

Port Citrus project moves to next stage

Consultant's study says property has potential for shipping bulk materials by barge

INVERNESS — Citrus County commissioners are keeping their sights on developing a port on the Cross Florida Barge Canal. Commissioners, sitting as the Citrus County Port Authority, backed Tuesday the first of a two-part feasibility study that targets a barge port at Hollinswood Harbor, an approved but-not-yet-built development owned by Dixie Hollins on the northwest side of the barge canal at U.S. 19. The study essentially ruled out anything but barges for the port. It said the canal's depth of 12 feet cannot accommodate container ships and there is no potential for a rail line to the site.

Fred Ferrin, vice president of TranSystems Corp., the consultant hired by the county to conduct the feasibility study, said Scouting is in Cliff Hammer's blood. He began his Boy Scout career 67 years ago at the age of 8. At 14, Hammer earned his Eagle Scout badge and is presently an assistant scout master of the Gulf Ridge Council Troop 452.

The awards Cliff Hammer displays in his living room, the rope system he created in his barn, the stories he recalls — they all chronicle the life he was influenced to lead. Hammer, who grew up in South Florida and has lived in Hernando for 12 years, has led a Boy Scout's life — literally. He has been active in the Boy Scouts on one side of the Mississippi River or the other for 67 years. "I have enjoyed the camaraderie of being with other boys of the same good moral character," Hammer said. "My experience with being a Scout has helped me with self-reliance in life. I enjoyed the ability to try something and being able to stick with it until I achieved my goal. I follow the Scout law." At only 8 years old, Hammer joined the Cub Scouts and became a member of Boy Scout Troop 21 of Coconut Grove at the young age of 11. "When I joined Boy Scouts, my scout master was Al Dickert," Hammer recalled. "Al had been in the Army prior to World War II. His

Court reins in voting law

Ruling ends federal scrutiny

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A deeply divided Supreme Court threw out the most powerful part of the landmark Voting Rights Act on Tuesday, a decision deplored by the White House but cheered by mostly Southern states now free from nearly 50 years of intense federal oversight of their elections. Split along ideological and partisan lines, the justices voted 5-4 to strip the government of its most potent tool to stop voting bias — the requirement in the Voting Rights Act that all or parts of 15 states with a history of discrimination in voting, mainly in the South, get Washington's approval before changing the way they hold elections. Chief Justice John Roberts, writing for a majority of conservative, Republican-appointed justices, said the law's provision that determines which states are covered is unconstitutional because it relies on 40-year-old data and does not account for racial progress and other changes in U.S. society. The decision effectively puts an end to the advance approval requirement that has been used to open up polling places to minority voters in the nearly half century since it was first enacted in 1965, unless Congress can come up with a new formula that Roberts said meets "current conditions" in the United States. That seems unlikely to happen any time soon.

President Barack Obama, the nation's first black chief executive, issued a statement saying he was "deeply disappointed" with the ruling and calling on Congress to update the law. But in the South, Alabama Gov. Robert Bentley said that, while the requirement was necessary in the 1960s, that was no

Grant knocks sheriff for 'stonewalling'

Appearing before commissioners, attorney says case could cost county millions

CHRIS VAN ORMER

Representing the family of a young mother who was killed last year, attorney Bill Grant told county commissioners Tuesday he intends to file another public records lawsuit against the Citrus County Sheriff's Office.

"This is doing nothing but costing the taxpayers money," Grant said after he described how he is prepared to take the action because "they are again stonewalling me in the acquisition of information I'm seeking regarding the murder of Jaimie Seeger and the public records that relates to that."

Grant also said he would file a wrongful death lawsuit and warned the Citrus County Board of County Commissioners (BOCC) it could be responsible for as much as $6 million that could be awarded to Seeger's family. Seeger, a former confidential informant for the Citrus County Sheriff's Office, was gunned down July 25, 2012, on a street in a neighborhood near Crystal River. Grant, who represents Seeger's family, said he currently is in litigation with the sheriff's office about a public records request.

