Nelson: Florida turning blue

Democrat optimistic about future elections

Sen. Bill Nelson spoke at annual dinner.

CHRIS VAN ORMER
Staff writer

CITRUS HILLS — County Democrats enjoyed some encouragement Sunday delivered by a U.S. senator who sees things going their way.

"You will have a lot easier time talking to your neighbors and friends," said Sen. Bill Nelson, D-Fla., at the 2013 FDR-JFK Democratic Fundraiser Dinner. "Sometimes you may feel that things are a little rough, but notice the county officials that you have been able to continue to elect."

Nelson pointed out he got a 50-50 vote in Republican Citrus County.

He offered a positive outlook for 2014: "As you get ready for the elections next year, remember that it is like driving a car: If you want to go forward, you put it on D; if you want to go backward, you put it on R."

Nelson said he was an optimist about what he sees ahead for Florida.

"The state of Florida is turning blue," Nelson stated, and explained where the growth of Democrat support was to be found.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

Contribute! Like us at facebook.com/citruscountychronicle and respond to our Question of the Week.

What do you think about community gardens where residents could grow their own food?

Erin Ewing
I think it's a great idea, I would definitely participate. I would grow all kinds of veggies — peppers, tomato, cucumbers, etc. I would love to have a garden, but I rent.

Jeanne Zeller
That would be great for those that rent.

Wendy Kalivoda
LOL. I am looking into it as we speak.

Pamela K. Phelps
I love the idea as well. I would plant tomatoes and black-eyed peas.

Kelley B. DeMaio
That would require security if there are no greenhouses with a lock. Kind of sounds costly. With the maintenance cost, rent cost, utility costs, and then I'm sure the taxpayers would get hit with another burden. Cheaper to buy your own land. Just thinking ahead.

Holli B. Herndon
In Inverness, friends pitch in money at the beginning of the season and I bring them fresh fruits and veggies as they grow, and fresh eggs. Another friend makes fresh breads and trades those for fresh veggies and eggs. A community garden is a great idea; you need to have frequent people to tend to it though, and then how much land will be used? Biggest issue with those open gardens is honesty and integrity. ...

Light at end of the project

MATTHEW BECK/Chronicle

A worker with Traffic Control Devices Inc. hangs a traffic signal Thursday morning at the intersection of State Road 44 and Meadowcrest Boulevard in Crystal River. The new signal at the busy intersection is expected to be operational by early May.

Traffic signal gets ready to go with 'burning in' period

CHRIS VAN ORMER
Staff writer

CRYSTAL RIVER — Waiting at a traffic light and wishing it would change beats waiting for the traffic signal to appear at all.

But residents soon will maneuver in more safety between State Road 44 and North Meadowcrest Boulevard. Lights finally have been installed at the busy intersection near the West Citrus Government Center at 1540 N. Meadowcrest Blvd. and will be in full operation after a one-week "burning in" period.

> "Permitting was just a bear on this one."
> Ken Frink
> assistant county administrator.

"It will go to 'flash' — yellow on 44 and red on Meadowcrest — next Wednesday, May 1," said Ken Frink, assistant county administrator and public works director.

"It gets the public used to the light being there. About a week later, we will turn it to full operation. We are scheduled for May 8 to have full operation."

Initiated last June, the traffic signal project was expected to be completed by September or October. But the county faced unforeseen challenges.

"Permitting was just a bear on this one," Frink said.

Elvis fans hop on bus

Elvis Presley. Immediately, an image comes to mind. He's one of those people you don't have to think too hard about because you know what he did or who he is.

Just like George Washington, Mickey Mouse or Babe Ruth — almost everybody knows exactly who you're talking about. Others may be more involved in the biographical details of their careers than you are, but an image pops into mind.

Referred to as the "King of Rock 'n' Roll," he has a pop culture of awaiting followers. Some say he is still alive.

But is he?

That was the question I was trying to put to rest Saturday as I was one of about 100 Elvis seekers

Counsel wants probe of nuke plant payout

PAT FAHERTY
Staff writer

Maintaining that the destruction of the Crystal River nuclear plant is an economic disaster for Florida consumers, the Office of Public Counsel continues to push for an investigation into efforts by Progress/Duke to obtain insurance money.

The office, which represents Florida residents, wants to establish that electricity customers have no responsibility for certain costs relating to the power plant.

It has also raised the issue of whether Duke Energy, as one of the largest members of Nuclear Electric Insurance Limited (NEIL), has a conflict of interest when negotiating for insurance proceeds. The company is owned and controlled by its members.

It wants the commission to examine why Duke agreed to settle the property damage aspect of the insurance claim for $202 million, when it had a policy limit of $2.25 billion.

The commission approved a settlement in early 2012 resolving customer rate issues pertaining to costs associated with the nuclear plant outage and replacement power costs. It was reflected in the 2013 rate structure.

The office is arguing that certain issues, including the insurance settlement, were not resolved in that settlement.

In a recent filing with the commission, the office claims that cost recovery for the idled power plant will be a significant burden for ratepayers beginning Jan. 1, 2017. Additionally, it states, those customers will be required to pay for a new power plant and higher fuel costs over the next 20 years due to the loss of CR3.

The utility has responded that many of the issues raised were covered by the February 2012 settlement.

Duke Energy spokesperson Sterling Ivy explained the company and NEIL reached a resolution of the coverage claims through a mediation process. Under the terms of the mediator's proposal, NEIL will pay an additional $530 million. Along with the $305 million NEIL has already paid, customers will receive $835 million in insurance proceeds. This will be the largest claim payout in the history of NEIL.

On Tuesday, the commission will hear oral arguments on the disputed issues, including what if anything does the settlement agreement preclude the commission from determining in this docket.

HOW YOUR LAWMAKERS VOTED

Key votes for the week ending April 26 by Voterama in Congress

■ Air travel, sequestration: Voting 361 for and 41 against, the House on April 26 passed a bill (HR 1765) to end furloughs of air traffic controllers made necessary by the blind, across-the-board cuts known as sequestration that are now in force. The bill reallocates $253 million in the Federal Aviation Administration budget in order to return controllers to full work schedules and end flight delays clogging U.S. air travel. The bill awaited Senate approval and President Obama's signature. A yes vote was to pass the bill. Rich Nugent, Yes.

Rich Nugent

■ Federal helium reserve: Voting 394 for and one against, the House on April 26 sent the Senate a bill (HR 527) to avert the scheduled closure of the Federal Helium Reserve on Oct. 1. The bill ends tight federal control of the helium market in which four companies now have exclusive rights to refine crude helium from the reserve. But the bill keeps the federal facility in operation to ensure that private companies and government agencies will receive adequate helium supplies based on market prices. A byproduct of natural gas, the element helium is used in making products such as fiber optic cables, MRI machines, space rockets and computer chips. The bill would save $340 million over 10 years to be applied to deficit reduction. The reserve was established in 1925 in a geologic formation near Amarillo, Texas. Congress in 1995 directed the Department of the Interior to eventually privatize the reserve, and that process, now underway, would be prolonged for at least 10 years by this bill. A yes vote was to pass the bill. Nugent, Yes.

Marco Rubio

■ Online sales taxes: Voting 63 for and 30 against, the Senate on April 25 advanced a bill (S 743) requiring online retailers to collect state and local sales taxes and send the revenue to the taxing jurisdiction where the customer lives. At present, firms selling over the Internet are obligated to collect sales taxes only if they have a physical presence in the particular state or locality, giving them a cost advantage over brick-and-mortar stores, which by law must add sales taxes to purchases. The bill exempts Internet retailers with less than $1 million annually in out-of-state sales. It does not raise taxes, but facilitates the collection of an estimated $23 billion in sales taxes that now goes unpaid. Senators will resume debate on the bill in early May. A yes vote was to advance the bill. Bill Nelson, yes. Marco Rubio, no.

Bill Nelson

■ Budget director Sylvia Burwell: By a unanimous vote of 96 for and none against, the Senate on April 24 confirmed Sylvia Mathews Burwell as director of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB). Burwell, 48, had been president of the Walmart Foundation, and before that she was a top executive of the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation. Burwell held several positions on President Bill Clinton's economic team. She becomes the second woman to serve as federal budget director, following Alice Rivlin, who headed the OMB in 1994-1996. A yes vote was to confirm Burwell. Rubio yes, Nelson yes.

■ Key votes ahead: The House and Senate are in recess in the week of April 29.

NELSON

"You watch the trends," Nelson said. "It used to be that our Hispanic population in this state, unlike any other state, was dominated by Cuban-Americans, who, because of Ronald Reagan, and their love for Ronald Reagan, had turned a lot of the anti-Castro Cuban migrants that had come seeking freedom in this country, had turned them into very substantial rounded Republicans."

That, however, was the initial response from the first generation of Cuban-Americans.

