Florida sues DHS over purge of voter rolls

TALLAHASSEE — Florida on Monday sued the U.S. Department of Homeland Security to gain access to a federal database in the state's ongoing effort to purge ineligible voters from its statewide voter registration rolls.

Florida Secretary of State Ken Detzner filed the request for declaratory judgment in an effort to force the federal agency to share citizenship information in what has been an ongoing feud between the Republican-controlled state and the Obama administration over efforts to remove those who are ineligible from the list of more than 11 million registered voters.

Detzner said the state has been trying for months to gain access to DHS's Systematic Alien Verification for Entitlements Program database, which tracks citizenship and alien status.

The suit, filed in federal court in the District of Columbia, says the state has the statutory right to access the database.

It is the latest turn in a dust-up over recent Republican-backed efforts to review the legal status of Florida voters in preparation for the 2012 election cycle. The Department of Justice has warned Florida officials the exercise may violate federal election laws.

In the past few days, the Division of Elections released a list of the names of 86 voters it said have been removed by local supervisors because they were non-citizens between April 11 and June 8. About half of them are listed as having voted.

That, backers of the purge effort said, proves the need for the move, because it shows that some non-citizens have indeed registered and cast votes.

Opponents of the purge have criticized it as too broad-brushed, and note 86 voters would only be about one-third of one percent of all those on the list sent to supervisors.

Feds back merger of Duke, Progress

Companies receive conditional approval; Carolinas still to weigh in

MIKE WRIGHT
Staff Writer

CRYSTAL RIVER — It was the news John Siefert wanted to hear.

The Citrus County Economic Development Council director was all smiles after word that federal regulators have given conditional approval for the mega-merger of Duke Energy and Progress Energy.

The merger, Siefert believes, will pump much-needed capital for Progress' efforts to repair its ailing nuclear plant near Crystal River and build two new plants in Levy County.

"Duke Power brings deep pockets," Siefert said. "They're a much larger company than Progress Energy. They have more resources and more expertise in the field. It's a positive thing for Citrus County and Florida to have this merger occur."

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission gave conditional approval on Friday after concerns the merger would reduce competition were assuaged.

Regulatory approval must still come from North Carolina and South Carolina. A joint statement issued by Duke and Progress on Monday said they have targeted July 1 to close on the merger.

The merger would create the largest electric utility in the United States, serving about 7 million customers in North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Indiana, Kentucky and Ohio.

And it could have a significant impact locally.

The Crystal River nuclear plant has been offline since 2009. Workers cut a hole in the containment wall to replace aged steam generators, and in doing so found a crack in the wall.

Workers repaired that crack, but another crack was discovered.

Progress officials estimate the cost of repairs is between $900 million and $1.3 billion.

Progress Energy spokesman Scott Sutton said it's too soon to say what effect the merger would have on making repairs to the plant or moving forward on plans for two new nuclear plants in Levy County near Inglis.

Citrus Park Mobile Home Park residents Kim Torkelson, Robert Lonergan, William Pyke, Glenn Bakkila and Deborah Betts have been battling with the owners of what remains of the Homosassa mobile home park they have all called home. Citrus Park LLC has issued them eviction notices and the time is halfway up for the residents to move. The residents are waiting for $1,375 checks to be able to find another place to live.

Mobile-home owners immobilized; tenants say they need upfront payment to move out

CHRIS VAN ORMER

Residents evicted from a Homosassa mobile home park are stuck: The park owner has offered to pay them $1,375 each for their abandoned homes when they move out, but they can't afford to move anywhere until they receive the $1,375.

"There's actually about seven of us still here," said Kim Torkelson, a resident of Citrus Mobile Home Park on U.S. 19, just north of the RaceTrac filling station. "None of us have gotten the money that we have been promised."

Resident John Betts said former residents who lived in mobile homes in part of the park where a Dollar General store will be built were dealt with quickly.

"They got their check and within 30 days they were gone," Betts said. "We've been trying to contact the owners and are not getting a reply."

The residents — Torkelson, Betts and his wife Deborah, Robert Lonergan, William Pyke and Glenn Bakkila — met with the Chronicle last week. They live amid a mass of partially demolished mobile homes, overgrown landscaping and a maze of garden hoses that service their household water needs. What's worse, residents said, is the site clearance on half the park is exposing septic services.

According to Lonergan, a mobile home park has stood on the site since 1938. Based on 2009 U.S. Census data, Citrus County has 17,212 mobile homes.

INVERNESS — The issue of standardized state testing comes front and center Tuesday as Citrus County School Board members are expected to discuss whether to join a growing segment of school districts wanting change.

Board members Pat Deutschman and Thomas Kennedy are urging parents and students with concerns about the Florida Comprehensive Assessment Test or other standardized tests to attend the meeting for the public comment section at 6 p.m.

Deutschman said last week she would ask board members to approve a resolution asking Gov. Rick Scott and the Legislature to reconsider the testing process that, in many cases, determines whether a student passes or fails a class based on one end-of-year exam.

At least eight school districts have approved the resolution. One, the Hernando County School Board, agreed with the concept but wanted to draft its own resolution, Deutschman said.

Shawn Kersh: Father, physician, mentor and friend

Special to the Chronicle

Shawn Kersh, local physician and Pop Warner football coach for the Inverness Storm, died May 25. He was 41.

NANCY KENNEDY
Staff Writer

INVERNESS — Anyone who knew Shawn Kersh knew he loved two things: his family and football.

As a coach for the Inverness Storm Pop Warner football league, he was able to combine both teaching and coaching his son Brycen and his teammates, infusing them with the love of the game and the values of teamwork and playing with honor and fairness.

In the other half of his life, Shawn was a dedicated family practice physician, both as a partner in private practice at Inverness Family Care and as a physician for the county school board employees at Citrus County Health and Wellness Center.

Postscript

Shawn Kersh died May 25 at his home in Inverness after a sudden illness. The father of three was 41.

At his memorial service, Cornerstone Baptist Church was filled with young boys in Inverness Storm jerseys, lining up to pay tribute to their fallen hero.

"Coaching was the ultimate thing to Shawn; it was his relaxing time," said fellow coach Bert Webber. "He taught me everything about football. I got into coaching because of him, because of how he loved the kids."

Jim Bergman, fellow coach and Shawn's best friend, said the kids played their best because they believed in Shawn and wanted to please him. He inspired the players — and he inspired the other coaches.

"We took a team that was 2 and 6 and turned them around to a 6-and-2 team to play in the Mighty Mite Bowl," Bergman said. "We tied, which was a win to us, and it was due to Shawn."

"He took me under his wing and mentored me. He made me his defensive coach and I became obsessed with it," he said. "He was everything you could want in a best friend."

Bergman said Shawn was the example of the "most loving father" he had ever met. "His kids idolize him — my kids idolize him. The family values he held are hard to find these days."

And the Florida School Board Association is expected to discuss the issue further when it meets Wednesday in Tampa.

Many educators say FCAT and end-of-course exams place too much emphasis on a single test for pass or failure. Third-graders must pass the FCAT to advance to the fourth grade. High school students must pass the FCAT to graduate. And students in many cases must repeat courses to receive credit if they fail end-of-course exams.

Kennedy, writing on his blog, www.thomastalks.oncitrustcountyschools.com, said he supports standardized testing to measure a student's academic strengths and weaknesses.

He said FCAT and end-of-course exams don't do that.

"At the elementary level a single high stakes test taken on a single day should not be the sole determining factor in deciding a student's total year's academic progress," he wrote. "I am against a single high stakes test crushing a young student's learning and future dreams."

school board member, writing on his blog about the role standardized testing plays in primary and secondary education.

The meeting begins at 3 p.m.; however, the board meeting room will be closed to the public at 3:05 p.m. for an attorney-client session. That is expected to end around 4 p.m. and the public comment portion is set for 6 p.m.

"It's a timely issue," Deutschman said. "There is a lot of stuff written about it. The resolution is not as important as understanding the concerns of parents, teachers and students."

Bergman added that wherever Shawn was, fun followed — golfing trips, races in Daytona, Blizzard Beach, birthday parties.

Barbecues — Shawn was the self-appointed barbecue king and once cooked 90 slabs of ribs in one day for an Inverness Storm event.

"I loved eating his ribs," Webber said.

As a doctor, Shawn was personable, caring, compassionate and kind, according to comments left at his online obituary guest book. His patients noted that he listened to them, a valued attribute.

To Karin, his wife of nearly 20 years, and to his children Jordan, 15, Camrin, 13 and Brycen, 9, Shawn was everything.

He was the family cook — chicken parmesan, étouffée and other Cajun dishes, steak and cheese sandwiches with French dip sauce. He cheered his daughters' cheerleading routines as well as his son's football plays. He loved Louisiana State University because that's his daughter Jordan's favorite team. He loved shopping with daughter Camrin and playing golf with her.

A week before he died, he taught Camrin to drive while on a family trip to Oklahoma.

"He kept saying, 'Camrin, slow down!' and then he just said, 'You're just like me;'

you want to go too fast,'" she said.

Camrin was her dad's "mini me."

Shawn and Karin met while in high school. They grew up in a small town in Oklahoma. She was 15; he was a few years older.

"On my 16th birthday he gave me 16 roses," she said.

"On my 17th birthday, 17 roses." After a few years he had to stop, she said, but that's the kind of person he was, always thinking of things like that to make special days more special.

On their first date, they went to a movie and dinner and were inseparable after that. They married right after Karin graduated high school and then left together for college in Ohio.

After medical school in Tulsa and another year in Ohio, Shawn and Karin came to Florida, first to St. Petersburg for a two-year residency and then to Inverness 10 years ago.

It reminded them of home.

Shawn Kersh loved Jimmy Buffett songs and National Lampoon's

"Christmas Vacation." When he was home, the TV was tuned to "SportsCenter."

At 16 he built a car with his dad, a Dodge Challenger. He went to Wendy's every day for "unsweet tea." He got seasick while fishing.

Every year he drove the family to Oklahoma for Christmas. They vacationed at Atlantis and at the beach at St. George Island.

"That's one of my best memories," Karin Kersh said, "just sitting at the beach house, going from the pool to the beach, just hanging out as a family."

She said her son Brycen recently asked, "Who's going to be my offensive coordinator?" Then he answered himself, "My dad's already taught me to play; I can teach it, too."

"Shawn was a wise investor," said the Rev. Greg Kell at Shawn's memorial service. "His life was about investing — in the lives of others and in his community."

Development code rewrite up for approval

New provision would benefit agricultural producers, allowing division of property for lineal descent

CHRIS VAN ORMER
Staff Writer

Owners of large land parcels once again will be able to subdivide their property among family members for their own homes without being limited by density rules.

"This new provision deals with subdividing for lineal descent," said Jenette Collins, director of the county's Land Development Division, speaking Monday at the Agricultural Alliance of Citrus County.

