the school by her sister-in-law Lois Hair, she was a few minutes from reuniting with her two sons, whom hadn't seen since last Christmas.

Megan Ledford, 17, of Homosassa, regained the use of her right hand after she had a stroke because an anonymous benefactor paid for a therapy device that helped her exercise and strengthen her hand. Megan's benefactor responded to a request from Chris Pool, director of marketing and philanthropy at Citrus Memorial Health Foundation, who is seeking philanthropic giving at every level.

Trustees had wanted Kilgore to review hospital records before releasing funds for charity care.

Memorial Oct. 9 for late environmentalist

A memorial for longtime Citrus County environmentalist Marion Knudsen is set at 4 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 9, at the Homosassa Springs Wildlife State Park.

The memorial will be in the Garden of the Springs at the park's west entrance on Fish Bowl Drive.

Mrs. Knudsen served 19 years on the Citrus County Planning and Development Review Board. She was one of the founding members of a committee to convince the county to buy the then-Nature World Attraction, which later became a state park in 1989. She contributed more than 4,000 hours in volunteer time at the park.

Mrs. Knudsen, 83, of Homosassa, died Sept. 19 after suffering a pair of strokes.

Perry strategy may woo Hispanics

Rick Perry calls his rivals "heartless" and defends moderate parts of his immigration record with ethnicallycharged language.

But his strategy may endear the Texas governor to Hispanics even as it angers others the presidential candidate must woo to win.

His in-your-face approach to addressing what many non-Hispanic conservatives consider a black mark on his record underscores the difficult politics at play for Perry.

He's a border-state governor who for 10 years has taken great care to avoid alienating the nation's fastestgrowing minority group. But Perry now finds himself running for president in a Republican primary whose electorate is staunchly opposed to illegal immigration.

Presidential primary likely Jan. 31

House Speaker Dean Cannon said Florida likely will hold its presidential primary on Jan. 31.

The Republican on Wednesday said that should secure Florida's place as the fifth state to hold presidential primaries or caucuses.

Cannon said Florida officials do not want to go ahead of the four states that traditionally go first — Iowa, New Hampshire, Nevada and South Carolina.

Florida Republicans have been pushing for an early date to ensure the state will be a major player in deciding the GOP nominee.

Former Gov. Kirk dies

Lead way for GOP mastery in capital

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE Claude Kirk, a flamboyant self-promoter who be-Florida's first came Republican governor of the 20th century, even though he never held prior public office, died Wednesday. He was 85.

Kirk died peacefully in his sleep at his West Palm Beach home, his family said in a statement.

"He woke up every morning with 30 new ideas, 20 of which weren't the best in the world, but two were absolutely genius," said Nat Reed, who was Kirk's environmental adviser and later served as assistant interior secretary under Presidents Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford.

Rural Democrats dominated Florida politics when Kirk was elected in 1966, but his victory over King High cracked open the door for what eventually became the Republicans' mastery of Tallahassee.

Although his political rivals derided the colorful insurance executive from Jacksonville, Kirk is credited with changing the course of state government and politics during his four-year term.

"There weren't a lot of people ready to be Republicans," the California-born Kirk recalled of those days during a 1999 interview with The Associated Press. "We had to create our own.

Political niceties were of no concern to Kirk, who was known as "Claudius Maximus," and "Kissing Claude," the latter a reference to his fondness for women and them for him.

Reed, currently vice chairman of the Everglades Foundation, credited Kirk with starting to clean up Florida's environment that then was blighted by raw or illtreated sewage flowing into the ocean and lakes. He said Kirk initially supported building an airport in the Everglades and the Cross-Florida Barge Canal but ardently opposed both when he realized what they'd do to the environment.

His relationship with Democratic-controlled Legislature was acrimonious, especially over taxation and environmental issues. His opposition to court-ordered school busing gained national attention.

Angel Food shuts down, cites economic woes

Shemir Wiles Staff Writer

After suspending food distribution for the month of September, Angel Food Ministries — a nationwide organization that has provided low-cost food to individuals and families in Citrus County — announced it will be closing permanently after 17 years of service.

In a statement released last week on its website, officials stated they attempted to find other ways to keep the operation going, but due to rising costs in fuel, food and operational expenses, they decided it was best to cease food distribution.

We realize the pressure that this places on our host sites, community food banks and customers," the statement said. "However, there is a group of former employees and food vendors that are working to find a better way of serving those who have come to depend on Angel Food.

"Unfortunately many if not all other not been immune from the same economic and market conditions that led to the loss of other food ministries ... We are grateful that we have been able to help tens of millions of customers save hundreds of millions of dollars in food costs.

Barbara Johnson, administrative assistant and host site coordinator for North Oak Baptist Church in Citrus Springs, said the news of Angel Food closing was shocking and, regrettably, out of their control.

'We were disappointed," she said. Johnson stated the church's Sunday school class would routinely collect money to provide food through Angel Food to one or two families a month. In addition, the church, which had only been a host site for five months before the permanent shutdown, received about 40 to 80 orders a months from needy families and individuals in the community.

It was a good buy. The food quality was great," she said.

In the meantime, she said the Sunday school class will use the money collected to buy gift cards for families.

However, Sally Schlenker, who ran the food distribution program with her husband, Grant, at Hernando United Methodist Church in Hernando, said she has been directing many of her former Angel Food clients to her new ministry — Nature Coast Ministries in

Crystal River. As coordinator of the food pantry, she said she is often able to give away fresh fruit, vegetables and meats to people in need. Man executed for killing policeman

STARKE — A Florida man convicted of killing a police officer during a traffic stop 33 years ago has been executed at the Florida State Prison.

The governor's office said Manuel Valle was pronounced dead at 7:14 p.m. Wednesday. He was the first Florida prisoner to be executed with a new mix of lethal drugs.

Valle fatally shot Coral Gables officer Louis Pena in 1978. He also shot fellow officer Gary Spell, who was saved by his bulletproof vest.

A 4 p.m. execution was initially planned, but Gov. Rick Scott's office said it was delayed by an unsuccessful late attempt before the U.S. Supreme Court.

made a big difference to Megan Ledford, 17, who had a paralyzing stroke in February that left her without the use of her right hand.

Megan was born with Sturge-Weber Syndrome, a rare congenital neurological disorder associated with seizures. She has had more strokes, mini-strokes and seizures than her mother, Kelly Kefauver, can recount. But the stroke in February was severe.

Fred Shirley, who is the rehab services supervisor for Citrus Memorial Health System, wanted to help Megan with a device called Saebo Flex, a custom fabricated wrist, hand and finger brace because her right hand curled with her fingers clutching over her thumb. The device would fit over Megan's hand and allow her fingers to exercise by gripping rubber balls and moving them. This would strengthen and correct her hand.

But as the Saebo Flex was custom made, it was expensive. Megan did not have insurance. She needed $1,500 for the device.

Fortunately, the donor came forward to purchase the device for Megan. Now. after doing exercises with the Saebo Flex for several months, Megan has found she has good movement in her right hand.

"When you read stories like that, you can relate to what you would do if it was someone in your own family, for example," the donor said. "If you feel able to do it, then you want to do it.

The donor said the purchase for Megan was made in response to an appeal from Chris Pool, director of marketing and philanthropy.

"Megan is a young girl," the donor said. "It could

The donor did not know much about the Saebo Flex.

"The fact that the physical and he felt that it may help her gain movement of her hand, well, it was worth a try," the donor said. "If they don't try, then they will never find out if it would help.'

The donor said that the main difference between giving funds to general charity and helping fund a patient's treatment, like Megan's, is that the person making the donation could be sure that 100 percent of the funding went directly to the patient. While it is good to give to charities, those who donate sometimes question how much of the funding goes to those in need and how much

The donor wanted to remain anonymous to keep the focus on Megan rather than draw attention away from

"I'm hoping people who therapist knew about this read about Megan will be inclined to help somebody else out," the donor said.

> Giving comes through in many ways. Citrus Memorial's auxiliary members constantly donate their time as volunteers to assist at the hospital. But they also raise money for hospital projects.

Recently, the volunteers installed a flower fountain at the entrance of the hospital

"We raise money from several sources," said Jack Condron, auxiliary president. "Our gift shop sales. We have fundraising sales once every month. We get a percentage of all the canteen sales from the vending machines.

The flower fountain has cost about $17,000, Condron said. As the hospital's spending gives patient care priority, it had no funds left to make the concrete area in the front more appealing.

"We thought this was something that could leave our little legacy, plus it would help the patients and welcome the people when they come to the hospital," Condron said. "It's a nice thing."

The pavers around the flower fountain can have a person or family's name inscribed for a donation of

"There are still plenty for sale," Condron said. "That will be another nice thing.'

Government grows pot for medical use

Four patients left in program stemming from court case

Associated Press

EUGENE, Ore. — Sometime after midnight on a moonlit rural Oregon highway, a state trooper checking a car he had just pulled over found pot on a passenger.

The discovery was not surprising in a marijuanafriendly state like Oregon, but the 72-year-old woman's defense was: She insisted the weed was legal and given to her by none other the federal government.

A series of phone calls from a dubious trooper and his supervisor to federal authorities determined that the glaucoma patient was not joking — the U.S. govprovide pot to a select few people across the United States.

For the past three decades, Uncle Sam has been providing patients with some of the highest grade marijuana around as part of a little-known program that grew out of a 1976 court settlement and created the country's first legal pot smoker. The program once provided 14 people government pot. Now, there are four left.

Advocates for legalizing marijuana or treating it as a medicine say the program is a glaring contradiction in the nation's 40-year war on drugs — maintaining the federal ban on pot while at the same time supplying it.

Government officials say there is no contradiction. The program is no longer accepting new patients, and public health authorities have concluded that there was no scientific value to it, Steven Gust of the U.S. National Institute on Drug Abuse told The Associated Press. The government has only continued to supply the marijuana "for compassionate reasons," Gust said.

One of the recipients is Elvy Musikka, the chatty Oregon woman. A vocal advocate, marijuana Musikka relies on the pot to keep her glaucoma under control. She entered the program in 1988, and said that her experience with marijuana is proof ernment does grow and that it works as a medicine.

Witnesses describe scene surrounding Jackson's death

Trial of doctor continues

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The last days of Michael Jackson's life were filled with the adulation of fans, a rehearsal performance ondescribed lookers amazing and intense preparations for his big comeback in London.

In good spirits, Jackson chatted with well-wishers outside his home and at the Staples Center where he practiced songs and dance routines before he returned home. Then, things took a tragic turn, according to Michael Amir Williams, who testified Wednesday in the trial of the doctor charged with involuntary manslaughter in the superstar's death.

Williams, who had gone with him to the rehearsal and had dropped Jackson at home, said he got a frantic call the next day from Jackson's doctor, Conrad Murray. "He said, Get here right away. Mr. Jackson had a bad reaction.' He said, 'Get away," Williams told the

A security guard, Faheem Muhammad, testified that he arrived at Jackson's bedroom to find Murray sweating and nervous, leaning over Jackson and trying to revive him. He said that Jackson's two older children, Paris and Prince, were in shock, and that Paris fell to the ground, curled up and weeping.

Moments later, Muhammad said, he heard Murray ask if anyone knew CPR.

The testimony on the second day of the trial helped shed light on what Murray did and didn't do after he found Jackson unconscious in June 2009. Murray, 58, has pleaded not guilty. If convicted, he could face up to four years in prison and would have to relinquish his medical license.

Murray signed the contract, which would give him $150,000 a month, and faxed it to her that night, she said. On June 24, 2009, the day Jackson, however, would never get to sign it.

Dow drops 180 points, ending three-day streak

Associated Press

NEW YORK — A threeday winning streak in the stock market came to an end Wednesday as investors worried about Europe's ability to contain its debt crisis. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 180 points. Raw materials companies had the biggest declines after prices for commodities like copper and oil fell sharply.

Traders focused on remarks from German Chan-Angela Merkel cellor suggesting that the second bailout package for Greece might have to be renegotiated. Several European leaders want banks to take bigger losses on Greek bonds. France and the European Central Bank oppose the idea.

Germany's parliament is set to vote Thursday on a measure that would give a European rescue fund more powers to fight the region's debt crisis. Finland's parliament approved the proposal Wednesday, lifting some uncertainty over the debt crisis issue which has been dogging financial markets since late July.

"This is a market that has been fluctuating and is thoroughly susceptible to any news, any rumors, any innuendos," about Europe, said Quincy Krosby, market strategist at Prudential Financial. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 179.79 points, or 1.6 percent, to close at 11,010.90. It had gained 413 points over the past two days. The Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 24.32, or 2.1 percent, to 1,151.06.

The declines were broad. Five stocks fell for one that rose on the New York Stock Exchange. Only 13 of the stocks in the S&P 500 rose. Four were flat.

Raw materials stocks fell the most of any industry group in the S&P 500. 4.5 percent. Investors fear that Europe's problems could cause the global economy to slip into another recession, weakening demand for basic materials such as copper. The price of copper plunged 5.6 percent; crude oil fell 3.8 percent to $81.21 barrel. Freeport-Mc-Miner any company in the S&P.

Trading varied widely throughout the day. The Dow jumped 126 points minutes after the opening bell on a government report that orders for manufactured goods fell just 0.1 percent in August, a smaller decline than economists predicted.

Those gains were gone within an hour, leaving the Dow, S&P 500 and Nasdaq mixed through the rest of the morning. Stocks started to fall in the afternoon, and the selling intensified in the last half-hour of trading.

