NEWS BRIEF

Casey Anthony's car scrapped

ORLANDO — The white Pontiac Sunfire that prosecutors used as evidence in the case against Casey Anthony has been destroyed.

WOFL in Orlando reported George Anthony brought his daughter's car to a junkyard and turned the title over on Thursday.

The vehicle was crushed for scrap metal.

Prosecutors claimed there was evidence of human decomposition found in the trunk of the car. Attorneys for Casey Anthony disputed that claim.

Casey Anthony was acquitted last month of a murder charge in the 2008 death of her 2-year-old daughter, Caylee. She was released from jail soon after.

Beverly Hills Recreation Association transferring property deed to county

Taylor Provost
Special to the Chronicle

BEVERLY HILLS — The Beverly Hills Recreation Association plans to transfer its deed to the county after 30 in existence, placing its fate in the hands of the Board of County Commissioners, who will meet next month to decide the facility's future.

About 200 Recreation Association members turned out Friday afternoon to show support for what members have dubbed "The biggest activity bargain in Citrus County."

County officials and Beverly Hills residents, a few of them nonmembers, met to have "an open and honest discussion" about some options for the facility, which has been plagued with financial strain and declining membership in recent years.

County Commissioner Joe Meek,

County Administrator Brad Thorpe and Community Service Director Cathy Pearson took turns presenting to the public its plans to not only keep the facility afloat, but also revitalize it.

Facing financial insolvency at the beginning of the year, the BHRA's Board of Directors minimized costs and adjusted rate structures in an attempt to make the association less financially reliant.

The facility and its property are contractually bound to be received by the county when it becomes insolvent, which is expected to occur in mid-September. This makes the situation unique to other struggling community centers in the area, like the Hernando Civic Center, which closed March 3 for similar reasons.

"I've not seen anything like this before," Thorpe said. "The advantage is we cut costs off the bat on insurance and accounting fees because that comes under the umbrella of the county."

Because the BHRA is currently privately owned, the county cannot legally expend funds to keep it open, County Attorney Richard Wesch explained. To make it legal, the association's board agreed to deed the property to the county and have it be run primarily by the

'It's happening!'

DAVE SIGLER/Chronicle

Diane Toto's face was filled with joy as she surveyed what has been completed on the distribution warehouse and the We Care Food Pantry in Homosassa. The walls are up and the roof joists will be hung Monday, making the warehouse one step closer to completion. The pantry walls will be raised next, and the construction project will be nearly completed. More donations will be needed to get the facility up and serving the community.

Food warehouse for the poor under construction in Homosassa

MIKE WRIGHT
Staff Writer

— HOMOSSASSA
It may look like two concrete slabs and some steel braces, but it's near heaven in Diane Toto's eyes.

Thanks to donations of money, equipment and manpower from the community, the We Care Food Pantry and Feed Citrus County warehouses are under construction on Cardinal Street.

When complete and operating, the warehouses will store donated food that will be sold at 18 cents a pound to 51 area charities for distribution to the poor.

Toto, president of the We Care Food Pantry in Homosassa, is overjoyed at the progress in just one week for the $1.2 million project.

"What do you think?" she asked a visitor: "It's happening!"

Each building will be 7,200 square feet. One will house food for distribution to charities by Feed Citrus County. The other is a warehouse for We Care Food Pantry, which feeds the poor in Homosassa.

The slabs are insulated to keep large freezers in the buildings cold to store food, Toto said.

"We're trying to do this right," Toto said. "We want to do it one time."

Toto said area businesses have donated time and equipment, or provided it at a significantly reduced rate, to help with the construction project.

"They realize this is a concept that could solve a problem," Toto said. "We have to start taking care of ourselves. We have to salvage what we possibly can."

The food will come from a variety of sources, Toto said, from farmers to stores. "Wherever we can find it," she said.

It will be sold to charities for 18 cents a pound.

The shell of the distribution warehouse sits in the background while the slab for the Food Pantry and completed truck loading bay waits to be put into action.

HOW TO HELP

■ An online auction is being held for the food pantry warehouse project. The auction will be broadcast live from noon to 5 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 10, on WYKE-TV, Channel 16. To bid on items, go to the website natlauctions.com.

■ Donations are being sought for the construction project and getting the food bank warehouse up and running. To help, call We Care Food Pantry office at (352) 628-0445 or mail donations to We Care Food Pantry, P.O. Box 331, Homosassa, FL 34487.

"It'll be a lot less than what they're paying now," Toto said. "Donations are down across the board."

John Marmish, president of United Way of Citrus County and chairman of the Feed Citrus County board, said the warehouse project is a huge undertaking to help the poor and homeless.

"This is a major effort, one central storage place for all the food that agencies or churches or groups that feed the hungry will be able to come to and get some food," he said. "It's significant. A lot of these groups don't have large storage areas. This will be centrally stored and available to the groups."

Toto said the buildings should be complete in October, but she is still about $375,000 away from having the warehouse up and running. We Care Food Pantry is accepting donations and an online auction is raising money as well.

And, as large a project as the warehouse is, Toto doesn't plan to stop there. She said she has talked with Citrus County officials about converting the old canning plant to allow commercial canning of food for distribution to the poor. And Toto has had discussions with the Agricultural Alliance to receive food grown on farms that would otherwise be thrown away.

"This is such an exciting thing," Toto said. "We're hoping this will be the hub for food."

Kitchen: Port plan lacks details

MIKE WRIGHT
Staff Writer

INVERNESS — Ron Kitchen wanted answers. He wanted details. He sought the big picture.

Brad Thorpe's response: I don't know yet.

The topic was Port Citrus and the venue was Thursday night's Citrus County Transportation Planning Organization board meeting.

Thorpe, the county administrator and port director of the newly created port authority, gave the TPO its first formal briefing on the Port Citrus project that still is in its infancy.

Kitchen, the TPO vice chairman who is a Crystal River councilman, had complained since February that commissioners were moving forward on the port idea without any input or involvement from the TPO.

Citrus officially became Florida's 15th port though legislation adopted this year. By doing so, the county joins a statewide ports economic council and is applying for membership to the Florida Ports Council, a nonprofit group that offers technical advice to the ports.

"It's a very exclusive club," Thorpe said.

He said the Cross Florida Barge Canal is ripe for a port of some kind. He said the project would bring hundreds of jobs to the county and would spur other economic development.

Thorpe said the key is a feasibility study that, according to the new law, must be completed by July 2014. He said he expects the port authority, comprised solely of county commissioners, to seek consultants in January to conduct the study.

He said the county is responsible for half the cost and the state will pick up the other half on a reimbursement arrangement.

Kitchen asked for the estimated cost of the study. Thorpe said he didn't have one.

Gov's rulemaking rule was against the rules, court rules

MICHAEL PELTIER
The News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE — Florida Gov. Rick Scott this week found his policies on the receiving end of numerous challenges as the governor calls for less government, privatization and less red tape wound their way through the courts.

Meanwhile, the governor's quest to bring 700,000 jobs to the state was made both easier and more difficult depending on which economic data you choose to hang your hat on. While unemployment remained uncomfortably high, brisker home sales, slow but steadily increasing state revenue collections and government-backed efforts show the state's economic engine is at least engaged.

BUSY WEEK IN THE COURTS

It was a hectic week in legal circles. The Florida Supreme Court early this week ruled that Scott overstepped his legal bounds when he put a hold on proposed agency rules until they could be reviewed by the governor's office.

Scott, who in his first act as governor suspended agencies' ability to make rules, immediately called the 5-2 opinion nonsensical, while attorneys for a blind woman who sued over the new requirement said the ruling would help preserve the ability of Florida residents to participate in the process by which new regulations that affect them are put into place.

The state's highest court said agency rules are largely an extension of legislation, which makes Scott's action a separation of powers issue.

Chief Justice Charles Canady and Justice Ricky Polston, disagreed with the majority, saying the Constitution gives the governor "supreme executive power."

"If supreme executive power means anything, it must mean that the governor can supervise and control the policy-making choices — within the range of choices permitted by law — of the subordinate executive branch officers who serve at his pleasure," Canady wrote in dissent.

Scott faces another challenge next month for his attempts to privatize a hefty chunk of Florida's prison system. A Tallahassee circuit judge, Jackie Fulford, this week scheduled a hearing for September on a motion for summary judgment in the Florida Police Benevolent Association's lawsuit challenging a plan to privatize several state prisons.

The PBA is challenging a Scott-backed move to privatize prisons in South Florida, an effort backers say will save millions.

Critics including Sen. Mike Fasano, R-New Port Richey, are skeptical of such savings, and got information this week that might make them right. Internal documents show the prison system is worried about a $25 million price tag related to corrections officers losing their jobs and payments for things like untaken vacation or sick time. Scott told reporters this week that if the savings don't materialize, the privatization won't be done, simple as that.

Meanwhile, a Florida appeals court ruled agencies must take into account collective bargaining agreements when they look to trim employee health costs. The Second District Court of Appeal this week ruled the Polk County school district couldn't bypass collective bargaining in imposing insurance changes.

JOBLESS RATE HIGH, BUT STEADY

Florida's 10.7 percent unemployment rate for July was unchanged from an upwardly revised June figure. The legion of jobless remains just shy of 1 million as the state claws its way back to economic prosperity.

On Friday, the Agency for Workforce Innovation reported the number of jobs created since Jan. 1 had shrunk from previous estimates, a drop that negatively affects Scott's promise to add 700,000 jobs to the state's economy in the next seven years.

The drop of 21,200 immediately became fodder for politicians. Democrats quickly put out a statement questioning what happened to all those jobs, jobs, jobs.

State employment officials, meanwhile, cautioned the unemployment rate, which represented a 0.1 percentage point uptick from preliminary June figures, was not unexpected as the state crawls its way back from the biggest economic downturn since the 1930s.

"You need to look at the long-term trends," said AWI Chief Economist Rebecca Rust. "There will be fluctuations month to month."

Tourism-related employment continues to make steady headway while construction jobs remain well below historic levels.

A number of the job losses were in the government sector, something that also continued this month.

Though their number didn't show up in the July figures, 134 workers were laid off from the South Florida Water Management District in the last week, saving the district $9 million in salaries.

Included in the group are 20 scientists with an average of 15 years of service. They join 19 scientists who took a buyout in June and several others who found jobs at different agencies or institutions before the layoffs.

Unlike construction and water management sectors, the lobbying business appears alive and well. We learned this week from new disclosure filings that despite the state's economic woes, legislative lobbyists earned as much as $52 million for the quarter ending June 30, up from the $49.3 million spent on lobbyists that same time last year.

Lobbying firms Gray Robinson; Ron Book; Smith & Ballard and Southern Strategy Group earned the most, with each reporting income of greater than $1 million for the quarter.

Speaking of jobs, Associated Industries of Florida this week named insurance lobbyist Cecil Pearce the business group's interim managing director. Pearce replaces the talkative and provocative Barney Bishop, who is stepping down as president at the end of the year.

ECONOMIC NEWS

Despite jobless rates that have remained higher than national averages since 2008, signs of economic rebirth were there this week if you looked. Favorable interest rates and ample inventory helped boost home sales in July by 12 percent compared to a year ago, with some markets seeing much higher increases.

The statewide average belied much heftier increases in some markets. Sales jumped 47 percent in Miami and 57 percent in Tallahassee as buyers appeared to be taking advantage of lower prices in those markets, where median prices fell 8 percent and 10 percent respectively. Statewide, prices held relatively stable, falling 1 percent year to year, from $137,700 to $136,500.

Doing its part, the state began a $291 million road project in Jacksonville to be financed by the Florida Turnpike Enterprise and repaid by tolls. The First Coast Outer Beltway project will be one of the first of a series of new projects aimed at jump-starting infrastructure construction while the economy is slumping, taking advantage of low costs for the work, and — the Scott administration hopes — helping to lower the state's unemployment rate.

The project is a harbinger of things to come as the state weans itself off fuel taxes to pay for roads. State transportation officials expect to lose $5 billion by the end of the decade in gas tax revenue that traditionally pays for roads, bridges and other infrastructure that connects Floridians.

The Florida Transportation Commission found out Tuesday the effects of improved gas mileage will have an even more immediate impact, reducing 2011 revenue by $24 million and reaching $500 million a year by 2015.

Florida's recovery efforts will also get some help from

One Florida police agency's trash is another department's treasure.

The Charlotte County Sheriff's Office said that it is the latest agency to donate retired police cruisers to the north Florida city of Trenton and its three-person police department.

Jim Raven, the new police chief there, put the word out that his Gilchrist County hamlet of about 1,800 residents didn't have the money to replace police cars, so a handful of other agencies around the state stepped up with their castoffs.

A Charlotte County sheriff's spokesman said Thursday Trenton got two recently retired 2005 Ford Crown Victoria cruisers from the agency. County jail inmates even cleaned them up first.

