammates mobbing Jeter at home plate in a pack of pinstripes before he took a curtain call and saluted the sellout crowd of 48.103

The home run was Jeter's third of the season and first at home since an inside-the-park shot July 22, 2010, against Kansas City.

Red Sox 4, Orioles 0

BOSTON - John Lackey rebounded from the worst start of his Red Sox career with 6 2-3 shutout innings and Boston extended its winning streak to five games with a 4-0 victory over the Baltimore Orioles on Saturday night.

Lackey, booed last Monday as he left the mound after allowing seven runs in 2 1-3 innings, got a standing ovation as he strode to the dugout with runners at first and second in the seventh. Daniel Bard then retired Nolan Reimold on an inning-ending popup.

Lackey (6-8) struck out seven and walked one just five days after his 9-7 loss to the Toronto Blue Javs, the shortest outing in his two seasons with Boston.

Alfredo Simon (1-2) allowed three runs in the fifth on an RBI-double by Kevin Youkilis and a two-run double by Josh Reddick.

Youkilis added another run-scoring double in the seventh off Mark Hendrickson.

Boston maintained its one-game lead in the AL East over the New York Yankees, who beat the Tampa Bay Ravs 5-4.

Baltimore's sixth straight loss came one day after a 10-3 setback in which the benches cleared twice in the eighth inning., the first after Kevin Gregg's inside pitch to David Ortiz and the second after Ortiz charged Gregg when the pitcher gestured at him as he started down the first-base line on a fly out to right field.

Blue Jays 5, Indians 4

CLEVELAND — Jose Bautista led off the 10th inning with his second homer of the game, lifting the Toronto Blue Jays to a 5-4 win over the Cleveland Indians on Saturday night.

Bautista, who leads the majors with 31 homers. connected on a 1-0 pitch from Chris Perez (3-2) after the Indians tied it in the ninth on Travis Buck's twoout double. The All-Star slugger has four multihomer games this season and 15 in his career.

It was Toronto's second straight win in the series after a stunning loss on Thursday during which the Indians rallied for a 5-4 win on Travis Hafner's game-ending grand slam in the ninth.

Cleveland nearly pulled off another memorable comeback Saturday. Hafner started the ninth with a single and Carlos Santana followed with a grounder that glanced off reliever Jon Rauch's glove and rolled to first baseman Adam Lind. Rauch (3-3) raced to the bag and took the throw, which was barely in time to beat Santana, who made a headfirst slide.

Pinch-runner Austin Kearns moved to second on the grounder and advanced again when Grady Sizemore tapped back to the mound. Buck then doubled off the wall in left-center on the 11th pitch of the at-bat.

White Sox 4, Twins 3

CHICAGO - Alexei Ramirez drove in the winning run with a two-out single in the bottom of the ninth Saturday and the Chicago White Sox finally beat the Minnesota Twins, 4-3.

It was Chicago's first win over the Twins in seven meetings this season and ended a nine-game losing streak to Minnesota stretching back to last season.

A.J. Pierzynski, who entered the game when Ramon Castro suffered a broken right hand on passed ball in the eighth inning, doubled off Jose Mijares (0-1) to start the ninth. After two fly outs, Juan Pierre walked and Alex Burnett relieved before Ramirez lined a single to center with Pierzynski beating the throw home. Jesse Crain (5-2) got three outs for the win.

Twins starter Brian Duensing allowed five hits and a pair of runs over seven innings in a duel with Chicago lefty Mark Buehrle.

Buehrle, who entered the game with a 25-19 career record against the Twins, his most wins against any team, allowed four hits and three unearned runs in eight innings with eight strikeouts.

Marlins 6, Astros 1

MIAMI - Ricky Nolasco tossed a seven-hitter for his sixth career complete game, Logan Morrison hit a bases-loaded triple in Florida's four-run fifth inning and the Marlins beat the Houston Astros 6-1 on Saturday night.

John Buck added a solo homer for the Marlins, who tied a season high with their fourth consecutive victory. Morrison finished with three hits, and Nolasco (6-5) struck out eight and walked one in his second complete game of the season.

Houston has lost eight of nine and 13 of 15 overall. Brett Myers (3-9) allowed six runs, five earned, and four hits in 4 1-3 innings, dropping to 0-5 with an 8.17 ERA in his last seven starts against Florida.

The Astros hurt themselves with shoddy defense in the fifth. With one out and Emilio Bonifacio on first, shortstop Clint Barmes booted Omar Infante's chopper for an error that left runners on first and second.

Myers then walked Gaby Sanchez and Hanley Ramirez to force in a run before Morrison hit a liner into right-center for his second triple of the season.

Wilton Lopez then came in and retired Mike Stanton and Mike Cameron to end the inning.

Cubs 6, Pirates 3

PITTSBURGH — Ryan Dempster won for the first time in five starts despite arguing with manager Mike Quade after he was lifted after five innings, and the Chicago Cubs beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-3 on Saturday night.

Dempster (6-6) was pitching on nine days' rest after being scratched from his scheduled start Monday because of back pain. He was cleared to start Saturday after making it through a pregame workout Friday without incident.

He allowed three runs on seven hits and three walks in five innings and was seen throwing equipment and arguing vehemently with Quade when he was pinch-hit for to lead off the sixth.

Starlin Castro went 3 for 5 with a run and an RBI for the Cubs. who have won two of three.

A night after blowing his sixth save, Carlos Marmol pitched the ninth for his

Dodgers 1, Padres 0

LOS ANGELES - The Los Angeles Dodgers got their first hit with two out in the ninth inning Saturday and still beat the San Diego Padres 1-0 when Dioner Navarro singled in Juan Uribe for the unlikely victory.

Uribe was down to his last strike when he drove a pitch from Luke Gregerson (2-2) over the head of left fielder Chris Denorfia for Los Angeles' first hit and only the second hit of the game for either team. The Padres have never had a no-hitter in their 43-year history.

Navarro then looped a 1-2 pitch into short right-center to give the Dodgers three consecutive shutout victories for the first time since July 1991. Los Angeles has won nine of its last 19 games, and seven of those victories have been shutouts — including the last five.

Aaron Harang started for San Diego and worked six innings, finishing with six strikeouts and three walks. Josh Spence came on and struck out his only batter, Andre Ethier, before Chad Qualls escaped a jam to keep the game scoreless.

Rockies 2, Nationals 1

WASHINGTON - Ubaldo Jimenez allowed one run in eight innings and Todd Helton homered, doubled and drove in both runs as the Colorado Rockies beat the Washington Nationals 2-1 on Saturday night.

Jimenez (4-8) retired the first 13 batters before Michael Morse singled with one out in the fifth inning. The right-hander struck out eight, allowed five hits and walked one. It was the third time this season Jimenez pitched at least eight innings, all coming on the road.

Huston Street pitched the ninth for his 26th save, giving up two singles. Jayson Werth grounded into a double play with runners on the corners to end the game.

The Rockies have won two in a row and will go for the series sweep Sunday.

lan Desmond singled, tripled and scored the lone run for the Nationals, who have lost three consecutive onerun games.

Nationals starter Jason Marguis (7-4) was coming off his worst start of the season, when he gave up four runs on eight hits over 1 1-3 innings in a loss to Pittsburgh on July 3. Marquis was much better against the Rockies, but was no match for Jimenez as he allowed two runs on five hits in six innings, walking four and striking out one.

By then, all of Jeter's teammates were already celebrating in the dugout, raising their arms almost in unison. A special time for No. 2 — his second hit of the game, and right at 2 p.m.

The ball, one of the specially marked ones put in play for the occasion, disappeared into a cluster of fans a few rows beyond the wall. Christian Lopez of Highland Park, N.Y., sitting in Section 236, emerged with the valuable prize. He gladly gave the ball back to the Yankees so Jeter can have the momento. 'He earned it." the 23-year-old Lopez told the YES Network. "I'm not going to be the person to take that away from him."

Jeter 3K merchandise, meanwhile, began flying off the shelves at the souvenir stands. Hats, pins, shirts and more, all commemorating No. 3,000, hadn't gone on sale until it occurred.

True to his nature of staying focused on the game, Jeter briskly rounded the bases. But there was no way this moment was going to pass without plenty of fanfare.

Good buddy Jorge Posada greeted Jeter with a bearhug after he touched home plate. Mariano Rivera and the rest of the Yankees were right behind, swallowing up Jeter before he could reach out of the dugout to cheer. the dugout. "Derek's a class act. He's what a ballplayer should be.'

Damon and Jeter are the same age, and both were drafted out of high school in 1992. Damon said that's one reason why Jeter's accomplishments mean so much to him.

The two were teammates in New York from 2006-09, helping the Yankees win the World Series in Damon's final season with the club. He played for Detroit last year, then signed a one-year contract with Tampa Bay in February.

Damon has lost some of his speed, but he's been extremely durable throughout his career and he's still a pest at the plate. He was hitting .279 with nine home runs and 41 RBIs in his first season with the Rays.

He thinks 3,000 hits is definitely an attainable goal.

"Oh, no doubt," he said. "Might as well, if it's there."

Damon was back in Tampa Bay's lineup Saturday, batting leadoff in his first game since getting hit on the left hand by a pitch from Minnesota's Fran-. cisco Liriano on Wednesdav.

His hand was still red and sore, but the swelling had gone down after he applied ice all night. Hours before the game, Damon took swings in the indoor cage at Yankee Stadium to test his hand and planned to take a full round of indoor batting practice.

"The strength isn't quite all there yet," Damon said. "The first couple swings were horrible, but just trying to find a way. ... I want to be in there."