The decline followed three days of gains. Stocks rose earlier this week on hopes that Europe was moving closer to resolving its debt problems. The Dow soared 272 points on Monday, its fourth-largest increase this year, and another 147 points on Tuesidly expanding market for handheld computers a device called Kindle Fire that connects to the Web, streams movies and TV, displays ebooks and supports thousands of apps. It's half the size of an iPad and will be less

Bernanke: Rich nations could learn from developing nations

WASHINGTON — Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke says the United States and other rich nations could re-learn a few lessons from developing countries: Adopt disciplined budget policies, embrace free trade, make public investments and support education.

Bernanke's speech about the explosion of growth in the developing world was largely academic. But in his conclusion, he appears to criticize U.S. lawmakers and others in developed countries who he says have failed to embrace some key economic principles. Bernanke has cautioned U.S. lawmakers against cutting deficits too quickly to reduce budget deficits. He has said that could put the fragile economy at risk.

Businesses boost orders for equipment, machinery

WASHINGTON — Companies ordered more machinery, computers and communication equipment in August, a positive sign for the slumping U.S. economy.

An increase in demand for longer-lasting factory goods suggests businesses are sticking with their investment plans, despite slow growth and weak consumer spending. Overall orders for durable goods slipped 0.1

percent last month. The modest decline was largely due to an 8.5 percent drop in orders for autos and auto parts. In July, demand for those goods surged 10.2 percent — the biggest increase in eight years

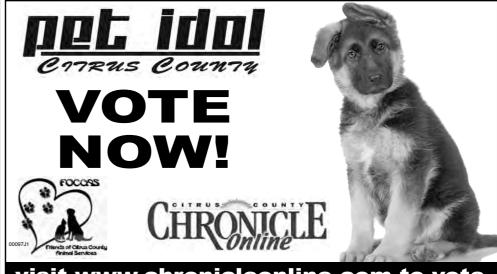

Unemployment rates fell in majority of U.S. cities

WASHINGTON — Unemployment rates fell in roughly two-thirds of U.S. cities last month, despite zero job growth nationwide

The Labor Department said Wednesday that unemployment rates dropped in 237 of the nation's largest metro areas in August from July. They rose in 103 and stayed the same in 32. That's an improvement from July, when rates fell in 193 areas and rose in 118. Some areas with large agricultural sectors added jobs to coincide with the start of the harvest. Auto companies boosted hiring in several other cities.

Rates also fell in Jackson, Miss., and other cities because thousands of people gave up looking for work.

Budget plan raises questions

THE ISSUE:

OUR OPINION:

Why does tax exist?

weeks. First, the Citrus Memorial Health Foundation board, which has been responsible for the operation of the hospital, said it would be return-any local tax revenues. On Montion's new budget. day, the Foundation did just tax dollars and one without.

The move is interesting because the Citrus County Hospital Board of Trustees, which is responsible for levying the tax, is seeking to gain operational control of the hospital. On Monday, it approved a 2011-12

The question now is: If the over who will control Cit- Foundation says it can balance rus Memorial Health its budget without the tax System took an interesting turn money, why then is the Board of Trustees still > levying a tax? In this tough fiscal time it seems ridiculous that citizens should continue to pay for legal and administrative fees for

It is obvious to us that the that, signing off on two budgets Foundation's new budget, sans one with $2 million in local local tax revenue, is a strategic move in the battle for operational control of the hospital. However, taxpayers are less concerned about the political infighting and more concerned about how their hard-earned dollars are being spent. If the group currently operating the millage rate of .245, which will hospital says "we can do it generate about $2.1 million in without local tax dollars," then let's do it without tax dollars.

What did you think?

Somebody called in complaining that we don't have a Bob Evans or Popeye's chicken place in Citrus County. So why did they move here? Other people complain that we don't have a Macy's or Alexander's. Others complain that they don't have streetlights. Well, why don't people investigate into this stuff before going to a bank for a loan to buy a place? Do they expect that once they move here, everybody will cater to them and build these places around them? You should have thought about all these things before making that big move. This is called planning — try it sometime.

Junk mail jobs

To those who complain about junk mail or advertising mail: Stop and think about how many jobs are involved — the paper manufacturer, the graphic designers, photographers, ink manufacturers, printers, sorters and mailers, delivery workers, mail handlers right down to mail delivery to trash and recyclers. No big deal to throw it away. Think of all the jobs behind advertising material or socalled junk mail. Stop complaining. We have enough unemployed people in the country now.

Find the oil

I know a shrimper on the Homosassa River who said his shrimp boats use three gallons of oil a night. Guess where that oil's at?

Open those coffers

I've been considering getting some investors together and applying for a fast-food franchise to be built in Beverly Hills. That, of course, would provide new jobs and tax revenue for our county. However, before we proceed, we'd like somebody to please give us a phone number for the county and state to apply for funds for a feasibility study. Or does that only apply to port projects?

Credit due

I'm not particularly fond of any politicians, Republican or Democrat, but I believe Obama should get a lot of credit. He's gone where no politician has ever gone before. He's been strong on attacking even filed or formed a task force to attack -Medicare fraud. He's recovered hundreds of millions of dollars, especially right here in Florida. And it looks like he's going to recover a lot more and this is all money going into the taxpavers' pocket, where before everybody claimed it was too much trouble and too expensive to go after these crooks. Organ volume

This is not really a complaint it's a request. I go to a small church on Saturday and the organist, sometimes they play awful loud. They think it's in a big cathedral. They've got to realize that some of us senior citizens, it bothers our ears and gives us a headache. I mean they should play a little softer. If you say something to them, they get mad. But it is irritating to have someone play real loud, banging in your ears when you're in a small church and it just bounces off the walls. It's not a big cathedral they're playing in. They've got to realize that and have a little more consideration for us people sitting behind you.

Not just Americans

Reference letters to the editor, page A12, Friday (Sept. 23): Dianne Buck states, "Huh? We absolutely know that Islamic jihadists killed 3,000 innocent Americans." George W. Bush said that several times. A thorough investigation revealed that those killed or injured represented 66

Step up to the cup, wiseguys crusade to drug-test cash welfare applicants is turning out to be anthickheaded scheme that's backfiring on Florida taxpay-

The biggest beneficiaries are the testing companies that collect $10 to $25 for urine, blood or hair screening, a fee being paid by the state If the current rate of failure holds (you and me) whenever the applicant tests clean — currently about 97 percent of the cases.

The law, which easily passed the Legislature this year, was based on the misinformed and condescending premise that welfare recipients are more prone to use illegal drugs than people who are fortunate enough to have

Statistically, the opposite is true, despite the claims of Scott and Republican legislators who cheered this unnecessary and in-

The Department of Children and Families reports that since July, when the drug-testing program started, only 2.5 percent of welfare applicants have failed.

By contrast, about 8.9 percent of the general population illegally uses some kind of drug, according to the 2010 National Survey on Drug Use and Health.

This substantial disparity in favor of the unemployed is not an anomaly. Thirteen years ago, the Florida Legislature funded a pilot drug-testing project targeting poor residents who were receiving temporary cash assistance from the state. Of the nearly 8,800 applicants who got screened for drugs, fewer than 4 percent tested positive. That little exercise in class-bashing cost taxpayers about $2.7 million.

Either the governor didn't know about the earlier study, couldn't handle the math or just didn't want to be bothered with the facts.

However, here are some new numbers that even a sixth-grader can understand:

Carl Hiaasen OTHER VOICES

the new drug-screening law would result in about 4,400 tests a month, or 52,800 a year, at a charge of $10 to $25 each. Applicants initially passed, the DCF said

pay for their own tests, but they're reimbursed by the state if the results of the drug screens are negative.

steady at a measly 2.5 percent, Florida taxpayers will be on the hook for 97.2 percent of the tests, between $515,000 and $1.27 million annually. This is not the scenario presented by Scott and others like Rep. Jimmie T. Smith of Inverness, who justified the law by wrongly implying that welfare recipients have higher drug-use rates than the rest of us. Good luck finding an office building in Tallahassee where only 2.5 percent of the workers smoke pot in their leisure time.

The support for the drug-testing law — and the polls say it's popular — is based on the reasonable notion that people who are struggling to find a job shouldn't be spending a dime on dope. Whether you can legislate sobriety or common sense is highly debatable, but the more pressing question is whether such laws are ultimately worth the expense to government.

So far, the state hasn't offered any figures on how much money we're "saving" by drug-testing welfare applicants. Each month the number of those seeking cash assistance varies, and the amount of each payment depends on the circumstances and size of the

But with such a small percentage of applicants testing positive, the state will be lucky indeed if the amount of denied welfare benefits exceeds the true costs of administering the law, which go well beyond the urine and blood

Taxpayers are also paying the governor's legal fees to defend a

When the law was predictable (and winnable) lawsuit challenging the constitutionality of the blanket drug-testing requirement.

A Navy veteran who's a single father in Orlando, joined by the American Civil Liberties Union, charges that Scott's law allows "unreasonable and suspicionless searches" because it's used against all cash welfare applicants, regardless of whether or not they show evidence of drug

Not surprisingly, the staff of the Florida House raised a similar concern when the measure was being written. And, not surprisingly, grandstanding lawmakers shrugged it off.

Some judges haven't been so quick to do so. In Michigan, a drug-testing program aimed at welfare recipients was struck down by a federal court, citing privacy rights in the Fourth Amendment.

Back in 1997, the U.S. Supreme Court likewise relied on the Fourth Amendment when voting 8-1 to nullify a Georgia statute requiring all political candidates to take a drug test.

Here in Florida, Rick Scott's campaign promise of mass job creation is at least coming true for professional urine samplers. However, in addition to being sued over drug-testing welfare parents, Scott also faces a court fight for ordering random substance screening on thousands of state workers.

Interestingly, the governor's pee-in-the-cup mandate doesn't apply to the one bunch that whizzes away more tax dollars than anyone else — the legislators who pass such useless laws.

I say line up all 160 of 'em for a patriotic whiz-fest at the Capitol clinic. You think more than 2.5 percent might test positive? Let's find out.

And I'll pay for it out of my own pocket. Seriously.

A number of years have passed since my last submission on the topic of Crystal River. As a resident, I watched how dysfunctional the city council was with all the fighting over the turnover of city managers due to politics. I suggested at that time that the city disband because we residents were paying for the expensive lawsuits, lawyers and stupidity. They finally settled on a new city manager, which seemed to bring peace. By then we had drained the treasury.

It's been more than six years, and with the economy in freefall again, we need to revisit the issue of disbanding the city. The town has shrunk, with fewer residents and businesses. Just look at the mall. Half the mall is vacant and is not worth saving. Drive down U.S. 19 and look at all the vacancies. This town looks like a town on the decline.

I have to ask: Why do we need this uncreative council to make Dissolve Crystal River decisions for the rest of us? The town is no longer vibrant and needs to take advantage of the savings by disbanding. They are small-minded in their approach to seeing the bigger picture. There are no enhanced services with this council. What great achievements do they have to show us? The unincorporated areas have more people and are reaping some savings by just having the county provide the services. The council has been anti-growth.

> The proof is in the pudding. This is certainly not Shangri-la. I'm all for less government and ridding ourselves of duplicated services. Once we got the sheriff's office to take over the police, things have been better. The same will happen with everything else. The only thing that city hall is good for is a community center, as I suggested be-

Shell out

It's interesting. Everybody wants to have a Bob Evans and a Popeyes chicken restaurant put in this area — Ho-mosassa, Crystal River, Inverness or whatever. For all these people that are so anxious to have one put in, I'd like to know how much money would they put up front to help establish this facility? If you want something bad enough, shell into your pockets and help pay for it. Well said

Don Hess, your commentary regarding the bumpersticker tea party was right on. Well said, Don.

Great column

Thank you for Nancy Kennedy's great columi about the World War II Memorial in today, Sunday's (Sept. 25) paper. Brought tears to my eyes also, as I have my own memories of those years. Some spent in my family's bomb shelter in East London until my company evacuated me into this country where I met and married my late Yankee soldier husband. Had 48 years with him. I enjoy Nancy's Saturday column, also.

Kudos, Frank

It's puzzling that there has been no response to the article in the Sept. 17 Chronicle about the blue laws regarding allowance of selling liquor before 1 p.m. on Sundays. Kudos to City Manager Frank DiGiovanni for sticking to his guns and doing the right thing. Again, it's all about money and I'm surprised that some of our "local leaders" are espousing this change. Suffice it to say, this change only serves to add to the negative approach some citizens are taking in disregarding the Lord's Day and what it really is all about. The Scripture says, "You cannot serve both God and mammon (money)" — Matthew 6:24.

Great read

This is in reference to the Don Hess column on Sunday, Sept. 25. It was in reference to the bumpersticker party. I enjoyed the column, Don. Thanks for writing it. And I have a good B.S. for you: What a great column.

Park alone

This is in response to "Leave a note": No one is going to leave a note when they bump your vehicle with their car door. However, backing into your bumper and a scrape is another thing and a note should have been left. In the meantime, try parking farther away instead of where everyone else is parked.

This alone could eliminate a lot of dings from car doors. I, too, purchased a brandnew truck three months ago slammed against their ear. Two things: They look stupid, for one thing, and secondly, that's very dangerous.

off the showroom floor and I park as far away from anyone as I possibly can and have no dings or scratches.

