Adams: 'Our leaders have failed you'

Commissioner speaks to watchdog group

MIKE WRIGHT
Staff writer

BEVERLY HILLS — Scott Adams isn't slowing down.

Speaking Wednesday before Citrus County's largest coalition of civic and homeowners groups, the freshman commissioner continued to paint a picture of misrepresentation, one in which his fellow commissioners do not have the public's best interest at heart.

"I'm going to stick with the truth," Adams said. "If they choose to do the right thing, that's up to them."

Then he added: "Do I expect them to do the right thing? Absolutely not."

Adams, who took office in November, spoke to about 60 members of the Citrus County Council, a group historically known for being a local government watchdog.

His talk came just a day after county commissioners voted 3-2 to set a public hearing in July for a new fire services fee, which would include $60 for homeowners. Adams and Commissioner Rebecca Bays voted against it.

Adams said he opposes the new fire fee, along with other proposed fees or taxes for law enforcement and stormwater projects.

He said the county can offer "all the services you need" if it eliminated what he said were special-interest programs aimed at helping only a few well-connected people.

His biggest targets are the Port

Officials offer their case for tax/fee combo

Citrus County officials are doing their best to lay bare the essentials of a public safety budget ahead of a July 23 public meeting which will ratify a flat fee on taxpayers and provide for a concurrent adjustment to property taxes.

Jeff Dawsy
Citrus County sheriff.

Wednesday, Sheriff Jeff Dawsy, his top brass, including fire chief Larry Morabito, and County Commission Chairman Joe Meek visited the Chronicle's Editorial Board to talk about the proposed municipal service taxing unit and the municipal service benefit unit.

County commissioners voted 3-2 Tuesday on a resolution to add a $60 fee to residents' tax bills for fire protection services to offset the shortfall caused by Duke Energy's tax dispute. Other fees are proposed for commercial, industrial and vacant land.

The new fee would be paired with current property tax for fire service, but the tax would reduce the millage rate of 0.80 to 0.75. Commissioners Rebecca Bays and Scott Adams voted against the measure.

The taxes and fees are expected to generate about $10 million in revenue.

Dawsy and his team struck a common chord: the importance of a solid public safety system and the need for more personnel and equipment.

Dawsy said Deputy Fire Chief

Meek: All will pay some

CHRIS VAN ORMER
Staff writer

The county's proposed flat fees for fire protection service will raise some residents' taxes while not affecting others, the county commission chairman acknowledged Wednesday.

"In certain instances, people are not going to see an increase," Commissioner Joe Meek told the Chronicle's editorial board. "In certain instances, people are. It depends on what the property appraiser values your house."

commission chairman.

The new flat fee of a proposed $60 per household would join a current property tax for fire service, but tax would decrease from a millage rate of 0.80 to 0.75. One mill is equivalent to $1 of tax for each $1,000 of assessed, nonexempt real property. For example, a house assessed at $100,000 would pay a fire tax of $75 and the additional new flat fee proposed at $60 for the next budget year

Study: Hands-free phone no safer than hand-held

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Dashboard technology that lets drivers text and email with voice commands — marketed as a safer alternative — actually is more distracting than simply talking on a cellphone, a new AAA study found.

Automakers have been trying to excite new-car buyers, especially younger ones, with dashboard infotainment systems that let drivers use voice commands to do things like turning on windshield wipers, posting Facebook messages or ordering pizza. The pitch has been that hands-free devices are safer because they enable drivers to keep their hands on the wheel and their eyes on the road.

But talking on a hands-free phone isn't significantly safer for drivers than talking on a hand-held phone, and using hands-free devices that translate speech into text is the most distracting of all, researchers reported in a study released Wednesday. Speech-to-text systems that enable drivers to send, scroll through, or delete email and text messages required greater concentration by drivers than other potentially distracting activities examined in the study like talking on the phone, talking to a passenger, listening to a book on tape or listening to the radio.

The greater the concentration required to perform a task, the more likely a driver is to develop what researchers call "tunnel vision" or "inattention blindness." Drivers will stop scanning the roadway or ignore their side and rearview mirrors. Instead, they look straight ahead, but fail to see what's in front of them, like red lights and pedestrians.

"People aren't seeing what they need to see to drive. That's the scariest part to me," said Peter Kissinger, president and CEO of the AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety, the group's safety research arm. "Police accident investigative reports are filled with comments like the 'looked, but did not see.' That's what Jim Goodworth was tasked with coming up with developing a comprehensive five-year plan.

"I will tell you right now, we do not have full-time staff at the Citrus Springs station and at 200 (Hernando station). Those stations are staffed entirely by volunteers and the residents are taxpayers too," Dawsy said.

He said since the merger of fire rescue with the sheriff's office nearly two years ago, he has endeavored to bring certain quality of service to the far-flung corners of the county by opening additional stations in DeRosa, Sugarmill Woods and Floral City.

Dawsy said even though the quality of volunteer training in the agency is top-flight, residents near the stations like Citrus Springs also deserve full-time staff to go along with the volunteers that most of the other stations have.

His ideal goal will be to have staffing where two people will be fighting a fire on the inside and three would be outside, two of whom will also be fighting it from the outside and the last one would be handling water supply issues.

Beverly Hills and Inverness Highland stations also are staffed by volunteers.

In the five-year plan and if the taxes and fees are OK'd, the agency seeks to hire eight more people — seven firefighters and an administrator, Goodworth said.

The plan also includes purchase of equipment and gear to replace some of the worn-out equipment they currently possess.

Morabito said it can get cost prohibitive to keep fixing engines that are broken.

"Fifty percent of our engines are over their required use," Goodworth added.

Dawsy also added there is going to be a need for more spending in the next several years to build new fire stations that meet all the modern requirements.

"We already have the plans like some of the stations in Marion County and that's ready to go, but we are going to have to build some ... The station in Inverness is 40 years old," he said.

Meek said providing excellent fire and law enforcement services are two of the most important functions of government.

He said the money from the taxes and fees are going toward a "service everybody needs."

"It is the responsible thing to do as a community," he said.

Citrus project and a medical corridor along County Road 491. Adams said he supports widening the highway to four lanes, but said the county commission's role should stop there.

"The government is trying to create prosperity and I'm not for it," he said. "We're getting a few people out there filthy rich off of it. If it's such a good deal, why isn't private business doing it?"

Adams placed the county's budget woes squarely on the backs of the other commissioners.

"We've got ethical and moral duties to the citizens of Citrus County," he said. "Our leaders have failed you up to this time. I'm going to do my best not to fail you."

Adams said he realizes he's often on the losing end of many 4-1 votes — an improvement, he said, in years prior to his joining the board.

"When you have a board that votes one way, and they preach on being unanimous and unified, believe me there's only one reason you're usually unified and it isn't for the good of the people," he said. "It's the special interests, and that's what took place here in Citrus County."

State BRIEFS

Man executed for prison guard's murder

STARKE — A man who orchestrated a prison van ambush in 1987 in an attempt to free a prisoner has been executed.

William Van Poyck died at 7:24 p.m. Wednesday by injection at the Florida State Prison.

The 58-year-old was convicted of murdering prison guard Fred Griffis. His case garnered international attention because Van Poyck published three books and maintained a blog while on death row.

TALLAHASSEE — A temporary rule making it easier to catch lionfish in Florida waters will soon be permanent.

instead of the current $80.

In addition to the costs for fire protection services, the homeowner would pay a property tax for the county's general fund.

"If you are a higher-valued residence in Pine Ridge or Sugarmill Woods or Citrus Hills or elsewhere in a $200,000 home — $250,000 value — the corresponding reduction in the millage rate may be as much as the $60 fee because the value is so large. So in those cases, you might not see a property tax increase at all," Meek explained. "If your house is valued at $70,000, and you have the exemptions and you are paying right now $10 or $15 into the fire service tax, you'll see a dollar reduction in the fire service tax and a $60 increase in a flat fee. So it depends upon the parcel."

Meek defended the two revenue sources for fire protection as an alternative to raising the overall millage rate even higher than it is expected to be raised.

"Overall, though, it is a fair and equitable way to pay for the service that everybody requires," Meek said. "Whether you live in a $70,000 house or a $200,000 house, you need fire service protection and you need people to show up and you need fire engines to come to your house."

> "We started this year with over $500,000. We'll be lucky if we have $17,000 left in the reserves to pay for next year."
> Jeff Dawsy
> Citrus County sheriff.

Although some residents will see a big rise in what they pay for fire protection, Meek said the county would remain an affordable place to live.

"We're going to make sure that we're not taxing our residents to death. We're going to make sure that our tax burden is not increased substantially," Meek said. "It's a question of how you distribute a real cost that's there."

Sheriff Jeff Dawsy explained how the two fire service revenue sources would work: What the current tax pays for would not overlap with what the new flat fee would cover.

"This is what I visualize that this will be used for," Dawsy said about the current fire service tax. "That pays for the firefighters — the boots on the ground."

Dawsy said the tax was needed for several reasons.

"As our community grows, that funding source grows," Dawsy said. "Whoever the new (commission) chairman is three or four years down the road, when they look at the (tax), that's how they can overcome the increases in retirement, control the increases in health (insurance), and control the increases of adding additional personnel. That's how they need to use this."

Dawsy also said the tax should be used to build a surplus. The current reserve situation, he said, was critical.

"We started this year with over $500,000," Dawsy said. "We'll be lucky if we have $17,000 left in the reserves to pay for next year. If we have one storm, we're done. We're in the red."

The flat fee would start to cover administration, equipment and facilities.

"We have $300,000 in our capital," Dawsy said. "A large fire truck costs $400,000."

The flat fee also "would assist us in looking down the road on structures," Dawsy said.

The first three or four years of the flat fee were designed to replace big-ticket items, such as vehicles, he said. New air packs would be needed in two years at a cost of $600,000.

Wildfire started by lightning

A lightning strike caused a wildfire Tuesday evening on the northeast boundary of the Citrus tract of the Withlacoochee State Forest, according to the Florida Forest Service.

Approximately 30 acres are continuing to burn, and due to the fuel loading and proximity to the communities of Sportsman's Haven, Deer Wood Acres and Country Wide Estates, the service conducted a back-burn operation Wednesday to burn out the vegetation and prevent any further spread of the wildfire.

The service expects to treat 600 acres. Smoke also is expected affect the northern end of County Road 581 and western Inverness.

Search for tourism director refocused

PAT FAHERTY
Staff writer

LECANTO — The search for a new county tourism director has been delayed while the job description is adjusted to reflect the new emphasis on sports tourism.

Late last year, the Tourism Development Council decided to pursue hiring a new executive director with an anticipated annual salary of $80,000.

The position was widely posted, attracting about 100 applications, with some initial interviews.

However, at Wednesday's TDC meeting, assistant county administrator Cathy Pearson expressed disappointment with the applications and suggested considering other directions, possibly taking the money and adding more workers or waiting a few months.

"There is a lot going on right now," she said. "We have to deal with sports tourism and where we are going with that."

Sports tourism, being promoted by the county parks and recreation, has been growing since March, with various tournaments slated. Parks and recreation manager Jeff Gordon reported seven more tournaments are scheduled for fall. He said they are working on additional softball and baseball tournaments and hope to expand with soccer and lacrosse.

Pearson recommended holding off on the executive director position and filling an open position at the visitor's bureau.

