Associated Press

WASHINGTON — There they go again. Or do they?

Will Mitt Romney miscount the number of unemployed, as he has before? Will President Barack Obama's dubious claim of a peace dividend, bopped down in the last debate, rise again? When Obama and his Republican challenger debate Tuesday night, the media's fact-checking corps will be watching for problematic claims that have popped up repeatedly in the campaign, as well as brand new ones.

You can play fact-check Whac-a-Mole on debate night, too. You might have your hands full: The format, driven by questions from the audience, could shake things even looser than usual.

To be sure, you're not likely to catch one of them saying it's daytime when it's night. Shades of mistruth are more common than whoppers. Often, the offense is one of omission: an accurate as-far-as-it-goes assertion that ignores something really important, like the other side of the ledger. And, at times, the debaters tweak a statement to make it closer to right. You just never know.

PRESIDENTIAL DEBATE TONIGHT

- Topic: Town meeting format including foreign and domestic policy.
- Time: 9 to 10:30 p.m.
- Location: Hofstra University in Hempstead, New York.
- Sponsor: Commission on Presidential Debates.
- Moderator: Candy Crowley (CNN Chief Political Correspondent).

To assist in armchair fact-checking, here's a guide to 10 of the leading misleading statements of the campaign:

OBAMA:

- From the State of the Union on, the president has told the nation he wants to take "some of the money that we're saving as we wind down two wars to rebuild America," as he put it in the last debate. There is no such pile of cash. The wars were financed mostly with borrowing. So treating the end of wars as a financial bonanza just means continuing to go deeper in debt to fix roads, bridges and the like. The potential benefit is that borrowing is put to more use at home. But it's still borrowing.

Inverness man killed in ultralight

Gary Lawrence, 61, of Inverness was one of two people who died after an ultralight plane crash Sunday morning in Winter Haven.

Susanne Broadbelt, 60, of Zephyrhills, the passenger in the experimental aircraft, was pronounced dead at the scene while Lawrence later died at Lakeland Regional Medical Center, according to the Winter Haven Police Department.

According to Jamie Brown of Winter Haven Police, at approximately 11:20 a.m., the Airborne Windsport experimental aircraft was performing touch-and-go maneuvers when the aircraft hit the ground, flipped and slid approximately 168 feet.

There was a reported wind gust in the 30 to 35 mph range, which possibly played a factor in the crash, according to investigators.

Building better bodies

DAVE SIGLER/Chronicle

Just four and a half years ago, friends Rob Weiand, left, and Dave Oliver were feeling pudgy and flabby and decided it was time to get in shape. Now Weiand recently broke a state power-lifting record and Oliver holds three bodybuilding titles.

Lifting weights leads Inverness friends to a healthier lifestyle

INVERNESS — Four and a half years ago, friends Dave Oliver and Rob Weiand sat at a local eatery stuffing their faces with French fries and patting their protruding guts.

It was time to do something, they decided. Round was no longer the shape they wanted to be.

Fast forward to 2012. Oliver, 57, is a three-time National Physique Committee (NPC) Masters Champion in bodybuilding and Weiand, 52, recently broke a state power-lifting record for his age and weight class.

Not bad for two self-admitted middle-age former slugs.

"I was almost 20 pounds overweight," Weiand said. "I went to the doctor's for a physical and had borderline high blood pressure and cholesterol; the doctor wanted to put me on meds, but I said no, I'll try the gym and diet thing."

As they ate French fries, Oliver told Weiand he had just started back at the gym and Weiand suggested they work out together. They began meeting at Dynabody Fitness Club in Inverness every day at noon.

"Neither one of us knew what we were doing," Oliver said.

They eventually learned from trainers and other gym members, and began working out every day like clockwork.

After three months, Weiand returned to the doctor and all his blood tests came back normal.

"The doctor thought I'd filled the prescriptions, but I hadn't, so that was cool," he said.

Two years ago, Oliver got interested in bodybuilding and focused on getting ready for his first competition.

"Rob kept on training with me and helping me," Oliver said. "He'd been getting stronger and stronger, and about two months ago I said, 'You ought to do one of these (power-lifting) contests.' It took him two months to prepare."

That included having to lose 12 pounds to make his weight limit

Family mourns man killed in motorcycle wreck

Daughter critically injured

INVERNESS — Purple rules at Inverness Middle School as students, staff and the community keep vigil for one of their own — 12-year-old Jazmine Lee, who was critically injured in a motorcycle crash Oct. 8. Her father, Thomas Bruce Lee, 38, was killed in the crash.

Principal Trish Douglas said Monday several students came to school the morning of Oct. 9 "upset and crying."

Thomas Lee

Douglas said it's been a rough week at the school, but students have been rallying to the side of the Lee family by donning purple — Jazmine's favorite color — all week, last week.

"Friday was Wear Purple Day and everybody came in with purple hair, purple clothes, anything purple; we didn't care," said Douglas, who roams the halls and school grounds with a purple ribbon attached to her walkie-talkie.

"My heart goes out to the family. It was devastating to hear what happened. I hope the way the kids and the community are responding to this tragedy will give the family some comfort," Douglas added.

Last Thursday, residents held a candlelight vigil in Jazmine's father's memory and prayed for Jazmine, who remains in intensive care at Tampa General Hospital.

"It's just a horrible thing that happened," said Maria Robinett, whose son, Elijah Lindall, 12, is friends with Jazmine. Robinett and Elijah were at the candlelight vigil last week, which because of crowd levels had to Trash, garbage, refuse.

Whatever you call it, it needs to be collected and someone needs to pay for it.

Among the agenda items for Tuesday's regular meeting of the Inverness City Council, council members will be voting to adopt a new rate structure for commercial accounts in the downtown area.

At a previous city council meeting, City Manager Frank DiGiovanni pointed out problems that exist, such as businesses that pay for five cans of trash pickup but put out seven cans' worth of trash or random bags of trash set out in front of businesses without being in designated cans.

"It's a problem … because we don't know where all the containers are coming from," he said. "Do we pick it up? You betcha — we don't want garbage laying around the city. On the other hand, we don't know what account it belongs to."

DiGiovanni said people are getting more service

Volunteers rake lyngbya from springs

Special to the Chronicle

CRYSTAL RIVER — For a third time, volunteers working with the Kings Bay Rotary Club hand-raked three tons of algae out of Three Sisters Springs on Monday.

The gates were opened at 8 a.m. and by 9 a.m., people were in the water cleaning lyngbya algae off the white sand bottom using rakes and kayaks to haul the invasive weed to shore.

The week before, divers cleaned out the big and middle spring vents at Three Sisters. Monday, the deep shores around the vents were cleaned at low tide bringing back the crystal clear water clarity that attracts thousands of people to King's Bay every year. Idiot's Delight, one of the main springs in front of Three Sisters, was also cleaned up, getting it ready for the hundreds of visiting manatees expected to start showing up in November.

The cleanup is part of the "One Rake at a Time" five-year service project started by Art Jones of Kings Bay Rotary. The initiative was launched in September 2011.

As lyngbya algae and its two ugly cousins chaetomorpha algae and spriogyira algae crowd out natural plants, they destroy fish habitat and water quality.

Project organizers believe the best way to rid King's Bay of algae is to physically remove it by hand or mechanical methods. The more algae that is removed the slower the algae grows because algae hordes nutrients from other decaying algae. Thus, as its food source is removed, it is slowly being starved. Every rake full of algae removed is a rake full of pollution removed from King's Bay. The cleaner the water, the less algae can grow.

Because of the hard work done by community volunteers working alongside U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service personnel at Three Sisters Springs on Monday, Kings Bay is now cleaner than it was the day before, organizers report.

Mechanical harvesting is also removing lyngbya algae mats in the Hunters Spring canals on low tides, removing even more tonnage of the noxious algae and pollution.

All costs of the project are funded through donations to the Kings Bay Rotary Charitable Foundation. The up coming Stone Crab Jam on Nov. 3 raises money for projects like One Rake at a Time.

DEBATE

frequently about a plan to cut the deficit by $4 trillion. Impressive number, but it's not cut and dried.

■ "Gov. Romney's central economic plan calls for a $5 trillion tax cut." Here Obama uses an estimate from the Tax Policy Center, a Washington research group, that Romney's tax cuts would reduce federal revenue by $465 billion in 2015. Multiply that by 10 years — a common budgeting procedure in Washington — and he is in the ballpark in talking about $5 trillion. But Obama leaves out Romney's proposals to reduce or eliminate tax credits, deductions and exemptions. He is only counting half the plan. Romney has not specified what tax breaks he'd cut, opening himself to criticism that he's been stubbornly vague on vital elements of his plan.

■ Obama has something to crow about when he talks about the auto bailout, which almost certainly saved General Motors and Chrysler. His estimate that up to 1 million jobs were saved is based on a 2010 study by the Center for Automotive Research, an industry think tank. But Obama rarely acknowledges that his predecessor, George W. Bush, began the auto bailout that he inherited and expanded. Vice President Joe Biden declared flatly in his debate last week, "We went out and rescued General Motors."

■ The president and vice-president have both been cagey on $716 billion in Medicare cuts set in motion by Obama's health care law over 10 years. To hear Biden talk, the government took the money out of Medicare with one hand and is restoring it with the other: "What we did is, we saved $716 billion and put it back, applied it to Medicare."

Not really. The cuts are from payments to Medicare service providers, like hospitals, and some of the money is going toward improved preventive care and other benefits under the program.

ROMNEY:

■ The Republican nominee has taken various shortcuts with jobless numbers, to the point of wildly misstating them at times. In the first debate, just before the improved September jobless figures came out, Romney said in one instance the U.S. has "23 million people out of work." A bit more accurately, he said earlier in the debate that there are "23 million people out of work or stopped looking for work." But even that was off by close to 9 million.

In all, the government counts nearly 12.1 million unemployed, 8.6 million working part-time for economic reasons and 2.5 million discouraged people who want work and looked for a job in the past year but aren't looking now.

■ Romney's vow to "get us to a balanced budget" is notably short of specifics and complicated by proposals in his agenda that conflict with that goal. He promises, at once, to cut taxes, restore Medicare cuts, spend more on the armed forces — and balance the budget by 2020. He's laid out an ambitious goal of bringing federal spending below 20 percent of the economy, but he's provided only a few modest examples of the massive cuts that would be needed.

■ Romney continually portrays Obamacare as a budget-buster although the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office has consistently said the law actually will reduce the deficit. This is more than an unsupported slam on the health care law itself. It also goes to Romney's promise to balance the budget. He suggests that repealing the law will help him get to black ink. "Obamacare adds trillions to our deficits," he said earlier in the campaign. He was a bit more circumspect in the first presidential debate, saying, "Obamacare's on my list" of things to roll back to make government more efficient.

Romney's claim is further complicated because he would negate one big money-saver in the law, the $716 billion in Medicare spending cuts he promises to restore.

■ "Unlike President Obama, I will not raise taxes on the middle class." Obama actually has a substantial record of cutting middle-class taxes. He's raised the federal cigarette tax, and his health care law imposes fines for not getting health insurance, which the Supreme Court ruled constitutes a tax. On the other hand, he's reduced taxes for many more middle-income families. The 2009 stimulus package included a series of tax cuts for middle- and low-income people, including a tax credit worth up to $800 that year and again in 2010.

■ "I will roll back President Obama's deep and arbitrary cuts to our national defense that would devastate our military." Romney often pins sole blame on Obama for "arbitrary" defense spending cuts but they actually come from a White House deal with congressional Republicans, including his GOP vice presidential running mate, Rep. Paul Ryan.

Giant eyeball may be from swordfish

The giant, blue eyeball that washed up on a South Florida beach likely came from a swordfish, wildlife officials said Monday.

Based on its color, size and structure, along with the presence of bone around it, experts believe the eye came from a swordfish, according to statement from the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission.

Genetic testing will be done to confirm the identification.

A man found the softball-size eye on Wednesday while taking a morning stroll along Pompano Beach just north of Fort Lauderdale, creating a buzz on the Internet.

Progress wants to issue $1.5 billion of debt

The Florida Public Service Commission was scheduled to consider a request from Progress Energy Florida today to issue and sell $1.5 billion in securities and other long-term debt during 2013.

Duke Energy spokesperson Jennifer Zajac said the filing is customary and the company applies for it during the fourth quarter of every year.

According to the filing, net proceeds from the sale of the securities will be added to the company's general funds and may be used to provide additional electric facilities during 2013 for the company's construction program, to repay maturing long-term debt or short-term debt, to refund, retire or redeem existing obligations or for other corporate purposes.

Zajac said the request this year for $1.5 billion is up from $1 billion last year, driven by debt maturity in 2013.

DJJ to privatize final residential programs

The Florida Department of Juvenile Justice will privatize its five remaining residential facilities by next year.

The agency has been using prevention services to work with more youths at home, leaving those residential facilities for only the highest risk offenders.

Secretary Wansley Walters said Monday commitments to residential facilities are down 44 percent in the past five years.

The five facilities being privatized are: Pensacola Boys, Duval Halfway House, Britt Halfway, Les Peters Halfway House and Falkenburg Juvenile Correctional Facility.

Speaker aims at keeping teens clean, happy

Special to the Chronicle

Of the 67 counties in Florida, Citrus County youths are more likely to participate in high-risk behaviors than in any other county.

According to the Safe and Drug-Free Schools Evaluation of Citrus County, in 2010, 34 percent of youths ages 10 to 17 reported having one or more alcoholic drinks nearly every day, compared to the overall average of 30 percent.

Also, Citrus County youths have a higher usage rate for cigarettes and illicit drugs than the overall statewide usage rates for this age group.

Research reveals a correlation between these high-risk behaviors and more serious life challenges, including STDs, dating and domestic violence and teen pregnancy.

Currently in the U.S., 25 percent of sexually active teens will get an STD. Also, teen pregnancy rates are higher in Citrus County than both the state and national averages.

The RIVER Project (Reaching Intentional Victory, Expecting Reality) addresses sexual health issues to Citrus County middle and high school students. It's a risk-avoidance program that encourages teens to be intentional about choosing health and success in the face of the reality of what it means to be a teenager in 2012.

The RIVER Project uses the WAIT (Why Am I Tempted) Training curriculum, founded on several research-based models of prevention programming and sexuality education.

On Wednesday, Oct. 24, The RIVER Project is hosting an all-day WAIT Training seminar with guest speaker Shelly Donahue at St. Scholastica Parish Center, 4301 W. Homosassa Trail, Lecanto. Cost is $25 and includes lunch.

The seminar is especially designed for anyone interested in youth, sexual health and teen pregnancy prevention; medical and health professionals; teachers, subs, guidance counselors; clergy and youth pastors and those who work with youth organizations or nonprofits.

WAIT Training seminar topics generally include:

How to teach teens to have the best sex by waiting until — and in preparation for — marriage, character and relationship education, positive youth development and asset identification, marriage preparation education and life and conflict resolution skills.

The training is fun, interactive, age- and developmentally appropriate, medically accurate and research-based. The seminar also discusses social science in regard to what makes marriages succeed or fail.

