Kevin O'Rourke's family, friends bid farewell

LECANTO — Kevin O'Rourke was given a hero's sendoff Monday, perfect for a man who placed others before self right until the moment he died.

Kevin O'Rourke killed in Afghanistan.

About 380 Seven Rivers Christian School children and teachers lined up along State Road 44 during the mid-afternoon as the sheriff's office escorted O'Rourke's body from Heinz Funeral home in Inverness.

O'Rourke died Sept. 29 in Afghanistan, where he was working as a civilian contractor for NATO. He was a month and a day away from his 53rd birthday.

"I'm here to show respect to the family and to his friends and let them know he was a really good man," 11th-grader Kelly McFadden said.

High school principal Scott Jackson said welcoming the procession is a way for students to see up close what they hear about all the time.

"When the news hits home it really brings a reality to it," he said.

Webb, Dawsy in spat over stats

A.B. SIDIBE
Staff Writer

It is a dizzying debate, but the candidates for sheriff both say the numbers back up their claims about the crime rate in the county.

Citrus County Sheriff Jeff Dawsy calls opponent Winn Webb's claims that crime is on rise in the county "a scare tactic" intentionally hatched to mislead the public.

Webb calls the Citrus County Sheriff's Office's crime statistics for 2011 manipulated "because it is an election year and because I was with the agency and I know how they can be fixed to say what you want them to say." The election is Nov. 6.

He said he doesn't like it when Dawsy goes around saying Citrus County is the second-safest county in the state when Webb has figures that say the opposite.

"He never says we are second among four comparable counties. If you compare our numbers with the rest of the state, we are the ninth-worst in crime in the past four years (2007-2011)," Webb said. The other counties with similar populations to Citrus are Santa Rosa, Martin and Indian River.

Webb said according to data from the Florida Department of Law Enforcement's (FDLE) Uniform Crime Report (UCR), between 2007 and 2011, total index crimes went up by 12.8 percent in the county compared to Florida's 66 other counties. He said crime numbers for the rest of the state were down 13.3 percent.

Webb said statewide, Citrus County was ranked 13th in 2007, but that ranking dropped to 18th in 2011.

"I would say crime is getting worse, not better," Webb said.

However, Dawsy accused Webb of cherry picking and comparing apples to oranges.

He said just as it would be unfair to compare Citrus County (population 140,000) to crime data from Broward County (population 1.7 million), it is misleading to compare the county to Lafayette County (population 8,000).

Forum to explain amendments

CHRIS VAN ORMER
Staff Writer

Voters facing the 11 proposed amendments to the Florida Constitution on the Nov. 6 ballot can attend a forum Wednesday, Oct. 10, to explore the issues and help form decisions.

The Citrus County Council, a not-for-profit, nonpartisan consortium of homeowner associations, civic groups and environmental groups, will host a public forum with Gail Cross, PhD., of the Marion County League of Women Voters as the presenter.

The league's position is to vote no on all 11 proposed amendments on the ballot.

"From beginning to end, these amendments are bad ideas," said Florida league president Deirdre Macnab in a Sept. 27 telephone conference with the media. "We are strongly opposing all of the 11 amendments on the ballots and we are encouraging voters to give them a thumbs down."

The proposals cover a range of subjects: the property tax system, a state revenue cap, abortion rights, how Florida Supreme Court justices are selected and funding religious schools.

Cross is a former Marion County commissioner for two terms. She is an associate professor at the University of Florida in Gainesville, president of the Marion County Senior Alliance, executive director for 12 years of Marion County Senior Services and is active in the Florida Association of Aging Service Providers, where she has served as the treasurer and is a past president.

- WHAT: Public forum for 11 amendments on November ballot.
- PRESENTER: Gail Cross, Marion County League of Women Voters.
- SPONSOR: Citrus County Council.
- WHEN: 9 a.m. Wednesday, Oct. 10.
- WHERE: Beverly Hills Lions Club, 72 Civic Circle, Beverly Hills.

Other groups have offered their views to voters to help them decide.

■ Florida TaxWatch, a private, nonprofit, nonpartisan research institute with a 32-year history as a government spending watchdog, offers its Voter Guide at www.floridataxwatch.org/2012guide.aspx. Florida TaxWatch has taken no position on the amendments, with the exception of Amendment 10, increasing the exemption on tangible property for businesses from $25,000 to $50,000, which it supports.

A SUMMARY OF THE 2012 PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

1. Health Care Services: This allows Florida to opt out of the federal Affordable Health Care Act, prohibits laws or rules compelling any person or employer to provide health care coverage or participate in any health care system.

2. Veterans Disabled Due to Combat Injury Homestead Property Tax Discount: This amendment expands the current homestead exemption available to disabled veterans to those who were not Florida residents at the time they entered military service.

3. State Government Revenue Limitation: This amendment has two parts. First, it replaces the existing revenue limitation adopted about 10 years ago because of the impact of inflation and population changes. Excess revenue would be placed in the state's "rainy day" fund, and once the fund reaches 10 percent of the prior year's total budget, the state Legislature would be required to vote to either provide tax relief or reduce property taxes. Second, the Legislature may increase the revenue limitation by a bill approved by a two-thirds majority.

4. Property Tax Limitation; Property Value Decline; Reduction for Non-Homestead Assessment Increases; Delay of Scheduled Repeal: This reduces the annual growth in assessment limitation on business and rental properties and second homes from 10 percent to 5 percent and prohibits increase in the assessed value of homestead property when the market value of the property decreases. This also gives "first-time homesteaders" an additional tax exemption.

5. State Courts: In several parts, this amendment adds a requirement for a state Supreme Court justice appointed by the governor also to be confirmed by the Senate. It also authorizes repeal of a court rule by a simple majority of the Legislature instead of the current two-thirds majority, prohibits re-enactment of any repealed rule and allows the Speaker of the House of Representatives to review all files of the Judicial Qualification Commissions even if it isn't related to impeachment considerations.

6. Prohibition of Public Funding of Abortions; Construction of Abortion Rights: This prohibits the use of public funds for abortions with the exception of rape,

FUNERAL

Later, at least 300 mourners gathered at Seven Rivers Presbyterian Church to celebrate the life of the Citrus Hills resident, a father of two teenagers.

The work in Afghanistan was simply a continuation of years of service. His brother, Barry, described a man who had a mission to help others.

"It amazes me how he accomplished this in such a short amount of time," Barry O'Rourke said.

Kevin O'Rourke served with the New York Police Department and lost men under him in the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks at the World Trade Center, having escaped the collapse by only 20 minutes. Barry O'Rourke said his brother spent 11 straight days trying to pull his men from the rubble.

"His determination and strength finally gave way to anguish as he realized his men were gone," Barry O'Rourke said.

Kevin O'Rourke retired from the NYPD and moved to Florida in 2003. Retirement did not mean a loss of activity, however.

"He wasn't one to sit still, even in retirement," Barry O'Rourke said.

Kevin O'Rourke went to New Orleans in 2005 after Hurricane Katrina, determined to build a house a day and not leave until each one had a Christmas tree inside. A man known for his abundance of tools and know-how, he built 12 houses in two weeks. And each new home included a Christmas tree.

He helped to rebuild homes in Haiti after the 2010 earthquake. After that came a stint in Iraq. And then, finally, his work in Afghanistan.

O'Rourke was embedded with American troops, teaching forensics to American and Afghan soldiers.

The day he was killed, O'Rourke had stopped at an Afghan army checkpoint just outside a joint U.S.-Afghan base. An Afghan soldier turned his gun on O'Rourke and another American.

Pastor Adam Jones said O'Rourke placed the lives of others in front of his own.

"He was putting himself in harm's way continually to save others," Jones said. "Kevin lived large on the map of history."

But he was also a humble man who gave his heart to Jesus Christ. He joined Seven Rivers Presbyterian Church in 2010.

"Kevin is with Christ now because he knew himself to be a sinner," Jones said, "a sinner who knew amazing grace."

Marion residents contract meningitis

Citrus County unscathed so far in outbreak

Chronicle

CRYSTAL RIVER — Citrus County has not been touched by a meningitis outbreak caused by a steroid medicine used to treat back pain.

Health officials say the number of people sickened by a deadly meningitis outbreak has now reached 105 cases.

The number of deaths rose by one to eight, with another fatality in Tennessee.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention updated the count on Monday. The list of nine states with reported cases stayed the same. Tennessee, Michigan, Virginia, Indiana, Florida, Maryland, Minnesota, North Carolina and Ohio previously reported cases.

Officials have tied the fungal meningitis outbreak to steroid shots for back pain. The steroid was made by a specialty pharmacy in Massachusetts.

The company has recalled the steroid which was sent to clinics in 23 states. The government last week urged doctors not to use any of the company's products.

No Citrus County physicians, clinics or hospitals reported using the tainted medicine, county health department spokeswoman Judith Tear said.

And the health department has not received word that any Citrus County residents are affected.

"We have not heard of anything in Citrus County," she said.

Three Ocala clinics — Florida Pain Clinic, Marion Pain Management Center, and Surgery Center of Ocala — are among six Florida facilities that reported using the medication. The others are in Orlando, Pensacola and Miami.

Four Floridians, who all live in Marion County, have contracted meningitis, state health officials said.

The state health department announced Monday a precautionary voluntary recall of all New England Compounding Center (NECC) products distributed since January has been issued by the company, in coordination with the Food and Drug Administration.

This recall is in addition to the Oct. 5 recall of the three contaminated lots of NECC methylprednisolone acetate used for epidural back injections.

The Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta has expanded the timeline and scope of injection risk to include any patients known or suspected to have received back or joint injections with the suspect lots of NECC methylprednisolone acetate since May 21.

If symptomatic, these patients should be evaluated immediately by their health care professional and monitored or treated as necessary. Patients without symptoms should be evaluated by their health care professionals as soon as possible.

This meningitis cannot be spread from person to person. At this time, there has not been a case of septic arthritis related to contaminated steroid joint injections.

This report includes information from The Associated Press.

A century of Girl Scouts

Local group celebrates '100 years and S'more'

ANDREW WELFEL
Special to the Chronicle

The excited screams and shouts of dozens of little girls accompanied the smell of morning dew and hot dogs roasting on the grill. Tents, tables and canopies, filled with pictures and crafts, brought life to the vacant field that housed the historic event.

Nearly 80 Girl Scouts joined together Saturday at Scout Hut in Homosassa to celebrate "100 Years and S'more," an event honoring the 100th anniversary of Girl Scouts. All ages and families were invited to come.

Three different girls served as flag bearers kicking off the event with the traditional flag ceremony. They carried an American flag, a national Girl Scout of the United States of America flag and a flag representing the Girl Scouts of West Central Florida.

Roni Francois, a lifetime Girl Scout and staff member for 17 years, said it's important not to lose a tradition like the flag ceremony because it reminds the girls of the higher purpose behind all the activities and work they do.

"It's about building character and respect," Francois said. "Tradition is the common thread between 1912 and 2012."

The girls spent the rest of the day trying their hand at crafts and looking at the organization's timeline.

Francois was a main architect for the timeline, which was filled with decade by decade comparisons complete with old pictures and real uniforms from the 1950s through the 1990s. She put together old newspaper clips from as far back as 1948. Printouts of historical due fees (25 cents in 1915; $12 in 2010), membership totals, Girl Scout Laws, Girl Scout Promises and uniform specifications hung in picture frames and demonstrated how much has changed and how much has stayed the same in 100 years.

She also included whatever Girl Scout mission statements she could find. The 1912 version incorporated phraseology like "wives and mothers," and "rightful places in life." The 1917 statement said to "recognize their obligations to God and country," and the 1924 and 1931 editions said girls ought to "realize the ideal of womanhood."

These contrasted with the most recent 2005 statement which said, "Girl Scouting builds girls of courage, confidence, and character, who make the world a better a place."

"The change of emphasis away from women as only dutiful wives and mothers is an example of how Girl Scouts has morphed and grown throughout the years," Francois said.

DAVE SIGLER/Chronicle

Brownie Abbi Johnson and her little brother Elliott help with the tents Saturday at the Homosassa Scout Hut. Dozens of girl scouts attended the celebration. The girl scouts celebrated their 100th birthday March 12, and members in the region are celebrating the milestone. All the troops in the Circle of Springs district are rounding up, playing historical games and activities, making crafts and learning about girl scouting history. The girls presented a time line that showed the progression from what girls were taught 100 years ago to what they are taught in current times. "Today our girls are taught, science, technology, engineering and math," said Roni Francois, Girl Scouting manager of Citrus, Marion and Sumter Counties. "Girls are going from housekeepers to the women who are the strength of our future." The first Girl Scout troop in central of Florida was based in Tampa and will be celebrating its birthday in 2013, so the troops are also celebrating that event as well. Girl Scouts in attendance received their 100th anniversary badge at the Homosassa gathering.

NC, Fla. soldiers die in Afghanistan

FORT BRAGG, N.C. — The Pentagon said soldiers from North Carolina and Florida have been killed in combat in Afghanistan.

The Department of Defense said 25-year-old Staff Sgt. Justin C. Marquez of Aberdeen and 27-year-old Warrant Officer Joseph L. Schiro of Coral Springs, Fla., were killed Saturday.

Officials said they died from gunshot wounds while participating in a patrol in the Wardak province of Afghanistan.

The men were assigned to the 1st Special Forces Battalion, 3rd Special Forces Group at Fort Bragg.

Police: Bears fan gets throat slashed

JACKSONVILLE — Authorities say a Chicago fan who came to Jacksonville for the Bears-Jaguars football game had his throat slashed inside a bar.

The Jacksonville Sheriff's Office said 42-year-old William C. "Chris" Pettry died early Sunday inside Fionn MacCool's, an Irish-themed restaurant.

Twenty-seven-year-old Matthew Hinson is being held without bond on a murder charge. Jacksonville jail records didn't list an attorney for Hinson.

Witnesses told detectives Hinson cut Pettry's throat after the victim had been talking with the suspect's wife. Detectives said Hinson then put the bloody knife in his pocket and calmly walked out of the restaurant.

Human skull found in Banana River

COCOA BEACH — Authorities said children found a partial human skull while spearfishing in the Banana River.

The discovery was made Saturday evening in an area between Patrick Air Force Base and Cocoa Beach.

Brevard County Sheriff's Office spokesman John Mellick said the skull was in two feet of water some 15 feet offshore. It was missing a jawbone.

A sheriff's dive team conducted a grid search on Sunday but found no additional clues.

talk about and massage the numbers. He is trying to paint a picture of a rising crime rate in the county. He is intentionally misleading the public. It's a scare tactic," Dawsy said.

Dawsy pointed to data he said is available on the FDLE's website, which he said supports his claim that per 100,000 persons (per capita), Citrus County is the second safest in the state in 2011.

He produced data for counties with populations of 100,000 to 300,000 which showed index crimes for the county from 1998 to 2011.

In 1998, when the population was lower, there were 2,894 index crimes, but in 2011 it was down 2,540. According to those numbers, crime has dropped 12 percent since 1998.