"It's better than Christmas," said Raven.

State loses 22,100 jobs, most to gov't cuts

Local unemployment shows slight gain

Special to the Chronicle

TALLAHASSEE — Florida lost 22,100 jobs in July, more than half due to state and local government cutbacks.

Officials on Friday also announced Florida's July unemployment rate was 10.7 percent. That's unchanged from a revised figure for June. The original June rate was 10.6 percent.

Florida's job loss figure was the second highest nationally behind Illinois. Florida, though, still has a net gain of 64,300 jobs for the year.

Florida's rate also remained significantly higher than the 9.1 percent national jobless figure for July.

The U.S. Labor Department on Thursday, though, had good news for the state.

It reported Florida last week had the biggest drop in applications for unemployment benefits of any state.

They were down by 2,580 due to fewer layoffs in agriculture, manufacturing, construction, services and retail.

The July unemployment rate in Citrus, Levy and Marion counties was 12.4 percent, up just one-tenth of a percentage point since June but down 1.2 percent over the year, according to Workforce Connection, a member of the Employ Florida network of workforce services and resources.

Out of a regional labor force of 209,341 there were 25,947 out of work compared with 28,711 unemployed in July 2010.

"The movements in Citrus County appear to be reflective of both a growth in labor force and an expansion of employment that tend to show gains in jobs exceeding growth in labor force," said Rusty Skinner, CEO of Workforce.

Marion County continues to hold the highest unemployment rate in the region at 12.8 percent, up 0.2 percent since June but down from 13.9 in July 2010.

Levy County posted greatest increase in its unemployment rate, rising from 11.1 to 11.6 percent while Citrus County's rate dropped from 11.8 to 11.7 percent.

In addition to unemployment rates, here is how the counties fared in July:

Citrus County's labor force grew by 486 to 58,585, the number of employed rose by 458 to 51,722 while those without jobs increased by just 28 to 6,863.

Levy County's labor force increased by 30 to 17,417 while those with jobs fell by 44 to 15,405 and unemployment rose by 74 to 2,012.

Marion County's labor force expanded by 318 to 133,339, the number of those employed rose by 40 to 116,267 while those without jobs rose by 278 to 17,072.

CRYSTAL RIVER — When the Life Pirates LLC met Thursday night, it was a meeting with a purpose.

The fraternal group, dedicated to promoting businesses, decided to make it a "Support Our Troops" night. It donated 80 pounds of unused cell-phones to Barbara Mills, founder of Operation Welcome Home, for returning soldiers and an autographed flag that once flew in Afghanistan to the local National Guard Armory.

"We wanted to do something for the troops," Capt. Jimmy Brown, one of nine plank owners of the group, said. "We wouldn't have a country if we didn't have veterans."

The informal evening was a chance for veterans, Life Pirate plank members and the community to get together in camaraderie, share some food and drinks — and do it all for a good cause.

Patricia and Dennis Flanagan, an Inverness couple who lost their only son, Sgt. Dennis Flanagan, on January 2006 in Iraq, were also on hand to support the cause. Patricia Flanagan spoke passionately about how important is to let soldiers know they are appreciated for what they are giving up for our freedoms.

"They sacrifice so much," she said. "They give up their families, sleep, holidays and so much more, all the things we Americans have."

Sgt. Rick Morales was there to accept the flag for the Armory.

"We are honored to accept this," he said after the passing of the flag.

Barbara Mills was thrilled with the used cellphones. She said she turns the phones over to a national group who in turn gives her AT&T calling cards, which will go directly to our soldiers on the frontlines.

Scott orders investigation into deletion of emails

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Rick Scott on Friday ordered an investigation into the deletion of emails written by the governor and some members of his transition team in a possible violation of law.

The emails were written before Scott took office in January but after he was elected. They were lost when the private company handling email for Scott's transition office shut down the accounts.

Christopher Kise, a Tallahassee attorney who worked on Scott's transition team, said that many of the emails — including those written by Scott and senior staff — have been recovered by obtaining them from personal email accounts. But he acknowledged that there is no way to know for sure if all emails have been found.

"I would say we recovered 99 percent of them, virtually everyone," Kise said. "Can I say we have 100 percent? No."

Scott sent a letter to the Florida Department of Law Enforcement requesting that authorities "thoroughly investigate" why the email accounts were closed and whether or not any of the emails can be recovered.

Barbara Petersen, president of the First Amendment Foundation, said that by admitting that a record was destroyed

Many of the emails — including those written by Scott and senior staff — have been recovered.

"they are basically admitting to a violation of the law."

"This is an unintentional violation, but it's a violation nonetheless," Petersen said.

The deletion of the emails was first reported by the St. Petersburg Times on Friday.

Scott stopped using email once he became governor. But while he was running for the office — and during the transition — he could be seen using his iPad to check the messages. Emails that are available from the transition period show that the governor regularly asked questions on everything from his upcoming schedule to what kind person he should hire as chief-of-staff and to ask whether his stationery had been ordered.

The Scott administration has had clashes with the news media for months over public records as requests have taken weeks or even months to fill. Scott, in an interview with the Associated Press on Friday, said "you give people as much information as you can" and promised that any public record request not handed over in 60 days should be done without any charge to news organizations. The AP and other organizations still haven't gotten some public records that were requested during the spring.

Kise said he discovered back in April that the company hired to run email accounts under the "scotttransition.com" Web address had shut down all but three of those accounts shortly after Scott was inaugurated. He asked the company involved, Rackspace U.S. Inc., to recover the emails but they told Kise in April that there was no "data left" on those mailboxes.

The back-and-forth with the company prompted Kise to seek copies of emails from the personal accounts of those worked on the transition team.

But it's not clear if all the emails have been recovered. Susie Wiles, who had been Scott's campaign manager and was a legislative liaison during the transition, said she used the transition email address along with her personal account. She said she was planning on trying to see if the transition emails were still on her computer.

"I'm going to do my best to see if they are recoverable," Wiles said.

A 22-year-old man from Ocala is facing four felony sex charges relating to a 15-year-old Beverly Hills resident.

Steven Leonel Paz is charged with knowingly promoting sexual performance by a minor; knowingly and unlawfully having in his possession five images of child pornography; unlawfully having sexual intercourse with a now 16-year-old victim while the victim was asleep; and having unlawful sexual activity with a 15-year-old.

According to his arrest report, between October 2010 and July 2011, Paz on more than 20 occasions had sexual intercourse with the 15-year-old victim. All of the alleged sexual activity happened in Beverly Hills.

Then on July 5, while the victim was asleep, Paz reportedly began having sex with the victim who later woke up and fought him off. He also allegedly took lewd and lascivious pictures of the victim and stored a picture in his Gmail account online.

According to witnesses, Paz and the alleged victim met in bible study class in September 2010 and reportedly told the victim that God had come to him during prayer and told him the victim was to be his wife and must submit to him in every way.

After his arrest, Paz reportedly admitted to all the charges leveled against him and did not know why he did what he is accused of doing.

Because the defendant is a native of Bolivia and has indicated the possibility of leaving the country after he was confronted by the alleged victim's mother, Paz was denied bail as a flight risk.

Parks and Recreation Division, if county commissioners vote to keep the facility open. An informal vote by members of the association at the meeting found them to be in near-unanimous agreement with the board's decision.

"We see the important role this association plays in the community," said Meek. "We don't need another closed-down building, or a center that is not vibrant and functional."

While many of the members worried about how such a big change would affect their individual concerns, like pool hours and leisure courses, Pearson insisted the county would do its best to keep everything as is, including honoring already scheduled events, such as weddings.

"We are ready and we will be here for you," Pearson said. "This is a community and we want the community involved."

Some members had come to the meeting expecting to hear the worst, and were excited about the opportunities the county's leadership would provide.

"I expected them to say they wouldn't take anything," said member Susan Edwards. "We think this is a good thing and we will be there on Sept. 13. I hope a lot of people will be there."

BHRA President Ann Panasik said she believed the county takeover was the only choice, and she is confident the commission will be accepting of Meek's proposal.

"What this means to (members) is more programs and more things to do," Panasik said. "But also, this is a big property value for people here. If it closed up, it would be bad for the city and bad for the county, and property values would go down."

Panasik said the transition of Beverly Hills from a city populated primarily by older people into a community of families has hit the association hardest financially, and she hopes the county would provide programs for children as well as adults to entice membership.

Meek understood that the idea of a once-privately owned association being funded by the county could be a tough sell to the rest of the commission amid budget cuts and tremendous downsizing within the county, but stressed that a business plan, including a membership fee structure, was in place to ensure the facility was self-sustaining and not a drain on the public fund.

He encouraged all members to attend the county commission meeting, set for 4:30 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 13, at the Inverness Courthouse, to persuade at least two other commissioners to vote to keep the facility up and running.

"The bottom line is (the county gets) the property either way. I see it as a real opportunity for us as a partnership to make this a successful, self-sufficient operation," Meek said. "We are revitalizing this portion of Beverly Hills and this isn't going to add to the budget. I think it's a win-win."

ELSEWHERE

Raoul Ruiz, 70 FILMMAKER

PARIS — Raoul Ruiz, a French-Chilean filmmaker who directed John Malkovich in a role as Austrian artist Gustav Klimt and worked to put cinema on an artistic par with literature, has died. He was 70.

Ruiz died Friday at Saint-Antoine hospital in Paris following complications from a pulmonary infection, said Francois Margolin, a producer of several of the dozens of films by the director.

Ruiz directed Malkovich as the famed Austrian art nouveau painter in "Klimt," from 2006, as well as European film stars including French actresses Laetitia Casta and Catherine Deneuve.

Ruiz fled to France from his native Chile in 1973 after military strongman Augusto Pinochet seized power in a coup.

French President Nicolas Sarkozy expressed sadness at his passing and described him as a man of "immense erudition and infinite curiosity" and a "worthy son of the Enlightenment."

Edie Wasserman, 95 PHILANTHROPIST WIDOW

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Edie Wasserman, the philanthropist widow of Hollywood studio mogul Lew Wasserman, has died in Los Angeles at 95.

Casey Wasserman tells the Los Angeles Times that his grandmother died of natural causes Thursday in Beverly Hills.

During their heyday in the 1960s, 1970s and 1980s, Lew and Edie Wasserman were long known as the "king and queen of Hollywood."

Lew Wasserman, a former talent agent who represented then-actor Ronald Reagan, was the longtime chief executive of MCA and president of Universal Studios.

Their generosity helped fund the Los Angeles Music Center, CalArts and the Motion Picture and Television Fund.

Boomers paying to fight age

Creates growing industry

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Baby boomers heading into what used to be called retirement age are providing a 70 million-member strong market for legions of companies, entrepreneurs and cosmetic surgeons eager to capitalize on their "forever young" mindset, whether it's through wrinkle creams, face-lifts or workout regimens.

It adds up to potential bonanza. The market research firm Global Industry Analysts projects that a boomer-fueled consumer base, "seeking to keep the dreaded signs of aging at bay," will push the U.S. market for anti-aging products from about $80 billion now to more than $114 billion by 2015.

The boomers, who grew up in a culture glamorizing youth, face an array of choices as to whether and how to be a part of that market.

Anti-aging enthusiasts contend that lifespans can be prolonged through interventions such as hormone replacement therapy and dietary supplements.

Critics, including much of the medical establishment, say many anti-aging interventions are ineffective or harmful.

From mainstream organizations such as the National Institute on Aging, the general advice is to be a skeptical consumer on guard for possible scams involving purported anti-aging products.

"Our culture places great value on staying young, but aging is normal," the institute says. "Despite claims about pills or treatments that lead to endless youth, no treatments have been proven to slow or reverse the aging process."

Its advice for aging well is basic: Eat a healthy diet, exercise regularly, don't smoke.

"If someone is promising you today that you can slow, stop or reverse aging, they're likely trying hard to separate you from your money," said S. Jay Olshansky, a professor at the University of Illinois-Chicago's School of Public Health who has written extensively about aging.

Dr. Robert Goldman, one of the co-founders of the American Academy of Anti-Aging Medicine, is photographed Aug. 9 in his trophy room in Chicago with hardware from 20 Guinness World Records for strength and endurance. "People should be healthy and strong well into 100 to 120 years of age," Goldman says in a biographical video. "That's what's really exciting — to live in a time period when the impossible is truly possible."

"It's always the same message: 'Aging is your fault and we've got the cure,'" Olshansky said. "Invest in yourself, in the simple things we know work. Get a good pair of running or walking shoes and a health club membership, and eat more fruits and vegetables."

But such advice hasn't curtailed the demand for anti-aging products, including many with hefty price tags that aren't covered by health insurance.