Council member Andrew Bartlett was against waiting. "It would look a little counterproductive," he said, "second guessing ourselves."

That launched a long discussion, with comments from chamber of commerce executive director Josh Wooten and Economic Development Council Director Don Taylor and others.

TDC member Frank Peters said the position was very important to implement what the board wants to accomplish.

Commissioner Rebecca Bays, the TDC chairwoman, suggested they pull the job description down and maybe revise it.

Pearson asked for 30 days to go over the strategic plan, assess the duties and tweak the job description. The council gave its consensus to filling the bureau position. Both positions are budgeted and funded by bed tax revenue.

Spotlight on culture

Group wants to show how arts benefit county

NANCY KENNEDY
Staff writer

When we support the arts, the arts support us.

That's the message the Citrus Cultural Alliance (CCA) wants to get out to the community.

The alliance will be offering a brief PowerPoint presentation on three separate dates to those interested in learning how bridging the arts with business, government, organizations and individuals can enhance and improve the community, both culturally and economically.

The dates are:

- Friday, June 28 — noon to 2 p.m., Old Heritage Courthouse, Inverness. (Lunch provided.)
- Friday, July 26 — 12:30 to 2:30 p.m., Florida Artists Gallery, 8219 E. Orange Ave. (County Road 48) in Floral City, west of U.S. 41. (Lunch provided.)
- Thursday, Aug. 15 — 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., College of Central Florida, Lecanto. (Brunch provided.)

RSVP to: 352-746-6721, ext. 6131 or emailwirtm@cf.edu.

"What we'd like to do is bring together government, businesses, cultural arts, organizations and individuals for a better county," CCA president Michele Wirt said.

The Alliance's goals include keeping cultural dollars in Citrus County to improve the community's economic base, enhancing the cultural image of the county and raising money to award grants to local cultural organizations and artists.

"Keeping cultural arts dollars in Citrus County will attract potential residents who are interested in the arts to the area," Wirt said. "We want to show that Citrus County has things to do. Businesses will reap the benefits of this because money spent on local art is returned to the local economy — the arts enhance the bottom line."

She added that local government benefits with increased tax revenues.

One of the CCA's dreams is to do something in Citrus County that's similar to the "Horse Fever" in Marion County, where local artists painted sculptures of horses that are now all over the county.

"Artists get excited and businesses get excited," she said. "If they lease a horse or whatever we would do here in Citrus County, and put it in front of their business, it shows interest in cultural enhancement.

Fire chief: Overlapping blazes stretched resources

A.B. SIDIBE
Staff writer

A firefighter was injured early Tuesday evening as he battled a blaze in Sugarmill Woods, just moments after fire rescue crews were tamping down an overlapping fire in Floral City.

The almost-simultaneous home fires made for some hectic moments, according to Citrus County Sheriff's Office Fire Rescue Chief Larry Morabito.

The fire chief said he ended up assisting with the operation of equipment and crews did not clear the scene of the second fire until 10:24 p.m.

The injured firefighter was transported to Oak Hill Hospital, where he was treated and released, according to Morabito.

Fire crews first responded to a structure fire in Floral City at 3:33 p.m. Firefighters arrived at the home located at 9222 E. Kenosha Court and found fire in the attic.

The fire also reached the garage area, and flames were showing in the roof of the 2,500-square-foot home, according to the report.

The home was 30 percent involved when crews went in to attack the fire. The fire was soon contained and was under control by 3:56 p.m. The scene was cleared at 7:36 p.m. The cause of the fire is believed to be lightning.

Damage to the home is estimated at $95,400.

Meanwhile, across the county at 5:35 p.m., fire crews responded to the scene of another fire at 63 Village Center Circle.

Secondary unit response was delayed due to a previous working fire in Floral City, according to Morabito. Engine 31, of Homosassa Springs, was first on scene, reporting fire and smoke showing from the corner of the roof.

Crews forced entry into the house but found nothing, according to the report.

Special to the Chronicle

Firefighters work on containing a fire at a Sugarmill Woods home on Tuesday evening.

Attempts to access the home from the roof also proved unsuccessful.

Morabito said he arrived on the scene and crews were soon pulled from the building and began attempting to extinguish the fire. There were only three firefighters initially, according to Morabito. He said inadequate staffing initially stymied efforts to fight the second fire.

The fire was declared under control at 7:16 p.m., but was not cleared until 10:24 p.m.

The firefighter was hurt when part of the roof collapsed on firefighters. Morabito said the agency also deployed the big aerial firefighting equipment to battle the blaze. The unoccupied house was declared a total loss at $209,800.

DRIVING

drivers tell them. We used to think they were lying, but now we know that's actually true."

There are about 9 million cars and trucks on the road with infotainment systems, and that will jump to about 62 million vehicles by 2018, AAA spokeswoman Yolanda Cade said, citing automotive industry research. At the same time, drivers tell the AAA they believe phones and other devices are safe to use behind the wheel if they are hands-free, she said.

"We believe there is a public safety crisis looming," Cade said. "We hope this study will change some widely held misconceptions by motorists."

AAA officials who briefed automakers, safety advocates and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration on the study's findings said they want to limit in-vehicle, voice-driven technologies to "core driving tasks." The National Safety Council, responding to the AAA study, also called on industry and policymakers "to reconsider the inclusion of communications and entertainment technology built into vehicles which allow, or even encourage, the driver to engage in these activities at the expense of focusing on driving."

The Alliance of Automobile Manufacturers was skeptical. "We are extremely concerned that it could send a misleading message, since it suggests that hand-held and hands-free devices are equally risky," the association said in a statement.

The automakers' trade group said the AAA study focuses only on the mental distraction posed by using a device and ignores the visual and manual aspects of hand-held versus hands-free systems that are integrated into cars.

Other studies have also compared hand-held and hands-free phone use, finding they are equally risky or nearly so. But a recent National Highway Traffic Safety Administration study of drivers' real world driving experiences found hand-held phone use was less safe than hands-free.

Distracted driving is more widespread in the U.S. than in Europe, according to a survey of drivers about their cellphone and texting habits released by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention earlier this year. More U.S. drivers reported talking on their cellphones behind the wheel than their counterparts in seven European countries. A larger share of U.S. drivers also reported reading or sending text or email messages while driving. Only Portugal's drivers matched those in the U.S. for this distracting habit — 31 percent in both countries.

Researchers at the University of Utah who conducted the study for the AAA measured the brainwaves, eye movement, driving performance and other indicators of 32 university students as they drove and performed a variety of secondary tasks, ranging from listening to music to sending emails. Cameras were mounted inside the car to track drivers' eye and head movements. A device that drivers pressed was used to record their reaction time to red and green lights introduced to their field of vision. Drivers were fitted with a special skull cap to record their brain activity.

The students were tested while not driving, while driving in a simulator and while driving a car on a 3-mile loop through a suburban Salt Lake City neighborhood with stop signs and stoplights. A researcher with a backup braking system accompanied the students in the test car.

One reason using voice commands is so much more distracting for drivers, even though they aren't using their hands, is that they often require more concentration than simply speaking to another person, said University of Utah psychology professor David Strayer, an expert on cognitive distraction and lead author of the study. Talking to a computer requires far greater precision than talking to a person, he said. Otherwise, "Call home" may get you Home Depot.

Synthetic computer voices can be harder to understand than human voices, also requiring more attention. The computers used in the study were exceptionally high-fidelity systems that made no errors, but the systems in cars aren't as good, Strayer said. He said that means the study probably underestimates the concentration required of drivers, and thus the ability of speech-to-text systems to distract them.

Another difference: In phone conversations, a person who is listening will give indications that they agree with what the speaker has said or have heard what was said. Computers don't provide that feedback.

Adams seeks exit audit for Thorpe

CHRIS VAN ORMER
Staff writer

INVERNESS — While questioning budget transfers of grant funds Tuesday as part of the regular business of the county commission, Commissioner Scott Adams said he would like the county to have an exit audit when County Administrator Brad Thorpe retires later this year.

"What I would like, as one commissioner, to have an exit audit when Mr. Thorpe leaves," Adams said, after Thorpe explained the reason for budget transfers. "To have a full audit of our books as an exit audit. That way the next county administrator will know where we're at, and I doubt we've had one in a number of years."

Thorpe replied that an audit had just been completed.

"They are looked at by an outside agency when we get these grant funds," Thorpe said. "Plus we go through a county audit. So there are two independent audits of these funds."

Adams did not make a motion for an exit audit, but he was the only commissioner to vote against approving budget transfers to increase the original budgets for Fleet Management, Neighborhood Stabilization Program and Business Tax through a decrease in other expenditure accounts.

Adams also was alone in opposing an ordinance for the collection of service assessments, proposing the subject be put up for a voters' referendum. A motion for the ordinance, which would create the framework for the board to set future tax assessments, passed 4-1.

■ By a 5-0 vote, the board approved an application to develop property at the former Crystal Glen club house.

■ Also by a 5-0 vote, the board accepted recommended changes to ordinances to meet new requirements of the National Flood Insurance Program and the community rating system.

■ Ken Cheek, director, Water Resources Department, presented the draft master plan to improve the efficiency and reliability of water, waste water and reuse utilities for the board's endorsement to allow it to proceed to a rate consultant. The plan will go before that board at a future workshop.

■ The board unanimously approved a resolution for a water conservation program. It will continue participation with United Health Care. With Commissioner Joe Meek and Commissioner Rebecca Bays leaving the dais to avoid a conflict of interest, the board voted 3-0 to apply for health and financial literacy funding under the United Way for a Real Lasting Change Grant. The board unanimously agreed to execute a certificate of participation for the Edward Byrne Memorial Justice Assistance Grant Program and to establish a maintenance responsibility with the Florida Department of Transportation for the traffic signal replacement at U.S. 41 and East Orange Avenue, Floral City.

■ Commissioners instructed Sherry Anderson, director, Human Resources Department, about the recruitment requirements for the county administrator position.

Cuba girds for rising seas

Associated Press

CAYO COCO, Cuba — After Cuban scientists studied the effects of climate change on this island's 3,500 miles of coastline, their discoveries were so alarming that officials didn't share the results with the public to avoid causing panic.

The scientists projected rising sea levels would seriously damage 122 Cuban towns or even wipe them off the map. Beaches would be submerged, they found, while freshwater sources would be tainted and croplands rendered infertile. In all, seawater would penetrate up to 1.2 miles inland in low-lying areas, as oceans rose nearly 3 feet by 2100.

Climate change may be a matter of political debate on Capitol Hill, but for low-lying Cuba, those frightening calculations have spurred systemic action. Cuba's government has changed course on decades of haphazard coastal development, which threatens sand dunes and mangrove swamps that provide the best natural protection against rising seas.

In recent months, inspectors and demolition crews have begun fanning out across the island with plans to raze thousands of houses, restaurants, hotels and improvised docks in a race to restore much of the coast to something approaching its natural state.

Flamingos walk in a lake May 21 in Cayo Coco, Ciego de Avila, Cuba. Scientists project that rising sea levels would seriously damage or wipe dozens of Cuban towns off the map, submerge beaches, and taint sources of fresh water.

In recent months, crews have begun fanning out across the island with plans to raze thousands of houses, restaurants, hotels and improvised docks.

"The government ... realized that for an island like Cuba, long and thin, protecting the coasts is a matter of national security," said Jorge Alvarez, director of Cuba's government-run Center for Environmental Control and Inspection.