The provision is part of the Land Development Code (LDC) rewrite that today will go before the Citrus County Board of County Commissioners (BOCC) for adoption.

Ranchers, farmers and other agricultural producers often operate their industry from large tracts of land. Some would like to give some acreage to family members as sites for their own houses. However, landowners risk running afoul of zoning density restrictions within the county's Comprehensive Plan.

Collins said the new LDC offers several exemptions. The restrictions had been set in place because of issues not only of density but of access.

"Our county many years back did have this provision in place," Collins said. "Unfortunately, it was used as a loophole to build a lot of subdivisions without any infrastructure in them. What happens in an emergency situation is you can't get emergency vehicles in there. You build it for the family, but through the years people aren't maintaining roadways and it ends up being a critical situation."

These issues caused the county to discontinue subdivisions for lineal descent, a term that refers to many types of kinship, from step-grandparents to grandchildren. Although it has returned the lineal descent provision to the LDC, it is a one-time deal, Collins said.

"You can do a one-time subdivision for lineal descent and you don't have to meet the density standard," Collins said. "You can subdivide your parcel out to your child and it doesn't have to meet that one-unit per 10-acre density standard."

Access regulations will still apply.

"We made sure we'll still have legal access to the lot so you aren't arbitrarily creating a parcel out in the middle of nowhere that would be a nightmare to somebody later on because there is no access," Collins said.

The lot would have to be recognized for access processes and recorded. Once the LDC is adopted, the county would start accepting subdivision applications under those provisions to recognize those types of lots. But such a subdivision would apply only once to an individual.

"In my case, I've got a busload of kids and they are all different ages," said Floral City cattle producer Jimmy Brooks. "I would have to convey a piece of property to a minor."

Terri Hartman, a Floral City

farmer, said land owners need to be aware of the provision and plan accordingly.

"Creating the lot could take the frontage away that would take away ever being able to develop the rest of it," Hartman said.

Fire destroys home; no injuries reported

An early-morning fire on Sunday consumed a mobile home at 5605 S. Sandalwood Way, Floral City.

Citrus County Sheriff's Office Fire Rescue Division responded to a report at 2:35 a.m., and a fire vehicle from Floral City was on the scene within 17 minutes, when the mobile home was found to be fully involved.

Additional vehicles from Inverness, South Kensington Avenue, Connell Heights, Beverly Hills and Pine Ridge provided assistance and shuttled water since the area lacks fire hydrants.

No one was injured; the mobile home was vacant. Damage to the home, owned by Joy Hays, was estimated at $32,000 for the structure and $8,000 for contents. The State Fire Marshal's Office is investigating.

Mall makeover

MATTHEW BECK/Chronicle

Thanks to a new owner, the Crystal River Mall will soon undergo improvements.

Revitalizing image, making repairs top priority of new general manager

SHEMIR WILES
Staff Writer

CRYSTAL RIVER — Making repairs and revitalizing the image of the Crystal River Mall is the highest priority of the new general manager Millie Bresnahan.

Bresnahan started her new job last week. However, she quickly added, there is a whole staff of people working inside the mall to make the changes necessary to breathe life back into the long-time landmark.

In March, Mike Kohen of Crystal River Mall Realty Management LLC purchased the mall for $3 million from Boxer Retail, the Dallas-based receiver that took over management of the mall last year. Boxer took over after the mall had been in foreclosure since February 2011. The previous owner, Simon Property LLC, stopped making mortgage payments to the mortgage holder, Wells Fargo of Minnesota.

Since new ownership has been in place, Bresnahan said much work has gone into looking for local businesses that may want to move into the mall. In addition, the mall has been hosting a number of events to draw people back to the shopping center.

Jenny Arcadipane, who with her husband, Angelo, owns FS Music across from Radio Shack in the mall, said for people who love live entertainment, there is always something going on in the mall during the weekend. For example, Arcadipane said, Friday, July 27, the mall will be hosting a tribute to American Bandstand. People are encouraged to dress up in clothing from their favorite era and enjoy dancing and live music.

"You make something with what you've got," she said.

A series of repairs and cosmetic projects have taken place to give the mall a fresher look. Bresnahan said additional roof work will be done in the future, along with work on the mall's air conditioning unit.

But even with all the remodeling, Arcadipane said what's crucial right now for the mall is getting people to come shop.

About 260 people are employed at the mall. Some are business owners; some have been there for 20 years. Foot traffic is important when trying to appeal to businesses to lease space; therefore, the mall needs the community's support, Bresnahan said.

The future of the mall has yet to be defined. With rumors swirling of it possibly becoming an outlet mall, Bresnahan said right now the emphasis is on leasing and having the community embrace it again.

"We're still waiting for stores," Arcadipane said. "It's like a waiting game."

To get the stores people want, there has to be a presence. And the owner, she said, is willing to negotiate with stores and do what it takes to bring business.

Kohen purchased it, so he has a vested interest in wanting to see the mall succeed. He's aggressive, Bresnahan said.

Bresnahan said she wants to keep the current tenants happy, as well as the local business community, because they have been supportive through the transition.

"We believe we are going to be successful," she said.

For more information about events or leasing information, call the Crystal River Mall management office at 352-795-2585.

Use caution with release of personal information on Facebook

Be aware of social site's privacy settings

BUSTER THOMPSON
Chronicle Intern

Facebook is your life in a nutshell, or better yet, in a computer.

The risk of having the majority of your existence on the Internet is having it accessible to people you don't want seeing it.

Since the dawn of Facebook, Mark Bury, 33, of Crystal River, has been a user of the social networking giant, but also realizes the threat it poses for its users.

"People don't realize it," Bury said when asked about how easily information can be gathered. "You can pass someone on the street, recognize them from their photo and know more about them without physically meeting them."

For many teenagers eager to acquire a job, Facebook has become a source of first impressions for potential employers.

Bury recommends to all potential job applicants using Facebook to "make sure your cover and profile pictures aren't photos of you drinking large amounts of alcohol or doing something illegal."

Facebook users can switch their account and privacy settings at any time by clicking on the top right arrow next to the "home" tab. Clicking on the privacy tab allows users to change how people can search and view their Facebook account.

Instead of selecting the "public" option button, users can select the "friends" button, which allows only accepted friends to view profiles and pictures. This is the recommended option.

More specific settings can be chosen from this page. Users can even permit a selected amount of friends to see their account.

Facebook does give the user the ability to change their privacy settings, but it's up to the user to be responsible and take advantage of those abilities.

Monitor children's computer usage

The Florida Department of Law Enforcement is asking for the public's assistance in keeping Florida's children safe from online predators.

This month, children across the state have begun their summer vacations, and now have ample amounts of free time. Some of this free time will likely be spent on the computer. With this in mind, FDLE is asking for parents and guardians to open a dialogue with their children about computer safety.

In 2011, law enforcement in Florida arrested over 1,200 individuals who attempted to victimize children through use of the internet.

Over the next three months, FDLE will be placing weekly tips on its Facebook page at Facebook.com/FDLE. The tips are designed to educate and provide tools the public can use to protect their children and enhance their own computer safety.

Online child victimization is becoming more prevalent as technology changes, so it is paramount that law enforcement and the public work together to keep children safe.

Fla. gets divided opinions on self-defense laws

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Nearly 6,600 emails gathered by a task force looking into Florida's self-defense laws have been filled with passionate responses to the Trayvon Martin shooting as well as caustic criticisms of the Republican-controlled state government and of those who called for the arrest of George Zimmerman.

Gov. Rick Scott set up the task force, which will hold its first public hearing Tuesday in central Florida close to where neighborhood watch volunteer Zimmerman shot and killed the unarmed teenager in February. The 28-year-old has been both vilified and defended by people across the nation for his actions.

Zimmerman said after the shooting and since that he acted in self-defense and police in Sanford did not arrest him. But after weeks of protests, he was charged with second-degree murder and is back in jail because a judge revoked his bond. The shooting set off an intense national debate about self-defense laws, race and other matters, which were reflected in many of the emails sent by people from California to New York and the nation's heartland.

Florida passed the "stand your ground law" seven years ago. It allows use of deadly force to prevent "imminent death or great bodily harm," and it removed a person's duty to retreat in the face of such peril that was required in a previous self-defense law.

Many of the emails call on Florida to either keep the law as it is — or to repeal the "stand your ground" part. Those who oppose to the law called Florida a dangerous place to visit.

"Please repeal this terrible law that allows murderers to walk free," wrote Austin Doyle, who lives in the Panhandle. "Christians shouldn't be carrying guns everywhere they go."

John Smith, who lives in the central Florida retirement community of The Villages, argued that Zimmerman's case was not covered by the "stand your ground" law since he had been following Martin the night of the shooting.

"Please leave the law as it is, or at most, better define what 'stand your ground' means," wrote Smith.

"It's a bit premature to make definitive statements one way or another," Sutton said.

He added: "We do believe being a larger company brings benefits to our ability to access capital markets and access the type of money needed to fund these types of projects. As we look toward building new power plants ... it's going to take an enormous amount of money. The larger we are, the easier access we will have to that money at lower interest rates."

Duke, headquartered in Charlotte, N.C., would take the corporate name. Duke stock, Sutton said.

He said the merger would eliminate about 1,800 jobs, mostly in the corporate offices. He said the two companies combined would have about 30,000 employees.

State BRIEFSTolls increase along Fla. turnpike

MIAMI — Get ready to pay a little more if you use Florida's Turnpike or the Sawgrass Expressway.

Tolls are set to rise at 6 a.m. on Sunday, June 24.

Across South Florida, the increase will be at least 25 cents — even with a SunPass. Cash drivers will pay $1.25 instead of $1 and SunPass users will see tolls increase from 75 cents to $1. Along Alligator Alley, the toll will increase from $2.50 to $3 in cash and from $2 to $2.75 with a SunPass.

The Miami Herald reported the increase stems from a law passed five years ago that lets the Florida Department of Transportation link tolls it collects to the consumer price index.

Officials said tolls on I-95 or the Miami-Dade Expressway Authority highways are not affected.

TSA to allow private screeners

ORLANDO — The Transportation Security Administration will allow Orlando Sanford International Airport to opt out of using only federal agents for security screening.

The TSA made the announcement Monday, which will allow the airport to go forward with changing to private security operations under federal supervision. The agency previously denied Sanford's application.

The airport is expected to consider a pair of new screening models. In one, a private screening services operator is contracted by TSA. In another the airport itself would compete for the contract with TSA while retaining a private vendor to assist. In both situations TSA would still be able to set standards, approve the private contractors and provide oversight.

Currently, only 16 of the nation's airports have opted out of using only TSA agents.

RESIDENTS' SAFETY

Questions linger after ALF fires

Recent fires at Highland Terrace Assisted Living Facility in Inverness are troubling on several levels. They began during very early morning hours, one in a first-floor maintenance room and the other, 10 days later, in a second-floor storage room. It's fortunate that neither devolved into a loss-of-life event.