Except for a slight bump in 2010 to 2,754, those figures have remained in the lower- to mid-2,000s throughout the 13-year stretch.

"So today in Citrus County, you are safer than you were in 1998. I don't think he (Webb) understands how the UCR works. It's a very complicated and confusing process," Dawsy said.

Dawsy said not all crimes are reported by various agencies and therefore would not be reflected in the FDLE reports. He said that is like comparing apples to oranges when comparisons are drawn between counties.

But Webb said he fully understands the process and believes CCSO manipulated the figures for 2011, which showed Citrus' crime index dropped by 7.8 percent from the previous year.

Webb said one way to manipulate the numbers is by changing the designation on a case. He said for example, a case which involves someone breaking the windows of a car and stealing loose change in it can go from simple vandalism and petit theft to burglary.

"It can go from an unreportable crime to a reportable one, just like that. You can make the numbers say whatever you want them to say. And, it's like everything he (Dawsy) does. He changes things whenever it suits him. If it doesn't suit him, well, then it is too complicated," Webb said.

"He is the one that brags about having a master's degree and all his management experience, but I also took all my college math and I know when things don't add up," Webb said.

Webb said while business and tourism officials will not like the fact he is pointing to an increasing crime rate in the county, he thinks it is important to tell the truth.

"The truth is, crime has been getting worse in this county in the past four years," Webb said.

Dawsy, however, said the numbers are on his side.

"Per 100,000 persons, per capita, we are the second-safest county in a state which, like I always tell people, is the sixth worst in the nation for crime," he said.

"Crime is controlled here and I think it is a disservice to this community what he (Webb) is trying to do."

Group removes 51 tons of lyngbya

Special to the Chronicle

Kings Bay Rotary removed more than 51 tons of lyngbya algae from Kings Bay in the month of September. Six-and-a-half tons were removed by hand at Three Sisters Springs and 45 tons by mechanical device in the Hunter Springs basin.

September marks the beginning of the second year of the Kings Bay Rotary's service project called "One Rake at a Time."

In the first year of the project, more than 105 tons of the noxious algae were removed, averaging over 575 pounds per day. Sixty tons were removed by hand and 45 tons by mechanical device.

In the second year of the project, more mechanical harvesting will aid volunteers raking up the mess of algae that has invaded King's Bay. This year the goal is to remove 1,000 tons of oxygen-robbing lyngbya from Kings Bay to help restore water quality and fish habitat.

Before mechanical cleaning up of lyngbya, volunteers snorkel an area to identify any beneficial submerged aquatic vegetation or hazards and garbage that needs to be removed first. Lyngbya is then carefully lifted and de-watered as it rolls up a live conveyer belt into a pontoon boat.

Once the boat is full, it unloads the lyngbya muck that contains live and dead algae debris onto another 40-foot conveyer that takes it to a waiting three-and-a-half ton dump trailer.

It costs about $50 per ton for mechanical removal costs, which are paid for through donations to the Kings Bay Rotary Charitable Foundation. The upcoming Stone Crab Jam on Nov. 3 will help raise money for the project.

Mechanical removal of lyngbya will continue in October at low tides in the Hunters Spring canals and basin. The next hand removal work day will be from 10 a.m. to noon Monday, Oct. 15, at Three Sisters Springs. Sign up in advance as space is limited.

For information, contact Art Jones at 727-642-7659; or by email at MrAWJones@aol.com; or on Facebook, like "Save Kings Bay" to stay updated on the project.

incest or to save the pregnant woman's life. This stipulates that the state Constitution cannot be interpreted to include broader rights to abortion than those contained in the U.S. Constitution.

8. Religious Freedom: This deletes the current provision in the state Constitution that prohibits taxpayer funding of religious institutions and would allow the state to use public money to fund religious institutions and schools.

9. Homestead Property Tax Exemption for Surviving Spouse of Military Veteran or First Responder: This grants full homestead property relief to surviving spouses of military veterans who die from service-connected causes while on active duty or first responders killed in the line of duty.

10. Tangible Personal Property Exemption: This gives businesses an additional exemption on tangible property such as furniture and equipment used for the business, increasing it from the current $25,000 to $50,000.

11. Additional Homestead Exemption for Low-Income Seniors Who Maintain Long-Term Residency on Property; Equal to Assessed Valuation: This gives counties and cities authority to grant full homestead property exemptions to low-income seniors (age 65 and older) who have lived in their home for at least 25 years and whose home has a just value of less than $250,000.

be overshadowed by the national race," said Dominic M. Calabro, president and CEO of Florida TaxWatch. "These amendments are proposing to change our state's founding document, and those changes must not be taken lightly."

According to Florida TaxWatch, all 11 amendments were placed on the ballot by the Florida Legislature. Since at least 1978, there have never been more amendments before the voters on a single ballot, except in 1998, when the Constitutional Revision Commission brought nine amendments, bringing the total to 13.

■ James Madison Institute (JMI) released a special edition of The Journal of The James Madison Institute that introduces and analyzes the 11 constitutional amendments.

"It's easy for campaign noise to distract from the discussion on state constitutional amendments, thus we anticipate Floridians will use this comprehensive, user-friendly guide as a refresher or to get up to speed," said Dr. J. Robert McClure, JMI president and CEO.

JMI is a Florida-based research and educational organization engaged in the battle of ideas. According to its mission, it has remained independent, nonprofit and nonpartisan since its inception in 1987.

According to the JMI journal, the large number of amendments is not an anomaly. Since the 1968 adoption of the current Florida Constitution, voters have ratified 121 amendments to it and rejected 34 others. Twelve other amendments were removed from the ballot by the Florida Supreme Court.

By contrast, the U.S. Constitution has been amended only 27 times, most of which came in clusters at critical historical points.

Out of the 11 amendments, JMI policy staff provided recommendations on six, including Amendments 1, 2, 3, 5, 8 and 10. It had no recommendation on the remaining five.

"As a result of the passage of the 2006 ballot amendment requiring that future proposed amendments receive at least 60 percent of the vote, it's possible that this batch of amendments may face more of a struggle to pass," said Robert Sanchez, JMI director of policy. "Several of these amendments are extremely important to Florida's future, and we hope this service to Floridians will help reignite the conversation and encourage an informed vote."

Citizens chairman calls for another look at loan plan

The News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE — Citizens Property Insurance Corp.'s chairman on Monday called for an independent review of a $350-million loan program designed to coax private companies to take some of the state-backed insurer's riskier policies.

Following a series of queries that included a letter from the incoming House speaker, Citizens Chairman Carlos Lacasa called for outside experts to review the plan, known as the surplus note program. Backers say the program could reduce the ranks in Citizens by up to 350,000 policies.

The plan, which would offer up to $50 million in low-interest loans to individual companies willing to take customers out of the state-run pool, has raised questions from some lawmakers, insurance industry representatives and the state's insurance consumer advocate since it was approved by the Citizens board last month.

"An outside assessment will give the public added confidence that, if we move forward with the SNP, we are doing so with all available information and a firm understanding of its potential impact on our policyholders and Florida taxpayers," Lacasa wrote in a letter to Citizens President and CEO Barry Gilway.

Brought on board this summer, Gilway has said he hopes to take advantage of low interest rates to close on a deal by the end of the year. The plan would provide 20-year, low-interest loans to companies willing to take out Citizens policies for at least 10 years.

"My staff and I truly believe this program will help our policyholders and serve the public interest," Gilway said in a letter to Rep. Frank Artiles, R-Miami.

On Friday, incoming House Speaker Will Weatherford, R-Wesley Chapel, joined a growing list of legislators asking Citizens to take its time. In a letter to Lacasa, Weatherford said he is wary about the lack of legislative input up to this point on a program "that affects the well-being of so many Floridians."

"I am concerned that the board's aggressive timeline will result in the program's implementation before the two chambers of the Legislature complete hearings on this important matter of state policy," Weatherford said.

Among other concerns, critics wonder why the program is only open to existing companies and why there is such a push to close a deal before the end of the year. Last month, Artiles requested a slew of documents from Citizens surrounding the surplus notes program, including the speed to which it is being pursued.

Gilway's response has been consistent: The loan program is a prudent and cost-effective way to address concerns that Citizens is over exposed.

"I assure you that the only sense of urgency I feel is to do what I was hired to do: provide a complete and thorough analysis of all options available to Citizens to help return it to its original purpose and to do so in a way that benefits both taxpayers and Citizens policyholders," Gilway wrote.

Weatherford, however, said in its haste, Citizens may be overstepping its bounds by approving the distribution of up to $350 million. He also made it clear the Legislature wants to weigh in on the matter.

"Please be assured, this letter is not intended to place a chilling effect on efforts to achieve our shared goal," Weatherford wrote. "Rather, it is an indication of my commitment to ensuring that good ideas are identified and fully analyzed through a public and transparent process."

State BRIEF

Insurance fund could be short

TALLAHASSEE — A state-created fund that backs up private insurers in Florida could fall short of the money it needs to pay off hurricane insurance claims if a major storm were to pound the state.

A new round of estimates drawn up for an advisory panel concludes that the state could fall $1.52 billion short of what's needed to cover its obligations for the fund.

On Tuesday, the panel will review and approve the estimates, which are similar to ones drawn up earlier this year.

Florida created a special fund after Hurricane Andrew caused widespread damage 20 years ago.

The Florida Hurricane Catastrophe Fund offers insurance companies reinsurance at prices generally lower than those in the private market. It was designed to help keep private insurers from leaving the state. But the fund has to borrow money if claims exceed its cash reserves.

Book sale a success

LYNNE BOELE/Special to the Chronicle

Gwen Schoenthal, age 8, of Homosassa, happily peruses a book at the recent Friends of the Citrus County Library System Fall Book Sale. Gwen's favorite books are the Lemony Snicket series and the Diary of a Wimpy Kid. Her mother said that this was the first Friends' book sale for the family and that they would return in the spring for the next Friends sale.

Friends of Citrus County Library System collects $47,143.03

LYNNE BOELE
Special to the Chronicle

Readers may cling to their Kindles and Nooks, but judging by the crowds at the Friends of the Citrus County Library System Fall 2012 Book Sale, people still love to turn the pages of a real book.

More than 1,000 library lovers turned out during the five-day event, seeking bargains among the books, DVDs, CDs, games and puzzles. Their purchases totaled $47,143.03 for the Citrus County Library System. The volunteer organization has now raised $708,557 since they started running the book sale. Revenue from these semi-annual sales assists county libraries and the library system in the purchase of new materials and services, acquisitions that would not otherwise be possible in these budget-constrained times.

The bright yellow T-shirts and colorful aprons sported by Friends members were visible throughout the Citrus County Auditorium, as volunteers organized and displayed 1,140 banana boxes filled with reading related materials. More than 135 volunteers from Central Ridge, Coastal and Lakes Region Libraries worked the sale, helping shoppers locate favorite subjects, authors and titles. Mothers, fathers, grandparents and children all found something to their liking among the 80,000 items in the collection.

The Friends again collected donations for the Dolly Parton Imagination Library project, which provides a book a month for children from birth to age 5. Sale goers contributed $370 to the Citrus County Education Foundation to help defray postage expenses of $30 a year per child.

FOCCLS operates year-round at the Book House located in the Historic Hernando School, sorting, pricing and packing donated books. The group is now at work preparing for the next sale, which will take place March 8-12. Advocating the "Read-Return-Recycle" motto, the Friends welcome donations of gently used books, DVDs, CDs, games and puzzles. Materials may be dropped off at the check out desks of Central Ridge, Coastal or Lakes Regional libraries. For more information, visit www.foccls.org.

Quilter art work in October at CF

The College of Central Florida will host the art of quilter Karol Kusmaul this month at the Citrus Campus.

Kusmaul's exhibit includes hand- and machine-quilted works of art. Her works have been published in several publications and shown at quilt festivals throughout the United States and Costa Rica.

"One of the things I love about quilting is the rags-to-riches aspect of taking scrap fabrics or remnants of old clothing, curtains or whatever else you have, and transforming them into beautiful works of art," Kusmaul said. "The patterns and designs of traditional quilts, as well as those of quilted art pieces, are limitless."

The exhibit, which opened Friday, runs through Nov. 2 in the upstairs exhibition hall in the Dorothea G. Jerome Building, 3800 S. Lecanto Highway in Lecanto.

A reception is planned from 5 to 7 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 11.

Exhibit hours are 8:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m., Monday through Thursday; 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Friday. The exhibit is closed weekends. There is no charge to attend the exhibition or the opening, which are made possible by the CF Foundation.

For information, contact CF Associate Professor of Visual Arts Michele Wirt at 352-746-6721, ext. 6131.

Celebrating special September

Sea Cadets' Manatee Division becomes commissioned unit

Special to the Chronicle

Manatee Division of the U.S. Naval Sea Cadet Corps recently celebrated its unit commissioning at Parson's Memorial Presbyterian Church in Yankeetown.

The event was a culmination of several years of the group working toward an enrollment of 25 full-time cadets. Led by Lt. Todd Dunn, the unit achieved this status in July and was formally recognized by the Navy League and USNSCC leadership at the ceremony.

"I am extremely proud of this group of cadets and what they accomplished. They are here at an exciting time in the history of our unit," Dunn said.

Guests included Lt. Cmdr. Myron Wambold, NSCC, who established Manatee Division six years ago; Lt. Linda Jones, commander of U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary Flotilla 15-01; Bob Hursher from Fleet Reserve 186; Cmdr. Tony Almon, a retired Navy SEAL; and several USNSCC leaders from other Florida units.

Executive Petty Officer BM1 Michael Greene spoke about the partnership between the Division and USCG Station Yankeetown, where the cadets drill.

Greene's staffs often provide hands-on training to the cadets and provided boat and station tours to guests who attended the event.

Lieutenant Cmdr. Gail Ryan, regional director for Region 6-1 the USNSCC, told the audience of about 100 guests how, little by little, this unit, "in the middle of nowhere," grew into a sizable and successful group of dedicated cadets and staff.

Central Florida Region President Chris Paddock spoke about the mission of his organization and the importance of its role in the lives of the young sea cadets.

He recollected how Lt. Dunn expressed a desire a few years back to partner with the Tampa Bay Council to make the Yankeetown unit the best it could be. The goal has been reached and the two men shared a handshake as Paddock presented a letter from Florida State President Skip Witunski.

Special to the Chronicle

At the conclusion of the ceremony, Executive Officer Lt.j.g. Pusey commanded the cadets to "set the watch," a Navy tradition that is the first official act of a new command.

The month of September was special for Manatee Division, as it was National Sea Cadet Month, the 50th anniversary of the Naval Sea Cadet Corps and Lt. Dunn's third anniversary as commanding officer.

AARP needs help with free Tax-Aide service

Special to the Chronicle

AARP Tax-Aide is a national service of the AARP Foundation, offered in conjunction with the U.S. Internal Revenue Service. It is a volunteer-run program whose mission is to provide high-quality free assistance in the preparation and electronic filing of federal income tax returns for low- and middle-income taxpayers.