Bishop dedicates community outreach center; funds needed for dental clinic

MIKE WRIGHT
Staff Writer

— HOMOSASSA When the Rev. Robert Lynch arrived in St. Petersburg 17 years ago as bishop of the Catholic diocese, one thing he noticed was a relatively small Catholic Charities organization.

Lynch became determined to enlarge the charity so it could provide services to the unfortunate in the five-county diocese.

He is seeing those efforts pay off.

Lynch was on hand Monday to dedicate the Citrus County Community Outreach Service Center in Homosassa, a place that will provide part-time facilities for the We Care Food Pantry, Pregnancy and Family Life Center, CASA and more.

It also is planning the Nature Coast Ministries Dental and Medical Clinic once the group raises $75,000 for equipment.

Lynch said Catholic Charities is following its mission.

"If you need us, we'll help you because we're Catholic. It's part of our DNA," Lynch told about 60 people who gathered for the dedication.

He added: "Every person who comes here is made in the image and likeness of God. We have been charged to love and care for them."

The Knights of Columbus donated the building on West Atlas Drive to Catholic Charities, which renovated it for offices, meeting rooms and medical care.

The dental program, in particular, meets a glaring need in the community. Ed Murphy, who heads up the Nature Coast Ministries medical committee, said the health department offers dental care for children but there is no place for low-income adults.

Murphy said adults visit hospital emergency rooms and receive pain medication or antibiotics; hospitals do not provide dental care. The cost of caring for those with the inability to pay is enormous — about $800,000 every year, Murphy said.

Homosassa dentist Dr. Frank Vascimini received commitments from 18 dentists to offer their time free of charge at the clinic. Murphy said that once it's up and running, the clinic may be open Fridays and Saturdays, depending on dentists' availability.

He said $75,000 is needed to buy four dental chairs and associated equipment.

Vascimini, who has practiced in Citrus County since 1989, said the need for low-income residents to receive dental care is larger than most people think.

"I get calls all the time from people looking for someone who provides these services," he said. "I think we're going to have a lot of hours in dentistry here."

Catholic Charities president Frank Murphy said the center will help fill the community's needs.

"The word that keeps going through my head is 'blessing,'" he said. "This place is a blessing."

Most new airport hangars already leased

CHRIS VAN ORMER
Staff Writer

Ten new hangars are ready for use at Crystal River Airport. As seven of the 10 already are leased, pilots need to speak up soon for the remaining three.

"Pilots prefer to store their aircraft in an enclosed hangar," said Lindsay Ubinas, Citrus County public information officer. "These hangars increase revenue to the county, ultimately making the airport more self-funded."

Construction on the project started almost a year ago as part of Crystal River Airport's master plan. Now complete, the new hangar addition includes an attached parking lot. Eventually, Crystal River will have more hangars, as they are part of the master plan. As hangars beyond the current 10 are far from the drawing board, pilots need to grab the three available.

The 10 spaces are known as nested T-hangars. According to Tom Davis, Crystal River Airport's fixed base operator, "It's a very efficient way of hangaring aircraft."

These hangars take up less area, as planes are backed into both front and back sides of the hangar building, allowing for wing overlap along the length of the building. Advantages for using nested T-hangars include the need for less building material than standard hangars and, because they are wider but shorter than the standard ones, the length of the taxiway abutting the building can be reduced.

Special to the Chronicle

The final cost of the project is $976,723. Eighty percent of this cost was covered by three grants from the Florida Department of Transportation. The remainder was met by county funding.

A runway expansion also is in the works as part of the airport's master plan. Plans are under way to expand the runway to 5,000 feet. The current runway is 4,555 feet. Completion is set for 2015.

The longer runway would not be used to bring in larger planes, according to Davis, which is a concern for neighboring residents. The small size of the airport actually limits the sizes of the planes that can use it. However, with a longer runway, planes would have the takeoff length to become airborne while carrying heavier payloads in the way of fuel and cargo.

Davis said he expects more demand for hangars once the longer runway is installed.

For more information about the T-hangar project or leasing one of the available hangars, call county engineering project manager Quincy Wylupek at 352-527-5488.

Man, 52 charged with lewd conduct

A.B. SIDIBE
Staff Writer

A self-described "touchy" 52-year-old man is facing multiple counts of lewd and lascivious charges regarding two 15-year-old girls, according to the Citrus County Sheriff's Office.

William Brown faces multiple charges.

William P. Brown, West Acacia Drive, Crystal River, is also accused of exposing another, through culpable negligence, to personal injury. He was arrested Monday and his bond is $32,000.

According to the report, Brown subjected the girls to repeated inappropriate sexual conduct.

One of the girls reportedly said Brown had brazenly touched her inappropriately in front of her mother on one occasion.

When investigators quizzed him about the allegations, Brown reportedly said he was a very "touchy" person and may have unwittingly acted sexually inappropriately with the girls. Brown reportedly also added that he often drinks alcohol and is known to have "blackout" episodes.

He was arrested and transported to the Citrus County Detention facility.

Amendment 6 would prohibit state tax money for abortion

Associated Press

TAMPA — To hear supporters and opponents of Amendment 6 talk, what's at stake is whether taxpayer money should fund abortions for public employees — and whether minors should get parental consent to end a pregnancy.

The amendment would prohibit the use of state tax money for abortions except as required by federal law if it's passed by voters Nov. 6 — something the state doesn't do, anyway.

It would also overrule court decisions that say the privacy rights in the state constitution are greater than those in the U.S. Constitution — possibly making it easier for state lawmakers to require minors seeking an abortion to get parental consent. Abortions for minors currently require parental notification, not consent.

But the amendment — put on the ballot by the GOP-controlled Legislature — is evidence of the vast divide between conservative and liberal groups within the state. Like all amendments, it must get 60 percent approval to pass.

> "Public dollars shouldn't be used for private choices."
> Jim Frankowiak
> campaign manager for the main group supporting Amendment 6.

Some conservative lawmakers and proponents of the amendment are worried that President Barack Obama's health care overhaul would allow tax money to be used for insurance that covers abortion. Currently such expenditures are banned under federal law except in cases of rape, incest or the health of the mother is endangered.

"Public dollars shouldn't be used for private choices," said Jim Frankowiak, campaign manager for the main group supporting the amendment.

Frankowiak also said that requiring parental consent for a minor's abortion is also a top priority for conservative groups.

"We're hoping that it will lead to legislation that brings back parental consent," he said.

Amendment opponents say Obama's health care plan has nothing to do with this initiative and call it a "smoke screen."

"They're saying this is about taxpayer funding," said Judith Selzer, campaign manager Vote No on 6 effort and the vice president of public policy for Florida's Planned Parenthood affiliates. "This is about politicians trying to interfere with women's health care decisions."

Selzer said that the people most affected if Amendment 6 passes are public employees — teachers, nurses, firefighters, police and others.

She said that if passed, the state would ban private health insurance policies from paying for abortion for public employees.

"This is a direct attack on public employees," she said.

Amendment 6 has some well-known opponents and supporters.

Former Gov. Jeb Bush is in favor of the amendment, saying that Floridians "have the opportunity to restore parental consent" in cases where children are seeking an abortion.

"As parents, we have the responsibility and right to direct the education, health decisions and general welfare of our children," Bush said in a news release.

Sandra Fluke — the Georgetown University Law School graduate who became well known after she was called a "slut" by radio host Rush Limbaugh for her prepared testimony to a Senate committee that health insurance should cover birth control — is opposing the amendment.

She is appearing in a "Vote No on 6" television ad. The group has bought $1 million of TV air time.

As of Oct. 1, the Vote No on 6 group had raised $1.9 million. Groups opposing the amendment include Planned Parenthood and a coalition of faith leaders from the Jewish, Methodist and Unitarian traditions.

The main proponent of the amendment — a group called Citizens for Protecting Taxpayers and Parental Rights — had raised around $300,000, mostly from Catholic groups.

without losing strength. He qualified on a Friday and competed the next day.

The state power-lifting record for Weiand's class was 305 pounds — he was confident he could at least reach it.

"He started out lifting 295 — no problem," Oliver said. "I was spotting him and everyone was yelling and cheering. His second lift — 315. Then I said, 'Are you going to go for it?' He did 325, and it was perfect…He was green-lighted all across the board. We were all excited for him — he broke the state record."

Oliver has a national competition coming up in November. As for Weiand, he said one contest is enough. Maybe.

"It was fun," he said. "I just wanted to see if I could do it, but I might do a team competition in January."

The men said making regular exercise part of their daily routine has changed their lives. They feel better, physically and mentally.

"I had no muscle at all," Weiand said. "I have more energy now and my wife says I look a little better, but I don't know if that's true or not. It's an overall feeling of health. I feel better, my outlook's better — everything's better."

Oliver added that setting a goal is important, and reaching it is inspiring.

"There's so much support here at the gym," he said. "When you're working toward your goal, in the process you're inspiring others. We're just normal everyday guys, and if we can do it, anyone can."

be moved from the crash scene to Regions Bank.

Robinett said her son has been keeping tabs on Jazmine's medical condition through Facebook chatter.

"My heart just broke for the family," Robinett said.

Jay Watson, who spoke for the family, said the family greatly appreciates the community support, but are in too much grief say anything further.

According to the Citrus County Sheriff's Office, Thomas Lee and Jazmine were riding a black 1983 Suzuki bike at about 25 mph eastbound at 7:20 p.m. Oct. 8, on Tompkins Street when he encountered wet pavement just as he was approaching Cherry Avenue.

Lee lost control of the bike soon after the wet patch, throwing both riders and causing the bike to flip. According to the report, a sprinkler was on, spraying water upward and may have hit Lee in the face.

It is unclear if Jazmine and her father were wearing helmets. The deputy who reportedly arrived on the scene shortly after the crash said didn't observe any helmets being worn.

Lee, who was in the Marine Corps, was transported to Shands Hospital in Gainesville where he was pronounced dead. Jazmine was transported to Tampa General in critical condition.

Chas. E. Davis Funeral Home said memorial services for Lee are pending.

Americans win Nobel prize for economics

Associated Press

STOCKHOLM — Two American scholars won the Nobel economics prize Monday for work on match-making — how to pair doctors with hospitals, students with schools, kidneys with transplant recipients and even men with women in marriage.

Lloyd Shapley of UCLA and Alvin Roth, a Harvard University professor currently visiting at Stanford University, found ways to make markets work when traditional economic tools fail.

Shapley, 89, came up with the formulas to match supply and demand in markets where prices don't do the job; the 60-year-old Roth put Shapley's math to work in the real world.

"It's all about down-to-earth, highly useful stuff," said Robert Aumann, a professor at Jerusalem's Hebrew University, who won the 2005 economics Nobel. "We're talking about the nitty-gritty of health care and education — which medical students are assigned to which hospitals. We're talking about how to arrange donors of kidneys."

Shapley made early theoretical inroads into the subject, using game theory to analyze different matching methods in the 1950s and '60s.

In a groundbreaking 1962 paper, Shapley and the late David Gale looked at how to match 10 men and 10 women in perfectly stable marriages. They created a model in which no two people liked anyone else better than each other.

While that may have had little impact on marriages and divorces, the elegant algorithm they developed has been used to better understand many different markets.

Building on Shapley's work, Roth applied it decades later to the market for allocating doctors, creating an algorithm that led to the redesign of the National Resident Matching Program that pairs fourth-year medical students with hospitals.

"Before Roth, it was not unusual to not get any of your first three or four choices," said David Warsh, who follows university economists in his Economic Principals blog. "After Roth hooked up this new algorithm, almost everyone got what they wanted."

Roth also successfully applied the formula to New York City's public schools, ensuring that fewer students ended up in schools that were not among their top choices. Now, noted Susan Athey, a Stanford University economist, "there are school districts all over the country that are considering these matching procedures."

US retail sales get a lift

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Americans spent more money at retailers in September — a buying surge that reflected growing consumer confidence and the launch of the latest iPhone.

Retail sales jumped 1.1 percent last month, producing the best two months of sales in two years, according to figures released Monday by the Commerce Department.

"The consumer is back," said Joel Naroff, chief economist at Naroff Economic Advisors. "They are not spending money like it is going out of style, but they are spending at a more normal pace that is consistent with a moderately growing economy."

The spike in spending could boost sluggish growth and help revitalize President Barack Obama's campaign after a strong debate performance by challenger Mitt Romney.

The increase comes only 10 days after a report that unemployment fell to its lowest level since Obama took office. And it follows a survey last week by the University of Michigan that showed consumer confidence rose in early October to a five-year high.

Stocks climbed after the retail report. The Dow Jones industrial average gained 95 points to close up at 13,424. Broader indexes also rose.

Businesses appeared to be banking on a resurgent consumer.

A second Commerce Department report Monday showed companies increased their stockpiles in August by 0.6 percent after a slightly larger gain in July. Companies typically step up restocking when they anticipate sales will rise in coming months.

The retail sales report is the government's first monthly look at consumer spending. Consumer spending is critical because it drives nearly 70 percent of economic activity.

Associated Press

Jessica McEntee looks through dresses Sept. 24 while shopping at a clothing boutique in Cambridge, Mass.

In September, retailers saw gains in almost every major category. That contrasted with August's retail sales, which rose almost entirely on the strength of auto sales and higher gas prices.

Sales of electronics and appliances last month swelled 4.5 percent, in part because of iPhone sales. Sales at auto dealers increased 1.3 percent. Building materials and garden supplies, furniture and clothing sales all gained, too.

Some of the September increase also reflected higher food and gas prices. If those prices continue to rise, consumers could cut back elsewhere, and that could keep growth from accelerating.

But economists pointed to a key measure of sales that rose a solid 0.9 percent without counting autos and gas station sales. Many observers say that shows consumers are not too worried.

"We saw a cautious consumer in August because they had to spend more on gasoline," said Chris G. Christopher Jr., senior economist at IHS Global Insight. "Now in September, the consumer is starting to spend more on other items. Consumers are feeling better."

Christopher said the introduction of the new Apple iPhone was definitely a factor in September. He estimated 4 million iPhones were sold in the United States in the latter half of September.

The entire gain from electronics and appliance stores added only about 0.1 percentage point to September retail sales increase. So even excluding that gain, sales were solid, Christopher said.

Economic growth has been anemic in the first half of the year, held back by weaker consumer spending. The latest figures suggest consumers are shaking off high unemployment and the threat of tax increases that could come next year if Congress fails to reach a deal to prevent the economy from going over the "fiscal cliff."

Study: Privatized Medicare would raise premiums

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Nearly six in 10 Medicare recipients would pay higher premiums under a hypothetical privatized system along the lines of what Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney has proposed, according to a study released Monday.

The report by the nonpartisan Kaiser Family Foundation also found striking regional differences that could lead to big premium hikes in some states and counties. That finding instantly made it ammunition in the presidential campaign.