Hospital foundation: No talks without settlement

Officials were scheduled to hear presentation about bids for sale of facility

MIKE WRIGHT
Staff writer

INVERNESS — The two sides in the Citrus Memorial hospital dispute remain divided even as they march toward a potential sale or lease of the county's only publicly owned hospital.

The Citrus Memorial Health Foundation, which leases the hospital from the Citrus County Hospital Board of Trustees, reiterated its position Monday that it will not participate in any transaction without settlement of pending disputes. The foundation was scheduled

Monday to hear a presentation from Josh Nemzoff, the CCHB's transaction consultant, regarding bids that were opened last week for the sale or lease of the hospital. Instead, hospital CEO Ryan Beaty said he cancelled Nemzoff's appearance because the foundation is refusing to participate in the transaction until it receives more than $6.2 million in payments from the CCHB and several lawsuits are dismissed. The foundation met behind closed doors later Monday to

School board seeks bids for gym floor

ERYN WORTHINGTON
Staff writer

Citrus County School Board members are waiting to hear from bidders about replacing the Crystal River High School (CRHS) gymnasium floor. Assistant superintendent Kenneth Blocker proposed the renovation during a board workshop Tuesday, saying there is no major construction currently occurring, other than repairs of roofs and air conditioners. Many entire school gymnasiums have been replaced; however, CRHS was not due to receive a new building.

“It is one of the smallest gyms in the county,” said board member Thomas Kennedy. “They have dealt with that with the hopes of receiving a new one. With that not being an immediate case, we have to do something. If we could limit the amount of time that students would not have a gym, the soonest we could get a bid would be best.”

Bids for replacing the floors are currently being sent out. They are receiving bids on both long-term and short-term floors.

“I think both floors would last at least 10 years,” said Superintendent of Schools Sandra “Sam” Himmel.

Financing for the floor would be taken out of the capital budget. Capital funds are allocated for property, maintenance, property insurance and similar appropriations. They cannot be utilized for salaries or insurance.

Once both bids have been collected, they will be presented to the school board for consideration.

The gym would be closed during the time of construction and maintenance personnel would paint during that period, as well.

In other business, during a special meeting board members approved instructional support recommendations for hire along with the following assistant principals:

■ Laura Aguilera and Phillip McLeod were both approved as assistant principals for Citrus High School. During the 2012-13 school year, Aguilera was the activities director for Citrus High School and McLeod was the dean of students.

■ Amy Crowell was approved as assistant principal at Citrus Springs Elementary School. She previously served as a teacher-on-special-assignment for Citrus Springs Elementary School.

■ Sharon Lowe was approved as assistant principal at Central Ridge Elementary School. She was a teacher-on-special-assignment at Citrus Springs Elementary School during the 2012-13 school year.

■ Sandra Sonberg was approved as assistant principal at Homosassa Elementary School.

The new positions become effective July 1.

experiences from the Army were his reasoning for us concentrating on survival skills. We practiced going out into the Everglades and existing off of the land. We would build primitive shelters instead of a tent.”

Hammer said Dickert influenced his life even more by ensuring that Scouts studied and advanced as often and rapidly as possible. Therefore, Hammer became an Eagle Scout in the minimum amount of time — age 14.

Impact is a two-way street. There is little in Hammer’s life that was not influenced by the Boy Scouts.

“I’m working with the Scouts because I want to give back something for what I received,” Hammer said. “It has been a great help to me.”

When Hammer entered Coast Guard boot camp at age 18, he said he “knew everything already before I got there because of what I picked up in the Scouts.”

Due to his Eagle Scout ranking, he was put into command to teach life skills — CPR, first aid, survival skills and knots — to the other enlistees.

“Tying knots is just a useful thing to know,” Hammer said. “There are a whole lot of things that you can do with rope. Rope is a wonderful machine. You can do anything with rope that is done with tension, but you can’t push with it.”