These include cosmetic surgery procedures at $10,000 or more, human growth hormone treatment at $15,000 per year and a skin-care product called Peau Magnifique that costs $1,500 for a 28-day supply.

Another challenge for consumers is that many dietary supplements and cosmetics, unlike prescription drugs and over-the-counter medicines, aren't required to undergo government testing or review before they are marketed.

The Food and Drug Administration and the Federal Trade Commission do crack down at times on egregiously false anti-aging claims, but generally there's little protection for people who don't get hoped-for results.

Mary Engle, director of the FTC's division of advertising practices, said her agency focuses on the cases that could cause serious harm, such as bogus cancer treatments that might prompt an ill person to forgo proper care.

She said the agency lacks the resources to crack down comprehensively on ads with exaggerated claims that exploit customers' hopes for better looks or more energy.

"Often it doesn't rise to the level of fraud," she said. "There are so many problematic ads out there and we really have to pick and choose what we focus on."

In contrast to the caution of mainstream organizations, there are many vocal promoters of anti-aging products and procedures, including the American Academy of Anti-Aging Medicine.

It hosts annual conferences in the U.S. and abroad, and claims 22,000 members, mostly physicians.

In its mission statement, the academy says the disabilities associated with normal aging "are caused by physiological dysfunction which in many cases are amenable to medical treatment, such that the human life span can be increased."

One of the academy's co-founders is Robert Goldman, a doctor of osteopathic medicine. He contends that much of the resistance to the anti-aging movement comes from sectors of the health and pharmaceutical industries that feel threatened financially — for example by the surging use of over-the-counter nutritional supplements.

"It all has to do with who's controlling the dollars," he said.

Though many anti-aging interventions are expensive, Goldman said people on tight budgets still can take useful steps such as drinking purified water, taking vitamins and using sun screen.

"People should be healthy and strong well into 100 to 120 years of age," Goldman says in a biographical video. "That's what's really exciting — to live in a time period when the impossible is truly possible."

Olshansky, who over the years has been among Goldman's harshest critics, believes there will be scientific breakthroughs eventually, perhaps based on studies of the genes of long-lived people, that will help slow the rate of aging.

In the meantime, Olshansky says, "I understand the need for personal freedom, the freedom to make bad decisions."

South Americans heading to Florida

Census shows group more than doubled

Associated Press

DORAL, Fla. (AP) — Colombians, Venezuelans and Peruvians more than doubled their numbers in Florida over the last decade, making South Americans the state's third-largest Hispanic group, according to the latest 2010 census numbers.

Cubans remain the largest group of Hispanics, followed by Puerto Ricans, but South Americans as a group now outnumber Mexicans.

The data released Thursday shows the Colombian community jumped from about 136,000 in 2000 to more than 300,000. Meanwhile, Venezuelans rose from 40,000 to more than 100,000, with roughly 85 percent of all Venezuelans in the U.S. living in Florida. Peruvians similarly increased to more than 100,000.

"With Colombians, much of that is what we call vegetative growth," said Florida International University political science professor Eduardo Gamarra, who specializes in Latin American studies.

"By this we mean basically people who've come and had children and have brought relatives."

The Venezuelan growth, he attributed to more recent arrivals who have come following the rise of Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez in 1999, who has centralized political and economic control.

In terms of the Peruvian immigration, the motives are less obvious, but a 2010 report by the nonprofit group Transparency International showed they were second only to Venezuelans among South Americans most likely to view their government as increasingly corrupt.

South American influence throughout South Florida and in the Tampa and Orlando areas is hard to miss.

The upscale Broward County neighborhood of Weston has acquired the nickname of "Westonzuela," a nod to the large number of immigrants from Caracas who make the city their home.

Meanwhile, in Central Florida, the population remains small, but nearly every South American group now has its own chamber of commerce, and Colombians have become a recognizable presence particularly in and around Orlando.

Among Central Americans, the Guatemalan community saw the largest growth with reaching roughly 84,000, almost tripling.

Hondurans also have more than doubled their numbers.

The numbers in Florida follow the national growth trends among all Hispanics, said Mark Lopez of the nonprofit Pew Hispanic Center.

But he also noted that changes in the 2010 Census questions may have contributed to a greater response among South and Central Americans, who are concentrated in Florida.

Previously, individuals could mark whether they were Cuban, Mexican, Puerto Rican or of some other Hispanic origin.

Individuals could then write in their specific country, but many did not.

To encourage people to write in their family's nationality of origin, the 2010 Census added a few examples next to the other Hispanic origin box.

"We think that may have led to more specific country responses," Lopez said.

While Hispanic births outpaced immigration in most of the nation, this was likely not the case among South Americans in Florida, many of whom have come in recent years in response to the political and economic upheavals in their home countries.

THINGS CHANGE

Process on bay restrictions still not right

It is easy to get lost in the details of the debate over changing the boating rules on King's Bay in Crystal River.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is proposing a change in rules to abolish the summer sport zone on King's Bay in an effort to protect the manatee.

Many locals have expressed upset about the proposal for a number of reasons — including the fact that the public input process appears to be backward when

THE ISSUE:

Feedback on the speed zone in King's Bay.

OUR OPINION:

Be sincere about accepting input.

tee. But in developing a new set of rules in 2011 to 2012, it's not fair to cherry pick one report from the Waterfront Advisory Board in 2007 to say that's what they were reacting to.

If it was that easy to get our federal government moving on a problem, just imagine all the problems that would have been solved by now.

The input from the 2011 Crystal River City Council is pretty clear. Council members unanimously don't like the year-round, slow-speed restrictions and they have serious problems with the process used by our federal government.

If the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service wants to be sincere in measuring local input, it will digest the feedback — both negative and positive — from the recent public hearings and use it to modify the plan on the table.

There is a chance for the federal government to show it is really listening to its citizens. We will wait and see what happens after the deadline for feedback comes on Aug. 22.

Back to work

I respectfully ask that every senator and every representative return to Washington immediately. Take the first order of business — an immediate pay reduction of 10 percent on all your salaries. Secondly, institute a medical plan that you'll be required to pay into. Let's use the figure of $6,300 a year. This will be your responsibility to pay into the new health care system. Trust me, by you taking these two small steps, you will gain an immediate attention of all American citizens. Then let's face the nation and ask for serious cuts in tax increases. I challenge you. We challenge you.

Debt's origin

(The Chronicle published an article called "The grand bargain," about the deal President Obama and Speaker of the House John Boehner made about the deficit. And they said the grand bargain would be to save $4 trillion, but in reality, they're only going to save $2.1 trillion. But it could be saved by cutting military spending, which the War Resisters League estimates consumes 48 percent of our federal funds. The government's adding in trust funds, Social Security, which shouldn't be there. So they're making it sound like they only spend 22 percent on the military, where if you count past military veterans' benefits, the War Resisters League estimates 80 percent of our national debt came from military spending — a lot of it past military spending. And they got some of that from federal outlays for 2009, 2010. Basically what I'm saying is, too much money's being spent on the military and funds have been raided from trust funds, which isn't supposed to be used.

Watch and beware

Neighbors, watch and beware. We live off Flair in Lecanto. Someone came and stole our easy-pull trailer from our back yard. Just wanted to warn people to watch out. Report anyone who has items that may be stolen, and be a nosy friend or neighbor. Call the sheriff's office and ask them to check out anything suspicious. It could be your things that they steal next. If you stole or borrowed our trailer, please bring it back. Leave it alongside the road, as we really need it.

Blessings upon you

I would like to say thank you to the person who turned in my wallet at the Inverness Post Office. God bless you. It is so good to know there are kind and honest people like yourself. May you have a happy day. Thank you once again.

Saturday service

In regards to today's editorial suggesting the USPS close on Saturdays because of fiscal losses: Many people who work and drive a distance cannot make it to the post office during its operational hours. Saturday is their only opportunity. There are packages to be mailed, certified and registered letters to be mailed and also to be picked up and signed for. I also suggest the Chronicle do a study on first-class postage rates in New York, Mexico, South America and Asia.

Running out of money

All the essentials are going up — food, medication, clothing, utilities. If they don't do something pretty soon and help us out, we that are on Social Security, we will all have to go on welfare. There's at least six of us in my neighborhood that's going to have to go on welfare if they don't do something.

Girls, aspire to the sciences

It's already back-to-school time for many kids. As they again stuff their hefty backpacks, here's what won't be in enough of them: science, technology, engineering and math books. Girls, especially, will not be weighted down by those texts, and that's a problem for those girls and for the country.

To compete in the world economy and preserve the lifestyle Americans expect, the nation needs innovative and scientifically savvy workers. And if girls want their paychecks to come close to those of the boys in their classrooms, they need to study those so-called STEM subjects.

Early this month, the Commerce Department issued a report showing that women who work in fields such as computer science and engineering have more employment security and higher incomes — 33 percent higher — than women in other jobs. In STEM jobs, the gender pay gap shrinks markedly; women make almost as much as men do. But, even though a majority of college graduates are women and they're almost half of the workforce, women hold only about a quarter of the positions in these lucrative fields. That number has stayed steady over the last 10 years, even as educated women have marched into the workplace in greater numbers.

It's not just that women aren't in the jobs — they aren't taking the courses that lead to the jobs. According to the Commerce Department: "Women hold a disproportionately low share of STEM undergraduate degrees, particularly in engineering." That helps explain why this country is facing a critical shortage of engineering graduates, especially when compared to the numbers that universities in China and India are turning out.

"This education disparity," Intel CEO Paul Otellini recently wrote, "threatens to slow our economic recovery, stunts our long-term competitiveness and leaves technology firms in a skills crisis."

Intel is working with other corporations and the Obama administration to try to boost the number of teachers in STEM fields. Upward of a quarter of a million more will be needed by 2015 in secondary schools alone, and they need to be teachers who can find ways to engage girls. Too often girls, who enjoy science and math in elementary school in equal numbers to boys, are turned off in middle school and have checked out by high school, where five times as many boys as girls say they want to major in engineering.

Some extracurricular organizations are trying to fill in where the schools fail. The Girl Scouts, for example, don't just train cookie entrepreneurs. The scouts also participate in scientific fun, from Lego Leagues to programs sponsored by Lockheed Martin and NASA aimed at inspiring girls to study STEM subjects.

That's something astronaut and physicist Sally Ride has also been trying to do through her camps for kids and science academies for teachers. Ride is fighting what she says is the message sent by society: "Girls think science and engineering are not for them, and, of course, we know that's not the case."

Cokie and Steven Roberts
OTHER VOICES

Sally Ride is the product of the nation's last great scientific push: the space program. It took the Cold War and the 1957 Soviet Sputnik launch to energize action then. The next year, Congress ponied up a billion dollars — a whole lot of money in 1958 — for science and math teaching at all levels of education. And when TV cameras started showing men in cool space suits rocketing into orbit, kids signed up for science courses.

It took a while for women to horn in on the act. More than 20 years elapsed between Alan Shepard blasting into space as the first American and Sally Ride stepping into the shuttle as the first U.S. woman to soar above us. But women occupy a different place in America today. Not only are more than half our college graduates female, close to two-thirds of our graduate students are women.

We can't prosper as a country if those students have heard "science and engineering are not for them." And if you question whether they still hear that message in the 21st century, you just have to remember that Larry Summers, when he was president of Harvard, glibly declared in 2005 that "issues of intrinsic aptitude" separated men and women in the hard sciences.

If Intel and other technology companies want more American engineers, they're going to have to tackle that blatant bias. It harms not only the women who are missing out on the higher pay and greater job security they would find in scientific and technological fields. It also harms America.

LETTERS to the Editor

Salute vets' service

Regarding Mr. Anthony Costa's July 27 letter in the Chronicle concerning an unfortunate incident with a business during his son's military leave from Operation Enduring Freedom:

It is sad to know some Americans still refuse to acknowledge the sacrifices, patriotism and bravery of our men and women in uniform. When they return from a combat tour we should ensure their commitment to our freedom is suitably recognized and honored. Mr. Costa, as a local resident and veteran, I offer my personal apology to your son over this incident.

At Operation Welcome Home, a nonprofit Citrus County volunteer program, we are dedicated to welcoming and honoring every military person returning to our area from a completed Operation Iraqi Freedom or Operation Enduring Freedom tour of duty with a patriotic ceremony, dinner and basket filled with gift certificates from local businesses. I hope Mr. Costa will contact Barbara Mills at (352) 422-6236 when his son returns from Afghanistan at tour completion. He can be assured we will be proud to honor another hero of Citrus County.

Vote Mulligan

Kudos to Gerry Mulligan for the column "Meet your kind dictator" in the Aug. 7 Commentary section. You have stated my wishes exactly and I will gladly support your nomination for president of the United States.

I would take you a little further: Disband the IRS entirely. Think of all the money saved by abolishing that department and its printing! Then turn the tax deadbeats over to a collection agency, thereby creating more jobs. There are so many obvious ways to save money, too many to mention here. Of course, this would be as a result of the "fair tax."