In the senior-rich political swing state of Florida, the hypothetical plan modeled by Kaiser would boost premiums for traditional Medicare by more than $200 a month on average. In Nevada, another competitive state, 50 percent of seniors would face additional monthly premiums of $100 or more for their coverage. A new pattern of regional disparities would emerge from overhauling Medicare's payment system, the report stated.

Romney and his running mate, Wisconsin Rep. Paul Ryan, have proposed changing Medicare to a "premium support" system dominated by private plans that are paid a fixed amount by the government. President Barack Obama says replacing the current open-ended Medicare benefit would shift costs to seniors.

Romney's approach would mirror the difference between traditional Medicare by more than $200 a month on average. In Nevada, another competitive state, 50 percent of seniors would face additional monthly premiums of $100 or more for their coverage. A new pattern of regional disparities would emerge from overhauling Medicare's payment system, the report stated.

In the senior-rich political swing state of Florida, the hypothetical plan modeled by Kaiser would boost premiums for traditional Medicare by more than $200 a month on average.

Romney and his running mate, Wisconsin Rep. Paul Ryan, have proposed changing Medicare to a "premium support" system dominated by private plans that are paid a fixed amount by the government. President Barack Obama says replacing the current open-ended Medicare benefit would shift costs to seniors.

Romney's approach would mirror the difference between traditional workplace pensions and modern-day 401(k) plans, in which the employer contribution is limited. While Medicare financing wouldn't be as heavy a lift for taxpayers, the risk is that retirees could end up paying more if medical costs rise.

The study carried a prominent disclaimer: It should not be taken as a specific analysis of the Romney-Ryan proposal, partly because their plan lacks details. However, Kaiser says it is modeled on what Romney and Ryan propose.

"This approach is similar to the premium support proposal included in (House Budget) Chairman Paul Ryan's ... budget proposal for (fiscal year) 2013 that was embraced by presidential nominee Mitt Romney," the report stated.

Like the Romney-Ryan plan, government health insurance payments for individual seniors would be tied to the cost of the second-lowest private insurance plan in their geographical area, or traditional Medicare, whichever is less expensive. Seniors could pick a private plan or a new public program modeled on traditional Medicare. But if their pick costs more than the government payment, they would have to pay the difference themselves.

One of the biggest differences, however, is that the report assumes the privatization plan is already in place. Under Romney-Ryan, current beneficiaries and those 10 years from retirement could stay in the traditional system. But the study assumed the change has already happened, and all Medicare recipients are already in the new system.

The study also did not model the effects of additional financial help that Romney has promised for low-income seniors and those in frail health, because such details have not been defined.

Sentences put on hold over drug lab scandal

Associated Press

BOSTON — One at a time, the prison inmates sat down at a wooden table, linked by videoconference to a Boston courtroom, where their attorneys and prosecutors explained the role a disgraced chemist played in their criminal cases.

One by one, the judge agreed to let them go free while their legal challenges make their way through the courts, placing their sentences on hold and setting bail.

The fallout from a scandal at a state drug lab played out in court Monday, as Judge Christine McEvoy began hearing what is expected to be nearly 200 legal challenges in Suffolk Superior Court drug cases.

The chemist, Annie Dookhan, 34, of Franklin, has been charged with obstruction of justice and accused of skirting protocols and faking tests results at a former Department of Public Health lab. The Boston lab was closed by state police in August after Dookhan told them she had faked test results, forged paperwork and sometimes mixed samples.

Associated Press

Annie Dookhan leaves a Boston courthouse on Oct. 10. Dookhan is accused of faking drug results, forging signatures and mixing samples at a state police lab.

She has pleaded not guilty.

The scandal has put thousands of criminal cases in jeopardy. Dookhan tested more than 60,000 samples covering about 34,000 defendants in her nine years at the lab, according to state police.

Monday was the first day of a two-week special session set up to hear challenges in Suffolk Superior Court, which covers Boston.

Some defense attorneys said they believe many of the cases could eventually be dismissed because allegations that Dookhan mishandled samples have made the evidence at the heart of their cases unreliable.

James Greenberg, who represents a 26-year-old convicted of distributing cocaine, told the judge, "I don't know how this case ever gets tried."

George McGovern in hospice

Associated Press

PIERRE, S.D. — Longtime former U.S. Sen. George McGovern, the Democratic presidential candidate who lost to President Richard Nixon in a historic landslide, has moved into hospice care near his home in South Dakota, his family said Monday.

"He's coming to the end of his life," his daughter, Ann McGovern, told The Associated Press. She declined to elaborate but noted her 90-year-old father has suffered several health problems in the last year.

George McGovern, who became a leader of the Democrats' liberal wing during his three decades in Congress, lost his 1972 challenge to Nixon, who later resigned amid the Watergate scandal. McGovern has turned his focus in recent years to world hunger.

It was after a lecture tour last October that he was treated for exhaustion. Two months later, he fell and hit his head just before a scheduled interview with C-SPAN.

McGovern was a member of the U.S. House from 1957 to 1961 and a U.S. senator from 1963 to 1981.

Elephants OK after circus truck wrecks on interstate

Associated Press

JACKSON, Miss. — A circus official said a truck pulling a trailer full of elephants ran off an interstate in southern Mississippi over the weekend, but the four animals and the driver weren't harmed.

Renee Storey, an executive with Cole Brothers Circus of the Stars, said the elephants were being transported from Alabama to Louisiana on Sunday night when the truck went off Interstate 10 and ran down an embankment.

Mississippi Highway Patrol spokesman Johnny Poulos said the truck's driver reported another vehicle forced him off the interstate.

The truck was disabled, but the trailer wasn't seriously damaged and later was towed it to its intended destination at circus grounds in Hammond, La.

Storey said the four elephants were calm and playful on Monday after their arrival in Louisiana.

Rhetoric obscures truth about entitlements

Lloyd Brown
FLORIDA VOICES

Expect liberals to go into full-court press over the next few weeks with Mediscare.

This is a tried and true tactic – using scare stories and lies about entitlement programs, especially Medicare.

Florida is a key state, and condos in South Florida are full of elderly people who are afraid Social Security, Medicaid and Medicare will not outlive them.

It is a valid concern.

The programs are heading toward bankruptcy because politicians have promised more than they can produce. The more delay, the worse the problem gets.

Not since Ronald Reagan has any politician even made a serious attempt to address the problem.

Entitlements are the biggest part of the mountain of debt that may soon turn into a volcano.

Yet, a "deficit reduction commission" appointed by President Obama didn't even address them.

Now, leftists are claiming that Mitt Romney wants to "privatize" Medicare, using "vouchers," and that it will ruin the (already-doomed) programs.

Utter and complete nonsense.

There are no vouchers.

The truth about the Romney plan is the exact opposite. What Obama and the other socialists want to do is destroy the private insurance and private health care markets. That is what Obamacare is all about.

They call it our "moral responsibility." The moral responsibility is to deliver the highest quality, lowest cost health care possible, which is what a private market unburdened by meddlesome politicians does.

Bill Clinton tried to employ Mediscare in his speech to the liberal convention last week. Naturally, it got rave reviews from the left. His facts were wrong.

The reason liberals have a panic attack when they hear the word "vouchers" is because vouchers give more choice (freedom) to the individual and less control to politicians.

Conservatives need to fight to keep the record straight. Distortions work. In my view, a similar tactic probably got Lawton Chiles elected governor.

When Chiles ran in 1994 against Jeb Bush, one of Chiles' aides ran a phone-bank operation that called thousands of elderly residents in South Florida and told them Republicans would take away their Social Security.

That wasn't even an issue in the governor's race. Furthermore, the most "radical" proposal from conservatives is to give future retirees a choice between staying in the current program or making real investments that provide a real return. Again, "choice."

After the Chiles victory, I did some calculations and concluded that if just one in 10 of the elderly voters was turned, it accounted for the difference in the outcome.

Romney has said he will seek repeal of Obamacare – which cuts $716 billion from Medicare and tries to spend that money twice. Romney will lead the fight for real health care reform, address the entitlement problem, and try to get a grip on the runaway spending and record deficits Obama and the liberal Congress incurred.

Admittedly, the health care issue is vastly complex and not easy to comprehend or cure.

But at the very least there should be agreement on the facts. Then, argue about the solution.

Straight talk or deceit. That's the choice.

No lavish spending

This is in response to the retiree complaining about our county's extreme spending on the school system. When was the last time you sat in on a PTO meeting, a SAC or a school board meeting? I'm guessing never, because if you had, you'd know that there is no money for lavish spending, especially on what you call our costly sports teams. There is only a constant, tiresome, combined effort from schools and communities to creatively devise new ways to combat each year's decrease in funding so the students don't feel the brunt of the shortfall. And this we do for necessities like computer earphones, student planners and PE equipment, which our annually shrinking budget doesn't even cover. You say our teachers are always crying about being underpaid? Well, do you know any of them personally? Because I do and the only complaints I have ever heard revolved around making ends meet in the classroom. No teacher ever went into that field aiming to get rich. And know this: Every state, even those promoting lotteries for school funding, have a portion of their taxes go towards public schools. If you think it's more fair somewhere else, then go there. Or better yet, go to wherever you came from so you don't feel burdened supporting the children who do call Florida their home state.

Jobs going away

I have to agree with Mary Gregory on how bad NAFTA and GATT are to our economy. We were warned by Ross Perot. He said if we passed NAFTA, the sucking sound you would hear would be jobs leaving the country.

Recycle copper, it pays

I just want to let people know…that they are aware that copper right now has run about $3.50 a pound and when you have faucets and pipes changed with copper in it, you're losing about $20 in scrap metal. And I ask everyone who has piping done or plumbing done, that plumbers give you a credit for at least $15 because there's going to be anywhere from 3 to 4 pounds of copper in most anybody's plumbing work…Try to get credit for the copper pipes they take out of your house. Otherwise tell them to leave it.

Natural gas not clean

Some politician's yakking on the news right now: "Natural gas is cleaner. Only 1 percent of it's used for gasoline in the country." Natural gas is not cleaner. It's called fracking, people. That's how you get natural gas out of the ground nowadays, by putting thousands of gallons of water, wasting water, with all kinds of chemicals — cancer-causing chemicals. They're doing it in Pennsylvania. They want to dump the waste in New Jersey. It's horrible. So many people are getting sick from it and coming out and complaining at town meetings in Pennsylvania and throughout the country.

AMENDMENT 5

Don't give legislature more power over courts

THE ISSUE:
Amendment 5.

OUR OPINION:
Vote no.

The state Legislature would like more power.

We think it has enough.

Amendment 5, titled "State Courts" on the ballot, would give the Legislature a host of new powers over the Florida Supreme Court. Those powers stem from four constitutional revisions:

Under the first, the Legislature would gain the authority to repeal procedural court rules — authority for the passage of which is constitutionally provided to the Florida Supreme Court — by a simple majority. Currently such a repeal requires a two-thirds majority in both houses of the Legislature. A repealed rule, under Amendment 5, could be revised and resubmitted to the Legislature by justices, but if that revised rule is readopted and then repealed once more, the Supreme Court will need prior approval from the Legislature before readopting it.

Confusing, for certain, and unnecessary. We feel this is a power grab by the Legislature, and an attempt by legislators to tell the courts how to do their job.

The second proposed revision in Amendment 5 also relates to court rules. Currently rules adopted by the judicial qualifications commission and by judicial nominating commissions can only be repealed by a majority vote of both houses of the Legislature. Under Amendment 5's revision, that vote need only pass a majority vote of legislators present at the time of the vote.

This would mean that legislators could not effect a "no" vote with an absence, but its downside is fairly obvious: the fewer legislators present, the fewer people making crucial decisions about how the judicial branch is run.

The third proposed revision would alter the way state Supreme Court justices are appointed. As it stands, the governor appoints justices from a list of nominations made by a judicial nominating commission. The Legislature has no say in Supreme Court appointments. If Amendment 5 passes, a governor's choice would be subject to Senate confirmation.

This provision would act to politicize the judicial nomination process, and would give the Legislature power over the executive and judicial branches.

The final proposal in Amendment 5 deals with the investigation and impeachment of state judges. Under current processes, the judicial qualifications commission convenes to investigate alleged misconduct and, if it chooses, prosecute the offense before the Florida Supreme Court. Commission findings and proceedings are confidential until formal charges are filed, after which they are made public. The Speaker of the House of Representatives may request — and must be granted — access to the commission's findings during the process, but only for the purpose of deciding whether or not to proceed with impeachment hearings against the judge.

Under Amendment 5, the Speaker of the House would have access to all judicial qualifications commission findings at every stage of the process irrespective of any pending impeachment considerations. Under the proposal, the Speaker would be required to keep the files confidential. We suspect they might leak from time to time, as politically expedient.

Checks and balances are a crucial mechanism of our governing apparatus, but don't be fooled into thinking Amendment 5 reinforces those — it skews the balance of power in Tallahassee toward the Legislature. We urge you to vote no.

AMENDMENT 6

Argue 6 in courts, not ballots

THE ISSUE:
Amendment 6.

OUR OPINION:
Vote no.

Some things bear repeating; others don't. Amendment 6 is among the latter.

The amendment, "Prohibition on Public Funding of Abortions; Construction of Abortion Rights," is twofold: It firstly prohibits the expenditure of public funds on abortions, except in cases of rape, incest or harm to the mother, and secondly prevents the right of privacy granted by Article I, Section 23 of the state constitution from being invoked in cases of abortion by overturning court rulings which have interpreted the constitutional right covers such cases.

The first provision of the amendment is redundant; federal law already provides for the same prohibitions on funding. There is no need to reaffirm those prohibitions in the Florida Constitution.

The second provision is, once more, a play by the Legislature to usurp power from the courts. The legislative branch is tasked with the creation and passage of law; the judicial branch is tasked with its interpretation. If the Legislature wishes to argue with the rulings of state judges, it should do so in courts, and not on the ballot. Furthermore, irrespective of individual opinions about abortion, we feel the right to privacy is one that should be protected, not diminished.

We urge a "no" vote.

AMENDMENT 8

State funding of religions a slippery slope

THE ISSUE:
Amendment 8.

OUR OPINION:
Vote no.

Under current law, public money cannot be used to fund religious institutions.

Amendment 8 seeks to change that. Under the amendment, no person or group may be denied public funding "on the basis of religious identity or belief."

We urge a "no" vote on the basis of the proposal flying in the face of the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, but we also implore its proponents to consider the ramifications of such a change.

The oft-contested separation of church and state enshrined in American judicial and legislative practices exists for a reason: If you're going to give state or federal funding to one religious institution, you must provide it to all religious institutions. Failure to do so could easily — and in some cases, would justly — be interpreted as discrimination.

Should Amendment 6 pass, it may make its way to the U.S. Supreme Court. We doubt it would pass muster there.

Take care of pets

Charlie and Henry went to the doctor today. They are young boys, brothers actually, only 8 months old. Naturally, they cried all the way there, acting like spoiled, confused kids, but the appointment had to be kept for their good health.

After a long day, they again showed their displeasure on the trip home, vocally complaining every inch of the 10-mile ride.