Hammer went on to receive his degree in construction from the University of Florida. He has been involved with, or in charge of, construction projects in various cities — with some structures 50 stories tall — throughout the United States. He attributes his successful career to knowledge gained in the Boy Scouts.

“I paid attention and studied my merit badges,” Hammer recalled. “Every merit badge has requirements to get the badge. The more you learn, the more you know. You never can tell when it is going to be useful in your life. I can think of hundreds of instances where I had a problem to solve and I solved it with knowledge that I received from the Boy Scouts.”

He told of a time when he was the master builder of the “new” Capitol building in Tallahassee. He had to complete the floors and ceilings simultaneously. Therefore, he created a spider web formation out of rope, laid a temporary floor over the rope and completed both projects at once.

He continued diverse construction projects throughout his life until he retired at the age of 62 in North Carolina. He and his wife, Wallie, decided to return to Florida.

“It was two Floridians coming home,” Wallie said. “We came to Citrus County because it was affordable. I took a map and a compass and drew a circle. We figured that we could go to Tampa, Orlando or Gainesville.”

Hammer became involved with his current Scout troop two years ago — Troop 452 — and is now one of six assistant scout masters.

“He got to know the boys when they were serving a dinner at the Masonic Lodge in Brooksville,” Wallie Hammer said. “He has been known as ‘Mr. Cliff’ ever since.”

Wallie described her husband as “Mr. Survival.”

“If you were to be lost in the woods or stranded on an island, you’d want to have Cliff there with you. He would be sure to have some of his favorite survival tools with him such as duct tape, Velcro and WD-40.”

discuss litigation. Afterward foundation members agreed to re-send to the hospital board an April 11 letter stating they will not participate in the transaction until the lawsuits and budgetary matters are settled.

Hospital foundation attorney Clark Stillwell said foundation members are keeping abreast of bid developments. He noted that board members attended the bid openings last week and plan to attend a 3 p.m. July 10 CCHB meeting in the county commission chambers where companies are expected to present their bids.

“The process may be separate, but equal, to coin a phrase,” he said.

Trustees received five bids. One was for consulting and it was dismissed. Another was a merger that offered no financial considerations.

The other three bids came from Hospital Corporation of America (HCA), Health Management Associates (HMA) and Regional Care Hospital Partners.

CCHB attorney Bill Grant delivered Monday evening to Stillwell an offer to dismiss lawsuits once both the foundation and hospital board agreed on a bidder. Stillwell said the foundation’s response is to reiterate its April position.

Grant said the foundation is only hurting chances for a successful bid by refusing to participate in the process.

“They’re trying to extort the hospital board,” he said.

Because the foundation leases the hospital from CCHB, both groups must agree on a sale or lease.

Grant said he would hope both the CCHB and foundation would choose a bidder when they meet separately in late July. He said once a letter of intent is signed, negotiations would take several months.

Man faces battery charge

Sheriff’s office: Man used club to attack girlfriend’s estranged husband

A.B. SIDIBE

Staff writer

A Hernando man is facing aggravated battery charges after he allegedly took a wooden club to the head and body of his girlfriend’s estranged husband. Billy Roy Massey, 37, of East Hartford Street, was arrested Monday night and charged with aggravated battery with a deadly weapon. His bond is $5,000. The woman, according to the Citrus County Sheriff’s Office, had gone to the estranged husband’s home, also in Hernando, to check on the dogs and get some clothes. She told investigators as she and her estranged husband emerged from the residence and she was walking to her vehicle, Massey pulled up and got out of his vehicle, wielding a wooden club. Massey reportedly began attacking the woman’s estranged husband — hitting him on the back with the club. The man tried running into his garage, but Massey gave chase and knocked him down on the garage floor and continued striking him in the back of the head.