"What's happened is the Cuban people always were concerned about taking care of each other; of having health care; about having good education; about having transportation systems," Nelson said. "What is happening is that as the Cuban-American population in this state starts to mellow in age and as the next generation of Cuban-Americans born in this state, not in Cuba, they are becoming more moderate in their politics and you can see that reflected in Cuban precincts in Miami in this past election. The president and I were carrying those Cuban-American precincts."

Democrats heard they could expect support from other Hispanic groups. The Hispanic population in Florida is changing dramatically, Nelson said. Of the entire Hispanic vote in Florida, Cuban-Americans, the largest Hispanic group, made up only 38 percent.

> "Cuban-Americans born in this state, not in Cuba, they are becoming more moderate in their politics and you can see that reflected in Cuban precincts in Miami."
> Sen. Bill Nelson

The Orlando metro area and South Florida both are now home to many Puerto Rican-American citizens. Nelson said they "are much more akin to moderation in the political spectrum."

The remainder of the Hispanic vote was not so much Mexican-American as in other states, but coming from Central America and South America. According to the 2010 Census, Hispanics now make up almost 1 in 4 Floridians, up from 1 in 6 a decade ago.

"You are seeing a trend toward the Democratic Party among those Hispanics," Nelson said.

In the last election, Democrats faced challenges through corporations financing campaigns and through gerrymandering.

"The president, at the end of the day, was able to match all of that onslaught of money," Nelson said.

In the last three weeks before the election, President Obama saw he had a chance to win Florida.

"I'd been telling him that all along," Nelson said. "Florida is changing. You can win Florida."

The president's campaign team knew "under the calculus" they didn't have to win Florida to win the presidency.

"Their target was Ohio," Nelson said. "They were pretty sure they were going to win Pennsylvania and Nevada. They didn't know about Colorado. But, of course, the big prize was Florida, with 29 electoral votes."

Florida has the same number of electoral votes as New York. Nelson said this year Florida will surpass New York in population and become the third largest state in the United States.

"And that's because all the New Yorkers are moving to Florida," Nelson said. "Florida has become, in the presidential calculus, it has become a very, very big deal."

Lawmakers OK $50M for bike trail project

Existing trails to connect

Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG — State lawmakers have approved $50 million to link more than 200 miles of existing bike trails across Central Florida.

The Florida Department of Environmental Protection wants to bridge 72 miles of gaps among more than a dozen regional trails from St. Petersburg to Titusville. Once completed, the trail would be the longest continuous bike path in Florida.

The Coast to Coast Connector, as the trails project is called, is part of the department's Florida Greenways and Trails System plan, which eventually would build a network of walking and biking trails statewide.

A department spokesman told The Tampa Tribune the trail would increase tourism and economic development.

"If you have a large trail that doesn't have bits and pieces missing from it, it really becomes an attraction," said Patrick Gillespie. "Then you've got people staying in those communities, spending money in those communities, and that's where you get your economic impact."

Money for the project would come from the state's transportation trust fund and be rolled out over five years in $10 million increments. Most of the funding would go toward buying land needed to link the trails.

Gov. Rick Scott could still veto the project. He did not include it in his proposed budget.

The project would link trails in Pinellas, Pasco and Hernando counties before heading east. It would then connect with trails near Orlando and along the Atlantic coast.

Supporters contend a trail system can boost economic development as it has in Dunedin, where business occupancy in the downtown area has grown from 30 percent in the 1980s to nearly 100 percent since a Pinellas County trail cut through its main street in 1991.

Cyclists ride in from out of town and stop in at local bars and restaurants, and demand has grown for homes near the trail and the downtown.

"Where the trail hits downtown is ground zero," said Robert Ironsmith, Dunedin's economic development director. "It's helped build what downtown is today."

Save Money on Bundled Cable

Special Correspondent

Many Florida seniors now bundle services to save money. The promotional rates are designed to get you hooked. Then once you are, the rates go up to "normal" which are often very high. Consider this a reminder to always do the math and not assume something is cheaper simply because it is bundled on one bill.

Your cable company is betting against you

" They bring you in at a low price for all three services and then raise the rate on everything and assume you wont change" While this may seem almost unbelievable it is the truth. Bundling was designed to surgically remove as much money from consumers over the long haul.

You can start saving as much as 40 percent on your current bundled plan. With ala Carte, bundle prices you get the maximum discount on each service regardless of how many services you have. It is an absolute no brainier. You would never pay $7.00 a gallon for gas if you could fill up across the street for $3.00 so why pay more for your TV/PHONE and Internet.

RINGING ENDORSEMENT

Leaders born annually from select group

Since 1991, the Citrus County Chamber of Commerce has operated Leadership Citrus, an annual program "designed to enhance the leadership potential of individuals ... in business, professional and community service activities," according to its website.

That sounds pretty dry and boring. But ask any Leadership Citrus graduate about the program, and you'll probably get an earful on how great it is, how much he or she learned about Citrus County, what strong friendships were formed, and you might even hear the program was professionally or personally life-changing.

THE ISSUE:
Leadership Citrus.

OUR OPINION:
Hands-on program is a great way to engage community members.

Leadership programs are run by Chambers of Commerce all over the state, and nationwide. Most follow the formula of mixing guest speakers, site visits and hands-on activities to help participants learn more about local issues, community resources and other factors that influence the quality of life now and in the future.

In Citrus County, each year's class undertakes a project. This year, the group spent a recent Saturday at the Duval House in Floral City. They helped remove modern additions to restore this building, thought to be the county's oldest surviving residential structure, to its historical roots. In past years, a class walking tour through Floral City instilled an appreciation for the county's early days. This project brought people face to face with its history.

Projects from prior years' Leadership Citrus classes still resonate. Citrus 20/20 grew from the 1994 class, which wanted to determine how to have an effect on anticipated growth in Citrus County and avoid the pitfalls experienced by larger communities to our south. One Rake at a Time began with 2009's Leadership Citrus class project to clean up Hunters Spring Park. Other class projects may not have been so high-profile, but all made positive impacts in our community.

Leadership Citrus graduates still identify themselves by class year, and most of the more than 300 alumni can tell you who went through the program with them. Bonds forged during the program's semimonthly meetings, held from January through May, significantly strengthen the fabric of our community.

This successful program model has been adopted by a number of other organizations in the form of "citizen academies" — by the Board of County Commissioners, Citrus Memorial Health System, Nature Coast EMS and the Citrus County Sheriff's Office, to name a few. Their aims are all similar: give people a personal look at how things work in their community and how to be part of it.

If you have the opportunity to participate in one of these programs, go for it. You won't regret the time spent.

A little humility may be in order

This is for the rest of us.

Meaning the ones who don't have personal chefs, gift-wrapping rooms or hired sycophants, who don't hobnob or rub shoulders, and who drive the same car every day of the week.

Leonard Pitts
OTHER VOICES

The rest of us would like to offer some of you a little advice:

If you ever find yourself asking, "Do you know who I am?" or any variation thereof, it's a pretty good indicator that you are not, in fact, as famous as your hired sycophants (and your ego) have led you to believe. If it is necessary to call attention to your fame, you may not be all that famous to begin with.

Besides which, doing so is in terrible taste.

Reese Witherspoon, known for her work in films like "Legally Blonde" and "Walk the Line" (for which she won an Academy Award), is the latest celebrity to learn this. She was arrested for disorderly conduct recently after allegedly interfering with a Georgia state trooper, who had pulled over her husband, Hollywood agent Jim Toth, on suspicion of drunken driving.

Authorities say Witherspoon, who has since apologized and pronounced herself "deeply embarrassed," asked the trooper, "Do you know my name?" and announced to him, "You're about to find out who I am. ... You're about to be on national news."

In other words: "Do you know who I am?"— a question that should never be asked by anyone who is not suffering amnesia. And yet, it — or, again, some version of it — is asked often whenever the famous, the near-famous, the used-to-be-famous and the famous in their own minds find themselves colliding with real life.

Do you know who I am?

This was, in essence, Gloria James' alleged riposte during a drunken 2011 altercation with a parking valet, though her only claim to fame is that, 29 years ago, she gave birth to LeBron. It is what washed-up NBA star Allen Iverson reportedly spent 20 minutes yelling at a police officer during a 2011 traffic stop in Atlanta. It is said to be what Lindsay Lohan's mother Dina yelled when she was turned away from a Hollywood nightspot in 2009 for trying to take her then-15-year-old daughter Ali inside. It is, according to police, what the rapper N.O.R.E. screamed as he was punching out a customer a few years ago at a Fatburger in Miami Beach.

Do you know who I am? It might as well be the battle cry of privilege. The rest of us have a complicated relationship with privilege.

We know the rules apply differently to those who possess celebrity. It gets you better seats in restaurants, more attentive service in stores. You don't wait in lines. And if you find yourself in trouble, you may even receive the kind of "justice" O.J. Simpson did in 1995.