Charlie, a gorgeous brown tabby, and Honey, a feisty grey and white tabby, are, of course, cats. Rescued at seven weeks, vet-checked, and placed at Pet Supermarket, the babies waited. Then came Ken.

Ken, recently widowed after 57 years of marriage, found his quiet, empty home oftentimes lonely. Considering the suggestion he adopt a cat or two, he visited the pet store. Two tiny fur balls, curled very close together, were soon on their way to a real home, forever.

The kittens receive every luxury and, in return, they provide companionship, affection, and joy to someone in need. Happy endings to what could be, and often are, sad stories start with having pets spayed or neutered. Reduce the population of unwanted, orphaned and abandoned cats and dogs. Give them a chance.

We, as humans, are supposed to be intelligent and responsible. Please demonstrate these traits, call a veterinarian to schedule your pet's appointment, and enjoy your precious four-legged family member.

Support unshaken

I am an old white man with Medicare who strongly supports President Obama, "Obamacare" and House and Senate Democrats. Like most people of my ilk, I was disappointed by the President's limp showing in the debate this past Wednesday evening. But my support is unshaken. As Gov. Romney emphasized during Wednesday's debate, "It's an election about the course of America. What kind of America do you want to have for yourself and for your children?" The choice for the country's course is clear. We have a choice between a Republican-led plutocracy that favors the privileged few and a Democrat-led civilization that is primarily concerned with "We the People." Obama promises to nurture civilized ideals including reason, compassion, economic health for the middle class, environmental stewardship, the rights of women and minorities, education and the advancement of science and technology.

Romney and his surrogates have, directly or indirectly, expressed disdain for these values in recent months. This is particularly true of compassion, which Republicans dismiss as "socialism" and women's rights, which they simply dismiss. They oppose affordable health care, distrust science, oppose spending on science, education, renewable energy and the arts and advocate replacing Obama's international statesmanship with a more belligerent, bullying (and scary) stance. Fortunately, slow but steady economic recovery is already underway without such draconian redirections.

I fully expect the President and Vice President to deliver stellar performances in the forthcoming debates. But if they don't, my vote will not change because "It's an election about the course of America" and the choice is clear.

More questions

I would like to raise some questions that Mr. Ryan for some reason didn't raise in his debate with Mr. Biden.

1. If the intelligence community is to blame for the misinformation after the Benghazi attack, who are these people and what are their names?

2. If Mr. Obama is so pro-Israel, then why didn't he visit Israel in his first term?

3. If Iran's nuclear program is so laughable as Mr. Biden insinuated, then why have sanctions in the first place?

4. If Mr. Obama has a viable energy policy, then why have gas prices doubled in the last three to four years?

5. Mr. Biden says that he supports the Catholic Church's stance on abortion but doesn't believe in inflicting his will upon others but at the same time believes in the individual mandate of Obamacare which forces people to buy insurance whether they want to or not. Isn't this a contradiction?

Scope widens for meningitis cases

NEW YORK — Two more drugs from a specialty pharmacy linked to a meningitis outbreak are now being investigated, U.S. health officials said, as they urged doctors to contact patients who got any kind of injection from the company.

The New England Compounding Center of Framingham, Mass., has been under scrutiny since last month, when a rare fungal form of meningitis was linked to its steroid shots used mostly for back pain.

Monday's step by the Food and Drug Administration followed reports of infections in three people who got different drugs made by the company. One is a possible meningitis illness in a patient who got a spine injection of another type of steroid. The agency also learned of two heart transplant patients who got fungal infections after being given a third company product during surgery.

The current outbreak has sickened 214 people, including 15 who have died, in 15 states.

Zumba sex case names released

KENNEBUNK, Maine — Police on Monday released the first round of names of people they say paid for sex with a Zumba fitness instructor charged with running a prostitution operation out of her studio.

Justice Thomas Warren earlier Monday denied a motion seeking to block disclosure of the names of the people, who are accused of being johns at the studio in Kennebunk, a seaside community.

An attorney for two of the people had filed a complaint asking the names be kept private and criminal charges not be pursued. But the attorney, Stephen Schwartz, said an appeal was unlikely.

Police said Friday more than 150 people are suspected of being prostitution clients of Zumba instructor Alexis Wright.

US mulls Africa strikes

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The White House has put special operations strike forces on standby and moved drones into the skies above Africa, ready to strike militant targets from Libya to Mali — if investigators can find the al-Qaida-linked group responsible for the death of the U.S. ambassador and three other Americans in Libya.

But officials say the administration, with weeks until the presidential election, is weighing whether the short-term payoff of exacting retribution on al-Qaida is worth the risk that such strikes could elevate the group's profile in the region, alienate governments the U.S. needs to fight it in the future and do little to slow the growing terror threat in North Africa.

Details on the administration's position and on its search for a possible target were provided by three current and one former administration official, as well as an analyst who was approached by the White House for help. All four spoke on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to discuss the high-level debates publicly.

The dilemma shows the tension of the White House's need to demonstrate it is responding forcefully to al-Qaida, balanced against its long-term plans to develop relationships and trust with local governments and build a permanent U.S. counterterrorist network in the region.

Vice President Joe Biden pledged in his debate last week with Republican vice presidential nominee Paul Ryan to find those responsible for the Sept. 11 attack on the U.S. Consulate in Benghazi that killed Ambassador Chris Stevens and three others.

"We will find and bring to justice the men who did this," Biden said in response to a question about whether intelligence failures led to lax security around Stevens and the consulate. Referring back to the raid that killed Osama bin Laden last year, Biden said American counterterror policy should be, "if you do harm to America, we will track you to the gates of hell if need be."

9/11 defendants back in court

GUANTANAMO BAY NAVAL BASE, Cuba — Five Guantanamo prisoners charged in the Sept. 11 attacks returned before a military tribunal Monday, forgoing the protests that turned their last appearance into an unruly 13-hour spectacle.

But the apparent cooperation of Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, who has said he masterminded the worst terror attack on U.S. soil, and four codefendants did little to speed up proceedings that have stuck in a legal and political morass for years.

And Mohammed, dressed a white turban and traditional black vest, made clear he still feels a deep disdain for the proceedings, saying "I don't think there is any justice in this court."

Defense lawyers spent hours arguing that their clients shouldn't have to attend the hearing, saying they dredge up bad memories of their harsh treatment in CIA detention. The military judge ruled that the men would not have to attend the hearings at least for the rest of the week.

things that happened to me," said Jim Harrington, who represents Ramzi Binalshibh, accused of helping to provide support to the hijackers who crashed planes into the World Trade Center, Pentagon and a field in Pennsylvania on Sept. 11, 2001.

The five men sat quietly at the defense tables under the watchful eyes of military guards and several 9/11 family members at the U.S. base in Cuba. Mohammed, his beard dyed a rust color with henna, serenely read legal papers. Two others responded politely to the judge when asked.

All seemed to cooperate with their attorneys in a specially designed high-tech courtroom that allows the government to muffle sounds so spectators behind a glass wall cannot hear classified information.

The orderly scene was in stark contrast to their arraignment in May on charges that include terrorism and murder. At that session, one prisoner was briefly restrained for acting out, Binalshibh launched into an incoherent rant, the men generally ignored the judge and refused to use the court translation system, and two stood up to pray at one point.

Harrington told the court that the defendants may want to boycott future court sessions because they don't recognize the U.S. government's authority, or because their transportation from their high-security cells may remind them of the harsh treatment they endured when confined in the CIA's overseas network of secret prisons before they came to Guantanamo in September 2006.

Historic mosque damaged in Syria fight

President Assad orders immediate repairs to 12th-century site

Associated Press

BEIRUT — Syrian President Bashar Assad ordered on Monday immediate repairs to a historic mosque in the city of Aleppo, a move likely aimed at containing Muslim outrage after fierce fighting between rebels and regime forces set parts of the mosque on fire over the weekend.

Government troops had been holed up inside the 12th century Umayyad mosque, a UNESCO World Heritage site, in downtown Aleppo for several months before rebels fighting to topple Assad launched a push to liberate it this week.

Activist Mohammad al-Hassan said the army had been using the mosque as a base because of its strategic location in the center of the old city of Aleppo.

"It's all blackened now," he said of the mosque, speaking by phone from Aleppo

The mosque, known in Syria as the Jami al Kabir, or the Great Mosque, is one of the oldest and largest in Syria, built around a vast courtyard and enclosed in a compound adjacent to Aleppo's medieval citadel.

In the past few weeks, rebels controlled one entrance to the mosque compound while the army controlled the other. It is unclear how exactly the fire and damage occurred amid the intense clashes, but the regime and the rebels are now trading accusations over who is responsible for the fire.

Videos posted by activists online show a large fire and black smoke raging inside the mosque on Saturday, and later, its blackened, pockmarked walls. Debris is strewn on the floors where worshippers once prayed on green and gold carpeting.

The videos are consistent with AP's own reporting on the incident.

"Assad's thugs set the mosque on fire as a punishment for being defeated by the Free Syrian Army," the caption on one video read, referring to the rebels fighting to topple Assad. The government on Monday said it pushed back the rebels from the mosque after the weekend fighting, though activists are giving conflicting reports on who controls it.

In another video, a rebel inside the mosque holds up a torn copy of the Muslim holy book, or Quran, saying: "These are our Qurans, this is our religion, our history."

Rebels and activists had complained earlier that soldiers and pro-government militiamen wrote offensive graffiti on the mosque walls and drank alcohol — banned by Islam — while inside.

BIRMINGHAM, England — A teenage Pakistani activist shot in the head by the Taliban arrived in Britain on Monday to receive specialized medical care and protection from follow-up attacks threatened by the militants. Officials said she is stable and has a chance at "a good recovery."

The attack on 14-year-old Malala Yousufzai as she was returning home from school in Pakistan's northwest a week ago has horrified people across the South Asian country and abroad. It has also sparked hope that the Pakistani government would respond by intensifying its fight against the Taliban and their allies.

Israel prepares for early election

JERUSALEM — Israel officially opened its election season on Monday as parliament dissolved itself and scheduled a vote for January, plunging the country into a vicious, three-month political campaign.

Brazil experiences airport chaos

SAO PAULO — More than 25,000 passengers in Brazil saw flights delayed or cancelled after a damaged cargo jet blocked the lone runway at one of the country's busiest airports for two days, officials said Monday.

Separately, the check-in system at Tam airlines, Brazil's biggest, was down for three hours early Monday at all locations around the world where the company operates, adding to the air transport chaos in Latin America's biggest nation. Critics say improving the nation's woeful airports is one of its biggest challenges before it hosts the 2014 World Cup.

Azul Airlines, which operates about 85 percent of the flights at the Campinas airport north of Sao Paulo, said late Monday afternoon that its flights would resume normal operations by early evening after the damaged cargo jet was removed from the airport's only runway.

Lecanto boys claim district crown

Panthers advance to regional meet; Citrus just misses

SILVER SPRINGS SHORES — The Lecanto Panthers boys golf team was crowned champion out of a field of 12 teams that competed at the District 2A-5 tournament Monday afternoon at The Country Club at Silver Springs Shores. The Panthers shot a combined 317 on the par-72 course, and the 18-hole victory gives the team a berth in the regional tournament next week in Ocala.

Drew Cooke
Lecanto senior shot 74.

A top-two finish in the region would give Lecanto the opportunity to qualify for the state tournament.

Ocala Forest took second place with a 324 and Ocala Vanguard got third place (335), earning both teams spots in the regionals.

"We came into this hoping we would be one of the three teams to advance," said Lecanto head coach Dave Soluri. "We got three scores under 80, and that's something that didn't happen at all this year. I knew something under 320 would win this tournament. We had great parent support, which helps the kids, and we now have to make arrangements for next week."

Dylan Nelson
led Citrus with 81 on Monday.

Senior Drew Cooke had three birdies, as he fired a 74 to lead the Panthers; the score was the second-best individual score in the tournament. Patrick Colletti shot a 78 followed by Micah Sugioka (79) and Zach Groff (86).

OCALA — Citrus freshman Carmin Kersh stepped up in a major way at the District 2A-5 girls golf tournament Monday.

Kersh fired an 89 at Ocala's Pine Oaks Golf Club to earn her way to the Region 2A-2 tournament, as she was one of the top three finishers whose teams didn't advance on to the next round.

"I wasn't expecting it," Kersh said. "It's nice."

Kersh's putting was stellar, as she was Citrus County's lone female golfer to advance to next week's Region 2A-2 meet at Ocala Golf Club.

"She's been improving all year," Hurricanes coach Dave Hamilton said. "She's capable of this score and better. She's worked hard and I am very proud of our entire team."

Led by Kersh, the Hurricanes finished seventh overall with a team score of 414.

Buccaneers offense thriving on deep passing game

Freeman threw for season-high 328 yards

TAMPA — Josh Freeman resists any temptation to gloat when he talks about the sudden emergence of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers offense, insisting he doesn't pay attention to critics.

The fourth-year pro has rebounded from one of the worst performances of his career to jumpstart a sputtering attack with an aggressive downfield passing game that not only helped the Bucs (2-3) stop a three-game skid with a rout of Kansas City but also has turned Vincent Jackson and Mike Williams into one of the NFL's most productive receiving tandems.

Jackson is averaging 18.5 yards per catch on a team-leading 20 receptions with four touchdowns. Williams is averaging a league-best 22.1 yards per catch on 15 receptions and has scored three TDs.

> Josh Freeman
> Tampa Bay quarterback said of the critics about the Buccaneers' passing attack.

"Nothing anybody says outside of our building has any effect on us," Freeman said. "People will say they want to throw the ball deep or they want to run the ball, but we know who we are and you just have to continue to work, continue to prepare like we've been preparing, then go out on Sundays and just play. We've got the talent, we've got the pieces, we just have to go out and play."

Freeman threw for a season-high 328 yards and three TDs in Sunday's 38-10 victory over the struggling Chiefs, who paid dearly for trying to single-cover Williams and Jackson, who caught touchdown passes of 19 and 17 yards. Williams scored on 62-yard reception, making an acrobatic catch and continuing up the sideline for Tampa Bay's first TD.

"He makes those catches. If you have 1-on-1 with a DB, you just give him a high ball, give him a chance," Freeman said of Williams, a third-year pro who has benefited from the offseason acquisition of Jackson, who played the past seven seasons with the San Diego Chargers.

"I can't say I've ever seen or played with a guy with the ball skills like Mike,"

Ellis wins Mod Mini 50

Catarelli sews up title

Special to the Chronicle

James Ellis (98) makes the winning pass on Kevin Harrod (06) in the Modified Mini Stock feature Saturday night at the Citrus County Speedway in Inverness.

Eighteen Modified Mini Stocks started off the night of hot racing action with time trial qualifying. After the fan determined 5-row invert, Kevin Harrod found himself on the pole position alongside LeRoy Moore.

Harrod jumped out to the early lead, surviving three early-race cautions. The night's first serious incident came at lap 21 as contact between two drivers sent their cars sliding to avoid the incident. When the dust settled the cars of Moore and Chris Allen received the worst end of the incident, ending their nights on the hook.