Damon began the day exactly 100 hits behind injured Yankees slugger Alex Rodriguez on the career list.

son and Cal Ripken the previous players to get there.

There was a time when some wondered whether Jeter would have a chance to break Pete Rose's career record of 4,256 hits. Jeter, in fact, was eight days younger than Rose when he got to 3,000.

But Jeter has been slowing down. He came into the game hitting only .257 with just two home runs, and recently pulled out of his 12th All-Star game to rest the strained right calf that recently landed him on the disabled list.

Jeter hadn't homered at all since May 8, and this was his first homer at Yankee Stadium since last July 22.

All the Yankees greats left their distinct marks. Babe Ruth set the home run Jeter casually chatted record, Lou Gehrig became the Iron Horse, Joe DiMaggio hit in 56 straight games, Yogi Berra won the most championships, Mickey Mantle launched the longest drives. They all won World Series rings, certainly, with Jeter owning five. Agassi has helped raise $150 million for education reform with his foundation. Another of the school's students, A.J. Green sang the national anthem, leaving 'America the Beautiful" to blues singer Keb' Mo'.

"He gave more than just money, or material things. He gave us the tools to build our own lives," Ruffin said of Agassi. "Because of him, I will never forget to look back and lift up others."

An eight-time Grand Slam champion and 1996 Olympic gold medalist who was No. 1 in the world for 101 straight weeks, Agassi plummeted to No. 141 in the rankings and by '97 was using crystal meth "a lot." (He also admitted in his 2009 book "Open" that he wore a wig to combat premature baldness.)

"Rock bottom's an interesting place. I moved in and spent some time there,' Agassi said. "Going from 141 in the world back to No. 1 was not an accomplishment; it was the reflection of an accomplishment. It was a symptom of good choices."

Working on the school has been a second life for Agassi, at the same time providing him with a life's goal and a vehicle to pass it on to others. At the end of his speech, he turned to his own children and the others in the crowd and told them to look at the nurses and teachers "win their own, personal Grand Slams."

LOS ANGELES — The University of Texas system and Ryan O'Neal are sparring over ownership of an Andy Warhol portrait of the actor's longtime companion, Farrah Fawcett.

The system's board of regents sued O'Neal in federal court in Los Angeles on Friday, asking a judge to order the Oscarnominated actor to turn over the painting. The portrait is one of two that Warhol made of the "Charlie's Angels" star, and the university claims the actress bequeathed it to their Austin, Texas campus.

O'Neal's spokesman Arnold Robinson blasted the lawsuit in a statement, saying the university has known for more than a year that the actor has the painting. "This is (a) completely ridiculous lawsuit," Robinson wrote.

"Ryan O'Neal's friendship with Andy Warhol began 10 years prior to his meeting Farrah Fawcett," Robinson wrote. "When Ryan introduced Andy to Farrah, Mr. Warhol chose to complete two portraits of her, one for Ms. Fawcett and one for Mr. O'Neal. Mr. O'Neal looks forward to being completely vindicated in the courts.³

The university's lawsuit claims O'Neal may be holding onto other pieces from Fawcett's art collection that she wanted the university to have after her June 2009 death. Fawcett attended the University of Texas at Austin in the 1960s, according to the complaint.

"The enduring value and public interest in the Warhol portraits is a testament not only to Mr. Warhol's talent and artistry, but also to Ms. Fawcett's status as a cultural icon," the lawsuit states.

Sapphire deftly inhabited the mind of Precious, an illiterate 16year-old girl who had been raped repeatedly by her father (giving birth to two of his children) and brutally abused by her sadistic mother. There, the streamof-consciousness technique brilliantly captured the protagonist's transformation from ignorance to independence.

Today's birthday: Some new friends you make in the next year are likely to infuse a fresh vitality into your social interests. If vou're looking to make a romantic attachment, it's a good time to get out and mingle. Keep your eyes open, and be available. Cancer (June 21-July 22) - One of your better attributes is being able to manage difficult developments that unnerve others. This talent will make you a star.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) - In your own quiet way, you could have a strong influence over someone with whom you are close. You might be the one who is able to steer him or her in a more positive direction.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — You could be unusually lucky in having everything go your way, so why not focus your efforts on something new that has caught your fancy lately? If you don't try, you'll never know.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) - Even if this isn't a workday for you, you might still be able to make some extra money taking an educated gamble on something financial. It's what you know that'll make you a winner.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) - Concern yourself with things that could have a favorable effect on your future, rather than concentrating merely on the immediate. It's a good time to plan for what you want.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) - You could be invited to take part in something new that another has going for him or herself. If you know what's being offered, you won't look a gift horse in the mouth.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — A couple of friends who you've been closely involved with lately are grateful for the way you've treated them, and may have something very nice in mind for you.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) - You're in a very good achievement cycle, so engage yourself in something that can make you a winner. Know that you can attain anything to which you set your mind.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) - Because conditions are exceptionally favorable for you, you should be able to successfully advance a particularly important personal interest. At least give it a try.

Aries (March 21-April 19) — Don't get upset over some change of plans triggered by shifting conditions that might occur today, because you'll tend to benefit from them. Ride the tide all the way.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) - As long as you don't split hairs over trivialities, you and all the other parties involved should benefit from some kind of verbal agreement into which you enter.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) - If you understand that free rides aren't being given away and you are prepared to work hard for something you want badly, your potential for getting it is pretty good.

Pine Ridge Fishing Club hosts Toney

The Pine Ridge Fishing Club meets the second Tuesday of each month. This Tuesday (July 14) at 7 p.m., the club welcomes Capt. Toney to speak on inshore fishing.

Pine Ridge Fishing Club is always looking for new members and fishermen and boaters are welcome to the meeting.

The meetings are held at Pine Ridge Community Center, which is at 5690 West Pine Ridge Blvd., in Beverly Hills.

Parks & Rec plan Jazzercise

Citrus County Parks & Recreation will offer Jazzercise classes at the Citrus County Auditorium. The 60-minute workout blends dance and muscle-toning movements choreographed to music. It is designed to improve strength, balance and flexibility.

Classes at 6 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursday. Cost is $20 the first month for new students.

Every class includes a gentle warm-up, 30-minute aerobic workout, muscle toning, and strengthening segment with weights and a final stretch.

For more information, visit www.citruscountyparks.com, then the health and fitness tab, or call (352) 465-7007.

Learn to stretch with Parks & Rec

Citrus County Parks & Recreation offers a new low-impact stretching class. This on-going class will be from 10 to 11 a.m. at Citrus Springs Community Center. Cost is $5 per class.

The low-impact class is easy, fun with good benefits. Stretching helps to make you more flexible and regular stretching will help mobility and balance. This helps to slow down the onset of common degenerative conditions, such as osteoarthritis. Stretching increases physical and mental relaxation and reduces the risk of joint sprain, muscle strain or back problems. Low-impact exercises can improve health and fitness without harming weight-bearing joints. Research suggests that moderate-intensity, low-impact activity is just as effective as high-impact activity in lowering the risk of heart disease.

Register for YMCA camp, lessons

Citrus County YMCA has begun registration for swim lessons and summer day camp.

Schedules and registration forms are available at several locations in the county, including program sites, Citrus County Chamber of Commerce offices and local businesses. Financial assistance is available for families in need, for both the swim lesson program and summer camp.

Group swim lessons have already opened at Bicentennial Pool in Crystal River. There are a variety of classes available including preschool, youth and adult. There are also parent/child classes offered for infants ages 6 months and older. Swim lesson sessions generally run about 10 days and several sessions are offered throughout the summer until the beginning of August.

Summer camp will be at two locations this year: Whispering Pines Park in Inverness and the Ellie Schiller Homosassa Springs Wildlife State Park. Both locations will offer the Discovery Kids-themed camp, where each week follows its own unique

Free Lacrosse clinics offered

There will be a free series of lacrosse clinics being offered for boys and girls ages 8-18 in Citrus County over the summer months. The clinic dates are July 5, 7, 12 and 14.

Clinics will be from 5 to 8 p.m. on those Tuesdays and Thursdays noted. Clinics will be held at Central Ridge District Park Soccer Fields off Hwy 491. Equipment is necessary for this camp because of the nature of the game.

The equipment needed for boys: helmet, shoulder pads, elbow pads, gloves, stick, athletic supporters, cleats and mouthpiece. Equipment for girls: goggles, gloves, stick, cleats and mouthpiece.

For more information, call Ethan Eldridge at 352-465-8240.

Camp Fusion

Camp Fusion is the place to be! Campers will enjoy a variety of themed weeks, sports, field trips, guest speakers, music, arts and crafts and so much more. Camp Fusion's goal is to create a fun and safe, educational atmosphere for your child while they are out of school for the summer.

This summer camp will host several field trips and has many

Camp Fusion will visit Bicentennial Park Pool weekly and children will be involved in a variety of sports almost every single day at camp.

Citrus County Parks and Recreation is hosting Camp Fusion through August 5. This summer youth camp is designed for children ages 6 to 10 years old. Keep in mind, five year olds may enroll if they have completed kindergarten and 11 year olds may enroll if they have not yet entered middle school. Campers can enroll daily, weekly or for the entire summer. There are also extended care hours for campers. Regular weekly fee per camper is $60, weekly fee for campers with extended care is $75 and the daily fee is $20.

Associated Press

The Inlet House condo complex in Fort Pierce was once the kind of place the 55-and-older set aspired to. It was affordable. The pool and clubhouse were tidy, the lawns freshly snipped. Residents, push-carts in tow, walked to the beach, the bank, the beauty parlor, the cinema and the supermarket. In post-crash America, this was a dreamy little spot, especially on a fixed income.