No one loses sleep over this. So be it. C'est la vie.

But that forbearance carries an unwritten rule: You may accept these perks, but you may not ostentatiously demand them. To do so is to affront what remains of our egalitarian ideals. From those upon whom we confer celebrity, we expect a little occasional humility in return. If you have none, at least have the good sense to fake it.

Witherspoon did not.

Do you know who I am?

The question reeks of entitlement, condescension and arrogance. It is the bratty inquiry of someone who has believed her own hype, drunk her own Kool-Aid, become lost in her own image.

The lady will weather this, of course. Who could hold a grudge against Reese Witherspoon?

Still, there is a certain satisfaction in seeing her rant answered with handcuffs, in watching humility imposed on someone who needs it. It seems a welcome reminder of egalitarian ideals too often lost in celebrity's flashbulb glare. Witherspoon has enrolled in a pre-trial intervention program. She has a May 22 court date.

Score one for the rest of us.

LETTERS to the Editor

How do you know?

The one person who was complaining in there about rude people in the aisles of grocery stores and stuff and about how Southerners are complaining about these Northern snowbirds coming down here and being rude, her comment was that, you know, she says, you know, that's the problem she's having in the grocery stores, that Southerners aren't that polite. Well how does she know those people aren't her fellow northern snowbirds? I don't think she went up and asked each one of them that bumped into her, "Are you from the North or the South?"

No gamblers here

We do not have gambling in our church, either. Croft Road Baptist family treat everyone like family. I don't ever know of a church that welcomes people like they do. There's my husband, who hadn't been to church with me for 35 years. All of a sudden, he decided to go because he heard me tell people how our church is. Now he is so convinced, he wants to go every Sunday. So they are not all the same.

Freeze hiring in Citrus

Please freeze Citrus County employee hiring. I see in today's Sunday newspaper (April 21) want ads that the Citrus County Sheriff's (Office) is running ads for new hires. Given its huge budget problem and spending problem, all hiring should have been frozen a long time ago. I sure hope that this will be discussed in this week's meeting with the commissioners and it needs to show that there's some concern for the taxpayers. We can't have this excess spending and hiring continuously.

Can't connect

Every time I try to call Rich Nugent, our representative in Washington, every time the mailbox is filled up. This has happened forever since he's been in the office.

Emergencies first

If you are sick, go see a doctor or clinic. I have been to the emergency room three times with an emergency and was treated immediately. They take care of emergencies first and sick people just simply have to wait or go and see a doctor.

County needs public transportation

The money we plan to spend extending Suncoast Parkway and building a Port Citrus should be directed toward public transportation. Consider the RTE bus service in Gainesville; it helps young people who can't afford a car and insurance a chance to go to college and travel around town to their low-paying jobs.

Citrus County has many people who go to school at Withlacoochee Technical Institute and other extensions of colleges. We are also an agricultural community (farming, cattle and horse ranches). We are not being served properly by public transportation. We have no tourism like Orlando. We have no Disney World or Sea World in Citrus County. What we do have are leaders who come from Wally World with grandiose ideas on Citrus County's future. Citrus County will always be an agricultural community.

These projects will destroy the environment — creating air pollution and more litter along the highways. Most people that come through the west coast are not residents of this area. We need bus services that connect all the areas of Citrus County so people can afford to go to work. The price of gas and insurance takes a big chunk of the low-paying citizens in this county. These two projects will not bring long-standing jobs to this county.

Who is really going to benefit from these projects? Let's take a real close look. Do you see any of the common folks on their committees? No you see politicians. People wake up before it is too late. Let's build a county that really serves it citizens. We must preserve our natural environment first and create long-lasting jobs.

If we bring in mass transit it is here to stay, employing many of our citizens (bus drivers, mechanics, inspectors, bus routers, tire repairman, etc.) These are permanent jobs with good pay funded service fees. Just think of all the hospital employees and staff of all medical services that will use this service to go back and forth to work.

Another benefit is the buses will be using natural gas, which will help cut down on global warming and air pollution. Also, there will be fewer cars creating less wear and tear on our roads. It's a win-win situation if only our representatives could realize the real dream for Citrus County and get their heads out of Wally World.

Robin Koon, left, and Gavin Koon, right, rekindled memories of time they spent in Inglis and Citrus counties when they performed in Elvis Presley's movie, "Follow That Dream." They were unaware that a sign on State Road 40 in Inglis marks the road that is named after the movie.

The courtroom scene in Elvis' famous movie "Follow That Dream" was filmed at the Old Courthouse in the historic district of downtown Inverness.

who took a bus tour during the Florida Elvis Festival in Inverness. Celebrating his ninth movie "Follow That Dream," Elvis lovers of all ages gathered throughout the historic streets that encircled the Old Courthouse. More than 50 years later, the memory of Elvis Presley's visit to Citrus County is still alive.

I was the second to last person loaded onto the Citrus County Transit Bus transporting me and my newfound Elvis friends for the day. The only difference between me and them was they spoke anxiously about all the filming locations they would see.

Myself, as I retouched my lipstick, I thought about how a first kiss from the King was every girl's dream.

While applying a top coat of lip gloss, I felt a fellow-passenger brush my arm as we both became instant seat-hoggers for the duration of our trip. Unbeknownst to me, the man whose arm rested next to mine was Robin Koon. He and his twin brother Gavin Koon played Eddy and Teddy Bascombe in "Follow That Dream."

I will probably never wash my arm again. I'm sure at least once he must have touched Elvis.

As tour guide for the day, Koon explained how his and his brother's career began at the young age of 8. His parents took him to a casting call for 8-year-old twins and, out of hundreds of sets of twins, they were chosen for a role that changed their lives forever.

Filming locations around Levy and Citrus counties that Robin Koon narrated to us included the Old Courthouse, the Land and Title building across from courthouse, Basswood Avenue, Follow That Dream Parkway, Pamela Drive, Bird Creek bridge, Weall House, Crystal River High School, King's Bay bridge, an outhouse scene (just past King's Bay bridge) and Port Paradise motel.

The Koons told stories about filming with Elvis from their perspective that gave us tourists some insight into what Elvis was really like. Robin Koon described Elvis as a "very kid-friendly" and humble man.

"We were more afraid of the director than we were of Elvis," Robin Koon said. "He was also very humble. That says a lot about Elvis' star power. I think that has something to do with why fans love him so much all around the world. The Elvis fans are like a big family."

Robin Koon said the only time he encountered screaming girls — until he met me — was when they were filming at the Old Courthouse. During that time, there was no air conditioning. The windows had to remain open, as filming started in July at the height of summer. Fans knew when they were finished and waited outside. When he or his brother walked outside, the girls would start screaming, as they were expecting Elvis.

After spending hours with Robin Koon, I became a believer in Elvis and can now understand why — what I thought were silly women — followers are obsessed with this man of grand stature.

To Robin Koon and my fellow newfound Elvis friends, "Thank you. Thank you very much."

But I'm still waiting for my first Elvis kiss.

FBI checking training angle in bombing

WASHINGTON — The chairman of the House Homeland Security Committee said Sunday that the FBI is investigating in the United States and overseas to determine whether the suspects in the Boston Marathon bombing received training that helped them carry out the attack.

U.S. officials investigating the bombings have told The Associated Press that so far there is no evidence to date of a wider plot, including training, direction or funding for the attacks.

EPA report divides fracking camps

PITTSBURGH — The Environmental Protection Agency has dramatically lowered its estimate of how much of a potent heat-trapping gas leaks during natural gas production, in a shift with major implications for a debate that has divided environmentalists: Does the recent boom in fracking help or hurt the fight against climate change?

The scope of the EPA's revision was vast. In a mid-April report on greenhouse emissions, the agency now says that tighter pollution controls instituted by the industry resulted in an average annual decrease of 41.6 million metric tons of methane emissions from 1990 through 2010, or more than 850 million metric tons overall. That's about a 20 percent reduction from previous estimates. The agency converts the methane emissions into their equivalent in carbon dioxide, following standard scientific practice.

Court 2-1 for cop who shot up his car

NEW ORLEANS — A state appeal court has overturned the dismissal of a policeman who has pleaded "no contest" to criminal mischief charges accusing him of getting drunk and shooting up his personal car while on duty in December 2009.

The Times-Picayune reported that the 4th Circuit Court of Appeal ruled last week that the department's internal investigation took too long, violating Patrick O'Hern's rights. The investigation began in March 2010. Wednesday's 2-1 ruling says the investigation should have been finished the previous month.

The city can appeal. If it loses, O'Hern would be entitled to back pay since Oct. 27, 2010, when he was fired.

He wouldn't necessarily get back on the force — the department could investigate whether the plea indicates unfitness for duty.

Utility: Thieves could be blind, deaf

WICHITA, Kan. — Kansas utility company officials said someone who caused a power outage and more than $150,000 in wire loss and damage by breaking into a substation could possibly be blind, deaf and seriously burned.