Griffin would be sent to the rear for the second time of the night for the restart. Foley would again lead on the restart, and pull out to nearly a half a lap lead over the rest of the field in short order. Behind him Ellis and Storer would get by Gerstner for third and fourth respectively. Lap 43 saw the night's next serious incident. Griffin and Storer made contact in turn 4 while battling for position. Storer expressed his displeasure with the contact on the front stretch by ramming into the side of Griffin's car at the flag stand.

Storer bounced off the side of Griffin's racer, and made heavy contact with the turn 1 wall, ending the fast qualifier's march to the front. Griffin was sent to the rear for the third time in the race.

Eventually, Ellis took an exciting victory with Griffin coming home in second and Harrod in third.

Sixteen Super Late Models pulled onto the track for what was sure to be and action packed 35-lap feature. Drew Brannon would take the pole position with Dale Sanders just to his outside. At the drop of the green the action was non stop, the top two drivers raced side by side for the first three laps before Sanders muscled his way by on the high side to go to the lead.

Brannon would go on to take his second feature win of the 2012 season. Sanders came home a strong second place, with Grossenbacher in third.

Eight Pro Figure 8's took the green in what was their final points race of the 2012 season. Going into the night, Joey Catarelli and Mason Love started the feature event in a absolute tie for the championship lead. This meant that which ever driver finished ahead of the other, was your 2012 champion. Catarelli had the advantage of starting on the pole position, with Love having to race his way from the seventh starting position. The race would go green until the first caution near the halfway mark. Catarelli enjoyed a comfortable lead before the caution, but Love had raced his way behind him, and now was on his bumper for the restart.

This was it, driver vs. driver for the championship.

Catarelli was in this very same position last year, but a flat tire in that race ended his shot at the championship, losing the championship to Wayne Calkins. On the restart, Love hung just off the bumper of Catarelli, looking for a clean way by the leader.

Catarelli was able to get through cleanly, while Love was slightly held up. That was all Catarelli needed, and he took the victory and the 2012 Pro figure 8 championship.

In other racing action young Joey Bifaro would survive a late race battle with John Makula and Curtis Flanagan to take his first-ever Street Stock feature win. Point leader Bubba Martone led early, but transmission problems ended his night and put a dent in his point lead. Flanagan eventually slipped by Makula for second coming to the checkered flag.

Jeremy Sharrone took his 11th feature win of 2012 in the Mini Stock division, Tim Scalise came home second, and Kevin Stone in third. Shawn Bailey won the Hornet division race, and Doug Schmidt claimed the South East Champ Kart Series.

This Saturday night could be the best night of the year at the speedway, action one would not want to miss.

The race schedule will be headlined by the TBARA winged outlaw sprint cars, a 75-lap Open Wheel Modified Race, Sportsman, Street Stock, Pure Stock, Mini Stock, Figure 8's, and the Pro Challenge cars will all be in action.

Make sure to be in the stand for the 5:30 p.m. start so you don't miss any of the racing action.

Soft schedule hurts Seminoles

No. 12 FSU's weak slate weighs down BCS standing

Florida State running back James Wilder Jr., left, celebrates with quarterback E.J. Manuel after Wilder scored a 12-yard touchdown in the fourth quarter Saturday against Boston College.

TALLAHASSEE — Florida State appears to be paying the price for a soft schedule.

The 12th-ranked Seminoles (6-1, 3-1 Atlantic Coast Conference) find themselves at No. 14 in the first Bowl Championship Series ratings that determine who plays for the national title.

And the computer portion used in the rankings formula was not good for the Seminoles, who have just one win over a team with a winning record as they prepare for Saturday's visit to instrastate rival Miami (4-3, 3-1).

Strength of schedule is a significant factor in the computer rankings," BCS executive director Bill Hancock said Monday.

"It's early," Hancock noted. "There's much more football to be played."

The highest and lowest computer rankings are dropped out and the other four averaged. Anderson & Hester; Richard Billingsley, Colley Matrix, Kenneth Massey, Jeff Sagarin and Peter Wolfe provide the computer scoring.

Florida State's opponents are a combined 19-24 this season and the Seminoles 49-37 victory over 14th-ranked Clemson last month is their only win this season over a team with a winning record. Two of Florida State's wins are over lower-division teams from the Football Championship Subdivision and another over Boston College, whose lone win was over lower-division Maine.

"We've got to play our schedule and everybody play their schedule and we'll see where we're at the end," Florida State coach Jimbo Fisher said Monday. "That's what you've got to do."

Florida State is among the nation's leaders in offense and defense, but some of its gaudy numbers are a result of opponents like lower-division Savannah State and Murray State along with an unusually weak Boston College team, which is still searching for a win over a FBS team.

Florida State is ranked 12th by AP, 10th in the coaches poll and eighth in the Harris Interactive Poll, but dropped dramatically in the computer rankings when strength of schedule was factored in.

"It scares me where our world is going sometimes that we're taking the human element out of some things," Fisher said. "There's got to be a human element in some things."

Florida State quarterback EJ Manuel, who was named the ACC's offensive back of the week for the second time this season after throwing for a career-best 439 yards and four touchdowns in Saturday's 51-7 romp past Boston College, isn't worried about where the Seminoles sit in the current BCS rankings.

Sports BRIEFS

Ravens Lewis, Webb lost for year

OWINGS MILLS, Md. — Ravens linebacker Ray Lewis will miss the remainder of the season with an arm injury, an enormous blow to an already depleted defense that has uncharacteristically struggled this year.

Lewis tore his right triceps during Sunday's 31-29 victory over Dallas. The 37-year-old Lewis leads Baltimore in tackles and is the voice of experience in the huddle.

Over a spectacular 17-year career, Lewis has been invited to 13 Pro Bowls, was named Super Bowl MVP and is a two-time NFL defensive player of the year. He turns 38 in May, so it's possible that Sunday's game was his last.

Baltimore also lost cornerback Lardarius Webb for the year after he tore the ACL in his left knee Sunday.

Casspi-led Cavs beat Magic 114-111

CINCINNATI — Omri Casspi scored seven of his 12 points in overtime as the Cleveland Cavaliers pulled out a 114-111 preseason win over the Orlando Magic on Monday night.

Kyrie Irving, last season's Rookie of the Year, snapped out of his preseason shooting slump with 22 points for the Cavaliers (3-2), who came from behind after blowing a 14-point third-quarter lead.

Glen Davis scored 27 points to lead Orlando (0-3).

Irving shot just .239 (11 of 46) from the field in Cleveland's first four preseason games, but he scored nine straight to spark a 21-6 run that put the Cavaliers ahead 31-19 with 29.6 seconds left in the first half. He finished the first quarter with 11 points and the first half with 18, two more than his previous preseason single-game high of 16.

Citrus had a solid outing and were competitive in the tournament, as it finished in a three-way tie for fourth with Springstead and Zephyrhills (336), which was only a single stroke behind third-place Vanguard.

Dylan Nelson had a birdie on the 12th hole, and helped the 'Canes with an 81, which was only one stroke behind third place among individuals. The top three individuals that are not on an advancing team move on.

Riley Reed stepped up big for Citrus and earned an 83, followed by Andrew Judd and Dalton Homan, who each shot 86 on the day to round out the 'Canes' scoring.

"We'll remember how this feels, and it will give more motivation to our younger guys," said Citrus head coach Larry Bishop. "Hats off to Lecanto and coach Soluri, and we'll be pulling for them to advance in regionals."

Springstead's Ryan Nicol shot a 73 and earned low-medalist honors for the tournament. Caleb Conver of Lake Weir came in second with a 79.

There was a dramatic playoff to decide who got third, and who would advance to regionals.

Cory Bahr (Zephyrhills), Stephan Pollock (Zephyrhills) and Cody Baker of Lake Minneola were tied at 80 at the end of the match. Bahr was eliminated in the first playoff hole, and Pollock would go on to defeat Baker on the second playoff hole to advance.

Lecanto, the area's other entry in the tournament, finished fifth overall with a 404 and missed out another trip to the regional level, but closed the season on a positive note.

"We had a better performance than we did last Friday," Lecanto coach Doug Warren said.

Jennifer Hafner, a senior, led the way for the Panthers with a 95 in the highly-competitive tournament.

Ocala Forest (340), Spring Hill Springstead (367) and Lake Minneola (381) were the top three overall teams at the event.

Brooksville Central's Stephanie Rodney and Lake Minneola's Katie Holt tied for medalist honors after firing rounds of 73.

"There were some good scores here," Warren said.

Giants even series at 1

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Marco Scutaro answered Matt Holliday's hard takeout with a big hit of his own to help the San Francisco Giants end their home slide.

Scutaro hit a two-run single in San Francisco's four-run fourth inning to help the Giants get their first home win this postseason, 7-1 over the St. Louis Cardinals on Monday night that tied the NL championship series at one game apiece.

The game got off to a testy start when Holliday barreled into Scutaro at second base to break up a potential double play in the first inning. The play riled up a crowd that had seen three straight losses by the Giants so far this postseason.

There was plenty to cheer all night for the Giants. Ryan Vogelsong pitched seven strong innings, Angel Pagan hit a leadoff homer to give San Francisco its first home lead this postseason, and Scutaro broke the game open with his single off Chris Carpenter.

Associated Press

San Francisco Giants batter Ryan Theriot hits a two-run double Monday during the eighth inning of Game 2 of the National League championship series against the St. Louis Cardinals in San Francisco. The Giants won 7-1.

Making Scutaro's hit even sweeter for the Giants was the fact that Holliday misplayed the ball in left field, allowing a third run to score on the error.

Scutaro left after five innings because of an injured left hip, and was going for X-rays.

Packers rout Texans 42-24

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Aaron Rodgers and the Green Bay Packers finally put it all together.

The reigning MVP set a career high and tied a franchise record with six touchdown passes and the Packers played their best game of their so far inconsistent season, beating previously unbeaten Houston 42-24 late Sunday night.

Jordy Nelson caught three touchdown passes and James Jones had two, including a beautiful, diving one-hander in the fourth quarter for the Packers (3-3). Tom Crabtree had the other, a 48-yarder that Rodgers threw just before taking a hit from Texans' outside linebacker Brooks Reed.

Rodgers completed 24 of 37 passes for 338 yards. He tied Matt Flynn's game record for TD passes, set in last year's regular-season finale against Detroit with Rodgers resting on the sideline in advance of the playoffs.

Arian Foster scored two touchdowns, but ran for only 29 yards for the Texans (5-1).

The loss leaves the Atlanta Falcons (6-0) as the only unbeaten team in the NFL.

Houston had the league's third-ranked defense and badly missed star linebacker Brian Cushing, who was placed on injured reserve after tearing a knee ligament in last week's 23-17 win over the New York Jets.

Still, the Texans had no reason not to feel confident.

Houston is off to its best start in franchise history, while Rodgers and the Packers had been strangely erratic. But the Texans looked like the team out of sorts from the start on Sunday night.

Freeman added. "It doesn't really matter where you put it, he's going to find a way to make a play on it."

Freeman averaged 12.62 yards per pass attempt against the Chiefs, the third highest in franchise history, and spread 15 completions among six receivers who averaged a collective 21.9 yards per catch.

Two weeks after becoming first pair of Tampa Bay players with 100-yard receiving days in the same game in 20 years, Williams finished with four catches for 113 yards and Jackson had four receptions for 66 yards.

Reserve Tiquan Underwood had a 62-yard reception and running back Doug Martin turned a short pass into a 42-yard gain to boost Freeman's numbers, too.

"That's the way we play. ... We are going to take our shots each and every week," Jackson said. "You know if we get a 1-on-1 matchup we are going to be aggressive. We always talk about being aggressive toward the ball. We may not make every play, but we're going to fight for it and we'll win our share of battles out there."

Freeman has elevated his play since throwing for just 110 yards in a six-point loss to the Dallas Cowboys last month.

He overcame a slow start in a two-point loss to Washington the following week with second-half completions of 65 yards to Williams and 54 yards to Jackson, grabbing the attention of coach Greg Schiano and offensive coordinator Mike Sullivan.

The Bucs used part of their bye week to review film and pore over the playbook to determine what Freeman does best.

Schiano still wants to build a tough, physical team that thrives on running the ball, the first-year coach concedes one thing his 6-foot-6, 245-pound quarterback is comfortable doing is throwing deep passes.

Especially with Williams making play after play. The 62-yard TD reception on Sunday was the longest of his career, and he's the first Tampa Bay receiver with consecutive 100-yard games since Antonio Bryant in 2008.

"He's definitely playing at a high level. He's always had those ball skills, even when he was back at Syracuse and we used to play him when I was at Rutgers. That is a gift," Schiano said.

"But his focus, his concentration, his commitment to working to be the best he can be is really good right now," the coach added. "I just want it to continue because I think he can be a force for us moving forward."

so so proud of them and what they did."

Crystal River junior Maycee Mullarkey led her team with a 98 on the 18-hole course.

"This was my first district meet and I am so proud of our team and the fact that we (are going) to regionals makes me very happy," Mullarkey said. "I have not been playing that long, so I am very glad to see how far we have gotten."

"The girls have practiced this past week every day and it paid off because they had the desire to win," Sebold said.

Lady Pirate junior Marisa Wilder was second for Crystal River with a 103 showed great poise.

'This is the third district meet that I have competed in and this by far has been my best," Wilder said. "The greens were very rough and I had to keep my head down and do my best. We owe it all to coach Sebold who got us here and we could not be more proud."

"I have been playing golf just three months and since I have started, I just cannot get enough. I am hooked. I would like to play every day," said junior Bekah Hoffman, who shot a 115. "We worked hard all week and the pressure today made us do our best."

Victoria Cunningham was third for Crystal River with a score of 111.

team score of 311 in the tournament to win by a resounding 36 strokes.

After leading last week's county championship up until the back nine, Allen was relieved to finally pop out and shoot his potential when it matters the most.

"Today I just felt more comfortable with everything," Allen said. "I love this course. I was hitting my irons solid. I was making putts. I had a couple mis-putts (that were) just misreads but I came back from it. I was on my game today."

Allen's score placed him second in the meet overall (excluding finishers who qualify individually to regionals) followed by the Kidd brothers who tied for third.

Crystal River head coach Jere DeFoor couldn't have been happier with the meet's results, especially how Allen performed.

"Matt Allen had a great round," DeFoor said. "Second place overall, great for a sophomore. Michael and Kyle both followed up (behind him). They had a really great round also."

Second, third and fourth place in the tournament are to be decided today at The Dunes at 4 p.m. as Dunnellon, Hernando and Nature Coast all shot identical team-scores of 347.

The results of today's sudden death playoff (which involves three groups of five players from each team; lowest combined score on one hole wins) decides the final two teams eligible to compete with Crystal River at the Region 1A-3 tournament on Oct. 23.

The playoff will also determine the individual standings since the three lowest scoring individuals not on an advancing team also move on to the regional level.

Seven Rivers Christian School finished eighth as a team in the meet with a score of 525.