Don't develop

This is in response to Commissioner Joe Meek talking about how important it is to develop Citrus Springs. Myself, along with other Citrus Springs residents, picked Citrus Springs as a place to live because of the fact that it was very undeveloped and nice and peaceful and quiet. Look at how development has ruined Beverly Hills. Citrus Springs does not really have that because not many people are residing in Citrus Springs.

The one thing that Citrus Springs does not need is development. Let it stay nice, peaceful and quiet, like most residents like it. That's what attracted people to this area from up North and other places.

Don't talk and drive

I really don't understand the people in this county who drive with one hand on the steering wheel and one hand on a cell phone slammed against their ear. Two things: They look stupid, for one thing, and secondly, that's very dangerous to drive with one hand. I don't think they can drive that well if they can't have two hands on the steering wheel.

They make a device called a Bluetooth headset, which allows you to go hands-free where you can have both hands on the wheel. They cost $30 or $40 for a reasonable one.

Congress' schedule

I thought Congress just got back from a vacation. How come they're taking another week off?

They don't do enough work to make that much vacation time. In fact, they shouldn't even get paid for vacations.

tions. Kudos, Diana

Couldn't believe that article Diana West did on the limbs that must be lost in Afghanistan. Does anybody see these? Does anybody read this? I was sick to my stomach.

I can't believe it's still going on. When are men going to stop killing each other? This Diana West, I wish I knew where I can get in touch with her because I don't have a computer. Kudos to her for writing stuff like that. Good for you, Diana.

Funds dwindling

Republicans should jump at the chance to oppose payroll tax cuts that affect Social Security. According to estimates, if President Obama gets his way with a 3.1 percent reduction, Social Security will lose $175 billion next year. With the 2 percent reduction this year, Social Security lost around $113 billion. It is estimated Social Security will go bankrupt in 2036, but if Obama continues to take away money from the fund, it will be much sooner. Tax cuts should come from a reduction in federal income tax rates and capital gains, not from Social Security funds.

Obama has already destroyed Medicare by ripping $500 billion from the existing program when he signed Obamacare. As of right now, Medicare is expected to go bankrupt in 2024, but could be sooner because Obama is relying on billions of dollars in savings by cutting payments to doctors and rationing health care to seniors.

The Federal Reserve
Board, under Chairman
Ben Bernanke refused to raise interest rates, claiming our existing inflation rate of 3 1/2 percent would fall to 2 percent in the coming months. He projects interest rates to remain the same well into 2013, so we have no
chance of earning interest on our investments.

Seniors have not received a COLA (cost of living adjustment) for 2010 or 2011. Over a three-year period, the average senior citizen will suffer a loss of $2,532. Please note Congress received its automatic raises while senior citizens were denied.

How much longer can senior citizens survive under this administration? Many of us are having to cash in CDs and IRAs just to survive. We still have to pay for groceries, gasoline, clothing, drug prescriptions, co-pays for doctors, utilities, telephone service and many other expenses with no increase in our Social Security payments.

The Republicans and the tea party understand our plight, but Obama keeps pushing to take more away from us. Please call your members of Congress and tell them to vote no on extending the payroll tax cut if it affects Social Security.

WASHINGTON — Federal health officials said Wednesday more illnesses and possibly more deaths may be linked to an outbreak of listeria in cantaloupe.

So far, the outbreak has caused at least 72 illnesses including up to 16 deaths in 18 states, making it the deadliest food outbreak in the U.S. in more than a decade.

The heads of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and the Food and Drug Administration said consumers who have cantaloupes produced by Jensen Farms in Colorado should throw them out.

Neither the government nor Jensen Farms has supplied a list of retailers who may have sold the fruit. Officials say consumers should ask retailers about the origins of their cantaloupe. If they still aren't sure, they should get

Report: EPA cut corners on climate finding

Watchdog questions the process, not the science behind conclusions

The report, issued by the EPA's Office of the Inspector General, said the EPA should have followed a more extensive review process for a technical paper supporting its determination that greenhouse gases pose dangers to human health and welfare, a finding that ultimately compelled it to issue controversial and expensive regulations to control greenhouse gases for the first time.

While it may be debatable what impact, if any, this had on EPA's finding, it is clear that EPA did not follow all the required steps," Inspector General Arthur A. Elkins Jr. said in a statement Wednesday.

"The report importantly does not question or even address the science used or the conclusions reached," the EPA said in a statement.

The environmental agency said its work "followed all appropriate guidance," a conclusion supported by the White House budget official who wrote the peer review guidelines in 2005. U.S. presses wary ally Egypt on Israel, democracy

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Amid a chaotic post-revolution period, the United States on Wednesday pressed Egypt's interim military leadership to strengthen Egypt's partnership with Israel and stick to scheduled elections later this year, even though a new set of leaders much less friendly to the U.S. and the Jewish state may be the winners. After a meeting with the Egyptian foreign minister, Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton went out of her way to describe the country's ruling military council as "an institution of stability and continuity," commending it for adhering to Egypt's 32year-old peace agreement with Israel. She called the Camp David Accords "essential for stability and, of course, essential for Egypt's growth, prosperity and peaceful transition.

But alongside the praise she expressed some growing concerns with the military's domestic policies, specifically a decision to extend well into next year the emergency laws that were a mainstay of abuse during Hosni Mubarak's three-decade rule. "We hope to see the law lifted sooner than that," Clinton told reporters. "We think that is an important step on the way to the rule of law, to the kind of system of checks and balances that are important in protecting the rights of the Egyptian people, to create the context for free and democratic elections.'

The American demands on Egypt represent in some ways the twin set of hopes and fears with the movements for greater democracy in the Arab world. The Obama administration has championed those movements but hopes to corral their energy so political transitions from Tunisia to Yemen don't slide back into military domination or create a powerful new wave of intolerant populism — as occurred after Iran's Islamic revolution a little more than three decades ago.

The U.S. also hopes populism unleashed in Cairo and elsewhere does not spell the end of Arab alliances with Israel, which, while always shallow and filled with suspicion, were still a foundation of U.S. policy in the Middle East. With the fall of U.S.backed autocrats such as Egypt's Mubarak, however, the U.S. may have less to offer Arab governments in return for their toleration of Israel. Clinton promised Egypt the Obama administration's full support for a new beginning. She said the administration was aiming to get congressional support for $1 billion in debt relief for Egypt, so people "can invest that money into new projects that create jobs and give them a better standard of living." She rejected the call from some in Congress for new conditions on the $1.5 billion in annual U.S. aid to Egypt. And she spoke of helping to create a network of community colleges in Egypt to provide training for new employment opportunities.

Fugitive hid in Portugal hamlet

ALMOCAGEME, Portugal — A 1970s militant who carried out one of the most brazen plane hijackings in U.S. history lived for decades in an idyllic Portuguese hamlet near a stunning beach with his Portuguese wife and two children, neighbors said Wednesday.

George Wright, 68, was taken into custody by local police Monday at the request of the U.S. government, which is seeking his extradition for escaping from a New Jersey jail in 1970 after being convicted of murder. Wright was also named as one of the hijackers of a Delta flight in 1972.

The Portuguese news agency Lusa, citing unnamed police sources, reported Wednesday that the former Black Liberation Army member plans to fight the extradition demand.

During a court appearance Tuesday in Lisbon, Wright asked to be released pending the outcome of the U.S. extradition request, and his request is being reviewed by Portuguese judicial authorities, U.S. Justice Department spokeswoman Sweeney Laura Wednesday.

Until his arrest, life was sweet for Wright in the tiny town of Almocageme, 28 miles west of Lisbon. Fluent in Portuguese, Wright had no apparent profession but worked at a series of odd jobs, most recently as a nightclub bouncer, said two neighbors who spoke on condition of anonymity because they feared being ostracized for speaking out.

Wright also once had a stall at a nearby beach and ran a barbecue chicken restaurant in a nearby town.

Wright married a Portuguese woman, identified by neighbors as 55-year-old Maria do Rosario Valente, the daughter of a retired Portuguese army officer. They had two children - Portuguese-born Marco and Sara – now in their early 20s.

NBA lockout heads to key stretch this weekend

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Regular-season games could be at stake when NBA owners and players meet this weekend.

And those might not be all that is lost, Commissioner David Stern warned, without real headway toward a new labor deal.

"All I'd say to that is that there are enormous consequences at play here on the basis of the weekend," Stern said Wednesday. "Either we'll make very good progress, and we know what that would mean — we know how good that would be, without putting dates to it — or we won't make any progress and then it won't be a question of just starting the season on time, it will be a lot at risk because of the absence of progress.'

Talks between negotiators ended after two days Wednesday so they could return home before summoning their respective bargaining committees to New York for the most important stretch of the lockout. They will meet Friday and are prepared to talk through the weekend if progress toward a new collective bargaining agreement is being made.

There hasn't been enough of it so far, with the lockout nearly three months complete.

Both Stern and union president Derek Fisher of the Lakers said they are not close, with the Nov. 1 season opener a little more than a month away, and Fisher added the commitment to block out multiple days this weekend "points more toward the calendar than actually being able to measure progress."

"It points to the realities that we face with our calendar and that if we can't find a way to get some common ground really, really soon, then the time of starting the regular season at its scheduled date is going to be in jeopardy big-time," he added.

Training camps already have been postponed and 43 games scheduled for the first week of the preseason have been canceled. The league has said it will make decisions about the re-

Sharks smash way past Pirates in four

The Crystal River Lady Pirates volleyball team fell to the Nature Coast Sharks Wednesday night in four games chock full of hard hits and tough blocks on both sides of the net.

The Lady Sharks showed what they're made of in the first play of the game as Kathy Hoak used an unusual serving technique to fire into the Pirates' back row. With a tip-over point and kill from Sharks leading scorer Ruiz, Nature Coast gained an early lead.

Game 2 was a shooting match ultimately won by the Lady Pirates. It would be their only win of the night, but they made it count gaining an 8-point lead during a six-point run with Casidy Newcomer in the serving position. Back-to-back kills from Megan Unverdorben and Morgan Rea ended the game with a 25-16 win over the Sharks. The shoot-out continued in Game 3, but this time the Lady Pirates stalled. Despite fierce blocking attempts, too many passes out of bounds and short serves kept the Lady Pirates from coming within 4 of the lead.

The Houston Texans have failed many a litmus test in their near-decade of NFL existence. They're still searching for a playoff berth.

To get one, the Texans need defining wins. Another chance to prove themselves comes Sunday when the Texans host the Pittsburgh Steelers. Big Black? Huskers go mad in first Big Ten game

TAMPA BAY

Associated Press

In case you were wonder-

Nebraska fans, usually decked out in red and easily spotted on the road, will don black Saturday when the Cornhuskers play their first Big Ten game at Wisconsin.

You see, the Badgers also wear red, and a very similar shade at that. And Nebraska's defense has been known as the Blackshirts since back in the Bob Devaney days, so there is a connection to Huskers history.

As for the Cornhuskers themselves, they traditionally wear white jerseys with red numbers on top of red pants on the road. Helmets might cause a bit of confusion Saturday night at the Madhouse in Madison know as Camp Randall Stadium. Nebraska's white helmet, with one red stripe down the middle and that familiar block N on the side, could be mistaken — at least at a quick glance, with a chunky W on the side.

There have even been rumors making the rounds on the Internet that the Cornhuskers will wear black helmets. Hard to imagine Huskers athletic director and icon-in-chief Tom Osborne would let that happen, but who knows?

"We're pretty traditional," Osborne said this week. "Anything is possible, but if it happens it was something I'm not aware of."

It is a new era in Lincoln, one that has the potential to produce an interesting rivalry between the Huskers and Badgers.

Much like Nebraska, Wisconsin, because of its location, has often had limited access to five-star recruits. But the Badgers have found success in knowing exactly what they want to be and finding players that fit their systems.

Rangers 3, Angels 1

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) -Mike Napoli talked to his fly ball while it sailed down the left-field line at Angel Stadium, quietly coaxing it into the stands on the right side of the pole.

Napoli got the last word on his former club, and on a landmark regular season for his new teammates.

After posting the best record in franchise history, the Texas Rangers are roaring back into the postseason for another chance to win it all - and thanks to Napoli's pleas, they'll start the quest at home.

Napoli broke a tie in the ninth inning with his fourth homer in two games, and the Texas Rangers finally clinched homefield advantage in the AL division series with a 3-1 victory over the Los Angeles Angels on Wednesday night.

"It was a great feeling, but mostly because it keeps us home for the first series," Napoli said of the jubilant scene in the Rangers' dugout after the tworun shot — his fourth homer in the final 14 innings. "I was talking to it in my mind, 'Just stay fair!"

Napoli, the longtime Angels catcher, also homered in the second inning for the Rangers, who swept the Angels to set a club record with their 96th victory — including six straight heading into the postseason.

With 14 wins in their final 16 games, the Rangers (96-66) held off Detroit (95-67) for the right to host the wild-card winner at Rangers Ballpark on Friday. Although Texas ascribes little significance to the win beyond travel convenience, Napoli is grateful he's not headed to Yankee Stadium on Thursday.

"I looked (at the scoreboard) every inning, I'm not going to lie," Napoli said. "But we went out and controlled what we could control."

Seven innings after Napoli homered over the ficus trees in deepest center field, he connected in the ninth off Angels rookie closer Jordan Walden (5-5), capping his career year with another huge game at the park he once called home.

"It felt like we won the World Series, but we actually just won an opportunity to go back to Texas," Rangers manager Ron Washington said. "We certainly didn't want the five-hour trip to New York."

Mike Adams (2-3) pitched the eighth, and Neftali Feliz picked up his 32nd save.