KWCH-TV reported Westar crews who went to check on a Wichita substation at 5:45 a.m. Saturday found grounding cables and copper wire missing and noticed the chain link fence was cut.

Westar said whoever broke into the substation was messing with very dangerous materials and probably was severely injured when the transformer shorted out.

Police have asked hospitals to notify them if anyone comes in with electric shock injuries, and said personal items left at the scene also could help them identify a suspect.

Bombing suspects' mother under scrutiny

Associated Press

BOSTON — In photos of her as a younger woman, Zubeidat Tsarnaeva wears a low-cut blouse and has her hair teased like a 1980s rock star. After she arrived in the U.S. from Russia in 2002, she went to beauty school and did facials at a suburban day spa.

But in recent years, people noticed a change. She began wearing a hijab and cited conspiracy theories about 9/11 being a plot against Muslims.

Now known as the angry and grieving mother of the Boston Marathon bombing suspects, Tsarnaeva is drawing increased attention after federal officials say Russian authorities intercepted her phone calls, including one in which she vaguely discussed jihad with her elder son. In another, she was recorded talking to someone in Russia who is under FBI investigation in an unrelated case, U.S. officials said.

Tsarnaeva insists she's no terrorist, just someone who found a deeper spirituality. She insists her sons — Tamerlan, who was killed in a gunfight with police, and Dzhokhar, who was wounded and captured — are innocent.

"It's all lies and hypocrisy," she told The Associated Press in Dagestan. "I'm sick and tired of all this nonsense that they make up about me and my children. People know me as a regular person, and I've never been mixed up in any criminal intentions, especially any linked to terrorism."

Amid the scrutiny, Tsarnaeva and her ex-husband, Anzor Tsarnaev, say they have put off the idea of any trip to the U.S. to reclaim their elder son's body or try to visit Dzhokhar in jail. Tsarnaev told the AP on Sunday he was too ill to travel to the U.S. Tsarnaeva faces a 2012 shoplifting charge in a Boston suburb, though it was unclear whether that was a deterrent.

Associated Press

Zubeidat Tsarnaeva, the mother of the two Boston bombing suspects, speaks at a news conference Thursday as the suspects' father, Anzor Tsarnaev listens in Makhachkala, Dagestan. After previously saying they might travel to the U.S. for their son's sake, the two have put off plans to come here.

Tsarnaeva arrived in the U.S. in 2002, settling in a working-class section of Cambridge, Mass. With four children, Anzor and Zubeidat qualified for food stamps and were on and off public assistance benefits for years. The large family squeezed itself into a third-floor apartment.

Zubeidat took classes at the Catherine Hinds Institute of Esthetics, before becoming a state-licensed aesthetician. Anzor, who had studied law, fixed cars.

By some accounts, the family was tolerant.

Bethany Smith, a New Yorker who befriended Zubeidat's two daughters, said in an interview with Newsday that when she stayed with the family for a month in 2008 while she looked at colleges, she was welcomed even though she was Christian and had tattoos.

Zubeidat said she and Tamerlan began to turn more deeply into their Muslim faith about five years ago after being influenced by a family friend, named "Misha."

One client of Zubeidat's, Alyssa Kilzer, wrote that Tsarnaeva was a loving and supportive mother, but that she stopped visiting the family's home for spa treatments in late 2011 or early 2012 when, during one session, she "started quoting a conspiracy theory, telling me that she thought 9/11 was purposefully created by the American government to make America hate Muslims."

"It's real," Tsarnaeva said, according to Kilzer. "My son knows all about it. You can read on the Internet."

A man holds up a photograph of his missing relative Sunday as they plead for help at the site where the garment factory building collapsed Wednesday in Savar, near Dhaka, Bangladesh. The death toll is expected to rise, but it is already the deadliest tragedy to hit Bangladesh's garment industry, which is worth $20 billion annually.

Owner of collapsed building arrested; fire breaks out in rubble

Associated Press

SAVAR, Bangladesh The fugitive owner of an illegally constructed building that collapsed and killed at least 377 people was captured Sunday by a commando force as he tried to flee into India. At the disaster site, meanwhile, fire broke out in the wreckage and forced authorities to suspend the search for survivors temporarily.

Mohammed Sohel Rana was arrested in the western Bangladesh border town of Benapole, said Jahangir Kabir Nanak, junior minister for local government. Rana was brought back by helicopter to the capital of Dhaka where he faced charges of negligence.

Rana's capture was announced by loudspeaker at the disaster site, drawing cheers and applause from those awaiting the outcome of a continuing search-and-rescue operation for survivors of Wednesday's collapse.

Many of those killed were workers at clothing factories in the building, known as the Rana Plaza, and the collapse was the deadliest disaster to hit the garment industry in Bangladesh.

Mohammed Sohel Rana, the fugitive owner of an illegally constructed building that collapsed last week in Bangladesh, killing some 377 people, is paraded by Rapid Action Battalion commandoes for the media Sunday in Dhaka, Bangladesh. Rana was arrested near the border, just as he was about to flee into India's West Bengal state.

The fire that broke out late Sunday night sent smoke pouring from the piles of shattered concrete and halted some of the rescue efforts — including a bid to free a woman who was found trapped in the rubble.

The blaze was caused by sparks as rescuers tried to cut through a steel rod to reach the woman, said a volunteer, Syed Al-Amin Roman. At least three rescuers were injured in the fire, he said.

Officials believe the fire is likely to have killed the trapped woman, said army spokesman Shahinul Islam.

Police: Italian shooter targeted politicians

Associated Press

ROME — In the very moments Italy's new coalition government was being sworn in, ending months of political paralysis in a country hoping to revive a bleak economy, a middle-aged unemployed bricklayer opened fire Sunday in the square outside the premier's office, seriously wounding two policemen, authorities said.

The alleged gunman from Calabria, a southern region plagued by joblessness and organized crime, told investigators he wanted to shoot politicians. But finding none in the square, he instead shot at Carabinieri paramilitary police.

A bullet pierced one of the policemen in the neck, passing through his spinal column, doctors said. The other one was shot in the leg and suffered a fracture.

The newly sworn-in interior minister, Angelino Alfano, said a preliminary investigation indicated the shooting, which also slightly injured a pregnant bystander, amounted to a "tragic criminal gesture of a 49-year-old unemployed" man.

"The symbolism is there," said Guglielmo Epifani, a top official in Premier Enrico Letta's center-left Democratic Party, during a state TV interview. The political world "must highlight its responsibility during the crisis before the country."

Al-Jazeera, nine others suspended

BAGHDAD — Iraqi authorities suspended the operating licenses of pan-Arab broadcaster Al-Jazeera and nine Iraqi TV channels on Sunday after accusing them of escalating sectarian tension.

The suspensions, which took effect immediately, appeared to target mainly Sunni channels known for criticizing Prime Minister Nouri al-Malik's government. Apart from Al-Jazeera, the decision affected eight Sunni and one Shiite channels.

Iraqi viewers will still be able to watch the channels, but the suspensions issued by Iraq's Communications and Media Commission state that if the 10 stations try to work on Iraqi territory they will face legal action from security forces. The decree essentially prevents news crews from the stations from reporting on activities in Iraq.

Bombs target Pakistani politicians

PARACHINAR, Pakistan — Taliban bombs targeting politicians in northwestern Pakistan on Sunday killed 11 people, the latest in a series of attacks meant to disrupt next month's parliamentary election, police said.

The wave of political violence has killed at least 60 people in recent weeks, and many of the attacks have been directed at candidates from secular parties opposed to the Taliban.

Pakistani Taliban spokesman Ahsanullah Ahsan claimed responsibility for the three attacks, plus two others against secular parties in the southern port city of Karachi on Saturday that killed four people and wounded more than 40.

Duke wins in loaded Super Late Model race

Major crash in Figure 8 feature at Speedway

SEAN ARNOLD
Correspondent

INVERNESS — Fort Lauderdale's T.J. Duke won the Super Late Model feature in wire-to-wire fashion on his first night at the Citrus County Speedway this season, before a major crash into the wall at the No. 2 turn resulted in three black flags, a disqualification and five departures — but no injuries — in the first lap of the Figure 8 feature in Inverness on Saturday.

Duke's winning effort in his new No. 82 came against a strong field that included Florida United Promoters Series leader Wayne Anderson, and outlasted bids from Lakeland's Chris Fontaine and, later, Steven Dorer, also of Lakeland. Dorer advanced from sixth to second between laps 5 and 35 in the 50-lap event to finish within half a car-length of Duke with a last-second push toward the checkered flag.

"I really appreciate Steve (Dorer) running me like that," Duke said of the Lakeland driver's sportsmanship on the track. "He ran me real clean at the end of the race. It was my first time in the car. I had a blast."