But that was Inlet House before the rats started chewing through the toilet seats in vacant units and sewage started seeping from the ceiling. Before condos that were worth $79,000 four years ago sold for as little as $3,000. And before the homeowners' association levied $6,000 assessments on everyone - and then foreclosed on seniors who couldn't pay the association bill. even if they didn't owe the bank a dime. Normally, it's the bankers who go after delinquent homeowners. But in communities governed by the mighty homeowners' association, as the sour economy leaves more people unable to pay their fees, it is neighbor versus neighbor. "What the board is doing is trying to foreclose on people to force people out the door," said Mike Silvestri, 75, who stopped paying his dues at Inlet House in protest over what he considers unnecessary and unaffordable assessments. He and others said there were cheaper ways to deal with the rat infestation and leaky sewage that led the board to order up a costly plumbing overhaul. "They are bamboozling old people. I'm old, but I'm not senile," he said. In the past, housing associations have gained infamy for dictating everything from the weight of your dog (one mandated a diet for a hound) to whether you can kiss in your driveway (not if you

Now I admit I have a small dog, but that's still a big grasshopper.

It's not that we have a single grasshopper as big as my dog; it's that in my neighborhood we have thousands of these sixinch buggers jumping all over the place.

We are fortunate to live on the water, so almost every one of my neighbors is sensitive about misusing insecticides. The poison can easily get into the water and accidentally kill the fish.

One day, out of frustration, my wife grabbed a plastic bottle of bug killer and sprayed one of the grasshoppers right in the face. The six-inch grasshopper looked her in the eye, sucked down the poison and then let out what sounded like a small burp.

He stuck around and waited for another drink of bug spray, but my wife reverted to the ancient art of grasshopper elimination.

One ordered a war hero to take down his flag because of a "nonconforming" pole. Another de-manded residents with brown spots on their lawns dye their grass green.

Now, past the faux regal gates, beyond the clubhouses, many property owners in associations owe more than their homes are worth. Some are struggling to pay their bills after they lose a job. Others have had their pay cut. So they've stopped paying their association dues.

To combat the rise in delinquencies, boards are switching off utilities, garnishing income and axing cable. They are yanking pool passes and banning the billiard room. And, in the most extreme cases, they are foreclosing.

homeowners' associations are this extraordinary power," said Marjorie Murray, a lawyer and founder of the Center for California Homeowner Association Law.

Today, one in five U.S. homeowners is subject to the will of the homeowners' association, whose boards oversee 24.4 million homes. More than 80 percent of newly constructed homes in the U.S are in association communities.

And of the nation's 300,000 homeowners' associations, more than 50 percent now face "serious financial problems," according to a September survey by the Community Association Institute. An October survey found 65 percent of homeowners' associations have delinquency rates higher than 5 percent, up from 19 percent of associations in 2005.

Associations set rules for their communities. They levy monthly "The treacherous part is that dues, typically between $200 and

If an association's budget is strained or major repairs need to be done, the board can levy a "special assessment" on top of those dues. And when one homeowner doesn't pay those fees, all the other homeowners have to pick up the cost.

The rise in delinquencies comes as banks are taking over foreclosed homes and then leaving them vacant more often than ever. Taken together, these shortfalls are resulting in higher fees for all of the other homeowners - and massive financial angst for association boards.

Before now, associations rarely, if ever, foreclosed on homeowners. But today, encouraged by a new industry of lawyers and consultants, boards are increasingly foreclosing on people 60 days

And that's where the real competitive story begins.

Our home is tucked into the end of a street and the five women in the neighborhood do an outstanding job of keeping up the landscaping. There are flowers, bushes and plants all over.

The grasshoppers are apparently a plague from an ex-husband of one of these women, because they can eat a healthy plant in a day. The grasshoppers, not the exhusband.

Anyway, the five neighbors have created their own strategic plan of attack on the grasshoppers. With pesticides off the table, the strategic attack involves a lot of whacking. They have individual goals of elimination and together they work toward victory.

My wife has refined her attacks by purchasing a pair of rubber gloves and smacking her hands together on the unsuspecting grasshoppers. The gloves actually have spikes built into them for the maximum impact.

It's messy but effective.

Neighbor Marguerite is from Alabama, where they have a much more direct approach to problems. She originally used the traditional whacking shoe approach, but the guts of one shot out and got her right in the face, which is about as popular as a tax hike at a tea party.

Marguerite now grabs the grasshoppers in her hands and tears the head

Alabama is apparently a pretty tough place.

Neighbor Marcy is from Massachusetts and she is much more refined. OK, she's somewhat refined.

DOUGLAS COHN AND ELEANOR CLIFT

WASHINGTON appears likely Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner will step down once the current impasse over raising the debt ceiling is resolved. It's hard to understand why he would want to leave with a cloud over his head. Defusing the debt limit crisis is essential, but it doesn't burnish his overall legacy. He will still leave behind an economy that is under-performing.

Geithner has been on the job since before President Obama took office. He was one of the Big Three along with Bush Treasury Secretary Henry Paulson and Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke to stabilize the banking system and put in place the bailouts the American people love to loathe. He may be ready to leave his high-stress post, but it's also possible Obama wants him to leave, and the president has someone else in mind to fill the post.

Maybe Obama has been brushing up on his reading about Depression economics, and realizes anew he needs some heavyweights on his economic team. Next year's presidential election will turn on the economy and jobs and deficit reduction, and Obama has not communicated well enough on these core issues.

It's not for lack of trying. This week, the president partnered with Twitter, responding to 140character questions on jobs and the economy in an attempt to mainstream media. He's done events on Facebook and YouTube in addition to the standard television networks and print outlets, but breaking through to get the attention of a disheartened electorate remains a challenge.

The president could use someone at the Treasury Department who can explain complex economic issues in simple terms, and who has the charisma and leadership skills to get things done on Capitol Hill. That is a very tall order, and you have to go back to Alexander Hamilton to find a treasury secretary who exerted his influence that directly.

The nation owes a huge debt to Hamilton, who took office in September 1789, appointed by George Washington. Hamilton found a situation direr than what America faces today. The brandnew country had exhausted its resources. The currency was worthless, and states were arguing with each other over who owed what. There was no back pay for the military, and soldiers were on the verge of revolt.

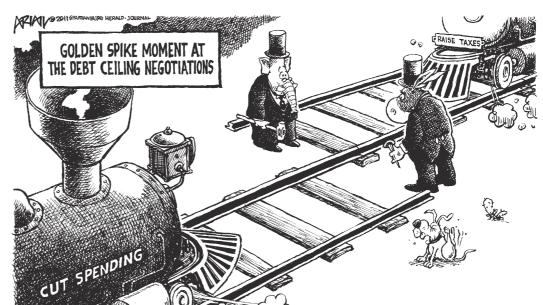

Hamilton turned the economy around by asserting the power of a strong central government. He imposed tariffs on imported goods and taxed whiskey to raise money, and most important, he restored faith in the fledging federal government by declaring it would stand behind the national debt and the state debts as well. reach the millions of people who He cited the implied powers of no longer get their news from the the Constitution as the authority behind his actions, which included the creation of the government-owned Bank of the United States.

Hamilton removed any doubt the new country would honor its debts, setting a standard that now for the first time in the nation's history might be breached if political leaders can't reach an agreement on raising the debt ceiling. What Obama needs is another Hamilton, someone whose stature and economic genius can rise above partisan politics, someone like New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg, a self-made billionaire whose name has been floated before as a potential Secretary of the Treasury, and whose expertise and ego would be more than a match for Obama.

Geithner's expected departure is an opportunity for Obama to put a new face on his economic agenda going into the 2012 election. There is little the president can do to affect the forces already in place, but he can signal through the appointment of someone energetic and high-profile, like Bloomberg, that he is doing all that is humanly possible to boost the recovery and create jobs. Geithner saved the banks; now it's time to save the economy.

To date, Gov. Scott has betive of a for-profit enterprise interested only in the bottom line. As the chief executive of Florida, however, he is urged to respect the will of the people by preserving the Real Florida of the state's award-winning park system.

Constitutional rules

Note: Article 1. Section 8. Clause 3 of the Constitution says, "Congress shall have power to regulate commerce with foreign nations." So why has Congress allowed foreign nations to take away so many jobs from Americans? And Congress has the right to establish a uniform rule of natural-563-0579 ization as U.S. citizenship to babies of Americans born in the USA or naturalized, no others.

Better uniforms

I'm watching the Rays and the Cardinals play baseball the night of July 2. Now they really look like baseball players with their knee pants and their long socks. Looks much neater than the ones the extra-long pants bunched on top of their shoes. That looks better with the long socks.

Questionable thanks

In Sunday's Sound Off, someone called in to thank Gov. Scott. For what, I'd like to ask. For losing thousands of jobs? For turning down federal money for high-speed rail that would have served thousands of people, only to turn around again and spend over $1 billion of Florida taxpayer dollars on money on a rail that serves only a few people? Yeah, he's

Diaper manatees

The last few weeks there have been numerous letters and call-ins about manatee poop. I have a solution: Put diapers on the animals.

Counting pot plants

There was an article in yesterday's (July 3) Chronicle about a marijuana bust in Sugarmill Woods. It stated they got a tip and they seized 58 marijuana plants. They obviously counted them.