Both fires were determined by the Florida Fire Marshal's Office to be arson. A patient services assistant at Highland Terrace has been charged in the incidents.

When the arrest was made, Highland Terrace's residence director issued a statement noting that employee screening is rigorous, and that the individual charged in the case had cleared all background checks. While he is "pleased that it appears this matter has been solved," there is a lingering concern about safety.

Highland Terrace residents had to be evacuated. This wouldn't be a pleasant experience for those who are ambulatory and in good health, so imagine how difficult it was for assisted living facility residents — and their caretakers.

Highland Terrace says it will continue providing services for residents during remodeling and repair, and it anticipates welcoming residents back later in June.

THE ISSUE:

Fires at Highland Terrace ALF.

OUR OPINION:

Management needs to improve protocols.

Too much tech

Do we have a sheriff's agency or a paramilitary group? We are a county of 140,000 people — a rural community. we have three aircraft, two armored personnel carriers, a hefty SWAT team, photographers who go out on police operations. Here for a sheriff's agency, we have 10 captains. A county of this size usually has one, maybe two. What is going on here? What are we being protected from? Who are we going to fight a major battle with? I don't understand this.

Scorpion trouble

Does anybody know how to get rid of scorpions in the house? I've spent so much money on all the bug, pest control things that are around here and I still got them and they're biting me and I've got all kinds of little round balls under my skin that hurt like heck. If there's anybody who knows any way of getting rid of scorpions, please put something in the paper about it.

Thanks, Mr. Harman

This is a big heartfelt thank-you to Mr. Carl Harman, my angel in human form. He came to my rescue, a complete stranger to me, and I am so grateful to him. Again, thank you, Mr. Harman. I am doing great now, Linda.

Romney: A question of depth

Think of Dwight Eisenhower and leadership comes to mind. Barry Goldwater was unflinching in his principles. Ronald Reagan had good humor. Gerald Ford was down-to-earth decent. George H.W. Bush personified competence. John McCain's name stands for valor.

Mindful that Mitt Romney might become our president, I have been trying to find some such admirable trait in him.

But it's mission impossible. He's the shallowest contender since Warren G. Harding.

Fidelity to principle is not for him. Neither is courage under fire.

Consider Romney's flip-flops on health care and Planned Parenthood, his selection of foreign policy advisers so tilted to the far right that they alarm Colin Powell, and the extremist Robert Bork becoming co-chair of his judicial advisory committee.

Romney's only apparent commitment is to saying whatever it will take to keep the tea party in line and win the election.

Or, in some cases, to not saying.

Former schoolmates described Romney having led them in assault and battery on a boy they thought to be gay, forcibly restraining him and cutting his hair, but the man who would be president claimed to not remember the incident. Somehow, everyone else could. Grown men can be forgiven for having been childhood bullies, but only if confession comes first. It's about character.

FLORIDA VOICES

the president has to spend at least three years working in business" to qualify for election.

If he really means to put such self-serving trivia into the Constitution, he is not to be trusted with protecting and defending it.

More likely, though, he simply said what popped into his head without thinking about it. Business is his experience, apart from the moderate governorship he seems to want everyone to forget.

But what he said was absurd.

Before going into politics, Teddy Roosevelt made his living by writing. He was never in business. Ford and Abraham Lincoln, like Obama, practiced law.

Lincoln's two business ventures failed after a total of two years. Harry Truman's haberdashery went bankrupt.

Eisenhower and Franklin D. Roosevelt won World War II. They were never in business, either.

Reagan was an actor.

On the other hand, Harding and Herbert Hoover were businessmen. Their presidencies are considered colossal failures.

George W. Bush owed his business success to the taxpayers of Arlington, Texas, who built him a baseball stadium. As president, his wars and other policies cost the country $5 trillion that remain to successors to pay for. Some example.

It's obvious from history that business experience is not essential to a successful presidency. By no means does it guarantee one.

In Romney's case, there's no doubt that he was successful in business, but for what purpose? It was solely to make money for Bain Capital and its investors. Any jobs that were created were in furtherance of that, but so were the layoffs that resulted. Romney can't take credit for some without accepting responsibility for all.

And that's what distinguishes business, so importantly, from government.

The purpose of business is to make a profit. The purpose of government is to protect and serve the people. There is no place for profit in it. And there is no place for people who can't tell one from the other.

LETTERS to the Editor

Take a stand

The arrogance and disdain for citizens the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service continues to demonstrate by its actions and policies is appalling!

Lets go through the laundry list:

1. Should it be seeking to add to its already 31,000 acres which it currently owns or have control of when it is unable to budget or provide more than three officers to enforce its myriad of rules and regulations?

2. Should it spend $15 million to create 16 new federal jobs, which will be a continued tax burden on the taxpayer forever? That's almost a million dollars per job in creation costs. It's my guess that the salary/benefit package afforded these employees far exceeds Joe Citizen's average wage/benefits here in Citrus County, who has to pay USFWS salaries/benefits.

3. Can we afford the operational costs of the next study and new data, when the social needs of so many are a stake and existing public lands and water bodies are in need of investment. Couldn't it get permission to go on private land?

4. Should USFWL replace its offices in Crystal River with a new structure when it already relies on the labor and fundraising from the private sector through the Friends of Chassahowitzka (or CRNWR) to operate the Homosassa Wildlife Park and the Three Sisters property. This goes without mentioning that it is building a new home while the taxpayer maybe losing his.

Spending on flying

Re: "All the facts," Letter to the Editor, May 28.

Thank you for the response to my letter. I appreciate your input and outline regarding the mission of the 89th Airlift Wing.

I do not profess to know the workings of the Air Force, but the establishment of the 305th and 306th Expeditionary Airlift Squadron for the sole purpose of transporting individuals and/or groups from now until the election seems extravagant. Whether it's a Democratic or Republican incumbent is not the question. It is a question of who flies at the taxpayer expense.

You say the federal regulations have requirements for reimbursement when travel is for campaign events. Does it take this many planes and personnel to accomplish this task? Who pays the reimbursement, and to whom? With the excess spending and our debt, shouldn't there be some curtailment of this type of outlandish expense on the part of politicians? Obama is the president and he calls for all of us to help reduce spending. Well?

Fed report: Great Recession wiped out 18 years' growth in families' net worths

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Great Recession shrank Americans' wealth so much that in 2010 median family net worth was no more than it had been in 1992 after adjusting for inflation, the Federal Reserve reported Monday.

Median net worth declined from $126,400 in 2007 to $77,300 in 2010, a Fed survey of family finances found. The median marks the point where half had more and half had less. The recession officially began in December 2007 and ended in June 2009.

Net worth is the value of assets like homes, bank accounts and stocks, minus debts like mortgages and credit cards.

The Fed's findings are in its latest Survey of Consumer Finances, a comprehensive review of household finances that the Fed has done every three years dating to 1989.

The Fed's survey of consumer finances contains information only through 2010. A separate survey the Fed released last week showed that total family net worth climbed 4.7 percent in the January-March quarter to $62.9 trillion, about 28 percent above its recession low. The increase was fueled by stock market gains.

Those gains put net worth about 5 percent below its pre-recession peak of $66 trillion. But since the first quarter ended, lower stock prices have eroded some household wealth.

The Fed's more detailed Survey of Consumer Finances is done every three years. The latest survey showed Monday that much of the drop in net worth from 2007 to 2010 reflected the collapse of the housing market, which drove down home values.

Among families that owned homes, the Fed survey found that their median home equity declined from $95,300 in 2007 to $55,000 in 2010, a drop of 42.3 percent. Home equity is the home's value minus how much is owed on the mortgage.

The Fed survey found median incomes fell from $49,600 in 2007 to $45,800 in 2010, a drop of 7.7 percent.

The Fed survey found that the proportion of families carrying a credit card balance fell to 39.4 percent in 2010. That was down 6.7 percentage points from 2007. Among families with a credit card balance, the median balance fell from $3,100 in 2007 to $2,600 in 2010, a drop of 16.1 percent.

The proportion of families with debt that had a debt payment that was late by 60 or more days during 2010 rose to 10.8 percent, up from 7.1 percent in 2007.

Feds plan to sue over voter purge

TALLAHASSEE — The U.S. Department of Justice is suing Florida to stop its push to remove ineligible voters from the voter rolls.

The federal agency on Monday announced its intention to sue the state. It comes the same day that Florida announced it was suing a different federal agency over the voter purge.

Florida came up with a list that shows that as many as 182,000 registered voters may not be U.S. citizens. Election supervisors have been asked to check a much smaller list.

State officials have been seeking access to a federal immigration database to verify the matches. But that request has been turned down by the U.S. Department of Homeland Security so Florida is now suing to gain access.

Federal officials, however, contend the purge violates federal voting laws.

Cops: Shop owner fatally shoots intruder

NEW PORT RICHEY — Authorities are investigating after they said a business owner fatally shot a suspect and former customer who tried to rob his store.

Pasco County Sheriff's deputies said Jacob Sanborn tried to break into a coin dealership in New Port Richey Sunday morning. Sanborn allegedly stabbed store owner Wayne Justice, but Justice was able to shoot 25-year-old Sanborn once in the chest. Sanborn collapsed outside the store and was pronounced dead at a hospital.

Deputies said Sanborn had been a previous customer at the store.

The case will be reviewed by the state attorney's office, but no charges are expected at this time.

The store owner's injuries are not life-threatening.

Astronomers say they've found oldest galaxy

Associated Press

HONOLULU — A team of Japanese astronomers using telescopes on Hawaii say they've seen the oldest galaxy, a discovery that's competing with other "earliest galaxy" claims.

The Japanese team calculates its galaxy was formed 12.91 billion light-years ago, and their research will be published in the Astrophysical Journal. The scientists with the National Astronomical Observatory of Japan used the Subaru and Keck telescopes on the summit of Mauna Kea.

A light-year is the distance that light travels in a year, about 6 trillion miles. Seeing distant galaxies is akin to looking back in time.

Richard Ellis of the California Institute of Technology, an influential expert in cosmology and galaxy formation, said the latest work as more convincing than some other galaxy discoveries.

The team calculates its galaxy was formed 12.91 billion light-years ago. ... A light-year is the distance light travels in a year, about 6 trillion miles. Seeing distant galaxies is akin to looking back in time.

He said the Japanese claim is more "watertight," using methods everyone can agree on. But he said it's not much of a change from a similar finding by the same team last year.

Still, "it's the most distant bullet-proof one that everybody believes," Ellis said.

In 2010, a French team using NASA's Hubble Space Telescope claimed to have discovered a galaxy from 13.1 billion light-years ago and last year a California team using Hubble said they saw a galaxy from 13.2 billion light-years ago. Both Hubble teams published findings in the journal Nature.

However, the two Hubble teams have yet to confirm their findings with other methods, said Ellis. Also, a team of Arizona State University astronomers this month claimed to have found a galaxy from 13 billion light-years away. They used a telescope in Chile.