Volunteers are trained locally and are certified by the IRS to assist taxpayers in preparing their federal income tax forms. All tax returns are complete using IRS/AARP-provided computers and software. Last year in Citrus County, more than 100 volunteers provided this free help to more than 6,000 residents.

Are you good with numbers? Tax volunteers help taxpayers by preparing and filing federal tax returns. Formal tax preparation experience is not required. Training is provided.

Are you tech Savvy? Technical volunteers manage computer equipment, ensure taxpayer data security, manage small networks and provide technical assistance to other volunteers.

Are you a people person? Greeters welcome taxpayers at a site and make sure they have all the necessary paperwork before meeting with a tax volunteer. They also manage the flow of taxpayers being served.

To volunteer, visit the website at AARP.org/taxaide, click on "Volunteer," then click on "Volunteer with AARP Foundation Tax-Aide for 2013," register and enter the required contact information.

Alternatively, email John Clarke, district coordinator for Citrus County, at johnwc741taxaide@gmail.com.

Be sure to provide contact information in the email.

Advocates needed for children in court program

Special to the Chronicle

Become an advocate for an abused or neglected child — become a guardian ad litem volunteer.

There are more than 1,800 children in the Marion, Hernando, Lake, Sumter and Citrus counties who have been removed from their homes for alleged abuse, abandonment or neglect, who are now part of a dependency court proceeding. These children need someone who will speak up for them.

A GAL is a volunteer appointed by the court to advocate for a child.

The volunteer works as part of a team with a volunteer supervisor and program attorney. He/she becomes familiar with the child and the child's case and makes recommendations to the court to help ensure a safe, caring, stable and permanent environment for that child.

Persons 21 years and older who successfully complete the pre-service training program, have a clean criminal background check and who are able to be objective are eligible. A GAL must successfully complete 30 hours of pre-service training.

On average, volunteers spend 5 to 10 hours a month on a case. Most cases last 10 months.

The next training will be 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Nov. 1, 2, 5 and 6 at Calvary Chapel of Inverness, 960 S. U.S. 41. Call Lynn Sennett at 352-274-5231 or email her at Lynn.Sennett@GAL.FL.Gov.

Slash size of county government

County employees have not had a raise in four years and it does not look like one is coming in the next fiscal year.

While the economy appears to be improving slightly, the future of the county's tax base is in a precarious position. The very public conversation about closing the nuclear power plant in Crystal River would have a catastrophic impact on the county's budget and the quality of life in our community.

THE ISSUE:
No pay increase for county employees.

OUR OPINION:
County must find the right size.

With our national economy trying to get a footing, most businesses are in the same condition that local government finds itself. Businesses and government are fighting to maintain jobs, and if raises are approved, it most likely will result in the need to trim additional jobs.

These are difficult times for everyone.

In looking forward, the county commission is considering giving employees an additional floating holiday to soften the disappointment of not getting a raise. While we have sympathy for the public employees who have not gotten a raise, we think the floating holiday idea is not a good one.

In fact, it is simply reinforcing some of the unsound financial practices that got us to this point in the first place.

The bottom line is our county government has to be smaller. The county has eaten into reserves to the point of no return. Years of borrowing money to fund capital improvement projects no longer looks like a brilliant decision, as some of the funding sources are also shrinking.

Who would have thought cars with better gas mileage would mean less gas consumption which means less gas tax which has been pledged to pay off road improvement bonds?

County government — and all levels of our government — must figure out how to prioritize and reduce spending.

The starting point is to reduce expectations both to employees and to citizens.

When the county expands the number of holidays to employees, improves the pension plan, pays all of the health care expenses, purchases take-home vehicles, etc., that cost is passed along to taxpayers.

When the county offers new services to citizens, that cost is passed along to taxpayers.

If county government is going to avoid financial crisis, it must begin to decide what are the core services that must be provided? There are things government does because we — the citizens — appreciate and enjoy the effort. But they are not core functions of government.

The tough decisions are to identify those functions and services that are not essential. Commissioners will have to decide if there is overwhelming support for the service, then they will have to generate the courage to increase the tax rate and pay for it. But if the opposition to taxes is stronger than the appreciation of the service — the service must be reduced or eliminated.

It's not simple. In fact, as many in private business know, it's painful. But county government has kicked the can down the road long enough. Now it's time for leadership and decision-making.

Giving employees an additional holiday — when public employees already have more holidays than employees of private companies — is a feel-good move that just adds more costs and decreases efficiency.

County government must find the right size for the citizens it serves. It will be a painful journey, but it is inevitable.

Holding utility customers hostage

Pierre Tristam
FLORIDA VOICES

Private investors aren't big on nuclear power. It's not cost-effective. That's why not a single new nuclear reactor has been built in the United States in three decades, despite generous federal loan guarantees and tax credits to utilities that shift much of the cost to taxpayers.

But in 2006, the Florida Legislature decided the rules of free enterprise don't apply to big utility companies. Investors may not want to risk their dollars on nukes, but ratepayers now don't have a choice. The Legislature changed the law to allow utility companies to charge customers years in advance for projected construction costs of nuclear power plants — whether those plants are built or not. Essentially, they gave the utility companies a blank check at ratepayers' expense.

Progress Energy and Florida Power & Light, two of the state's three largest utilities, took full advantage, claiming more than $1 billion for so-far imaginary projects. And they're looking for more this year.

FPL is spending some of the money on nuclear power plant maintenance. And the two utilities are allegedly setting aside money for new nuclear plants at Turkey Point near Miami and in Levy County. Still, every year, Progress and FPL appear before the Florida Public Service Commission to make a pitch for more money. All they have to do is show that projected costs are "prudent" and that they'll benefit future customers, though neither company has actually committed to building the plants.

On Thursday, the Florida Supreme Court heard arguments from the Tennessee-based Southern Alliance for Clean Energy, an environmental group, that the scheme be declared unconstitutional. The alliance is right, but not because it opposes nuclear power on principle. That's its weakest argument. It's right because Florida's so-called "cost-recovery" program is allowing utilities to shift all the risk from shareholders and onto customers, at a time when nuclear is among the least convincing energy option.

The numbers tell the story. In 2009, Progress Energy was proposing two nuclear reactors in Levy County for $3 billion each. This year, the projected cost is closer to $12 billion per reactor. At Turkey Point, FPL's proposed reactors would cost between $12.8 billion and $18.7 billion.

Is a more than $40 billion investment for just four reactors really Florida's best bet on 21st century energy?

Remember, the proposals were floated in the middle of the last decade, when Florida was booming and the nuclear power industry appeared to be emerging from its self-inflicted doghouse after the Three Mile Island and Chernobyl disasters.

This also was before:

■ the Nuclear Regulatory Commission in 2009 declared Westinghouse's designs for FPL's and Progress Energy's reactors flawed and in need of redesign.

■ the Fukushima nuclear disaster in Japan in March 2011 dimmed nuclear's promise again.

■ the discoveries of enormous new reserves of natural gas on American territory.

■ the collapse in natural gas prices, making that relatively cleaner fuel more attractive for electricity production.

■ the Great Recession shrunk Florida's population projections and with it, the state's need for more energy.

Nuclear may still make some sense. But let companies bear the financial risks, especially since millions of people around the plants still assume the risk of accidents.

There should be no pre-pay plans, no vague, open-ended pledges to build these plants sometime in the distant future, when millions of current ratepayers won't be around to benefit from the improbably cheaper rates the utilities promise.

Ironically, FPL and Progress Energy recently made their own case against nukes. Since last year, FPL has been installing so-called "smart meters" on 3 million Florida homes and businesses. Progress Energy is installing them soon. The next-generation meters, the two companies claimed before the PSC last month in a workshop unrelated to the nuclear question, will make demand on the power grid more efficient and reduce the need for new power plants.

Great idea. FPL and Progress Energy should start by scrapping their vague and colossally expensive nuclear construction projects. If they don't, the Supreme Court should help them connect the dots, because ratepayers should not be held hostage to the utilities' nuclear power-hunger.

Destroying the county

I cannot sit back any longer and watch these county commissioners bankrupt and destroy our county. The road to nowhere and this foolish port nonsense is why they raised the millage rate on our taxes. If you or I owned property and the county wanted it, they would take it by eminent domain; but they paid a whopping $2,900,000 of our tax dollars for Ottawa and now they cry we have a deficit and raise millage which is a tax increase.

Now we have this port idiocy. A beautiful Withlacoochee trail runs along the barge canal for cyclists, skaters, walkers, horse riding, etc., and several fishing piers and picnic areas. Do these commissioners now want to destroy that, too? Next, if this fiasco ever materializes, I believe the EPA, Florida Fish and Wildlife and environmentalists will file lawsuits to stop it and rightly so. We have a unique area with a protected species found almost nowhere else, the manatee. The necessary dredging and following pollution certainly will be detrimental to them and our already deteriorating waters.

We had our chance not to reelect Mr. Meek and Mr. Damato at the primary, but the voters failed. Now we are stuck with them and their foolish spending, which we all will pay for. I suggest to Mr. Meek and Mr. Damato, move to the docks of Tampa, Baltimore and Miami if that's what you like and leave the Nature Coast alone.

Debunking the plan

I hope everyone got to read John Read's column "Economic woes need not be catastrophic" in the Sunday, Sept. 23, Chronicle. I've said again and again the Democrats don't have a plan to fix our economic problems other than running around spreading class warfare. John has a plan. Go back to the days of Jimmy Carter. He's dead serious; he suggests going back to the days of Jimmy Carter.

I can't begin to rebut his quarter-page article in 350 words, so let's start with his last big lie in the last paragraph. John said "While the national debt is indeed large and risks are inherent in any solution to our current problem, much of the money that is being created now can be absorbed later through the use of higher interest rates that will apply the brakes on excessive borrowing and spending."

This was the approach used in the inflationary 1970s. For those of you who weren't alive then, those were the days of Jimmy Carter, 18 percent interest rates, and 18 percent inflation. Those are the days that we never want to go back to.

Our national debt was $907 billion in 1980. Even paying a 13 percent interest rate, the interest on the debt came to $118 billion. Today, we are paying an average interest rate of 2 percent on a debt of $17 trillion or $343 billion a year. If we double the interest rate as John suggests, our debt load becomes $686 billion a year. If we go to the historical average of 6 percent, the debt load soars to more than $1 trillion.

Despite what John suggests, we don't have any wiggle room in the federal interest rate. Any increase will send our debt load soaring to numbers we can't survive.

I have been waiting on the Democrats to formulate a plan other than class warfare and this is it. We will go back to the days of Jimmy Carter. This is a plan to wheel your money to the grocery store in a wheel barrow to buy a loaf of bread.

Second opinions

This is to the man who asked if you could get a second opinion for dental work: Yes, absolutely. When I moved (here) 10 years ago, I looked for a new dentist. I always have my teeth cleaned twice a year. I went to ... dentist No. 1 and he said I needed a "deep teeth cleaning" for $900. I was shocked. Therefore, I went back to my old dentist in Leesburg and asked him if I needed a deep teeth cleaning. He said, "No, not at all." Two years later I went to a dentist No. 2 ... who told me that I had cavities in the teeth that support my three bridges. He said they don't show up on X-rays, but he could tell they were there. Cost: $7,000. Again I went back to my old dentist and he said that there were no cavities. Cost: zero.

Six years later I went to dentist No. 3 ... He said I needed some dental work done. Cost: $5,000. Again I went back to my old dentist. Yes, I did need this work done but he'd charge me $3,000. I saved $2,000 there. Sir, don't be bashful. Get a second opinion.

Sign ridiculous

As you go east on (County Road) 486 and you're turning into Brentwood, I cannot believe they put a stop sign there. I mean, it's totally ridiculous. Why don't they have it at all the other intersections that are going into places? Why just there?

Not exactly

Harriet Haywood took literary license in her response in Sunday's Chronicle to my previous comments. First, "Thanks to Frank ... for defending the Wall Street bankers ...."

Not exactly. My comment was that the government is more responsible than Wall Street for the financial turmoil brought about by toxic mortgages. That does not exonerate Wall Street bankers from anything. Toxic mortgages caused the crisis not Wall Street investors, and the government is solely responsible for creating the sub-prime mortgage program which led to toxic mortgages. Even the ultra-liberal Boston Globe newspaper recognized this when they opined that (former) U.S. Rep. Barney Frank's fingerprints were all over the financial crisis.

"Since the 2008 crash in the wake of staggering unemployment ... Republican Congress has refused to work ...."

Not exactly. Democrats controlled both houses of Congress the first two years of the Obama administration. A Democrat-controlled Congress in '07 and '08 contributed to the bad economy Obama inherited. Together, the Democrats made it demonstratively worse over their four-year reign. Voters responded by giving Republicans control of the House in 2010. You seem to have overlooked the fact that Democrats still control the Senate — it's not a Republican Congress.

Obamacare or ACA. Even Republicans recognize that there are desirable parts of ACA which they intend to include in whatever replacement program they have. It's interesting that Democrats chose to have a truckload of negatives until after the election, such as the 20-some new taxes levied by ACA on everyone and everything, the $716 billion theft of Medicare funds to support ACA programs, the health care rationing "committee," the 1,600 new IRS agents to enforce the law, etc.

"All independent polls ... Obama bent over backwards to work with Republicans"?

Not exactly. The DNC is not a credible independent source of information.

Procrastinating

"America today faces one of the greatest threats to its existence since our founding. It is from our own government and its unsustainable spending. If we don't change course in the near future — most likely the next two years — America as we've known it could soon be a shell of its former self. We could face a sudden economic collapse worse than the Great Depression, or we could enter an era of managed decline and waning influence. Sooner or later, our 'debt bomb' will go off." From: "The Debt Bomb" by U.S. Sen. Tom A. Coburn, MD.

Democrat or Republican, we must reach a negotiated solution. Both parties were elected to Congress to serve us, as citizens, not special interests, self-interests and "the party." You gave your pledge to serve your country and citizens and not to Norquist and those who can plow large funds into political campaigns (either party) (thanks to the Supreme Court).

Congress, stop procrastinating and start saving this country before it is too late!

Sad world

In regard to "Woman's rights," Donald C. Vogwill, Hernando, on Sept. 25. Guess what, yes, we have God's given free will, but His commandment: Do not kill, murder or by bodily means or by mouth or by thought.

We don't listen to our God, our creator, our father. If our God gives us children, why do we kill them. Mr. Vogwill, if you were in your mother's womb, would you ask her, why did you kill me?

Also (in) regard to "Help all children," we need to control our passions. We need not to support the contraception companies as only married people can enjoy their sexual feelings. So one man and one woman can procreate as there is egg and sperm to make a living human being. So we need to teach our children, teens and grownups these thoughts and practice self-control and not let the devil control us as he is doing for centuries.

In Sept. 28's newspaper, Hobby Lobby doesn't want to pay to kill babies. Good for them and God bless them. People know the (Ten) Commandments and yet they don't want to follow them. Oh! What a sad world.