Kudos again.

the feds. The state will get nearly $100 million in federal money for small business loans.

Meanwhile, BP Oil has, as of this week, paid Florida individuals and businesses more than $2 billion in payouts. But federal officials overseeing the payouts said the going may get tougher for some with more stringent requirements for future payments under the $20 billion program.

All is not rosy on the business front. Florida businesses could see an 8.9 percent increase in workers-compensation insurance rates next year, as costs slowly creep up after several years of massive declines.

The National Council on Compensation Insurance, an organization that files workers-compensation rate requests for the industry, submitted the proposed increase Thursday to state regulators.

Businesses were hit with an overall hike of 7.8 percent last year, after enjoying years of rate cuts that stemmed from lawmakers overhauling the system in 2003.

POLITICS

Lawmakers redrawing Florida's political boundaries took their caravan south this week as they took testimony from interested parties from Stuart to Key West. Given the range of testimony, it will be no easy task.

At a Wednesday hearing in downtown Miami, lawmakers got a checklist of sorts, from Cubans and other Latinos to Haitian immigrants to African Americans. Even the gay community called for a seat or two — though the chairman of the Senate committee charged with drawing maps said he doesn't even know how that would be achieved.

Several candidates in the U.S. Senate GOP primary are preparing to debate this weekend in a debate co-sponsored by the Florida Family Policy Council and The Central Florida Tea Party Coalition. Confirmed candidates are Adam Hasner, George LeMieux, Mike McCallister and Craig Miller.

PORT

Kitchen said he couldn't understand why county officials hadn't contacted other ports to determine the costs of their studies.

He said the public is wary of the project because of the lack of details coming from county officials.

"I'm just telling you what I've heard," Kitchen said. "There's a tremendous amount of resistance to this whole concept."

Kitchen challenged Thorpe's position that Port Citrus would bring hundreds of jobs. Thorpe said he based that on discussions with other port directors. But when Kitchen pressed him to name specific ports that he had contact with, Thorpe couldn't name one.

"I have a hard time knowing where these numbers and statistics are coming from," Kitchen said. "The debate on this has been very limited. I like to see things quantified."

John Siefert, executive director of the Economic Development Council and a non-voting member of the TPO, said he knows of several Citrus County businesses that import and export products and now use shipping in Tampa or Jacksonville.

"Business entities I converse with are very supportive of a port in Citrus County," Siefert said.

Inverness Councilwoman Marti Conseugra wondered if the port would require road projects, diverting money from projects in Citrus County that area already planned.

"We'll need to improve the roads all along there," she said.

Commissioner Rebecca Bays said the feasibility study will address all issues.

"Most of your questions," she said, "will be answered once we have the feasibility study in hand."

Chronicle reporter Mike Wright can be reached at (352) 563-3228 or mwright@chronicleonline.com.

The field is also set for the election to replace former Sen. Tony Hill, D-Jacksonville, who quit the Legislature to work for Jacksonville Mayor Alvin Brown. The overwhelmingly Democratic Senate District 1 takes in parts of Duval, Flagler, Putnam, St. Johns and Volusia counties.

Four candidates qualified to be on the ballot: Audrey Gibson and Terry Fields, who are both former state representatives; and Ramon Day and Leandrew Mills III. The primary is Sept. 20.

Former House Speaker Ray Sansom this week filed an ethics complaint against state attorney Willie Meggs who prosecuted Sansom on corruption charges that were eventually dropped, but only after Sansom lost his job as speaker and had to leave the Legislature.

The complaint alleges illegal and unethical behavior by Meggs in pursuing the case by manipulating a grand jury and illegally releasing testimony to the public. Sansom agreed to pay $300,000 to the state after being accused of misappropriating state money in the budget.

MAKING PROGRESS?

Progress Energy Florida brought its case to state regulators this week as the utility asked to pass along about $140 million in nuclear costs to customers: Attorneys for consumers and business and environmental groups repeatedly tried to cast doubt on the company's hopes for meeting 2021 and 2022 target dates for the project.

The Florida Public Service Commission is expected to decide Oct. 24 whether to grant Progress' request, along with a $196 million nuclear-cost request by Florida Power & Light.

MOVE OVER,

DORA THE EXPLORER Pre-kindergarten programs should test their students more extensively, argues David Lawrence, the head of the Early Childhood Initiative Foundation. Lawrence said this wouldn't be a "baby FCAT," but instead a loose assessment of a child's social, emotional and cognitive skills in order to determine progress.

Next week, the State Board of Education will take up a draft legislative budget request for next year that asks for $4.6 million to begin offering voluntary pre-kindergarten assessments at a cost of $25 per student.

■ STORY OF THE

WEEK: Gov. Rick Scott's effort to vet all pending rule-making in a central office is wiped out by a state Supreme Court majority that said the governor doesn't have the power to meddle in rulemaking in such a way, because that's a legislative function.

■ QUOTE OF THE WEEK: "The complaint went undo what Mr. Meggs did to me. What I do hope it does is prevent Mr. Meggs from doing this to another innocent family," Former House Speaker Ray Sansom regarding his ethics complaint filed against State Attorney Willie Meggs.

We're Approved!

HPH Hospice received approval from the Agency for Healthcare Administration to build a Hospice Care Center.

The Agency for Healthcare Administration (AHCA) recently approved HPH Hospice's application to build a licensed Hospice Care Center for the residents of Citrus County. We are prepared to begin applying for permits just as soon as the final decision is rendered. The final decision is granted once the appeal phase of the process has passed and AHCA receives no appeals from neighboring hospice programs.

Between the land purchase, building and outfitting of the facility, HPH Hospice will have invested about $5 million in our community and will begin a new era in the care of people at life's end.

We want to thank the many, many people in Citrus County who wrote letters of support for our application. We received letters from private citizens, families of our former patients, government officials, and members of the business and medical community. You truly made a difference in bringing additional end-of-life care to your friends and neighbors.

Woman to plead guilty smuggling

SAN DIEGO — Felicitas Gurrola defies the image of today's typical Mexican smuggler. At 84, she directed a female-dominated ring that led 80 people a month to the Los Angeles area — and she managed to hang on to a family-run smuggling business for more than 40 years when most mom-and-pop rings were driven out by increasingly violent men who lead illegal immigrants on perilous routes.

The octogenarian has agreed to plead guilty Friday to charges that she led a ring of smugglers who guided migrants to the United States illegally with imposter documents.

Runaway cow evades authorities

BERLIN — A runaway cow named Yvonne is on the loose in Germany and the manhunt — or moohunt — for the Bavarian bovine has captivated the country.

The cow ran away from a farm in Bavaria in May and has managed to hide successfully in the forests of southern Germany ever since — despite her sturdy 1,500-pound figure.

Locals have reported a few sightings of the brown dairy cow with the white head, but every time search teams have tried to capture her, Yvonne had already hoofed it from the area. A helicopter equipped with a thermal camera used in search-and-rescue missions returned Thursday empty-handed.

Searchers have tried to lure Yvonne into the open with food, with the bellows of her son Friesi and her sister Waltraud.

The 6-year-old animal made headlines after a near-collision with a police car days after she broke away. The rural district office in Muehldorf reacted by labeling her a public danger and ordering her shot on sight.

Syria killings continue

Associated Press

BEIRUT — Syrian security forces killed at least 20 protesters Friday despite promises by President Bashar Assad that the military operations against the 5-month-old uprising are over.

The killings, which came as thousands poured into the streets across Syria, suggest the autocratic leader is either unwilling to stop the violence — or not fully in control of his own regime.

Assad, who inherited power from his father in 2000, is facing the most serious international isolation of his rule. On Thursday, the United States and its European allies demanded he step down.

Military operations have subsided in the past few days, following a fresh crackdown on major flash-point cities that started at the beginning of the month to root out anti-government protesters.

But persistent gunfire and shootings, along with Friday's killings, underscore the difficulty of any kind of diplomatic pressure achieving results in the absence of any appetite for military intervention.

Human rights groups said Assad's forces have killed nearly 2,000 people since the uprising erupted in mid-March. A U.N. team recommended Thursday that the violence in Syria be referred to the International Criminal Court over possible crimes against humanity.

"Bye, bye Bashar, see you in The Hague!" protesters shouted Friday in the central city of Homs as crowds filled the streets, spurred on by the international condemnation.

ICC prosecutor Luis Moreno-Ocampo said he has received reports of atrocities in Syria but has no jurisdiction "at this stage" to open an investigation because Damascus does not recognize the court.

He said he could begin investigating at the request of the U.N. Security Council. Syria's U.N. ambassador said a U.N. humanitarian assessment team will arrive in Damascus on Saturday.

Recession to blame for U.S. debt

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — It's the loud and clear consensus of Republicans in Congress and on the presidential campaign trail: Runaway government spending is the problem, not taxes.

But the math isn't so simple.

The number at the heart of the battle cry of the Republicans and their tea party allies — that federal spending has risen to an alarming 25 percent of the economy — is skewed by recession dynamics.

In recessions, federal spending always goes up and tax revenues go down. And the economy contracts in recessions, shrinking the gross domestic product, which is the total output of goods and services and the broadest measure of the economy's health.

Republicans are calling for sweeping spending cuts and want to hold the line on taxes, even as the U.S. struggles through one of its slowest recoveries since the Great Depression. The jobless rate has been stuck for months at more than 9 percent. With the economy slowing again, the odds of a new recession seem to be increasing.

While spending's share of the GDP might be at a post-World War II high, tax revenues have fallen to 14.4 percent of the index, the lowest since 1950.

This disparity between what comes in and what goes out plays into the Republican argument about runaway spending.

But it also reflects the mathematical reality that during recessions, tax revenues go down sharply because people and companies make less money and so pay less in taxes. Federal spending goes up, even before stimulus programs, with an increasing demand for government help from food stamps and unemployment compensation and other safety-net programs.

At the same time, the negative economic growth associated with recessions lowers the GDP number on the bottom of the equation, further boosting the ratio of spending to GDP.

Since 1970, federal spending has averaged just over 21 percent of GDP while tax revenues have averaged over 19 percent.

The last time since World War II that federal spending exceeded 23 percent of GDP was in 1982 and 1983, when it rose to 23.1 percent and 23.5 percent, respectively, during what was then called the worst recession since the Great Depression. A Republican, Ronald Reagan, was president, and he was hardly anyone's idea of a tax-and-spend liberal.

Federal spending is even higher now as a percentage of GDP, but not by much — just between 1 and 2 percentage points. That reflects the fact that the most recent recession was far deeper than the 1981-82 downturn, which lasted 16 months.

Much of the present large gap between tax revenues and federal spending comes not from political decisions but from what happens to a nation's finances during any deep recession, economists suggest.

But you wouldn't know it from some of the recent campaign rhetoric. The Republican candidates all want to shrink government's role by slashing spending and taxes, and repealing or suspending regulations.

Taliban storm British compound

Eight killed in eight-hour Afghanistan firefight

Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan — Taliban suicide bombers stormed a British compound in an upscale Kabul neighborhood shortly after dawn Friday, killing eight people during an eight-hour firefight as two English language teachers and their bodyguard hid in a locked panic room.

The assault came on the 92nd anniversary of Afghanistan's independence from Britain, and the Taliban described it as a warning to outsiders in the nearly decade-long war. The insurgents also hope to show that they remain a potent force despite taking heavy casualties from last year's buildup of U.S. and NATO troops.

Still, the attack ended up killing mostly Afghans — five policemen and a municipal worker. The two other victims were a security guard of unknown nationality and a New Zealand special forces soldier who was shot in the chest as he tried to free hostages, according to New Zealand defense chief Lt. Gen. Rhys Jones.

The soldier was the first member of the New Zealand Special Air Service, which mentors Afghan security forces, to be killed in this country.

Sixteen others were wounded in the attack on the British Council, an international charity that gives leadership training and does other work toward a post-conflict Afghanistan.

The two language teachers — a Briton and a South African — were still sleeping at about 6 a.m. when a suicide bomber detonated explosives packed in a car outside the compound. The blast breached a wall, and another attacker rushed into the compound and blew himself up.

The two female teachers and their male British bodyguard dashed to a safe room, where they stayed as militants and security forces fought for more than eight hours with rocket-propelled grenades, explosives, machine guns and rifles.

All three were safely rescued from the site, which was littered with debris from the initial twin explosions that shattered windows a third of a mile away.

"Clearly, they are deeply shocked. They were inside the compound for a very long period of time," Martin Davidson, chief executive of the British Council, said in London.

The violence comes as Afghan forces have started to assume responsibility for security, a gradual process leading to the end of the foreign combat mission in 2014.