Inverness' Herb Neumann Jr. — second in points behind Dorer this season — arrived from the middle of the field to end up in third place, while Anderson, of Wildwood, finished fourth. Lecanto's Dale Sanders (fourth in points) came in sixth, one spot behind Lake Panasoffkee's Todd Brown (third in points).

Bushnell's Chris Allen built on his point lead in the Modified Mini Stock division by collecting his second feature win of the season. Allen (three heat wins) took over first shortly after a lengthy red flag delay following a pile up in the middle of the track near turn 2 involving Homosassa's Wayne Heater, Crystal River's Phil Edwards and Hernando Beach's Leroy Moore. The reset was most costly for Ocala's Richard Kuhn, who had a substantial lead at the time of the crash.

Brooksville's James Ellis moved into second on lap 16 and stayed put for the remainder, and Palmato's Nick Nerimade made some passes in the final seven laps to capture third place.

Floral City's Dora Thorne was wire-to-wire in picking up her first win of the season in the Street Stock class. Thorne maintained a strong hold on her front position throughout, despite her No. 48 giving her trouble on turns.

"It was a little bit loose and it only got worse," Thorne said. "That was one of the most vigorous workouts I've had in a while. I was just the lucky one tonight."

Winter Garden's James Peters finished a solid second behind Thorne, while point-leader Curtis Flanagan, of Inverness, got by Brooksville's J.D. Goff on the final lap for a third-place finish.

In Pure Stocks, Winter Garden's Carl Peters made a triumphant return to the Citrus track with his first feature victory of the season. He took over

Rift repaired, Little League honors founder Carl Stotz

Associated Press

SOUTH WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. — The decades-long rift that separated Little League Baseball's founder from his beloved program once seemed as wide as the distance from home plate to straightaway center field.

Those differences appear to have finally been put to rest.

More than 20 years after the death of founder Carl Stotz, his family has loaned artifacts to Little League's museum that tell stories of how the most well-known youth sports organizations in the world came to be.

The first home plate, hand-carved by Stotz out of a piece of black rubber, used in the first Little League in 1939. The first catcher's mask. The first first-base bag, sewn by Stotz's sister.

"I don't know if you can ever fully say that you're healed from something that has lasted so long," Little League president Stephen Keener said last week at a news conference announcing the new additions at the museum in South Williamsport. "What I would say is that we have a terrific relationship today with the Stotz family."

A relationship slowly repaired especially over the last 15 years. A statue of Stotz was dedicated in 2001 on the grounds of the sprawling Little League complex, which is home to the World Series each August.

Keener called the family's loan of memorabilia, and the museum exhibit, an important step.

"We've certainly come a long way," he said.

Stotz's daughter, Karen Stotz Myers, represented the family in announcing the exhibit at the renovated museum, which is scheduled to re-open in June. "I know that my father was really not bitter," she said. "His main

NFL Draft light on glamour

Associated Press

Minnesota went all in with three first-round picks.

Super Bowl champion Baltimore went for replacements for Ray Lewis and Ed Reed.

The New York Jets added to their quarterback uncertainty by taking Geno Smith in the second round.

Teams loaded up on linemen, making the big and beefy guys this year's stars.

The 2013 NFL draft was light on glamour at the skill positions, but heavy on intrigue (when would Manti Te'o go?) and burly bodies able to either get after or protect all those pricey passers.

Denver Broncos boss John Elway called the draft "deep in the trenches.

"It wasn't sexy, but there were a lot of good football players in this draft, he said. "It was deep in the other-than-glitzy positions."

The first round included 18 linemen, one quarterback and, for the first time since 1963, no running backs.

"That's a lot of love for the big boys up front, which we usually don't get," said No. 1 overall pick Eric Fisher, an offensive tackle from Central Michigan taken by the Kansas City Chiefs.

Here's a breakdown:

Valiant Vikings

Nobody made more noise in this year's draft than the Vikings.

Coming of a surprising run to the playoffs spearheaded by MVP Adrian Peterson, they became the first team since the Rams in 2001 to have three first-round picks. They traded four selections to New England to move up and take Tennessee receiver Cordarrelle Patterson after grabbing Florida defensive tackle Sharrif Floyd and Florida State cornerback Xavier Rhodes.

That's pushing all your chips into the center of the table.

"I don't think it could've worked out any better for the caliber of players we got coming into our program," Vikings GM Rick Spielman said after addressing three of his four major needs in a dizzying 30-minute span. "I'm very excited."

When the Vikings finally got back on the clock Saturday,

Price finally earns first win

Associated Press

CHICAGO — David Price struck out nine in winning for first time this season, Ben Zobrist hit a go-ahead RBI single in a three-run eighth spurred by Alex Rios' error and the Tampa Bay Rays beat the Chicago White Sox 8-3 on Sunday.

The 2012 AL Cy Young Award winner allowed three runs and six hits in seven innings. The Rays lost all five of Price's five previous starts this year and were the second team to lose in the first five starts by a reigning Cy Young winner. The Minnesota Twins lost in Frank Viola's first seven games in 1989.

Price (1-2) walked two and threw 119 pitches.

Jose Lobaton and Matt Joyce each homered for Tampa Bay, which improved to 4-9 on the road.

Zobrist also had an RBI single in the ninth and Evan Longoria added more insurance with a double to score Zobrist.

Paul Konerko hit a two-run home run for Chicago, which is 1-5 against left-handed starters.

The Rays took advantage of a key error by Rios, the right fielder, in the big eighth inning.

Sean Rodriguez led off the eighth with a single off White Sox reliever Nate Jones (0-2) and advanced to second on a wild pitch. One out later, he scored on Zobrist's single to break a 3-all tie. With two outs and bases loaded, Ryan Roberts hit a shallow fly to right, Rios came charging in, but he had the ball pop out of his mitt, allowing two runs to score and giving the Rays a 6-3 lead.

Yankees complete sweep

Stanton homers twice to help Marlins beat Cubs

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Lyle Overbay sent a knuckleball from R.A. Dickey into the right field bullpen for a go-ahead, two-run homer in the seventh inning that was caught on the fly by Yankees reliever David Robertson, and New York beat the Toronto Blue Jays 3-2 Sunday for a four-game sweep.

Brennan Boesch homered in the second off Dickey (2-4), pitching in New York for the first time since getting his 20th win for the New York Mets last September.

Dickey allowed a single to Overbay later in the second, then retired 13 of his next 14 batters around a walk. Travis Hafner singled leading off the seventh and, with two outs, Overbay hit his third home run of the season — one more than his total last year.

AMERICAN LEAGUE
Red Sox 6, Astros 1

BOSTON — John Lackey returned from the disabled list and pitched six solid innings, David Ortiz drove in two more runs and the Boston Red Sox matched a team record with their 18th win in April by beating the Houston Astros 6-1 for a four-game sweep.

Lackey (1-1) missed all of last season recovering from Tommy John surgery and went on the DL after leaving his first start this year. He allowed five hits, struck out four and walked two. The two walks came with two outs in the first and cost Lackey his only run.

Bud Norris (3-3) struck out six for Houston.

Royals 9, Indians 0

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jeremy Guthrie kept the Indians off-balance, Alcides Escobar and Alex Gordon homered and the Kansas City Royals routed Cleveland 9-0 to open the first day-night doubleheader in the history of Kauffman Stadium.

Guthrie (3-0) allowed six hits over 6 2/3 innings for his 16th consecutive start without a loss, tying the Royals' record set by Paul Splittorf from Aug. 13, 1977-April 22, 1978.

Justin Masterson (4-2) allowed seven runs in 6 1/3 innings for the Indians.

Twins 5, Rangers 0

MINNEAPOLIS — Kevin Correia pitched eight sharp innings, Justin Morneau homered and the Minnesota Twins beat the Texas Rangers 5-0.

The Rangers lost consecutive games for the first time this season.

Correia (3-1) gave up six hits, struck out two and walked one. He allowed only one runner to reach third base while lowering his ERA to 2.23.

Mariners 2, Angels 1

SEATTLE — Jason Bay and Michael Morse hit solo home runs, leading the Seattle Mariners over the Los Angeles Angels 2-1.

The Mariners won three of four from the Angels over the weekend to earn their first series victory of the year.

Bay tied it in the seventh with his second homer, connecting on the first pitch of the inning from Jason Vargas (0-3).

Morse put Seattle ahead in the eighth against Vargas, hitting his seventh home run into the Angels' bullpen.

Athletics 9, Orioles 8, 10 inn.

OAKLAND, Calif. — Third baseman Manny Machado made a throwing error in the 10th inning and the Oakland Athletics completed their comeback, beating the Baltimore Orioles 9-8.

Down 5-0 in the sixth, the A's tied it at 8 on Yoenis Cespedes' two-run homer with one out in the ninth.

The Athletics ended a four-game losing streak and prevented Baltimore from a four-game sweep.