Shirley Saitta

Taking control

In his letter to the Chronicle, Sept. 25, Ken Geiger seems to be making some unfounded assumptions about my motivations. I firmly believe that people of faith and conscience should be able to speak and practice their beliefs as long as they do not attempt to give their personal beliefs the force of law. That is prohibited by our Constitution.

Catholic bishops have attempted to impose Catholic religious beliefs on non-Catholic employees of Catholic businesses, claiming that their religious freedom is being violated. Women who work for Catholic institutions should not be forced to comply with Catholic beliefs. Bishop Zubik said, "The concern for me still is that religious institutions or anybody for that matter being forced to do something that goes against their conscience," anybody but women apparently. The Leadership Conference of Women Religious, representing about 57,000 religious women who have devoted their lives to serving their church also have problems with exclusive male authority structures making decisions about and for women including abortions and contraception. These women have just as much right to express their religious convictions as do the bishops. As President Obama said, "No woman's health should depend on who she is, or where she works, or how much money she makes. Every woman should be in control of the decisions that affect her own health. Period."

Men who do not believe that women are second-class citizens would trust that women are able to make moral decisions based on their own beliefs and not vote for legislation that humiliates and degrades women putting intimate decisions affecting their health and well-being in the hands of politicians.

Blame misplaced

Leonard Pitts has apparently joined Jesse Jackson and Al Sharpton as he continues to spew his anti-white drivel in his Sept. 24 column.

According to Mr. Pitts, a (black?) girl named Vanessa was repulsed by a bumper sticker that read "2012 Don't Re-Nig." For this isolated incident, Mr. Pitts denigrates the millions of whites who elected our black president as closet racists.

Professional racists cry wolf over every perceived and phony incident — re: the false rape accusations against the Duke University lacrosse students, which is counterproductive to racial unity and conciliation.

Putting the racial question in its proper context, several years ago, the FBI investigated an annual total of 300 cases of race-related crimes, not all black vs. white, by the way. With a population of more than 300 million, the FBI could uncover less than one incident per one million Americans.

Taking race relations one step further, one percent dyed-in-the-wool black and white bigots, yes there are black bigots, too, Mr. Pitts, total more than 3 million people. This is certainly a substantial number. However, to blame the vast majority of the people for an insignificant minority's bigotry is not only childish but stupid and self-serving. Professional racists earn their living perpetuating a rift in racial harmony, rather than building a bridge across the racial divide.

After the election of a black president by millions of white people, what Mr. Pitts and his token example, Vanessa, do not seem to understand, or refuse to understand, is that no amount of laws, enforcement, coercion or societal pressures are going to eliminate altogether the perverted attitudes of bigots toward Jews, Italians, Irish, Muslims, Latinos and yes, even blacks, from whomever or wherever that fanaticism is rooted.

Despite the coterie of professional racists' counterfeit charges, the fact remains that it is the majority of whites who are attempting to make Dr. Martin Luther King's dream of a color-blind America come true.

What's happening?

This is the second time I have called in about this situation about the Navy giving some of our young men and women who have served more than 13 years and up, a pink slip. And then in turn, they're getting into the Reserves and having them to come in and fill up their jobs. These men and women were making careers out of their service. What is our government doing to them and why is it happening?

No respect

How to respond to ignorance? Well, here goes: Read Maxwell's column in the Tampa Times on Sunday (Sept. 23). He covers it beautifully. Nowadays, a teacher must have the soul of a missionary and the hide of a rhino. Teaching gets no respect but demands, in most states, a bachelor's degree and a master's degree. As a teacher, I put in 71-hour workweeks which included 7 to 5 at school on tasks, three hours grading each night on average, no pay for chaperoning numerous activities, and stress, stress, stress. Public education is the backbone of a democracy, but we don't want educated kids who think anymore. We want kids who believe what Fox News tells them and pass the tests the state imposes. If you don't respect and pay your teachers, you deserve what you will get.

Touch of kindness

I wish to thank the three men in the Tender Touch truck that helped us unload our trailer this morning at the landfill. They were so kind. They unloaded it in 10 minutes, which would have taken us an hour or so. I do believe there's so many kind people in Citrus County. I do appreciate it and may God bless them and may we always have good people in this county. Thank you again, Tender Touch. God bless you.

Funeral

Associated Press

A Border Patrol Agent holds a funeral program for slain U.S. Border Patrol agent Nicholas Ivie on Monday during services at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints meetinghouse in Sierra Vista, Ariz.

Agent was loving father, husband

SIERRA VISTA, Ariz. — Family members and hundreds of uniformed law enforcement officers gathered Monday to mourn the U.S. Border Patrol agent killed last week in an apparent case of friendly fire, remembering him as a family man who wouldn't want loved ones and colleagues shedding tears over his death.

Agent Nicholas Ivie was killed Tuesday as he and two other agents responded to a sensor alarm aimed at detecting smugglers crossing into the U.S. The FBI said it appeared to be friendly fire involving only the agents. An investigation is ongoing.

Man plotted to blow up churches

OKLAHOMA CITY — An Illinois man with a long history of mental illness has been charged with plotting to blow up dozens of churches after a hotel maintenance worker in Oklahoma spotted the makings of Molotov cocktails in a trash bin and alerted police.

Gregory Arthur Weiler II, 23, of Elk Grove Village, Ill., has been charged under a strict Oklahoma anti-terrorism law put in place after the federal building bombing in Oklahoma City in 1995. The law makes terrorism hoaxes a crime, as well as any effort to plan or help plan an act of terrorism.

Detroit police chief steps down

DETROIT — Detroit's police chief stepped down Monday after a week of embarrassing revelations about a sexual relationship with a subordinate, forcing the city to search for a fifth leader in four years for a department dealing with one of the nation's highest violent-crime rates.

Ralph Godbee was hired two years ago to replace a predecessor fired following an affair with a female officer. Detroit's next chief will be its 10th since 1991.

Search on for missing Colo. girl

WESTMINSTER, Colo. — Authorities searched fields and along highways in suburban Denver on Monday for signs of a 10-year-old girl who has been missing since leaving for school on Friday and whose backpack may have been found miles away.

Ridgeway was last seen Friday walking to a park where she meets classmates before school.

Calif. relaxes regs to combat prices

SAN FRANCISCO — State air pollution regulators said Monday that California's air quality is not expected to worsen appreciably after the governor ordered the release of a dirtier blend of gasoline to help slash record-high pump prices.

The California Air Resources Board issued a regulatory advisory a day earlier after Gov. Jerry Brown ordered them to allow so-called "winter-blend" gasoline to be sold in California earlier than usual to increase supply.

Protestants lose U.S. majority

Number of non-religious adults hits all-time high in new survey

Associated Press

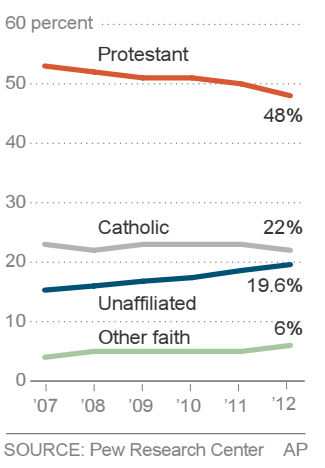
NEW YORK — For the first time in its history, the United States does not have a Protestant majority, according to a new study. One reason: The number of Americans with no religious affiliation is on the rise.

The percentage of Protestant adults in the U.S. has reached a low of 48 percent, the first time that Pew Forum on Religion & Public Life has reported with certainty that the number has fallen below 50 percent. The drop has long been anticipated and comes at a time when no Protestants are on the U.S. Supreme Court and the Republicans have their first presidential ticket with no Protestant nominees.

Among the reasons for the change are the growth in nondenominational Christians who can no longer be categorized as Protestant, and a spike in the number of American adults who say they have no religion. The Pew study, released Tuesday, found that about 20 percent of Americans say they have no religious affiliation, an increase from 15 percent in the last five years.

Scholars have long debated whether people who say they no longer belong to a religious group should be considered secular. While the category as defined by Pew researchers includes atheists, it also encompasses majorities of people who say they believe in God, and a notable minority who pray daily or consider themselves "spiritual" but not "religious." Still, Pew found overall that most of the unaffiliated aren't actively seeking another religious home, indicating that their ties with organized religion are permanently broken.

Growth among those with no religion has been a major preoccupation of American faith leaders who worry that the United States, a highly religious country, would go the way of Western Europe, where church attendance has plummeted. Pope Benedict XVI has partly dedicated his pontificate to combating secularism in the West. This week in Rome, he is convening a three-week synod, or assembly, of bishops from around the world aimed at bringing back Roman Catholics who have left the church.



Sending a message

Turkish troops are stationed on the Turkish side of the border Friday near the Syrian rebel-controlled town of Tel Abyad, in Akcakale, Turkey.

Attacks between Syria, Turkey a high-stakes political dance

Associated Press

BEIRUT — Syria's cross-border attacks on Turkey in the past week look increasingly like they could be an intentional escalation meant to send a clear message to Ankara and beyond, that the crisis is simply too explosive to risk foreign military intervention.

With Turkey eager to defuse the crisis, the spillover of fighting is giving new life to a longshot political solution, with the Turks floating the idea of making President Bashar Assad's longtime vice president, Farouk al-Sharaa, interim leader if the president steps aside.

A military option — which would involve foreign powers that already have expressed a deep reluctance to getting involved in the crisis — is still not on the table, analysts say, despite six consecutive days of Turkish retaliation against bombardment from inside Syria.

"Syria is aware that Turkey cannot go a step further," said Ali Tekin, assistant professor of International Relations at Ankara's Bilkent University. "The Turkish people don't want a war and there are no vital national interests at stake to warrant a war. Syria sees this."

The Syrian conflict has taken a prominent role in the U.S. presidential election at a time when the U.S. and its allies have shown little appetite for getting involved.

On Monday, Republican candidate Mitt Romney said the U.S. should work with other countries to arm the Syrian rebels, allowing the rebels to drive Assad from power themselves. Romney did not call for the U.S. to directly arm the Syrian rebels.

The most recent flare-up between Syria and Turkey started Wednesday, when a shell fired from Syria slammed into a house in the Turkish border village of Akcakale, killing two women and three children. That set off the most serious and prolonged eruption of violence along the frontier since the uprising began nearly 19 months ago.

Although it was not clear whether Wednesday's shelling was intentional, Turkey responded swiftly by firing back and convening parliament for a vote that authorized further cross-border military operations if necessary.

Turkish Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan cautioned Damascus not to test Turkey's "limits and determination." But the Syrian shelling has continued every day — leading many observers to conclude the acts are intentional provocation.

"It's not an accident. You can't send shells across the border by mistake five days in a row," said Mustafa Alani, a Middle East analyst of the Geneva-based Gulf Research Center, just hours before Syrian shelling struck Turkey for a sixth day.

Nobels for medicine announced

Researchers awarded for stem cell studies, early work on cloning

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Two scientists from different generations won the Nobel Prize in medicine Monday for the groundbreaking discovery that cells in the body can be reprogrammed into completely different kinds, work that reflects the mechanism behind cloning and offers an alternative to using embryonic stem cells.

The work of British researcher John Gurdon and Japanese scientist Shinya Yamanaka — who was born the year Gurdon made his discovery — holds hope for treating diseases like Parkinson's and diabetes by growing customized tissue for transplant.

John Gurdon

Shinya Yamanaka

And it has spurred a new generation of laboratory studies into other illnesses, including schizophrenia, which may lead to new treatments.

Basically, Gurdon, 79, and Yamanaka, 50, showed how to make the equivalent of embryonic stem cells without the ethical questions those very versatile cells pose, a promise scientists are now scrambling to fulfill.

Once created, these "blank slate" cells can be nudged toward developing into other cell types. Skin cells can ultimately be transformed into brain cells, for example.

Just last week, scientists reported turning skin cells from mice into eggs that produced baby mice, a possible step toward new fertility treatments.

Gurdon and Yamanaka performed "courageous experiments" that challenged scientific opinion, said Doug Melton, co-director of the Harvard Stem Cell Institute.

Report: Van der Sloot to be father

LIMA, Peru — A newspaper reported Monday that Joran van der Sloot, a Dutch man who is serving a 28-year-sentence for murdering a young Peruvian woman, said he is going to be a father. His attorney said the inmate does have a conjugal visitor, though he could not confirm she was pregnant.

The Dutch newspaper De Telegraaf said Van der Sloot, a suspect in the 2005 disappearance of U.S. teenager Natalee Holloway, himself told it in a telephone call Saturday that "a test has proved" the pregnancy.

UK: Couple grew pot unwittingly

LONDON — British police say an elderly couple unwittingly grew a monstrous cannabis plant in their yard after buying what they thought was an innocuous green bush at a flea market.

Police in Bedford, a commuter town 55 miles from central London, posted a picture of a luxuriant cannabis plant growing as tall as the fence in what appeared to be someone's back yard.

Further details about the couple — or how either it or police got wise to the plant's true nature — weren't immediately available late Monday.

Mexican officials: Cop set up slaying

MEXICO CITY — Mexican prosecutors are alleging that a police commander helped set up the slaying of a nephew of the governor of the northern border state of Coahuila.

The Coahuila state prosecutor's office alleges that the official asked Jose Eduardo Moreira to meet him last week at the place where the killers were waiting.

The office's statement Monday identifies the suspect as Rodolfo Castillo Montes and says he is the assistant police operations director of the border city of Ciudad Acuna. The officer is under house arrest pending possible homicide charges.

Moreira was the nephew of state Gov. Ruben Moreira and the son of former governor Humberto Moreira.

Egypt president pardons protesters

CAIRO — Egypt's new president on Monday issued a decree pardoning all those charged with or convicted of acts "in support of the revolution" since the beginning of the popular uprising that forced his predecessor, Hosni Mubarak, from power.

The move by Mohammed Morsi was long demanded by Egypt's youth groups behind the uprising. It could potentially benefit more than 1,000 protesters currently on trial following their arrests during demonstrations since the uprising against Mubarak erupted on Jan. 25, 2011, and until Morsi was sworn in on June 30.

Terry Francona signs with Tribe

CLEVELAND — Terry Francona has been introduced as manager of the Cleveland Indians, who crashed from contention this season with the worst month in franchise history.

Francona was hired over the weekend by the Indians, signing a four-year contract. The 53-year-old was chosen over Sandy Alomar Jr., who served as the club's final six games after Manny Acta was fired. Francona takes overs an Indians team that went 68-94, the third time in the past four seasons they have lost at least 90 games.

RB Faulk to retire Tuesday as Patriot

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — Kevin Faulk is retiring after 13 seasons with the New England Patriots.

The formal announcement is scheduled for Tuesday. Faulk, who appeared in just nine games the past two seasons, wasn't active for the Super Bowl in February and hasn't been with the team since. He missed all but two games in 2010 with a knee injury and began the 2011 season on the physically unable to perform list before playing in seven games.