With 10 wins in their last 11 regular-season games, the Rangers broke the 1999 club's mark for victories, improving their record for the fourth straight season under Washington.

The Rangers collected their luggage in a loose pile in the center of their locker room at Angel Stadium before the game even though they still didn't know where they would spend the weekend.

MIAMI (AP) — While Stephen Strasburg is just getting started, the Florida Marlins' first home is history.

The Washington ace allowed one hit and struck out 10 in six scoreless innings Wednesday to earn his first win since July 2010, and the Marlins bid their much-maligned stadium goodbye with a 3-1 loss.

Next year the Marlins move into a new ballpark with new manager Ozzie Guillen, who held his introductory news conference before the game. The Nationals also have a brighter future thanks to Strasburg (1-1), who threw a gem in his fifth start since returning from elbow surgery.

The top pick in the 2009 draft gave up his first two walks this season but was dominant otherwise. He finished the season with 24 strikeouts in 24 innings and an ERA of 1.50.

Having the right-hander for a full season should make a big difference for the Nationals, who finished 80-81 — their sixth consecutive losing season. Florida wound up last in the NL East at 72-90.

Too much rain often meant too few fans at the Marlins' stadium, but on a sunny afternoon the atmosphere was far from funereal, and the lively crowd of 34,615 was in a sentimental mood. Outgoing 80-year-old manager Jack McKeon received a long standing ovation before the game, then headed into his latest retirement with a record of 1,051-990.

The crowd included about 20 former Marlins honored after the game. Among the oldtimers were Charlie Hough, who threw the first pitch in franchise history in 1993 and returned to the same mound to throw out the final ceremonial first pitch.

Nationals catcher Ivan Rodriquez, a catcher on the Marlins' 2003 World Series championship team, received a big ovation the first time he batted in the second inning.

Fans were on their feet again for the final batter, Logan Morrison, who was called out on strikes. Drew Storen completed a three-hitter with a perfect ninth for his 43rd save in 48 chances.

The entire Marlins team and owner Jeffrey Loria congregated in the left-field corner before the sixth inning to tear the last number off the 2-year-old sign counting down the games remaining in the stadium. Florida played 1,504 games there and went 781-723.

It was also the franchise's finale as the Florida Marlins. In conjunction with the move to a new ballpark near downtown, the team officially becomes the Miami Marlins on Nov. 11.

The unusual 4:10 starting time appeared to make it difficult for hitters to see the ball in the early innings as shadows crept across home plate. Chris Volstad (5-13) allowed no hits in the first four innings. Strasburg gave up a single and two walks in the second, but a double play helped him escape.

The pace of the game made it clear players were heading into the offseason. In the fifth inning all five Nationals batters swung at the first pitch, including lan Desmond, who hit a two-run single.

Florida scored in the seventh when Gaby Sanchez's fly dropped between center fielder Rick Ankiel and right fielder Jayson Werth for an RBI double.

The relative brevity of the finale was a big change for the Nationals, who ended the season with a 14-inning win in 2010 and a 15-inning victory in

On this occasion, there wasn't even any rain, and that won't be a concern for the Marlins in the future. Their new ballpark has a retractable roof.

NOTES: The Nationals finished 23-40 in the stadium. ... The Marlins drew 1.52 million fans at home to finish last in the NL in attendance for the seventh consecutive year.

EDITOR'S NOTE: THE STANDINGS DO NOT REFLECT THE BOSTON/BALTIMORE AND YANKEES/RAYS GAMES!

SAN DIEGO (AP) - Will Venable hit his first career grand slam and Nick Hundley hit a three-run shot to lift the normally punchless San Diego Padres to a 9-2, season-ending victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Cubs shortstop Starlin Castro became the youngest player — at 21 years, 188 days — to lead the NL with 207 hits. He doubled in the eighth to reach base in a career-high 40 straight games and extend his hitting streak to 10 games. He also hit a sacrifice fly in the fifth.

The teams both finished 71-

The late power surge might not be enough to save hitting coach Randy Ready's job. Since moving into spacious Petco Park in 2004, the Padres have fired their hitting coach three times and would have dismissed Wally Joyner in 2008 if he hadn't resigned with six games left.

Despite the two homers, the Padres finished with a major league-low 91 homers. The Padres and Astros (95) were the only big league teams with fewer than 100.

Venable and Hundley tied Cameron Maybin for the team home run lead with nine.

Venable hit an opposite-field slam to left to chase Ryan Dempster in the sixth. Dempster retired the first two batters before loading the bases on singles by Andy Parrino and starter Wade LeBlanc, and a walk to Maybin.

Hundley homered into the second deck in left field to cap the four-run third. Dempster retired the first two batters before walking LeBlanc, who scored on Maybin's RBI double. Venable walked ahead of Hundley's

SAN FRANCISCO — Kevin Kouzmanoff had three hits and drove in two runs and the Colorado Rockies sent the reigning World Series champions into an early offseason, beating the San Francisco Giants 6-3 Wednesday.

Drew Pomeranz (2-1) outpitched fellow rookie Eric Surkamp (2-2) in their second matchup in two weeks and Jordan Pacheco added a pair of RBI singles for the Rockies, who snapped a seven-game losing streak to the Giants.

San Francisco (86-76) wound up in second place in the NL West behind playoffbound Arizona, becoming the first defending champion not to make the playoffs since the 2007 St. Louis Cardinals.

Mark DeRosa hit a two-run single in what was likely his last game for the Giants.

That didn't keep the sellout crowd of 41,873 from taking every last chance to cheer the 2010 champs. The players returned to the field several minutes after the final out to show their appreciation.

Departing Giants managing partner Bill Neukom received a rousing standing ovation and a "THANK YOU BILL" tribute on the center-field scoreboard before the seventh inning. Newly promoted CEO Larry Baer likely will begin discussions soon with general manager Brian Sabean about a contract extension.

Pat Burrell, contemplating retirement if his troublesome right foot doesn't fully heal, ran in from left field to a standing ovation before the start of the seventh. An emotional Burrell hugged and high-fived his teammates and came back out of the dugout for a curtain call, waving to the fans.

This was a drastic difference for San Francisco on the final day a year after the club clinched the NL West and the franchise's first playoff berth since 2003 by beating the rival San Diego Padres.

HOUSTON — Chris Carpenter came through like an ace and the St. Louis Cardinals earned at least a tie for the NL wild card, beating the Houston Astros 8-0 on Wednesday night.

The Cardinals and Atlanta began the day even in the wild card race. When St. Louis finished, the Braves were tied with Philadelphia in extra innings.

If the Cardinals and Braves wind up even, they would play a one-game tiebreaker in St. Louis on Thursday night.

Carpenter (11-9) struck out 11 and allowed two hits in his 15th career complete-game shutout as St. Louis kept up its improbable September charge. The Cardinals won for the 23rd time in 31 games, having trailed Atlanta by 10½ games on Aug.

"We had nothing to lose. We were already out of it," Carpenter said. "People were telling us we were done. We decided to go out and play and not embarrass ourselves and do what we can. We played ourselves back into it."

The Cardinals poured onto the field after Carpenter fielded J.D. Martinez's weak grounder for the final out. The celebration was brief and muted, as the team raced into the clubhouse to watch the end of the game in Atlanta. "It was exciting, there's no doubt about it," Carpenter said. "The way these guys have played the past month and a half has been amazing, every single night grinding, playing their butts off, not giving up.

"We continued to give ourselves an opportunity and now we are here."

The teams entered Wednesday's regular-season finales with 89-72 records.

Kyle Lohse (14-8) would start for the Cardinals against Brandon Beachy (7-3) for the Braves, who played the Phillies.

Tigers 5, Indians 4

DETROIT (AP) - Miguel Cabrera and the Detroit Tigers are headed back to the same place they opened the season: Yankee Stadium.

Miguel Cabrera singled and doubled, all but wrapping up the American League batting title in Detroit's 5-4 win over the Cleveland Indians on Wednesday night. But that wasn't enough to earn home-field advantage in the first round of the playoffs. Less than an hour after the AL Central-champion Tigers won, they found out they would have to begin the postseason in New York on Friday night.

"It's going to be fun," catcher Alex Avila said. "I don't think we really cared who we were playing. You know in the playoffs you're going to play good teams."

The Tigers could have hosted the wild card in the first round if AL West-champion Texas had lost to the Los Angeles Angels on Wednesday. The Rangers won 3-1.

So now Detroit — which finished the season on a 30-9 tear will take on the Yankees, who posted the best record in the American League. The Tigers opened the year by losing two of three at New York. They took three of four from the Yankees at home in early May.

Detroit is going to the postseason for the first time since 2006, when the Tigers beat New York in the first round en route to the World Series.

"They've got good players that's the bottom line," Detroit right-hander Rick Porcello said. "If you make it anything more than that, then you're psyching yourself out. They're just like us. We're a good baseball team. They're a good baseball team."

Cabrera entered the day hitting .343, five points ahead of Michael Young of Texas and Adrian Gonzalez of Boston.

Twins 1, Royals 0

MINNEAPOLIS — Carl Pavano has a World Series ring, plenty of pitching experience in October and even an All-Star game appearance. The end of this mess of a season for the Minnesota Twins still mattered to the veteran right-hander, who wanted no part of 100 losses. Trevor Plouffe's RBI single with two outs in the ninth inning gave Pavano and the Twins a 1-0 victory over the Kansas City Royals on Wednesday, helping Minnesota stave off that dubious 100th defeat.

"It was a crazy game. I'm sure you guys understand what we had hanging over our heads. No one wants to lose 100 games," Pavano said. "This year's definitely been a disappointment for all of us, team-wise, but you've got to battle."

Pavano (9-13) went the distance for the win, the first time he pitched nine scoreless innings since July 22, 2010. He gave up five hits and struck out three to help the Twins finish with two straight wins, their first consecutive victories since Aug. 31 and Sept. 2.

"You're only as good as your last game, right?" a smiling right fielder Michael Cuddyer said. "There you go."

Pavano even lobbied to take the mound for the 10th, as if he were Jack Morris pitching for the Twins in Game 7 of the 1991 World Series, but manager Ron Gardenhire told him Joe Nathan would be taking his place. "He gave me the death stare," Gardenhire said.

Bruce Chen pitched eight shutout innings against the Twins for the second time this month, and the Royals turned to Blake Wood (5-3) for the ninth. Pinch-hitter Denard Span hit a one-out double, after Gardenhire told him to do just that. Span took third on a groundout and trotted home on Plouffe's sharp single to left.

Brewers 7, Pirates 3

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Zack Grienke capped a perfect season at home to help the Milwaukee Brewers clinch home-field advantage in the first round of playoffs with a 7-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates on Wednesday night.

Carlos Gomez, Corey Hart and Jonathan Lucroy homered for the Brewers, who set a franchise record with 96 wins and open an NL division series at Miller Park beginning Saturday.

If the NL Central champions had tied with NL West winner Arizona in the standings, the Brewers would have started the playoffs on the road.

Ryan Braun's pursuit of Mets shortstop Jose Reyes for the NL batting title ended early. He went 0 for 4 to finish at .332. Reyes hit .337.

Greinke (16-6) allowed two runs in six innings to finish 11-0 in 15 starts at home, where the Brewers were a major league best 57-24.

General manager Doug Melvin's trades for the 2009 AL Cy Young winner along with Shaun Marcum in December have been two main reasons the Brewers clinched their first division title since winning the AL East in 1982.

Milwaukee (96-66) finished with one more win this season than in 1979 and '82, when the franchise made its only World Series appearance. Lucroy and Hart hit solo homers in the third. After Pittsburgh's Jason

Jaramillo cut the lead in half with an RBI single in the fourth, Gomez answered in the bottom of the inning with a three-run shot with two outs off rookie starter Jeff Locke (0-3) that put Milwaukee ahead 5-1. Nyjer Morgan waved his arms frantically in jest to cool down Gomez in the dugout with Prince Fielder and Rickie Weeks chuckling at their teammate's big moment. Jerry Hairston added an RBI single in the fifth and Hart had a sacrifice fly in the sixth for Mil-

Mets 3, Reds 0

NEW YORK — Jose Reyes heard the boos when he was lifted for a pinch runner. Mets fans wanted to see more.

At least another at-bat or two. At least another season or two.

It was an afternoon of mixed emotions for the effervescent shortstop in what could have been his last game in a New York Mets uniform, a 3-0 win over Cincinnati on Wednesday.

After a bunt single in the first inning, Reyes was finished. The strategy paid off: Reyes won the National League batting title late Wednesday when Milwaukee's Ryan Braun went 0 for 4.

"It was kind of tough," Reyes said. "I want to stay in the game. They have to understand, too, what's going on. They have to feel happy about it if I win the battling title."

The hit elevated Reyes' average to .337057 and gave him a 21/2-point lead over Braun. The Brewers star needed to go 3 for 4 to overatake Reyes, but went hitless in four at-at-bats against Pittsburgh and dropped to .332. And that gave the Mets their first batting champion. The dynamic All-Star with a broad grin and bouncy dreadlocks bunted Edinson Volquez's second pitch down the third base line, and a charging Juan Francisco couldn't pick up the ball.

Fans booed again when Reyes' replacement at shortstop was introduced by the public address announcer, and on the SNY telecast former Mets star Keith Hernandez called the move "disappointing."