At the same time, Cuba has had to take into account the needs of families living in endangered homes and a $2.5 billion-a-year tourism industry, its top source of foreign income.

Cuba's preparations were on clear display on a recent morning tour of Guanabo, a popular getaway for Havana residents known for its soft sand and gentle waves 15 miles east of the capital.

Where a military barracks had been demolished, a reintroduced sand-stabilizing creeper vine known as beach morning glory is reasserting itself on the dunes.

The demolition nearby of a former swimming school was halted due to the lack of planning, with the building's rubble left as it lay. Now inspectors have to figure out how to fix the mess without doing further environmental damage.

Alvarez said the government has learned from such early mistakes and is proceeding more cautiously. Officials also are also considering engineering solutions, and even determining whether it would be better to simply leave some buildings alone.

Nobel-winning economist Fogel dies

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Robert W. Fogel, a University of Chicago economist whose study of the economics of slavery sparked a furious debate in academia and later helped garner him a Nobel prize, has died. He was 86.

The university announced that Fogel died on Tuesday, reporting that the family said he died after a brief illness.

Fogel wrote 22 books in all — the last one published in April — and, according to the school, was an active faculty member in the Department of Economics and the Booth School of Business who was working on three more books at the time of his death.

Fogel first rose to prominence among economists in the early 1960s when as a Ph.D. student at Johns Hopkins University he conducted a statistical analysis of the impact railroads had on the nation's economy in the 19th century. That led to a book, "Railroads and American Economic Growth: Essays in Economic History," in which he contended that the railroads had a far smaller impact on the economy than was widely believed at the time.

The Swedish Royal Academy said Fogel's books on the railroad and slavery "forced researchers to reconsider earlier generally accepted results, and few books in economic history have been scrutinized in such detail by critical colleagues."

But it was his work on slavery that brought Fogel the most attention. In "Time on the Cross: The Economics of American Negro Slavery," a book published in 1974, Fogel and co-author Stanley Engerman "challenged the long-held assumption, by then taken as fact, that slavery was unprofitable, inefficient and in decline in the years leading up to the Civil War," according to an article released by the school.

Instead, Fogel and Engerman concluded that farms where slaves were used were as productive as those where they weren't.

Fogel spent decades at the University of Chicago, joining the faculty in 1964. After leaving for Harvard University in 1975, he returned to the university for good in 1981.

In 1993, the Royal Swedish Academy awarded Fogel the Nobel Memorial Prize in Economic Sciences. He shared the award with Douglass North, a professor at Washington University in St. Louis.

In the citation, the academy praised Fogel "for having renewed research in economic history by applying economic theory and quantitative methods in order to explain economic and institutional change."

The academy said his books on the railroad and slavery "forced researchers to reconsider earlier generally accepted results, and few books in economic history have been scrutinized in such detail by critical colleagues." It noted that the book on slavery "aroused great attention and bitter controversies."

Stocks down as markets look to Fed

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The stock market ended lower Wednesday as traders looked ahead to a critical Federal Reserve meeting next week.

Without any major economic news, traders grappled with the question hanging over financial markets: When will the Fed and other central banks pull back their economic stimulus programs?

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 126 points, or 0.8 percent, to 14,995. The Dow had its first three-day loss of the year and its second close below 15,000 in the past month.

"There's nothing concrete out there to turn us around today," Russell Croft, co-portfolio manager at the Croft Value Fund in Baltimore. "So naturally enough, people are back to thinking about the Fed."

The Dow was up as much as 119 points in the first few minutes of trading, then drifted lower throughout the day.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 13 points, or 0.8 percent, to 1,612. All 10 industry groups in the S&P 500 index dropped, led by consumer-discretionary and utility companies.

The Nasdaq composite sank 36.52 points, or 1 percent, to 3,400.43.

Markets have turned turbulent in recent weeks as traders start preparing for a time when central banks around the world aren't pumping as much money into the financial system.

Two of the top-performing stocks in the S&P 500 this year, Netflix and BestBuy, led consumer-discretionary companies down. Netflix lost $6.82, or 3 percent, to $207.64. BestBuy dropped $1.01, or 4 percent, to $26.88. GameStop fell $1.13, or 3 percent, to $36.69.

The S&P 500 has lost 3.4 percent since reaching a record high on May 21. The next day, Fed chairman Ben Bernanke said the central bank could decide to scale down its bond-buying program in the coming months if the economy looks strong enough.

Since then, the discussion among investors has centered on what will happen when the Fed shifts course. "'Tapering' is definitely the word of the month," Croft said.

Many on Wall Street think the Fed could signal that it's ready to start cutting back on its $85 billion in bond purchases at the end of its two-day meeting next Wednesday. That's a key reason bond traders have been selling Treasurys, sending the 10-year yield from a low of 1.63 percent last month to as high as 2.29 percent this week.

Long-term borrowing rates are still near historic lows, but their jump over the past month has grabbed investors' attention, said Mark Travis, president and CEO of Intrepid Capital Management. "I think people are starting to pause," he said. "If rates continue to drift up, it's probably going to be a headwind for the market."

Despite the losses, there were a few bright spots.

Cooper Tire & Rubber jumped 41 percent after Apollo Tyres, an Indian company, announced plans to buy the tire maker for $2.5 billion. The combined company would be one of the world's largest tire makers, Apollo said, with combined 2012 sales of $6.6 billion. Cooper Tire gained $10.10 to $34.66.

Gigamon soared 50 percent on its first day of trading as a public company. The Milpitas, Calif.-based company, which makes equipment for computer-network traffic, raised $128 million in its initial public offering Tuesday. Its stock surged $9.47 to $28.47.

In the market for U.S. government bonds, the yield on the 10-year Treasury note edged up to 2.23 percent from 2.18 percent late Tuesday.

In commodities trading, crude oil rose 50 cents to $95.88 a barrel. Gold rose $15 to $1,392 an ounce.

Chrysler recalling 6,900 heavy-duty 2012 trucks

DETROIT — Chrysler Group is recalling 6,900 heavy-duty Ram pickup trucks from the 2012 model year because part of the front axle could fracture and cause them to lose power.

The automaker said Wednesday that the front prop shaft, which connects the engine to the axle, can bind or fracture.

Chrysler investigated the issue after getting two reports of damage. The company says it doesn't know of any accidents or injuries related to the defect.

The recall involves 5,600 Ram 4500 and 5500 trucks in the U.S. and 1,300 in Canada.

Chrysler will notify owners. Dealers will repair or replace the front axles for free.

US payroll, financial firms hacked; eight charged

NEWARK, N.J. — U.S. prosecutors in New Jersey have announced charges against eight alleged members of an international cybercrime ring they said hacked into the computers of more than a dozen leading financial institutions and the U.S. military's payroll service.

Prosecutors said the scheme to steal millions of dollars from customer accounts was led by Oleksiy Sharapka of Kiev, Ukraine. He was deported from the U.S. in 2012 after serving time in federal prison.

U.S. Attorney Paul Fishman said those arrested include key associates in New York, Massachusetts and Georgia accused of using stolen identities to try to cash out the hacked accounts.

Four of the eight were arrested this week. Two appeared in court in Newark and one in Boston. A fourth man fell ill and is hospitalized.

Clearwire switches to support Dish buyout offer

BELLEVUE, Wash. — Wireless data network operator Clearwire Corp. is recommending that its shareholders approve a buy-out offer from Dish Network Corp., reversing its earlier stance to support a takeover bid by its majority shareholder, Sprint Nextel Corp.

Clearwire shares rose 3 cents to $4.40 in after-hours trading Wednesday, the same amount that Dish is offering per share.

Dish also said in a release Wednesday that its offer to pay $4.40 per share of Clearwire would be extended by two working days to July 2, and holders of 245,411 Clearwire shares had already committed to sell them to Dish.

That represents less than 0.1 percent of the 1.5 billion Clearwire shares outstanding.

Dish has said its offer is contingent on being able to buy 25 percent of the company.

Two central Pa. plants close, affecting almost 150

LOCK HAVEN, Pa. — A central Pennsylvania official has confirmed that two factories have abruptly closed down, leaving almost 150 workers without jobs.

Mike Flanagan, president and CEO of Clinton County Economic Partnership, told The (Lock Haven) Express that the closing was "a tough one."

He said Fenco Automotive Products is filing for bankruptcy, and the local plants include the former Champion Parts building in Lock Haven and Fenco-related Lock Haven Distribution.

H&R Block 4Q profit rises, but misses Street view

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — H&R Block Inc. said last-minute changes to tax laws, a delayed start to the filing season and new fraud controls created hurdles for the company in this year's tax season.

The tax preparation company was able to cut costs to help offset weaker revenue stemming from these conditions, but it reported fiscal fourth-quarter results that fell short of market expectations.

H&R said after the market closed Wednesday that it earned $664.3 million, or $2.42 per share, for the quarter that ended April 30. That's up from $586.1 million, or $1.99 per share, last year.

It earned $2.54 per share, excluding one-time items.

Total revenue increased to $2.2 billion from $2 billion.

Analysts, on average, expected earnings of $2.61 per share, on revenue $2.28 billion, according to FactSet.

The company decided this year to increase its push for assisted and digital do-it-yourself categories as part of a long-term growth strategy. H&R faces increased competition from online and software competitors such as Intuit's TurboTax.

H&R said the total number of U.S. returns it prepared fell 0.7 percent to 22.2 million through the end of the fiscal year.

The company earned $433.9 million, or $1.58 per share, for the full fiscal year versus $265.9 million, or 89 cents per share, last year. It earned $1.59 per share on an adjusted basis. Revenue increased to $2.91 billion from $2.89 billion.

American says it will add seats on many planes

DALLAS — American Airlines expects to add more seats to some of its planes, which could mean less leg room for passengers.

The airline's parent company, AMR Corp., disclosed the move in a regulatory filing Wednesday.

American's vice president of flight service, Lauri Curtis, said that the airline constantly examines its operations, including trying to match the number of seats with travel demand.

Curtis said airline officials expect to add seats on Boeing 737 and McDonnell Douglas MD-80 jets, "but we haven't yet determined the right number of seats, and as a result, the impact on revenue and cost."

BREAKING BARRIERS

Opportunity awaits city leadership

A consultant hired to help Crystal River develop a plan to incorporate the proposed Riverwalk into its overall development plans for the bayfront area is preparing to give some advice on actions the city should take to eliminate barriers to development.

During its review, the consulting firm is examining city regulations on parking, stormwater management and land use that are an impediment to development that would create economic growth.

The reality is that little if any development has taken place in the commercial zone of King's Bay since 1967.

Under current requirements, each property along the bay is required to provide stormwater runoff for that property. The consultant will most likely recommend developing a plan for some type of pooling of stormwater runoff among multiple properties.

Similarly, each property owner is required to provide parking for any building located on the property.

Finally, the consultant will have recommendations concerning its building height requirements and will suggest some relaxation of height requirements in the downtown area while still protecting the tree canopy.

We recognize that some of the recommendations may be controversial. There has been little change in the overall face of the town in the past several years. Some residents are happy for it to remain this way, but others see opportunity created by the Riverwalk project.

THE ISSUE:

Consultant will recommend changes to encourage development in Crystal River's bayfront.

OUR OPINION:

Seize opportunity to make progress.

This is a time when the city can make a real step forward. Council and citizens will have an opportunity to debate the final recommendations and make some changes.