Welker: Belichick comments 'a joke'

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — Wes Welker told reporters he was only joking when he said after Sunday's game that he enjoyed catching 13 passes against the Denver Broncos to "stick it" in coach Bill Belichick's face.

Welker made a rare Monday appearance in the locker room during media availability to straighten things out.

"It was a joke," Welker said. "I don't know what else to say about it."

Welker did not start in three games so far this season after unsuccessful negotiations on a long-term deal, leading to speculation that Belichick was upset with him over the negotiations.

After catching 13 passes for 104 yards and a touchdown in Sunday's 31-21 victory over the Broncos, he told Comcast SportsNet with a wink, "Yeah it's kind of nice to stick it in Bill's face once in a while."

Cardinals RB's injury ends season

TEMPE, Ariz. — The Arizona Cardinals' already embattled running game has taken a severe blow with the announcement that running back Ryan Williams is out for the season with a left shoulder injury that will require surgery.

The Cardinals already are without Beanie Wells until at least Thanksgiving weekend because of a severe turf toe injury.

The hard-luck Williams missed all of his rookie season a year ago with a torn patella tendon. He injured his shoulder on a hard hit during last Thursday night's loss at St. Louis.

Olympian Vonn wants to race men

GENEVA — The United States ski team said it hasn't had any "formal discussion" yet about the possibility of Lindsey Vonn entering a men's World Cup downhill next month.

Vonn, the women's Olympic downhill champion, has written the International Ski Federation to ask whether she can challenge the men Nov. 24.

Vonn has earned nine of her 26 World Cup downhill victories at the Canadian track, which stages women's races the following weekend.

— INVERNESS In his final season of play, Crystal River senior Travis Swanson capped off 18 holes of golf Monday morning with a stellar performance, winning the meet by just one stroke over a crowded field of players all finishing within a stroke or two of one another.

Solid play up front pulled Crystal River ahead for the overall crown at the County Championships at Inverness Golf and Country Club. County rivals Citrus and Lecanto finished only a few strokes behind in a close matchup between three teams stacked with talent.

Larsen, Berra reminisce on anniversary of perfect game

Pitcher's game-day uniform to hit auction block

Associated Press

LITTLE FALLS, N.J. — Don Larsen has two grandchildren, one in college and the other a freshman in high school. He wants to make sure they're taken care of. He wants to make sure they complete their educations.

So, to help that cause, the former Yankee has decided to auction off the uniform he wore 56 years ago Monday, when he authored a perfect game in the World Series.

"I've been thinking about it for a bit," Larsen said. "I'm not getting any younger and I don't know how much longer I'll be around. I want to make sure they can both go to college, which isn't cheap these days.

"So, I figured it was the right time."

On the anniversary of Larsen's greatest day as a pitcher, Steiner Sports Memorabilia announced it will auction off the uniform that Larsen, 82, wore. And he was joined at the press conference by his catcher, Yogi Berra, at Berra's museum and learning center at Montclair State University.

Larsen, who has kept the jersey in a closet in Idaho, was asked if he could fathom that his uniform could draw more in an auction than he made in his career as a Major Leaguer.

"It wouldn't take much," Larsen said. "Because I didn't make much."

A Babe Ruth jersey went for $4.4 million last year, so Steiner anticipates such a historic relic to draw at least seven figures.

"I had only worn it three times, but we were entitled to keep it," Larsen said. "I kept in my closet and it was in great condition."

There was only one downside. Larsen's hat fell off when Berra jumped into his arms. It was never recovered.

"I was told it was picked up by some guy in New Jersey, then supposedly donated to the (Baseball) Hall of Fame," Larsen said. "Every picture I have of the day, my hat is gone."

Fifty-six years to the day Monday, Larsen walked into Yankee Stadium for Game 5 of the World Series against the Brooklyn Dodgers, having no idea he was about to create one of the most memorable moments in baseball history.

"It was a beautiful day and I felt great," Larsen said. "I didn't know whether or not I was going to pitch. I came to the stadium early and as usual, Moose Skowron and Hank Bauer were there early ahead of me. I got to my locker and saw a ball in my shoe. I guess (third-base coach) Frankie Crosetti was told to put it there."

At that point, Larsen knew he was tabbed by manager Casey Stengel to start Game 5 with the series tied.

"I looked at the ball and took a big swallow," Larsen said. "I said to myself, 'Don't screw this one up.' I'm just glad Casey had the faith in me to give me the ball."

Larsen certainly did nothing wrong that fateful day, throwing the only perfect game in the World Series, helping the Yankees capture the 1956 World Series title. After the seven-game win, he earned the series MVP.

"He didn't shake me off once," Berra said. "He was throwing pretty hard and had a good breaking ball that day. Everything was working for him."

Both pitcher and catcher remember it vividly, of course. Such an unforgettable moment on such an unforgettable day. The sentimentality, for sure, remains.

"Yogi and I are the only ones left from that game," Larsen said. "I'll never forget the day when I came to the Yankees. One of the things I knew, was that I was going to pitch to one of the greatest catchers ever. Yogi means as much to me today as he did then. As time goes on, it hasn't been forgotten and it will never be forgotten even after we're gone."

Berra said that he never dreamed that memorabilia from his playing days would become so valuable.

"If I knew then what I know now," he said, "I would have saved all my uniforms instead of giving them back.

"And I had a lot of them."

Lockout still at a standoff, but talks to resume

Associated Press

The NHL lockout, at a glance:

DAY: 23.

LAST NEGOTIATIONS: Friday in Toronto.

NEXT NEGOTIATIONS: Tentatively scheduled for Wednesday in New York.

GAMES LOST: 82 (all games through Oct. 24).

MORE TALKS: Labor negotiations are expected to resume this week in New York, according to the NHL Players Association. The plans and agenda were still being finalized for the talks expected to be held Wednesday and Thursday. Officials for the league and union stayed in touch over the weekend after meeting in Toronto on Friday.

ON THIS DAY LAST YEAR: "Unbelievable," said an awe-struck former Avalanche star Peter Forsberg after seeing his No. 21 jersey retired before Colorado's season opener against the Detroit Red Wings. A banner honoring Forsberg was raised in the Pepsi Center rafters alongside Joe Sakic, Patrick Roy and Ray Bourque. Red Wings forward and fellow Swede, Henrik Zetterberg, even ducked out of the locker room to watch the ceremony. Zetterberg eventually helped spoil the festivities by scoring a goal in Detroit's 3-0 victory.

Rested Bucs eye Chiefs

Despite slide, heads held high in locker room

Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — The Tampa Bay Buccaneers are rested and eager to resume their season.

Coaches and players reconvened Monday following a bye week that provided extra time to evaluate the team's progress through four games, focus on fundamentals in practice and make some adjustments that Greg Schiano hopes will be beneficial the final 12 weeks of the season.

The Bucs (1-3) will try to snap a three-game losing streak when they host the struggling Kansas City Chiefs (1-4) next Sunday.

"We evaluated a lot of things, and if your evaluations are correct and your adjustments are correct, then it helped," Schiano said of the break.

Since shutting down Cam Newton and beating the Carolina Panthers in the season opener, Tampa Bay has dropped consecutive games to the New York Giants, Dallas Cowboys and Washington Redskins by a combined 15 points.

Although the players didn't like the idea of having to wait two weeks for their next opportunity to end the skid, Schiano felt the open date fell at a good time.

The Bucs practiced last Tuesday and Wednesday before taking the remainder of the week off.

"Without a doubt ... it's good to get them some rest," Schiano said Monday, when the team got an early start on preparation for the Chiefs.

Associated Press

Tampa Bay Buccaneers head coach Greg Schiano covers his heart alongside his players during the national anthem Sept. 30 before a game against the Washington Redskins. The Bucs lost the game 24-22, but Schiano said he'd "be lying if I said I wasn't rooting for Washington this weekend," referring to the Redskins' game against the Atlanta Falcons.

Players usually don't receive the game plan until Wednesday.

"The rest definitely helps," guard Carl Nicks said. "I'm a little recharged, a little refreshed."

The Bucs have played well at times, but also have been wildly inconsistent — sputtering for long stretches on offense and struggling defensively to stop opponents in critical situations.

"We're not anywhere near our potential. We've got to finish better, start better and be more consistent," Nicks said. "Although we're 1-3, and that's not a good record to have, all of our games have been close and it's encouraging to know we can battle with any team in the NFL."

Schiano reiterated that while the team's record could be better, it also could be worse.

Asked if he's concerned that the unbeaten Atlanta Falcons (5-0) are beginning to build a commanding lead in the normally tight NFC South, the first-year coach stressed his focus is solely on the Bucs.

"I'd be lying if I said I wasn't rooting for Washington this weekend," Schiano said, alluding to Atlanta's latest win. "We can't handle what they do. We can only handle what we do. If we had done a little better job handling it, we wouldn't be talking about this. We can't do anything about the past, but we can do something about Sunday."

Defensive tackle Gerald McCoy said there's a positive vibe in the locker room, despite the slide that's extended a stretch in which the Bucs have lost 13 of 14 dating to last season.

"You know what's great about this team is everybody's so encouraged. Nobody's down," McCoy said, adding that this is a time for players to critique themselves critically and do whatever's necessary to eliminate mistakes that are affecting the club's chances of winning.

"Nobody wants to be 1-3. Nobody wants to be 2-2. Nobody wants to be 3-1," the third-year pro said. "Everybody would like to be undefeated, but the reality is it's not going to happen."

Redskins: RG3 'looks good'

Associated Press

ASHBURN, Va. — Robert Griffin III felt good enough to attend something called a Rookie Success Program meeting Monday morning and seemed, by all accounts, to be doing just fine on the day after suffering his first NFL concussion.

Griffin still has to complete the league's mandated return-to-play protocol before he's cleared for practice, but his Washington Redskins teammates and coach Mike Shanahan were optimistic the Heisman Trophy winner will be able to play in this week's game against the Minnesota Vikings.

"We should fine out in the next few days exactly what happens," Shanahan said. "Right now it looks good. I'm not really sure if it stays that way. The professionals will monitor his situation and let us know if able he's able to play or not. We surely have nothing to do with it."

There's nothing like a head injury to the future of the franchise to make the ins and outs of concussion rules and symptoms suddenly the trendy topic inside Redskins Park. Shanahan described in detail the process Griffin will undergo, defended the decision to have the rookie described as "shaken up" during the game, and — most importantly — talked about ways to help prevent such an injury from happening again.

"In my experience, when the quarterback gets that first hit like he received, they slide a little bit sooner in plays to come," Shanahan said. "They kind of protect themselves a little bit more."

Griffin was injured while scrambling near the sidelines on a third-and-goal play. He couldn't find an open receiver, so he tried to turn the corner and lost his footing — just in time for his helmet to ram into the upper body of linebacker Sean Weatherspoon.

Associated Press

Washington Redskins quarterback Robert Griffin III warms up Sunday before a game against the Atlanta Falcons in Landover, Md.

Griffin insisted he was fine when he came to sideline and was able to recite the score and quarter, but Shanahan looked into the rookie's eyes and knew right away that something was wrong. A few moments later, Griffin didn't know the score or what quarter it was. He was then taken to the locker room, where the concussion was formally diagnosed.

Shanahan said Griffin experienced "no dizziness, no headaches, no vomiting" on Monday. Griffin was scheduled for tests, and, if he passes them, will get a session on the treadmill Tuesday. If all goes well, he'll be able to practice Wednesday without contact and be on pace to play the Vikings. A possible complication is that Griffin suffered a concussion last season with Baylor, and the side effects are known to be cumulative.

If there are any setbacks, Shanahan will have to choose between rookie Kirk Cousins and veteran Rex Grossman. Fourth-round pick Cousins finished Sunday's game and threw more interceptions in one quarter (2) than Griffin has all season (1). Grossman has been inactive all year as the third-string quarterback, a humbling experience for a player who once led the Chicago Bears to the Super Bowl.

Rockies voice support for former skipper

Associated Press

DENVER — Players who stood by Jim Tracy while the Colorado Rockies endured their worst season in franchise history are reiterating their support for him following the manager's resignation over the weekend.

Left-hander Jeff Francis said he was surprised to hear Tracy had decided to step down, telling The Associated Press in an email: "I loved playing for him and I think everyone did. The Rockies will miss him for sure."

Among the most vocal supporters was outfielder Dexter Fowler, who appreciated Tracy sticking with him through protracted slumps over the last two seasons before a breakout 2012. He tweeted, "Man I'm gonna miss Tracy, thanks for believing in me! You are a wonderful and stand up guy!"

One of the few bright spots as the Rockies flirted with the dreaded 100-loss season before finishing 64-98, Fowler batted .300 with a .389 on-base percentage and 13 homers last season, all career highs.

Rex Brothers, Tyler Colvin and Josh Rutledge also tweeted praise for Tracy, who informed Bill Geivett, the team's director of major league operations, on Sunday that he was forgoing the final year on his contract, which was to pay him $1.4 million.

"Gonna miss No. 4 sitting in that dugout at Coors! Thanks for everything skip. None better," Brothers tweeted.

Colvin tweeted he was "Sad to hear the news about our skipper. It was a privilege to play for such a great manager and such a great person." He concluded with "#ClassAct."

And Rutledge tweeted, "So lucky to be able to have played for a manager like Jim Tracy with the professionalism and intelligence for the game. He will be missed."

Tracy finished 294-308 in three-plus seasons.

The Rockies are now conducting their first managerial search since Jim Leyland resigned after the 1999 season.

hits over the first six innings. The Taiwanese native, who pitched previously in Japan, was 1-2 with a 5.25 ERA in four outings against New York this season.

The 40-year-old Pettitte, whose 19 wins are the most in postseason history, gave up three runs and six hits in six innings.

Pettitte retired the first eight batters before Robert Andino hit a bloop single with two outs in the third. Nate McLouth also singled, and a four-pitch walk to Hardy loaded the bases for Davis, who lined a single to right.

Adam Jones followed by grounding a single just beyond the reach of shortstop Derek Jeter, but Hardy stopped at third after failing to spot third-base coach DeMarlo Hale waving him home. Matt Wieters then popped out with the bases loaded.

Wieters led off the sixth with a double and scored on a single by Reynolds to make it 3-1.

The Yankees used the deft footwork of Suzuki to take a 1-0 first-inning lead.

Jeter led off the game with a single and Suzuki reached when Reynolds fumbled a bare-hand pickup at first base for an error.

Alex Rodriguez hit a low line drive at Andino, and the second baseman caught it and doubled up Jeter. Robinson Cano followed with a drive to the base of the right-field wall for a double. The relay from Davis to Andino to Wieters beat Suzuki to the plate by plenty, but he dodged the tag coming toward home.

Suzuki then circled around the batter's box, juked around the catcher's desperate lunge and touched the plate an instant before Wieters' glove found its mark.

Lady Pirates swat away Hornets

Staff

The Crystal River Pirates volleyball team traveled to Weeki Wachee Monday and came home winners.