Led by senior Adam Gage's 85, the Warriors also got scoring rounds from Zach Daniel (114), London MaGuffey (132) and Chris Russ (184).

Pasco placed fifth with 357 points followed by South Sumter (381) and host Weeki Wachee (393). Bishop McLaughlin did not have enough golfers to earn a team score.

Belleview volleyball outlasts SRCS in five games

LECANTO — As tuneups for the upcoming district tournaments go, this one helped all involved.

Seven Rivers Christian had visiting Belleview on the ropes Monday, up 2-1 in sets and ahead in the fourth set, 14-7. But from that point on, the Rattlers gained — and kept — control, outscoring Seven Rivers 23-5 in the rest of the fourth, then scoring 10 consecutive points in the decisive 15-point tiebreaking fifth set to win 25-21, 19-25, 22-25, 25-19, 15-7.

"That's the third time we've played them this season," said Belleview coach Gary Greer, his team now 15-9 overall and 3-0 against the Warriors. "They've definitely picked up their game. They were outhustling us most of the match, we just had a bit more at the end.

"I think in the end we had a little more gas in the tank."

Playing a team with Seven Rivers' power, and being able to battle back from a seven-point fourth-set deficit, had to be helpful to the Rattlers district preparation. But it also provided a boost for the Warriors, even in defeat. Both of Seven Rivers' previous losses to Belleview came in straight sets.

"Once they started covering and blocking our hitters, we had trouble," said Seven Rivers' coach Wanda Grey, her team now 14-11 overall.

The Rattlers' front-row defense definitely improved in the latter stages of the match, essentially nullifying the Warriors' strong attack. Mistakes also mounted for Seven Rivers, which scored the first two points of the fifth set, then surrendered 10 in a row to Belleview, nine of them with Savannah Phillips serving. Four of the 10 points were on kill errors by the Warriors and two others were aces by Phillips.

That proved too big a margin for Seven Rivers to overcome, which started the match slowly with a first-set loss but built momentum with wins in the next two. The Warriors never led after the early stages of the first set, but they led the whole way in the second and, after the third set was knotted at 20-all, got two pivotal kills from Andrea Zachar and another from Alexis Zachar to earn a three-point win.

Seven Rivers fourth-set meltdown could be attributed to its inability to adjust to Belleview's improved defense. Middle blocker Mikaylah Gillespie had five blocks for the Rattlers in the match, most in the last two sets, to go with six kills, while outside hitter Kaitlyn Bryant collected a team-high 16 kills. Libero Lauren Bitter paced the defense with 32 digs.

Seven Rivers got 10 kills, 10 assists to kills, two aces and seven digs from Andrea Zachar and 14 kills from Alexis Zachar. Alyssa Gage totaled six kills, 15 digs and 17 assists, with Daniette St. Martin contributing four kills and 15 digs and Kim Iwaniec getting 17 digs.

The Warriors open their 2A-3 tournament at 6 p.m. Tuesday at Cornerstone.

A Broadway mystery

Associated Press

Ensemble members perform during a dress rehearsal for the musical "Rebecca" at Vienna's Raimund Theatre. The play's Broadway production in New York collapsed this week, launching an FBI fraud investigation.

Talk of the town: Show collapses; backer accused of fraud

Associated Press

CENTRAL ISLIP, N.Y. — Mark Hotton appeared on the high-stakes Broadway theater scene out of nowhere this year, offering to come to the financial rescue of a fledgling Broadway adaptation of the psychological thriller "Rebecca."

Although the musical's producers had never heard of Hotton, he successfully sold himself as a globe-trotting moneyman with connections to a wealthy Australian named Paul Abrams. That was before Hotton raised suspicions by claiming that Abrams had suddenly dropped dead.

Federal prosecutors charged Hotton on Monday with concocting a tale of phantom investors and an untimely death as imaginative as the classic Alfred Hitchcock film about a man haunted by the memory of his dead first wife.

Hotton, 46, also was charged in two other swindles — one targeting a Connecticut-based real estate company and another that investigators say involved his wife and sister on Long Island.

A judge in federal court in Long Island ordered Hotton held without bail on Monday after prosecutors argued he was a flight risk.

In court papers, the government accused Hotton of creating a web of shell companies they likened to a Ponzi scheme that victimized people across the country to the tune of $15 million.

Hotton, a former stockbroker who lost his license last year, managed to "lull some investors into a temporary sense of security by allowing them to realize small returns on investments, while the remainder funded the Hottons' lifestyle, which included pleasure boats registered to others and waterfront property," the papers say.

He was to appear at another proceeding later in the week to face other charges he "perpetrated stranger-than-fiction frauds both on and off Broadway," Manhattan U.S. Attorney Preet Bharara said in a statement.

In the "Rebecca" case, he "faked lives, faked companies and even staged a fake death," the prosecutor said.

Hotton's attorney declined to comment.

The planned $12 million production of the 1938 novel by Daphne du Maurier collapsed earlier this month amid questions about its financial backing.

Lead producer Ben Sprecher "is extremely gratified that Mr. Hotton has been taken into custody," said his attorney, Ronald Russo, adding that Sprecher has "cooperated completely with the investigation."

"Mr. Hotton's fraudulent conduct did enormous damage to Broadway and to 'Rebecca,'" Russo said. "Mr. Sprecher is totally committed to bringing 'Rebecca' to New York."

According to a criminal complaint, a "third party" suggested this year that the producers contact Hotton to see if he could help them with a $4 million shortfall for the musical's budget. Even though they "had never met Hotton or heard of him," they started an email correspondence that convinced them he had secured the money from four overseas investors, including Paul Abrams, the complaint says.

The producers agreed to pay Hotton $15,000 in fees and commissions from March to June, the complaint says. He was also paid an additional $18,000 "advance" against his 8 percent commission, it says.

In the separate Long Island case, federal prosecutors in Brooklyn accused Hotton and his wife of cheating business clients out of $3.7 million.

Jamaica honors late Peter Tosh

Associated Press

KINGSTON, Jamaica — Twenty-five years after his murder, Jamaica's government on Monday honored the contributions of firebrand reggae musician and songwriter Peter Tosh, one of the Caribbean island's musical giants.

Tosh's daughter Niambe, an educator from Boston, Massachusetts, received the posthumous "order of merit" — the country's third highest honor — on behalf of her late father during an annual national awards ceremony on the lawns of King's House, the residence of Jamaica's governor general.

Tosh was a founding member of the Wailers, forming the three-man core of the group with Bob Marley and Bunny "Wailer" Livingston. Hard-hitting solo albums like "Equal Rights" and his work with the Wailers helped make homegrown reggae music known internationally. He was cut down at age 42 in 1987, murdered by robbers in his Jamaican home.

Jamaican reggae singer Peter Tosh is shown in 1979. For his musical contributions, Tosh's daughter, Niambe, on Monday received the posthumous "Order of Merit" for her father, during the island's annual national heroes ceremony. Tosh, a founding member of the reggae band The Wailers along Bob Marley and Bunny Wailer, was killed in 1987 at age 42 by robbers who broke into his Jamaican home.

The always outspoken, defiant Tosh was known for forcefully denouncing apartheid, government corruption and calling for the legalization of marijuana. Musical colleagues and fans say the lanky, baritone singer and guitarist was a mesmerizing performer with a charismatic, larger-than-life personality.

Tosh is perhaps reggae's most controversial figure. During the government-organized One Love Peace Concert of 1978, Tosh publicly accused Jamaica's political leaders and the middle class of backing police brutality and politically charged gang warfare amid a legendary 20-minute diatribe. The Jamaican media severely criticized Tosh for the speech, delivered to an audience that included 200 foreign journalists and the prime minister.

For his uncompromising views and his insistence on openly smoking marijuana, the Rastafarian musician was severely beaten by police on several occasions, sustaining 32 stitches in his head, a broken rib, a fractured arm, and a punctured spleen during these altercations, according to former manager Herbie Miller.

Today's HOROSCOPE

Your Birthday: Far more opportunities than usual are likely to come your way in the year ahead. Put everything to good use, and don't make the mistake of taking anything for granted — waves of good fortune don't last forever.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Instead of assessing things from a realistic, practical perspective, you'll be inclined to see things as you would like them to be. That spells trouble.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — For some strange reason, you could feel obligated toward someone to whom you owe nothing. Although this will be readily apparent to onlookers, you'll be hard to convince.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — The results aren't likely to be any good if you join forces with someone who treats lightly an issue that you take seriously. Be more selective of your allies.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — It's not that you'll be plagued with a lack of imagination — it's more likely that your schemes will count for little because you might be too lazy to translate your ideas into action.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — You might be tempted to get involved with someone whom your better judgment tells you to avoid. If you ignore that wise voice within you, you'll regret it later.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) — The only way you can be successful is to personally manage all your endeavors to their conclusions. The things you don't supervise could quickly run amok.

Aries (March 21-April 19) — This might not be the best day to start a program that requires tremendous self-discipline, such as a diet or an exercise regimen. It isn't likely you'll have the necessary staying power.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) — If you need to purchase something expensive, it would be a good idea to bring along an adviser who is truly value-conscious. Chances are, you won't recognize a bum deal.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) — The best way to be truly effective is to understate things. Being ostentatious or displaying a gaudy taste could severely and permanently damage your image.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) — Instead of striving to be realistic as per usual, you could feel that the world owes you a living. Because life disagrees with you, unfortunately, disappointment is likely.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) — It's OK to get involved in a pleasurable pursuit, just be sure you can afford it. Plus make sure your cohorts are willing to pay their fair share.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — It's never a good time to take important things for granted, especially where your work or career is concerned. If you get too complacent, it could quickly lead to your downfall.

Crisis control

Dominant photo: A scientist examines a slide containing meningitis-causing fungus Exserohilum rostratum at the Mycotic lab Oct. 12 at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta. The staff and technicians have been working around the clock to confirm cases and inform the public regarding the multi-state meningitis outbreak that has resulted in 15 deaths. The fungal outbreak is believed to have started at New England Compounding Center where a steroid injection shipment was contaminated with the fungus.

At Centers for Disease Control, scientists fight to halt a deadly outbreak

Associated Press

— ATLANTA

Scattered across the carefully landscaped main campus of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention are the staff on the front lines fighting a rare outbreak of fungal meningitis: A scientist in a white lab coat peers through a microscope at fungi on a glass slide. In another room, another researcher uses what looks like a long, pointed eye dropper to suck up DNA samples that will be tested for the suspect fungus.

Not far away in another building is the emergency operations center, which is essentially the war room. There's a low hum of voices as employees work the phones, talking to health officials, doctors and patients who received potentially contaminated pain injections believed to be at the root of the outbreak. Workers sit at rows of computers, gathering data, advising doctors and reaching out to thousands of people who may have been exposed. Overall, dozens of people are working day and night to bring the outbreak under control. More than 200 people in 14 states have been sickened, including 15 who have died.

There is a sense of urgency — people are dying, and lives could be saved if those who are sickened get treated. But it's not a race against a fast-spreading illness like avian flu — or even the fictional virus the CDC fails to unravel in the TV series "The Walking Dead." Unlike those outbreaks, this strain of meningitis isn't contagious and doesn't spread between people. It is likely isolated to the contaminated steroid, produced by the New England Compounding Center in Framingham, Mass.

"This is a very unusual infection," said Dr. John Jernigan, a CDC medical epidemiologist who is leading the clinical investigation team for the outbreak response. "So, treatment recommendations, diagnostic recommendations are all going to be new, and we're learning as we go on this one."

Meningitis, an inflammation of the membranes surrounding the brain and spinal cord, is not uncommon. But it is usually caused by bacteria, and it is very unusual to see it in patients with normal immune systems, Jernigan said. This strain is caused by a fungus that is common in dirt and grasses — people routinely come into contact with it without getting sick — but it has never before been identified as the cause of meningitis.

CANCER & BLOOD DISEASE

Treatment in elderly patients

I've known Mrs. Smith for a long time. She has been my patient for 10 years. She came to see me initially in 2002 and had anemia. She had a bone marrow biopsy, which\ showed Myelodysplastic syndrome (MDS). She was 84 years old at that time.

This usually affects senior citizens. Normally, the bone marrow makes blood stem cells (immature cells) that become mature blood cells over time. In Myelodysplastic syndromes, the blood stem cells do not mature into healthy red blood cells, white blood cells, or platelets. The immature blood cells, called blasts, do not function normally and either die in the bone marrow or soon after they enter the blood. This leaves less room for healthy white blood cells, red blood cells and platelets to form in the bone marrow. When there are fewer blood cells, infection, anemia, or easy bleeding may occur.

After few years, her anemia worsened significantly and she needed to be started on erythropoietin or Procrit injections. It is a natural substance secreted by the kidneys. It stimulates bone marrow to make more RBCs (red blood cells). In my patient with MDS, bone marrow does not produce RBCs well and so Procrit helps. It cannot be given orally but it needs to be given as injection.

Initially, she responded well to Procrit and that lasted for many years. Later on, both my patient and I realized that she needs more and more Procrit and she still started needing blood transfusions.

Now, she is 94 and has transfusion-dependent anemia. She was also feeling increasingly tired. She still is active and able to take care of herself but is fatigued. Her quality of life deteriorated due to worsening anemia.

I had a long discussion with the patient and her family. The options were status quo vs. trying a mild chemotherapy drug. She is now 94 and so obviously, there is hesitation for chemotherapy at her age. This is mild treatment, which is well tolerated and usually does not

Actinic keratoses – red spots on the face

Dr. Denis Grillo
EAR, NOSE & THROAT

Actinic keratoses are growths that appear on the head and neck area, as well as other parts of the body. They are characterized by exposure to the sun and damage to the skin, a common finding here in Florida. Most common sites are the forehead, scalp, and ears.

When actinic keratoses first appear, they look like patches of tiny red blood vessels that are visible through the top layers of the skin. They have a tendency to grow redder and more raw in the summer when exposed to the sun and the growth slows and color fades in the wintertime when there is less sun exposure.

The skin develops a texture that is similar to sandpaper, rough and scaly. Actinic keratoses (AKs) can vary in size from less than .25 inch to larger than 1 inch across. They will get bigger with time and they will become slightly more raised and rough with time as well. The edges of these lesions are not well defined, in other words ir-

LIFE 'N' STYLE

I love this time of year! I know we don't have autumn leaves spilling reds and oranges over sidewalks and skittering onto roadways. I know we don't have shimmering trees of gold reflecting afternoon sunlight. But we have our own fall colors. It's butterfly season!

Butterflies are my stress relievers. I treasure the thousands of exquisite butterflies gracing our area in fall. Their wings are like many-colored jewels flitting among the flowers and hedges. They meander on the soft warm breeze, akin to miniature ballerinas. If I sit very still, one or two of these beauties will alight weightlessly on my arm, slowly fanning intricately patterned wings. Nothing else gives me such serenity. I force myself to stop my "business" and sit — just sit — and take in the scenery. At first I struggle to calm myself, my mind full of anxieties. But with time and focus, I can release the burdens of the day. I give my mind permission to enjoy the flitting and flurry of painted wings, my worries washing away as the butterflies

Bigger shoes can lead to bigger problems

Many times I am asked for advice on purchasing comfortable shoes. I am asked by people who have a difficult time finding shoes, as I am a podiatrist and treat people with foot issues for the most part.