Crystal River has the opportunity to leverage the Riverwalk into a way to create a walkable downtown area connecting the bay with Citrus Avenue. This would both support existing businesses and foster quality, desirable development around the bay and nearby areas that would accrue to the advantage of city residents.

During these tough economic times, these proposed changes give the council the opportunity to take a leadership role in improving the business and tourist climate in the community.

Consider carefully.

OTHER VOICES

As soon as the Constitution permitted him to run for Congress, Al Salvi did. In 1986, just 26 and fresh from the University of Illinois law school, he sank $1,000 of his own money, which was most of his money, into his campaign to unseat an incumbent Democratic congressman. Salvi studied for the bar exam during meals at campaign dinners.

He lost his campaign. Today, however, he should be invited to Congress to testify about what happened 10 years later when he was a prosperous lawyer and won the Republican Senate nomination to run against a Democratic congressman named Dick Durbin.

In the fall of 1996, at the campaign's climax, Democrats filed with the Federal Elections Commission charges against Salvi's campaign, alleging campaign finance violations. These charges dominated the campaign's closing days. Salvi spoke by telephone with the head of the FEC's Enforcement Division, who he remembers saying: "Promise me you will never run for office again, and we'll drop this case." He was speaking to Lois Lerner.

After losing to Durbin, Salvi spent four years and $100,000 fighting the FEC, on whose behalf FBI agents visited his elderly mother demanding to know, concerning her $2,000 contribution to her son's campaign, where she got "that kind of money." When the second of two federal courts held that the charges against Salvi were spurious, the lawyer arguing for the FEC was Lois Lerner.

More recently, she has been head of the IRS Exempt Organizations Division, which has used its powers of delay, harassment and extortion to suppress political participation. For example, it has told an Iowa right-to-life group that it would get tax exempt status if it would promise not to picket Planned Parenthood clinics.

Last week, in a televised House Ways and Means Committee hearing, Rep. Peter Roskam, R-Ill., Salvi's former law partner, told the riveting story of the partisan enforcement of campaign laws to suppress political competition by distracting Salvi and entangling him in bureaucratic snares. The next day, the number of inches of newsprint in The Washington Post and New York Times devoted to Roskam's revelation was the number of minutes that had been devoted to it on the three broadcast networks' evening news programs the night before: Zero.

House Republicans should use their committee chairmanships to let Lerner exercise her right to confront Salvi and her many other accusers. If she were invited back to Congress to respond concerning Salvi, would she again refuse to testify by invoking her Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination? There is one way to find out.

Durbin, the second-ranking Senate Democrat who will seek a fourth term next year, defeated Salvi by 15 points. He probably would have won without the assistance of Lerner and of the campaign "reforms" that have produced the FEC's mare's nest of regulations and speech police that lend themselves to abuses like those Salvi experienced. In 2010, Durbin wrote a letter urging Lerner's IRS division to pay special attention to a political advocacy group supporting conservatives.

Lerner, it is prudent to assume, is one among thousands like her who infest the regulatory state. She is not just a bureaucratic bully and a slithering partisan. Now she also is a national security problem because she is contributing to a comprehensive distrust of government.

The case for the National Security Agency's gathering of metadata is: America is threatened not by a nation but by a network, dispersed and largely invisible until made visible by connecting dots. The network cannot help but leave, as we all do daily, a digital trail of cellphone, credit card and Internet uses. The dots are in such data; algorithms connect them. The technological gathering of 300 billion bits of data is less menacing than the gathering of 300 by bureaucrats. Mass gatherings by the executive branch twice receive judicial scrutiny, once concerning phone and Internet usages, another concerning the content of messages.

The case against the NSA is: Lois Lerner and others of her ilk.

Government requires trust. Government by progressives, however, demands such inordinate amounts of trust that the demand itself should provoke distrust. Progressivism can be distilled into two words: "Trust us." The antecedent of the pronoun is: The wise, disinterested experts through whom the vast powers of the regulatory state's executive branch will deliver progress for our own good, as the executive branch understands this, whether or not we understand it. Lois Lerner is the scowling face of this state, which has earned Americans' distrust.

Who cleans up glass?

It would be nice if Florida would make the tow truck drivers clean up the glass and the mess that is in the road after a car accident. Down at the intersection of Gobbler and (U.S.) 41 is just a mess. There is glass all over the road. I don't understand this. Why isn't this taken care of?

Felines must go

This is in regards to the article in the paper today, "City: Felines must go," on June 1. I cannot believe that this city hates animals so much. It's very, very sad.

Wildflower seeds

I'm calling in reference to the letter about the beautiful flowers that the highway plants in Florida, the beautiful pink flowers. Can somebody tell me where I can buy those seeds in bulk? We have an area here by the road out in the country that we would love to grow those flowers. If anybody knows where we can buy them in bulk, please let us know.

Who's baking?

I see on TV where a young boy has collected over 200 boxes of cake mix to make birthday cakes for the homeless children. Who's going to bake them if they're homeless? Who has their oven or home to bake them in? I don't understand what he's collecting them for.

Wonderful message

I'm calling about "Warding off gossip," by Franklin Aretz on Sunday's paper (June 2). What a fantastic letter. I think everybody in Citrus County should read that.

Hummingbird tastes

Obviously the hummingbirds around my feeder did not get the memo. I use 1 cup sugar, 2 cups water and they are all over it. They even fight for it. So, I guess there's no accounting in some hummingbirds' tastes. Go figure.

Too expensive

Duke Energy wants us to pay more for shutting down the nuclear plant and then pay more in case they want to build a new one, and they caused the whole problem. Then the county commissioners want to add four or five MSTUs and MSBUs to our taxes, which would be $400 or $500 more. They say it isn't a tax, so they can raise it whenever they ever want to. They should change the name from Citrus County to Cash County because if you don't have it, you won't be able to live here.

Coupon wallets

To the person wanting to know where to purchase a coupon wallet so they can divide their coupons: You can obtain them at Dollar Tree stores for $1.

Government for grown-ups

Once again, our public officials have proven they belong in a day care instead of representing government. County Commission Chairman Joe Meek has decided he needed to get into a squabble with Debbie Ressler, chairwoman of the Citrus County Hospital Board. She apparently had the audacity to ask questions of the county commission so Meek decided he needed to ask questions of her about the business of the CCHB. Mrs. Ressler, not one to be questioned on matters that are also public information, refused to cooperate and turn it over to the high-priced attorney, imagine that. They both took to their adult crayons (email) and sent nasty messages to each other which finally reached the front page of the Chronicle, but not before our own county attorney became involved.

I see both sides of the issue. First, Ressler is a tax-paying citizen and she has every right to question the actions of her elected governmental body.

However, Meek is the chairman of the county commission, which is the taxing authority for the county! The hospital board receives Citrus County tax dollars, which gives commissioner Meek every justification to ask questions of the of the hospital board. I also should mention that the hospital board is subject to public inspection since it exists to distribute public funds!

It appears that the only ones in this county who do not know what is actually going on with the county commission and the county hospital board is us folks who are providing the cash to these adolescent-minded officials to spend.

I realize I am old fashioned, but I was under the impression that government entities should all work together for the betterment of the community and the efficiency of the services they provide, foolish me. Apparently, we elect and our governor appoints adults that are still children in adult bodies.

It is time that the adults in this community demand better of all elected officials and realize we expect more than kindergarten government.

Email exchanges disturbing

Reading about the exchange of emails written by Chairman Joe Meek of the Citrus County Commission and Chairwoman Debbie Ressler of the Citrus County Hospital Board was disturbing. At best, their comments were inane, unprofessional and quite bluntly, absurd and comical.

The interaction began by Meek requesting Ressler to personally provide certain statistical legal costs. How absurd! The comical part was her replies. Both were guilty of poor judgment.

Meek initiated the exchange. He should have conveyed his request directly to County Administrator Brad Thorpe, who would have assigned that task to a staff member. In doing so, all those repetitive emails would have been avoided.

Meeks apparently was unaware of the chain of command. Failing this, the issue escalated to seek expensive legal opinions. It certainly was a complete waste of time, talent and taxes. Furthermore, the matter is still in disagreement.

Can anyone imagine if the chairman of General Motors would ask the chairman of Chrysler about the number of bumpers his company had? Of course not! It's called delegation.

Greed for Port Citrus

Port Citrus is the 15th port in Florida and the governor on down to the local government are all in favor of this project being expanded. Now let's look at all the players who lobbied for this project and who the big winners are.

First, one has to look at the real estate on both sides of the waterway and see who the owners are. Next we look at who sits in the seat of power to see who will profit from this misguided venture. Names keep popping up for real estate owners who will benefit from this project and those same name are people who were in positions on the county government at one time or another.

Next, we have the lobbyist who influenced a vote on behalf of the project. It is, of course, the same people. They say that this project will create needed jobs for this community. If that was the case, then one has to ask: How do you turn an agricultural and ranching community into a seafarer's way of life? This is not going to happen. The next problem is the environmental impact this project is going to have on the ecosystem of the west coast. Nobody seems to take that into consideration.

So far, after reading all the reports on this project, I have noticed that the only focus is on the port and nothing else. I have not read one report about the impact this project is going to have on the environment. If we are to look at the future growth of this county, we must preserve our natural habitat and have a balanced approach so we do not destroy one thing in favor of a man-made obstacle. Once we destroy our environment, it is lost forever. Our survival as a species rests on the environment we live in. We are part of nature and not a product of man-made development. It is my hope that we get a full report from the EPA as to the impact of this project to see what the trade-off is.

Who is really going to profit from this project? At what cost to the residents of Citrus County? All I see is big business at work again and they really don't give one hoot about the impact it is going to create. All I see is more greed by a few wealthy individuals at the cost of the taxpayers of Citrus County.

Food drive successful

Just have to give a shoutout and many thanks to the USPS and all the postal workers and the success of their recent food drive to help restock the various food pantries in Citrus County. And of course, this effort also depended on the many generous citizens who donated all that food.

Helping our food pantries through this drive has a direct effect and benefit on our many clients still struggling in what for them is still a painfully slow economic recovery. For our pantry in Citrus Springs, a special thanks must go to Trish and Laurie and all the crew at the Dunnellon Post Office for their wonderful support. It is so very much appreciated.

Cut from the top down

The Citrus County School Board wants all employees (union employees) to take a 1 percent pay cut to help with the budget. Let's try something different: Let's start at the top of the pay scale first.

All management employees with the school district from the superintendent down should take a 5 percent pay cut and all school board members should defer their pay. Let's do this rather than do away with programs that help better educate our children and ask workers who haven't had pay increases in several years to give up their pay until we cut at the top of the food chain first. We have for years asked our teachers to do more with less and now we want them to suffer even more.

From an education standpoint, why aren't we looking at cutting sports programs? God forbid we didn't have a football team and concentrated more on education than how fast someone can run down the field and block someone, especially when 60 is passing in the Citrus County system. I know I'm old. However, 60 was always a failing grade when I went to school.

We need to raise the bar on education in Citrus County and asking teachers, bus drivers and other employees to take pay cuts isn't the way to get it done. I would like the CCSB to answer the question as to why they can't cut their pay and that of the superintendent down by 5 percent. I'm sure that would be a very large amount of money.

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Six months after the Newtown school shooting, New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg is stepping up his gun control campaign by asking donors not to support Democratic senators who opposed a bill to expand background checks on gun buyers, while a mayors' group he cofounded is embarking on a national bus tour to rally for efforts to curb gun violence.