Current theory holds that the universe was born of an explosion, called the Big Bang, about 13.7 billion years ago. Astronomers using the most powerful telescopes available are peering deeper into that dawn of the universe.

Task force gets report on higher ed

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Two veteran faculty members cautioned a newly formed task force on Monday against changing the state's higher education system simply because a businessman — in this case, Gov. Rick Scott — believes it needs to show more value.

Scott has been at odds with state university officials and faculty on issues ranging from tuition to course offerings and tenure. The Republican has made job creation the centerpiece of his campaign and administration and appointed the task force last month to look at making Florida's higher education system more efficient, transparent and accountable.

"The idea that you can reduce all values to economic value is not only not silly, it's dangerous," said Roy Weatherford, professor emeritus of philosophy at the University of South Florida. "The idea that the kind of management that works to maximize profits is the same kind of management that would maximize knowledge — that's just false."

Tom Auxter, a University of Florida professor and president of the United Faculty of Florida, warned the board about tinkering with the tenure system.

"The fastest way to change us into a regional university is to abolish tenure," Auxter said. "You invest in your faculty, you develop your faculty."

Auxter told the panel that Florida's economy depends too greatly on housing development construction, tourism and agriculture, all vulnerable in recessionary times.

"The way to get out of Florida's economic mess is precisely through the university system," Auxter said. "North Carolina proved that this is the way to do it. You can spawn new and innovative ways in order to create industry and create economic activity in the state instead of just those three that we've been depending on."

Scott bucked university officials and lawmakers earlier this spring by vetoing a bill that would have let the state's top two research schools charge higher tuition rates to pay for quality improvements. He also signed a bill immediately creating Florida Polytechnic University out of the University of South Florida's Lakeland branch instead of adopting a step-by-step process approved by the Board of Governors.

The panel also heard from some familiar voices.

State University System Chancellor Frank Brogan said that recent cuts in state support dramatically exceeds what the schools are able to make up financially, even if they raise tuition by the maximum 15 percent allowed by law. He said the state's public universities would raise roughly $100 million if all boosted their tuition by the 15 percent maximum. Lawmakers have slashed spending for higher education by roughly $300 million in recent years.

And Brogan noted that Florida's existing 11 public universities are growing at a rate of 2 percent to 3 percent annually.

BILLINGS, Mont. — A West Virginia man who told authorities he was hitchhiking across the country and writing a memoir about kindness was injured in a seemingly random drive-by shooting near Montana's booming Bakken oil patch.

Mubarak's health deteriorates

CAIRO — Hosni Mubarak's health worsened Monday, with doctors twice having to use a defibrillator on the imprisoned former leader, adding to the tumult in Egypt before this weekend's runoff election for president.

Mubarak, 84, was slipping in and out of consciousness, was suffering from high blood pressure and breathing difficulties, and was in a deep depression, according to security officials at Torah prison where he is serving a life sentence. Doctors there could not find a pulse twice, and used the defibrillator, they said.

The deposed leader, who was being given liquids intravenously, also lost consciousness several times Sunday.

His health crisis came at time of political anxiety in Egypt, with a former prime minister from the Mubarak regime facing an Islamist in a showdown at the ballot box on June 16-17.

The election pits Ahmed Shafiq, Mubarak's last prime minister, against Mohammed Morsi of the Muslim Brotherhood.

Commerce chief eyed in crashes

Report: Bryson suffered seizure

Associated Press

SAN GABRIEL, Calif. — Medical records could determine whether U.S. Commerce Secretary John Bryson will be charged in two weekend fender-benders that led to his hospitalization after police found him slumped behind the wheel of his vehicle in the Los Angeles suburbs.

He suffered a seizure Saturday afternoon, Commerce Department officials said Monday, but it wasn't clear whether the medical episode preceded or followed a hit-and-run collision. Bryson had not had a seizure before, said a department official who spoke on condition of anonymity to discuss the secretary's medical history.

Bryson has a "limited recall of the events," the official said.

The crashes drew attention because of possible health concerns involving a member of President Barack Obama's Cabinet, as well as the challenge investigators face when trying to determine if someone should be held criminally responsible because of adverse health.

Bryson, 68, was driving alone in a Lexus in San Gabriel, a community of about 40,000 northeast of Los Angeles, when he struck the rear of a vehicle that had stopped for a passing train, authorities said.

He spoke briefly with the three occupants and then hit their car again as he departed, investigators said. They followed him while calling police.

He was cited for felony hit-and-run, although he has not been charged.

Bryson then struck a second car in the nearby city of Rosemead, where he was found unconscious in his car, authorities said.

Bryson has returned to Washington, Commerce Department spokeswoman Jennifer Friedman said.

White House press secretary Jay Carney said the administration was gathering information about the incidents.

"We're obviously concerned about the incident, about the health-related issues that played a role in this incident," Carney said.

Bryson took a Breathalyzer test that didn't detect any alcohol, but investigators were awaiting the results from a blood test, said Los Angeles County sheriff's Capt. Mike Parker.

Fires ravage West

Blazes hit New Mexico, Colorado

Associated Press

BELLVUE, Colo. — Massive wildfires in drought-parched Colorado and New Mexico tested the resources of state and federal crews Monday and underscored the need to replenish an aging U.S. aerial firefighting fleet that is needed to combat a year-round fire season.

Wyoming diverted personnel and aircraft from two fires there to help with a 60-square-mile wildfire in northern Colorado. Canada also loaned two aerial bombers to fight the blaze following the recent crash of a U.S. tanker in Utah. And an elite federal firefighting crew arrived to try to begin containing a fire that destroyed at least 118 structures.

All told, about 600 firefighters will be battling the fire some 15 miles west of Fort Collins by Tuesday, said incident commander Bill Hahnberg. "We are a very high priority nationally. We can get all the resources we want and need," he said.

One of the region's most potent aerial firefighting forces — two Wyoming Air National Guard C-130s fitted to drop slurry — sat on a runway in Cheyenne, 50 miles north of the Colorado fire. The reason: The U.S. Forest Service, by law, cannot call for military resources until it deems that its commercial fleet is fully busy. It also takes 36 hours to mobilize the crews and planes, officials said.

A helicopter drops water Monday on trees burning behind homes on the High Park wildfire near Fort Collins, Colo. The wildfire is burning out of control in northern Colorado, while an unchecked blaze choked a small community in southern New Mexico as authorities in both regions battled fires Monday.

Insurer to keep health law changes

Firm: Measures to stay even if law overturned

Associated Press

Insurer UnitedHealth Group Inc. sees some parts of the health care overhaul as sound medicine and plans to keep them even if the law fails to survive an upcoming Supreme Court ruling.

The nation's largest health insurer said Monday that it will still cover preventive care like immunizations without charging a co-payment, which is the fee usually paid at the doctor's office, and it will continue other popular initial provisions of the law.

The overhaul, which aims to provide coverage for millions of uninsured people, started unfolding in 2010 after health insurers fought bitterly to block its passage. Challenges to the law from states and other groups opposed to it wound their way through the court system to the Supreme Court, which heard arguments on the law's constitutionality in March.

The court is expected to issue a ruling later this month that could strike down the entire law or parts of it or uphold it.

Despite deep divisions about President Barack Obama's law, UnitedHealth's announcement underscores the staying power of some of its reforms.

UnitedHealth will continue to offer dependent coverage to adult children up to age 26 who seek coverage through parental plans, and it won't impose lifetime dollar limits on how much an insurance policy pays out to cover claims. That can help people fighting cancer or an expensive, chronic illness.

The insurer also pledged to not pursue rescissions of individual coverage except in limited instances like cases of fraud. Rescission involves cancelling a person's coverage retroactively, sometimes after claims have been submitted.

UnitedHealth CEO Stephen J. Hemsley said in a statement that the insurer will extend some of the overhaul's initial provisions because they are good for people's health, they promote better access to quality care and they help control rising health care costs.

None of these provisions will be free for consumers. Insurers have already factored them into the premium, or the cost of the insurance coverage. They probably add about 3 percent to that bill, depending on the type of coverage, said Bob Laszewski, a consultant and former insurance executive.

He called UnitedHealth's move a "very smart business decision." The provisions are relatively inexpensive, they're already factored into the coverage price, and the announcement makes the insurer look good. If insurers cut these benefits, customers probably will expect a corresponding premium drop, he noted.

Abuse trial begins

Sandusky claims rocked Penn State

Associated Press

BELLEFONTE, Pa. — The first witness in Jerry Sandusky's trial said the former Penn State assistant football coach sexually abused him as a young teenager on campus and in hotels and later sent him "creepy love letters."

The witness, dubbed Victim No. 4 by prosecutors, said what began as "soap battles" in the shower escalated into inappropriate touching and oral sex. He said under cross-examination that he feels responsible for what happened to other alleged victims because he didn't come forward earlier.

The man, now 28, was the first of eight alleged victims expected to testify during the trial, which began Monday with opening statements.

Sandusky faces 52 criminal counts that he sexually abused 10 boys over 15 years, allegations he has denied. His arrest and the fallout led to departures of longtime football coach Joe Paterno and the university president.

Lead prosecutor Joseph McGettigan III opened Sandusky's highly anticipated trial Monday by telling jurors that the 68-year-old retired coach was a pedophile who took advantage of fatherless children or those with unstable home lives, plied them with gifts and sexually abused them for years.

Defense lawyer Joseph Amendola countered that some of the alleged victims had hired civil lawyers and had a financial interest in pursuing the criminal case.

Sandusky sat still as the first witness explained that he began showering with the former assistant coach in 1997. The man said he had met Sandusky through The Second Mile, the children's charity the assistant coach had founded.

Instances in the shower, the man testified, escalated to the point where either Sandusky maneuvered himself so his head would be near the boy's genitals, or vice versa. The man testified that there were "a few occasions" where Sandusky ejaculated in the Penn State locker room showers.

Amendola said the young men who would take the stand were accusers, not victims. He said jurors may find it odd that Sandusky showered with children, but that it was innocuous, and part of Sandusky's upbringing.

"In Jerry's culture, growing up in his generation, where he grew up, he's going to tell you it was routine for individuals to get showers together," Amendola said. "I suspect for those of you who might have been in athletics, it's routine."

King of clay: Nadal wins record 7th French Open

Player claims 12th career Grand Slam event with win over Djokovic

Associated Press

PARIS — Rafael Nadal was worried.

A guy so unflinching, so nearly unbeatable, while sliding and grinding and pounding his way past opponent after opponent at the French Open, got a real case of nerves during the 18 hours he and Novak Djokovic waited for the restart of their rain-interrupted final at Roland Garros.

Instead of focusing on how close he was to winning a record seventh French Open championship, Nadal grew increasingly wary of the other possible outcome: a loss in a fourth consecutive Grand Slam final against Djokovic, who was trying to become the first man since 1969 to collect four straight major titles.