NATIONAL LEAGUE
Marlins 6, Cubs 4

MIAMI — Giancarlo Stanton homered twice and drove in four runs, and the Miami Marlins beat the Chicago Cubs 6-4 to avert a four-game series sweep.

Ricky Nolasco (2-2) gave up three runs in seven innings and retired the final 15 batters he faced. The Marlins improved to 6-19, still worst in the majors, and 3-10 at home.

Stanton waited 65 at-bats to hit his first homer Saturday, then hit another in the first inning off Carlos Villanueva to put Miami ahead 2-1.

Phillies 5, Mets 1

NEW YORK — Ryan Howard snapped a seventh-inning tie with a pinch-hit double, Cole Hamels earned his first win of the season and the Philadelphia Phillies took advantage of a crucial Mets error to beat New York 5-1 and finish a three-game sweep.

Freddy Galvis homered, Chase Utley had an RBI single and Hamels (1-3) overcame six walks, which matched his career high. The left-hander held the Mets to two hits and struck out eight over six innings in his fourth consecutive solid outing.

Reds 5, Nationals 2

WASHINGTON — Tony Cingrani struck out a career-high 11 — including four in one inning — while pitching two-hit ball through the sixth, and the Cincinnati Reds beat the Washington Nationals 5-2 to avoid a four-game sweep.

Brandon Phillips had a two-run single as the Reds (14-12) improved to a major league-worst 2-9 on the road.

Cingrani (2-0) pitched three perfect innings before Denard Span reached base to lead off the fourth — on a strikeout and wild pitch.

Pirates 9, Cardinals 0

ST. LOUIS — Rookie Jeff Locke pitched seven innings of three-hit ball and Russell Martin had two of Pittsburgh's four home runs in a 9-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals that gave the Pirates a series win and the NL Central lead.

Jones had three hits and John McDonald added an RBI double for Pittsburgh, which ended rookie Shelby Miller's streak of 14 scoreless innings at home to start the season. The Pirates have won nine of 12 overall.

Locke (3-1) has worked 13 scoreless innings while allowing five hits his last two starts.

Miller (3-2) struggled to put away hitters and was taken out after 113 pitches and giving up two homers in 5 2/3 innings.

Dodgers 2, Brewers 0

LOS ANGELES — Clayton Kershaw retired 18 consecutive batters and struck out 12 in eight dominant innings, Carl Crawford homered twice against Kyle Lohse and the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Milwaukee Brewers 2-0.

Kershaw (3-2) scattered four hits and didn't walk a batter while lowering his ERA to 1.73. The 2011 Cy Young Award winner hasn't allowed more than three earned runs in any of his last 18 starts — the longest active streak in the majors.

Lohse (1-2) gave up five hits and no walks while striking out four.

Diamondbacks 4, Rockies 2

PHOENIX — Gerardo Parra tripled and scored twice, and Josh Wilson had a run-scoring double to help lead the Arizona Diamondbacks to a 4-2 win over the Colorado Rockies.

Rockies All-Star shortstop Troy Tulowitzki was lifted in the bottom of the third inning because of a strained left shoulder.

Patrick Corbin threw five scoreless innings before tiring in his final inning-plus. Corbin (3-0) allowed two runs on nine hits over 6 2/3 innings and struck out five.

J.J. Putz pitched the ninth for his fifth save for the Diamondbacks.

Colorado has two wins in last eight games after opening the season 13-4.

Padres 6, Giants 4

SAN DIEGO — Chase Headley, Nick Hundley and Alexi Amarista homered off Ryan Vogelsong and the San Diego Padres beat San Francisco 6-4 for their first three-game sweep of the Giants since May 2010.

Headley had three hits and Amarista scored three runs for the Padres, who've won four straight.

The defending World Series champion Giants lost their season-high fifth straight game.

Interleague
Tigers 8, Braves 3

DETROIT — Miguel Cabrera's three-run homer in the seventh inning broke the game open, and the Detroit Tigers finished off a three-game sweep of the Atlanta Braves with an 8-3 victory.

Austin Jackson and Omar Infante also homered for the Tigers, and Doug Fister (4-0) struck out eight in seven innings on a rainy night at Comerica Park.

Mike Minor (3-2) allowed a three-run homer to Jackson in the third, and although the Braves came back to tie it, Cabrera doubled and scored in the sixth to make it 4-3.

Infante hit a solo shot in the seventh, and Cabrera added an opposite-field homer off reliever Cory Gearrin.

Atlanta has lost four straight and is 3-8 since a 12-1 start.

on lap 4 in a 20-lap race that included plenty of bumping-and-running like the night's other events, but was without a single caution.

Inverness' Jason Waller battled hard with Floral City points-leader Karlin Ray (third place), Homosassa's Camron Ray (fourth) and Inverness' Mike Autenrieth to get second place.

"The competition's really stepped up in this class from a couple of years ago," Peters said." When the competition steps up, you've got to step up."

In a Figure 8 feature (Pure and Street Stocks) that included a scare in its opening moments, Brooksville's Pnut Higginbotham overcame a fierce challenge from Ocala's Jimmy Kruse to prevail in wire-to-wire fashion.

"Kruse drove me good and clean," Higginbotham said. "He bumped me a little just to let me know he was back there."

Floral City's Deric Sharrone received a disqualification from the lap 1 crash that involved Sharrone, fellow Floral City drivers Thomas Peet and Eric Sharrone, as well as Brooksville's Travis Nichols and Shannon Lengell, leaving all five out of the race while sparking tempers between drivers.

The Open Wheel Modified, Sportsman, Pure Stock, Mini Stock and Pro-Challenge classes are joined in this Saturday's lineup by the Daytona Antique Auto Racing Association's Southern Vintage Series.

DRAFT

Spielman addressed his other big need by grabbing Penn State linebackers Gerald Hodges in the fourth round and Michael Mauti in the seventh.

With that, Minnesota served notice that they're coming after Aaron Rodgers and everyone else in 2013.

QB conundrum

The Jets are testing out the old saying you can never have too many quarterbacks.

After Buffalo surprised nearly everyone by picking Florida State's EJ Manuel as the only QB in the first round (at No. 16), the Jets pulled off their own stunner by selecting West Virginia's Geno Smith in the second round, at No. 39.

Coach Rex Ryan's three-ring circus at QB now includes a half dozen passers. The others are Mark Sanchez, David Garrard, Tim Tebow, Greg McElroy and Matt Simms.

"I hope they're all thinking, 'Hey, I have an opportunity to go win a job,'" Jets offensive coordinator Marty Mornhinweg said.

Smith certainly is.

"My goal is to be a franchise quarterback," he said. "But as of now, there's lots of work to be done."

Smith put up great numbers in college but also had accuracy issues and fumbled the ball an alarming 32 times, and scouts also questioned his overall skills and leadership in some pre-draft reports.

"You know what?" Smith said, "Critics don't have a pick."

Super selections

Will the Harbaugh brothers be making plans for another family reunion in February? Both Baltimore and San Francisco restocked for another Super Bowl run.

Ravens GM Ozzie Newsome launched a defensive makeover after Lewis retired and Reed led a free agency exodus following their title, signing with Houston. Newsome used his first four picks and six of 10 selections on defenders, beginning with safety Matt Elam and linebacker Arthur Brown, who have some huge cleats to fill.

San Francisco's 11-player haul included defensive back Eric Reid, defensive end Tank Carradine and tight end Vance McDonald, but the most intriguing pick was that of fourth-rounder Marcus Lattimore. The South Carolina running back suffered a career-threatening right knee injury last season just one year after tearing ligaments in his left knee.

San Francisco took a similar gamble several years ago when it spent a third-round selection on Frank Gore, who had suffered torn ligaments in each of his knees a year apart at the University of Miami, but has made the Pro Bowl four times and is the franchise's all-time leading rusher.

"I love the aggressive mental approach he has taken through this whole process, but we're going to slow down the aggressive physical things and make sure Marcus is 100 percent healthy before he goes out there on the field," 49ers coach Jim Harbaugh said. "If he doesn't play this year, then he doesn't play this year."

Remaking rosters

The heavy turnover after last season — eight new coaches and seven new general managers — meant there were plenty of newbies making draft decisions.

Led by the Chiefs new brain trust of coach Andy Reid and GM John Dorsey, eight of the top 11 picks were made by teams that had turnover at the decision-making positions as the Jaguars, Eagles, Browns, Cardinals, Bills, Jets and Chargers also had a first-year coach and/or general manager.

Of those, the biggest splash was made by the Bills when GM Buddy Nix gave new coach Doug Marrone a new QB by trading out of the eighth spot and selecting Florida State's Manuel.

Former Gator star Horschel claims first PGA Tour victory

Associated Press

AVONDALE, La. — Billy Horschel shot an 8-under 64 in the final round of the Zurich Classic, maintaining his composure through a pair of weather delays for his first-career PGA Tour victory on Sunday.