In a letter, Bloomberg asked New York City donors not to support Democratic senators who opposed a bill to expand background checks, which helped lead to the legislation's defeat in April. Texas, NY leaders spar over jobs

ALBANY, N.Y. — The ambitious governors of Texas and New York are in a shootout over job poaching.

Republican Texas Gov. Rick Perry is poking fun at New York ahead of his upcoming trip to convince businesses there to move to his state. In $600,000 worth of radio spots that began airing Wednesday in New York City and Albany, he scoffs at the state's "new New York" promotional campaign. He said it looks a lot like the "old New York," with high taxes and stifling regulations.

New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo shot back that his tax-free proposal for some employers is a better deal because they "don't have to move to Texas."

Perry's five-day visit to New York and Connecticut begins Sunday.

He also made job-hunting trips to California and Illinois.

Girl's transplant deemed success

PHILADELPHIA — A 10-year-old girl whose efforts to qualify for an organ donation spurred public debate over how organs are allocated underwent a successful double-lung transplant on Wednesday, the girl's family said.

Sarah Murnaghan, who suffers from severe cystic fibrosis, received new lungs from an adult donor at Children's Hospital of Philadelphia, spokeswoman Tracy Simon said.

The Murnaghan family said it was "thrilled" to share the news that Sarah was out of surgery.

"Her doctors are very pleased with both her progress during the procedure and her prognosis for recovery," the family said in a statement.

Sarah's family and the family of another cystic fibrosis patient at the same hospital challenged transplant policy that made children under 12 wait for pediatric lungs to become available.

Officials defend NSA program

Data collection said to have stopped attacks, though details few

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The director of the National Security Agency vigorously defended once-secret surveillance programs as an effective tool in keeping America safe, telling Congress on Wednesday that the information collected disrupted dozens of terrorist attacks without offering details.

In his first congressional testimony since revelations about the top-secret operations, Army Gen. Keith Alexander insisted that the public needs to know more about how the programs operate amid increasing unease about rampant government snooping and fears that Americans' civil liberties are being trampled.

"I do think it's important that we get this right and I want the American people to know that we're trying to be transparent here, protect civil liberties and privacy but also the security of this country," Alexander told a Senate panel.

He described the steps the government takes once it suspects a terrorist organization is about to act — all within the laws approved by Congress and under stringent oversight from the courts. He said the programs led to "disrupting or contributing to the disruption of terrorist attacks," but he did not give details on the terror plots.

Half a world away, Edward Snowden, the former contractor who fled to Hong Kong and leaked documents about the programs, said he would fight any U.S. attempts to extradite him. American law enforcement officials are building a case against him but have yet to bring charges.

"I am not here to hide from justice; I am here to reveal criminality," Snowden said of the surveillance programs in an interview with the South China Morning Post.

In plain-spoken, measured tones, Alexander answered senators' questions in an open session and promised to provide additional information to the Senate Intelligence Committee in closed session on Thursday. The director of national intelligence has declassified information on two thwarted attacks — one in New York, the other in Chicago — and Alexander said he was pressing for more disclosures.

Government offers referendum as concession to end chaos

Associated Press

ISTANBUL — Turkey's government on Wednesday offered a first concrete gesture aimed at ending nearly two weeks of street protests, proposing a referendum on a development project in Istanbul that triggered demonstrations that have become the biggest challenge to Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan's 10-year tenure.

Protesters expressed doubts about the offer, however, and continued to converge in Taksim Square's Gezi Park, epicenter of the anti-government protests that began in Istanbul 13 days ago and spread across the country. At times, police have broken up demonstrations using tear gas, water cannon and rubber bullets.

The protests erupted May 31 after a violent police crackdown on a peaceful sit-in by activists objecting to a development project that would replace Gezi Park with a replica Ottoman-era barracks. They then spread to dozens of cities, rallying tens of thousands of people each night.

In a skirmish late Wednesday in Ankara, police used tear gas and water cannon to break up some 2,500 protesters who set up makeshift barricades on a road leading to government offices.

The referendum proposal came after Erdogan, who had been defiant and uncompromising in recent days, met with a group of 11 activists, including academics, students and artists, in Ankara. However, groups involved in the protests in Taksim and the park boycotted the meeting, saying they weren't invited and the attendees didn't represent them.

Greenpeace said it didn't participate because of an "environment of violence" in the country, while Taksim Solidarity, which has been coordinating much of the occupation of Gezi Park, said it had not been invited. The group reiterated its demands that Gezi remain a public park, that abusive senior officials be fired, and all detained protesters be released — not issues the referendum would address.

But the discussion was the first sign that Erdogan was looking for an exit from the showdown, and came hours after some European leaders expressed concern about recent strong-armed Turkish police tactics and hopes that the prime minister would soften his stance.

Huseyin Celik, spokesman for Erdogan's Islamic-rooted Justice and Development party, announced it would consider holding a referendum over the development project. But he said any vote would exclude the planned demolition of a cultural center that the protesters also oppose, insisting it was in an earthquake-prone area and had to come down.

Divide deepens over immigration bill

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Bickering across a deep divide, supporters of immigration legislation pushed back hard Wednesday against Republican demands for tougher border security measures before millions living illegally in the country could take the first steps toward U.S. citizenship.

Even modest changes were snared in the political crossfire that erupted on the first full day of debate on the measure, as the two sides failed to agree on terms for voting on seemingly non-controversial proposals such as granting tribal officials a place on a Border Oversight Task Force.

Public polling shows general support both for tougher border security and for allowing those living in the United States to gain citizenship after meeting certain legal, financial and other conditions. On an issue as contentious as immigration, that made the intersection of the two a fertile ground for dispute.

As drafted, the legislation "authorizes a permanent legalization program for illegal immigrants regardless of whether the Mexican border is ever secured," said Sen. John Cornyn, R-Texas. The Senate's second-ranking leader also wants other measures implemented, including a biometric system to check everyone departing the country at a sea or airport, that Sen. Chuck Schumer, D-N.Y., said could take a quarter-century to take effect fully.

"We cannot, should not and will not tell those who have waited in the shadows for so long that they should wait for 25 years," said Schumer, who was part of a bipartisan "Gang of Eight" group of senators who negotiated the bill's basic provisions and then protected it from major changes in the Judiciary Committee last month.

In addition to taking steps to secure the border and begin a legalization process for millions, the White House-backed legislation would increase the number of visas for highly skilled workers, create a new program for the lesser-skilled to work in the United States and overturn a family-based system for legal immigration that has been in place for decades.

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., has said he wants a final vote on the measure before July 4.

Across the Capitol, House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, says he hopes immigration legislation can move through committee by then, and be on the floor sometime in July.

While the obstacles to a final agreement are daunting, the Senate bill has support from both business and organized labor, two groups that are usually on opposite sides of most issues.

Brit lawmaker slams Google

LONDON — A key British lawmaker accused search giant Google of dodging its taxes on Thursday, issuing a scathing report that accuses the U.S. Internet company of taking on highly contrived arrangements serving no purpose other than to avoid paying its fair share.

The report came after testimony by Google Vice President Matt Brittin, who tried to persuade members of Britain's parliamentary Public Accounts Committee that his company was transparent and fair. Committee chair Margaret Hodge rejected arguments that Google's advertising sales take place in Ireland and not the UK.

"Google brazenly argued before this committee that its tax arrangements in the UK are defensible and lawful," she wrote, adding that the "argument is deeply unconvincing and has been undermined by information from whistleblowers, including ex-employees of Google, who told us that UK-based staff are engaged in selling."

Google has paid less than 0.1 percent of its billions in UK revenue back to the government in tax. In the first quarter of this year, it made $1.3 billion in revenue from the UK.

Kuwaiti premier visits Iraq

BAGHDAD — Kuwait's prime minister discussed ties with his Iraqi counterpart in Baghdad on Wednesday, signaling improving relations between neighbors still working to overcome the more than two-decade legacy of war.

The warming bonds between Shiite-led Iraq and Sunni-ruled Kuwait are noteworthy in a region increasingly plagued by the sectarian divisions running through Syria's civil war and Iraq, which is struggling to contain its worst eruption of violence in years.

Iraqi Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki personally greeted Sheik Jaber Al Mubarak Al Sabah on a red carpet on the airport tarmac before the two men sat down for talks. Officials later signed a series of agreements aimed at improving bilateral ties in the economic, transportation and other sectors.

Greek gov't in deep crisis

ATHENS, Greece — Greece's fragile governing coalition failed to reach a compromise Wednesday about the closure of the state-run ERT broadcaster. That left the government in a crisis that could lead to early elections, just a year after it was formed to save the country from bankruptcy.

Prime Minister Antonis Samaras derided ERT TV and radio as "a true symbol of privilege and lack of transparency." In a speech to business leaders, Samaras said that "the sinful ERT is finished."

The three-party government yanked ERT off the air late Tuesday, axing all 2,656 jobs as part of its cost-cutting drive.

Bucs sign 3rd-round pick Mike Glennon

TAMPA — The Tampa Bay Buccaneers have signed third-round draft pick Mike Glennon to a four-year contract.

The former North Carolina State quarterback agreed to terms Wednesday and is participating in the team's three-day mandatory minicamp.

The 6-foot-6 Glennon was the 73rd overall pick in the draft. He threw for 4,031 yards and 31 touchdowns as a senior for the Wolfpack.

With Tampa Bay, Glennon is competing with veteran Dan Orlovsky to be the backup to starter Josh Freeman. There's a good chance the Bucs will carry three quarterbacks on the roster this year, as opposed to two in recent seasons.

Glennon started 26 of 36 games he played in college, completing over 60 percent of his passes for 7,411 yards and 63 TDs.

Former PGA Tour player Barber dies

Barber, nicknamed "Mr. X," played in 1,297 tournaments on the PGA Tour and 50-and-over circuit. He won 11 times in 694 PGA Tour starts and added 24 victories in 603 events on the Champions Tour.

Nets hire Jason Kidd as coach

The Brooklyn Nets have hired Jason Kidd as their coach, bringing the former star back to the franchise.

Kidd just retired after his 19th NBA season and the Nets decided to hire him despite his lack of coaching experience.

The move reunites Kidd with the franchise he led to consecutive NBA Finals in 2002-03, when they played in New Jersey.

"Welcome home, Jason," owner Mikhail Prokhorov said Wednesday in a statement.

Boston edges Tampa Bay 2-1

ST. PETERSBURG — Alfredo Aceves threw six solid innings, Daniel Nava homered and the AL East-leading Boston Red Sox beat the Tampa Bay Rays 2-1 on Wednesday night.

Aceves (3-1), recalled before the game from Triple-A Pawtucket, allowed one run, four hits and four walks. This is the right-hander's third stint with the Red Sox this season.

Nava put the Red Sox up 2-0 on a third-inning, two-run homer off Chris Archer (1-2), who gave up two runs, four hits, four walks and struck out seven over four innings. The Rays right-hander exuberantly left the mound after striking out Nava with the bases loaded to end the fourth.

Evan Longoria got the Rays within 2-1 on a solo homer in the sixth. He has gone deep in three consecutive games after homering just once over

Martin wants more

Bucs running back looking to better rookie year

Associated Press

TAMPA — Doug Martin doesn't believe in the so-called sophomore jinx.