When play was halted by showers on Sunday, Nadal was clinging to an ever-shrinking lead. It wasn't until a few minutes before setting foot back on Court Philippe Chatrier, his favorite arena at his favorite tournament on his favorite surface, that Nadal set aside his anxiety. Oh, did he. The King of Clay overwhelmed the No.1-ranked Djokovic for the 50 minutes and nine games they played Monday, wrapping up a 6-4, 6-3, 2-6, 7-5 victory that allowed Nadal to earn French Open trophy No. 7, breaking a tie with Bjorn Borg.

"You never know if you're going to win another one," said the second-ranked Nadal, who now owns 11 Grand Slam titles.

"I don't know if I am the best or not," he added. "I am not the right one to say that."

Djokovic, for his part, had zero doubts. He worked his way back into the match with an eight-game run when it was pouring Sunday, but otherwise was outplayed, at the start and the finish.

"He's definitely (the) best

A crown, finally

Los Angeles Kings right wing Dustin Brown (23) and defenseman Drew Doughty react after Brown scored his second goal of the first period Monday night against the New Jersey Devils during Game 6 of the NHL Stanley Cup finals in Los Angeles.

Kings finish off Devils for first-ever Stanley Cup championship

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Kings' 45-year Stanley Cup quest ended in a triumphant flourish of blood, sweat and power-play goals. After missing two chances to claim the title last week, the long-suffering Kings are NHL champions for the first time.

Hooray for Hockeywood.

Jeff Carter and Trevor Lewis scored two goals apiece, playoff MVP Jonathan Quick made 17 saves in his latest stellar performance, and the Kings beat the New Jersey Devils 6-1 Monday night in Game 6 of the finals, becoming the first eighth-seeded playoff team to win the league title.

Captain Dustin Brown had a goal and two assists for Los Angeles, which ended its dominant two-month playoff run before a frenzied bunch of their heartiest fans, incessantly waving towels and glowsticks. The crowd including several dozen Kings faithful who have been at rinkside since the team's birth as an expansion franchise in 1967, waiting for one glimpse of the Stanley Cup.

After taking a 3-0 series lead and then losing two potential clinching games last week, the Kings finished ferociously at Staples Center just when the sixth-seeded Devils appeared to have a chance for one of the biggest comebacks in finals history.

One penalty abruptly changed the tone of a series. Brown, Carter and Lewis scored during a five-minute power play in the first period after Steve Bernier was ejected for boarding Rob Scuderi, leaving the veteran

Heisley announces sale of Grizzlies

Memphis Grizzlies majority owner Michael Heisley said Monday that he has an agreement to sell his NBA team to a group headed by California billionaire Robert J. Pera.

Heisley made the announcement after published reports that he finally had found a buyer for the team he moved from Vancouver to Memphis in 2001.

"I am confident that the franchise will continue its development toward being a perennial championship contender and an important member of the Memphis community," Heisley said in a statement. "I am particularly gratified that we have put together a team which is poised to continue its development. We have an outstanding team of players, coaching staff and basketball and business management."

The sale is subject to approval by the NBA Board of Governors and other conditions.

Heisley bought the Grizzlies in 2000, moved the team to Memphis in 2001 and finally into the FedEx Forum in 2004. The Grizzlies are coming off their two best seasons with their first postseason wins in franchise history.

ESPN.com reported the sale would be for approximately $350 million.

MLB, union hire new independent drug administrator

NEW YORK — Major League Baseball and the players' union have appointed a new independent administrator for the sport's drug prevention and treatment program.

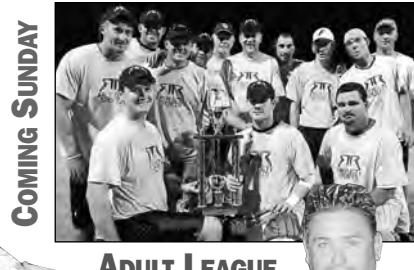

The hiring of Dr. Jeffrey Anderson was announced Monday. He has been the director of sports medicine and head team physician at the University of Connecticut since 1994.

Anderson also is the chair of the NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports.

Dr. Bryan Smith had held the baseball spot since 2006. In his final annual report issued last December, he said the number of drug tests conducted by MLB rose 3 percent over the past year.

Baseball rules allowed either MLB or the union to not renew Smith after his term expired. The union decided not to bring him back.

Rocketing to victory

the third position.

Jefferson proved he was the man to beat, taking his second feature win in a row in the Open Wheel Modified division.

Hise had his best run of the year, coming home second, with Grimm settling for third after starting deep in the field.

Sportsman

Sixteen Sportsman took the green for their 25-lap feature, which also qualified the field for the bonus money program.

John Buzinec (114) and Dennis Neighbor Sr. (83) led the field to green, but Mike Bell (17) moved to the top spot by the end of lap 2.

Bell's time at the front was short-lived, as Aaron Williamson (13) rocketed to the lead one lap later. Bell later suffered a mechanical issue, sending him to the pits while running a solid second place.

Brandon Morris (56) moved his way to the second position by lap 12 when the night's second caution flew.

Williamson dropped the hammer for the restart, and proved to have just enough speed to take his first feature win of the 2012 season. Morris came in second, just ahead of Reed.

Pure Stocks

The field spent most of the night chasing pole-sitter Arden Franklin.

Eugene Malver (123) caught Franklin in the closing laps, and put on the pressure. Malver made contact with Franklin's rear bumper several times before he was able to muscle his way by on lap 17.

Malver went on to take an apparent victory, but had his victory taken away following a post-race protest of his front suspension. Malver was found to have an illegal control arm bushing in the front of his racer, which disqualified him.

Franklin was awarded the victory.

Mini Stocks

A great battle for the lead early on between leader Mark Patterson (22) and Tim Scalise (24). Scalise moved to the lead at lap 9, and tried to run away from the hard-charging Ashley Williamson (84), Jeremy Sharrone (32) and Shannon Kennedy (46). Sharrone later caught a piece of the concrete retaining wall, which allowed Williamson to move to the second position, and Kennedy to third. Scalise took his first feature win of 2012.

Hornet Division

The beginner Hornet Division looked more like a demo derby than a race this week. Once the sparks stopped flying, Daryl Veltman (55) took home the feature win with Scott Bumgarner (9) in second, and early leader Kyle Stoner (7) coming home third.

Cars of Yesterday

The Cars of Yesterday saw Steve Parrish (38) hold off a late charge from Donny Dychesne (40p) to take another victory. Tim Brush (400) took third.

Upcoming races

This Saturday night will see the Super Late Models back in action, with the Street Stocks, Modified Mini Stocks, Pure Stocks, and the Hornet division. Gates open at 4 p.m., with racing taking the green at 6:30 p.m. Bring out the family and friends for a great night of short-track racing.

Busch, Logano change free agent outlook

Drivers might be vying for same seat at Joe Gibbs Racing

Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — The free agent picture in NASCAR got a whole lot murkier over the last week, thanks to Kurt Busch and Joey Logano.

Fittingly, both are likely eyeing the exact same seat.

It's fairly common knowledge that Joe Gibbs Racing is interested in Busch, and unless the funding for a fourth car magically appears, the only seat the team has available currently belongs to Logano. While Logano was driving the No. 20 Toyota to victory on Sunday at Pocono, Busch was apparently fishing.

A picture posted on Twitter showed the 2004 NASCAR champion with a line in the water; his activity of choice as he served a one-race suspension for verbally abusing a member of the media.

Suddenly, it may not be so easy for JGR to give Logano the boot.

His young career is at a crossroads in the fourth and final year of his Sprint Cup contract. Once heralded as the next big NASCAR superstar, Logano has struggled to deliver at the top level. While he has 13 wins in the Nationwide Series — four so far this season — Sunday's victory was just the second Cup win for Logano in 125 career starts.

Associated Press

Sprint Cup driver Joey Logano will be a free agent at the end of 2012.

With teammates Kyle Busch and Denny Hamlin established as annual title contenders, it's no secret that Logano is lagging far behind the other two in terms of production.

Enter Kurt Busch, who is riding out this year trying to elbow his way back in with an elite team. His kid brother is already entrenched at JGR, and the team has plenty of experience in dealing with volatile drivers dating to its 10-year run with Tony Stewart.

Neither Gibbs or team president J.D. Gibbs was at Logano's post-race news conference on Sunday, when Logano admitted he doesn't know what's next for his future.

Busch is not eligible to return to competition until Wednesday, and he's first got to make it through a meeting with current team owner James Finch. That's expected to happen on Tuesday, and Finch has given no indication he's going to deliver a soft message.

"Here's the deal: Quit wrecking the cars, get a good finish, be nice to people. That's not real hard to do," Finch said last week.

Still, Busch's sheer talent is still attractive to most team owners. The issue then becomes how much those owners can tolerate, and that decision is usually dictated by the sponsor.

In fairness to Busch, his sponsors often rave about his work ethic and professionalism when away from the track. But it's those at-track flare-ups that hurt him, and it's what led to his December split with Penske Racing and the predicament he's currently in with the Finch-owned Phoenix Racing.

Before his suspension, he was widely considered a candidate along with Ryan Newman for Logano's ride.

Now Logano has picked up a win in that car, and Busch has yet to begin his public attempt at damage control. He has said nothing for a week.

The issue for a team owner, whether it's Gibbs or someone else looking for a driver right now, is rating Busch vs. Logano, who maybe wasn't on many radars before Sunday.

Clemens doesn't take stand

Testimony ends with former player remaining silent

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — His large frame towering over the microphone, Roger Clemens leaned forward at the podium and declared to the judge in a deep voice with a Texas twang: "Yes sir, I am not testifying."

Minutes earlier, four prosecutors representing the U.S. government huddled at their table and then declared: No, they wouldn't roll the dice to try to introduce new evidence to bolster the credibility of their key witness. There was just too much risk that it could backfire.

The final set of witnesses took the stand Monday as the contentious, start-and-stop Clemens perjury trial entered its ninth week, and both sides played it safe with major decisions. The tenor would have obviously changed completely had the defendant chosen to take the stand, and the jury would have been given another set of dueling impressions of Brian McNamee if the government had sought to bring in more evidence of other players' use of performance-enhancing drugs.

Clemens is charged with lying to Congress in 2008 when he denied using steroids and human growth hormone in his 24-season major-league career. The defense rested, and the government called three rebuttal witnesses Monday — including one who had testy exchanges with a Clemens lawyer about evidence saved with a beer can — and closing arguments are set for Tuesday.

The jury, which has heard from 46 witnesses over 26 days of testimony, could get the case Tuesday afternoon. The jury will be able to deliberate on Wednesday if need be, before taking a four-day break while U.S. District Judge Reggie Walton is out of town. Barring a quick verdict, the trial will extend into a 10th week — when one of the jurors is scheduled to leave for a six-month trip to Germany.