The Lady Pirates beat the Hornets in three straight sets, 25-21, 25-9 and 25-18.

Casidy Newcomer led Crystal River in kills, notching 10 alongside 12 digs and three aces. Other standouts for the Lady Pirates included Sabrina Scott, with 18 assists, 15 digs and 5 aces; Emily Laga, who had 19 digs; Megan Creech, with 8 digs, 4 kills and 3 aces; and Sam Pauley, who mustered 7 digs.

The win brought Crystal River's record to 16-5. The Lady Pirates are 9-1 in district play.

Crystal River will look to repeat its success Tuesday when the team travels to Seven Rivers. Varsity play begins at 6 p.m., and the Lady Pirates are encouraging attendees to wear pink in honor of the team's annual Breast Cancer Awareness Match.

course was playing tough today, as you can tell with the scores. But I felt good. I was hitting my irons good. It just feels good to win."

Despite the level of competition even from players on his own team, Swanson never lets battles on the course get in the way of friendship.

"The thing is that we're all best friends," Swanson said. "We've played soccer (and) baseball together ever since we were little kids. It helps when your team's your best friends. It makes it really enjoyable. And it's just fun competition."

Lecanto's Micah Sugioka (80) and Citrus' Dylan Nelson (80) were both the top scorers for their respective teams, and just a shade behind the lowest medalist. Crystal River senior Michael Kidd finished strong behind Swanson, also shooting an 80.

Lecanto senior Drew Cooke (82) notched second place for the Panthers. Citrus' Riley Reed (82) and freshman Dakota Homan (82) scored second and third for the 'Canes, while Crystal River's Matt Allen shot a 10-over-par 82, good enough for third place on the Pirates squad.

Pirate Sophomore Kyle Kidd (85) tallied up the final scoring spot for Crystal River.

Lecanto's Zach Groff (86) and Patrick Colletti (87) scored third and fourth, respectively, for the Panthers.

Citrus' Andrew Judd (87) rounded out the fourth and final scoring spot for the 'Canes.

Seven Rivers Christian Academy had one participant in the event: senior Adam Gage, who shot a 17-over-par 89.

Crystal River head coach Jere DeFoor was exuberant over the team's success in the tournament and looking forward to the postseason.

"Everyone did great," DeFoor said. "They really put the scores on the board today."

Citrus head coach Larry Bishop, who hosted the event, was very pleased with how well the meet was brought off despite the constant threat of storms.

"We're pretty talent rich in the county and they played real well together," Bishop said. "We did play pretty fast and the weather cooperated.

"(We're) very pleased with some of our scores. We're excited and looking forward to district play next (week)."

Lecanto players are just as busy steeling themselves for the postseason.

"We were nine shots out of first place," Lecanto head coach Dave Soluri said. "We need to be one of the top two teams in the district, but as these scores (reflect), we won't be in the top five. Even Citrus' score, that beat us by four, they'll even have trouble getting in the top two with that score. So we both have to improve between now and then."

All-county finishers are as follows: 1. Travis Swanson, CRHS; 2. Micah Sugioka, LHS; 3. Dylan Nelson, CHS; 4. Michael Kidd, CRHS; 5. Drew Cooke, LHS; 6. Riley Reed, CHS; 7. Matt Allen, CRHS; 8. Dakota Homan, CHS.

Non-scoring participants were: Citrus' Cameron Blocker (92) and Dalton Homan (95); Lecanto's Tanner Keeran (92) and Dalton McCanna (111); and Crystal River's Kyle Velasco (87) and Tyler Bertoch (97).

district — all they could handle before falling 25-22, 25-19, 22-25, 27-25.

"When you're playing rival teams, you can never tell which way it's going to go," Lecanto coach Alice Christian said, her team at 13-2 overall and 7-2 in the district. "And I do think Senior Night may have had something to do with it.

"I definitely think Citrus played well, with good passing, and they were hustling."

One key factor in the match was errors. "We made quite a few errors," Christian said. "Normally, we'll have one game with a lot of errors, and that's the game we'll lose in a match. This time, we had quite a few spread out in all the games."

Some of those Panther errors were unforced — in their third-set loss, they had five service errors — while others were the consequence of strong play by the Hurricanes.

"We did play well," said Hurricanes coach David Assumpcao, his team now 4-9 overall and 1-8 in 6A-6. "But we made some little mistakes, we had too many free balls, and they capitalized. They're good at that."

There were some reversals throughout the match that prevented either team from assuming control. After a tight battle in the first set — neither side led by more than three — it seemed Lecanto had the victory in its grasp after staging an 11-4 closing run in winning the second set 25-19.

Instead, Citrus led the third set nearly the entire way, although a late Lecanto charge closed the gap to 23-22, Amber Atkinson's kill earning the Panthers' last point. The fourth set was a similar story, only with the roles reversed: This time, Lecanto took command and held it until the Hurricanes, trailing 16-10, started chipping away. A kill by Amy Abramowich narrowed the margin to 18-17 with Lindsay Connors serving; four consecutive errors by Lecanto put Citrus up 21-18.

But the Panthers scored the next four points and, after that, it was a battle for every point, with freshman outside hitter Adriana Espinoza collecting two kills for Citrus down the stretch and Marie Buckley doing the same for Lecanto. In the end, a hard kill by Atkinson decided it for the Panthers.

"It was a combination of things for us tonight," Assumpcao said. "We had good serving, we blocked at times, we hit at times. We need to do it on a consistent basis."

Lecanto got a superb defensive effort from Savannah Weller with 33 digs. Buckley's 11 kills topped the attack for the Panthers and Atkinson had 6, while Courtney Rymer contributed 7 service aces. Shannon Fernandez had 4 aces, all in the final set.

Kendra Kirby had 4 kills and Abramowich 3 to pace the Hurricanes' attack. Connors' 13 digs topped the Citrus defensive effort, while Espinoza had 5 digs and 16 points while serving.

Lecanto plays at Springstead tonight, while Citrus hosts Nature Coast.

Game 3 is Wednesday afternoon at Nationals Park. Edwin Jackson starts for Washington against longtime Cardinals ace Chris Carpenter, who made only three starts during the regular season because of injury.

"Today, for us, was a must-win game," Beltran said.

The Cardinals seem to live for those. They lost the division series and NL championship series openers last fall, then finished strong in the World Series after spotting Texas a 3-2 lead.

So, they're on familiar ground.

There were no lineup changes in Game 2 of the division series, just a lot more clutch hitting from players accustomed to October pressure.

Beltran homered twice in the postseason for the third time in his career, connecting in the sixth off Mike Gonzalez and eighth off Sean Burnett. Jon Jay had two hits and three RBIs, plus an outstanding catch at the center-field wall to deprive Danny Espinosa of extra bases in the sixth.

St. Louis was 0 for 8 with runners in scoring position in Game 1 and totaled just three hits. The Cardinals had five hits in a four-run second Monday, Descalso hit his first postseason homer in the fourth a day after getting robbed by Jayson Werth's leaping catch at the right-field wall, and Beltran's drive off Gonzalez in the sixth banged off the facade in the third deck in left, estimated at 444 feet.

Shadows didn't seem to be as big of an issue in Game 2, which started 1½ hours later than the opener, creeping past the pitcher's mound around the third inning. Both teams had issues with playing conditions after the opener.

Late last season, after complaints from Albert Pujols and Lance Berkman, the Cardinals said they'd try not to schedule late afternoon games that might be affected.

Zimmermann lasted a season-low three innings while pitching on eight days' rest. His next-shortest outing also was against the Cardinals, when he was gave up a four-run, first-inning cushion and was chased after yielding eight runs in 3 2-3 innings in a 10-9 loss at home.

The numbers weren't favorable for the 25-year-old right-hander prior to first pitch, given he's 0-2 with a 9.45 ERA in five career regular-season starts against the Cardinals. They were 3 for 5 with runners in scoring position against a pitcher who led the majors by holding opponents to a .160 average.

Nationals batters made contact on just four of Garcia's 24 pitches in the first, threatening with a pair of walks. Garcia went to a full count on five of his first eight hitters, and threw 51 pitches in two innings while surrendering Zimmermann's RBI single in the second.

Cardinals manager Mike Matheny said Garcia was pulled because his arm didn't feel right. Garcia missed time this season with a shoulder problem.

The Cardinals had 18-game winner Lance Lynn warming up in the second and the right-hander stood on the bullpen mound during St. Louis' four-run answer in the bottom half. Pinch-hitter Skip Schumaker stood on the top dugout step while Pete Kozma struck out for the first out in the second and it was no decoy, with Schumaker contributing a run-scoring groundout to the rally.

St. Louis opened the second with four straight hits, singles by Craig and Yadier Molina that set the table followed by an RBI double from David Freese and a run-scoring single from Descalso.

NOTES: Cardinals RHP Jake Westbrook, rehabbing from a pulled oblique, will leave the team for a few days to be with his wife, due to deliver the couple's fourth child. GM John Mozeliak said it's "not likely" that Westbrook, a 13-game winner, will be able to pitch this fall. ... The Cardinals matched the franchise high for runs in a division series game. They also scored 12 in 2002 against Arizona.

game 25-12. On the verge of a quick 3-0 night, the Warriors were visibly frustrated and hanging their heads. Sophomore Alyssa Gage said the team — wanting a win — listened to Grey after the second game, adding "We just had to come together as a team and gel."

Playing passionately and working on positioning for hits over their blockers, the Warriors went on an 11-4 run in Game 3, highlighted by sophomore Kim Iwaniec's two serving aces. The Warriors won the game 25-22.

The Warriors poured it on even more in Game 4, winning 25-14 and throwing the team and fans into a frenzy. Game 5 went back and forth, with the Cougars rallying to tie the game 4-4 before taking the lead and extending it to 13-9.

It was then the Warriors' turn to rally, tying the game before two lead changes at the end had them coming up just short.

Daniette St. Martin led the Warriors in kills with 9, and Alexis Zachar had 3 blocks. Both teams put on a serving showcase, with Cornerstone's Bridgette Cook scoring five of her team's 14 aces.

Seven Rivers had seven aces, including three from Iwaniec.

The Warriors play Crystal River tonight, and then Saint John Lutheran School on Thursday in another district match Grey is focused on.

"I hope we play the same game we brought tonight," she said, "with a win as the outcome."

Dreaming up Sandman

DERRIK J. LANG
Associated Press

— GLENDALE, Calif. Within the dimly lit halls of DreamWorks Animation, past the character sketches lining the walls, inside the eccentrically decorated cubicles and offices is where a group of designers, animators and special effects gurus have spent the past four years bringing life to the Sandman.

This composite shows the character Sandman from the "Rise of the Guardians," a 3-D computer-generated fantasy tale based on William Joyce's book series, "The Guardians of Childhood."

The dream-inducing folkloric figure, whose roots sprouted from European fairytales, is among the immortal icons featured in the 3-D computer-generated fantasy tale "Rise of the Guardians," based on William Joyce's charming book series, "The Guardians of Childhood."

The bubbly Buddha-like appearance of the film's Sandman, is remarkably faithful to Joyce's illustrations. Yet creating a three-dimensional, wispy-haired Sandman with oh-so-magical powers provided several technical challenges that many of DreamWorks' animation pros had never tackled.

"He is a very different kind of character," said production designer Patrick Hanenberger of the character probably best known from Pat Ballard's timeless 1954 song. "He is short. He is round. His body looks like it is made out of marzipan, and his hair looks like cotton candy. He is not someone who looks like he is as powerful as he is in our story, but he is the most magical of all the Guardians — and he does not speak."

"Rise of the Guardians," which premieres Wednesday at the Mill Valley Film Festival near San Francisco and is set to debut nationwide Nov. 21, centers on a carefree Jack Frost (voiced by Chris Pine) joining an Avengers-style team of mythical figures who work together to protect the world's children with their assortment of powers and gadgets.

> "He is not someone who looks like he is as powerful as he is in our story, but he is the most magical of all the Guardians — and he does not speak."
> Patrick Hanenberger
> production designer of "Rise of the Guardians."

Frost can command wintery elements with a magical staff, but he's invisible to everyone else in the world except the other Guardians. He teams up with a mighty Santa Claus (Alec Baldwin) covered in tattoos, a speedy Easter Bunny (Hugh Jackman) with a chip on his shoulder, an overly enthusiastic birdlike Tooth Fairy (Isla Fisher) and the silly Sandman.

When it came to convey Sandman's personality, the heavy lifting fell to the animators and effects gurus because the character stays totally quiet. He communicates only through facial expressions and body language, as well as with his nifty ability to craft imagery out of sand. (For example, when he's puzzled, a sandy question mark unravels over his noggin.)

ONLINE

- http:/www.riseofthe guardians.com/

Instead of launching headfirst into production, the filmmakers spent several months simply conceptualizing the Guardians, paying particular attention to the amorphous Sandman. How would he look? What are his powers? How would he move?

Gabe Hordos, the film's head of character animation, thought the extra time in the sand box ended up being a dream.

"We often get stuck with this problem where, as animators come on, we have many ideas that kind of pollute the main idea," he said. "Because we had nine months before we started production, we were able to iron stuff down, so once we started, we had a great idea about the characters. They changed a little less, and we played their arcs more subtly."

The film's villain, a boogeyman named Pitch (Jude Law), fleeces Sandman's ability to weave objects out of strands of sand. He substitutes Sandman's glittery gold rendition for one that's ominously dark, but the filmmakers didn't just want a black version of Sandman's dust. Finding a unique but balanced aesthetic became one of the film's biggest challenges.

The team studied sandy effects from film franchises like "The Mummy," "Harry Potter," "Spider-Man" and "X-Men" but wanted something different. The solution actually came by accident when visual effects supervisor David Prescott noticed how chaotic an animation of one of Sandman's streams appeared when head of effects Yancy Lindquist played it in reverse.

"It looked trippy," said Prescott. "When you see something running backward, it's less predictive. We've all seen smoke blowing and water running. You know where it's going even if you're not a scientist. When it's backwards, it's more interesting. My question for Yancy was, 'How can you run it backwards, but make it look like it's going forwards?'"

The answer was rendering most of the strands as if they were slithering in reverse amid a few lingering forward, providing an organic but creepy counterpart to the Sandman's dreamy waves, an already a complicated effect when combined with other animations. Lindquist and his colleagues employed both new and existing technology to fuse it all together.

"The complexity isn't in the sand itself but in how many different ways we use it," said Lindquist. "Sandy makes unicorns and dinosaurs and sea horses and all sorts of things out of sand, but he also has these streams of sand, and he stands on a cloud of sand. It's a lot. Hopefully, when you watch the film, you appreciate that, but it's not something you notice."