Afghan President Hamid Karzai, attending an independence ceremony at the presidential palace during the siege, said strikes on specific targets show that the insurgents are weak and cannot stand and fight the Afghan national security forces.

The U.S.-led coalition said Afghan troops led the assault on the insurgents at the British compound with NATO troops providing assistance.

More than 200 Afghan policemen flooded the scene of the attack. NATO helicopters circled overhead. In the early hours of the fight, a reporter for The Associated Press heard an Afghan intelligence officer call for more ammunition. "Bring more grenades!" he yelled into a radio.

At midday, coalition forces used canisters of red smoke to mark a landing zone in the middle of a city road where two rescue helicopters picked up the dead and wounded. The fighting continued for three more hours. Afghan security forces said at least three insurgents fought from a secure bunker inside the compound.

At about 3 p.m., the AP reporter heard two powerful blasts. Part of the building turned to flames and black smoke rose from the site. The battle was over as the last of the estimated five militants involved in the attack were killed.

Texting, grand theft auto style; alarms pose risk

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Texting and driving don't go well together — though not in the way you might think.

Computer hackers can force some cars to unlock their doors and start their engines without a key by sending specially crafted messages to a car's anti-theft system. They can also snoop at where you've been by tapping the car's GPS system.

That is possible because car alarms, GPS systems and other devices are increasingly connected to cellular telephone networks and thus can receive commands through text messaging.

That capability allows owners to change settings on devices remotely, but it also gives hackers a way in.

Researchers from iSEC Partners recently demonstrated such an attack on a Subaru Outback equipped with a vulnerable alarm system, which wasn't identified. With a laptop perched on the hood, they sent the Subaru's alarm system commands to unlock the doors and start the engine.

Their findings show that text messaging is no longer limited to short notes telling friends you're running late or asking if they're free for dinner.

Texts are a powerful means of attack because the devices that receive them generally cannot refuse texts and the commands encoded in them. Users can't block texts; only operators of the phone networks can.

These devices are assigned phone numbers just like fax machines. So if you can find the secret phone number attached to a particular device, you can throw it off by sending your own commands through text messaging.

Although these numbers are only supposed to be known by the devices' operators, they aren't impossible to find. Certain network-administration programs allow technicians to probe networks to see what kinds of devices are on them. Based on the format of the responses, the type and even model of the device can be deduced. Hackers can use that information to craft attacks against devices they know are vulnerable.

Actually stealing a car wouldn't be so easy.

You'd have to ensure that the phone number you found is attached to the car you're standing in front of, for instance. There are hacking tools to do that — they listen for cellular traffic around a particular vehicle — but in many cases it's easier to take a car that doesn't have an alarm.

LHS standout Dixon will attend SJR, play baseball

SEAN ARNOLD
Sports Correspondent

Smart in the classroom. Smart on the diamond. Those attributes serve 2011 Lecanto High graduate Jake Dixon well as he enters St. Johns River State College and joins its baseball program as a walk-on.

Dixon batted .316 as the Panthers' starting shortstop in his senior season, and is considered a well-rounded, intelligent and driven player by coaches.

But lest anyone mutter clichés about intangibles to describe the shortstop, it's important to note Dixon's abilities are plenty evidential and measurable.

After all, he led his team in runs (24) and stolen bases (10) last season, and serendipitously drew the attention of a SJR State scout while playing a formidable Hernando club.

"The St. Johns coach was looking at one of the players on Hernando, and he noticed me and just liked the way I played I guess," Dixon said. "He talked to me after the game and wanted me to try out, so I was sort of lucky."

Dixon said the scout told him he thought the senior had a good awareness and feel for the game and suggested he could play everywhere on the field.

Lecanto Coach David Logue already knew that about his shortstop.

"Jake Dixon has a good baseball IQ and he can play anywhere on the field," Logue said in an email. "He is very eager to learn and will work as hard as anyone to be great."

"He has the ability to be a starter at the next level, and in a year or two I fully expect him to be," Logue added.

Dixon generously acknowledges the influence of family and coaches on his development.

"My mom, dad, and sister all helped me out a lot,"

Dixon said. "Coach Larry Swain, Coach Rob Cummings, Coach Logue, and, during my freshman year, Coach Jim Manos, as well as all my assistant coaches, have all been big for me."

Support from family also makes the relative proximity of SJR State, located in Palatka, to Dixon's home an important benefit.

"I wanted to stay close to home so family can watch, and so I can visit," he said. "The location definitely went into my decision."

In the classroom, Dixon is ambitious but open-minded. He expresses interest in pursuing a career in law enforcement, but also plans to study business.

"I want to be a cop, but I'm taking business classes so I don't close off any opportunities."

Dixon is happy to employ his versatility on the field as well.

"I'm ready to play anywhere," he said. "I'd like to play shortstop, but anywhere that can get me some playing time I'm prepared to do."

Gainey stretches lead at Wyndham

Associated Press

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Tommy Gainey is struggling with his tee shots. He's having a tough time with his irons. He's fighting a nagging wrist injury.

And he's got one of the best two-round scores in Wyndham Championship history.

Gainey shot a 65 on Friday to move to 12-under 128 and take a three-stroke lead after two rounds of the final event before the start of golf's postseason.

Gainey, who shared the first-round lead with Jeff Quinney, had six birdies and has the second-best 36-hole score in the history of the tournament.

Ernie Els (66), Webb Simpson (65), Stuart Appleby (67) and Daniel Summerhays (65) were at 131. Jim Furyk (67), Alexandre Rocha (66), Paul Casey (67) and Retief Goosen (65) were four strokes back at 132.

After recording five birdies and an eagle a day earlier during his career-best-tying 63, Gainey said he was "going to light it up" against the fresh greens he would face Friday morning.

It didn't happen quite like that,

Biffle wins Michigan's Sprint pole

Associated Press

BROOKLYN, Mich. — Greg Biffle is still annoyed with Boris Said after their run-in at Watkins Glen.

That hasn't stopped him from focusing on this weekend's Sprint Cup race in Michigan.

Biffle won his first pole in over three years Friday at Michigan International Speedway, posting a qualifying lap of 190.345 mph in his No. 16 Ford.

It was an important step in the right direction after he finished 31st at Watkins Glen on Monday, then confronted Said in the pits afterward and gave him a couple of quick hits while Said was still in his car.

Said had touched off a wild crash at the end of the road race.

"Our deal is over with," Biffle said. "We had our differences on the race track, that one instance, I told him I wasn't happy with it on the race track and then I didn't go around him the rest of the day. We talked about that on the phone and it is over."

Said is racing in Montreal this weekend, so he wasn't anywhere near Biffle during Sprint Cup qualifying.

"We've settled our differences," Said explained. "I won't be going to Christmas dinner with him, that's for sure."

Biffle is 13th in the points standings but without a win this year.

Miami, Washington lead way on night full of NFL action

Associated Press

MIAMI — Cam Newton threw a Hail Mary pass that fell incomplete on the final play of the first half Friday night, and that's the closest he came to reaching the end zone.

The top pick of the NFL draft was shut out in his first exhibition-game start, and Newton's Carolina Panthers lost to the Miami Dolphins 20-10.

Newton played the entire first half, when the Panthers managed only three first downs, had the ball for less than eight minutes and fell behind 17-0. Newton went 7 for 14 for 66 yards, and he ran four times for 18 yards.

Carolina crossed midfield for the first time when Newton ran for 7 yards on the next-to-last play of the half.

Reggie Bush, another former Heisman Trophy winner, played for the first time since joining the Dolphins and totaled 81 yards from scrimmage in three series. He ran eight times for 48 yards, including a 17-yard burst up the middle, and caught two passes for 33 yards.

Miami's Chad Henne played the entire first half and led the Dolphins to 17 points in five possessions, including 10 points in two series against Panthers reserves. Henne went 15 for 24 for 194 yards, and he had a 17-yard scramble.

The Dolphins went 1-7 at home last season, and Henne was booed during a recent scrimmage on the same field. Spectators had little to complain about in the opening half, however, as they watched the Dolphins outgain the Panthers 301-90.

Charlotte did sit out six starters, including four on offense. But a sputtering offense was nothing new for the Panthers, who ranked last in the NFL in points and yards in 2010, when a 2-14 record gave them the chance to take Newton in the draft.

The crowd was likely the smallest he has played before since his days at Blinn College. Announced attendance was 54,157, but the actual turnout was about 30,000.

Charlotte quarterback Jimmy Clausen, who started last week, entered the game to begin the second half and went 9 for 15 for 69 yards. The Panthers scored their touchdown in the fourth quarter after Miami backup quarterback

Nadal, Federer lose in Cincy

Associated Press

MASON, Ohio — A weary Rafael Nadal and an off-target Roger Federer got knocked out of the quarterfinals of the Western & Southern Open on Friday. No. 1 Novak Djokovic had to scuffle to avoid an upset, too.

Playing a day after he spent five hours on court, Nadal faded in a 6-3, 6-4 loss to American Mardy Fish, who had never beaten the second-ranked Spaniard.

Later, the third-seeded Federer struggled with his groundstrokes during a 6-2, 7-6 (3) loss to a sore-shouldered Tomas Berdych, who has won three of their last four matchups. Djokovic survived a match of long rallies and electifying shots, beating Gael Monfils 3-6, 6-4, 6-3.

Mardy Fish defeated Rafael Nadal.

In the wide-open women's bracket, second-seeded Vera Zvonareva, No. 4 Maria Sharapova and No. 9 Andrea Petkovic advanced in straight sets. Jelena Jankovic moved into the semifinals when Peng Shuai withdrew with a sore left hip.

The men's bracket finally got its first big upsets.

A worn-out Nadal simply couldn't keep up. Fish reached the tournament's semifinals for the second straight year — he lost to Federer in the championship match in 2010.

"It was a great opportunity for me, catching him in a place where he maybe was not as confident as in his previous matches or tournaments," said Fish, who counted it among his top five career wins.

Nadal's tired legs and burned fingertips had something to do with it.

A day earlier, the 25-year-old Spaniard needed three tiebreakers and 3 hours, 38

Bucs humbled in blowout loss to Patriots

Associated Press

TAMPA — The Tampa Bay Buccaneers have been on both ends of preseason routs, but don't expect them to take any positives out of a blowout loss to the New England Patriots.

"Usually it's easier to teach 'em after a big loss because you can whup them and do whatever you want to do to them and everyone is accepting of it," coach Raheem Morris said Friday, one day after his team was dominated by New England in a 31-14 thumping.

"But for us, whether it's been a big win or a big loss ... it's been the same general approach every time I talk to the team. I don't think it really applies to our football team."

After a 25-0 rout in Kansas City in their preseason opener, the Bucs were humbled by the Patriots, who took a 28-0 lead on their first five possessions.

"We got outplayed physically up front," Morris said, "and then really, it was a different approach to the game in how we played and they played."

Morris wanted to evaluate his young players "without any scheme or anything of that nature," and the early pace set by the Patriots was a big problem for the Bucs.

"We felt like we didn't come out with the same intensity as last week, the same intensity that they had," quarterback Josh Freeman said. "They came out and they took it serious ... you can see that with the intensity they had on the field. It is something for us to take and learn from."

Rookie linebacker Mason Foster might have learned a lesson from an unnecessary roughness call that kick-started the Patriots' second touchdown drive. Foster separated Chad Ochocinco from the football with a perfectly timed hit, but was penalized either for "launching" himself at the receiver or for hitting him in a defenseless position.

"There's going to be questionable (calls) like that all year," Morris said. "The human element is definitely going to be a factor, but the way they explained it to me and all the other teams, they're going to err on the side of caution. I don't have a problem with it."

Morris credited center Jeff Faine and offensive tackle Donald Penn for making adjustments to New England's blitz, and noted that defensive back Elbert Mack "had a big game" that included a 69-yard interception return for a touchdown. Corey Lynch, Larry Asante and Dekoda Watson were also singled out for defensive plays.

But Morris said many of the Bucs regulars were outplayed by their individual opponents, and he made a point of telling them that.

"They'll take it personally, and they'll come out and win those one-on-one battles," he said. "Who can stand up and win one-on-one versus (Devin) McCourty, a Pro Bowl corner? Who can stand up and win one-on-one versus this elite secondary with the blitz and the pressure coming after Josh? Let's find those things out."

addressing four needs. The biggest was the interior of the offensive line, where they're counting on No. 1 pick Pouncey to be the solution. He'll move over to center after being a guard in college. No. 2 pick Thomas should step right in as a starter at running back alongside free agent signee Bush with veterans Ricky Williams and Ronnie Brown unsigned. No. 4 pick Gates will give the receiver corps badly needed speed, and No. 6 pick Charles Clay adds much-needed athleticism at tight end. The team didn't draft a quarterback to back up Chad Henne, who is on the final year of his rookie deal, but it did grab Moore as a free agent from the Panthers.