Big picture

The residents of Crystal River and Citrus County worked very hard and sacrificed much to purchase Three Sisters Springs and prevent the development that would have damaged the river and harmed the manatees. We removed a large part of our tax base, causing us to have to make up that difference. We respect the environment and the manatees and we are not the culprits. Our thanks for this endeavor is to punish us by imposing so many restrictions on the use of the bay and river that our property values will decline as well as tourism to our area.

The people of Citrus County have always been respectful of the manatees and the environment. If the rules in place now were enforced properly, we would not need the drastic measures being proposed. The rights of the manatees should not be placed above the rights of the people.

The regulations in place now protect the manatees during the peak times of the year when the population is abundant in the river. The few that linger after this time should not cause such harsh restrictions on the citizens of the Citrus County.

The citizens of Citrus County worked relentlessly to purchase Three Sisters Springs to preserve its beauty and allow the citizens to continue enjoying it beauty. It is upsetting to me that our efforts to do this are now allowing the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to possibly impose such harsh restrictions that in the future we may not be able to enjoy swimming, kayaking or snorkeling around the springs that we fought to save from development.

I believe the role of U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is to protect

Improper response

A recent editorial written by George Boydston regarding attacking dogs is disturbing to say the least.

There are a couple of issues that stand out.

First, the advice from the animal control person to shoot the dogs was very macho but totally wrong. No decent person wants to have to be armed to take a bike ride and they certainly do not want to take the life of an animal that is only doing what is natural to it.

Secondly, discharging a firearm in a neighborhood most likely is illegal and in the heat of the moment could pose a threat to neighbors or children in the area.

The correct response would have been to send out an animal control officer or deputy to advise the owner of the problem and the consequences of his actions. If the dogs are off leash and running free, they can be picked up and taken to the shelter. The owner can be fined and could find himself in a civil action if someone gets injured.

One of the reasons we have animal control is to specifically deal with these situations. Now, they are under the sheriff's (office), which should expand their ability to enforce the laws and ordinances as necessary.

Since Mr. Boydston gave his name I would hope the sheriff's office commences an internal investigation, including an interview with the complainant to determine who gave the inappropriate advice and take necessary action.

We support animal control with county taxes as a service we want. In doing so, we expect them to handle issues with outof-control animals, not suggest citizens take up arms to protect themselves.

I would suggest if the owner cannot properly control and house these animals, they should go to a new home with someone (who) can care from them properly.

Free speech stymied at 'public' hearing

Edna Mattos Special to the Chronicle

Wildlife's public meeting was so weird it merits exposure.

Of course, we are against the U.S. Fish & Wildlife's austere policies regarding King's Bay and the surrounding community. Because of this, some of us attended to draw attention to the fact that this government agency is really overextending its powers, while using the manatees as an excuse. They do not only want to control the fish and wildlife in this vicinity, they also want to control water usage, the land and the people. With this comes the erosion of private property rights.We attended to create awareness. So, initially, I didn't take offense when a deputy sheriff, using an intimidating, belligerent and authoritative tone and stance, told me that we could not take the signs inside. Intimidation, bullying and belligerence were unnecessary because no one was acting inappropriately.

They obviously considered our 'Over-the-Hill' gang to also be senile and daft.

If the First Amendment only protected popular speech, supported by the majority of citizens, then there would be no need for constitutional protection. Instead, we could simply have a referendum with the majority deciding which speech should be allowed. Thankfully, the First Amendment especially prohibits the suppression of free speech by the majority.

Why is all this important? It is important because we cannot allow our First Amendment rights to be trampled on by anyone, especially government agencies. No speech should be silenced for whatever reason, especially, through intimidation or coercion. Its message must be allowed to succeed or fail based on its own merits. If speech can arbitrarily be silenced, then there is risk of a universal silence.

Reynolds is right

Jack Reynolds had a very articulate letter and I agree with everything he said. We need to fight about more restrictions and the federal government taking over the river and the bay. We, too, moved here probably in the late '70s. So as a resident for over 30 years, we've always managed to live in peace and harmony with the gentle giants and all the other wildlife, and that's the reason we decided to stay here. We came here for work at the power plant and we loved it and decided to stav because it was so clean and get to enjoy the property that they bought. Jack Reynolds is right; no more restrictions.

Lavish lifestyle

In response to the comment about Eleanor Roosevelt vs. Mrs. Obama: I don't remember Eleanor Roosevelt being so lavish. I remember Clinton doing a lot of traveling. I don't remember Bush being so lavish. And here we are, in a very serious economic (crisis) and people are struggling, people are suffering, and the Obamas seem to be just partying and having a lavish lifestyle. The traveling that Mrs. Obama is doing seems to be very unnecessary and overly extravagant.

Opposition first developed when agency bureaucrats published regulations which took no account of economic consequences or property rights. In response and over the objections of businesses and property owners, a Democratic Congress in 1982 amended the act to formally eliminate any economic considerations. Since that time, both agencies have concerned themselves exclusively with preservation of species costs and property rights be damned.

That brings us to the endangered manatees and King's Bay madness. Essentially, we have done such a good job of protecting manatees that their numbers have doubled, thereby putting more of them at risk for collision with power boats.

Fish and Wildlife Service, unable to accept the loss of even one manatee per year, proposes restricting powerboat speeds to a level which eliminates use of the bay for many water sports. Quite apparently, manatee rights take precedence over human rights in this instance.

Although humans are not an endangered species, consider this: Boating injuries and drownings in King's Bay exceed manatee injuries. Shall we just eliminate all boats to save lives?

Pedestrian injuries and deaths in Citrus County exceed manatee deaths. Shall we slow all motor vehicles down to idle speed?

How about cementing over all swimming pools to prevent even one infant drowning?

Legislation which creates bureaucracies not responsible to voters always has unintended consequences. The proposal by FWS is illogical and inconsiderate of the public's rights to enjoy public waterways. It may inflict economic damages on businesses and property owners as well.

The risk of loss of one manatee per year is acceptable, given their numbers are increasing, in order to preserve the current use of King's Bay.

She likes to use the soapy water in a plastic bag technique. As a retired high school language-arts department chair, she uses her language skills to convince the grasshoppers to get inside the plastic bag where they slowly drown somewhat like Gov. Dukakis did after he drove that tank all those years ago.

Neighbors Ann and Valerie have their own issues. Ann won't kill the grasshoppers, but spends plenty of time pointing out the critters to the other members of the mob.

Valerie was fine with killing her share of grasshoppers until mating season began. She is the head of nursing at one of the large Ocala hospitals and just can't bring herself to kill the grasshoppers while they are, well, doing it.

She has apparently spent too much time near the hospital maternity ward.

On any given day, you can hear one of the neighbors shout: "35.'

"I've already gotten 22," an-

The state's official grasshopper handbook warns "If for any reason, you fail to heed the color warning and pick it up; the Lubber grasshopper makes a loud hissing noise and secretes an irritating foulsmelling foamy spray.'

Sounds like the perfect house-warming gift.

The problem in our neighborhood is while the ladies will kill hundreds in a given day, the grasshoppers have little to do but sit around, eat plants and then reproduce. Every day hundreds of new grasshoppers arrive to join the crowd.

Social Security safe

Harley Lawrence ("Social Security in Trouble,' July 6) can attack AARP if he wants to. As long as AARP is a centrist voice for all generations of Americans, we recognize we'll be a target for those on either extreme.

But Mr. Lawrence is wrong that Social Security is a "Ponzi scheme." Social Security beneficiaries paid what they were asked to pay, all during their working lives. Now they're entitled to the benefits they were promised. It's entirely reasonable for Americans to hold their elected officials to account for protecting Social Security, not only for today's beneficiaries but for those of all generations.

Mr. Lawrence echoes those who would like you to believe Social Security is broke. Yet, the fact is even if Congress does absolutely nothing to strengthen this vital program, and the $2.5 trillion Social Security trust fund is entirely exhausted a quarter century from now, payroll tax receipts will be enough to finance 75 percent of scheduled benefits for the foreseeable future.

Here's where we can all agree — 75 percent is not enough. We must ensure Social Security can pay 100 percent of scheduled benefits. Rather than battling one another, we should be finding common ground on which we can build solutions that keep Social Security strong for our children and grandchildren.

President Reagan worked with Democrats in Congress to save Social Security in 1983. It was a triumph of bipartisan cooperation. We should demand our elected leaders follow that great example and act to strengthen Social Security today.

No to socialization

In response to Sound Off today (July 4, 2011) regarding Socialized Medicine.

I've first hand knowledge that socialized medicine does not work in Canada since I, as a U.S. citizen worked in Ontario for 12 vears

First off, their medicine is not free. The Ontarians pay 16.5 percent sales tax on everything they purchase, including non-essential food (peanuts, beer, soda, etc) of which part goes to that so-called 'free' health care.

In the last couple of years, their federal taxes were increased by a $1K per year for that so-called 'free' medical care. The government had to hide it in yearly taxes so no one/outsiders wouldn't know that it was actually for their failing health care system.

Need to know more true facts? My husband had a major heart attack while I was working up there. After three days in intensive care, they sent him home with nitro, stating he just had angina. Within a week, I had him back in Ohio, where he had a quadruple bypass which saved his life

That 'free' socialized medicine almost killed him as they took the correct tests, but they didn't know how to read it. Even if he was diagnosed properly, it would have been 6-9 months before he could have gotten a life-saving bypass. Is this what you really want here in the USA? I don't think so.

Oh and one last fact. there are a lot of Canadians (who) cross the border to the good old USA to have their surgeries. Why? Because they can get their medical care faster, much faster, and with more competent doctors. Think twice and be careful what you wish for.