According to the report, the woman’s pleas for Massey to stop were unsuccessful. She then ran to a neighbor’s home to call police. When investigators arrived at the scene, they found the man lying on the floor of the garage, bloodied and bruised. The report described a 1-inch gash on the back of his head, several abrasions on his back and a lot of blood on the garage floor. Massey had already left the scene. The man was transported to Seven Rivers Regional Medical Center near Crystal River. Deputies later found Massey at his residence and he agreed to speak with investigators. Massey reportedly told them after he began hitting the man in the driveway, the man ran into the garage and was saying he was going to get his gun. He told investigators that’s when he chased after the man and pulled him down to the garage floor. Massey also told investigators the club was actually a stick he picked up from the side of the road and that he threw it into the woods after the incident. Investigators were unable to locate the club/stick. Massey was arrested and transported to the Citrus County Detention Center.

A volunteer literacy instructor was recognized for her vision of continuing, life-long education. Carla Heimer received the Outstanding Literacy Volunteer Award at the 2013 Florida Literacy Awards Banquet. This award honors a literacy volunteer who has demonstrated exceptional service and commitment in either tutoring or program operations. Moving from Lake County to Citrus County in 2012, Heimer explained to literacy staff at the Citrus County Library System her involvement in the pre-GED classes in Lake County. Plans for implementing the libraries’ free pre-GED classes soon began in June 2012, which piloted classes of language arts and foundational math. A “GED” is a high school equivalency degree. “The goal is to encourage them in lifelong learning by turning around their discouragement in education,” Heimer said. “My personal goal is to get them through my class and to enroll in another class, whether here or at another institution. I would love to see them get into a community college. The goal is to keep them learning. Wherever they are we can help them move forward from there. Learning should be something that you do your whole life.” Pre-GED classes — foundational math, algebra/geometry, language arts, essay writing and science/social studies — have risen to new heights, thanks to Heimer’s dedication to creating curriculum and specialized instructional materials. Susan Mutschler wrote in her nomination of Heimer, “Nearly 100 percent of the library’s pre-GED program’s

Hesitant TPO moves toward merger

Board again seeks assurances about joining Hernando Co.

CHRIS VAN ORMER

Staff writer

Several board members raised issues Monday about proceeding with a merger with the Hernando County Metropolitan Planning Organization, but after discussion the Citrus County Transportation Planning Organization (TPO) agreed to move to the next phase of negotiations with its neighbor to the south. Following a presentation about current merger arrangements by Bob Clifford, director of the Tampa Bay Area Regional Transportation Authority (TBARTA) — who is the TPO’s consultant — board member Paula Wheeler, representing Crystal River City Council, questioned why Citrus County could not have an equal number of seats as Hernando County on the proposed merged board. “Please forgive me, but I’m going to direct this at the BOCC board members,” Wheeler said, referring to the Board of County Commissioners. “It appears that you have no problem being outnumbered in county BOCC members.”

The current merger deal would seat six Hernando County board members — all five county commissioners and a representative from Brooksville — and five Citrus County members — three county commissioners and representatives from Inverness and Crystal River. Commissioner Scott Adams said, “I was thinking more of being a single independent.” Clifford said the TPO could appeal for its own MPO, but the Florida Department of Transportation would need to recommend it to the governor. However, the Florida Department of Transportation made it clear it would not do that because the state already has more

MPOs than any other state. Transportation projects are not determined by county lines, but are regional, he said. Clifford said by population counts, Hernando could require two seats more than Citrus, but hadn’t done so. He also said Citrus would get the best representation by merging with Hernando rather than any other adjacent MPO. Basing his opinion on his disappointment with the state’s plans to widen U.S. 19 without more consultation, Crystal River City Councilman Robert Holmes said the seat numbers should be even or the TPO could back out. Clifford, however, advised that the TPO needed to be part of an MPO to access federal funding for road projects. If the TPO remained in place, Clifford said it was his opinion FDOT “was not interested in working with a TPO,” as the county has to become part of an MPO because the 2010 census revealed it contained an urbanized area, putting it under federal requirements. Instead, Citrus would lose its voice in regional projects. The board agreed for Clifford to meet again with Hernando. Then, the two groups will have a joint meeting for a possible merger. PORT the port's biggest potential is as an exporter of bulk materials, such as wood pallets, aggregate and concrete slabs.