The drafting of Wilkerson addresses a huge need on the defensive line with Ellis' departure. No. 3 pick Kenrick Ellis should help, but that area still lacks depth. Taylor's release means the Jets also need an outside linebacker and nickel pass rusher, a role likely to be filled by Long and/or McIntyre. But the biggest headaches may be in the secondary, which lost Trufant and Warren, and depth on the offensive line, which has a developing quarterback in Mark Sanchez to protect.

The drafting of Solder at No. 1 gives depth behind veteran LT Matt Light, and Vereen and Ridley should add depth to the running game. The defense, especially the inconsistent pass rush, which put up a pedestrian 36 sacks in 2010, was addressed through free agency, as the team added considerable new blood in Ellis, Carter, Haynesworth, Stroud, Koutouvides and Anderson.

Head Coach: Chan Gailey, second season

Additions: WR Brad Smith, QB Tyler Thigpen, LB Nick Barnett

Departures: DL Marcus Stroud, WR James Hardy, LB Mike Balogun, CB Cary Harris, LB Paul Posluszny, LB Aaron Maybin, DB Donte Whitner

Key Draft Picks: DT Marcell Dareus (1), CB Aaron Williams (2), ILB Kelvin Sheppard (3), S Da'Norris Searcy (4), OT Chris Hairston (5)

Offseason review: After finishing in last place in the AFC East in 2010, the Bills went to work on their defense, going for a value pick in Dareus at No. 1, a clear upgrade for the defensive line. He'll line up at end in Buffalo's 3-4 defense. They also added badly needed physicality at linebacker with No. 3 pick Sheppard, but the pass rush still needs to be addressed, despite the belief of some who think Shawne Merriman is still the answer. No. 2 pick Williams should provide a safety net at cornerback if Donte Whitner leaves as a free agent. On the plus side, Ryan Fitzpatrick returns at quarterback after a surprisingly solid season, and so does four-fifths of the offensive line, which will have a second season together.

Rays 3, Mariners 2

ST. PETERSBURG — Evan Longoria and Ben Zobrist each had run-scoring singles with two outs during the eighth inning as the Tampa Bay Rays beat Felix Hernandez and the Seattle Mariners 3-2 on Friday night.

Hernandez (11-11) took a one-hitter in the eighth before the Rays' put together the late rally. An out after pinch-hitter Sam Fuld lined an one-out, opposite-field single to left, Johnny Damon had an infield single before Longoria and Zobrist had consecutive RBI hits to put Tampa Bay ahead 3-2.

Juan Cruz (5-0) got two outs in the eighth for the win. Kyle Farnsworth pitched the ninth for his 22nd save.

Hernandez allowed three runs and six hits in eight innings. The 2010 AL Cy Young winner had nine strikeouts and two walks in his fourth complete games this season.

Kyle Seager put the Mariners up 2-1 with his first major league homer, a solo shot off Wade Davis leading off the seventh.

Trayvon Robinson doubled in the third and later scored from third to make it 1-0 when Rays' shortstop Sean Rodriguez was charged with an error for an errant throw to the plate on Franklin Gutierrez's grounder.

Davis gave up two runs and seven hits over seven innings. He struck out eight and walked two.

Hernandez appeared to land wrong on a pitch to Casey Kotchman in the fifth, but the right-hander wound up okay.

Tigers 4, Indians 1

DETROIT — Max Scherzer pitched seven strong innings and the first-place Detroit Tigers hit three homers in a 4-1 victory over the second-place Cleveland Indians on Friday night.

The Indians could have taken over the AL Central lead with a sweep of the three-game series, but now trail Detroit by 2½ games.

Scherzer (13-7) allowed one run, five hits and a walk while throwing a career-high 127 pitches.

Joaquin Benoit and Jose Valverde finished, with the latter pitching the ninth for his 36th save in as many opportunities. Valverde was coming off Wednesday's loss to the Twins, where he allowed two ninth-inning runs in a tie game.

Josh Tomlin (12-6) took the loss, giving up four runs and six hits in 6 2-3 innings.

The Tigers didn't get a runner into scoring position in the first five innings, but Ryan Raburn hit a one-out single in the sixth and Austin Jackson followed with his sixth career homer.

Cleveland got a run back in the seventh. Carlos Santana led off the inning with a single, and after Scherzer struck out the next two hitters, Lonnie Chisenhall beat out an infield grounder when first baseman Miguel Cabrera's throw pulled Scherzer off the bag. Santana took third on the play and scored on a wild pitch.

SOUTH WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. — Kentucky starter Griffin McLarty silenced Pennsylvania's hitters and their huge cheering section at the Little League World Series with a little help from his defense.

The lanky, 6-foot pitcher from La-Grange, Ky., struck out 12 and hit a homer in a 1-0 win Friday night over the hometown favorites from Clinton County, just 30 miles down the road from South Williamsport.

Central Pennsylvania's favorite sons drew such a huge crowd that fans sat shoulder-to-shoulder on the grassy, terraced hill above the outfield fences.

But it was the Kentucky contingent that was celebrating loudest by the end of a tense night that had the atmosphere of a major league playoff game. The 13-year-old McLarty calmly walked off the mound after getting a strikeout to end the game with runners on second and third.

Pennsylvania also had the potential tying run thrown out twice at the plate, including Tyler McCloskey in the sixth after Brandon Miller beat out an infield single.

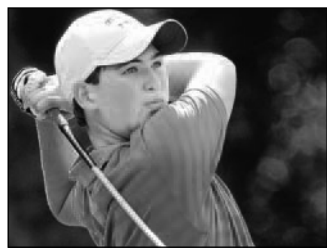

As if McLarty's night wasn't memorable enough, the ace also hit an opposite-field fly that just landed inside the

'Housewives' edit follows death

LOS ANGELES — Bravo plans to re-edit "The Real Housewives of Beverly Hills" after the death this week of the husband of one of the housewives.

Russell Armstrong "We have not made a decision to change our original premiere date but we are in the process of re-editing the show," said network president Frances Berwick.

The second season of the reality show that follows the lavish lifestyles of six women in Beverly Hills, Calif., is set to premiere Sept. 5.

Russell Armstrong, the estranged husband of TV housewife Taylor Armstrong, was found dead Monday of hanging. No suicide note was found.

The couple's marital troubles were a central storyline of the first season of the show and that was set to continue for season two.

Taylor Armstrong filed for divorce on July 15. Russell Armstrong had yet to respond to her petition.

Berwick did not specify how the show would change.

Kardashian matrimony

Wedding means big business

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Call it wholly monetized matrimony. Kim Kardashian and Kris Humphries are set to be married Saturday in a lavish, made-for-TV celebration of love, devotion and product-placement.

The reality-TV bombshell and her pro-basketball boyfriend will wed at a canyon estate in the tony seaside town of Montecito, near Santa Barbara, Calif.

The exact location of the black-tie ceremony has been kept secret, but everything else about the extravaganza — the dress designer, the cake maker, the stationer, the gift registry, the Kardashian-brand perfume — has been touted 'til death do us part on celebrity websites, entertainment shows and Kardashian's own blog and Twitter pages. The bridesmaids are even wearing green.

Still, "there are so many surprises!" Kim Kardashian gushed at a party to celebrate the launch of her new Sears clothing line, Kardashian Kollection, mere days before the nuptials. "I think it's just going to be so much fun. I'm really looking forward to the wedding."

Kardashian went on to extol the deep love and compatibility she and Humphries share.

"We have a really good balancing system," she said, before working it back to the clothing line. "Like our personalities — he lets me chill and he gives me my space when I need to design and approve the shoes and the clothes and everything. We just have a good connection."

The marriage will be Kardashian's second and Humphries' first. (She was previously married to music producer Damon Thomas from 2000 to 2004.)

Much has been made of the Kardashian-Humphries wedding invitations, which were decorated with black crystals and arrived in silver boxes.

Guests were asked to wear black and white and to keep ceremony details confidential.

Even more has been made of the couple's wedding registry at Geary's of Beverly Hills, which totals $172,000 and includes such items as a $1,650 coffee pot and two $1,250 sterling silver vegetable spoons.

Associated Press

Kim Kardashian, right, and her fiance, NBA basketball player Kris Humphries, arrive at the Kardashian Kollection launch party Aug. 17 in Los Angeles. They are to be married Saturday in a lavish ceremony.

Entertainment media have breathlessly reported every available detail on the pending nuptials.

And when Kardashian's sisters revealed at Wednesday's launch event that the bridal party will be wearing green, they said it as if dropping a national secret.

Mom Kris Jenner was coy even about her dress, saying only that "it's beautiful" — which would be fitting, of course, for the royal reality-TV wedding of the year, with some speculating its price tag could reach $10 million.

But such expense will surely be offset by the bouquet of wedding deals now in place.

The ceremony and everything leading up to it will be featured in a two-part special on E!, the same network that airs "Keeping Up with the Kardashians" and its spinoffs, "Khloe & Lamar," "Kourtney and Khloe Take Miami" and "Kourtney and Kim Take New York."

Kardashian also constantly updates her 5 million monthly website visitors and more than 9 million Twitter followers about her progress.

And by selling the wedding, she helps keep it that way. Her fans are hanging on every incremental announcement, said Gillian Sheldon, vice president of programming for BUZZMEDIA, which produces the Kardashians' websites.

"People have shared in her love story and everyone is so excited," Sheldon said. "Not everyone can be invited to her wedding, but she brings people in with her blog, with a TV special on E!. She genuinely wants to share the moment with her fans because she cares that much about them."

Kardashian's website will feature a "virtual guest book" fans can sign on her wedding day, Sheldon said.

U.S. judge asked to reconsider 'The Help' lawsuit

Associated Press

JACKSON, Mississippi — An African American housekeeper wants a judge to reinstate a lawsuit that claims Kathryn Stockett, author of the bestselling novel-turned-movie "The Help," used her likeness without permission.

"The Help" is based on relationships between white families in Mississippi and the black women who worked for them in the 1960s.

It was made into a movie that opened last week.

Ablene Cooper, who works for Stockett's brother, claims a character in the book, Aibileen, was based on her likeness. Her lawsuit seeks $75,000 in damages.

Judge Tommie Green ruled Tuesday that a one-year statute of limitations elapsed between the time Stockett gave Cooper a copy of the book in January 2009 and the time of the lawsuit's filing in February of this year.

Cooper's lawyer, Edward Sanders, filed a motion for reconsideration on Wednesday, saying the clock should not have started ticking on the statute of limitations until Cooper read the book in the summer of 2010.

Sanders argued that Cooper didn't read it sooner because Stockett said in a handwritten note that, despite the similarity in names, the character wasn't based on Cooper.

Sanders submitted to the court a copy of the handwritten letter along with his motion for reconsideration.

In the letter, Stockett says she only met Cooper a few times, but was thankful she worked for the writer's brother because his kids love her so much.

The letter was sent to Cooper with a copy of "The Help," court records said.

"One of the main characters, and my favorite character, is an African American child carer named Aibileen," the letter said. "Although the spelling is different from yours, and the character was born in 1911, I felt I needed to reach out and tell you that the character isn't based on you in any way."

Stockett was not in court this week in Jackson — the same city where the book is set — when the lawsuit was dismissed.

Cooper was in court and was obviously upset by the ruling. She wiped away tears leaving the courtroom and launched into a tirade outside the courthouse.

"She's a liar. She did it. She knows she did it," Cooper screamed.

Today in HISTORY

Today is Saturday, Aug. 20, the 232nd day of 2011. There are 133 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On Aug. 20, 1911, The New York Times sent a message around the world by regular commercial cable to see how long it would take; the dispatch, which said simply, "Times, New York: This message sent around world. Times," was filed at 7 p.m. and returned to its point of origin 16 1/2 minutes later.

On this date:

In 1866, President Andrew Johnson formally declared the Civil War over, months after fighting had stopped.

In 1940, during World War II, British Prime Minister Winston Churchill paid tribute to the Royal Air Force before the House of Commons, saying, "Never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few."

In 1977, the U.S. launched Voyager 2, an unmanned spacecraft carrying a 12-inch copper phonograph record containing greetings in dozens of languages, samples of music and sounds of nature.

Ten years ago: Sir Fred Hoyle, the astronomer who coined the term "Big Bang" but never accepted that theory for the origin of the universe, died in Bournemouth, England, at age 86.

Five years ago: Former Associated Press photographer Joe Rosenthal, who'd taken the iconic Iwo Jima flag-raising picture during World War II, died in Novato, Calif., at age 94.

One year ago: President Barack Obama invited Israel and the Palestinians to meet face-to-face in Washington for talks aimed at achieving a historic agreement to establish an independent Palestinian state and secure peace for Israel.