Preparing for his game in Milwaukee, Braun didn't fault Reyes for leaving after just one at-bat. "I'm not going to judge him,"

Braun said. "I respect whatever decision he decided to make and ultimately, he left the door open for me. It's not impossible. I've gotten three hits in a game plenty of times. So, it's still attainable, it's still a possibility."

Reyes told manager Terry Collins that he would bunt and wanted to be taken out if he got a hit in his first at-bat. Collins, finishing up his first year as Mets manager, had to fight back tears as he explained why he took out Reyes so early.

"I understand. I heard some comments in the stands. I don't blame them. People pay a good price to come to these games. You've got to understand that I ask these players to do a lot," Collins said before taking a long pause. "We worked hard to get their respect this year, and they deserve

Signed by the Mets as a 16year-old out of the Dominican Republic, Reves can become a free agent after the World Series. In a season interrupted by leg injuries that caused two stints on the disabled list, he scored 101 runs and led the majors with 16 triples.

Fans chanted "Please stay, Jose!" throughout the ninth inning, and he gave a salute to the crowd as he walked off the field. Chants of "Jose Reyes!" continued after he threw his hat into the stands as he disappeared into the home dugout at Citi Field for perhaps the last time.

"I always say, I want to stay here," Reyes said. "We're going to see what happens in a few weeks. I just need to sit down with my agent and make a plan."

Reyes planned to host 15 to 20 friends at his home to watch Braun's progress. Reyes could be in for some more fun. His friends in the Dominican Republic had said if he won they intend to hold a parade for him in his hometown.

Bay scallops live in small, local "micropopulations," which collectively make up the statewide macropopulation. These local populations are separated from each other, usually by bottom terrain. Put another way, large sandy areas that separate sea grass beds the scallops prefer will isolate micropopulations each other. Since scallops are what are known as "broadcast spawners," scattering their eggs and sperm into ambient waters, and since the hatched eggs, known as "spat," spend a relatively short period of time in the water column, it's likely micropopulations in decline won't get much help from neighboring declining micropopulations. The way I grew up is no different from how many people grew up. From an early age, I spent countless hours in the woods and around the water learning to respect and protect our wild places. Some of those days in the woods are gone from my mind's eye, but others will stick like glue.

One of my earliest memories is from a dove hunt on the farm where my father grew up in Burke County, N.C. From early on, I remember the family making an annual trip that coincided with the opening day of dove season. Dove hunting is a bit different from other forms of hunting; it's more of a social interaction. And while staying in place quietly helps, there is no need to sit like a statue, as in deer hunting, so it makes for a good introduction for kids to the hunting world.

Carolina mountains. What is most seared into my memory was being able to spend the day with my older brother, Mark. He is my only brother, my big brother. And today, at almost 45 years old, I still feel like I'm 8 or 9 when I'm around him. In my mind, I will always be that little boy looking up at my big brother in that corn field.

That afternoon, I was too young to handle a gun, but that didn't matter to me. I was content just being one of the guys. I might have been only 6 or 7 years old, but I can still remember the fellowship and camaraderie displayed by all the older men. I could see that hunting had a greater purpose than just shooting birds. It was a social gathering, and something that was clearly enjoyed by all.

I have a feeling it was there, sitting on the edge of a cut-corn field between two mountains, that the seed was planted in me as an outdoorsman.

Growing up in northern Virginia, I can remember many cold fall mornings driving to a piece of property my folks owned in Stafford, Va., to go deer hunting. The morning always best deer hunting really matter. As a matter of fact, I was late into my teens before I even saw a deer while carrying a gun in the woods. Hunting wasn't then, nor is it today, all about killing. But I will admit, that certainly is part of it.

If I close my eyes, I can see those vibrant, orange sunrises splintering through the leafless trees warming my face. In some ways it feels like it was yesterday, and in other ways it seems so distant.

Sitting at my desk in Crystal River, I can still hear the distant drone of traffic down on I-95. At 10 or 12 years of age, that unnatural noise while in the woods always gave me an odd sense of security.

Being that young, my sense of direction wasn't the best. In the evenings, once the last bit of light faded over the horizon, my next concern turned to getting back to the car. If I felt a bit uncertain of my whereabouts in the dark Even though I was quite heading south out of D.C. caused by hooks is animal young, I vividly recall one would unknowingly give me a abuse, plain and simple." brutally hot afternoon in the point of reference to follow I guess that's a matter of back to my Dad's car. I was safe there.

Fishing is no different from hunting. Many would argue the two are vastly different, but they have many parallels.

Pop and I spent countless summertime hours up to our waists in the Shenandoah and Rappahannock rivers, fishing for smallmouth bass. At 12 years old, it wasn't about catching a limit of bass. To me, it was about the towering mountains, the cool water flowing around my legs and the sounds of the locusts chattering in the trees. Catching grasshoppers or worms along the river's edge to be used for bait also made for a diversion that was special. I remember my father catching a huge smallmouth bass on a grasshopper I caught for him. That made me feel almost as good as I would have had I caught the fish myself almost.

And, just to be clear, we went fishing to catch fish for the table, but at the end of the day, it wasn't really about the catch. It was about being with nature. It was about being with my father. Even as a kid, I understood that. Thanks, Pop. I have a good friend

y mother and father times it was hard to sleep also has a website called ActivistAngler.com. I look over it often.

Last week, something on his site caught my eye.

The exploits of People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA) are not new to those of us who utilize the outdoors. Hunters have long been targeted by the group. But in recent years, those who catch fish, even those who practice catch and release, have clearly been in their sights.

Early last week, the group launched an anti-fishing campaign in Seattle, Wash. "Don't Let Your Kids Become Hookers," is the group's latest campaign to cast a negative light on sport fishing.

According to its website, PETA says that "parents who fish send their children the dangerous message that it's acceptable to torment and kill animals.

I don't think my father was sending me some dark message on those days fishing on the river. Thinking back on it, the message I got was, "Son, I love you and I want to share something special with you.' I'm just guessing, but I'm pretty sure that's what he was wanting to convey.

PETA began protesting last Tuesday along the Seattle waterfront as a precursor to last weekend's 'National Fish Amnesty Day." The group says Seattle was chosen because it's one of the top 11 urban-fishing cities in North America.

PETA campaigner Hayden Hamilton said, "causing these gentle animals of the sea to suffocate to death or woods, those commuters die slowly from infections > opinion. And it's an opinion with which I happen to strongly disagree.

My 2-year-old son, Jackson, is still a bit young for long days on the lake or in the woods. But the day is coming when the two of us will spend that priceless time sharing my boat or sitting side by side in a field on opening day, just like I did with my father. Guess what the message will be?

My teenage daughter, Jenna, and I have spent time in the boat together, and while she may not be the biggest fan of bass fishing, we've had some special times together there.

I know for a fact she vividly remembers catching her very first bass — all by herself. We were on Lake Henderson and I can still hear her screams of excitement as she wrestled a 4-pound bass to the boat. I think most of Inverness could hear those screams that evening. No subversive message — just some bonding time between father and daughter.

That's a memory I know neither of us will forget.

LAS VEGAS — Elton John is returning to Las Vegas for a three-year headlining gig at Caesars Palace.

The five-time Grammy winner was set to perform Wednesday night for the first of 16 shows scheduled through October, the first performances of a new show titled "The Million Dollar Piano.3

The remainder of the shows during the threeyear run has not yet been announced. John says it's named for the instrument he'll play during the show — a piano that took manufacturer Yamaha four years to build. "It's going to surprise a lot of people," John said of the instrument earlier this year as the show was announced. "This isn't like the old days," John said of the new show. "It's going to be certainly different from anything you've seen from me before, as was 'The Red Piano," his previous show at Caesars.

His return comes more than two years after that five-year stint that ended in 2009. The run was originally planned for three years but was extended because of demand. "The Red Piano" included risque imagery — with high-tech videos and large, inflatable props plus the hits John has become known for during a career that's spanned more than 40 years.

Jason Gastwirth, senior vice president of entertainment for casino owner Caesars Entertainment Corp., believes John's run could be extended again.

"I think it's very possible, both on duration and number of shows," Gastwirth said. "There's been such a large appetite by his fans to come see the show."

John is one of music's most decorated stars, known for songs including "Candle in the Wind," "Rocket Man" and "Bennie and the Jets."

He was knighted by Queen Elizabeth II in 1998, inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in 1999 and honored by the Kennedy Center in 2004 for his lifetime contributions to performing arts.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Ricky Skaggs can imagine the look his old friend Bill Monroe might have had on his face if he were alive today to see the bluegrass world celebrate his legacy

'He would get out of the car and have that back straight as an arrow, and he'd have that hat on, and he'd be pulling it off and thanking people," Skaggs said.

"He'd really be happy about people celebrating his life."

As members of the International Bluegrass Music Association gather for their annual awards and conference in Nashville this week, Monroe and the message of his music are foremost on their minds.

Monroe, the architect of bluegrass and a patron saint of country music, would have turned 100 on Sept. 13.

Bluegrass, developed from roots deep in the soil of his native Kentucky, has spread around the world. It's evolved with each generation that's passed since that mythic "birth of bluegrass" concert in December 1945 at The Ryman Auditorium that featured the debut of pioneering banjo player Earl Scruggs and guitarist Lester Flatt.

"Every country that I've ever been in in my whole life, I've always run into somebody who's either talked to me about bluegrass or there was a bluegrass band there, whether it was Russia, Thailand, wherever I've been," Skaggs said.

Fleetwood celebrates musical legacy, new eatery

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. - Long before the success of Fleetwood Mac, when band founder Mick Fleetwood was a kid in the U.K. learning how to play the drums, he dreamed of having his own restaurant. His parents entrusted the then 9-year-old with the stable of the old farmhouse they lived in, and young Fleetwood turned it into something of a children's speakeasy that he called Club Keller. Instead of booze, he poured Coca-Cola.

"I used to serve up Smith's crisps and fish and chips and stuff for other children to come round," the bearded rocker recalled during a recent interview, his eyes twinkling at the memory. "I had my radiogram and my drums in there and it was my world."

PATRONS DIG INTO OLD-FASHIONED POPULAR HOMOSASSA HANGOUT OF

Owner serves up signature dishes with attitude

JULIANNE MUNN Chronicle Food Writer

f you wake up hungry and crave a good old-fashioned homestyle breakfast with no fuss and frills, then consider Bob's Kitchen in Sunny Days Plaza on U.S. 19 south of Homosassa.

The name makes one recall that old adage: "No matter where I serve my guests, it seems they like my kitchen best."

Owner Bob Schaeffer holds court in the little diner on occasion and sometimes assists the cook, daughter Kristin Schaeffer, in preparing a few of the dishes.

This is a place for locals and more than a dozen regular senior military veterans — who don't mind if a stranger stops by for breakfast or lunch.

"This is my morning place," veteran Gary Land said. The Homosassa resident insisted, "This is the best food in town. And Bob makes the very best sausage gravy. I get the hash browns with an egg on top covered with the sausage gravy."

Schaeffer doesn't argue with Land about the food or atmosphere, saying breakfast is the most popular meal with folks, but that "we sell a lot of chili, soups and burgers, too.'

"We don't get too serious about anything here," Schaeffer said jokingly, offering a running commentary about his friendly banter with patrons.

Schaeffer is proud of his signature dish, homemade carrot salad, and said he doesn't follow recipes, just cooks by instinct. It seems to work. His take on sloppy ioes, called "Sloppy Bobs," are popular with the clientele. Another comment was offered by enthusiastic customer Steve Caldwell.

"It is a real and genuine throwback to the good old days when the plates were filled with genuine home cooking and the helpings were plentiful," he said. "The pancakes are as large as the plates, the potatoes are freshly cut each day and the sausage, gravy and biscuits with two eggs over easy on top is the best I have tasted anywhere in this county period, exclamation point.'

Schaeffer, a Chicago native, is a 30-year resident of Citrus County. He once owned Tony's Doughnut Shop in Homosassa and Herman Brothers Roofing until he retired.

He said he bought Bob's Kitchen about a year and half ago to save it from going out of business and for his daughter Kristin, who wryly quipped, "I learned to cook well when my cooks quit."

He said in past years, he was head cook for the Homosassa Lions Club.

The cafe dining room seats about 25 customers and two picnic tables are outside. There are no fancy accoutrements, just lots of homey signs and fishing decor.

If you're going light, you can corned beef hash, too.

Fall-like weather stirs cooking appetite here is a hint of Autumn in the air nowadays—though hard to discern at times. And as always, good cooks start thinking and planning menus for cooler days and nights.

Suddenly, homemade soups, stews and a multitude of heartier dishes sound wonderful again, from entrees to desserts and even thoughts of gathering recipes for holiday fare takes precedence over quick salads and take out.

Following are a few recipes to help you ease into fall in a delicious way.

The first is from Nestlé Kitchens and simply sounds too good not to share:

PUMPKIN BUTTERSCOTCH BREAD PUDDING

- 1 loaf (14 ounces) cinnamon challah bread or cinnamon brioche, cut into 3/4-inch cubes (about 10 cups)
- 4 large eggs
- 2 cans (12 fluid ounces EACH) NESTLÉ Carnation evaporated lowfat
- 1 can (15 ounces) LIBBY'S 100 percent Pure Pumpkin
- 1 cup plus 1 tablespoon granulated sugar, divided
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1 1/4 teaspoons ground cinnamon, divided
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup NESTLÉ TOLL HOUSE Butterscotchflavored morsels
- 2 tablespoons packed brown sugar
- Vanilla ice cream (if desired)

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease 13-by-9-inch baking dish.