He said the port property would be well suited for warehouses.

The second part of the study, due in October, is set to develop a business plan for the port.

The study, which commissioners received just as the port authority meeting began, did not address specific issues regarding infrastructure, transportation or funding.

Instead, it said property improvements, such as roads and sewers, would be dictated by needs of future port tenants.

Ferrin said state funding is readily available for funding, but he offered no specifics for Port Citrus.

The vote to continue the study was 4-1, with Commissioner Scott Adams opposed.

Adams said the county has spent too much on developing a port plan, even though there are no agreements with any landowner to lease property.

County Attorney Richard Wesch said it was premature to approach Hollins about a lease prior to the feasibility study's conclusion.

Adams said private interests, not county government, should drive the port's creation.

"If it's such a great deal, why isn't private business pushing this?" Adams said.

Commissioner Joe Meek said the county's expenses pale in comparison to the potential benefit of diversifying the economic base.

"It's worth exploring in a limited fashion using limited resources," he said.

Meek noted the TransSystems study cost $100,000 but the county's tab was only $8,000, with the rest coming from the state and the Economic Development Council.

Adams said the county's cost doesn't include staff time. "It's hundreds of thousands of dollars," he said.

Meek said it was absurd to lump staff time into the cost of the port project.

"That's one of the most ridiculous things Commissioner Adams has said to date, and he's said many ridiculous things," Meek said.

Commissioner Dennis Damato, who chairs the port authority, said the county lacks in warehouse space and that the sparsely populated northwest section of the county is perfect for port development.

"A lot of people in this county," Damato said, "don't even know what's there."

"I want to make sure that you know that the response they gave was quote 'the request was a burden, an annoyance, oppressive,'" Grant told the BOCC.

"I'm going to litigate that matter in August," Grant said. "But I'm here to tell you this is doing nothing but costing the taxpayers money."

Grant then said he ultimately would pursue a wrongful death lawsuit.

"We estimate that to be between $3 million and $6 million for the adjudicated damages, for the balance for the two children that are left," Grant said. "So it's with a heavy burden that I tell you this. It's at a very bad financial time for our county. We have tried in vain to initiate conversations to no avail."

Heather Yates, CCSO spokeswoman, said the sheriff's office had no statement at this time.

In other business, the BOCC:

- Voted by 4-1 to borrow up to $3 million at 2.8 percent for 15 years with no payments due until Oct. 14, 2014, to engage Schneider Electric Buildings America Inc. to make energy-saving improvements in several county buildings, with a contract price of $2,986,292. Commissioner Scott Adams cast the lone "no" vote. Read Thursday's Chronicle for details.
- Increased the water and wastewater utility regulatory assessment fee to 4.5 percent from 3 percent, after a public hearing. The action was taken to keep regulation of private water and wastewater utilities local rather than allowing them to be regulated by the Public Service Commission in Tallahassee. Several private utility owners spoke in favor of the increase, which they said would assist customer services and ultimately keep fees down. The commissioners voted with unanimous support.

- Heard a presentation by Lace Blue-McLean representing Citrus 20/20, which conducted a countywide survey about the county government budget. Commissioners took copies of participants' anonymous comments and asked further questions about residents' understanding about government functions and services. Blue-McLean said that after the next budget, her group could consider offering taxpayers more information about government services and getting more feedback.

longer the case. He said, "We have long lived up to what happened then, and we have made sure it's not going to happen again."

The advance approval, or preclearance, requirement shifted the legal burden and required governments that were covered to demonstrate that their proposed election changes would not discriminate.

Going forward, the outcome alters the calculus of passing election-related legislation in the affected states and local jurisdictions. The threat of an objection from Washington has hung over such proposals for nearly a half century. Unless Congress acts, that deterrent now is gone.

That prospect has upset civil rights groups which especially worry that changes on the local level might not get the same scrutiny as the actions of state legislatures.