TSA vs. old granny

Anybody with even a shred of empathy in one's soul would be appalled after learning the facts of a 95-year-old woman's mentally anguishing experience at the hands of an airport's TSA security agents in recent weeks. However, perhaps "outrage' and "anger" are the more operative emotional terms.

Granny, wheelchairbound and leukemia stricken, was rolled by her daughter to the security area whereby she was subjected to a pat-down search. Determined inconclusive she was then ordered to a nearby room, where an attendant asked the daughter to remove her mother's under protective garment. The daughter complied and eventually Granny got aboard, however without a replacement brief (her luggage checked) for the duration of her flight. This senseless search, of course, yielded nothing except the ill effects of a profound incursion on an old and frail woman - now mortified, disheveled and resentful.

Other "extreme" incidents reported have involved toddlers and pre-adolescent girls for patdowns looking for hidden explosives — even without probable cause. The TSA offers (to paraphrase) 'searches are routine, sensitive and professional."

However, one would question how sensitive? Routine, yes, as the body searchers are "scripted" lower level employees directed by the ironclad manual in their back pockets. If on the queue you are next in line, you will be dressed down.

Unwavering rules do not permit circumstantial discretion, prudence, nor the latitude of using plain common sense.

"Profiling and probative cause," of course, are the solution, but that rankles the "politically correct" fanatics in Washington, D.C's draconian agencies. Unlike American airports, "perception-based screenings" in Israel's and other airports are 100 percent effective, thus sparing Granny, little Johnny and teen Missy.

In the meantime, if you must fly, you must expect the TSA to inflict its indignities upon you to make you feel like a terrorist.

Despite Fourth Amendment prohibitions of "unreasonable searches and seizures," rigid security measures necessarily require enhanced safety precautions. However, I would suggest — no demand! — a better TSA model that is equally effective, but far more flyer-friendly.

Sunday showdown

President Barack Obama turns to leave Thursday after discussing ongoing budget negotiations in the briefing room at the White House in Washington.

Obama: Still differences on debt, new talks today

> JIM KUHNHENN Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Beset by a weak jobs report, President Barack Obama on Friday called for swift action by Congress to raise the nation's borrowing limit, saying the uncertainty over the debt ceiling has hindered hiring in the private sector

In remarks in the White House Rose Garden, the president linked two of the most high-profile issues facing his presidency - the weak economy and a massive budget deal to meet an Aug. 2 deadline to increase the debt limit.

The sooner we get this done, the sooner that the markets know that the debt limit ceiling will have been raised and that we have a serious plan to deal with our debt and deficit, the sooner that we give our businesses the certainty that will need in order to make additional investments to grow and hire," Obama said. He made his remarks just hours after the government reported anemic job growth for June and a new, higher unemployment rate of 9.2 percent. Obama said uncertainty over raising the debt ceiling — currently capped at $14.3 trillion was one of several factors that have contributed to an economic slowdown and weaker job creation. He also listed natural disasters, high gas prices, state and local budget cuts and the fiscal crisis in Greece.

Laura Byrnes WORKFORCE CONNECTION

Targeted industry manager tapped

our months ago in this space, we introduced you to one of our employment counselors by saying, "If you don't know Frank Calascione, you should; especially if you are look-ing for work."

For countless job seekers who have been helped by Frank in the past few years, you know how invaluable it can be to have someone of his caliber on your side.

Today I'm here to tell you that Frank means business. He really means business.

Associated Press

Starting July 1, Frank is Workforce Connection's new Targeted Industry Manager for Citrus and Levy counties. Before I tell you what that means to you if you own or operate a business, I'd like to tell you a little more about Frank.

He has a 30-year history in Citrus County that spans most of his formative education, from primary grades through high school, including dual enrollment at Citrus High School and what was then Central Florida Community College. He finished his associate's degree at nearby Pasco Hernando Community College, earned a bachelor's in business management and finance from the City University of New York-Brooklyn and was awarded a master's degree in education from Lesley University in Cambridge, Mass. Frank has managed both retail and servicesector businesses and is also a Certified Senior Professional in Human Resources, having served as HR manager for more than 300 employees. Along the way, he has taught business, leadership, and social and natural sciences in Latin America, the Caribbean and the United States, including Hawaii. For the past two years, Frank has been primarily involved in efforts to retrain and educate our Citrus County friends and neighbors affected by the economic downturn. More recently, he's focused much of his effort on developing relationships with local employers to provide information about the many useful business services Workforce Connection can provide at no cost. Such as? Think of Workforce Connection as your outsourced Human Resource Department available — I can't stress this enough ---at no cost to you. Frank and the Workforce team can provide assistance with recruiting, including posting job openings and identifying, testing and screening candidates. Additionally, Frank can help you with Employed Work Training (EWT) and On the Job Training (OJT) grants that can cover the cost of training new and existing employees to help your business grow and operate more efficiently.

"The economic challenges we face weren't created overnight and they're not going to be solved overnight," he said.

Obama met Thursday with the top eight leaders of Congress and has called them back for a rare weekend meeting on Sunday. He met privately Friday morning with the top House Democrat, Nancy Pelosi, amid Democratic concerns over proposals to cut spending for Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid as part of slowed to a near-standstill in June. Employers the budget deal.

Obama and congressional negotiators are looking at closing some tax loopholes and cutting popular social benefit programs as they struggle to reach an agreement between Republicans and Democrats, but Pelosi and many House Democrats oppose cutting the benefit programs. Pelosi was getting an opportunity to air her views as she met privately with Obama.

'We are not going to balance the budget on the backs of America's seniors," Pelosi said Thursday.

The endgame on the debt talks was approaching as the Labor Department reported hiring added the fewest jobs in nine months and the unemployment rate rose for the third month in a row, climbing to its highest point this year

That gave Republicans fresh ammunition to attack Obama's handling of the economy even as the shape of an agreement remained in doubt. All the while the nation is moving closer to an Aug. 2 deadline to raise the government's debt ceiling or face an unprecedented default on U.S. obligations that the administration warns could add a perilous new crisis on top of the already quavering economy.

TCG receives R2/RIOS certificate

Lecanto — Technology Conservation Group, Inc., an electronics recycling and asset management company headquartered in Lecanto announced today that it has earned the prestigious industry designation R2/RIOS Certified Electronics Recycler and achieved ISO 14001:2004 recertification in six of their processing facilities in the United States, Mexico and Europe, making it the first company to take an R2/RIOS certification international. TCG's certified facilities are in:

United States: Lecanto,

Fla; Louisville, Ky.; and Portland, Ore.

Mexico: Guadalajara and Monterrey.

 Europe: West Midlands, United Kingdom.

R2/RIOS is the combination of two stringent accredited standards: the Responsible Recycling Practices (R2) and the Recycling Industry Operating Standard (RIOS). The result is an exacting standard for responsible electronics reuse and recycling and recognition in the market via R2/RIOS certification as a Certified Electronics Recycler (www.certifiedelectron icsrecycler.org). Electronics recycling is a fast-growing industry that creates high-paying, green jobs and boosts the U.S. and global economies.

"We are extremely proud and excited to be a Certified Electronics Recycler in three different countries. TCG is a global company so it only made sense for us to include our Mexico and United Kingdom facilities," said Hamilton Rice, president of Technology Conservation Group. "Our goal is to provide our customers with the reassurance that we are processing their material in the most environmentally responsible manner possible, no exceptions. TCG is committed to all aspects of the R2/RIOS and ISO standards and hold ourselves accountable for the integrity of our internal processes that support those standards.

"TCG has the very significant distinction of being the first U.S. company to ensure excellence in its facilities abroad through the latest and most rigorous environmental health and safety and quality standards. TCG is very clearly committed to the highest standards at home and around the world," ISRI President Robin Wiener said. "With more and more global and country-based directives being issued to ensure that recyclers are using the very best standards, R2/RIOS is generating a great deal of interest and investment. Achieving R2/RIOS certification is a triple shot of quality, safety and environmental management in electronics recycling facilities."

Founded in 1996, Technology Conservation Group specializes in asset disposition and recycling of waste stream commodities generated through the manufacturing of electronics and electronic components. TCG serves an international customer base through its strategically located facilities.

of three options he laid on the table. It would require sizeable tax revenues, which many Republicans oppose, and spending reductions for entitlement programs, opposed by many Democrats. But the idea of a potentially historic deal was well received by the meeting participants, officials said later, even though the details remained in dispute.

Thursday's 90-After minute session, Obama said Democrats and Republicans should be prepared to show their bottom-line demands when they return to

The negotiating stakes are high. Without a deal on deficit reduction, Republican leaders say they don't have enough GOP votes to increase the nation's borrowing authority, raising the danger of the first ever U.S. default on its debts when the current $14.3 trillion debt ceiling is tapped out. 'Everybody acknowledged that we have to get this done before the hard deadline of Aug. 2 to make sure that America does not default for the first time on its obligations," Obama said. "And everybody acknowledged that there's going to be pain involved politically on all sides."

That leaves little time to agree on 10-year deficit reductions of $2 trillion to $4 trillion.

The major clash centers on how to reduce spending on major entitlement programs such as Medicare, Medicaid and Social Security, all prized by Democrats, and on tax changes that would close loopholes and end certain corporate breaks. Republicans insist that any tax changes be used to lower rates on corporations and individuals; Obama wants them also to generate more tax revenue. Increasing the debt ceiling through the end of 2012 a date favored by the White House — would require authorizing about $2.4 trillion in additional bor-

Thursday's meeting said Obama made it clear he wouldn't sign a budget and debt agreement that didn't extend the debt ceiling until after the November 2012 presidential election.