Spread bread cubes in single layer on rimmed baking sheets. Bake, tossing occasionally, for 10 minutes or until dry.

Beat eggs in large bowl; stir in evaporated milk, pumpkin, 1 cup granulated sugar, vanilla exteaspoon tract, cinnamon and salt. Add bread; toss gently to coat. Transfer mixture into prepared baking dish; let stand for 30 minutes or until bread is thoroughly saturated (press down bread occasionally).

Combine brown sugar with remaining 1 tablespoon granulated sugar and remaining 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon. Sprinkle morsels over bread mixture; top with brown sugar mixture.

Bake for 45 to 55 minutes or until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Cool on wire rack for 30 minutes (this will allow bread pudding to set). Serve warm with ice cream.

Fine wine makes a hit at ballparks

MICHELLE LOCKE For The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO -Maybe there's no crying in baseball, but that doesn't mean you can't have a good wine.

As the World Series approaches, fans of the grape and the great American pastime have more choices than ever with a number of wines, including some high-end vintages, on tap to wash down those hot dogs and Cracker Jack.

'You certainly find more wine in a ballpark than you used to, at least the upscale ballparks," said Kevin Reichard, publisher of BallparkDigest.com.

The trend goes hand-inglove with the general sprucing up of food options at the park. Your hot dogs these days may very well be artisanal sausages grilled before your eyes. At Safeco Field in Seattle you can even get sushi, Reichard points out.

Sixth-generation grapegrower Tim Carl of Huge Bear wines is a big supporter of the trend. Huge Bear's small-lot wines are sold at Fenway Park in Boston.

"The folks that are going to these sporting events nowadays aren't just looking for standard beer or mass-produced wines. They're much more sophisticated from a food and wine standpoint," Carl said. "What the parks have been really good at doing is creating great food venues and now they're coming to realize that there is a real demand for some of these more unique wines.'

At Aramark, the food and hospitality provider that manages a number of sporting venue concessions, officials have been surveying customers to find out what they want in menus, said Andrew Shipe, vice president of culinary and marketing for Aramark Sports.

Five years or so ago, wine was limited to premium seats. But these days it's more likely to be in the main concourse, Shipe said.

Aramark, which runs the food and beverage operations at Fenway Park, among others, picks its wines carefully, inviting industry insiders to provide a rundown on consumer trends and holding intensive tasting sessions.

Before serving these $16 muffins, sprinkle the macadamia nuts around the outer edge, then sprinkle the gold leaf over the center surface. Top each with a chocolate-covered

A muffin for $16?

Bake up pricey treat for yourself

J.M. HIRSCH AP Food Editor

So political kerfuffle aside, you have to wonder exactly what a $16 muffin would taste like.

Last week's news that the government supposedly paid $16 apiece for breakfast muffins at a Justice Department conference set off critics of government spending.

Hilton Worldwide, the hotel company that hosted the 2009 confab in Washington, disputes the accuracy of the claim in a report by the Justice Department's inspector general. The hotel called it an accounting thing, explaining the price included various drinks and gratuity charges, in addition to the muffins.

Which all kind of misses the most compelling issues. If you did spend $16 on a muffin, what would it look like? How would it taste? Is it even possible?

The typical muffin baked in an institutional setting such as a hotel costs about 50 cents or less, not counting labor. If you go crazy extravagant and reach for the topshelf organic flour, maybe some hand-harvested wild blueberries from Maine and fancy sugar, you're still going to max out around $1.

Press test kitchen, we searched for ways to bump up the price of your basic muffin. The only way to get to $16 was to reach for some oldfashioned booze and gold. We glazed our muffins with a chocolate sauce made from organic dark chocolate cut with reduced Scotch Whisky and edible gold leaf flakes.

$16 MUFFINS

For the muffins:

- 2 1/2 cups organic all-purpose flour
- 1 tablespoon baking
- 1/2 teaspoon sea salt ■ 6 tablespoons (3/4 stick) unsalted

cultured butter

- 1/2 cup maple sugar
- 1/2 cup imported honey (the rarer the better)
- Seeds scraped from 2 Tahitian vanilla beans
- 2 free-range, organic
- 1/2 cup organic milk
- 2 cups chopped dried strawberries (soaked in boiling water for 10 minutes, then drained)
- 1 cup chopped macadamia nuts, lightly toasted

For the topping:

- 2 cups top-shelf Scotch Whisky
- 16 ounces high-end, organic dark chocolate, chopped, divided
- 2 tablespoons unsalted cultured butter
- 2 tablespoons imported honey (the bigger the carbon footprint, the better)
- 1 teaspoon canola or vegetable oil
- 12 fresh strawberries
- 1 cup chopped macadamia nuts. lightly toasted
- 1/4 cup gold leaf flakes, loosely packed

Heat the oven to 375 degree. Line 12 muffin tins with muffin cups. In a medium bowl, sift together the flour, baking powder and sea salt. Set aside.

In the bowl of an electric mixer, cream together the butter, maple sugar, honey and vanilla seeds until light and fluffy. Add the eggs, one at a time, scraping the bowl between additions. Add half the flour mixture, then the milk, then the remaining flour mixture, beating and scraping the bowl between each addition.

By hand, stir in the dried strawberries and macadamia nuts. Spoon the mixture into the lined muffin tins. Bake for 25 to 30 minutes, or until golden brown and a toothpick inserted at the center comes out clean. Let cool for 5 minutes, then transfer to a wire rack to finish cooling.

While the muffins bake, prepare the topping. In a skillet, heat the Scotch Whisky (be careful, it will flame). Bring to a gentle simmer and reduce to 1/2 cup.

Place half of the chocolate, the butter and the honey in a heat-safe bowl. Pour the hot reduced liquor over the chocolate. Allow to sit for 2 minutes, then stir until completely smooth and glossy. Set aside.

Line a baking sheet with waxed paper. In a small microwave-safe bowl, combine the remaining chocolate with the oil. Microwave on high in 15-second bursts, stirring between, until completely melted and smooth. One at a time, dunk each strawberry into the chocolate, covering about threequarters of the berry. Set on the waxed paper, then refrigerate for several minutes to harden the chocolat

Once the muffins are cool, spoon the chocolate glaze over the top of each, spreading it to coat the top surface. Sprinkle the macadamia nuts around the outer edge, then sprinkle the gold leaf over the center surface. Top each with a chocolate-covered strawberry.

Consider ending Yom Kippur fast with breakfast

JIM ROMANOFF For The Associated Press

The Jewish Day of Atonement, or Yom Kippur, is meant to leave observers with a clean slate for the year to come. But it also leaves you famished.

That's because a major aspect of this holiest of holidays is a 25-hour fast. Needless to say, everyone looks forward to breaking the fast at the end of Yom Kippur, and the anticipation (and hunger) often makes the meal seem that much more special.

Susie Fishbein, author of the "Kosher by Design" cookbook series, notes most families treat the meal as literally a light breakfast.

"You've been fasting, so you don't want to eat anything too heavy," she said in a recent telephone interview. "And you've been at the synagogue all day, so you want a meal that's easy to put together or can be made ahead of time.'

This explains the popularity of serving deli foods, such as smoked fish and make-ahead casseroles like

New York radio personality Arthur Schwartz, who also is author of "Arthur Schwartz's Jewish Home Cooking," calls the Yom Kippur supper the "ultimate Jewish Sunday brunch.'

"It's definitely a breakfast," he said. "And I've actually heard of families that start their Yom Kippur meal with oatmeal, although I don't know why, given all the other delicious foods that are available."

He fondly recalls a meal from his childhood in Brooklyn that always began on a very light note with fresh melon. This was followed by mostly cold foods such as smoked and pickled fish, lox and whitefish, egg salad, tuna salad and then a savory noodle kugel made with sour cream, potted cheese and "a whole lot of butter."

Description by metaphor requires a bit of thought. The example above of "bottled poetry" is attributed to Robert Louis Stevenson, Louis Pasteur and others.

Petronious wrote "wine is life," and the Roman poet Horace wrote, "No poems may please for long ... that were written by water drinkers."

Metaphors abound, but what do we make of the wine terms "intellectual" or "sexually charged?" The geometry or mathematics of wine is another way to talk about the stuff. You might call it round, flat, or symmetrical. And the notion of balance is a real tough one, because so much of New World product is made to toss fruit in your face. Three dimensional wine connotes multi-sided with lots of zest.

The gender of wine is a favorite way to describe a soft smooth Pinot Noir, feminine and regal, while sturdy Argentine Malbec may resemble a knight in

Finally, there is the description of wine in human terms. So a Riesling can be cheeky, a Semillion eniga chardonnay pompous, a cabernet overbearing — all human traits. The business of tasting, wrote famous French enologist Emile Peynaud, 1912-2004, is "the problem of freeing oneself from the influence of external factors and the various forms of suggestion which might alter one's perception.' This said, for the average wine consumer, turning a wine's description into tough job. There is no harm, no foul in sticking to "it's good" or "not my kind of stuff," because taste is so very individual.

Helping prepare for council meeting

t is early Saturday morning as I write this and everyone else is still in bed. I decided to get up early today to write this column.

A 79-year-old member of our church district passed away yesterday morning. He had been a widower for the past 23 years.

While he didn't have any children, he leaves to mourn a lot of relatives in this area. He lived with his niece and her family and had his own part of the house. The viewing will be there. The funeral will be at another niece's house Monday. I will help out at the funeral. Meanwhile, we've been busy helping sister Emma and her husband Jacob. My husband Joe and I and the children will go to Emma and Jacob's today to help with final preparations for church, which will be there tomorrow.

Yesterday, Joe and I assisted them with their work. I helped Emma do jobs inside the house while Joe worked outside in the building where church will be held. He put up a partition using canvas on one end of the building so lunch could be served there tomorrow.

Jacob's will have council meeting tomorrow so services are longer than usual, lasting until 2:30 to 3 p.m. Council services are held in preparation for Communion services. Everyone does get a lunch break. Two tables are set and everyone takes turns to come eat starting around 11 o'clock until everyone is fed.

Emma plans to have noodle chicken soup, bologna, cheese spread, peanut butter spread, pickles, red beets, hot peppers, jam, wheat and white bread and four different kinds of cookies. The bread and cookies are being brought by women from our church. I made the jam for her, which is the green tomato jam recipe I shared in last week's column. I used strawberry gelatin, so it tastes really close to strawberry jam. Daughter Elizabeth made two batches of peanut butter cookies for Jacob and Emma's church services.

Elizabeth, 17, and Susan, 15, stayed home Friday to do my work while Joe and I went to Emma and Jacob's. The girls did laundry and the weekly cleaning. Elizabeth also baked the cookies.

Joe and I came home around 6:30 p.m. It was nice to see the house all clean and the laundry folded and put away. Sometimes I wonder how I managed to get all my work done when the girls were younger.

Joe also mopped the shed floor at Jacob's yesterday to help set up the church benches today. They also will hang chains outside the barn to make room for visitors to tie their horses. I will

Sam Levenson, a humorist and author who died in 1980, said, "If you want to know how your girl will treat you after marriage, just listen to her talking to her little brother."

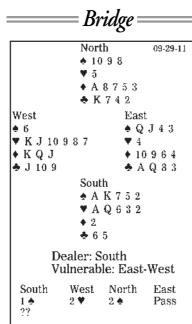

At the bridge table, if you want to know how your suits will break, just listen to the talking — bidding — of your opponents.

This deal, from my competitive bidding lesson in Norway, is a good example. Look at the South hand. You deal and open one spade, the higher-ranking of two five-card suits first;

West overcalls two hearts; North raises to two spades; and East passes.

What would you do? As a secondary issue, what would you have done if West had passed?

Taking those questions in reverse order, if West passes, you should make a three-heart gametry. If partner's goodies are in the majors, you might make game. But when West overcalls two hearts, suddenly you have four heart losers. You should pass. Game cannot be a good contract.

How I Met

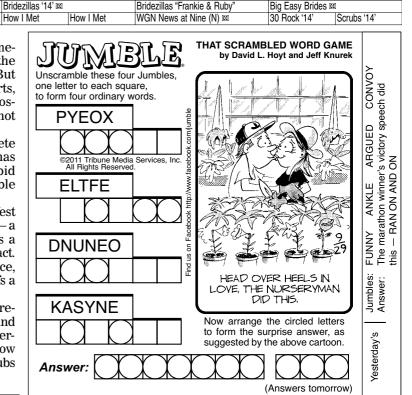

How I Met

Finally, West should not compete by bidding three hearts — he has shown his hand. (If West does bid three hearts, South should double and collect 200.)

Even two spades is too high! West ought to lead the diamond king — a short strong suit usually makes a great start against a trump contract. Declarer wins with dummy's ace, plays a heart to his ace, and ruffs a heart in the dummy.

However, East overruffs and returns a diamond. South trumps and ruffs another heart, but East overruffs and leads back a trump. Now declarer loses two hearts, two clubs and two overruffs

Families gathered around in the evening, after dishes were washed, to listen to the radio. Baseball was played during the day and broadcast on the radio with nothing but the announcer's voice describing the game, leaving your imagination to visualize it.

When the conversation came around to the country's financial mess, a point was made, and for the first time everyone agreed. The point being was that the only thing people bought on credit were cars and homes.

Food and gas were paid for in cash. That meant buying what you could afford to pay and need. When someone mentioned buying expensive flat-screen TVs on credit, the meeting abruptly broke because BayWatch was on. Many of us receive the newspaper that is delivered to our carports in the morning. The most recent carrier was hospitalized for trauma when a woman, who shall remain nameless, accidentally surprised him. The description given to the police was that of a tall raccoon wearing a mud pack.