Tuesday's decision means that a host of state and local laws that have not received Justice Department approval or have not yet been submitted can take effect. Prominent among those are voter identification laws in Alabama and Mississippi.

Texas Attorney General Greg Abbott, a Republican, said his state's voter ID law, which a panel of federal judges blocked as discriminatory, also would be allowed to take effect.

Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg, dissenting from the ruling along with the court's three other liberal, Democratic appointees, said there was no mistaking the court's action.

"Hubris is a fit word for today's demolition" of the law, she said.

Reaction to the ruling from elected officials generally divided along partisan lines.

Mississippi Lt. Gov. Tate Reeves, a Republican, said in a news release, "The practice of preclearance unfairly applied to certain states should be eliminated in recognition of the progress Mississippi has made over the past 48 years."

But Democratic Rep. Bennie Thompson, the only black lawmaker in Mississippi's congressional delegation, said the ruling "guts the most critical portion of the most important civil rights legislation of our time."

Alabama Gov. Bentley, a Republican, pointed to his state's legislature — 27 percent black, similar to Alabama's overall population — as a sign of the state's progress.

The court challenge came from Shelby County, Ala., a Birmingham suburb.

The prior approval requirement had applied to the states of Alabama, Alaska, Arizona, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, Texas and Virginia. It also covered certain counties in California, Florida, New York, North Carolina and South Dakota, and some local jurisdictions in Michigan.

Coverage was triggered by past discrimination not only against blacks, but also against American Indians, Asian-Americans, Alaska Natives and Hispanics.

Obama, whose historic election was a subtext in the court's consideration of the case, pledged that his administration would continue to fight discrimination in voting.

"While today's decision is a setback, it doesn't represent the end of our efforts to end voting discrimination," the president said. "I am calling on Congress to pass legislation to ensure every American has equal access to the polls."

Congress essentially ignored the court's threat to upend the voting rights law in a similar case four years ago. Roberts said the "failure to act leaves us today with no choice."

Congressional Democrats said they are eager to make changes, but Republicans were largely noncommittal.

Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said he expects Republicans to block efforts to revive the law, even though a Republican-led Congress overwhelmingly approved its latest renewal in 2006 and President George W. Bush signed it into law.

"As long as Republicans have a majority in the House and Democrats don't have 60 votes in the Senate, there will be no preclearance. It is confounding that after decades of progress on voting rights, which have become part of the American fabric, the Supreme Court would tear it asunder," Schumer said.

Attorney General Eric Holder said the Justice Department "will not hesitate to take swift enforcement action, using every legal tool that remains available to us, against any jurisdiction that seeks to take advantage of the Supreme Court's ruling by hindering eligible citizens' full and free exercise of the franchise."

Those federal tools include other permanent provisions of the Voting Rights Act that prohibit discrimination and apply nationwide. But they place the burden of proof on the government and can be used only one case at a time.

The Obama administration and civil rights groups said there is a continuing need for the federal law and pointed to the Justice Department's efforts to block voter ID laws in South Carolina and Texas last year, as well as a redistricting plan in Texas that a federal court found discriminated against the state's large and growing Hispanic population.

The justices all agreed that discrimination in voting still exists.

But Roberts said that the covered states have largely eradicated the problems that caused them to be included in the first place.

"The coverage formula that Congress reauthorized in 2006 ignores these developments, keeping the focus on decades-old data relevant to decades-old problems, rather than current data reflecting current needs," the chief justice said.

Ginsburg countered that Congress had found that the prior-approval provision was necessary "to prevent a return to old ways."

Market rises: less on Fed chatter, more on economy

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Wall Street got back to focusing on the economy instead of the Federal Reserve on Tuesday, sending stocks higher.

Four reports showed a brightening U.S. economy. Housing and manufacturing continued to improve, and consumer confidence hit its highest level in 5 1/2 years.