In the meeting, Obama told the leaders that they faced three options — a small deficit reduction plan, a medium plan that would reduce deficits by $2 trillion over 10 years or a big agreement that would shoot for up to $4 trillion in deficit reductions in the next decade. parties.

rowing. House Speaker Obama indicated he preferred the largest number.

In the meeting, Boehner and Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell of Kentucky backed Obama's bigger, more ambitious goal, said Democratic officials familiar with the talks. Their lieutenants, Senate GOP Whip Jon Kyl of Arizona and House Majority Leader Eric Cantor of Virginia. indicated they believed the medium-size option was more realistic. Both Cantor and Kyl had participated in talks led by Vice President Joe Biden that had already identified about $2 trillion in deficit reduction.

The negotiations are politically difficult for both

The big entitlement programs such as Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid have long been protected by Democrats in Congress.

Underscoring the political stakes, the Pew Research Center reported Thursday that in a recent poll it found that six out of 10 of those surveyed believe it is more important to maintain Social Security and Medicare benefits than to reduce the budget deficit.

Chamber Connection

Business Accelerator Project in full swing

The Citrus County Chamber of Commerce, Economic Development Council and Small Business Development Center in partnership with Workforce Connection, SCORE and the College of Central Florida are moving forward with plans for a business incubator site to be located in Homosassa.

A business incubator program will provide a physical location for early stage or start-up businesses in Citrus County that will create local jobs as they grow.

A program such as this can offer business owners an array of benefits.

Benefits include shared services, including amenities and mentoring/networking opportunities. Office space, to be in the former Chamber office on U.S. 19 in Homosassa, and the following services will be included in the monthly rent which will be offered initially at below market rates. Some examples of amenities and shared services:

■ Private office.

■ Convenient, visible location on U.S. 19, Homosassa.

■ PR/promotional package to announce your new location.

Professional business address and private mailbox.

■ Ample parking.

The goal of this program is that after a period of time the business will be ready to move out into its own location. When the business graduates from the program as determined by periodic reviews, the company must move elsewhere within Citrus County. In this way, the County will create a strong cycle of innovation and business creation. The end result is that the County will support healthy firms that create jobs and wealth, strengthen the economy and com-

Black economic gains reversed in Great Recession

JESSE WASHINGTON AP National Writer

BALTIMORE — Growing up black in the segregated 1960s, Deborah Goldring slept two to a bed, got evicted from apartment after apartment, and watched her stepfather climb utility poles to turn their disconnected lights back on. Yet Goldring pulled herself out of poverty and earned a middle-class life until the Great Recession.

First, Goldring's husband fell ill, and they drained savings to pay for nursing homes before he died. Then Goldring lost her executive assistant job in the Baltimore hospital where she had worked for 17 years. The cruelest blow was a letter from the bank, intending to foreclose on her home of almost three decades.

Millions of Americans endured similar financial calamities in the recession. But for Goldring and many others in the black community, where unemployment has risen since the end of the recession, job loss has knocked them out of the middle class and back into poverty. Some even see a historic reversal of hardwon economic gains that took black people decades to achieve.

Goldring remembers her mother taping the window shades to the wall so no one could see them stealing electricity. She remembers each time she sat on the curb with her three brothers, surrounded by her family's belongings, waiting for a new place to live. Sitting on those curbs, she promised to always pay her bills on time.

Now, after finding herself poor again, "the only word I can say is devastated," says Goldring, 58.

"For me to live that life we were so comfortable in. we never had to worry about finances, we always had money where I can help my kids and my grandchildren - to go to calling my daughter to borrow $100 because I can't pay a bill ..." Goldring's voice trails off as she struggles to hold back tears.

Economists say the Great Recession lasted from 2007 to 2009. In 2004, the median net worth of white households was $134,280, compared with $13,450 for black 1983. He had a steady job as data by the Economic Policy Institute. By 2009, the median net worth for white households had fallen 24 percent to $97,860: the median black net worth had fallen 83 percent to $2,170, according to the EPI. of the EPI's Program on remembers. Since the end of the recession, the overall unemployment rate has fallen from 9.4 to 9.1 percent, while the black unemployment rate has risen from 14.7 to 16.2 percent, according to the Department of Labor.

"I would say the recession is not over for black folks," Austin says. He believes more black people than ever before could fall out of the middle class, because the unemployment rate for college-educated blacks recently peaked and blacks are overrepresented in state and local government jobs that are being eliminated due to massive budget shortfalls.

Maya Wiley, director of the Center for Social Inclusion, says the anti-discrimination laws passed in the 1960s took decades to translate into an increase in black economic security and that was before the recession.

"History is going to say that the black middle class was decimated" over the past few years, Wiley says. "But we're not done writing history."

Goldring was born and raised in Baltimore, and her mother was single for much of Goldring's childhood. At 16, she dropped out of school and went to work cleaning hotel rooms.

'That's when I first met white people. Some of them would stay a month at the hotel. They would have all their children with them,' she remembers. "I thought, one day I'd like to hang out at a hotel.'

She didn't know any middle-class people in her allblack neighborhood. 'Where we lived, everyone struggled. We just struggled a little harder," she says. "If the lights stayed on for a whole year, if we didn't get put out, I thought we were doing really, really well."

At 21, pregnant with her second child, Goldring decided to get her GED. Then she went to community college, got a degree in secretarial work, and began a career.

She met her husband in brick two-bedroom home in recession's Morgan Park, a leafy, integrated neighborhood. With two incomes, money was not a problem. He liked to travel. She had never been out of Maryland. "I thought, 'Is this how was to where I ended up, it wealth the average white tion of the divorce, his was dead to me," Davis says, black daughter's name was added to the deed of the house. After Goldring's husband died in 2007. Goldring took out a 30-year fixed-rate mortgage, with a 6.5 percent interest rate, to purchase the house outright.

> Everything was fine until her hospital "restructured" in 2009. Her boss, a senior vice president, was transferred to the corporate office. Executives were now sharing secretaries. A few months later, they let Goldring go.

> No more family vacations. No more trips to the mall. No more filling the grocery cart.

> But what Goldring misses the most is her checkbook. Her unemployment payments arrive on a debit card.

"Just being able to pull out my checkbook and pay a bill, even though there might not be much left in there," she says. "I really miss that checkbook with my name on it."

This May, black male employment fell to the lowest level since the government. began keeping track in 1972. Only 56.1 percent of black men over age 20 were working, compared with 68.3 percent of white men.

Chris Wilder, a Philadelphia journalist, lost his job in 2008 as the media industry suffered huge losses. Unbenefits employment amounted to about onethird of his salary. Ever since they ran out, his income has been near zero. other than sporadic freelance work.

If not for a policy in his apartment co-op to assist people who lose their jobs, 'I might be living with my mother," he says.

College-educated blacks fared worse than their white counterparts in the recession. In 2007, unemployment for college-educated ticket out the streets. whites was 1.8 percent; for college-educated unemblacks.

He's not sitting on a concrete porch in an Asheville, N.C., housing project.

In the past few decades of the "War on Drugs," harsh sentencing laws have sent a disproportionate number of black people to prison, even though blacks are not more likely than whites to sell or use drugs, according to a 2008 report by the Sentencing Project. Today, about 280,000 African-Americans emerge from behind bars each year. They are often the last of the last to be hired.

After Davis got out, he spent months applying for dozens of jobs mopping floors or flipping burgers. He carried a letter from the a habitual felon, he could state offering a $2,500 tax credit for hiring ex-offenders. He got one call back, from a chicken restaurant. "We'll be in touch," Davis remembers them saying. They weren't.

"Nobody wants black felons in their businesses, says Davis, 26.

A 2003 University of Chicago study by Devah Pager sent young white and black "testers" to apply for real low-wage jobs. Some of the testers were randomly assigned felony convictions. The study found that whites with felonies were slightly more likely to get callbacks than black applicants without criminal records.

"The penalty of a criminal record is more disabling for black job seekers than whites," Pager and other researchers wrote in a followup study in 2009.

Davis says he learned skills in prison: "How to cook, clean, horticulture, ianitorial. I can do it. I've been trained. Tile, carpentry, mortar, edging and trimming, all that. I can operate a backhoe, a roller. Any opportunity to do something that would show my talents, I'd do it. It would be my

"I just need someone to foreclosure, give me that chance. A nice learned about a new Maryconstruction job, anything. I would hold onto that until I die.'

Some economists say the real black unemployment rate is as high as 25 or 30 percent, because government figures don't count "discouraged" workers who have stopped looking for jobs and dropped out of the labor force.

Davis now falls into that category - partly due to societal forces and partly, he knows, because of his own bad decisions.

Recently, police said they caught Davis with a halfounce of marijuana. His trial date is approaching. As get a 10-year sentence.

Black homeownership hit an all-time high in 2004, with 50 percent of African-Americans owning their homes, according to census data.

Today, the black homeownership rate is 45 percent, compared with 74 percent for whites. Nearly 8 percent of African-Americans who bought homes from 2005-2008 have lost them to foreclosure, compared with 4.5 percent of whites, according to an estimate by the Center for Responsible Lending remembers Goldring when she got the foreclosure notice from the bank, "I bawled."

Her son, Chris Fredericks, says she was "vulnerable, more than I have ever seen her, but she still kept moving.

He was incredulous that his mother was in such a position.

"At any point, you can slip back. It's just the way the economy is going," he says. 'Once you get into a spiral, there's no telling how far down you could go."

session on how to prevent report.