Today's Birthdays:

Writer-producer-director Walter Bernstein is 92. U.S. Rep. Ron Paul, R-Texas, is 76. Broadcast journalist Connie Chung is 65. Rock singer Robert Plant (Led Zeppelin) is 63. Singer-songwriter John Hiatt is 59. TV weatherman Al Roker is 57. Rapper KRS-One is 46. Actor Colin Cunningham is 45. Rock singer Fred Durst (Limp Bizkit) is 41.

Thought for Today: "Justice is conscience, not a personal conscience but the conscience of the whole of humanity." — Alexander Solzhenitsyn, Russian author (1918-2008).

Today's HOROSCOPE

Today's Birthday: In the coming months, you'll be able to ably handle all involvements or endeavors that deal directly with the public. This gift will produce many advances and much growth of income.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) — Don't deliberately seek out challenging developments, but if you should encounter any, don't let them intimidate you either. Just remember how well you work under pressure.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Anything that displeases you can be turned into a pleasurable experience if you have the mindset to make it so. You should just try not to take yourself or life too seriously.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Instead of moaning and groaning over your lack of funds and not being able to do anything, take some time to search out ways to secure a second source of earning. It'll pay off.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — If your mate or companion has a better way of doing something, you should back off a bit and play a supportive role. You don't always have to be the one in charge.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — In order to perform at your best, you must first be enthusiastic about whatever it is that you are undertaking to do.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Because you're apt to be in a greatly sociable mood, it's important for you to share your time with those who feel the same. Seek out companions whose smiles and laughter drown out all frowns.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — Even if it appears that all the breaks are going to others and not to you, don't let on how you feel. You'd be embarrassed later when it turns out you made out the best.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) — Your ability to be both a keen observer and a quick learner will enable you to gather valuable information and knowledge that will go right over the heads of others. Don't waste it.

Aries (March 21-April 19) — Material conditions look pretty good for you, so use this opportunity to solve a financial problem or to go bargain hunting. In either case you could save yourself some money.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) — It isn't your nature to fit comfortably into a subordinate position. You might not need to be the boss, but, at the very least, you need to be your own person, doing things your way.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) — When everything else seems to be failing you, you are likely to fall back on your own common sense and/or instincts. You'll use a little of both to solve a perplexing problem.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) — Regardless of how negative the signals appear to be, don't lose hope. If your logic is failing you, then rely on your intuition to help you fulfill your desires and expectations.

R — LITITZ, Pa. rebuilding a community from the ruins of natural disasters requires more than hammers and strong arms. There's emotional damage, too, and those repairs can be the biggest challenge.

That's one key lesson that members of the Mennonite Disaster Service have learned over 61 years responding to the devastation and heartbreak of earthquakes, floods, tornadoes and hurricanes. The group has a simple, hands-on mission — getting people back in their homes — but they know they'll do much more.

"We see ourselves as facilitators," said Kevin King of Lititz, Pa., the group's executive director. Volunteers often show up ready with hammers or chain saws, only to find that the first thing people need is someone to talk to.

MDS has sent teams in recent months to help rebuild towns in tornado-ravaged Alabama, Mississippi and Joplin, Mo., as well as help flood victims in Minot, N.D. It has had crews working in Louisiana and on the Mississippi and Alabama coasts since Hurricane Katrina devastated the region in 2005.

And while some Mennonites and Amish have a tradition of not interacting with modern society, that isn't the

Washed in the blood

Editor's note: Nancy Kennedy is on vacation this week. This column, one of her favorites, ran in 2005.

On May 30, 1978, the blood of Jesus cleansed me from all my sin.

Actually, that happened 2,000 years before that, but I didn't know it until that day.

As my Jesus-anniversary present this year, I bought myself a CD of old hymns set to new music. It's called "For All the Saints," the third Indelible Grace project. (See www.igracemusic.com.)

One of my favorite songs is "Let Us Love and Sing and Wonder," written by John ("Amazing Grace") Newton in 1774. I don't know how the original tune goes, but I like the new one. It's bouncy and catchy and the refrain is simple:

"He has washed us with his blood. He has washed us with his blood. He presents our souls to God."

Creator of the universe

It is a question that has puzzled humans for eons. How did our world come into being and who, or what, was responsible for its creation?

From humankind's earliest times, there have been attempts to answer this. Ancient people believed in many different gods who were responsible for the various natural occurrences. There was a god for thunder, one for rain, one for the sun, another for the moon and so on. When earthquakes, floods, eclipses, hurricanes, volcanic eruptions occurred, these things were attributed to the various gods, because people had no scientific knowledge of the workings of the natural world. What people did not understand, they feared and attributed to the gods.

As history evolved, there were those who gave a more scientific approach to cosmology. Aristotle, the Greek philosopher, studied the heavens and their movements and concluded that the Earth revolved around the sun. It was Galileo whose telescope opened up the heavens, which gave us a concrete

Church's 'ministry fair' grows in popularity

Church of God marks fourth year

Special to the Chronicle

Crystal River Church of God will host "The River Roundup," the fourth annual Church Ministry Fair, at 6 p.m. Sunday in the church gymnasium.

Crystal River Church of God, affectionately known as CRCOG among its members and regular attendees, held the first ministry fair in September 2008. As the church had recently moved that year into their new sanctuary, Pastors Ronnie and Sherry Reid were looking for an innovative way to introduce all the ministries of the church to the growing congregation. The ministry fair idea was birthed that summer, with a football theme as the backdrop. The message that year was "You Can Make A Difference — Get in the Game, and Join the Team," which encouraged the congregants to actively engage in ministries where they had interests. The event was an instant success, and is now in its fourth year.

The annual event is not only free to attend, but features free food, door prizes and free entertainment.

"The ministry fair has grown each year not only in numbers, but in popularity too," said Pastor Ronnie Reid. "It is amazing to see all the different ministries in the church, from the Food Pantry,

Group builds Ark replica

Claims exhibit will demonstrate Biblical truth

Associated Press

HEBRON, Ky. — Tucked away in a nondescript office park in northern Kentucky, Noah's followers are rebuilding his ark.

The biblical wooden ship built to weather a worldwide flood was 500 feet long and about 80 feet high, according to Answers in Genesis, a Christian ministry devoted to a literal telling of the Old Testament.

This modern ark, to be nestled on a plot of 800 acres of rolling Kentucky farmland, isn't designed to rescue the world's creatures from a coming deluge. It's to tell the world that the Bible's legendary flood story was not a fable, but a part of human history.

"The message here is, God's word is true," said Mike Zovath, project manager of the ark. "There's a lot of doubt: 'Could Noah have built a boat this big, could he have put all the animals on the boat?' Those are questions people all over the country ask."

The ark will be the centerpiece of a proposed $155 million religious theme park, called the Ark Encounter, and will include other biblical icons like the Tower of Babel and an old world-style village.

It's an expansion of the ministry's first major public attraction, the controversial Creation Museum. It opened in 2007 and attracted worldwide attention for presenting stories from the Bible as historical fact, challenging evolution and asserting that the earth was created about 6,000 years ago.

"The ark is really a different approach" than the museum, Zovath said. "It's really not about creation-evolution, it's about the authority of the Bible starting with the ark account in Genesis."

Inside the ark's headquarters in Hebron, a small team of artists and designers are working on the visuals at the new park, but once the project begins early next year, there will be hundreds at the creation, including a team of Amish builders from Indiana who will erect the giant ark. Many of the same people who helped design the museum are on board for the ark project, including Patrick Marsh, who helped build some of the attractions at Universal Studios in Florida.

Zovath said the ark will have old-world details, like wooden pegs instead of nails, straight-sawed timbers and plenty of animals — some alive, some robotic like The Creation Museum's dinosaurs. He said it has not yet been determined how many live animals will be in the boat during visiting hours, but the majority will be stuffed or animatronic. At their count, Noah had anywhere from 2,000 to 4,000 on board.

There are a handful of replica arks around the world, but Zovath said this one will be authentic inside and out.

"When you get to walk through the boat and see how big this thing really was, and how many cages were there, and how much room there was for food and water ... our hope is people start seeing that this is plausible, that the account could be believed," Zovath said.

The Ark Encounter won't be the nation's first theme park inspired by the Bible, or the first with Noah's big boat. A park in tourism-rich Orlando, Fla., features a portrayal of the crucifixion by actors six days a week, along with Jesus' resurrection and gospel concerts. The Holy Land Experience opened in 2001, but the nonprofit park struggled with debt before it was taken over by Trinity Broadcasting Network in 2007.

Other replicas of Noah's famous ship have been built around the world. A huge fiberglass ark sits at the center of a Hong Kong Noah's Ark attraction, and another floating ark in the Netherlands is being built by a Dutch man, who wants to sail it to London for the 2012 Olympic games.

Closer to home, a church in Frostburg, Md., is building a to-scale ark supported by a steel frame.

But attractions with religious themes can be a risky venture, according to an amusement park expert.

"In some ways it's a two-edged sword: If you go for the religious market, you already have something that is somewhat unique in the market, and that particular market is known to be willing to make a special effort, to drive an extra distance, to get the church groups to go out and make a special outing," said John Gerner, managing director of Leisure Business Advisors of Richmond, Va.

"The problem with that approach is you always risk bordering on being disrespectful if not sacrilegious," Gerner said. "There is a line as far as what you can do in this approach."

GRACE

Walmart and the grocery store and the newsroom singing, "He has washed us with his blood..."

Some of the other songs on the CD use words like: "Love has redeemed his sheep with blood"; "Mercy speaks by Jesus' blood"; "Thy blood alone, O Lamb of God, can give me peace within."

All that blood talk got me thinking about outsiders and aliens, those not familiar with church lingo. Years ago, my friend Cheryl Peterson and I were accosted on a Southern California beach by a Bible-wielding man who asked if we'd been "washed in the blood."

We'd been slathered with Coppertone tanning oil, but frankly weren't interested in a blood bath. We ignored him and he went on down the beach accosting other sun worshippers.

Now I know about the blood of Jesus cleansing us from all sin (1 John 1:7), but I often wonder what other people think. It's an odd concept — blood as a cleaning agent. If I cut myself and bleed on the carpet, it will leave a stain, not a clean spot. You don't dump a cupful of blood into your washing machine, and if you were to take a tree branch, dip it in blood and shake it out onto a crowd of people, they wouldn't shout "Hooray! Do it again!" They'd shout, but not "Hooray."

But God being God decided that the sins of humans could only be cleansed by blood: "Without the shedding of blood, there is no forgiveness" (Hebrews 9:22).

A few years ago, Christianity Today ran a three-part story, written by surgeon Paul Brand, about the life-giving power of blood, beginning with its "miracle" cleansing properties. Brand detailed the process of blood traveling throughout the body, simultaneously feeding each cell with oxygen and absorbing waste products (carbon dioxide, urea and uric acid), then delivering the toxic waste chemicals to organs that can dump them outside the body.

"Blood sustains life by carrying away the chemical by-products that would interfere with it," he wrote. "This then is the (condensed) medical explanation of blood's cleansing property."

He went on to write about sin and forgiveness. He said we tend to think of sin as a "private list of grievances that happen to irk God... but even a casual reading of the Old Testament shows that sin is a blockage, a paralyzing toxin that restricts our realization of full humanity."

Forgiveness, he said, "cleanses the wasteful products, sins, that impede true health, just as blood cleanses harmful metabolites."

He said from a biological, physiological perspective, blood as a cleansing agent makes perfect sense. "The Creator chose a theological symbol with an exact analog in the medical world," he wrote.

That still doesn't explain why God chose blood as the only acceptable cleanser — as offensive and icky as it is — but he did. Maybe Bible scholars and theologians know, but most likely they don't. No one knows why God does anything and any explanations would only be speculations.

For me, it's enough to know that God is God; therefore, he gets to make the rules. And if he says the answer to "What can wash away my sin?" is "nothing but the blood of Jesus," then that's the way it is.

I'm just glad that on May 30, 1978, I believed for the first time that it did.

Judge denies injunction to block voucher program

INDIANAPOLIS — A judge declined to halt Indiana's broad new school voucher program, allowing the law to remain in effect while a group of teachers and religious leaders challenge it.

Marion Superior Court Judge Michael Keele sided Monday with the state in denying a temporary injunction.

Attorneys for the state argued that granting the injunction could have forced students who received vouchers to leave their private schools just as the academic year was beginning and to scramble to re-enroll in public schools.

Keele ruled only on the plaintiffs' request for a preliminary injunction. Their complaint challenging the law hasn't gone to trial yet.

The law allows even middle-class parents to use taxpayer money to send their children to private secular and religious schools.

The measure passed this year by the Republican-dominated General Assembly and signed into law by Gov. Mitch Daniels is the nation's broadest private school voucher program. A group of teachers and religious leaders backed by the Indiana State Teachers Association is challenging it.