The major U.S. stock indexes closed higher, with the Dow Jones industrial average shooting up 100.75 points, or 0.7 percent, to 14,760.31. The Standard & Poor's index rose 14.94 points, or 1 percent, to 1,588.03.

The triple-digit rise in the Dow continues a bout of market volatility caused by investors and traders who are worried about the Fed ending its economic stimulus. Last Wednesday, Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke said he expects the Fed to end its bond buying by the middle of 2014 if it feels the economy can manage without that stimulus.

The Dow then plunged by triple digits on three of the next four trading days, with investors worried that the market would struggle without the Fed propping it up.

Some investors have concluded that the recent sell-offs were overblown. Quincy Krosby, a market strategist at Prudential Financial, guessed that shorter-term traders were the ones buying stocks Tuesday because they judged that parts of the market were "oversold."

Long-term investors are likely still sitting on the sidelines, waiting for further signs that markets are becoming less volatile, she said.

Among the biggest gainers were big dividend payers like phone and power companies. These are stocks that have been hit the hardest by the recent sell-off.

The big economic reports Tuesday revealed: ■ Orders for durable goods rose 3.6 percent in May, matching April's gain. The gauge is important because U.S. manufacturing has generally struggled this year as demand for American exports slows in other parts of the world.

■ Home prices rose 2.5 percent in April compared with March, the biggest month-over-month gain since 2000, according to the S&P/Case-Shiller index of 20 cities.

■ The Conference Board's consumer confidence index jumped to 81.4 in June, the best reading since January 2008. The May reading, however, was revised down to 74.3 from the original estimate of 76.2.

■ Sales of new homes rose in May to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 476,000, the Commerce Department said. That was the fastest pace since July 2008. Though sales of new homes remain below the 700,000 annual rate that most economists consider healthy, the pace has jumped 29 percent from a year ago.

Business HIGHLIGHTS

Report: IRS credit cards used for wine, pornography

WASHINGTON — A government watchdog said lax oversight by the Internal Revenue Service allowed workers to use agency credit cards to buy wine for an expensive luncheon and, in one case, romance novels, diet pills and baby clothes.

Two IRS credit cards were used to buy on-line pornography, though the employees reported the cards stolen. One of the workers reported five agency credit cards lost or stolen.

A report Tuesday by the IRS inspector general found the vast majority of purchases by IRS employees legitimate. However, the report said the IRS has inadequate controls to stop inappropriate purchases.

FDA takes small step in tobacco product backlog

RICHMOND, Va. — The Food and Drug Administration is taking a small step to whittle away a backlog of 4,000 tobacco product applications, some of which have lingered for more than two years.

The federal agency said Tuesday it has authorized two non-menthol versions of Lorillard Inc.'s flagship Newport brand under a 2009 law that gave the FDA authority over tobacco.

It also said it has rejected four applications submitted to the agency for review, but did not disclose the products.

In addition to regulating a number of aspects of tobacco marketing and manufacturing, the FDA's Center for Tobacco Products also must review new cigarette or smokeless tobacco products.

Walgreen 3Q profit jumps, but misses estimates

Walgreen Co.'s fiscal third quarter earnings jumped 16 percent, but its shares plunged Tuesday as investors fretted over sluggish sales outside the drugstore chain's pharmacies and other troubling trends.

The Deerfield, Ill., company missed Wall Street forecasts, and its earnings grew largely because of the comparison with last year's quarter, when a business split had hurt its performance.

POLITICAL MEDDLING

Gov. Scott fails to stand by his own appointments

We are disappointed in Gov. Rick Scott.

For the second time in just a few months, Gov. Scott has failed to stand by his own appointments to the Citrus Memorial hospital governing board.

First it was governing board member Gene Davis and now it is board member Mike Bays. In both cases the governor appointed these area business leaders to sit on the governing board to help steer the public hospital through difficult times.

And in both cases when the appointees didn't follow the strict wishes of our powerful local senator, they were forced from the board.

It is true the Florida Senate must confirm the appointees to these boards, but we are disappointed that Gov. Scott would not fight for his original position.