The 26-year-old former Florida Gator began the day two shots behind third-round leader Lucas Glover and surged into the lead with six straight birdies after the first weather delay. He finished at 20 under, narrowly holding off Shell Houston Open winner D.A. Points, who shot a final-round 65 to finish one shot behind.

The second delay happened before Horschel could take his second shot on the 18th hole, giving him 50 minutes to reflect on what was at stake — $1.19 million and a two-year exemption.

Kyle Stanley shot a 5-under 67 to finish third, while Chinese 14-year-old amateur Guan Tianlang finished 71st after making his second cut in two PGA events, the first coming famously at the Masters.

Horschel sealed the win with a 27-foot birdie putt on 18, after which he pumped his arms and screamed in triumph, before sinking into a crouch and briefly pulling his cap over his face as the crowd roared.

Although Horschel had never won on the Tour, he had been playing the best golf of his young career lately, with three top 10 finishes in his past three tournaments — tying for second in Houston, tying for third in San Antonio and tying for ninth in Hilton Head Island, S.C., a week ago.

He has also made a PGA Tour-leading 23 straight cuts, and had already earned $1.3 million this year. Now he has nearly doubled that, thanks to a final round which tied a single-round course record that has been matched several times, including by Rickey Barnes in Thursday's first round.

Horschel began the day at 12-under, two shots behind third-round Glover. He began to make his move up the leaderboard with his first birdie on the fifth hole.

His string of six straight birdies ran from seventh through 12th holes move him to 7-under on the round and 19-under for the tournament.

On the par-5 seventh hole, Horschel chipped from about 89 feet to within 2 feet to set up his first birdie putt. He made a 9-foot birdie putt on eight and then hit a 191-yard tee shot about 4 feet from the pin to set up a birdie on the par-3 ninth.

He made a birdie putts from 13 1/2 feet on 10, from 6 feet on 11 and 15 1/2 feet on 12.

Horschel bogeyed 15th hole after twice hitting in the right rough to fall back into a tie with Points.

But Horschel then birdied 16 by hitting a 109-yard approach within 5 feet, putting him back at 19-under and restoring his one-shot lead.

Points, playing in the same crowd-pleasing group as Horschel, birdied the 10th through 13th holes to stay on Horschel's heels. However, he left a 98-yard approach shot 30 feet short and left on 16, where he lost the lead.

Glover, the 2009 U.S. Open winner who was looking for his first Tour victory in about two years, took a two-shot lead into the final round and opened with five pars — narrowly missing birdie when his put rimmed out on the first hole. He was about to line up a birdie putt from 27 feet when a horn sounded, signaling nearby lightning. Play was halted immediately and a downpour ensued shortly after, causing a 2-hour, 54-minute delay.

Glover two-putted for par when play resumed, then struggled on the seventh hole, hitting his drive to an uphill lie in the rough on the edge of a pot bunker. That forced him to lay up, and he chipped over the green and wound up with a bogey on a hole that many players birdied or eagled.

That dropped him out of the lead for good, and he wound up finishing tied for fourth with Bobby Gates, five shots off the lead.

Horschel at Florida

- In his four years at the University of Florida, Billy Horschel was named to the All-SEC four times, won the 2009 SEC individual title, and was a four-time All-American. He became the fifth player in program history to earn All-America accolades four times in his collegiate career.
- Horschel becomes the second Gator to win on the PGA Tour this year. In January, former Florida golfer Brian Gay won the Humana Challenge. It was his fourth win on tour.

Sluman and Faxon win Legends of Golf event

SAVANNAH, Ga. — After finishing second twice, Jeff Sluman finally won the Liberty Mutual Insurance Legends of Golf with a new teammate.

Sluman, a two-time runner-up with Craig Stadler at the Champions Tour's team event, partnered with Brad Faxon for a one-stroke victory at the Club at Savannah Harbor.

The duo had five birdies in a seven-hole stretch in the middle of their round to get to 23-under and made par on their final four holes to hold on for the win.

Gene Sauers, playing in his hometown, teamed with Kenny Perry to finish tied for second with Fred Funk and Mike Goodes at 22-under.

Rumford wins playoff to take Ballantine's title

SEOUL, South Korea — Australia's Brett Rumford eagled the first hole of a three-way playoff to win the Ballantine's Championship in South Korea.

Rumford was leading by two shots when he double-bogeyed No. 17. He holed a 10-foot par putt at the last to finish at 11-under 277 and force a playoff with Marcus Fraser of Australia and Peter Whiteford of Scotland.

Rumford then holed a 4-foot eagle to earn the victory.

Inbee Park wins North Texas LPGA

IRVING, Texas — Inbee Park shot a bogey-free 4-under 67 on Sunday to win the inaugural North Texas LPGA Shootout by a stroke over Carlota Ciganda, whose chance for a first LPGA victory was wiped out in a two-hole stretch.

Park, the world's No. 1 women's player, finished at 13-under 271 for her third victory this season and fifth in her last 18 starts. The 24-year-old South Korean sank a 4-foot birdie putt on the par-5 18th hole.

Nadal claims 8th Barcelona Open

Associated Press

BARCELONA, Spain — Rafael Nadal won the Barcelona Open for the eighth time Sunday, defeating Nicolas Almagro 6-4, 6-3 for his fourth title of the year.

This latest victory, with next month's French Open approaching, is a promising sign that Nadal is getting back to full strength from a knee injury that sidelined him since last summer

"I am very happy," he said. "It has been an important week for me to win here again and a great source of joy after everything I have been through."

After trailing 3-0 in the first set, Nadal found his form and broke his fellow Spaniard in three of his next four service games to take command in a final played in a drizzle.

He has made six straight finals since returning from his knee injury. This title, the 54th of his career, comes one week after his eight-year reign at Monte Carlo ended with a loss to top-ranked Novak Djokovic.

Nadal won the Barcelona Open from 2005-09 but did not play in 2010 because of a knee injury. He has won every year since. He has won 39 straight matches on the red clay at Real Club de Tenis, his last loss coming 10 years ago to Spain's Davis Cup captain, Alex Corretja.

Almaro, ranked 12th, has lost all 10 of his matches to Nadal.

Sharapova beats Li in Porsche GP final

STUTTGART, Germany — Maria Sharapova beat Li Na 6-4, 6-3 to successfully defend her WTA Porsche Grand Prix title in a final between the last two French Open champions.

The top-seeded Russian swept to her second title of the year after winning in Indian Wells, Calif. She became the first player to retain the Stuttgart title since Lindsey Davenport in 2005. This was her 29th career title.

Sharapova was using the Stuttgart tournament for her clay-court debut this season, as she did last season when she went on to capture the French Open.

The second-seeded Li had a double-fault on match point, with another one earlier in the final game.

The Bruins, who could have won the Northeast Division and earned a No. 2 seed with a win, finish fourth; they will play Toronto in the first round.

The game was originally scheduled for April 15, the day of the Boston Marathon bombings. It was the only NHL game on Sunday, with the rest of the league wrapping up the regular season by Saturday.

HISTORY

goal in his whole life was that boys get a chance to play baseball, and that happened."

It certainly did.

According to Little League, more than 30 million people in more than 100 countries have played small ball. More than 170,000 teams just started swinging the bats this season.

It began with an idea by Stotz 75 years ago. The first pitch for the very first league was thrown the following summer on June 6, 1939, on a dusty diamond in Williamsport. Out of that first game, Little League grew in popularity.

With that popularity grew a need for financing. Little League became incorporated in the late 1940s, with a board of directors, legally taking it out of Stotz's hands.

Simmering differences about the direction of the program came to a boil after Peter J. McGovern, a U.S. Rubber executive from Detroit, took over as the organization's president in 1952.

A messy split spilled into the courts. Stotz severed ties with Little League in 1956, returning to his very first league — though a court order prohibited him from using the term "Little League" anymore. In the book "Play Ball!" written by now-Little League vice president Lance Van Auken, Stotz Myers said her father settled out of court because he didn't want to drag his friends into the legal entanglement.

Stotz, who later went on to serve as a tax collector, stayed in Williamsport, where he raised his family. He had many loyal, local supporters and hard feelings in the community lingered for decades.

Stotz Myers said the rift did affect the family.

"For many years, Little League didn't acknowledge that he was the founder," Stotz Myers said after the museum news conference. "When my children started to play Little League (locally), their friends told them they were liars when they said (Stotz) started Little League."

Stotz died in 1992. A new era of goodwill seemingly started in the late 1990s after current president Keener struck up a relationship with the family. At about the same time, Little League, which was now headquartered across the Susquehanna River in South Williamsport, was considering doubling its field for the World Series from eight to 16 teams, and building a second stadium.