Goldring land program that offered help to people who were behind on their mortgages due to layoffs or medical bills.

She thought it was too good to be true. It wasn't.

The Emergency Mortgage Assistance program, financed by federal money, offered a zero-interest loan of up to $50,000.

The money would pay off up to a year of back mortgage payments, plus up to two years of regular payments. All Goldring had to do was pay 31 percent of her current gross income, or the full mortgage payment if she got a new job close to her original salary.

And so on a sweltering June day, Goldring stood before a podium in her freshly mulched back yard, flanked by a congressman, the mayor, the lieutenant governor, and other officials.

The sound of chirping birds filled the air. Cameras rolled as the dignitaries told Goldring's story, using her as an example to spread word of the Emergency Mortgage Program to other struggling homeowners.

"I want to thank you for your courage," said the lieutenant governor, Anthony Brown.

"I know you did everything right," Brown said. "You worked hard, you saved diligently, but challenges never overtaking our will sometimes overtake our wallets.'

Goldring stood in front of the microphone and exhaled.

"After this," she said, "the only good thing would be to be employed, once again.'

CITRUS COUNTY (FL) CHRONICLE

Misc. Notices Misc. Notices Misc. Notices 316-0710 SUCRN Citrus Springs Water Line Extensions 2011

PUBLIC NOTICE

PUBLIC NOTICE NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Board of County Commissioners of Citrus County, Florida, certifies that the final assessment roll for the Citrus Springs Water Line Exten-sions 2011 Special Assessment District has been examined and approved by the Board of County Commissioners. The Board of County Commissioners will hold the fi-nal public hearing for the purpose of hearing objections to such assessment roll on Tuesday, July 26, 2011, at 4:00 P.M., in the Board of County Commissioners' Meeting Room, Citrus County Courthouse, 110 North Apopka Avenue, Inverness, Florida. The assessment roll for the Citrus Springs Water Line Extensions 2011 Special Assessment District is available in the office of the Assessment Coordinator in the Citrus County Lecanto Government Building, 3600 W. Sovereign Path, Suite #205, Lecanto, Florida, beginning on the 11th day of July, 2011, and shall remain so available until the day for hearing objections to such assessment roll. for hearing objections to such assessment roll.

The nature of the improvements consisted of construction of a water system and water system improvements in the Citrus Springs Subdivisions more particularly de-scribed as the installation of water mains, valves, backflow preventers, water meters, and other miscellaneous appurtenances in order to connect to the County's water facilities and shall also include and embrace the installation of water mains, laterals, Individual water meters, and other facilities as may be necessary in order to provide for the health, safety and welfare of all residents in the Citrus Springs area. Said im-provements were constructed on all lands, streets, roads and property described in Exhibit "A". It is the intent of the Board of County Commissioners that the lots abutting the water system and water system improvements described above shall bear the entire cost of said improvements by payment of a special assessment levied against each property in the assessment area on the basis of assessment units.

At the public hearing the Board shall meet and receive objections of all interepersons to the assessments and accuracy of the amount thereof against any lot or parcel of land owned by such interested persons. At such hearing, or thereafter at a parcel of land owned by such interested persons. At such hearing, or thereafter at a definite time announced at such hearing, the Board shall equalize and either annul, sustain or modify in whole or in part the special assessment roll according to the spe-cial benefits which the Board determines each lot or parcel of land will receive as a result of such improvements. When the assessment roll becomes final by the confir-mation and approvial of the Board, the assessment roll and the Resolution confirming and approving the same shall be recorded in the Office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court. From the date of such recording the assessment shall constitute liens upon the properties assessed co-equal with the lien of general County and district taxes, including ad valorem taxes, and shall be superior in rank and priority to all other liens, titles and claims.

If a person decides to appeal any decision made by the Board of County Commissioners with respect to any matter considered at this public hearing, they will need to ensure that a verbatim record of the proceedings is made which record shall in-clude the testimony and evidence upon which the appeal is to be based.

Any person requiring reasonable accommodation at this meeting because of a disability or physical impairment should contact the County Administrator's Office, 111 West Main Street, Inverness, Florida 34450, (352) 341-6560, at least two days be-fore the meeting. If you are hearing or speech impaired, use the TTY Telephone (352) 341-6580.

Natural defenses help weeds resist eradication

o you ever wonder why some summer annual that can be controlled by weeds are easier than others to applying a pre-emergent herbicide in the early spring to stop the weed control? Weeds by nature have defense mechanisms that help them survive predators and weather extremes.

Some of the more difficult-tocontrol weeds have extremely thick and deep root systems, can produce large amounts of seed, can have seed that can remain viable up to 40 years, or produce thorns or stickers for protection. Many weeds are so hardy that they can out-compete desirable turf and ornamentals. Some of these defense mechanisms also, by chance, provide protection against many of the chemical controls that are applied to them. Take, for example, Southern Crabgrass. This summer annual weed has a hairy leaf blade (on both sides of the leaf) which adhere to. When liquid herbicide is applied, some of the liquid can roll off the leaf, not allowing it to get absorbed into the plant, reducing the effectiveness of the application. Fortunately, crabgrass is a collecting category, large consolehoused Telefunken radios are of very little interest. The small Bakelite Telefunken countertop radios are what collectors look for. Finding a buyer for your radio is not going to be easy, unless at an obviously affordable price. It would make a wonderful liquor cabinet after the radio has been removed. If you are determined to sell it, I think you will be lucky to get a couple of hundred dollars for it.

Dear John: Attached is a copy of a lithograph. The artist signature looks like JB or JR Ludbrook and the number is GP2728. It also has "Litho in USA" in the bottom right corner. What can you tell me about it? If I were to sell it, how much would it be worth? — S.G., Internet.

Dear S.G.: The picture you have depicting a landscape with cows at a riverbed was popular subject matter during the late 19th to early 20th century. I was not able to find any information about the artist Ludbrook or any records of sales. The info you found on the picture indicates it is a commercial grade print and not an original work by the artist. Potential dollar value is catch-as-catch-can.

Dear John: I listen to your show on Saturday at noon and read your articles. I am restoring a 55-year old house in Reddick, FL. The spring inside a mortise lockset on a pair of interior French doors has broken, so the lockset no longer works properly. I am trying to find a local business to either repair or sell me a replacement lock-set. I have not had good luck finding such a business via the Internet. After much searching, the thought came to my mind that perhaps you might be able to direct me in the right direction. The specs are as follows: Sargent model 5131, 1 1/2 inch backset. Thanks for any advice you might offer. — P.G., Internet

Dear P.G.: I am not aware of any local resource that could help you. Here are a couple suggestions that may be able to solve your needs: www.restorationhardware.com, www.vandykes.com, and www.renovatorssupply.com. I suspect one of these will solve your needs.

Dear John: I have some photographs I found several years ago in an old dresser I bought. I know it is of Reagan's swearing in. It was very cold that day and it was done in the Capitol or White House. I know there are copies out there, but can you date this for me, and just for fun, what value do you think it might have? Is it just something to hold onto as a story for the grandchildren? — Z.J., Inglis

Dear Z.J.: The photograph you have was produced in large quantities. In the Presidential memorabilia category, this photo is low on the totem pole of collector interest. It has very little dollar value, but is good for a story.

Beach decor doesn't have to be dull

KIM COOK For The Associated Press

f you've ever carted home some unfortunate monstrosity from a beach vacation and rued it, take heart. That's not the kind of beach décor we're talking about here.

This summer, retailers are offering décor that evokes the sand and surf, but with a sophistication that makes it work as a seasonal accent to most rooms no matter what your decorating style.

Wisteria has some lovely wall art: colonial nautical charts in sea blue with white type. Fantastic in a contemporary space, the historical ambiance of the pieces would work equally well in a more traditional room. An ivory linen pillow embellished with a spiny-finned fish in navy blue strikes a chic and exotic note. And a wood and metal tree for votive holders, crafted to look like a frond of coral, would provide interest on a summer dinner table. Get creative when hunting for something interesting and seasonal; often, you'll find it at a store you might not usually go to.

PBTeen has a host of quirky yet delightful items that evoke the theme: a tabletop angel fish fashioned from driftwood bits; wire art, including jaunty starfish hooks; a mountable shark's head whose toothy maw can be used as a receptacle for beach hats, dog leashes and so on.

Homes with a crawlspace foundation should be inspected twice a year for flooding or water entry or for decay. In most areas of the U.S., termite infestation also can be a major problem. A semiannual inspection by a pest-control company or a certified home inspector is a wise investment to ward off the possibilities of by always planting lettuce in soil wellenriched with compost. leaves. straw. manure or some other organic material. They all help soil to hold moisture. Also water regularly, which anyway makes lettuce taste better. Lettuce needs the equivalent of 1 inch of water a week.

Yes, you can also do something about the temperature. Just as you cool off by moving out of the sun, so can lettuce. The plants tolerate shade this time of year, so cobble together a temporary wooden or plastic frame for supporting cheesecloth, wooden lathe or some other material that offers about 25 percent shade. Or let your garden space do double duty, and grow lettuce in the dappled shade of cucumbers, squashes, gourds, tomatoes or pole beans trained up stakes or an inclined trellis.

Or plant lettuce near the cooler, eastern side of your house or garage. Frilly and red-leafed Lolla Rosa is one something about water and heat. Start of a few lettuce varieties pretty enough to decorate a flower or shrub bed: the dappled shade beneath the other plants will keep Lolla Rosa from bolting, for a while at least.