This isn't the first time reports of weird sightings patrolling the park during the night and early mornings were given to the police.

So please, people, dressing comfortably for strolling is one thing, but watch what you wear. Remember, some of us use pacemakers.

Complaints were made to management of noise caused by the park maintenance crew mowing lawns. Management told the liaison committee that they were surprised by the complaints because the noise was inevitable. The committee said that the noise reported was not the normal lawn mowing noise.

The mystery was solved when a gasoline powered wheelchair was removed from the pool.

Pigs in a blanket anyone?

Can you believe Labor Day has come and gone?

CITRUS COUNTY (FL) CHRONICLE

Hope that means cooler weather will be upon us soon. In case you haven't noticed,

it's really, really hot.

Now that we've established that, I'm thinking there are more important things to talk about than the weather. For instance, there's me. Yep, let's talk about me some more.

I'm really concerned about me. Why, you might ask? Here goes.

A few days before Labor Day I sort of found myself hungry for pigs in a blanket.

Why I was hungry for such culinary delights, I couldn't tell you. I just was.

Now mind you, I've probably only made this difficult (yea, right) dish about three times in my entire life and I'm sure when I did make them, I made them for important holidays such as Thanksgiving or Christmas.

I asked my husband if he would like a few of these delicious appetizers. To that question, he replied, "I don't think so." Anyway, I decided since I was the one hungry for them, I would actually turn on the stove (I do remember this is the first step to actually cooking) and cook them myself.

However, before turning on the stove I thought it best for me to purchase the ingredients and, in order to do that, I should think about what the ingredients actually are.

Of course, everyone knows for this delicious dish you only need two ingredients (unless you want to add cheese). The first ingredient is cocktail sausages (or cocktail weiners as they are commonly called). Sausages do sound more sophisticated and Lord knows we are a sophisticated group. I know, I'm digressing here.

SENIOR STYLE

So, the sausages are the first and one of the most important two main ingredients.

Then I would need dough. The dough part led to a discussion with my husband, and I'm not kidding, as to what kind of dough. I knew it was a type of dough that could be found in the refrigerator section of the grocery store, but, honestly, my husband said it was the canned biscuit variety. As with all things that I can't remember these days, I go to the computer and look up a recipe for Pigs in a Blanket. Did you know there are other dishes with the same name?

OK, so moving along here. I find the recipe I'm looking for and, of course, then it's all coming back to me. Crescent rolls, that's it. So, I need cocktail sausages and crescent rolls.

Now I'm ready. As I started cutting the dough into thirds, I realize once again that I don't have a clue as to how to make food look good. It's a challenge for me just to make it taste good. I only purchased one can of dough and one package of sausages Do you know that makes about 1.000 pigs in a blanket? I'm going to remember that when I'm purchasing my hur-LET'S TALK ricane stash next the appetizers were cooked. As it turns out. I wasn't as hungry for them as I thought and since my husband wasn't hungry for them at all. I figure at two a day, I should be finished with them some time around the next millennium. My point is, how could it possibly have taken so much effort to remember exactly how to cook an appetizer with two ingredients?

Now ya'll, I really can cook. Just not a bunch of extra stuff. I know good old home cooking. Yes, my husband does do most of the cooking and I do appreciate it. I did cook a lot when those two big old boys of mine were growing up. I just want you to know that. Although, I've often wondered what my sons would answer if asked about their favorite dish their mother

New flu vaccine provides better protection

Dear Savvy Senior.

I've read that there is a new extra-strength flu vaccine being offered to seniors this year. What can vou tell me about it, where can I find it, and does Medicare cover

Flu-Conscious Connie Dear Connie,

The new extra-strength flu vaccination you're inquiring about is called the Fluzone High-Dose, and it's designed specifically for seniors, age 65 years and older. Here's what you should know.

Fluzone High-Dose - Manufactured by Sanofi Pasteur Inc., the Fluzone High-Dose vaccine was approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration in December 2009, and was first made available last flu season on a limited basis.

The main difference between the Fluzone High-Dose and a regular flu shot is its potency. The High-Dose vaccine contain four times the amount of antigen (the part of the vaccine that prompts the body to make antibody) as a regular flu shot does, which creates a stronger immune response for better protection. This extra protection is particularly helpful to seniors who have weaker immune defenses and have a great risk of developing dangerous flu complications. The CDC estimates that the flu puts more than 200,000 people in the hospital each year and kills around 24,000 – 95 percent of whom are seniors.

As with all flu vaccines, Fluzone High-Dose is not recommended for seniors who are allergic to chicken eggs, or those who have had a severe reaction to a flu vaccine in the past.

To locate a vaccination site that offers the Fluzone High-Dose, ask your doctor or pharmacist, or check the online flu-shot locator at flu.gov for clinics or stores offering flu shots. Then, contact some in your area to see whether they have the High-Dose vaccine. CVS, Walgreens, Safeway, Kmart, Rite Aid and Kroger are among some of the chains offering the High-Dose shot.

Another Labor Day has come and gone

This year's Labor Day parade was the smallest one we've had since the beginning of our park.

Due to majorette Freda Willingburger's baton accident that occurred two years ago, the park insurance will no longer cover injuries sustained by parade participants. Several marchers were unaware of the baton ban and wore football helmets anyways. Incidentally, Freda's hip replacement was hardly noticeable as she gracefully led the parade with her decorated walker.

Parade bystanders were disappointed by the length of the parade. Congratulations to water aerobics instructor Bernice Catchkins for best costume. She declined her prize of one week's free use of a carpet cleaner. It was later learned that Bernice was actually on her way to the swimming pool and had forgotten all about the parade.

Afterwards everyone enjoyed the potluck banquet at the clubhouse. A special thank you goes out to whoever brought the corn off the cob dish.

Especially from those of us who wear dentures.

We realize that many of the wives in our park were used to cooking large quantities of food for their families before moving here, but 22 pounds of baked beans was more than our seniors could handle. Except for the beans, a measure of how successful the dinner was is that there were no leftovers.

We'd like to thank Ethyl Parker-

cooks? Hmmmm, I'll have to ask them. Or, are some things better left alone?

Don't worry family, I will make sure to hone up on my cooking before the holiday season. Uh oh - it's almost here. Guess I'd better get busy.

One other thing that is just an itty

bitty pet peeve.

Don't you just hate it when a car stops in front of the first gasoline pump at the station instead of pulling on up? That's not enough, oh no, they have to take their time moving.

They fill up, then they leave their car there while they go in the store to use the restroom, buy refreshments, get lotto tickets, comb their hair and put on makeup. They can see you are waiting. Isn't that aggravating? Now, you know it is - just had to get of that. that off my chest. I'm feeling better

So, let's hope that I just am having a temporary lapse of memory as it pertains to cooking and that the rest of my brain cells are as good as ever. I know, the "good" adjective here might at Brentwood Retirement Community in just be subjective as in a matter of opinion.

Depends on whom you ask. I'm sure At any rate, thanks for listening.

The prostate prognosis

Don't ignore an uncomfortable problem

Men probably don't like thinking about their prostates, but it's worth doing once in a while. Problems with the small gland are common in men past the age of 50. The good news is that most prostate conditions can be successfully treated. For men under 50, the most common prostate problem is prostatitis. It can cause a burning feeling when you urinate or an urge to urinate more often. You might have a fever or just feel tired

Prostatitis is caused by the prostate becoming inflamed or irritated: some kinds are caused by bacteria. If you have bacterial prostatitis, your doctor can spot it by looking at your urine through a microscope. Bacterial prostatitis can usually be treated with an antibiotic. But most of the time.

there's no clear cause for prostatitis. Researchers have yet to identify a clearly effective treatment when the cause is unknown. You may have to work with your doctor to find a treatment that works for you. Changing your diet or taking warm baths may age of 65 are twice as likely to die or be injured in a home fire, than those younger. For those over 75, the risk nearly triples. But with a little awareness and a few precautionary tips (see firesafety.gov), seniors can go a long way in protecting their property and themselves.

Fire Hazards While there are many possible causes of accidental home fires, the three most common among the elderly are caused by smoking, cooking and alternative heating devices. Here's a breakdown of what seniors can do to protect themselves in each of these key areas.

Smoke Safely: Careless smoking is the leading cause of home fire deaths and the second leading cause of injuries among seniors. For those who smoke it's important to remember:

- Never smoke in bed.
- Put your cigarette or cigar out at the first sign of feeling drowsy while watching television or reading.
- Don't leave your lit cigarette or cigar unattended.
- Use deep ashtrays and put your cigarettes all the way
- Consider switching to firesafe cigarettes (firesafecigarettes.org) that self-extinguish when they're not being smoked.

Cook Safely: Home cooking fires are the number one cause of fire injuries among the elderly. Tips that can help include: Never leave food cooking on a stove top unattended. When leaving the kitchen, take a wooden spoon or potholder as a reminder to turn off the oven or burners. or consider installing an automatic stove shut-off device as a safety precaution. Cookstop.com, homesensers.com, stoveguardintl.com and pioneeringtech.com sell them.

SENIOR STYLE

- Avoid wearing loose clothing with hanging sleeves when you cook and keep towels and potholders away from flames or burners.
- Never use the range or oven to heat your home.
- Double-check the kitchen before you go to bed or leave the house.

Heat Safely: Alternative heating devices like space heaters, stoves and fireplaces are another potential fire hazard for seniors. Seniors who use these devices should keep these tips in mind:

• If you use a space heater, keep anything that can burn at least three feet away and always turn it off when you leave the house or go to sleep.

Also, if you're buying a new space heater, look for one with a safety feature that automatically shuts off the power if the heater falls over.

- If you use a fireplace that burns wood, be sure you have a glass or metal screen front to catch the flying sparks and rolling logs, and have the chimney flue inspected annually and cleaned if needed.
- If you use a heating device fueled by gas, oil, wood or kerosene, purchase and install carbon monoxide detectors to alert you to potential toxic gas problems.

Home Tips: Around 75 percent of seniors who die in fires each year don't have working smoke alarms in their homes.

Seniors or caregivers should make it a priority to install smoke alarms on every level of their house outside their sleeping area, and change the batteries at least once a year.

It's also important to have an escape plan in the event of a

For seniors who are hearing impaired, companies like Silent Call (silentcall.com) and Harris Communications (harriscomm.com) sell smoke and carbon monoxide detectors that work with flashing strobe lights and bed vibrators to alert you when a problem arises.

And, there are also home smoke and fire monitoring services like ADT (adtfireprotection.com) that can alert seniors, caregivers and the fire department if a fire hap-

cle tour.

They never even owned a bicycle until they moved to Florida.

Now, on the first day of their tour, they rode 75 miles after a breakfast of Vegemite on toast. "Vegemite is like beef bullion paste," explained Nancy. "We also had beans with fresh tomatoes and bangers, which is sausage."

Their rides took them past large herds of deer being raised on farms edged with tall hedges instead of fences, seals basking on the jagged rocks along the ocean and glaciers surrounded by water that was brilliant aquamarine in color because it contained glacial liquid minerals.

One time they had to stop riding because people were herding sheep down the road.

Chris Targas, former vice president of the CSO, joined them on their most recent bicycling excursion to New Zealand.

"Stuart Island in New Zealand is the closest land mass to the Antarctic," she explained. "We saw penguins and whales. We swam with dolphins." Targas also flipped through page after page of photos and memories from her own scrapbook.

Purcell described a fascinating power plant in Te Anau, New Zealand, that is inside a mountain. "They wanted to be under the lake," he stated.

The diversity of scenery on their bicycling trip seems to have left a great impression on the riders. "They have mountains with 14,000-foot elevation that are snow-capped with ski runs. They also have redwood trees that are as big as our California redwoods. The California redwoods took 200 years to grow that big," Don explained, "but in New Zealand, they reached the same height in only 70 years, because of the climate and soil."

So Robinson took the porcelain head from one of her homemade dolls and used the face to create a mold for her first button. When it immediately sold, the Button Bytes group started spreading the word about the latest studio button maker in their midst. She now has over 400 button molds and takes all kinds of orders for custom buttons, which she makes in her at-home studio. She uses the money from her hobby to fuel her obsession.

"I make my buttons to buy more buttons," she said.

Even her husband has jumped on the button bandwagon, going with Robinson to Button Club meetings in Ocala and collecting his own buttons - mostly military and uniform buttons from the last century.

Robinson understands that it may take people a little while to understand the appeal of buttons, simply because they don't know about the vast world of unique styles and types that are out there.

"I think people are amazed that we collect buttons," she said. "When you say you collect buttons, they say, 'What? What kind? Pin buttons?' No – sewing buttons. We had an open house in Ocala, and people were amazed when they see how many buttons and what they

Because porcelain is her medium, Robinson considers porcelain buttons to be her favorite, but she also loves glass

These she donates to schools or organizations such as the Key Training Center for projects.

Robinson and her husband would love a Citrus County button club, but can't commit to starting one of their own. She said she worries about the future of button collecting as the members of Button Bytes and in her once-a-month button club in Ocala get older. She puts her faith in one of her daughters, who has a fond appreciation for her mother's massive collection,

For now, the world of button collecting is alive and well, with shows, auctions and competitions happening every month worldwide, including a two-day button auction at the Plantation Inn in Crystal River in February 2012. It's not about competition for Robinson, though. Or even about the money she makes on her custom porcelain buttons.

to Christchurch, a city on the mountainous south island to begin their three-week bicycle tour.