Bunions, hammertoes, corns, calluses, arthritic bumps, bony prominences, loss of padding and swelling present problems for a number of people with these issues when they try to find comfortable shoes off the shelf. I tell people that there is no easy answer for off-the-shelf shoes when they ask. Finding a comfortable shoe for a person with a foot issue off the shelf is difficult and sometimes simply unrealistic. Comfort and orthopedic-style shoes are available, but are difficult to find sometimes and can be quite expensive. The lowest price one can expect to pay for a comfort or orthopedic shoe is about $120. Athletic shoes are more forgiving, but often people do not like their appearance. I do not recommend ordering shoes from a catalogue or online for the first purchase. Ordering a duplicate model of an existing, well-fitting shoe to save money from a catalogue or online is fine in my opinion.

SAS shoes are the closest to off-the-shelf orthopedic shoes, but only the men's Time Out or women's Free Time shoe families give foot deformities extra room for relief. Women have the advantage of being able to wear men's versions to gain even more space. I can tell if a woman is wearing a men's shoe, but I look at feet five days a week, and I believe most people would not know if a women was wearing a men's SAS shoe. SAS are expensive, but are well made and made in the USA. PW Minor and Soft Spot are other shoemakers that make comfort or orthopedic shoes. These are more difficult to find, but pedorthists or orthopedic shoe stores carry them. These shoes most likely are not in stock and will need to be ordered when fitted by a trained professional, adding a delay.

Dr. David Raynor
BEST FOOT FORWARD

Shoe shopping should be done in the late afternoon to obtain a realistic fit to take into account any swelling or inflammation issues. One should look for shoes not only with a wider toe box and a stiff heel counter, but shoes that look like the foot being fitted to. Some shoes, like Birkenstocks or Crocs, for example, are shaped like feet and will tend to fit well. Simply purchasing a longer shoe or wider shoe to gain space usually results in what I call "problem shifting." If one has a narrow heel, purchasing a wider shoe to accommodate a bunion will usually lead to instability or a blister down the road, as the heel will now swim in the shoe because it doesn't fit the heel. Look for natural — not man-made — uppers, EVA foam soles, sewn upper-to-sole construction, stiff heel counters, a wide heel base and as few seams as possible in the toe box. This final recommendation makes successful stretching by a cobbler much more likely if needed.

A shoe should feel comfortable upon first fitting. The shoe should not pinch or bind. It should feel stable. You should "test drive" the shoe in the store for at least 10 minutes. The shoe can not be expected to "break in" with wear if it is uncomfortable.

For difficult cases, I recommend standing on a blank piece of paper barefooted and having a friend or family member trace each foot. You now have a life-size copy of your foot you can take with you at any time. You can then remove the liners of shoes and place them over the tracings. Liners that extend beyond the tracing will accept foot deformities. Liners that lie within the tracing will not and will aggravate foot deformities causing discomfort.

■ CRYSTAL RIVER — A new bedside delivery option for patients prescribed outpatient medications at Seven Rivers Regional Medical Center will help ease the transition from hospital to home while enhancing communication between patients and pharmacists.

Walgreens bedside delivery service, a medication adherence and customer service-driven program developed by the national drugstore chain, gives patients the option to have their outpatient prescriptions quickly filled and delivered to their room prior to being discharged, eliminating a pharmacy stop between hospital and home.

"Through this collaborative program with Walgreens, we can help make sure patients have the medication and education they need to get and stay well after leaving the hospital," said Patricia Dourm, director of medical-surgical nursing at Seven Rivers Regional.

A Walgreens pharmacy technician provides one-on-one consultations with patients requesting the service. In addition, 48 hours following discharge, a Walgreens pharmacist calls the patient at home to provide any additional information patients may need about their medication or care.

"With this additional level of attention and care, our patients will have a better understanding of how and when to take a new medication," said Dourm. "Our ultimate goal is to enhance the patient experience and quality of care."

■ The Tobacco-Free Partnership of Citrus County will host its next meeting at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 24, in the Community Room of the Lakes Region Library, 1511 Druid Road, Inverness. This quarterly meeting is open to the public and the partnership welcomes new members.

This meeting will discuss past quarter team accomplishments, extended community relationships, tobacco policies and upcoming events.

The Tobacco-Free Partnership's goals are to prevent initiation of tobacco use among youths and young adults, create tobacco-free policies to protect everyone from secondhand smoke exposure, and to increase the number of people who receive information about quitting tobacco use.

Call Elizabeth Wood at the Citrus County Health Department, 352-726-1731, ext 342, or email Elizabeth_Wood@doh.state.fl.us.

Discussion will focus on such topics as planning for future financial help and physical assistance, and making decisions whether to seek guardianship of a child, and what kind. Guardianship can range from managing banking services, to powers of attorney, to full (plenary) guardianship. How do you plan your resources to make sure your child is cared for? Can your child have his own money or should it be protected? How much does this planning cost and what help is available?

CRISIS

By Friday morning, officials believed they had reached about 90 percent of those who were potentially affected, Jernigan said. They planned to continue trying to reach every person to see if they've had problems and to warn them to be on the lookout for symptoms, which can include severe headache, nausea, dizziness and fever. The CDC says many of the cases have been mild, but some people had strokes.

A meeting is held each morning to review overnight developments and plot a course of action for the day, and another at the end of the day summarizes the day's developments and looks ahead to the next day. Maps on big screens in the front of the emergency operations center track the states where the tainted medications were sent and the tally of cases reported in affected states.

A few steps away in the joint information center, another team works to keep the information about the outbreak on the CDC's website up to date and disseminate information via the media and other outlets.

In another building on the campus tucked away in the northeast corner of Atlanta, in a part of the CDC that specializes in fungal infections, about 15 scientists in the reference and research labs are logging 12 hours or more a day and working through weekends to test samples coming in from around the country.

Because the lab scientists had never worked with this particular fungus in cerebrospinal fluid before, they had to quickly develop new tests to detect it before they could start analyzing the hundreds of samples — cerebrospinal fluid samples, cultures and bits of tissue — sent in from around the country, research lab team leader Ana Litvintseva said.

Dressed in a white coat Friday, Shawn Lockhart, the fungal reference lab team leader, peered through a microscope as images of what looked like red pea pods appeared on a computer screen next to him. Many other closely related fungi look similar, but a tiny dot at the end of a pod told him he was looking at the fungus believed to be at the root of the outbreak.

Normally, the reference lab works on difficult samples sent in from state health departments, while the research lab works on research projects. But the scale of this outbreak means those projects are mostly being shelved at the moment.

"The scale is much, much bigger than we would normally work with," said research lab team leader Ana Litvintseva said. "We are working every weekend and people are here 12 to 13 hours at a time and we're testing samples nonstop."

Crown a thorny issue for patient

Q: I would like to know, how long should I expect a crown to last? I had a crown done on the second tooth from the left back on the bottom in December 2011 and just a couple of days ago a big chunk of it broke off. At the time of the procedure, I was told I would also have to get a root canal and that was done shortly after the crown. The broken-off part is close to the root canal material and is almost one whole side of the tooth.

At the time of the crown, the dental assistant did not properly clean the glue off my tooth and I suffered with a razor-sharp edge cutting my tongue and into my gums for a week as I was told I would have to wait to see the dentist again. My tongue was so swollen during this time, I could not talk or eat or swallow without major pain. When I did see him, he acted like this was no big deal, never apologized and cleaned most of the glue off, but I don't feel it was ever OK. I think glue was still stuck in the gum line.

The area of the gums below that tooth has hurt for over a year. I have told the dentist that something is wrong on a few occasions, but he acted like I was making something out of nothing because I am a fearful patient. He and the assistant made fun of me because I cried in the chair (I was having a panic attack). He has maintained nothing is wrong with my tooth or gums, but I know better.

Dr. Frank Vascimini
SOUND BITES

During the year after this crown, I went for a cleaning twice. The lady pulled a little tiny bit of something out of my gums each time, when I directed her to the pain. She was the only one who listened to me or apologized for any of this.

Now part of the crown has broken off. I feel that crown was not put in correctly and the glue issue has contributed to the crown being unstable and breaking up. I do not want to go to this dentist again but I do want to ask for my $ 1,200 back for the crown. Do I have the right to do that? Shouldn't this tooth last longer than 14 months? I feel that they have put me through so much unnecessary pain and suffering. I do not want to go to any dentist now — I don't want to go through any of this ever again. I was a fearful patient to begin with and now I am terrified.

I appreciate your column and read it every week, so I hope you will give me some advice on this subject.

A: This is a very unfortunate situation for you. It is too bad that you have turned from a fearful patient to a terrified one as a result of this. As you are probably aware, there is no way for me to know exactly what went on unless I see you. Even then, I may not be able to be sure of the reasons for what happened. What I can tell you is that most dentists will be able to assess the situation at hand and offer you some solutions. It seems as though you will not be able to, nor do you want to go back to the dentist who made the crown in the first place, so my suggestion is that you get a second opinion.

You might be comforted in knowing that in all probability the piece that broke off of the crown was a piece of porcelain. If this is the case, the integrity of the crown is still intact and decay is unlikely to start. This, of course, is assuming that the crown fit the tooth properly in the first place (this can be assessed with the second opinion I suggested). As for your question regarding how long a crown should last — I usually tell patients that between 5 and 7 years is acceptable, though most dentists would expect them to last longer. As you might suspect, this timeframe applies only if things were done properly and there is proper home care and dental care via your dental office.

You mentioned getting your money back from the dentist. If you felt that strongly about the situation I would suggest you make an appointment to sit down with the dentist and have what I would call a "heart to heart" conversation about the situation. I have found most people in life to be reasonable when things like this happen, and I truly believe that when discussed properly issues like this can be resolved. I truly hope things work out for you.

Study: HPV shots don't make girls promiscuous

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Shots that protect against cervical cancer do not make girls promiscuous, according to the first study to compare medical records for vaccinated and unvaccinated girls.

The researchers didn't ask girls about having sex, but instead looked at "markers" of sexual activity after vaccination against the sexually transmitted human papillomavirus, or HPV. Specifically, they examined up to three years of records on whether girls had sought birth control advice; tests for sexually transmitted diseases or pregnancy; or had become pregnant.

Very few of the girls who got the shots at age 11 or 12 had done any of those over the next three years, or by the time they were 14 or 15. Moreover, the study found no difference in rates of those markers compared with unvaccinated girls.

The study involved nearly 1,400 girls enrolled in a Kaiser Permanente health plan in Atlanta. Results were published online Monday in Pediatrics.

Whether vaccination has any influence on similar markers of sexual activity in older teens wasn't examined in this study but other research has suggested it doesn't.

The study is the first to use medical outcomes data to examine consequences of HPV vaccination and the results are "comforting and reassuring," said lead author Robert Bednarczyk, a researcher at Kaiser and Emory University. Both institutions paid for the study.

HPV is the leading cause of cervical cancer and also has been linked with anal and oral cancers in women and men.

The federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and the American Academy of Pediatrics recommend HPV shots for girls and boys at age 11 or 12, before they have ever had sex. Three doses are generally recommended over six months.

Some parents have raised concerns that the shots "are a license to have sex," but the study bolsters evidence against that concern, said Dr. Elizabeth Alderman, an adolescent medicine specialist at The Children's Hospital at Montefiore in New York City. She was not involved in the study.

A CDC study published in January suggested that the shots don't promote sexual activity among older girls, but it relied on self-reporting, at ages 15 to 24. That's a less reliable method than the new study, Alderman said. She has been a paid speaker for Merck & Co., which makes one of the two HPV vaccines sold in the United States, but said she has no current financial ties to the company.

In the new study, at least 90 percent of vaccinated and unvaccinated girls did not seek pregnancy tests, chlamydia tests or birth control counseling, markers that were considered surrogates for sexual activity during up to three years of follow-up. Two in each group became pregnant. Chlamydia, a common sexually transmitted disease, was diagnosed in one vaccinated girl and three unvaccinated girls.

Three of the study's four co-authors reported having done previous research funded by Merck.

About sports massage

Sports massage, as defined in Mosby's Dictionary of Medicine, Nursing, and Health Professions is a type of massage that specializes in the prevention and treatment of injury to the body while training, participating and recovering from athletic events. An article published in the May 2003 issue of Massage Today, specifically defines massage as the application of massage techniques, hydrotherapy protocols, range of motion/flexibility protocols, and training principals utilized to achieve a particular goal when treating an athlete. A variety of massage modalities (techniques) are used to address this population. The athlete includes, but is not limited to, active and robust seniors who golf, play tennis/pickle ball, bike or swim. It may included a student athlete who participates in equine activities, rows /kayaks, plays football or soccer, or the "weekend warrior" who runs and visits the gym a few days a week. The goal of each of the aforementioned athletes are aligned in their desire to prepare the muscles for strenuous activity or assist the body in recovering from the after-effects of strenuous activity.

Randi N. West
RUB IT IN

A study published in the 2005 Journal of Sports Medicine and Physical Fitness confirms that delayed onset of muscle soreness post event is significantly reduced with massage. Research from studies outlined in many of my previous columns have reported that massage improves circulation and blood flow, reduces muscles tension, improves lymph drainage (in order to reduce swelling), decreases muscle fatigue, prevents muscle spasms, accelerates muscle recovery, loosens and broadens muscle fibers, lengthens shortened muscles, and breaks down scar tissue and adhesions. Each of these help to achieve and maintain peak performance by augmenting physical function by relieving or preventing physical pain or dysfunction.

Michael McGuillicuddy, a well respected massage therapist, educator, and lecturer who has served as one of the Sports Massage Therapists for the 1996 Olympic Games in Atlanta, outlines three key principals to help identify what type of sports massage to apply to a client at any given time.

1. Timing of the treatment. Is the massage applied pre-event, during the event, or post-event?

2. Technique utilized on the athlete. Should the treatment consist of long strokes or compression on the muscle with the goal of lengthening or broadening the muscles? Does the therapist employ stretching to increase range of motion, minimize contraction and adhesion in muscle fibers, or should the therapist utilize direct pressure on the muscle to release or relieve trigger or tender points? Finally, should the practitioner use friction to spread or separate muscle tissues that may tend to adhere after small tears during strenuous activity, or use vibration and shaking of the muscles to confuse the nervous system in order to relax hypertonic muscles?

3. Intention. What is the reason for the treatment? Does the individual want to warm up the muscles, relax the muscles during the event or are they interested recovery of the muscle fibers post event? Increase flexibility, improve strength, or prevent soreness?

Each component, important factors to consider, when preparing for a course of massage.