Tampa Bay's second-year running back rushed for 1,454 yards and scored 12 touchdowns as a rookie, and the Buccaneers believe he's capable of performing even better in 2013.

Especially with two of the team's best players — guards Carl Nicks and Davin Joseph — returning from injuries to strengthen the offensive line.

Martin finished third in the NFL behind Adrian Peterson and Calvin Johnson with 1,926 total yards from scrimmage in 2012. He was fourth in rushing behind Peterson, Alfred Morris, Marshawn Lynch and Jamal Charles after being selected with the 31st overall pick of last year's draft.

Now, he's eager to build on that success.

"I'm more confident in what I'm doing out there. I can't wait for the season to start," Martin said following practice during the team's three-day mandatory minicamp.

"There's a lot of room to improve. It's the second year in this system," the former Boise State standout said. "Getting a second year under our belt, everyone looks pretty comfortable."

The Bucs traded up to select the 5-foot-9, 215-pound Martin late in the first round of the draft, confident that he had the size and toughness to be an every-down back as a pro.

After a relatively quiet first six weeks of his rookie season, Martin burst into the spotlight with a 29-carry, 135-yard performance in a nationally televised Thursday night game against Peterson's Minnesota Vikings. He also turned one of his three pass receptions into a 64-yard touchdown.

The following week he averaged 10 yards per carry while running for 251 yards and four TDs to key another road victory at Oakland. The team-record output included touchdown bursts of 45, 67 and 70 yards, making him the first player in NFL history to score three rushing TDs of 45 or more yards

Kuchar all smiles heading into U.S. Open event

Associated Press

Matt Kuchar is a good ball striker who rarely makes mistakes, which has some thinking he could win the U.S. Open, which begins today in Ardmore, Pa.

Associated Press

ARDMORE, Pa. — He was the smiling kid with his dad on the bag in his first U.S. Open, eager to be himself and not the guy he was following.

Matt Kuchar never expected to be the next Tiger Woods, mostly because even then he knew it wasn't possible. Winning the U.S. Amateur a year after Woods recorded his third straight amateur title got him into the 1998 Open, but it would be a long time before the two were in the same conversation again.

"I was never thinking because I won the amateur the year after Tiger that I was the next Tiger Woods," Kuchar said. "That was never something that I thought about or thought I was going to follow the same path as Tiger. I knew I had a different path that was for me."

That path was rocky at times, but Kuchar never lost faith in his talent. He rebuilt his swing, found his way back on the PGA Tour after a brief hiccup, and started contending in tournaments.

Now he's in another conversation this week at Merion Golf Club. He's joined a select few as perhaps the best player who hasn't won a major championship.

"I don't know that I'm quite in that talk yet," Kuchar said Wednesday. "I know that a lot of people have been yelling out that they have got me in their pools and they're picking me this week. But we hear a lot of that talk every week."

Perhaps Kuchar should start listening more. Coming off a win two weeks ago at Memorial — where his young son got a high five from host Jack Nicklaus when Kuchar won — he's high on a lot of lists as a possible winner at this Open.

That he's not shying away from the talk says something about how confident he is about his game.

San Diego Padres base runner Chase Headley berats the tag of Atlanta Braves shortstop Andrelton Simmons during the first inning Wednesday in San Diego.

Padres pull off sweep of Braves

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Edinson Volquez struck out a season-high nine in seven innings as he rebounded from the worst start of his career and led the San Diego Padres to a 5-3 victory Wednesday over the NL East-leading Atlanta Braves and a three-game sweep.

Chris Denorfia hit a two-run homer for the Padres, who have won six of eight. They swept the Braves in San Diego for the first time since May 19-21, 2005. The Braves, who've lost five of seven, were swept for just the second time this season. The first was at Detroit April 26-28.

Denorfia homered to left field with one out in the fifth off Paul Maholm, his third. Everth Cabrera was on second after hitting a single and stealing his 30th base, tops in the majors.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Reds 2, Cubs 1

CHICAGO — Mike Leake combined with Aroldis Chapman on a three-hitter and Todd Frazier hit a tiebreaking home run in the seventh inning against Travis Wood, leading the Cincinnati Reds over the Chicago Cubs 2-1 Wednesday for their record 12th straight win at Wrigley Field.

Leake (6-3) won for the fourth time in five decisions, allowing Nate Schierholtz's second-inning home run into the right-field bleachers, his eighth of the season. Chapman struck out two in a perfect ninth for his 17th save in 19 chances.

The previous record for consecutive wins by a visitor at Wrigley was 10, a mark set by the St. Louis Cardinals (1943-44) and matched by the New York Giants (1950-51) and Montreal (1982-83), according to STATS.

Cincinnati is 10-2 overall against the Cubs this season and 25-6 dating to Sept. 13, 2011. Leake improved to 6-2 with a 3.24 ERA in 13 career starts against Chicago.

Brewers 10, Marlins 1

MIAMI — Carlos Gomez had four hits, including two triples, and Jonathan Lucroy drove in four runs to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to a 10-1 win over the Miami Marlins.

Gomez also drove in three runs and scored three runs. Jean Segura homered for the Brewers, who have won five of six.

Alfredo Figaro (1-0) pitched seven scoreless innings to earn his first victory since Sept. 26, 2009 at the Chicago White Sox. He retired 16 in a row at one point and struck out four.

Both Gomez and Lucroy had bases-clearing triples as the two combined to go 12 for 24 with 12 RBIs in the three-game series.

It was the largest margin of victory for the Brewers this season.

Miami starter Kevin Slowey (2-6) allowed six runs — five earned — and nine hits in five innings.

He was on three days' rest after he pitched seven scoreless innings of relief to earn the victory in Saturday's 2-1, 20-inning win over the Mets.

Mets 5, Cardinals 1

NEW YORK — Dillon Gee had his third straight stellar start, Lucas Duda hit one of three Mets homers and New York scored the most runs allowed by Shelby Miller in his young career for a 5-1 win over the St. Louis Cardinals.

David Wright and Marlon Byrd also connected for the Mets, who snapped a three-game skid and improved to 2-6 in June. Duda drove in two runs, including a first-inning single that scored Daniel Murphy from first base.

With prized pitching prospect Zack Wheeler nearing his promotion to the big leagues, Gee (5-6) has done everything possible to protect his spot in the rotation. The right-hander has yielded only three earned runs over 21 innings in his past three starts — all wins.

Pirates 12, Giants 8

PITTSBURGH — Starling Marte had a career-high four hits and scored four times and the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the San Francisco Giants 12-8.

Neil Walker and Alex Presley homered for Pittsburgh. Jordy Mercer, Andrew McCutchen and Gaby Sanchez had three hits each as the Pirates set season highs for both runs and hits.

Francisco Liriano (5-2) survived six erratic innings to pick up the win.

Joaquin Arias knocked in three runs for the Giants and Hunter Pence doubled twice but San Francisco continued to struggle on the road. The defending World Series champions have lost 12 of 16 away from home.

Barry Zito (4-5) allowed eight runs and 11 hits in 4 2-3 innings as his ERA on the road ballooned to 11.28.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Angels 9, Orioles 5

BALTIMORE — Erick Aybar hit a bases-loaded triple and Albert Pujols homered during a six-run seventh inning, helping the Los Angeles Angels beat the Baltimore Orioles 9-5 to stop a four-game losing streak.

Los Angeles trailed 4-2 before getting five hits — three for extra bases — and two walks in the seventh against three pitchers.

Hank Conger homered, Pujols had three hits and Howie Kendrick contributed two doubles to help the Angels avert a three-game sweep and put a positive finish on a 2-4 trip that began in Boston.

Chris Davis hit his major league-leading 21st homer for Baltimore, 0-5 this season when trying to complete a three- or four-game sweep. The Orioles next host the AL East-leading Boston Red Sox in a four-game series beginning tonight.

Royals 3, Tigers 2, 10 innings

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Lorenzo Cain hit a tying, two-run homer off Jose Valverde with two outs in the ninth inning and Eric Hosmer had a winning single in the 10th, helping the Kansas City Royals overcome Justin Verlander's seven scoreless innings in a 3-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Verlander did not allow a batter past first base, giving up three singles, striking out eight and walking two in a 117-pitch outing, his second-highest total this season. Verlander has a 15-2 record with a 2.56 ERA in 25 starts against the Royals.

Drew Smyly pitched a one-hit eighth, then allowed a leadoff single in the ninth to Hosmer and was replaced by Valverde. He retired Santiago Perez on a flyout and struck out Billy Butler as Hosmer stole second — becoming the first Kansas City runner in scoring position.

Cain fouled off three pitches, then sent an 85 mph offering over the wall in left-center.

INTERLEAGUE

Twins 4, Phillies 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Clete Thomas had a career-high four hits for Minnesota and came home on a wild pitch for the go-ahead run in the eighth inning, giving the Twins a 4-3 victory over Philadelphia to stick the Phillies with their fifth straight loss.

Thomas went 4 for 4 with two RBI doubles. He drove in Oswaldo Arcia both times, including in the eighth when his drive off the tall wall in right field against Antonio Bastardo (2-2) tied the game.

Delmon Young and Ben Revere hit RBI singles for the Phillies against their former team, but starter Mike Pelfrey kept the game close with a season-high seven innings and Glen Perkins pitched a perfect ninth for his 15th save in 17 tries.

Weeki Wachee Springs State Park is a great summer destination. With the springs and slides, plus a beautiful boat tour, the state park has multiple facets to delight visitors.

Weeki Wachee Springs a cool summer spot

As Floridians, cooling off during the summer months in a cool, clear freshwater spring is a time-honored tradition. If your family has been here for any length of time, you've probably heard stories of summer days spent at places like the Ichetucknee, Rainbow Springs, Juniper Springs and plenty of other places where the water bubbles up from far below.

PATH LESS TRAVELED

Not much has changed — Florida springs are still the ultimate way to beat the summer heat. Unless, of course, you decide to stay indoors and let the air conditioning blow on you, but what fun is that? You need to get outside, and Weeki Wachee Springs State Park is one of those places where you have to spend some time this summer.

Water slides. Wildlife attractions. Nature. Mermaids. Put those words together, and you know you've got something pretty special.

Once at Weeki Wachee, it's hard to resist the draw of the slides and the spring, but save that part for last. Instead, hit up the boat tour first, which takes you through some of the most spectacular scenery found anywhere. Catch the animal encounter next and get an upclose look at small gators, snakes and other assorted native wildlife. After that, you'll want to take in a Mermaid show. You've got two shows to choose from, and they run at regular intervals throughout the day.

Next up: the spring and slides. Now that it's summer, the slides are in operation every day. Grab a spot next to the spring and set up like you would at the beach, then spend the remainder of the day bobbing in the water or splashing down on the slides. There's even a short tube run in case you want to float along and let your troubles melt away.

I'd recommend purchasing a Florida State Parks annual pass, because this is a place that you'll want to keep coming back to all summer long. Keep your eyes peeled for more ideas for summer fun in future columns, too. In the meantime, check out www.floridastateparks.org/weekiwachee for admission, hours, directions and all the info you'll need on this wonderful summer destination.

Contest not over at press time; Bruins, 'Hawks knotted at 3

Associated Press

CHICAGO — The Chicago Blackhawks got third-period goals from Dave Bolland and Johnny Oduya to tie the Boston Bruins 3-3 and send a riveting Game 1 of the Stanley Cup finals to overtime.