They never even owned a bicycle until they moved to Florida.

Now, on the first day of their tour, they rode 75 miles after a breakfast of Vegemite on toast. "Vegemite is like beef bullion paste," explained Nancy. "We also had beans with fresh tomatoes and bangers, which is sausage."

Their rides took them past large herds of deer being raised on farms edged with tall hedges instead of fences, seals basking on the jagged rocks along the ocean and glaciers surrounded by water that was brilliant aquamarine in color because it contained glacial liquid minerals.

One time they had to stop riding because people were herding sheep down the road.

Chris Targas, former vice president of the CSO, joined them on their most recent bicycling excursion to New Zealand.

"Stuart Island in New Zealand is the closest land mass to the Antarctic," she explained. "We saw penguins and whales. We swam with dolphins." Targas also flipped through page after page of photos and memories from her own scrapbook.

Purcell described a fascinating power plant in Te Anau, New Zealand, that is inside a mountain. "They wanted to be under the lake," he stated.

The diversity of scenery on their bicycling trip seems to have left a great impression on the riders. "They have mountains with 14,000-foot elevation that are snow-capped with ski runs. They also have redwood trees that are as big as our California redwoods. The California redwoods took 200 years to grow that big," Don explained, "but in New Zealand, they reached the same height in only 70 years, because of the climate and soil."

The prostate prognosis

Don't ignore an uncomfortable problem

Men probably don't like thinking about their prostates, but it's worth doing once in a while. Problems with the small gland are common in men past the age of 50. The good news is that most prostate conditions can be successfully treated. For men under 50, the most common prostate problem is prostatitis. It can cause a burning feeling when you urinate or an urge to urinate more often. You might have a fever or just feel tired

Prostatitis is caused by the prostate becoming inflamed or irritated: some kinds are caused by bacteria. If you have bacterial prostatitis, your doctor can spot it by looking at your urine through a microscope. Bacterial prostatitis can usually be treated with an antibiotic. But most of the time.

there's no clear cause for prostatitis. Researchers have yet to identify a clearly effective treatment when the cause is unknown. You may have to work with your doctor to find a treatment that works for you. Changing your diet or taking warm baths may age of 65 are twice as likely to die or be injured in a home fire, than those younger. For those over 75, the risk nearly triples. But with a little awareness and a few precautionary tips (see firesafety.gov), seniors can go a long way in protecting their property and themselves.

Fire Hazards While there are many possible causes of accidental home fires, the three most common among the elderly are caused by smoking, cooking and alternative heating devices. Here's a breakdown of what seniors can do to protect themselves in each of these key areas.

Smoke Safely: Careless smoking is the leading cause of home fire deaths and the second leading cause of injuries among seniors. For those who smoke it's important to remember:

- Never smoke in bed.
- Put your cigarette or cigar out at the first sign of feeling drowsy while watching television or reading.
- Don't leave your lit cigarette or cigar unattended.
- Use deep ashtrays and put your cigarettes all the way
- Consider switching to firesafe cigarettes (firesafecigarettes.org) that self-extinguish when they're not being smoked.

Cook Safely: Home cooking fires are the number one cause of fire injuries among the elderly. Tips that can help include: Never leave food cooking on a stove top unattended. When leaving the kitchen, take a wooden spoon or potholder as a reminder to turn off the oven or burners. or consider installing an automatic stove shut-off device as a safety precaution. Cookstop.com, homesensers.com, stoveguardintl.com and pioneeringtech.com sell them.

SENIOR STYLE

- Avoid wearing loose clothing with hanging sleeves when you cook and keep towels and potholders away from flames or burners.
- Never use the range or oven to heat your home.
- Double-check the kitchen before you go to bed or leave the house.

Heat Safely: Alternative heating devices like space heaters, stoves and fireplaces are another potential fire hazard for seniors. Seniors who use these devices should keep these tips in mind:

• If you use a space heater, keep anything that can burn at least three feet away and always turn it off when you leave the house or go to sleep.

Also, if you're buying a new space heater, look for one with a safety feature that automatically shuts off the power if the heater falls over.

- If you use a fireplace that burns wood, be sure you have a glass or metal screen front to catch the flying sparks and rolling logs, and have the chimney flue inspected annually and cleaned if needed.
- If you use a heating device fueled by gas, oil, wood or kerosene, purchase and install carbon monoxide detectors to alert you to potential toxic gas problems.

Home Tips: Around 75 percent of seniors who die in fires each year don't have working smoke alarms in their homes.

Seniors or caregivers should make it a priority to install smoke alarms on every level of their house outside their sleeping area, and change the batteries at least once a year.

It's also important to have an escape plan in the event of a

For seniors who are hearing impaired, companies like Silent Call (silentcall.com) and Harris Communications (harriscomm.com) sell smoke and carbon monoxide detectors that work with flashing strobe lights and bed vibrators to alert you when a problem arises.

And, there are also home smoke and fire monitoring services like ADT (adtfireprotection.com) that can alert seniors, caregivers and the fire department if a fire hap-

New flu vaccine provides better protection

Dear Savvy Senior.

I've read that there is a new extra-strength flu vaccine being offered to seniors this year. What can vou tell me about it, where can I find it, and does Medicare cover

Flu-Conscious Connie Dear Connie,

The new extra-strength flu vaccination you're inquiring about is called the Fluzone High-Dose, and it's designed specifically for seniors, age 65 years and older. Here's what you should know.

Fluzone High-Dose - Manufactured by Sanofi Pasteur Inc., the Fluzone High-Dose vaccine was approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration in December 2009, and was first made available last flu season on a limited basis.

The main difference between the Fluzone High-Dose and a regular flu shot is its potency. The High-Dose vaccine contain four times the amount of antigen (the part of the vaccine that prompts the body to make antibody) as a regular flu shot does, which creates a stronger immune response for better protection. This extra protection is particularly helpful to seniors who have weaker immune defenses and have a great risk of developing dangerous flu complications. The CDC estimates that the flu puts more than 200,000 people in the hospital each year and kills around 24,000 – 95 percent of whom are seniors.

As with all flu vaccines, Fluzone High-Dose is not recommended for seniors who are allergic to chicken eggs, or those who have had a severe reaction to a flu vaccine in the past.

To locate a vaccination site that offers the Fluzone High-Dose, ask your doctor or pharmacist, or check the online flu-shot locator at flu.gov for clinics or stores offering flu shots. Then, contact some in your area to see whether they have the High-Dose vaccine. CVS, Walgreens, Safeway, Kmart, Rite Aid and Kroger are among some of the chains offer-

Jim Miller SAVVY SENIOR

ing the High-Dose shot. You'll also be happy to know that if you're a Medicare beneficiary, Part B will cover 100 percent of the cost of your High-Dose vaccination. But if vou're not covered the cost is around $50 to $60 - that's about double of what you'd pay for a regular flu shot.

Pneumovax - Another important vaccination the CDC recommends to seniors - especially this time of year – is the pneumococcal polysaccharide vaccine for pneumonia and meningitis (the vaccine is called Pneumovax 23). Pneumonia causes more than 40,000 deaths in the U.S. each year, many of which could be prevented by this vaccine. If you're over age 65 and haven't already gotten this onetime-only shot, you should get it now before flu season hits. Pneumovax 23 is also covered under Medicare Part B, and you can get it on the same day you get your flu shot. If you're not covered by insurance, this vaccine costs around $75 to $85 at retail clinics.

Another Labor Day has come and gone

This year's Labor Day parade was the smallest one we've had since the beginning of our park.

Due to majorette Freda Willingburger's baton accident that occurred two years ago, the park insurance will no longer cover injuries sustained by parade participants. Several marchers were unaware of the baton ban and wore football helmets anyways. Incidentally, Freda's hip replacement was hardly noticeable as she gracefully led the parade with her decorated walker.

Parade bystanders were disappointed by the length of the parade. Congratulations to water aerobics instructor Bernice Catchkins for best costume. She declined her prize of one week's free use of a carpet cleaner. It was later learned that Bernice was actually on her way to the swimming pool and had forgotten all about the parade.

Afterwards everyone enjoyed the potluck banquet at the clubhouse. A special thank you goes out to whoever brought the corn off the cob dish.

Especially from those of us who wear dentures.

We realize that many of the wives in our park were used to cooking large quantities of food for their families before moving here, but 22 pounds of baked beans was more than our seniors could handle. Except for the beans, a measure of how successful the dinner was is that there were no leftovers.

We'd like to thank Ethyl Parker-

cooks? Hmmmm, I'll have to ask them. Or, are some things better left alone?

Don't worry family, I will make sure to hone up on my cooking before the holiday season. Uh oh - it's almost here. Guess I'd better get busy. One other thing that is just an itty

bitty pet peeve.

Don't you just hate it when a car stops in front of the first gasoline pump at the station instead of pulling on up? That's not enough, oh no, they have to take their time moving.

They fill up, then they leave their car there while they go in the store to use the restroom, buy refreshments, get lotto tickets, comb their hair and put on makeup. They can see you are waiting. Isn't that aggravating?

Now, you know it is - just had to get of that. that off my chest. I'm feeling better

So, let's hope that I just am having a temporary lapse of memory as it pertains to cooking and that the rest of my brain cells are as good as ever. I know, the "good" adjective here might at Brentwood Retirement Community in just be subjective as in a matter of opinion.

Depends on whom you ask. I'm sure At any rate, thanks for listening.

However, due to the increase in the electric bill caused by extension cords and electric blankets used for bingo night, management has re-installed a new thermostat that is now equipped with a churches. Families gathered around in the evening, after dishes were washed, to listen to the radio. Baseball was played during the day and broadcast on the radio with nothing but the announcer's voice describing the game, leaving your imagination to visualize it.

When the conversation came around to the country's financial mess, a point was made, and for the first time everyone agreed. The point being was that the only thing people bought on credit were cars and homes.

Food and gas were paid for in cash. That meant buying what you could afford to pay and need. When someone mentioned buying expensive flat-screen TVs on credit, the meeting abruptly broke because BayWatch was on. Many of us receive the newspaper that is delivered to our carports in the morning. The most recent carrier was hospitalized for trauma when a woman, who shall remain nameless, accidentally surprised him. The description given to the police was that of a tall raccoon wearing a mud pack.

This isn't the first time reports of weird sightings patrolling the park during the night and early mornings were given to the police.

So please, people, dressing comfortably for strolling is one thing, but watch what you wear. Remember, some of us use pacemakers.

Complaints were made to management of noise caused by the park maintenance crew mowing lawns. Management told the liaison committee that they were surprised by the complaints because the noise was inevitable. The committee said that the noise reported was not the normal lawn mowing noise.

The mystery was solved when a gasoline powered wheelchair was removed from the pool.

CITRUS COUNTY (FL) CHRONICLE

Can you believe Labor Day has come and gone?

Hope that means cooler weather will be upon us soon. In case you haven't noticed,

it's really, really hot.

Now that we've established that, I'm thinking there are more important things to talk about than the weather. For instance, there's me. Yep, let's talk about me some more.

I'm really concerned about me. Why, you might ask? Here goes.

A few days before Labor Day I sort of found myself hungry for pigs in a blanket.

Why I was hungry for such culinary delights, I couldn't tell you. I just was.

Now mind you, I've probably only made this difficult (yea, right) dish about three times in my entire life and I'm sure when I did make them, I made them for important holidays such as Thanksgiving or Christmas.

I asked my husband if he would like a few of these delicious appetizers. To that question, he replied, "I don't think so." Anyway, I decided since I was the one hungry for them, I would actually turn on the stove (I do remember this is the first step to actually cooking) and cook them myself.

However, before turning on the stove I thought it best for me to purchase the ingredients and, in order to do that, I should think about what the ingredients actually are.

Of course, everyone knows for this delicious dish you only need two ingredients (unless you want to add cheese). The first ingredient is cocktail sausages (or cocktail weiners as they are commonly called). Sausages do sound more sophisticated and Lord knows we are a sophisticated group. I know, I'm digressing here.

SENIOR STYLE

So, the sausages are the first and one of the most important two main ingredients.

Then I would need dough. The dough part led to a discussion with my husband, and I'm not kidding, as to what kind of dough. I knew it was a type of dough that could be found in the refrigerator section of the grocery store, but, honestly, my husband said it was the canned biscuit variety. As with all things that I can't remember these days, I go to the computer and find the recipe I'm looking for and, of course, then it's all coming back to me. Crescent rolls, that's it. So, I need cocktail sausages and crescent rolls.

Now I'm ready. As I started cutting the dough into thirds, I realize once again that I don't have a clue as to how to make food look good. It's a challenge for me just to make it taste good. I only purchased one can of dough and one package of sausages Do you know that makes about 1.000 pigs in a blanket? I'm going to remember that when I'm purchasing my hur-LET'S TALK ricane stash next the appetizers were cooked. As it turns out. I wasn't as hungry for them as I thought and since my husband wasn't hungry for them at all. I figure at two a day, I should be finished with them some time around the next millennium. My point is, how could it possibly have taken so much effort to remember exactly how to cook an appetizer with two ingredients?

Now ya'll, I really can cook. Just not a bunch of extra stuff. I know good old home cooking. Yes, my husband does do most of the cooking and I do appreciate it. I did cook a lot when those two big old boys of mine were growing up. I just want you to know that. Although, I've often wondered what my sons would answer if asked about their favorite dish their mother