These principals would be used by the massage therapist to assess the amount of pressure to be applied, and speed at which the therapist would massage. For example a therapist might assess a light, stimulating and non specific massage on a variety of muscles for a warm up before physical exertion. They might use broader and slower strokes, so they may effect specific muscles after an event. They might employ compression or squeezing of the muscle to stretch muscle fibers, in order to prevent soreness and adhesion of muscles after an event.

Additionally, the therapist would assess whether the application of moist heat or ice would best serve the athlete as part of the treatment.

Sports massage therapists must also consider contraindications when determining whether an individual should receive sports massage or be referred out to an orthopedist or another medical practitioner for assessment. Excessive swelling or inflammation, acute strains or sprains, broken skin, and fever, are all reasons for a therapist to refer the client to a physician before proceeding with a massage.

Sports massage can be beneficial for active individuals at all stages of the life cycle and for all stages of the strenuous activity. Ongoing care for athletes, and active individuals suggest regular massage allows the body to function with less restriction, improve peak performance, and accelerate recovery time after strenuous activity.

I didn't know that my mother also treasured butterflies until after she died. I found years of butterfly sketches and paintings she'd created, all bundled up with ribbons and tucked away. Some she left anonymous and others she'd titled "Golden Angels," "Gifts from Above," and "Glimpses of Heaven." I learned that my mother had a soft side I'd never known. A side that yearned to capture the nuances of wing designs on paper and canvas. She'd obviously spent hundreds of hours in quiet observation, tantalized as I am by these incredible creatures. Her pictures are of California butterflies, long ago and far away. They're a poignant legacy left for me to enjoy and find unite with her many years later.

I have to listen to so many northerners' sorrowful complaints about the autumns they've left behind — those higher latitudes now preparing for the bitterness of winter. These folks lament the last gasp of dying foliage as it surrenders to oncoming frigid temperatures. When I kindly share with them that they should go back and enjoy the freeze, the snow, the ice and all the amazing leaves they have to rake into heaping piles, they only shake their heads and say that I don't understand — well, they're right, I don't!

These are people who try to steal my peace. They seem to expect Florida will meet every one of their needs and get snarky when it doesn't. Florida, I explain between gritted teeth and a forced smile, is not New England. If it was, they wouldn't be here. They'd be warmer somewhere else and just as unhappy!

While others complain about the lack of fall colors and the "unchanging" of Florida's seasons, I stop and smile to myself. I cherish the fall here. I can spend time finding serenity, special moments joining with the memory of my mother, the releasing of burdens, the quiet pleasure of jeweled wings, soft breezes and glimpses of Heaven.

Typically, AKs are not too symptomatic, but at times they can become itchy and irritated, especially if rubbed by clothing, hats, eyeglasses, and if the irritation is severe enough that the top layer is knocked off it can bleed.

AKs are not skin cancers, but they are in some medical circles considered precancerous. A small percentage of these lesions do turn into squamous cell cancer, which is a type of skin cancer that can be severe. Typically, it is slow growing. But nevertheless, it is a skin cancer.

Actinic keratoses, in the early stages, skin conditioners and moisturizers such as sunscreen, helps when you are outdoors.

Removal of more advanced lesions includes shave excision, which is done by a very sharp scalpel blade, shaving it at the skin level. Other methods include freezing the diseased tissue with liquid nitrogen and eventually the tissue dies and new healthy tissue grows back into the site. Another technique is called curetting and electrodesiccation, which means we scrape the growth from the skin and an electric needle is applied to the treated areas to destroy any remaining tissues and seal blood vessels to stop bleeding.

There are some anti-cancer creams that can be applied to the area. Treatments can extend to three to five weeks. Other common treatments include chemical peels, which is done by applying various chemicals to cause the actinic keratoses to blister and peel away over time and dermabrasion, which is a form of "sanding" the skin to remove the growth. Also, laser light is sometimes used, depending on where the lesion is located.

Prevention is still a very important factor and the same tip for prevention of skin cancer holds true here. Stay out of the sun between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. when the suns rays are the strongest and wear protective clothing, long pants, long-sleeved shirts, wide-brim hats, and wear sunglasses. Remember, you have to protect your eyes as well and the skin around them. Use a sunscreen with at least a sun protection factor of 15, when you are outdoors applied repeatedly and avoid tanning booths or sun lamps.

cause any nausea, vomiting or hair loss.

The patient was very determined and not ready for status quo and so I started her on mild chemotherapy with Vidaza. She is tolerating it very well. This is given seven consecutive days in the vein and it is repeated every four weeks.Her anemia markedly improved. She has not received any more blood transfusions and her quality of life has improved significantly.

This case clearly shows that age is not a bar to chemotherapy. We should focus on the overall condition of the patient and disease process. Also remember, there are different kinds of chemotherapy and so do not treat all chemotherapy drugs as toxic and refuse. Rather than getting scared of the treatment, she decided to embrace chemotherapy and is doing much better.

Writers in retreat

Limited spots for Historical Novel Society's workshop filling fast

Special to the Chronicle

A Writers' Retreat sponsored by the Florida Chapter of the Historical Novel Society will take place from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 6, in the Patio Room of the Citrus County Resource Center, Marc Knighton Court, Lecanto.

The retreat will be led by Joyce Elson Moore, an award-winning author of historical fiction. Her latest novel, "The Tapestry Shop," based on the life of a French poet/musician, won the Bronze Medallion from Florida Book Awards for Popular Fiction. An earlier novel, "Jeanne of Clairmonde," won first place in the RPLA Awards sponsored by the Florida Writers' Association.

Joyce Elson Moore
award-winning author.

Moore has also written digital books under her pen name, Elizabeth Elson. For more information about the workshop leader, go to www.joycemoorebooks.com.

The fee for the day-long workshop is $50 and lunch provided by Elegant Catering is included.

Space is limited to 12 participants in order to allow for individual attention. All proceeds go to promote and advance the mission of the only Florida Chapter of the Historical Novel Society.

The morning session will be devoted to "Writing the Dreaded Synopsis." A synopsis is important because it is often the first thing an editor or agent will ask to see. In addition, writing a synopsis can help identify plot strengths and weaknesses during the early stages of planning a novel. Working with sample synopses, Moore will point out what works and what doesn't so each participant will have a clear picture of what it is, how to compose it and how it can help a writer craft a successful novel.

After lunch, the topic will be "Beginnings, Point-of-View, and All That Jazz," touching on major elements that make a story stand out from the slush pile.

The topics are appropriate for beginners, as well as advanced writers.

Workshop attendees should bring writing equipment. If they have a work in progress, they may bring three to five pages of the manuscript. Reservations are taken on a first-come, first-served basis.

To register or for more information, call Marian Fox at 352-726-0162.

Collecting coats for Cayla's Ministry

Special to the Chronicle

Gulf to Lake Church is again collecting coats for schoolchildren in kindergarten through eighth grade (sizes 6 through juniors, up to adult small).

Cayla's Coats Ministry was started in memory of Cayla Barnes, who died in 2010. Her mother, Jessica Barnes, is a teacher in the county and witnesses firsthand children inadequately dressed for Citrus County's occasional cold weather.

"This ministry is a way for my family and friends to keep Cayla's memory alive. It is important to us that her brother know about her and understand that she is a very important part of our family," Barnes said.

In addition to taking collections at the church (1454 N. Gulf Ave., off State Road 44 across from Meadowcrest), a donation station will be set up from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. today, Tuesday, Oct. 16, at Inverness Walmart.

For more information, call the church at 352-795-8077 or Joan Cook at 352-422-2635.

Collectors gather, show stuff at wildlife park

Collectors Day at the Ellie Schiller Homosassa Springs Wildlife Park featured $5 appraisals to benefit the park last week. Long lines of hopeful people waited to have their treasures appraised, several with vintage musical instruments in carefully kept cases.

The upstairs Pepper Creek Terrace Room at the Visitors Center was a hub of visitors admiring the collectors' tables, everything from antique marbles worth thousands of dollars to porcelain pincushions. Fascinating stories accompanied each collector's treasures. Many visitors exclaimed, "My grandmother had one of those," or "My grandfather kept some of those up in his attic."

■ Anne McConnell, of Homosassa, displayed her extensive stamp collection. Each album was carefully researched. The Abe Lincoln stamp mosaic garnered a great deal of attention. Stamps have been her passion since 1950. Her 1861 stamp is the oldest one.

■ Jeannine Love, of Lecanto, has been collecting popular sheet music since 1954.

■ Betsy Dearth, of Homosassa, returned with her advertising collectables, which brought to mind many fond memories of products no longer on the market.

■ Jo Ann Knapp, of Inverness, had a delightful nutcracker and pincushion collection. Interested in Old World objects, many were gifts. Others were flea market finds. An owl pincushion was the beginning of her collection some 30 years ago.

■ Jo LeCount, of Homosassa, began her Santa collection after husband Dennis began performing as Santa. She also collects snowmen figurines. Her patriotic collection included a flag from Iraq.

■ Judy Peterson, of Inverness, began her stuffed animal Chihuahua collection, along with her small white plastic statues with loving quotes, when she had three Chihuahua pets while working for a veterinarian for 20 years.

Ruth Levins
AROUND THE COMMUNITY

■ Jean Lynch, of Dunnellon, displayed a doll collection featuring some folk art costumed dolls from her mother's 1940s collection.

■ Don Stagliano, of Homosassa, proudly displayed his pedal cars and a toy train collection, including his very first one which Santa brought to him as a child. One of his pedal cars was a pre-World War II car manufactured in England.

■ Robert Clemens, of Homosassa, stated that his chess set was his favorite item. His extensive Michael Ricker world-famous pewter figurines created by the artist from 1982-92 began after 10 years of pewter figurine collecting and research into the life of Ricker.

■ Nancy Zayac, of Homosassa, had an attractive orchid memorabilia collection with jewelry, ceramics, floral design books and photos.

■ Robert Russ, of Inverness, a Native American and a member of the Little River Band of the Ottawa Tribe of Michigan and Canada, began his collection some 43 years ago with a passion for odd and unusual tools. Some of his tools date back to the 1700s and include broad axes, hatches and 7,000 pounds of steel traps. His love of the pre-pioneer era was evident as he shared with me the uses of his various tools.

■ Ray Kays invites readers to take their collection jars of marbles out and give him a call. You just might have a valuable antique marble he may want to purchase for his 25-year collection. He shared with me that the value of a marble is determined by proving who made them. I marveled at the $1,000 guinea marble on display. He can be reached at 352-400-8182.

Wildlife Park volunteers were on hand to direct the visitors throughout the day, fielding questions about the many opportunities for membership and volunteering at the park. Susan Strawbridge coordinated the Collector/Appraisal Day and Dudley's Auction arranged for the appraisers.

Just another community event, free to the public, thoroughly enjoyed and sincerely appreciated by one and all.

Ruth Levins participates in a variety of projects around the community. Let her know about your group's upcoming activities by writing to P.O. Box 803, Crystal River, FL 34423.

Marcus Terentius Varro, a Roman scholar and writer who died in 27 B.C., said, "The number of guests at dinner should not be fewer than the number of the Graces nor exceed that of the Muses — that is, it should begin with three and stop at nine."

The number of tricks to be won in three no-trump should not be fewer than the number of the Muses nor necessarily exceed the number of Muses — that is, nine.

In this deal, which nine tricks should South have his eye on after West leads the diamond king?

South starts with seven top tricks: one spade, one heart, one diamond and four clubs. Assuming West has led from the king-queen of diamonds, playing toward dummy's jack will generate another trick. And spades will certainly supply a second winner. So how could this contract be in any jeopardy?

Suppose South follows a natural-looking line, taking the first trick, crossing to dummy with a club, and running the spade queen. What happens next?

If West is in midseason form, after winning with his spade king, he will shift to the heart jack — and suddenly the contract must fail. No matter how declarer ducks and weaves, he will lose at least five tricks before he can get nine.

At trick two, South should lead a low spade toward dummy's queen. If West wins with his king, declarer has three spade tricks and nine in all. If West ducks, South wins in dummy, returns to hand with a club, and plays a diamond toward dummy's jack, establishing his ninth winner. And if East could take the spade queen with the king, he could not lead hearts with effect. Declarer would lead toward dummy's diamond jack at leisure.

ANNIE'S MAILBOX

Dear Annie: I am a 64-year-old man in excellent health. The problem is, I never have had much luck with the ladies. I adore all kinds of women: tall ones, short ones, average ones and even plump ones. The only ladies I do not find attractive are the grossly fat ones and those who smoke, drink too much or use drugs.

But, Annie, women don't seem to like me at all, and I don't know why. I am well read and easy to get along with and try to help people when I can. I don't drink or smoke. I exercise a lot and eat healthy food. I am mostly bald, and so I shave off the few hairs that still grow on top of my fully functional solar cell. I am not a sports nut. I don't go to bars because the music is too loud, and most of the women I meet there like their booze too much.My brother has always been popular with the ladies. I don't know what he has that I don't. I've tried online dating sites, but they haven't worked for me. I would like to meet some decent women. What am I doing wrong? — Lonely in Nova Scotia

Dear Lonely: We don't know. A well-read, helpful, decent guy who is in excellent health and interested in nearly all kinds of women should be a catch for someone. Are you looking for women in the right age bracket? Do you lecture them on their exercise, smoking or drinking habits? Are you clean and decently dressed?

Join an organization or do an activity that you enjoy. It's a good way to meet people with similar interests. Tell your friends and relatives that you are looking. Ask your brother what he thinks the problem might be — and pay attention to his answer.

Dear Annie: Our son graduated from college more than two years ago. He has not looked for a job, nor does he have a resume. He claims that he can't put a resume together because he didn't participate in any school activities and has no job experience, although he has done quite a bit of volunteer work at his church.

He spends much of his time playing video games. Currently, he plays all night. He goes to bed when other people are just waking up and then sleeps until late afternoon. We have never pushed him hard. He helps some around the house, but my wife and I like to do things ourselves. Our son is intelligent and moral, does not drink or smoke, and is well liked. But I worry about his lack of ambition. He refuses to talk to a counselor to determine whether something is holding him back. I've told him that unless he shows some initiative, he eventually will be too old for anyone to want to hire him. He doesn't want any of the part-time jobs that are easily available, because he says he cannot learn anything from them. I've said he should at least show he is willing to work. Do you have any suggestions? — Frustrated Dad

Dear Dad: Stop waiting for your son to show initiative and give him some motivation. Tell him he has three weeks to get a job because you will be charging him rent. And make the amount large enough to require an income. Don't back down. If he doesn't like it, he can mooch off of someone else. Offer to help him put together a resume. Two years of lazing around playing video games is not going to inspire confidence in his work ethic, but the longer he waits the harder it will be.

Dear Annie: I'd like to respond to the letter from "Fleas a Crowd in Hawaii," whose friend gave her a great massage, but afterward she was covered in fleabites. It may be that these are not bug bites of any kind, but rather an allergic reaction to the lotion or oil used during the massage. — C.

Dear C.: You could be right. Itching can result from a great many things. But if she saw actual bite marks, as opposed to irritation, itching or a rash, the assumption is that something bit her.