With that in mind, the judge said he will promote the final alternate and designate the Germany-bound juror as the alternate. The juror added to the panel of 12 — eight women and four men — is an avid cyclist who said during jury selection that he knows people who use steroids.

McNamee, Clemens' longtime strength coach, testified that he injected the former pitcher with steroids in 1998, 2000 and 2001 and with HGH in 2000. He is the only witness to claim firsthand knowledge of Clemens' use of performance-enhancing drugs, and Clemens' lawyers devoted much of the trial attacking his integrity.

To that end, the last of the defense's 23 witnesses was Jerry Laveroni, the security director for the New York Yankees when McNamee was the club's assistant strength and conditioning coach in 2000-01. Clemens' lawyer Rusty Hardin used Laveroni to again make mention of two questionable incidents from 2001, when McNamee was involved in a criminal investigation in Florida and appeared disoriented in a hotel room in Seattle during a road trip.

"I don't believe he could be believed under oath," Laveroni said.

Clemens' lawyer Rusty Hardin asked how much credibility McNamee has.

"Zero," Laveroni replied.

To counter that powerful statement, the government wanted Laveroni to acknowledge that Yankees players Andy Pettitte, Chuck Knoblauch and Mike Stanton have all backed up McNamee's assertion that he helped them get HGH.

However, Hardin said that would allow Laveroni to introduce more details about the Florida and Seattle incidents. The jury, in particular, hasn't heard that McNamee was questioned about an alleged sexual assault in Florida in connection with a woman who was found to have a date rape drug in her system, or that McNamee then allegedly asked Laveroni to destroy evidence.

Dolphins sign Ochocinco
NFL suspends Vikings WR Simpson 3 games

Associated Press

MIAMI — Chad Ochocinco says he has signed with the Miami Dolphins four days after being released by the New England Patriots.

The signing was reported Monday on the wide receiver's website, OCNNReport.com, hours after he had a tryout with the Dolphins, who are thin at the position and dropping a lot of passes in offseason drills.

The Dolphins declined to comment but Ochocinco is likely to join the team for this week's OTAs, which continue through Wednesday.

Ochocinco, 34, is a Miami native who played college ball for the Hurricanes. He made the Pro Bowl six times, most recently in 2009, but had only a minor role in his lone season with the Patriots, catching 15 passes for 276 yards.

The Dolphins traded Pro Bowl receiver Brandon Marshall to the Chicago Bears in March for two third-round draft picks, and didn't draft a receiver until the sixth round. Following a practice Monday, coach Joe Philbin conceded there has been room for improvement in the pass-catching during offseason workouts.

In his career, Ochocinco has caught 766 passes for 11,059 yards and 67 touchdowns. All of the Dolphins' returning receivers have less than a dozen career TDs.

Vikings WR Simpson banned 3 games by NFL

MINNEAPOLIS — The NFL has suspended Minnesota Vikings wide receiver Jerome Simpson for the first three games of the 2012 season, punishing him for a felony drug conviction tied to a marijuana shipment to his home last fall.

Simpson was suspended for violating the league's substance-abuse policy. He was also fined one game check, the league announced Monday, meaning he must forfeit nearly one-fourth of his $800,000 salary this year including the three weeks he won't be paid while being barred from team activities and facilities.

Simpson is allowed to participate in all preseason practices and games, but will miss games against Jacksonville on Sept. 9, at Indianapolis on Sept. 16 and Sept. 24 against San Francisco.

Casey and his cart return to major

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Casey Martin has never allowed himself to look too far into the future.

Even looking back, it is no less amazing to see him and his cart back at The Olympic Club, riding between shots during a practice round Monday at the U.S. Open, then walking painfully back to the cart with a limp that has become as much a signature for him as a fist pump for Tiger Woods.

Martin could not have predicted 14 years ago when he left the U.S. Open after his historic ride that he would still be competing against the best in the world. He gave up tournament golf six years ago and took over as golf coach for the Oregon Ducks.

He could not have predicted he would still even have a right leg.

"I'm 40 now, and so this is at that point where I didn't know if I would ever really be able to keep my leg," said Martin, who suffers from a rare circulatory disorder that led him to sue the PGA Tour for a right to use a cart. "So it's not great. When I wake up, I feel it. When I get out of the golf cart, I feel it. When I travel with the team and travel down here, I definitely feel it. That's always going to be the case. And so I'm not complaining. It's hanging in there."

"But I'm not going to be running a marathon, either."

Running a marathon seemed more plausible than Martin playing another U.S. Open — at Olympic Club, no less.

The only competition Martin has had over the past six years was an occasional game with his players, or a charity event that often featured a scramble format on short golf courses designed for amateurs. But with Olympic hosting another U.S. Open, he figured it was worth a shot.

King Martin recalls his son

telling him he thought he would enter the U.S. Open.

"As a USGA member, I got a USGA hat in the mail," the father said. "I put it up in my office at home, let it sit there, clinging to that dream. It has a little more meaning to me right now. This is a godsend, I can tell you that."

It's a script even Hollywood would have a hard time believing.

His coaching schedule allowed Martin to go through local qualifying in Washington, and in his first serious competition since he became a golf coach, Martin made it through. The sectional qualifying last week was two days after Oregon reached the NCAA semifinals at Riviera. On little sleep, Martin was on his way to claiming one of two spots for the U.S. Open when he couldn't find his tee shot on the fifth hole of the second round.

His caddie found it at the last minute — it was hidden by a clump of mud, and Martin believes a cart was parked over the ball at one point — so instead of going back to the tee and probably taking double bogey, Martin hacked it short of the green and chipped in from 30 yards for birdie.

With a 5-foot par putt on the last hole, he was on his way back to Olympic.

"That's kind of when I thought, 'OK, maybe something greater than just myself ... something's going on here,'" he said. "It was a great day, and I've used the word 'magical,' but it really was kind of a magical day for me to get here."

Despite the controversy surrounding him and his lawsuit for the right to ride, Martin has nothing but the best memories of Olympic in 1998. He had sued the PGA Tour for a right to ride a cart.

He qualified for the U.S. Open, and because a court had issued a temporary injunction against the tour, the USGA went along with it and let him ride.

He played a practice round with Tiger Woods, his old teammate at Stanford, before thousands of fans.

He was more nervous than ever, especially with a 3:10 p.m. tee time in the first round. He opened with a 74, followed with a 71 to easily make the cut and wound up with a tie for 23rd.

A year later, Martin earned a spot on the PGA Tour through the Nationwide Tour. And in 2000, the Supreme Court upheld his lawsuit against the tour. Martin played one year on tour and never returned to the big leagues.

"I probably wouldn't have thought I would be coaching," he said. "When I was going through my trial and through my challenges, I didn't have a real long-term vision of professional golf. I thought it would be a pretty short window. And so here I am, 40. Even though I'm not playing for a living, I'm still playing. And so I'm grateful for that."

France, England forced to settle for 1-1 draw

Co-host Ukraine slips past Sweden

Associated Press

DONETSK, Ukraine — England held on for a 1-1 draw with France on Monday at the European Championship, giving the Group D favorites one point each.

Joleon Lescott put England in the lead with a header in the 30th minute, and Samir Nasri leveled for France shortly before halftime with a strike into the bottom corner of the net.

France still has not won a match at a major tournament since the 2006 World Cup. The national team, however, is unbeaten in its last 22 matches.

"I think we have to be happy with that," France coach Laurent Blanc said. "We were too timid at the start, there was a bit of pressure that got to us, and then we got better actually after we conceded the goal — that's when we started playing."

England took the lead when captain Steven Gerrard curled in a free kick from the right after Patrice Evra fouled James Milner. Lescott sneaked behind a defender and was able to nod the ball past France goalkeeper Hugo Lloris. It was England's only on-target shot.

France's equalizer was all about one-touch football. Florent Malouda, Evra and Franck Ribery flicked the ball around the left side of England's penalty area to free up space for Nasri, who put in a low shot before England goalkeeper Joe Hart could react.

Ukraine 2, Sweden 1

KIEV, Ukraine — Andriy Shevchenko trumped Zlatan Ibrahimovic, scoring two great headers to give Ukraine a 2-1 win over Sweden at the European Championship.

After Ibrahimovic gave Sweden the lead in the 52nd minute, Shevchenko responded by heading in the equalizer three minutes later and then added the winner in the 61st.

The victory gives Ukraine a serious chance of advancing from Group D

Next week she will guest anchor former New York Gov. Eliot Spitzer's show while he is on vacation.

The left-leaning Current cable network was co-founded by Al Gore.

Winans testifies in carjacking case

DETROIT — Prominent minister and gospel singer Marvin Winans has testified at a preliminary examination for three men charged with carjacking him at a Detroit gas station.

Winans is pastor of Perfecting Church and delivered singer Whitney Houston's eulogy in February.

Twenty-year-olds Montoya Givens and Christopher Moorehead and 18-year-old Brian Young are charged with carjacking, unarmed robbery and conspiracy. The charges carry up to life in prison.

Winans was attacked May 16 while pumping gas.

Arquette has bar mitzvah in Israel

JERUSALEM — David Arquette got more than he bargained for during his first trip to Israel.

The "Scream" star came to shoot a segment for his travel show and ended up having a bar mitzvah ceremony, too.

Arquette, who recently split with former "Friends" star Courtney Cox, is the youngest of the five acting Arquette siblings: Rosanna, Richmond, Patricia and Alexis.

While their father became a Muslim, their mother was born Jewish, making the children Jewish under religious law.

Jewish boys typically celebrate their bar mitzvah at 13, the age when they are obligated to perform Jewish commandments.

MAN OF STEEL

Associated Press

Superman started as a reject. Writer Jerry Siegel and artist Joe Shuster were two naive kids from Cleveland who repeatedly failed to get anyone to take a chance on their strongman hero before a publisher with a past in "girlie" magazines needed something to fill the first issue of Action Comics in 1938.

The duo sold the rights to their creation for $130.

Superman would go on to star in comics, serials, TV shows and movies. He became the prototype for hundreds of superheroes, earned countless millions and became a transcendent American pop culture icon on par with Mickey Mouse.

And as for Siegel and Shuster? Their story is a lot more melancholy.

Larry Tye's book, "Superman: The High-Flying History of America's Most Enduring Hero," is a cultural biography of Superman that tracks the famous character over the decades and gives voice to the many creators who shaped Superman on the page and screen, starting with Siegel and Shuster. Superman doesn't "grow up" like a real person, but Tye does a thorough job showing Superman's evolution from the rambunctious building-leaper of the '30s to the Christ-like figure in the 2006 movie "Superman Returns."

Tye deftly explores the natural tensions among the writers and artists who have breathed life into Superman and the evolving demands of the marketplace. When creators hit it right, like in the first "Superman" movie from 1978, the character really does soar. It doesn't always work, though. It's best to forget some of the superpeps introduced to spice up the comics long ago, especially Streaky the Super-cat. And a more assertive Clark Kent with stylish round glasses was panned by fans in the late '80s.