Plans were made to erect a statue to honor Stotz. Though he never visited the current home of the World Series in South Williamsport, his wife, Grayce Stotz, dedicated the statue at the complex in 2001. Mrs. Stotz died in 2006.

Then, Little League decided to renovate its museum two years ago. In talking with Little League, Stotz Myers thought it was an appropriate time to share items in her father's collection with the museum.

The room where Stotz's memorabilia will be on display includes a black-and-white picture of Stotz, in front of a microphone at an on-field ceremony, with the caption: "The sole founder of Little League shapes the program."

Grayce Stotz is honored too for her contributions to Little League. Among other items to be displayed include a whistle used by Stotz to call the first tryouts, and an early drawing of Little League's keystone emblem.

Stotz Myers credited Keener and Van Auken with taking proactive roles in promoting her father's legacy.

"Seeing the home plate, the base," she said, "reminds me of how much Little League was, and still is, a family affair."

Associated Press

Little League International president Stephen Keener speaks at an April 24 news conference at the Little League museum in South Williamsport, Pa. Little League announced that the family of program founder Carl Stotz loaned artifacts to display at an exhibit.

PHILLIP ALDER
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Stephen Covey, whose most popular book was "The Seven Habits of Highly Effective People," said, "Every human has four endowments: self-awareness, conscience, independent will and creative imagination. These give us the ultimate human freedom: the power to choose, to respond, to change."

Last week, we looked at opener's rebids. This week, we turn to the responder and his power to choose his rebid.

Assuming that the opener has made a minimum suit rebid, the responder divides his hand strength into three brackets: weak, game-invitational and game-forcing. If he is weak (6-9 points), he must rebid at the one-level or in two of a suit already bid by his partner or himself. So, in the given auction with a weak hand, he must pass or bid two spades. Anything else promises more strength.

Here, despite his doubleton club, South should rebid two spades. (Yes, it probably would have worked well if East or West had made a takeout double on the first round.)

West leads the diamond queen. The defenders take the first five tricks, two in diamonds and three in hearts, then exit with a club. How should South continue?

Declarer must play the trump suit without loss. He could cross to his ace, planning to return to the dummy with a club to take a spade finesse on the second round. Or he could finesse immediately.

Since West will have a low singleton spade four times more often than a singleton queen, it is correct to finesse on the first round. When the finesse wins, declarer returns to the board with a club, takes a second spade finesse, and claims.

ANNIE'S MAILBOX

Dear Annie: What should I say to my sister when she makes outrageous claims? For example, she believes the government is spraying poison into the skies and dropping ticks to kill us. She has a huge supply of plastic coffins ready to put our corpses into. She thinks crackpots rapping on YouTube are reliable sources of information.

Sometimes I get through to her with reason and facts, but soon after, she corroborates her misconceptions via other Web "sources." I have too much real life to live to spend time debunking all the links she sends to "prove" her beliefs, but I worry that her paranoia might not be safe if it goes unchecked.

We are both retired, and she spends most of her time on her couch surfing the Web on her smartphone and watching movies. She hardly engages in any physical activity, and her health is suffering. She believes every conspiracy theory out there, and when I don't concur, she thinks I don't respect her intelligence.

Should I just agree with her? Empathize with her feelings of doom? Laugh off the wacky stuff? Change the subject to real-life issues? Please help. — Older Sister

Dear Older Sister: It is pointless to argue with your sister. Instead, please suggest she get a complete checkup. She may be suffering from something as simple as a urinary tract infection, as serious as dementia or as complicated as mental illness. You also can try your local Department on Aging to see whether someone could visit your sister in person and do an evaluation.

Dear Annie: I need advice on how to tactfully uninvite relatives to a gathering. A few weeks ago, I casually mentioned to my husband that I'd like to have a special outing with our sons. It's my youngest boy's birthday, and I suggested an overnight stay at a resort. Along the way, we could stop at my husband's brother's house and have a small cake-and-ice-cream celebration with his brother, sister-in-law and young nephew. The next thing I know, he has invited his brother's family to join us at the resort.

Aside from the fact I wanted this outing to be just the four of us, there is an additional problem. My older son is autistic. My husband and I will have a hard enough time accommodating his needs while trying to have a good time. And my sister-in-law can be rude. She makes nasty remarks when you disagree with her. I want this to be our family time. We can invite the others for a different gathering. How should I tell them it will not work out? — Don't Want To Be Stuck With Them

Dear Don't: Your husband should handle this. After all, it's his brother — not to mention, Hubby was the one who invited them without checking with you. He can say he thinks the overnight stay would be best with just the four of you, and he hopes they will understand the need for family time. But he should add that you are all looking forward to seeing them to celebrate your son's birthday.

Dear Annie: This is for "Concerned," who questioned the appropriateness of displaying his late wife's picture at his granddaughter's wedding.

Not long after we lost our beloved 26-year-old son, two of his good friends were married. Not only did they invite us to the wedding, but by mentioning our son in their wedding program, this wonderful couple made it possible for our son to be part of their special day. There are no words to express how much this meant to us. We also know a young woman who included her late brother in her wedding by holding his picture in her hands when the wedding photographer photographed the wedding party. How blessed "Concerned" is to have such a sensitive and loving granddaughter. — Always Remembering

Heat, Spurs finish off 4-0 sweeps

Associated Press

BOSTON — Jason Terry scored Boston's last nine points as the Celtics weathered a strong comeback by the New York Knicks and avoided being swept with a 97-90 overtime win on Sunday.

Paul Pierce led the Celtics with 29 points as they forced a fifth game in the series, but it was Terry who provided the finishing touches.

In Game 3, he was elbowed by J.R. Smith, and the NBA suspended the Knicks guard for Sunday's game.

New York tied the game 84-84 after trailing by 20 points early in the third quarter. It was 88-all before the Celtics regained control and took the lead for good on a 3-pointer by Terry.

Carmelo Anthony, who led the Knicks with 32 points, hit a short jumper, but Terry connected on a 15-footer with 50 seconds remaining for a 93-90 lead.

After Anthony missed a 3-pointer with 21 seconds to go, Terry was fouled and sank both free throws. He added a layup to close out the game.

Associated Press

Boston Celtics center Kevin Garnett pulls down an offensive rebound Sunday against New York Knicks forward Quentin Richardson, left, and forward Kenyon Martin during the first half in Game 4 of a first-round playoff series in Boston. The Celtics kept their postseason alive with a 97-90 overtime victory.

Heat 88, Bucks 77

MILWAUKEE — Miami's Big Three finally have their sweep.

LeBron James scored 30, Ray Allen had another big game against his old team and the Miami Heat advanced to the Eastern Conference semifinals with an 88-77 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks. It's the first time the Heat have swept a playoff series since James and Chris Bosh joined Dwyane Wade in Miami three years ago.

And the Heat didn't even need Wade to do it. The guard missed only the second postseason game of his career, and first since 2005, with three bone bruises on his right knee.

But the Heat still won handily, winning their fourth straight game by double digits.

Wade will get plenty of time to rest now, too. The Heat will face the winner of the Brooklyn Nets-Chicago Bulls series — Chicago leads 3-1 — but the next round won't begin until Saturday.

Spurs 103, Lakers 82

LOS ANGELES — Tony Parker scored 23 points, and the San Antonio Spurs completed their first-round sweep of the injury-plagued Los Angeles Lakers with a 103-82 victory in Game 4.

Tim Duncan had 11 points and six rebounds for the second-seeded Spurs, who will face the winner of Denver's series with Golden State in the second round. They'll get plenty of rest after flattening the Lakers, who finished without three regular starters in their first opening-round exit since 2007.

In his final game before unrestricted free agency, Dwight Howard scored seven points before getting ejected early in the third quarter for arguing.

Pau Gasol had 16 points for the Lakers, who were swept from the postseason for the second time in three years despite a late courtside appearance by Kobe Bryant on crutches.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Big 10 changing to East and West

PARK RIDGE, Ill. — No more "Legends." And no more "Leaders."

The conference is going with "East" and "West" instead and switching to a nine-game scheduling format after presidents and chancellors approved the moves on Sunday.

The new division alignments will begin in 2014 when Rutgers and Maryland join the conference.

Besides the new division alignment, teams will go from playing eight conference games to nine in 2016.

Indiana, Maryland, Michigan, Michigan State, Ohio State, Penn State and Rutgers will be in the East division. The West will consist of Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, Northwestern, Purdue and Wisconsin.

Schools will play six division games plus two against teams from the other division in 2014 and 2015. In 2016, they'll play three cross-division games.

Indiana and Purdue will meet on an annual basis.

Larkin decides to enter NBA draft

CORAL GABLES — Miami guard Shane Larkin said he will forgo his final two years of college eligibility and enter the NBA draft.

Larkin averaged 14.5 points and 4.6 assists this season for the Hurricanes.

Larkin's decision means Miami will be without its top six scorers from this season when it takes the court next fall.