In the first championship meeting in 34 years between Original Six franchises, Milan Lucic scored twice and Patrice Bergeron added a power-play goal just over six minutes into the third to give Boston a 3-1 lead.

The Bruins grabbed a 1-0 lead at the 13:11 mark of the opening period after Lucic's easy wrist shot from the slot in front of Corey Crawford.

NASCAR driver dies at track

Associated Press

BRIDGEPORT, N.J. — NASCAR driver Jason Leffler died after an accident Wednesday night in a heat race at a dirt car event at Bridgeport Speedway.

The 37-year-old Leffler, a two-time winner on the NASCAR Nationwide Series, was pronounced dead shortly after 9 p.m., New Jersey State Police said.

"NASCAR extends its thoughts, prayers and deepest sympathies to the family of Jason Leffler who passed away earlier this evening," NASCAR said in a statement. "For more than a decade, Jason was a fierce competitor in our sport and he will be missed."

KUCHAR

"I feel like I'm playing some good golf," Kuchar said. "I'm looking to continue to play good golf. Certainly a major championship, a U.S. Open, is one I'm geared up for. I'm looking forward to competing and trying to put my name on this trophy."

Kuchar was still an amateur when he played his first U.S. Open at Olympic Club in San Francisco in 1998. His father — who drew some criticism for his exuberance — was carrying his bag and on Sunday it was both Father's Day and the golfer's 20th birthday

Fans sang Happy Birthday to him and yelled "Happy Father's Day" to his father as they walked to tees, but the real highlight was a 14th place finish. It paid no money but showed Kuchar that he could compete with players a level above him.

Three years later he was a regular on the PGA Tour, making $500,000 in his rookie year. The next year he won the Honda Classic, giving him a two-year exemption on tour and marking him as one of the rising stars of the game.

Then it all started to fall apart. Kuchar began missing cuts with regularity, finally ending up in golf's minor leagues — what was then the Nationwide Tour — while he retooled his game and tried to find a swing that worked as well as the swings of players who were on the big circuit.

"I think that out here there was a definite learning curve on the PGA Tour of just being comfortable standing on the range, hitting balls next to Ernie Els or Tiger Woods or Phil Mickelson and not just being in awe," 'Kuchar said. "And trying to say, 'Well, I can't hit it like that, what do I need to do to hit it like that?' "

He was a tennis player who took up golf when his mother upgraded their membership at a country club as a Christmas present. Playing better was never an issue since he quickly became one of the top — and finally THE top — amateur in the country.

Coming back on tour in 2007 he played well enough to keep his card, though barely. The next year he won $1.5 million, and the next year cracked the top 25.

Kuchar has already won twice this year, at the Match Play Championship and the Memorial, his sixth career win. He's moved to No. 4 in the world golf rankings, and hasn't missed a cut all year while averaging 69.84 strokes a round.

He's a ball striker who rarely makes mistakes, and a putter who excels on fast greens, a combination that has oddsmakers and fans lining the fairways at Merion thinking he has a good shot to win his first major this week.

"I think (the) great thing about the game of golf is there's no clear-cut favorites," Kuchar said.

his previous 26.

Andrew Bailey, the fourth Boston reliever, pitched the ninth for his seventh save in nine opportunties. After Craig Breslow allowed a two-out double in the eighth Kelly Johnson, Koji Uehara entered and struck out Longoria.

Jacoby Ellsbury extended his hitting streak to 11 games with a single and scored on Nava's two-out shot in the third. He also stole two bases in the game, giving him 29 for the year. Ellsbury has scored a run in 10 consecutive games, and stolen a base five straight games.

Tampa Bay loaded the bases by drawing three walks from Aceves in the second, but failed to score when Yunel Escobar hit an inning-ending grounder.

Aceves worked out of a two-on, no-out jam in the third by striking out Johnson and getting a double-play grounder by Longoria.

Rays first baseman James Loney made a strong defensive play in the first, diving to his right to take away a potential two-out RBI single from David Ortiz.

Anglers, charities big winners at event

TIGHT LINES

STEPHEN E. LASKO/for the Chronicle

ABOVE: Phillip Bellmore, left, is congratulated by Homosassa Game Fish Club president Jeff Garvin on Sunday afternoon during the awards presentation of the 29th Annual Cobia Big Fish Tournament. Bellmore's trout, a 3.86 pound specimen, earned the angler $600. BELOW: Anglers arrive at MacRae's in Homosassa on Sunday afternoon as the tournament comes to an end.

One of the most anticipated weekends of the year along the Nature Coast has come and gone, as weekends are wont to do. As in past years, this particular weekend left in its wake thousands of excited residents and out-of-towners who are already looking forward to next year's version.

I refer, of course, to the annual Cobia Big Fish Tournament, run out of MacRae's down in Homosassa. This is a major tournament, with major prizes, but the twist to the Big Fish weekend is the biggest winners are various charities in the area. Figures were not available at this writing, but the raw numbers indicate proceeds from this year's tournament will exceed the $12,000-plus that went to various projects and charities locally last year.

Four species were eligible over the two-day angling period; cobia, grouper, spotted seatrout and, new this year, red drum (redfish). First place for the latter three species was worth $600, but the big fish, cobia, enriched the bank account of Chiefland's Weldon Diallie by $7,300. At 72.7 pounds, Diallie's cobia dwarfed the second- and third-place fish.

Conditions were less than ideal for participants, and both Captain "Red Ed" Brennan and Captain Todd Corneillie, whom I had asked to track it for me, reported seas anywhere from 1 to 4 feet, with poor clarity north of the Homosassa, but clearer water south. Brennan, captain of Team Young Boats (in Inglis, right on US 19), said they tried the Citrus County Artificial Reef first, and were surprised at the number of boats out there, given the rough seas.

"It was like a parking lot," he said.

Sometimes you know right from the get-go a fish is more than a little larger than average, other times not so soon. I asked Diallie when he first thought he might have a money fish.

"Oh, as soon as we saw it," he replied.

I took that to mean just before he boated the fish, when he'd gotten it within sight, but that wasn't the case.

"No, no," he said. "We had caught some pinfish for bait, and were swimming them about six miles off the mouth of the Homosassa when he showed up. The water was pretty clear, and we all got a good look at it. He circled our baits for what seemed like an hour, but was probably more like 15 minutes or so. You know how time drags out when you can see a fish, but he just won't eat, it seems to go on forever."

Oh, yeah, I know that feeling well; but let's face it, highly sought-after game fish don't get to be 70-plus pounds by being careless.

"He just kept circling, as if he wasn't sure about the baits," Dialle said. "Finally, I dug around in the bait well and came up with a pinfish that seemed good and lively, and swapped it for the one I had on. He came up to it, turned off, and finally picked it up. Before I could get excited about it, he spit it out, but then he turned back to it and grabbed it for good."

This wasn't Daillie's first rodeo, and he took his time — about 45 minutes — to tire the fish out and boat it.

Tom Mills' red grouper of 11.48 pounds took first place in the grouper category, Philip Bellmore's trout was a winner at 3.86 pounds, and Jerry McKinney took first place in the new redfish class, with a drum of 7.38 pounds. Congratulations, Jerry McKinney, you'll always be No. 1; the first winner of the redfish category in the Cobia Big Fish Tournament.

Tight lines to you.

Key, Rotary annual fishing tourney

The Key Training Center and the Rotary Club of Inverness are making waves, along with an increasing number of supporters and sponsors throwing their lines in for some exciting changes to the Key's annual fishing tournament.

The date has been set for Saturday, Sept. 21, with participants launching from Wallace Brooks Park in Inverness by 7 a.m. and activities taking place throughout the day until the return of the boats at 3 p.m.

A new location, new sponsors and new activities warrant a new name, the Rotarians decided, christening the Inverness Rotary Bass Blasters to benefit the Key Training Center.

Apopka Marine has grabbed the title sponsorship, which ensures that collectible T-shirts will commemorate the fishing experience.

For more information about the Inverness Rotary Bass Blasters Fishing Tournament to benefit the Key Training Center, call 352-287-1773.

Wildlife Ranger Camps for kids

The Florida Department of Environmental Protection's Ellie Schiller Homosassa Springs Wildlife State Park will offer two weeklong Wildlife Ranger Camps in June and July.

The Friends of Homosassa Springs Wildlife Park sponsor the programs. June's Wildlife Ranger Camp is for children ages 8 and 9 years old, and runs June 17 through June 22. July's Wildlife Ranger Camp is for children ages 10 through 12, and runs from July 15 through July 20.

Applications for the Wildlife Ranger Camp are available in the park office. Each program is limited to 20 campers and will be filled on a first-come basis, with preference to those who have never attended before.

Each Wildlife Ranger Camp includes four half-day camp sessions from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. Monday through Thursday. The Friday session starts at 4 p.m. with an overnight stay in the park. A graduation ceremony will be at 11 a.m. on Saturday. The cost of the program is $65 per child and includes a T-shirt and supplies.

Applicants will be asked to write a short essay on an animal that lives in Florida and why they think that animal is important, to attach to their application. Parents and guardians may stop by the park office in the Visitor Center on U.S. 19 to pick up an application. For more information, call Tricia Fowler at 352-628-5343, ext. 1002.

in the same game.

"Every day he comes in and gives it his best," quarterback Josh Freeman said, adding the return this season of Nicks and Joseph should give Martin a chance to be even more effective in 2013.

"Having Carl and Davin back and healthy, that's going to make a huge difference," Freeman added. "I'm not saying you're expecting a drop-off or anything, but those are two All Pro-caliber guys coming back, and I know they're really hungry, really eager to get back on the field."

The soft-spoken running back's success as a rookie may have surprised some people, but not coach Greg Schiano, who has likened Martin's style to that of Baltimore's Ray Rice, who played for Schiano at Rutgers.

As part of his preparation for the upcoming season, Martin has been watching film of some of the all-time great NFL running backs, including Jim Brown and Walter Payton.

"They're relentless runners," Martin said. "What I learn from watching them is it took three or four guys to bring them down. Don't let one guy bring you down, just always run hard."

As good as Martin was as a rookie, Schiano said he — and the entire offense for that matter — figures to benefit from a second year in the Bucs system.

"Absolutely," Schiano said. "If you look at him, I think he looks better now than he did this time last year — physically, understanding-wise, all those things. I think there's another level for him for sure."

THE VEGAN KITCHEN

To me, the best part of summer isn't going to the beach or taking in a sunset at 8:30 p.m. Those things are great, to be sure, but there isn't much that can top a salad bowl full of vegetables straight from the garden.

To understand what I'm talking about, all you have to do is bite into one of my in-laws' tiny, delectable, perfectly crisp Kirby cucumbers or smell the aroma of a just-picked heirloom tomato as you cut into it.

Although I love fall and winter, I can't help but miss this time of year — the time when watermelon becomes a dietary staple and there's a seemingly never-ending supply of fresh, local produce. So many fruits and vegetables are in season now, and we're fortunate to be in an area where you can pick your own local fruits and veggies.

If you read this week's Summer in Citrus feature, you may recall that I visited Arbor Trails Nursery in Inverness over the weekend. I talked to some folks who enjoy fresh produce as much as I do, and I picked a bunch of sweet peppers while I was there. Between what I bought there and elsewhere and my mother- and father-in-law's generous gifts from the garden, I had enough to create a plant-based feast that incorporates some of the best flavors of summer.