Today's HOROSCOPE

Today's birthday: Revive an old relationship with someone whom you're likely to run into again in the year ahead. This person always had what you lacked, and vice versa. You both are likely to do wonders for each other.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — If you believe your schemes aren't working out as well as they should, it might be best to revise your plan of action in favor of something else that you know will work.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — Do a little extra probing, if that's what you believe it takes, to figure out a solution to a problem. You'll be glad that you kept at this particular dilemma.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — Be extremely careful that you do not prematurely rush to judgment, especially if you have to make a critical decision. Weigh and balance every facet of the situation.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — It's one of those days when it might be wiser to listen to your sentiments rather than your logic when dealing with some co-workers. Your heart could be smarter than your brain.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — Sometimes when we try too hard not to make a mistake, it causes us to make foolish errors. Thus, the smart thing to do is to relax and just do the best that you can.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) — It is likely to take solid commitment on your part in order to effectively complete something. If you allow outside factors to steer you off course, you'll accomplish nothing.

Aries (March 21-April 19) — Think for yourself, and don't be afraid to let others know you'll be doing just that. If you don't, you could get caught up in supporting a situation that you find distasteful.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) — There are a lot of things you can do yourself instead of paying someone else to do them. However, know your limitations and don't attempt the impossible.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) — Don't make winning unduly important when engaged in competitive activities with friends. The focus should be on fun at all times.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) — Instead of moaning and groaning about a bad hand that you believe has been dealt you, take your mind off yourself and try doing something purely for enjoyment's sake.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) — Don't confuse self-doubt with shrewd analysis. The latter is letting a constructive mind do the thinking, while the former invites failure.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Your rewards are likely to be proportionate to what you achieve, unless you fail to get off the ground by listening to a negative associate who discourages you from the start.

Fall tourism falls

Associated Press

A tractor pulls a wagon full of visitors to the Tuttle Orchards, in Greenfield, Ind., where pumpkins were picked Monday from one of the orchard's pumpkin patches. The orchard had a good pumpkin crop but canceled public apple-picking this year after a series of sub-freezing nights zapped apple blossoms lured into early bloom by unusually warm March weather.

Freeze, drought take bitter bite out of autumn agritourism in US heartland

RICK CALLAHAN
Associated Press

— INDIANAPOLIS

Devastating spring freezes and a historic drought have stripped some charm from rustic fall destinations, leaving some corn too short to create mazes, orchards virtually devoid of apples and fall colors muted.

Extreme weather has forced agritourism ventures in the heart of the country to scramble to hold onto their share of an industry that generates hundreds of millions of dollars each year.

Pat Schaefers, who runs Schaefers Corn Maze near Lollie, Ark., hopes visitors to the farm's two mazes won't mind that the corn is just 6 to 8 feet this fall — up to 4 feet shorter than the wall of corn families and school groups normally pay to get lost and turned-around in.

"It's just not up to par," she said of the corn in her two mazes. "It's not anything like it's been in past years."

> "The object of our maze is to find hidden checkpoints, and our checkpoints literally would have been taller than the corn in some of the fields."
> Sam Brown
> owner, A-Maizeing-Farms, Mayfield, Ky.

Yet Schaefers was one of the lucky ones. Even though the corn in her 30 acres of mazes is shorter than normal, she was able to open them for a seventh year thanks to a summerlong irrigation effort at the 1,000-acre farm she owns with her husband, Bob.

Sam Brown, who owns A-Maizeing-Farms in Mayfield, Ky., said the summer drought and 100-degree days ruined his farm's 20-acre corn maze, leaving stalks knee- to waist-high — far too short for use as a maze. Instead, he's offering a petting zoo, pedal cart races and hay rides.

"The object of our maze is to find hidden checkpoints, and our checkpoints literally would have been taller than the corn in some of the fields," he said. "It would have pretty much been pointless."

For many farms and orchards, autumn is the peak agritourism season as families seek out a taste of rural life with outings to explore corn mazes, take hay rides and pick their own apples or pumpkins. Tourism generated about $566 million for more than 23,000 U.S. farms in 2007, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's most recent agriculture census — a survey conducted every five years.

But just like farming itself, agritourism can be stung by the weather.

Apple orchards across the Midwest and New England suffered huge losses when blossoms lured into early bloom by a warm March were killed in April freezes.

Virus and cancer

Nobody wants cancer. That is why one of the main interests in cancer research is prevention. If we know what causes a particular cancer, we have a better chance of preventing it.

Now we know following cancers are caused by the virus called HPV, or human papilloma virus:

■ Cervical cancer — almost all are due to HPV.

■ Cancer of the vulva — about 50 percent are linked to HPV.

■ Cancer of the vagina — about 65 percent are linked to HPV.

■ Cancer of the anus — about 95 percent are

Cough — old problem with some new causes

Dr. Denis Grillo
EAR, NOSE & THROAT

Coughing can be an annoyance, or it can be a signal of a life-threatening disease.

As we know from history, it can be a vector for disease, passing on tuberculosis from individual to individual and pertussis or whooping cough — which, interestingly enough, we thought was on a downward path to extinction but in the past few years has seen an increase that we think may be related to decreased immunity years after immunization and young children not getting immunized.

Physicians describe coughing as acute, less than three weeks, subacute lasting three to eight weeks and chronic if it is longer than eight weeks. As you might expect, the acute cough related to an upper respiratory infection is the most common cause.

Nonetheless, and even if it is self-limiting, coughing sends patients to the pharmacy, and we spend upward of $3 billion annually for medications to suppress the cough. Doctor visits as a

How much exercise do you need?

Dr. Carlene Wilson
WELLNESS CORNER

We all know the dangers of a sedentary lifestyle, but the recommendations and guidelines for exercise and physical activity can seem bewildering. How much physical activity does an adult need to stay healthy?

Exercise means different things to different people. The type and amount of exercise you need depends on your fitness goals.

A daily walk is enough to maintain general health and relieve stress. To overcome an injury, fight osteoporosis, or manage arthritis, you need to do exercises that strengthen particular groups of muscles.

If you are aiming to lose weight, you probably need 60 to 90 minutes of exercise at least five times a week, and you will need to continue exercising to maintain the weight loss.

The important thing is to exercise regularly, several times a week. A five-mile hike on Saturday cannot compensate for five or six days of inactivity. A steady routine of physical activity builds and maintains physical fitness.

According to the 2008 Physical Activity Guidelines for Americans released by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), you need two kinds of regular exercise: aerobic exercise for

■ CRYSTAL RIVER — A new bedside delivery option for patients prescribed outpatient medications at Seven Rivers Regional Medical Center will help ease the transition from hospital to home while enhancing communication between patients and pharmacists.

Walgreens bedside delivery service, a medication adherence and customer service-driven program developed by the national drugstore chain, gives patients the option to have their outpatient prescriptions quickly filled and delivered to their room prior to being discharged, eliminating a pharmacy stop between hospital and home.

"Through this collaborative program with Walgreens, we can help make sure patients have the medication and education they need to get and stay well after leaving the hospital," said Patricia Dourm, director of medical-surgical nursing at Seven Rivers Regional.

A Walgreens pharmacy technician provides one-on-one consultations with patients requesting the service. In addition, 48 hours following discharge, a Walgreens pharmacist calls the patient at home to provide any additional information patients may need about their medication or care.

"With this additional level of attention and care, our patients will have a better understanding of how and when to take a new medication," said Dourm. "Our ultimate goal is to enhance the patient experience and quality of care."

■ The Tobacco-Free Partnership of Citrus County will host its next meeting at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 24, in the Community Room of the Lakes Region Library, 1511 Druid Road, Inverness. This quarterly meeting is open to the public and the partnership welcomes new members.

ASK THE PHARMACIST

Inhaler medication treats COPD symptoms

Q: I heard about a new drug approved to treat COPD. What can you tell me about it?

A: The FDA recently (2012) approved TudorzaPressair (aclidinium bromide inhaler) for the long-term maintenance treatment of bronchospasm (narrowing of the airways in the lung) associated with chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD), including bronchitis and emphysema. TudorzaPressair is a long-acting anticholinergic (antimuscarinic) drug that when inhaled works by helping to open the airways in the lungs, assisting people with COPD to breathe.

It is used by inhalation twice a day, but is not indicated for acute use as a rescue medication to treat sudden breathing problems and is not recommended for people younger than 18 years of age. The most common side effects of TudorzaPressair include headache, inflammation of the nasal passage, and cough.

COPD is a serious lung disease that makes breathing difficult. Cigarette smoking is the leading cause of COPD, according to the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute.

COPD is the fourth leading cause of death in the United States. Symptoms can include chest tightness, chronic cough and excessive phlegm.

An estimated 24 million Americans suffer from this disorder, with more than 50 percent younger than age 65.

Richard P. Hoffmann, Pharm.D., has been a pharmacist for more than 40 years. Write to 2960 E. Coventry Court, Hernando, FL 34442.

Associated Press

Farmer Bob Schaefers walks from the exit of a trail through his corn maze Oct. 2 near Mayflower, Ark. Devastating spring freezes and this year's historic drought have taken some of the charm out of rustic fall destinations, leaving some corn mazes too short for labyrinth duty, orchards virtually devoid of U-pick apples and fall colors muted.

Indiana apple growers have had one of their worst crops in eight decades. Many orchards canceled their U-pick apple seasons and shipped in apples from out of state or traded varieties with other orchards to meet customers' demand.

Tuttle Orchards, a central Indiana farm with 30 acres of trees, lost all but about 10 percent of its apple crop in April. Mike Roney, who co-owns the orchard near Greenfield, Ind., said it might have been the worst freeze damage ever at the farm his family has owned for 84 years.

At Crane Orchards, a 120-acre top U-pick tourist destination in Fenville, Mich., co-owner Rob Crane said just 5 percent of his apple crop survived the icy nights on his family's fifth-generation farm a few miles from Lake Michigan.

With so few apples, its normal 60-day U-pick season shrank to a couple of weeks, and the last trees were picked clean before October.

Despite the lack of apples, Crane is hoping people still come to the farm for a hay ride along its lake and rolling hills, to navigate its corn maze or indulge in fruit pies and other home-made treats served at its restaurant.

"The fall is about making memories, family gatherings and outings to see the colors. It's that inner clock that's ticking that wants you to do that before winter," Crane said. "We're hoping people still come and do that."

The colors won't be so bright in some places. Felicia Fairchild, executive director of the Saugatuck/Douglas Convention and Visitors Bureau in southwestern Michigan, said some drought-stressed trees in her area dropped their leaves early.

But despite a less brilliant landscape and lack of apples, she expected bustling fall business in an area often called the "Art Coast of Michigan" because of Saugatuck and Douglas' art galleries, shopping and bed and breakfast inns along Lake Michigan.

"I don't think it's going to affect our business at all, but it always adds to it if there's really beautiful foliage," Fairchild said.

Others in the industry took steps to ensure their fall seasons weren't a total loss.

Greg Hochstedler, who owns the 160-acre Boondocks Farms about 30 miles east of Indianapolis, canceled his corn maze this year because the June planting time coincided with sweltering 100-degree days and the worst drought in decades.

"It was too dry, too dusty. It would have been a waste of seed," Hochstedler said.

Instead, he's focused on hosting fall weddings to make up some of the revenue usually generated by about 5,000 people who pay to get turned around in the corn labyrinth.

The farm has held about a dozen weddings this fall at its 4,000-square foot pavilion, which has walls that can be rolled up to reveal views of the surrounding countryside.

"That's why we call it Boondocks Farms — we're out in the boondocks," Hochstedler said.

Roney, the Indiana orchard owner, found a bright spot in his pumpkin patches, which were irrigated and emerged from the drought with a fine crop.

"We actually have one of the best pumpkin crops we've ever had as far as size goes and quantity," Roney said. "I don't know why that is — maybe they just liked the heat."

Smiles are important at any age; protect them

Dr. Frank Vascimini
SOUND BITES

Q: I hope you can give me some guidance. I just turned 77 and have become conscious of the way my teeth look. I have small teeth that hit end to end.

My dentist tells me I am a grinder. When I bring my teeth together, the spot where they meet forms something that looks like a "V."

Over the years, I have had a few bridges done and some crowns. All of them seem to be a little different in color. When I discussed this with my dentist, he told me that things could be fixed but that it would take a while. He also told me I should be prepared to wear a nightguard from then on. When I asked why, he just said I need to, otherwise I am wasting my money on fixing things.

I know I am pretty old to be thinking this way, but it has become important to me. I don't want to waste money, but I really want nicer teeth. However, I will admit I am not happy with the idea of a nightguard.

Anything you can mention in your article will be helpful. Thanks! By the way, I love your article each week.

A: First of all, if you took the time to write to me, your smile must be important to you. I suggest you gather all the data you can, as you are doing, and proceed with your new smile. You will be amazed what dentistry can do for you in 2012.

Second, I think I know exactly what you are talking about. Your dentist is actually on target with everything he has said to you.

With you being a grinder, you have essentially ground your teeth down to the point that they are now smaller than they were originally. In addition, you have what we call an edge-to-edge occlusion. You essentially have worn off the edges of your teeth to the point that your teeth slide side-to-side and back-and-forth without anything in their way.

Your dentist is suggesting the nightguard because, once he builds your new occlusion (the way your teeth come together), he needs to protect it from the forces that wore down your teeth in the first place. Without the nightguard, you will destroy the porcelain on the crowns and bridges. This is why he mentioned you would be wasting your money unless you use the nightguard.

If I may make a suggestion, there is a type of temporary restoration that does no harm to your natural teeth, yet can serve as a trial appliance for what your are looking for in your final result. It will give both you and your dentist a chance to see what things can look like, as well as whether or not you will actually destroy things as he and I think you will.

Talk to your dentist about this. I believe it will be worth the additional investment for both of you.

Lastly, continue to pursue this. If done correctly, you will be thrilled. Though you have an idea of what this will look like in the end, I am willing to bet it turns out even better than you expected. I am excited for you. Good luck!

linked to HPV.

■ Mouth cancers (this includes cancer of the back of the throat and tonsils) — about 60 percent are linked to HPV.

■ Cancer of penis — about 35 percent are linked to HPV.

HPV is the most common sexually transmitted infection worldwide. Three-quarters of the general population become infected, and three-quarters of those infections occur at 15 to 24 years of age. Moreover, more than 50 percent of those who become infected do so within two years after becoming sexually active.

A vaccine against the HPV virus is already approved and widely available in the United States. It is recommended in women to prevent cervical, vaginal and vulvar cancer or genital warts.

HPV also causes anal, penile and oral cancers, and these cancers can happen in men. So the vaccine should be given to both young girls and boys before they become sexually active. Currently, the vaccine is approved only for girls.

Indeed, one-third of all HPV-related cancers occur in men, not in women, which is one reason that last year the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices recommended routine HPV vaccination for 11- to 12-year-old boys, as is already the case for girls of the same age. Also, protecting boys will secondarily increase protection against cervical cancer in girls.

Remember, HPV infection is sexually transmitted. It takes years or decades after initial infection before that patient develops cancer. It takes only a few months to develop genital warts after infection. The cost of treatment is $300 to $1,000 per each case of genital warts. At the same time, recurrences after treatment are common.