An attorney for the plaintiffs, John West, argued the new law violates the state constitution because it provides public money to schools whose main purpose is to promote religion. He said that vouchers helped religious schools recruit new students — and potentially new members — they otherwise wouldn't have reached.

About 2,800 Indiana students have been approved for the state-funded scholarships. Attorney General Greg Zoeller said more than 150 of them used the vouchers to enroll in private schools that started last week.

Sheriff revises rules on religious headgear

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The Davidson County Sheriff's Office is changing its policies regarding religious head coverings at the courthouses or in jail.

Hedy Weinberg, the executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union of Tennessee, said on Tuesday that the sheriff's office rewrote its policies after the ACLU contended current practices violate the First Amendment and federal and state law.

Weinberg said a Muslim woman was required to remove her headscarf for a booking photo and a Muslim man was ordered to remove his head covering before entering a courthouse.

Karla Weikal, a sheriff's spokeswoman, said two booking photos can be taken, one including head coverings and one with only veils removed. The second change allows people visiting the courthouse to wear religious head coverings after a security screening.

School district rejects religious group offers

DRAPER, Utah — A Utah school district won't be selling land next to a new high school to either the Mormon church or the religious group Summum.

The Canyons School Board met behind closed doors Tuesday to discuss offers from both groups to buy the property in Draper and build seminaries.

A school district spokeswoman said the community is growing quickly and the district wants to save the space for future expansion. The school is set to open in fall 2013.

The school's site plan had labeled a one-acre plot of land next to the campus for a seminary. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints had planned to use it for released-time religious instruction, district officials said.

Summum is a religious organization incorporated in Utah in 1975. The group practices meditation and mummification.

Barbershop closed amid animal sacrifice charges

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. — A New Bedford barbershop has been closed after city officials found evidence of ritualistic animal sacrifice at the site. The owner said the shutdown violates his religious rights.

Animal control officers removed two chickens and four roosters, one dead, from the shop's basement Tuesday, after fire and building inspectors found the birds during a routine safety inspection.

Emanuel Maciel, the animal control officer, said the chickens and roosters were kept in two pens next to a religious altar of candles, saint statues and hand-drawn religious symbols.

The barbershop's owner, William Camacho, faces animal cruelty charges.

Camacho said he practices Palo Mayombe, an Afro-Caribbean religion similar to Santeria, and his religious freedoms have been violated.

He said he does not sacrifice animals at the barbershop but only at religious ceremonies in rural settings.

Court orders curator to preserve temple treasures

NEW DELHI — India's top court has ordered a curator to be appointed to protect and preserve the vast treasures newly revealed in a Hindu temple in southern India.

The gold coins, jewels and gem-encrusted statues were found recently in an inventory of underground vaults of the 16th-century Sree Padmanabhaswamy Temple in Kerala. Initial estimates put the value at $22 billion but the inventory is not yet finished.

The Supreme Court also Wednesday directed that the entire trove be photographed and filmed. The court previously ordered the inspection of the vaults after a lawyer petitioned a local court asking the state government to take over the temple. The lawyer cited security concerns.

The temple, dedicated to the Hindu god Vishnu, was built by the maharajas who ruled the then-kingdom of Travancore and was controlled by the erstwhile royal family after India's independence in 1947. So far five of the six vaults of the temple have been opened.

The unforeseen riches instantly have turned the temple into one of India's wealthiest religious institutions.

Women's Ministry, Youth, and Kids come together in this presentation. It is truly a great event because it is not only educational, but a lot of fun for the entire family."

Each year, the church chooses a different theme for the event, and this year is a Wild West one, titled "The River Roundup — Wanted." Event organizer Renea Teaster said, "I thought it would be pretty hard to top last year's safari theme, but I know some of the secrets that different booths are planning for this year, so I know it is going to be great. Our ministry team leaders always work hard on their displays, because booth prizes are given in several categories, and there is definitely a spirit of friendly competition that arises each year."

The event is open to the public and begins at 6 p.m. Sunday evening.

"Everyone is welcome to attend, and this is a perfect opportunity for visitors to come to the church, meet people, and learn about all the different events going on, and ways they can connect," said Pastor Reid. "Your presence is wanted!"

view of the heavenly bodies. He reinforced Aristotle's idea that the earth revolved around the sun, a heretical view in the 1600s, which led to near-excommunication from the Catholic church and house arrest.

What is known today is that the universe is governed by natural laws — earthquakes, volcanoes, hurricanes, floods and the like contribute to the building up or the wearing down of our planet. According to renowned physicist Stephen Hawking, these natural laws are part of our world, the way things are arranged, and a big explosion called the "Big Bang" started our universe. It is his belief that when this explosion occurred, time had not come into being; therefore, God did not exist and did not create the world. He considers the existence of God as a "fairy tale" and dismisses any divine intervention in our world.

As a Jew, all I can say is "oy vey!" — we have a lot of trouble here. For all his scientific theories, one thing stands very clear to me: Who created the laws of nature and who caused the Big Bang? When asked that very question, Dr. Hawking was evasive and could provide no answer. This, to me, seems to be the crux of the problem. I see a creative pattern here, not a haphazard throwing around of stars and let's-see-what-will-happen. There is a harmony and balance in nature which we humans seem to love to disrupt and destroy. I believe in a divine creator because I can wonder at the marvels of God's handiwork.

Rabbi Mordecai Kaplan, the founder of Reconstructionist Judaism, sees God as one who works through nature and human beings. It is belief in God which inspires people to work for justice, equality and mercy. The divine forces which make for freedom, for example, spur humankind to work for freedom for those in oppressed countries. If one were to follow Dr. Hawking's views, there would be none of this, and the spiritual would not enter into the picture at all.

Most scientists would agree that faith and science are compatible. I know that when I look at a rainbow, it is the light passing through raindrops acting as a prism that causes the phenomenon, but I also like to think of the "brit," or covenant, God made with Noah that a flood would never again destroy the world. Having given birth twice, I can attest to being a partner with God in creation and I see that wonder of creation in the faces of my grandchildren.

Belief in a creator gives us the feeling of God's presence in the world. We are not alienated from one another, for we have a connection to a Higher Being who created us all, the universe included.

Science uses empirical methods to derive at answers; religion depends on faith. Science cannot explain everything, therefore some things we take on faith. Some things may always remain a mystery, and maybe that is a good thing. History has shown us what can happen when human beings possess too much power.

A popular hymn sung at the end of services, "Adon Olam (Lord of the Universe)," states in poetic form that God was there before creation, i.e., before time. This hymn was written in the 11th century, years before the Big Bang theory. As Jews approach the High Holiday season starting next month, they will be reminded that Rosh Hashanah, the New Year, also celebrates the birth of the world. For us and many other people of faith, God created the universe. Amen.

case during disasters. The group works with state and federal agencies, as well as other churches and secular aid groups.

MDS, with administrative offices in the Lancaster County, Pa., borough of Lititz, has about 3,000 Mennonite, Amish and Brethren in Christ congregations throughout the U.S. and Canada that contribute volunteers and funds. In 2010, the group's total U.S. revenue was about $3.7 million.

About 3,400 volunteers have already contributed 126,000 hours of work this year. Over the past 10 years they've helped 5,200 families and built about 200 new homes. Because much of its strength is volunteers, it spends 79 cents of every dollar on direct relief, MDS officials say.

The emphasis isn't on dropping huge groups into disaster areas. The Mennonites keep response teams to about 20 people to foster personal relationships in communities, where they sometimes stay for years.

John M. Swartzentruber of Halfway, Mo., is currently directing a crew of volunteers in Joplin, where tornadoes in May killed 159 people and destroyed about 8,000 homes and businesses. "I teach them that they have to listen to the people," he said, often before cleaning up a yard or mucking out a cellar after a flood.

Disaster victims, he said, "get scared and they have an emotional attachment. They're dealing with their grief." Sometimes, volunteers must deal with victims who aren't very thankful for their help.

"We were working in a poor area, and these people absolutely just didn't appreciate it, and I thought 'why don't we go to the nicer areas,'" Swartzentruber recalled. But that isn't a solution, he added, telling a story now used in training sessions.

Volunteers were cleaning masses of fallen trees and limbs after one storm, and they came to the property of a wealthy man.

He was so concerned that the crew might mess up his flower bed or yard that he started cursing the volunteers. An older member of the team went over to the man and quietly explained that the crew was working without pay, just to help people in need, and asked the man to "please stop cursing."

"The guy actually broke down and cried" and apologized, Swartzentruber said, so stressed by the storm that he couldn't see beyond a tire mark on a lawn.

King just returned from Minot, where recent flooding damaged 4,100 homes and left thousands homeless.

"It's warm weather, and mold is already growing up the walls," he said. Volunteers are rushing to help clean out houses; even the local Mennonite church flooded.

Besides cleaning up, volunteers deliver food or supplies, or focus on long-term rebuilding, said King. Many learn to cope with such challenges at an early age, in part through a long tradition of helping neighbors in need.

"I grew up hearing stories of MDS volunteers coming to Johnstown to help clean up," said Sarah Yoder, who grew up in the Pennsylvania city known for terrible floods, including the great flood of 1889 when a dam burst, killing more than 2,200 people. Yoder is one of nine full-time employees in the Lititz office, coordinating the thousands of people who volunteer each year.

Volunteers say the experience is exceptionally rewarding.

Phil and Kathleen Maneikis of Kalamazoo, Mich., usually volunteer for 10 weeks each year on various projects. He's worked in North Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Louisiana, and is currently helping in Birmingham, Ala.

"The challenge that we're faced with as a volunteer is to have a willing heart and not be judgmental," he said. "And don't use the standards where we come from, and place them on other people," added Maneikis, who has made friends in communities that he never would have visited otherwise.

The feelings can go both ways.

MDS volunteers helped Charles Duplessis build a new home from 2008 to 2009 to replace the one in the Lower Ninth Ward of New Orleans that was swept away when levees burst during Hurricane Katrina. "We were fortunate enough to be able to meet most of the volunteers. They were good people," said Duplessis, a Baptist pastor. "We worked with them, talked with them, shared with them. It was just a good experience. We made friends, lifelong friends."

King said there's a way for everyone to contribute. One 80-year-old woman bakes doughnuts, sells them and sends a check every month, while another has donated money to help a college student do relief work.

People often ask him where the worst disaster is, and where they should send money.

"And I say, you know, for every individual, it's their worst disaster."

Army Spc. Thomas Maher is guest of honor for reception at VFW

Special to the Chronicle

Army Spc. Thomas Maher, a 2004 graduate of Lecanto High School, received a hearty welcome home from Citrus County residents on July 15, hosted by VFW Post 8189 in Homosassa. Maher recently returned from an Operation Iraqi Freedom combat tour with B Company 3/7 4th Brigade Combat Team Third Infantry Division.

Barbara Mills and John Stewart, officers from Citrus County's Operation Welcome Home, presented a certicate of appreciation and a basket filled with donations from local businesses. Additionally, organizational representatives from Rolling Thunder and Post 8189 presented various items to Maher in honor of his service.

Also on hand to welcome home Maher were representatives of the U.S. Marine Corps League 1139, American Legion Post 225, U.S. Submariners and Sugarmill Woods residents.

"I would like to thank those who helped us honor Spc. Maher," said Stewart. "It was a tremendous ceremony with a very emotional ending when all those present stood and held hands as Lee Greenwood's song, "God Bless the USA," was played over Post 8189's music system.

"It was an outstanding tribute to Spc. Maher's military service, to the many veterans present from other wars and to the freedoms we are so blessed to have as citizens of our great country."

Knights slate annual blood drive

Event in honor of Knight Matt Curley

Special to the Chronicle

Our Lady of Grace Church/Knights of Columbus Abbot Francis Sadlier Council No. 6168 will co-host their second annual Matt Curley Memorial Blood Drive from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 17, in the Parish Life Center.

The drive honors the memory of Matt Curley, who died last year. He was a very active member of both Our Lady of Grace Church and the Knights of Columbus, as well as many other activities throughout Citrus County.

Local blood supplies are low and should remain so for awhile due to vacations, weather and snowbirds not being back. Last September, the drive collected 72 pints of blood in Matt Curley's memory.

Spend less than an hour of time, get a mini-physical, give a pint of blood, enjoy a complimentary continental breakfast and receive a souvenir T-shirt as well as a free cholesterol reading.

There have been many changes over the years as to who can give blood and who cannot. Each pint will help save three lives. Our first year of co-hosting the drives collected more than 350 pints of blood, which helped save more than 1,000 lives. Drives this year will be extended from 8 a.m. until 2 p.m. and extra technicians have been added to avoid the delay that occurred during the May drive.

To donate, you must be 17 years of age or older (with no limit on the age at the other end), weigh at least 110 pounds and have a picture identification with you. For more information, call Don Irwin at (352) 527-8450.