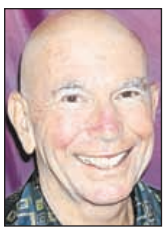
Old West plays role in modern wine



Ron Drinkhouse

WINES & SUCH

California is by far the most important wine-growing region in the United States. It produces 90 percent of the nation's wine, almost 250 million cases a year. If it were a country, it would rank No. 4 in the world in wine production, just behind France, Italy and Spain.

Unlike the East Coast, with its native muscadine varieties, California's rich soil boasted no indigenous grape species. The first California vines were brought up from Mexico, the European origins of which were traced to the explorer Hernando Cortez. The earliest cultivators were Franciscan friars who had small vineyards alongside church missions for sacramental purposes, and doubtless also to relieve the tedium of the long work day. The grapes were named "mission" fruit.

Nothing much happened winewise until the legendary gold rush of 1849 swelled the sparse population of San Francisco from about 800 hardy souls to more than 25,000 in 1850. The rush brought with it a crowd of Italian and German immigrants with a long tradition of wine consumption in the old country.

Around the same time, a mysterious historical figure, "Count" Agoston Haraszthy, brought over from Europe thousand of cuttings of more than 300 different grape varieties, which he sold to farmers in the San Francisco bay and Los Angeles areas. The California wine industry stayed pretty much local, and then died completely with the advent of national prohibition in 1920.

Repeal in 1933 lead to run-of-the-mill products until the 1960s, when pioneers such as Dick Graff, Robert Mondavi and Joe Heitz entered the field. In the next 10 short years, California became one of the most advanced and accomplished wine regions in the world, but remained a big secret.

Until the '60s, the state was identified with sickly sweet port styles and insipid whites. Thompson seedless grapes were the main crop.

An astounding event changed all that at the now-legendary Paris tasting of 1976, when French judges were left reeling when two American labels, Stag's Leap Wine Cellars cabernet sauvignon and Chateau Montelena's chardonnay, took the blue ribbon at a blind tasting, beating out such exalted names as Mouton-Rothschild, Château Haut-Brion from Bordeaux and ultra-haute Domaine Roulot Meursault-Charmes from Burgundy. American wines had hit their stride with what would come to be known as "New World" style.

California winemakers have always been free of European restrictions regarding what grapes may be planted in specified growing regions. Of the more than 100 varieties planted, six predominate. They are four red — cabernet, merlot, zinfandel and pinot noir — and two major whites, chardonnay and sauvignon blanc.

Winemakers developed high-alcohol, big-fruit products that took advantage of California's long growing seasons. The subtlety of European "terroir" was tossed out the window in favor of what came to be designated as "fruit bombs." The American public quickly jumped on the bandwagon, and the rest, as they say, is history.

What did take a while to catch on was red wine. At cocktail parties, instead of a martini, folks asked for "A glass of white wine, please," followed a few years later by "I'll have a Chardonnay." Then along came the "French paradox," a puzzling issue: How is it that the French population outlives their American counterparts in spite of knocking back a diet loaded with foods made with rich heavy cream and sweet butter?

The answer was red wine. It seems the skins of red grapes contain puzzling compounds allowing Frenchmen and -women to escape death by heart attack and stroke to a much greater degree than their American counterparts. Merlot (folks no longer pronounced the "t") and all the other reds turned into the hottest good news.*

I recommend visiting the wineries of California; you can journey from one end of the state to the other and find a winery just about anywhere.

Let's say you decide to stay in San Francisco and do Sonoma. Up you drive on U.S. 101, branch off in Healdsburg to Highway 128 north through the Dry Creek Valley. The world is now your oyster, with more than 30 world-class wineries to visit.

Use the Internet to pick out the smaller wineries to stop at. They cost less and more attention to the individual patron is assured. Don't do more than three in any one day. A stopover will likely take about two hours, with half a dozen samplings for each — and believe me, three is plenty. Drive slowly back to your hotel and have a great dinner with several bottles of the favorite wines you purchased. Sleep well.

So California, here you come!

*Drinkers of white wines and blush grapes, please carry on as always!

Remember to honor dads, dads-in-law, this Father's Day

Julianne Mann

OVER EASY

Our fathers couldn't have been more different in most respects. But as Father's Day approached this year, my husband Arnold and I were reminiscing about our dads in very positive ways and discovered a few similarities.

Both men had drive and imagination and persevered during very tough times, including the Great Depression. Arnold's father in East Islip, Long Island, and mine in Goshen, Ind.

The respect and reverence my husband has for his father manifested early on when Arnold legally changed his middle name of William to that of his father to become Arnold S. Munn II.

Arnold senior lived a life made hard after he lost his left arm and part of a leg when he was hit by a trolley car in Pittsburgh, Pa., when as a small child. While raising a family in Long Island with his wife Frieda (Niese), he earned a law degree, was appointed Islip Terrace postmaster by President Herbert Hoover and l ater became financial officer for Pilgrim State Hospital for many years.

But it wasn't just work that consumed him. He organized a Little League team, served as Boy Scout scoutmaster, founded and taught a junior craftsmen's program, was a volunteer fireman and an East Islip school board member for nearly 20 years. Under his leadership, the K-12 school once housed in a single building expanded into a multiple-school complex.

"He also had chickens, ducks, rabbits and anything that would help feed the family," my husband recalled from the leaner days of his youth. "My father could do anything anyone with two good arms could do and usually do it better."

"Not only was he handicapped, he had a beautiful victory garden during World War II. His garden was filmed and shown on newsreels at movie theaters," my husband said.

Asked if his father inspired him to become a teacher for 25 years, my husband remarked "he inspired me to do everything."

My dad was born poor as dirt in southeast Georgia, lived part of his young hardscrabble life with an uncle and aunt and later with his father and stepmother in south Florida. His schooling was limited, but he could build anything, using his native intelligence to figure out any logistics. An avid reader, he made it a lifelong project to self-educate, and he succeeded.

He mostly drove 18-wheelers long distance for a living, but was an entrepreneur of the highest order after a hitch in the U.S. Navy during World War II.

Just a couple of the businesses he started included a studio and freelance photography, home repair, and later, after triple bypass heart surgery, he indulged in his greatest love: cooking at his own Southern pit barbecue restaurant in Syracuse, Ind.

My love of good food and cooking was surely gleaned from my father, whose expertise in the kitchen was legendary in our extended family. While on the road, piloting his semi-truck from coast to coast, we always looked forward to the surprise foods he would bring home, from Florida winter strawberries to chili peppers from New Mexico.

Nothing was more fun when he arrived home than climbing way up into the seat of the huge truck that occupied a city block in front of our home — to the jealous delight of neighborhood kids.

He never forgot his roots, and when it was time for him and my mother to retire, they chose Crystal River and finally, after too many years in Yankeeland, My dad was once again back home in the South, tending a garden and cooking chicken and dumplings, fried fresh okra and many other Southern dishes.

Our fathers and mothers are no longer with us, but the memories are vivid and precious, especially on Father's Day and Mother's Day.

Bridge

PHILLIP ALDER
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Anna Quindlen, an author and journalist, said, "Life is not so much about beginnings and endings as it is about going on and on and on. It is about muddling through the middle."

Bridge deals, though, are about all of the tricks, the beginning, middle and end. One must be careful about jumping to conclusions at the beginning.

In this deal, how should South play in three no-trump after West leads the spade eight?

When North balances with two clubs, he may bid a couple of points lighter than he would have needed in second position. So when South advances, he should add a couple of points for his actions — hence two no-trump, not three no-trump. But North, because he has a full-weight overcall, raises.

Declarer starts with seven top tricks: one spade, three hearts, one diamond and two clubs. Obviously, the clubs will provide several extra winners. Also, because the spade queen can be established immediately, it looks natural for declarer to play low from the board at trick one.

However, that could be fatal. East can win with his spade king and shift to diamonds. Then, when he gets in with his club trick, the defenders run the diamonds. (Yes, if South first cashes his major-suit winners, East will have to unblock diamonds, keeping a low card, but West's carding should have made it clear to do that.)

Instead, declarer should take the first trick with dummy's spade ace and play a low club, covering East's card as cheaply as possible to allow for a 4-0 split. Here, he wins with his five and must take at least 10 tricks.

ANNIE'S MAILBOX

Dear Annie: About a year ago, I ran into a woman I used to spend time with in high school. We are both married, although she is going through a divorce.

Since that day, she and I have been talking quite a bit. We discuss a lot of different things, all on a platonic level. The problem is, I believe I am becoming infatuated with her again. I had a thing for her throughout high school but never had the courage to ask her out, probably because I was too afraid to lose our friendship.

I am now in a situation where I won't be home for a few months. I know I will miss her communication. I feel I'm doing something wrong. Is this normal? Do I need to just keep my distance and cease contact? — Back in High School

Dear Back: You recognize that you are "becoming" infatuated (we think you are already there) and will miss this woman's communication. The fact that she is going through a divorce also puts you in an awkward position, because she may lean on you for comfort, and when she becomes available, you will find her hard to resist.

Please back far, far away before you find yourself enmeshed in an affair, whether emotional or physical. If your marriage needs revitalizing, work on it. Consider how your wife would feel if she found out how close you are to this other woman. How would you feel if she did this to you? You are playing with fire. Stop.

Dear Annie: This summer, I have my concert tickets ordered and am excited to see some of my favorite performers on stage. However, I'm unsure of proper etiquette after a problem I encountered last year.

I went to a country concert, which meant plenty of beer and dancing. The problem was, as soon as the audience stood up, the people directly behind me started yelling at my friend and me to sit down. We did, but we couldn't see a thing because of the dozens of rows of people standing in front of us. We stood back up, only to be yelled at again. I turned around and explained that everyone else was standing and they should do the same. They were angry and continued to yell throughout the concert. After the concert, they sarcastically thanked us for ruining their night.

What is the right way to handle people like this? Should I sit and see nothing because misery loves company? — Juliana

Dear Juliana: Concerts have evolved into two basic types: The formal concert, where everyone sits, and the informal concert, where people often stand. Once the people in the rows ahead of you get up, you need to do the same in order to see. We have advised people who attend such concerts to try to get seats in the front row or first-row balcony if they want their view unobstructed. Those who are in wheelchairs often find there is a handicapped section, although it may be necessary to find an usher and inquire.

It is unrealistic at informal events to expect hundreds of other people to sit down for your convenience. If this happens again, apologize to the people behind you and suggest that they, too, stand up or move closer to the aisle for a better view. You are not obligated to sit if the people in front of you are standing.

Dear Annie: "An Anxious Mom" was reluctant to give money from her late husband's will to her 58-year-old unemployed son who is living on his veterans benefits. One of your suggestions was to put the money in a trust.

Please suggest she check into creating a special needs trust for her son. If she gives the money directly to him, he will probably spend it very quickly, but he could also lose his VA benefits. She will need to consult a lawyer knowledgeable in these matters. — M.

Hi, my name is Cooper and I am a lovable indoor domestic short hair male cat. I am in search of a care giver who will provide me with food, water, and a safe environment where I can sleep and play the day away in exchange for attention and affection. I live with other cats in my foster home, but I prefer to be an only child. I'm a little shy at first, but I will warm up to you ... of course, cat treats help! If you think we would be a purrfect match I would enjoy meeting you. My English is a little rusty so if you would like to arrange a meeting you can call my care giver. 352-610-6122