The book makes clear that the hero's greatest superpower might be as a salesman. Superman has been enlisted to sell soda, video games, T-shirts, "krypto-ray guns," briefs, lunchboxes and much, much more. When Superman — that model of righteous living — is tossed into the side of a Marlboro truck in "Superman II," the product placement is no coincidence. While Tye writes that "Superman's handlers would not let him shill just any product," readers might ask: Like what? Super Suppositories?

Tye has done an exceedingly good reporting job that included deep dives through court filings and dozens of interviews. He found a lot of stuff, though too much of it appears on the page. There are too many reviews quoted and too many paragraphs that should have been pared down. Two-thirds of a page devoted to a 1940s Superman school grammar workbook is too much.

Superman has had dozens of midwives — writers, illustrators, editors, directors, TV producers — who shaped the character. But the book is haunted throughout by the two nerdy kids who dreamed him up. Lightning never struck for Siegel and Shuster again. The pair ended up fighting a long legal fight for compensation.

Siegel in particular became embittered about the loss of control over and the lack of compensation for his one great contribution. But he was still driven to tears after seeing the character he made fly across the big screen in the big-budget 1978 movie. He reportedly told the comic's publisher, "It was exactly how I had imagined it."

Bieber fever hits Mexico City

Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — Thousands of school-skipping "tween" girls and their parents streamed into Mexico City's historic main plaza on Monday, hoping to get the best spots for a free concert hours later by teen superstar Justin Bieber that is expected to draw 200,000 people.

The gray and reddish stones of the plaza were covered in a sea of purple as the mainly 10- to 14-year-old crowd paid homage to what is reported to be Bieber's favorite color.

Under a hot sun, girls trudged through security checkpoints with hats and umbrellas, staking claim to some of the roughly 80,000 spots allocated in the plaza itself. Another 120,000 or more are expected to watch on giant screens erected on nearby streets.

Fernanda Gutierrez Aparicio, 13, a seventh-grader at a local middle school, said she had spent a week camping out with her mother on a nearby street in hopes of being among the first to enter.

But her mother, Adriana Martinez, 41, gave up on trying to get her daughter into the front rows because of the press of other fans.

"I was really disappointed. When we got up front, people were crushing you, not letting you breathe," Martinez said. Even long hours before the concert, "People were jostling each other and it got to the point that you couldn't move."

To Fernanda, it was all worth it — even missing the week of classes leading up to the two-hour concert that was to open with Canadian singer Carly Rae Jepsen and Mexican rockers 3BallMTY.

"I told my teacher that I wasn't going to school and not to expect me in class for a few days," Fernanda said, "because I was going to be out supporting my idol."

Fernanda most wanted to hear Bieber sing "That Should Be Me," which pretty much reflects her feelings about the Canadian singer.

"I want to be Selena Gomez, to be with him," she cooed, referring to Bieber's girlfriend.

Authorities said they would have more than 5,000 police on hand, partly to prevent the sort of crush that injured 40 Bieber fans at a free concert in Oslo, Norway, in late May.

"Most of the fans will be between 10 and 17 years old. There will be a lot of girls," said Hector Antunano, a city official. "We are being very careful that the majority of the police are women and we are taking precautions so that there is no rush toward the stage."

The stage where Bieber was set to perform is ringed by some of the most historic structures in the hemisphere: Mexico's Metropolitan Cathedral, the National Palace and the partially excavated remains of the Aztec capital, Tenochtitlan.

Today in HISTORY ==

Today is Tuesday, June 12, the 164th day of 2012. There are 202 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On June 12, 1942, Anne Frank, a German-born Jewish girl living in Amsterdam, received a diary for her 13th birthday; in it, she wrote, "I hope I will be able to confide everything to you, as I have never been able to with anyone, and I hope you will provide much support and comfort." (Less than a month later, Anne and her family went into hiding from the Nazis.)

On this date:

In 1939, the National Baseball Hall of Fame and Museum was dedicated in Cooperstown, N.Y.

In 1963, civil rights leader Medgar Evers, 37, was shot and killed outside his home in Jackson, Miss. (In 1994, Byron De La Beckwith was convicted of murdering Evers and sentenced to life in prison; he died in 2001.)

In 1967, the Supreme Court, in Loving v. Virginia, struck down state laws prohibiting interracial marriages.

In 1972, the notorious porn film "Deep Throat," starring Linda Lovelace, opened in New York.

In 1987, President Ronald Reagan, during a visit to the divided German city of Berlin, publicly challenged Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to "tear down this wall."

Ten years ago: The Los Angeles Lakers finished off the New Jersey Nets in four games, winning their third straight NBA title with a 113-107 victory.

Five years ago: Don Herbert, television's "Mr. Wizard," died in Bell Canyon, Calif., at age 89.

One year ago: "The Book of Mormon" took home nine Tony Awards, including the prize for best musical; "War Horse" won five Tonys, including the best play award.

Today's Birthdays:

Banker/philanthropist David Rockefeller is 97. Former President George H.W. Bush is 88. Actor-singer Jim Nabors is 82. Jazz musician Chick Corea is 71. Sports-caster Marv Albert is 71. Singer Roy Harper is 71. Rapper Grandmaster Dee (Whodini) is 50. Actor Jason Mewes is 38. Blues musician Kenny Wayne Shepherd is 35.

Thought for Today: "It is easier to love humanity as a whole than to love one's neighbor." — Eric Hoffer, American philosopher (1902-1983).

Today's HOROSCOPE

manner at the expense of another, you had better examine your motives and have one heck of a good reason. Operating along the wrong lines will derail you.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — When in a partnership arrangement, have a clear-cut understanding in advance as to who is responsible for what. Without any ground rules, the venture could veer off course, leaving everyone in the woods.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — Fail to approach your work in a positive manner and you'll make what you have to do much more difficult than it actually is. Make sure that every detail is covered, but smile while doing so.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — If you knowingly go against the odds, don't be surprised if you have to pay the consequences. Lady Luck isn't likely to be around when you need her the most.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Let sleeping dogs lie and don't bring up any old, unresolved domestic issues when everyone is trying to relax. It could open Pandora's box.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — Even if you think the criticism you're offering is very constructive, the recipient of your remarks might feel differently, and deeply resent your input. Judge not, lest ye be judged.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) — Financial conditions are likely to be a mixed bag for you at this juncture. On one hand, your earnings look promising, but on the other hand, your extravagances may go completely unchecked.

Aries (March 21-April 19) — There is likely to be far too much outside interference for you to do your job as smoothly as you like. Throwing a fit won't solve a thing, but it can make matters worse.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) — If you allow yourself to be influenced by past events, it could put a damper on fresh developments. Obsessing over yesterdays only inhibits new successes.

Plant extract studied as Alzheimer's treatment

Q: What can you tell me about curcumin and Alzheimer's disease?

A: Alzheimer's disease is a devastating degenerative brain disorder in which patients develop brain lesions known as amyloid plaques and tangled proteins within the nerves of the brain. These "plaques and tangles" result in a decrease in mental function and an increase in behavioral problems.

This disease is named after a German physician, Alois Alzheimer, who first described this disorder in 1906.

Alzheimer's disease is not a normal part of aging, and approximately 6 percent of people older than 65, and 35 percent of those older than 85 may be afflicted with this brain disorder.

Some early onset types of Alzheimer's disease can occur as early as age 40.

The first symptom of this disease is usually short-term memory loss, such as forgetting appointments, losing keys, getting lost traveling in familiar surroundings, and having difficulty handling money.

As the disease progresses, the patient typically has difficulty performing routine tasks at home or work. Speech also becomes difficult and the patient may try to compensate by using evasive speech and confabulations.

Later, the patient becomes unable to do routine chores and may neglect personal hygiene and appearance. Judgment and reasoning can become severely impaired, and supervision is required to protect the patient from accidental injury to self or others.

In the final stages, the patient may become vegetative, unable to recognize family members, and unable to communicate.

Mood disturbances, disruptive behavior, and psychosis can present problems for caregivers. Repetitive asking of questions, rummaging through drawers, perpetual humming or grunting, and fingernail clicking are common.

The exact cause of Alzheimer's disease is not known, but the "plaques and tangles" in the brain lead to a decrease in the production of a brain chemical known as acetylcholine, which is needed for brain cells to function.

At the present time, there is no cure for this disease and the goal of therapy is to increase the quality of life for the patient.

Curcumin has been used as a traditional Indian (Ayurvedic) and Chinese medicine for thousands of years.

It is derived from turmeric, a plant found in southern Asia that is widely used as a yellow food color and spice, including an ingredient in curry powder.

Curcumin is known as a "polyphenolic" or "curcuminoid" compound that has many effects including antioxidant and anti-inflammatory properties.

It has also been reported that curcumin may boost the immune system to help remove amyloid plaques from the brain.

All of these effects may help people with Alzheimer's disease and perhaps other neurodegenerative disorders.

However, naturally occurring curcumin is not readily absorbed from the gastrointestinal tract, so man-made (synthetic) curcumin products have been developed to try and overcome this problem.

At this point in time, no dosage of curcumin can be recommended for medicinal use, and more research is needed.

Currently, studies of curcumin used alone and in combination with other agents such as vitamin D are under way to determine the therapeutic effects, dosage and safety of curcumin in Alzheimer's and other diseases.

In a recent study, male baldness was found to be associated with prostate cancer, with more severe balding patterns more strongly associated with cancer, according to a study presented at the annual meeting of the American Urological Association during May in Atlanta.

develops stage IV cancer.

Initially, it is hormone sensitive, but later on it becomes hormone refractory. This is called hormone refractory prostate cancer or HRPC.

Until a few years ago, we had no treatment for this stage but now we have five different drugs — namely, chemotherapy with mitox-

Researchers from the University Health Network in Toronto conducted a prospective study of 196 consecutive patients referred for a prostate biopsy. In all of these men, male-pattern baldness was assessed on a scale of 0 to 4, and these measurements were conducted before the biopsy so that no bias was observed.

The researchers found 55 percent of the patients who were sent for a biopsy due to an elevated PSA were diagnosed with prostate cancer. Yes, 55 percent of those who were suspected of having the disease actually did, and they will now go on to treatment that will save their lives.

On further analysis, there was a significant association between male pattern baldness and prostate cancer. Male pattern baldness remained a significant predictor of prostate cancer in this well-planned and administered analysis, with more severe balding patterns more strongly correlated with prostate cancer.

So, in this well-planned prospective study, researchers found that male pattern baldness was an independent predictor of prostate cancer. Further studies are needed in order to assess whether the inclusion of male pattern baldness can contribute to existing models to predict prostate cancer prior to biopsy.

In the meantime, all men older than 40 should continue to be screened for prostate cancer with the PSA blood test and digital rectal exam every year, and if your hairline is receding, there is now even more of a reason to be your own health advocate, and get the PSA blood test.