Dr. Myron J. Levin highlighted landmark research from Australia demonstrating the profound impact widespread adoption of the HPV vaccine can have at the population level. Australia was the first country to fund a vaccination program for all females ages 12 to 26 years, starting in July 2007.

A national surveillance program demonstrated a 59 percent reduction in new diagnoses of genital warts among women eligible for the free vaccine during the first two years after the program started.

In short, I recommend that the vaccine against HPV should be given to both girls and boys and preferably before they become sexually active.

result of coughing is the No. 3 leading reason to visit your physician. Some estimates put office visits for coughing up to 30 million visits a year.

Most of the time, coughing is easy to recognize, diagnose and treat. But sometimes it can be challenging. Not only do upper respiratory infections cause coughing, but coughing can be related to other entities, for example, nasal problems including allergies, sinusitis, and nonallergic rhinitis can cause coughing, as well as lung problems — asthma and cigarette smoking top the list.

Esophageal and gastric problems, such as heartburn and reflux, are one of the most common causes of coughing.

The mechanism is that fluid and/or food products regurgitate from the esophagus into the throat and cause and trigger a cough.

Cystic fibrosis is a genetic disorder that also can cause chronic coughing. Systemic diseases such as hypertension, high blood pressure, heart or cardiovascular disease and even certain blood pressure pills can cause coughing.

Neurologic problems, such as vocal cord paralysis secondary to an injury or stroke, can cause a patient to cough.

Tumors in the throat — associated with throat cancer, lung cancer and esophageal cancer — likewise can cause a cough, as well as large thyroid tumors.

Some common non-serious triggers for chronic cough include habitual, secondary to anxiety or nervousness, clearing of the throat, talking too much, laughing out loud, singing, swallowing, yawning, breathing in cold air and touching specific spots on the neck.

Identification — diagnosis is the key to treatment and ENT doctors are sometimes involved in the diagnosis of chronic coughing, along with our primary care colleagues, but the role is also open for our lung specialists, allergists, stomach doctors, cardiologists, infectious disease specialists, as well as our neurology colleagues to sometimes assist in identifying the cause and implementing treatment.

So, as you can see, coughing can be very simple, spontaneous onset, short-lived and spontaneous resolution or it can be a protracted process that might necessitate a visit with your doctor.

Denis Grillo, D.O., FOCOO, is an ear, nose and throat specialist in Crystal River. Call him at 352-795-0011 or visit CrystalCommunityENT.com.

cardiovascular health and strength training for physical fitness.

Aerobic exercise (cardio) is physical activity such as walking, swimming, or riding a bike that causes your heart rate to go up. Adults need at least 150 minutes of aerobic exercise every week, preferably spread over five to seven days. Aerobic exercise combats heart disease, burns calories, and stimulates your metabolism.

Strength training involves the use of weights or resistance to put stress on particular muscle groups. The weights and machines at the gym are designed to strengthen specific muscles, but there are many exercises you can do at home using simple equipment such as resistance bands, hand weights and an exercise mat.

Techniques like yoga and Pilates use your own body weight to build strength. The CDC recommends doing strength-building exercises at least twice a week. Each exercise should be repeated until you have difficulty doing it again. Allow a day or two between sessions for your muscles to recover.

Strength training offers many health benefits.

Weight-bearing exercise increases bone density and reduces the risk of osteoporosis. Strength training boosts your stamina so that you tire less easily. It also helps to relieve the symptoms of chronic conditions including arthritis, back pain, depression, and diabetes. Building muscle helps protect your shoulders, knees, elbows and wrists from injury. Lean muscle burns more calories than fat, so your body uses energy more efficiently as your muscles become toned.

If done incorrectly, some strengthening exercises can injure muscles or joints. A physiotherapist or personal trainer can design a routine for your particular needs and show you how to do the exercises. You can find a wide variety of exercise programs on TV, the Internet, on DVDs and in fitness magazines. Experiment until you find a program that suits you.

If you suffer from a chronic condition or injury, ask your doctor to recommend an appropriate exercise routine.

Precious Paws ADOPTABLE

Slinker

Special to the Chronicle

A dachshund/beagle mix, Slinker is a young, energetic female weighing about 15 pounds. She is housebroken, crate trained and enjoys walking on a leash. She would do best with a young family, a doggie door and a fenced yard. She gets bored easily and needs attention, lots of play time and consistent discipline. She likes to cuddle and will make a great family pet. October is Adopt A Shelter Dog Month. Kittens and cats are available for adoption at the Pet Supermarket on State Road 44, Inverness, daily during store hours. The Precious Paws Adoption Center at Crystal River Mall is open noon to 4 p.m. Thursday through Sunday. View pets at www.preciouspawsflorida.com or call 352-726-4700.

Protect plants during winter

Extension master gardeners offer free clinics for October

Special to the Chronicle

The UF-IFAS Citrus County Extension Master Gardeners free plant clinics for October will address plant protection.

Citrus County winters usually have extreme temperature changes occurring over short periods of time. If Mother Nature gives plants time to acclimate to lower temperatures, they can establish dormancy to help plants survive, but rapidly falling temperatures do not allow this.

The clinics will explain the types of freezes we experience and present actions to take before, during and after cold weather to protect plants. The schedule is:

■ Tuesday, Oct. 9 — 1 p.m. at Lakes Region Library, Inverness.

■ Wednesday, Oct. 10 — 1:30 p.m. at Central Ridge Library, Beverly Hills.

■ Friday, Oct. 12 — 1:30 p.m. at Coastal Region Library, Crystal River.

■ Wednesday, Oct. 17 — 1 p.m. at Citrus Springs Library.

■ Tuesday, Oct. 23 — 2 p.m. at Homosassa Library.

The clinic normally done in Floral City will not be offered this month, but will return in November.

Questions or pictures can be sent to the master gardeners at MasterG1@bocc.citrus.fl.us. Master gardeners will research and respond. Call 352-527-5700.

Mentors sought for young people

Special to the Chronicle

Take Stock in Children is a mentoring program that offers a college scholarship and the promise of hope to deserving youths in Citrus County.

Take Stock scholars join the program in the sixth, seventh, or eighth grades and are assigned a mentor who meets with their student once a week, during regular school hours, and helps the student achieve their goal of a graduating from high school and going to college.

The mentor commitment involves working with scholars each week during regular school hours, believing in the student, and helping the student believe in themselves. Both men and women are needed .

Call Pat Lancaster, program coordinator, at 352-422-2348 or 352-344-0855 for information and to sign up for the next mentor training.

Community band wows crowds yet again

The 10th anniversary celebration of the all-volunteer Nature Coast Community Band was yet another standing-room-only event for music lovers of a genuine concert band art form.

Held at the Inverness United Methodist Church sanctuary, the light pops classics were performed to perfection with the astute leadership and all-consuming passion of their conductor, Cindy Hazzard, and the delightful, enlightening narration by Doreen Morgan.

Throughout this year's season, fans will be able to attend veterans' concerts in October, Christmas concerts in December, spring concerts in March, festival concerts in May and Independence Day concerts in June.

There is no admission fee to attend. An offering is taken to defray the costs incurred and Friends of the Nature Coast Community Band Memberships are encouraged. "In memory of" and "In honor of" donations are accepted. Organizations and businesses Friends supporting the group's quest to provide free cultural community band concerts include Citrus Lodge 118 F & AM, Citrus Springs Community Center, a Division of Citrus Parks and Recreation, Cornerstone Baptist Church, First United Methodist Church of Homosassa, Inverness First United Methodist Church, Gaudette Electric Co., Inverness Elks Lodge 2522 and Power Protection. For a Friend membership application, call Cindy at 352-746-7567.

An astounding selection of classics included the all-time favorite march tune, "The Washington Post March" by John Philip Sousa, a perfect fit with the popular two-step dance of the era.

Ruth Levins
AROUND THE COMMUNITY

The "Instant Concert" by Harold Walters included, in rapid succession, some 30 melodies in three minutes. We were hard pressed to quickly identify them (I only recalled 10).

The "Theme from Schindler's List" featured Mariah Dixon, violinist, a 15-year-old. Written by famed conductor John Williams, it was an accounting of the tragedy of the Holocaust. The teen garnered a standing ovation for her remarkable performance. Dixion is privately taught, but it is the hope that soon string instruments will be offered in the Citrus County School System's music departments.

"La Boutique Fantastique" by Rossini/Respighi/Mahaffey was composed for an Italian opera (Russian Ballet) in three movements: 1. The can can. 2. Valse Lente for the woodwind section and 3. Galop, which featured a typical Russian treatment.

The ever-popular "Phantom of the Opera," by Andrew Lloyd Webber, featured the hauntingly lovely "Music of the Night" — my personal favorite.

After intermission, we heard "Classical Rondo," by Capuzzi, with featured clarinet soloist Marilyn Scassio.

"Entrance of the Gladiators" by Julius Fucik, a military march written in 1897, was popularized with "The March of the Penguins" in the classic "Mary Poppins" Disney film.

"In a Gentle Rain" by Robert Smith drew on the forces of nature for inspiration. We closed our eyes and could hear the softly falling rain as drops of water on the roof.

"La Belle Helene" by Jacques Offenbach, was based on the myth of "Helen of Troy" and the French foolishness of the day.

The delightful afternoon all too soon came to a close with selections from "South Pacific," by Oscar Hammerstein, and a lively Italian polka by Sergei Rachmaninoff.

It was a most lovely way to spend an afternoon, with the Nature Coast Community Band.

Ruth Levins participates in a variety of projects around the community. Let her know about your group's upcoming activities by writing to P.O. Box 803, Crystal River, FL 34423.

PHILLIP ALDER
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Satirist Tom Lehrer said, "Counting in octal is like counting in decimal, if you don't use your thumbs."

Counting in bridge is like counting away from the table. However, most players do not count as much as they ought — and could. This type of deal drives most people crazy. How should South plan the play in seven spades after West leads the club king?

North's two-no-trump response promised eight-plus points and a balanced hand. Then, when South showed five or more spades, North made a four-club control-bid (cue-bid) to say that he loved spades. (If North did not like spades, he would have rebid three no-trump. If he had a so-so hand for spades, he would have raised to four spades. Bidding another suit showed an excellent hand for spades.)

South needed to take five spades, four hearts, two diamonds, one club and one diamond ruff on the board. The only likely problem would be getting those heart tricks. To find out the lie of that suit, South played on the other suits first. His sequence of plays was club ace, club ruff, ace-king of spades, diamond to the king, club ruff high, diamond ace, diamond ruff. What had declarer learned?

That West had begun with two spades, seven diamonds, at least three clubs and, therefore, at most one heart. South cashed the heart queen, then played a low heart to his nine, confident it would win. (If East had split his honors, playing the 10 or jack, South would have won, crossed to dummy with his last trump, and taken the heart finesse to get home.)

ANNIE'S MAILBOX

Dear Annie: I want to share my story of depression — and hope — so that it might help others.

I'm nearly 50 now, but only recently did I recognize the depression that has plagued my life. I had the symptoms for decades: bursts of anger, loss of appetite, lack of interest in work and activities, avoiding people, constantly thinking about death. A few years ago, it hit me hard. For weeks, I couldn't leave my bed, and suicidal thoughts filled my mind. I was a "dead man walking." My emotions were burned away, and I saw no point in living.

Finally, I began seeing a therapist on a weekly basis. Progress was slow, but each bit of relief was a stepping-stone out of the darkness. I learned that you have to look after yourself. Overworking, not eating right, lack of exercise, not enough sunshine and cutting yourself off from social situations all feed depression. If you can get out of bed and get out the door — if only for a little while — that's a major thing.

National Depression Screening Day is Thursday, October 11. I recently found out about it from a friend. I wish I'd known about it years ago and taken a screening. Readers can go to HelpYourselfHelpOthers.org and find a nearby screening location or take a free, anonymous screening online. They also can find out what to do next.

I'm alive today because I managed to get help in time, but I lost years of real living before I understood that I had depression. I strongly urge anyone reading this who even suspects they might have depression to do a screening. Sincerely — Mike Stephens

Dear Mike: Thank you for sharing your story. Depression affects millions of Americans from all walks of life and all demographics. National Depression Screening Day can be enormously helpful for those who are concerned about depression. We hope our readers will check HelpYourselfHelpOthers.org to find out about a screening.

Dear Annie: What do I tip when eating at a buffet where the server takes the drink orders but does nothing else? What about at a Japanese restaurant where the server takes our orders and serves the meal, but the sushi chef prepares the food?

Our favorite Japanese place has a tip jar at the sushi bar. I feel a tip should be left for both the server and the chef, but I don't know how to divide it. I was told that the sushi chefs keep their tips and the others are split. I'd appreciate some guidance. — Liz

Dear Liz: At a buffet, etiquette experts recommend a 10 percent tip (on the pre-tax amount) because the server takes drink orders and clears the table. If you sit at a sushi bar where the food is served directly to you, tip the chef on the food and the server on your drinks. If the server brings you the food, tip the server.

Tip jars, whether at a sushi bar or a coffee shop, do not obligate you to leave anything. However, if the service (or sushi) was exceptional or complicated, or if you are a regular customer, you may wish to do so.

Dear Annie: I would like to respond to "The Drunk's Wife." My 67-year-old husband came home many nights so drunk he could barely stand up.

After putting up with this for 40 years, I finally had enough. I told him that I loved him, but the next time it happened, I'd be gone. Two weeks later, he came home toasted, and I packed a bag and left. He called all night, begging me to come back.

The following day, we talked. I said I'd return, but there would be no more second chances. He knew I meant it.

That was two years ago. He hasn't been drunk since, and our marriage is better than ever. — Stuck to My Guns

DOUGIE is a handsome 5-year-old Hound mix, weighs 40 pounds, very sweet and gentle, mild-mannered, housebroken. He came to the shelter because his family could not afford to care for him. A little shy at first but warms up quickly. Has low energy and would make a wonderful companion for a family. Please call Michelle at 352-726-5139.

Pets

is a 6-months-old terrier puppy who was a stray. He is very playful, friendly, Heartworm-negative, and housebroken. He gets along with other dogs and doesn't care about cats. As he is very playful, he would be great with kids. He needs a good home where he would have a lot of loving attention and exercise and a fenced yard would be preferred.
Please call Joanne at 352-795-1288.

PUDGIE

is a 4-year-old Hound mix who came to the shelter because his family could not afford to feed him. He is neutered, housebroken, and Heartworm-negative, as well as already microchipped. Gets along with other dogs, walks well on a leash, and is playful. He is a "family dog" and needs to have a home of his own again.
Please call Joanne at 352-795-1288.

1. Coexist in an animal den (1)
2. Funny Groucho puts his car in a lot (1)
3. Grossly indelicate military bigwigs (1)
4. Streaming video website's doozies (2)
5. Magistrates' long-held resentments (2)
6. Cooking oil on crunchy oats cereal (3)
7. Illegal tenants' playful river mammals (2)

Every answer is a rhyming pair of words (like FAT CAT and DOUBLE TROUBLE), and they will fit in the letter squares. The number after the definition tells you how many syllables in each word.