And speaking of varieties, genetics also plays a role in how fast plants bolt, so plant those that are slower to do so. Among the best for growing in sultry summer weather are Blackseeded Simpson, Buttercrunch, Kagran Summer, Salad Bowl, Red Salad Bowl, Oakleaf, Deertongue, Diamond Gem and Graquerelle du Midi.

generating system. I'm not talking about a portable-type generator that has to be set up for each use. Those can do the iob, but they use extension cords and need to be filled with gasoline. I'm talking about standby generators that operate with self-feeding natural or propane gas and that are permanently installed in your home's electrical system.

A standby generator operates automatically, so even if you're not home, the generator starts and the pumps can get the power they need. In the past, I've mentioned larger standby generating systems sized at 20 kw (kilowatts) for multicircuit homepower protection. But you may want to tell your professional generator contractor to power up just the sump pumps and maybe one key circuit. For this, an 8 kw standby generator may do the job. This can keep installation costs lower and make efficient use of your natural- or propane-gas supply.

Bottom line: Protect your property by providing your own personal pumping power.

Little brown bats dart across the evening sky feeding on a variety of moths and flying insects. Night hawks screech and Chuck-Wills-Widows reply. Barred owls call "Who cooks for you?" to remind me of dinner time.

On Wednesday, June 15, a friend and I were outside at dusk. We heard a truck come up the isolated country lane and the sound of another engine running. The small white truck sported a vellow county license plate. The pretty young driver turned off the poison spraver to talk to me. She wore no protective mask or clothing and was driving with the window open. I could taste the chemicals in the air. Fireflies were dropping dead as we spoke. Bats swooped in to snatch the easy prey.

She handed me a doorknob card from the Mosquito Control District. The card listed five tips to help eliminate breeding mosquitoes around houses: 1. Empty plastic wading pools Think making pizza dough is too time-consuming? The following tip shares a dough recipe and there's no rising required. This makes for a fantastic pizza dough that doesn't burn on the bottom, either.

No-rise pizza dough:

- 1 egg.
- 3 tablespoons sugar.
- 1 teaspoon salt.
- 2 tablespoons shortening.

■ 1 cup milk.

- 1 cup water.
- 2 packages dry yeast.

 $\blacksquare 4 \frac{1}{2}$ to 5 cups flour.

Beat egg, sugar and salt well. Heat shortening, milk and water to lukewarm, then add veast. Combine milk mixture with sugar mixture. Add flour until mixture is no longer sticky. Put on greased pizza pans. You have enough dough for two pizzas. - Tisha, Canada

Usually around the end of January, I will hit the woods and cover miles of ground in search of these precious bones. This is called "shed hunting." A shed is just a deer's antler that has fallen off. And shed hunting is just looking for and collecting them.

This is one of my favorite hobbies because not only does it cost no money, it gives me plenty of exercise. I also like hiking out in nature, so this just adds another component to that. resentative for the company's All I need is a pair of boots, some warm clothes and a pair of welltrained eyes. This is just the perfect runs $10, which is not badly priced. hobby for a nature freak like me.

I need to give a word of warning though: It's a pretty tough activity, especially if you've never done it before. There are a lot of little tricks you have to learn in order to find antlers consistently. You can't just walk around randomly and hope to find a lot. You need to find out where the deer have been wintering and which areas It's still stained. We've also used white would be good places for them to drop (for example, bedding, feeding and transition areas).

However, there is also a lot of plain old luck involved. Last year, for example, was a pretty bad year for me. I went out around 20 times (probably averaging five miles of walking each time) and I only found two old ones. But then three years ago I went out about the same number of times and found 17. So luck is a huge part of it.

Most trips I don't find antlers, but I have found up to three in a single trip, so you've just got to have patience. Even if I don't find any. I still enjoy being outside. But seeing those tines sticking out of the snow definitely makes it more enjoyable. -C.T. Ohio

Dear Sara: I'm looking for a way to dispose of self-stick address labels without gumming up my shredder. I saw a really simple way of doing it and made the mistake of thinking I would remember how. Guess what? I don't remember what to do. I hope you can help. — Karen J., e-mail

Dear Karen: Rub nail polish remover on the labels to remove them prior to shredding or add extra paper that you plan on shredding on both sides of the page that has an address label on it. Another option would be to tear off and save the paper that has the address labels and go somewhere that offers free paper-shredding events. Help! - Bobby F., North Carolina

Dear Bobby: Quilt chalk marks are a common problem. It seems they either don't mark well enough or they stain fabric. You've tried vinegar, which was my first suggestion to remove it. I would try blotting it with rubbing alcohol or hydrogen peroxide. Wash as usual, but don't use your dryer. If the stain persists, try Shout. I would continue to wash it and see if the stain diminishes with each wash. which it should. Visit www.freepatterns.com/content/content.html?content id609 for suggestions compiled from fellow quilters. After reading it, I think the backyard pressure wash with a hose sounds like a great suggestion.

Afterward let it dry outside in the sun (natural bleach). I also recommend the Web site's suggestion of marking another piece of fabric and doing tests on it to see what works best before attempting it on your actual baby quilt.

While one of TNT's female crime-busters is winding down, two others are revving back up.

On Monday, July 11, "The Closer" and "Rizzoli & Isles" both start new seasons, but at different ends of their respective runs. An Emmy winner last year for her title performance, Kyra Sedgwick is beginning her seventh and final season as police-case "Closer" Brenda Leigh Johnson, while Angie Harmon and Sasha Alexander are launching their second round as police detective Jane Rizzoli and medical examiner Maura Isles.

Many of the other "Closer" characters will continue in the TNT spinoff series "Major Crimes" next year, but Brenda is not going gently into that good night. She has to revisit her past, and in essence her entire arc on the show, when she's named in a civil suit against the Los Angeles Police Department. That makes her the focus of an internal investigation by Capt. Sharon Raydor, played again by Mary McDonnell (who will be a cast regular in "Major Crimes").

Sedgwick made the decision to leave "The Closer," and she reasons that even if the suit should end Brenda's career with the LAPD, "she feels she did the right thing, and I don't think many audience members will feel otherwise."

The outcome has been planned by "Closer" creator and executive producer James Duff for a long time, Sedgwick adds. "He said he knew from the time he wrote the first script how the story would end, even before he was sure he'd be able to end it the way he wanted to," she says. "And I think it's wonderful that he's getting to do it the right way."

So is Sedgwick, alias Mrs. Kevin Bacon, since she's pleased to give Brenda a completely fresh chapter as she makes her exit. "We're always looking for new obstacles for her," she confirms, "and this is a really great, big one. As the season goes on, the pressure just mounts and mounts until it becomes untenable. She loses it a few times, and that's really fun to play."

In the tradition of TNT dividing the seasons of many of its shows, "The Closer" will offer 10 new stories this summer and another five later in the year, then wrap up with six final episodes next summer that will lead directly into "Major Crimes." Knowing that her "Closer" co-stars still will have jobs after she leaves "eases my mind greatly," Sedgwick says. "For sure."

Kyra Sedgwick stars in "The Closer," which opens its seventh and final season Monday on TNT. COVER: Angie Harmon stars in "Rizzoli & Isles," which launches its second season Monday on TNT.

Being succeeded by "Dances With Wolves" alum McDonnell in the spinoff also makes Sedgwick content to depart. "She's a great actress, she's got a lot of power behind her, and she's a lovely person. The guys love her, and I feel good passing the mantle to someone who's gonna take good care of my boys." In the meantime, Sedgwick and McDonnell will share significant screen time as "The closer" closes. really driving the story lines. Second to that, obviously, is the crime

Harmon and Alexander surely will do the same as "Rizzoli & Isles" enters its sophomore season, which picks up after Rizzoli was shot during a crisis at her Boston police precinct. She gets a medal and something else: the returns of both an ex-beau (Chris Vance) and her newly paroled older brother (Colin Egglesfield). Maura also sees the reappearance of a family member, her adoptive mother (veteran actress Jacqueline Bisset, whose guest run starts Aug. 1).

"There's such a voraciousness to Jane, I think she's just more comfy about it now," Harmon says of the tough-minded Rizzoli. "Before, it was like she didn't know how much strength she really had or who she really was. After something like (the shooting), you pretty much draw your line in the sand on what you're going to take and not going to take. As an actor, it's such fun to have a heroic moment like that and have people come running up to you in airports and say, 'Are you alive?""

Alexander says year two of "Rizzoli & Isles" starts out strong. "I feel the writing has taken an interesting direction, really using the core characters," she says. "There's a lot of stuff happening between them, and that's what's really driving the story lines. Second to that, obviously, is the crime they're working on that week. It doesn't fall into any of those 'procedural traps,' as I call them, where we as actors feel like we have to go to the same place every week."

Also lined up for a "Rizzoli & Isles" guest stint is Bill O'Reilly, a Harmon friend and — of course the host of Fox News Channel's "The O'Reilly Factor." Harmon reports, "He's been in to visit before, and I've been on his show, and my husband (former New York Giants cornerback Jason Sehorn) has, too. I love talking to him politically, just picking his brain on what he thinks and who he likes."

O'Reilly's turn comes toward the end of the "Rizzoli & Isles" season, but Alexander already has had her experience playing daughter to Bisset. "I was really excited to not only meet her, but to work with her," says Alexander ...who is the daughter-in-law of another international movie star, Sophia Loren.

"(Bisset) is such a beautiful woman, and she is so much Maura's mother. She plays the character sophisticated, cultured, mannered and very worldly. I love that (executive producer) Janet Tamaro writes about the relationships we have with our families and how they affect our lives."