It very well may save your life.

severe internal pressure that can damage your ear and in extreme situations is even known to damage the windpipe and the voice box.

Involuntary loss of bladder control is also sometimes seen with a violent sneeze.

If you really want to reduce the loudness or volume of a sneeze, there are a number of things you can do.

If it comes on quickly and you have little time to react, tamide in men with HRPC. Investigators at 156 centers in 15 countries enrolled 1,199 patients. Two-thirds of the patients received the drug and one-third received placebo.

The study was closed prematurely when they found the drug was highly effective. The patients who got the Enzalutamide lived almost five months longer. This is highly significant in this population of terminally ill patients, many of whom die within three months.

The most important was quality of life was a lot better for the patients who got the drug than who received the placebo.

The drug was well tolerated and side effects were minimal. The only serious side effect was seizure in one in 250 patients. The rest of the side effects were of the same frequency whether the patient received the drug or placebo.

This is highly remarkable.

do not sneeze into your hand like they used to say; sneeze into your arm. The fabric will catch the mucus and germs and muffle the sound.

If you have time to react, a tissue or handkerchief also would be helpful.

Sneezing can be isolated and infrequent and simply related to a passing irritation that happens to get in the nose and cause the reflex, but sometimes it is related to other ailments including allergies.

If you think the latter is true, you might want to consider talking to your doctor

In short, the drug is extremely safe and effective. It not only makes patients live longer but also makes them live better. All of these benefits are without any significant side effects.

What more can we ask? The FDA has not yet approved this drug, but I anticipate its approval in six to nine months or so. Remember, this is effective and used only on the patients who had prior chemotherapy.

ments like this make oncologists feel excited about the current status of cancer in the United States.

Three options for restoring front teeth

You might remember I mentioned some really good articles in my journals last week. The one I am going to talk about today deals with how a dentist should decide how to restore a patient's front tooth, if the need arises.

This question comes up routinely in my office. The article I read talked about three different methods available. They are as follows: a white filling, a porcelain veneer and a crown.

Each of these methods has merit under certain circumstances. The dental patient comes to us for our recommendation on how to handle a certain situation.

Each of the three methods above has its benefits and disadvantages.

Dr. Frank Vascimini

SOUND BITES

Depending on the circumstances, one might perform better than another.

I am going to discuss this as if I were counseling one of my patients. I will usually discuss all the options available. However, I will give my suggestion on what should be best. I will, of course, explain why.

As a general rule, I try to use the least invasive method to restore something while still getting longevity out of the restoration. If a small enough piece of tooth is missing and there is enough enamel to adhere to, my suggestion will always be a white filling.

A white filling can last a long time and look as natural as your own tooth, if done with the proper protocol and materials.

In cases where a filling might not work, a veneer or crown might be a better choice.

As the article I read mentioned, there are certain criteria that need to be met for a porcelain veneer to have longevity.

If used in an improper situation, a veneer can fracture or even become dislodged completely. When used in the right circumstances, porcelain veneers can have incredible esthetics.

They can be used as an individual restoration, as well as in numbers, to attain a complete smile makeover. By shaving away additional tooth, you can get even more retention if the situation warrants. The dentist will normally make the call on whether or not this additional loss of tooth is worth the end result.

The last method mentioned is the use of a crown. Some dentists refer to these as caps.

In either case, it involves the shaving down the tooth 360 degrees around. There are many materials to choose from. Each material has its benefits and disadvantages. You might recall I discussed this in a recent column.

One of the important factors that helps make the decision of which method makes the most sense to use is the condition of the tooth prior to the loss.

If it were a tooth with no previous restoration one might be inclined to use a filling. If it had a few fillings already, and yet another piece is now missing, a veneer or crown might make more sense.

The way the teeth come together and slide side to side is also an important factor to evaluate.

The occlusion (the way the teeth come together and slide around) is something that we, as dentists, study each time we do something.

Without paying attention to this, a restoration might be doomed to failure no matter how beautiful it looks.

Like many things in life, the initial assessment of a situation and the resulting conclusions made have a big impact on long-term success.

The care we provide as dentists, whether fixing a front tooth or restoring an entire mouth, are no different.

Murrysburg Medic 1 bought a bariatric truck with a stretcher that can carry up to 1,200 pounds about three years ago, said Derrick Gerano, administrative director. Since then, he said, the service has handled more bariatric patients, but that could be because of the more comfortable transport option.

"In the past, you hear those stories, 'We had to put a patient in the back of a pickup truck,'" Gerano said. "Someone goes through that experience once, they're going to think twice before the next time they call for help.

"Now that there is a humane way, I think more are more likely to go out."

Chief William Hess of Mon Valley EMS in Monessen said he relies on neighboring communities for use of a bariatric stretcher or makes do by using a rescue basket.

"To convert a truck to bariatric or just to buy the equipment is very expensive, and there's no recouping any of the cost of any of this stuff," Hess said.

Economy Ambulance in Beaver County bought three stretchers capable of holding 700 pounds with a battery-powered lift at a cost of about $12,000 each in the past three years.

If the money becomes available, president Randy Dawson said he would like to buy a fourth stretcher so each ambulance has one.

"Years ago, we had patients that were so large, we ended up putting them on a mattress in the back of the truck," Dawson said. "Large patients have always been there. It's just how we're dealing with it today that's changed."

Open house in store

The public is welcome at ribbon cutting for Home Again Resale

Special to the Chronicle

The Site Committee of the Central Ridge Boys & Girls Club and Nature Coast Bank invite the public to a beer, wine and cheese open house and the ribbon cutting of the new Home Again Resale Store at Timberlane Family Dentistry Plaza on County Road 486 across from the Chevron station.

The party begins at 5 p.m. Thursday, June 28.

"This store is all about the kids because all money earned is donated to the Boys & Girls Clubs of Citrus County for the kids at the Central Ridge Boys & Girls Club," said committee member Drew Sherman.

Club Director Amy Stonestreet is the Boys & Girls Clubs staff member of the year for 2012 and is hoping the store will take care of all the extras at her club, such as the afterschool snack program, summer field trips and half scholarships for eligible families.

"It will be a happy day when Home Again is making regular donations that directly support the kids at our Club," said Stonestreet.

The store needs supporters to bring in donations of furniture, home accessories, artwork, books and jewelry to fill its mostly empty shelves. June store hours are 9 a.m. to noon Monday to Friday, while inventory is being collected.

"Why not bring along a donated item on the 28th?" queried Fred Clark, a 12-year veteran at the Central Ridge Boys & Girls Club. "It's just for the kids and it can't be done without your help."

For more information, call Home Again at 352-270-8861 or email homeagain@tampabay.rr.com or visit the website, homeagainresalestore.com. The Home Again Resale Store is sponsored by the Chronicle and operated by the nonprofit Nature Coast Affordable Housing Corp.

Lindsay Danback, left, administrative assistant at the Citrus County Tax Collector's Office, and Sue Littnan, child passenger safety instructor, show a Chicco infant car seat and stroller that can be won in a special fundraiser during June.

Promoting car seat safety

Special to the Chronicle

The Citrus County Tax Collector's Office is sponsoring a fundraiser throughout the month of June to support the Car Seat Safety Program at the Early Learning Coalition of the Nature Coast.

Staff at both the Meadowcrest and Inverness tax collector's offices will accept donations to help support this program that will assist children throughout the county," cost for families experiencing financial hardship. The fundraiser will help to re-establish this important injury prevention program to ensure that all children in Citrus County have a safe and appropriate car seat or booster seat regardless of family income.

"We are grateful to Tax Collector Janice Warren and her staff for supporting this program that will assist children throughout the county," said Sue Littnan, child passenger safety instructor. "We need contributions from community agencies and businesses countywide, since this is a program that benefits all of Citrus County."

To make this fundraiser interesting, one contributor will win a new Chicco car seat and stroller valued at $300 by donating to the Car Seat Program. Every $5 donated at the Tax Collector's Office will secure one ticket toward winning the travel system. The winner will be contacted on June 29. Tax Collector's Office locations are: West Citrus Government Center Meadowcrest office, 1540 N. Meadowcrest Blvd., Crystal River, and Courthouse Annex Inverness office, 210 N. Apopka Ave.

For information, call Sue Littnan at 352-422-0500, or Ingrid Ellis, Early Learning Coalition of the Nature Coast, at 352-563-9939.

Education, service group has convention

New York! New York!" was the theme of this year's Florida State Council of Epsilon Sigma Alpha's 62nd annual convention last month in Tampa. ESA's Alpha Gamma Crystal River chapter sisters Sherry Cavaretta, Trudie Myers and I attended.

Hosted by Alpha Rho of Tampa, it took place at the Hilton Airport Hotel and was fun and fellowship with a purpose. For many years, ESA has championed St. Jude Children's Research Hospital for the Easter Seals program and St. Augustine School for the Deaf and the Blind, among other charities, including high school scholarships.

We celebrated our year-long accomplishments, heard the news from International Council and South-eastern Regional Council representatives. Awards were handed out and we elected the leaders to light our way into 2012-13.

It was "Give My Regards to Broadway" at the fashion runway show presented by the Florida State Council's Past Presidents Auxiliary, whose members paraded down the runway dressed as Broadway and movie characters.

Jamie Atchinson, International Council past president, reminded us to take our passion and move forward, to be there in support of one another. Her five words for a healthy relationship were, "I apologize, you are right,"

Ruth Levins

AROUND THE COMMUNITY

The sixth-grader reminded us to be responsible, respectable, to put our mind to it and we can accomplish anything by staying truthful to ourselves and others.

ESA incoming President Robin Allred told us what makes music magic. She said that it's the emotion that comes with the energy to the tired, the comfort to the sad. It can change a mood or a situation in an instant. She remarked that everyone in ESA is equal, accepted and appreciated for whatever they bring to the organization.

We were encouraged to find our very own chapter tune, to tweak our communication skills and to bring up the music of ESA and show the world that music is magic.

Since 1962, St. Jude has changed the way the world treats children with cancer. ESA has joined Danny Thomas in being a part of his St. Jude dream. A former patient at the facility spoke and said that a St. Jude trust has been formed by her parents in her name.

We learned that a Gators March for Babies for the March of Dimes project raised more than $100,000 for the benefit of children with disabilities. Adults are now included. We watched a video of the Murray Child Development Center in Tampa, which has therapies onsite to teach families how to communicate through play.

Camp Challenge, since 1961, provides summer respite for children and families with early intervention throughout the state.

We celebrated the chartering of a University of Florida Chapter with 40 members. Twenty-three chapters attended, with 142 members. It was a great gathering of ESA sisters: E for education, S for service and A for association.

The Crystal River Alpha Gamma Chapter was chartered in November 1966 by Sara (Barnes) Lyons and me.

Ruth Levins participates in a variety of projects around the community.

Let her know about your group's upcoming activities by writing to P.O. Box 803, Crystal River, FL 34423.