In the most recent case of Mike Bays, the appointee was removed from the board one day before bids were opened from five hospitals offering to purchase the hospital.

Bays had been an active volunteer board member for more than a year and was deeply involved in the details of the proposed sale.

Davis was forced off the board earlier in the year because he had the nerve to vote against wasting taxpayer's money on further lawsuits against the hospital's own foundation board.

So, now two logical business leaders who have the nerve to not follow the rigid position of our state senator have gotten the boot. This is the same senator — Charles Dean of Inverness — who just a month ago held a private meeting with the hospital board's attorney and one of the firms interested in purchasing Citrus Memorial hospital.

We fail to see how such political maneuverings are in the best interest of the taxpayers and medical consumers of Citrus County.

THE ISSUE:

Hospital board appointments.

OUR OPINION:

The governor succumbed to political pressure.

Hot Corner: TREES

Happy medium

I am not a Yankee with a chainsaw. I'm a Floridian. I am not complaining about the beautiful cypress alongside the lakes — I think they're beautiful — and the Floridian trees. I'm talking about the pine trees and the rows of trees they're planting along the roads where you can't see the lake at all. It's mostly brush. It should be cut down so you can see the lake. I'm not complaining about the beautiful cypress groves that we have along the lake. They're beautiful and they're Floridian, but the pine trees and other junk isn't. I think there should be a happy medium.

Stop North-South talk

To the person who doesn't want to see the trees cut, that's a Southerner: Well, guess what? I'm a Northerner and I don't want to see the trees cut. How can you presume that the person who wanted the trees cut was a Northerner? How do you know that for a fact? Stop the North-South B.S. This is nonsense. Grow up.

Would not cut trees

I just read the article in the paper in Sound Off about "Don't cut the trees." I take offense to being called, you know, a Northerner, and giving a Northerner a chainsaw to cut all the trees off. I've lived in Florida for almost three years now and I would not cut one tree down, and that is a stereotype that everybody wants to say so everybody believes it. All my neighbors are from the North and they wouldn't cut a tree down, either.

Northerners love trees

I'm a Northerner and I take offense at the comment about giving the Northerner a chainsaw. Most Northerners love trees and want them on their property. You found the exception to the rule.

Check deed restrictions

Regarding whether you can park you RV on your property: You should always check your deed restrictions before purchasing the property. Many properties do allow it; others do not.

No dumb questions

Today is Wednesday, June 12. In response about the homes and keeping the motor homes on your property: You said it was a dumb question. Well, my question was, is it legal to keep it on your property? And how do you think other people feel about looking every day outside and seeing the motor home blocking your view? That's why I pay taxes for my house. And it's not a dumb question. The question is: Is it legal to keep a motor home in your driveway or on your property? That's the question.

Major catastrophe

Here we go again. Reading my Chronicle, June 12, and here's the Save the Manatee Club. They're going to mull over the option. They took a simple, simple problem and made it into a major catastrophe for everybody. The little bit of turbidity doesn't even hurt the manatees, since they're mammals and breathe above the water and it soon settles down.

Kudos to Harley

Last week, someone called in about somebody named Harley Lawrence, that he would make a wonderful person to write editorials. I agree.

No Constitution, no borders, no USA

At what point does it become clear that we no longer inhabit America? When we "Press 2," not "1" for English?

When a National Social Security Number syncs an electronic identity that the government hospital provided us at birth to track us till death?

When borders are no more, but the Surveillance State always knows where we are?

Ours is the age of dislocation before realization: The United States of America no longer exists. Why? How? The answer is simple, tragic and outrageous: Government officials, elected and unelected, with precious exceptions, no longer preserve, protect and defend the U.S. Constitution. Instead, they do whatever it takes to beat it, flout it and ignore it. Worse, We, the People, let them.

This can't go on. Otherwise our country-'tis-of-thee becomes a melody to be forgotten, a mirage of a tradition more storybook than real every day. Nowhere is this more the case, of course, than in Washington, D.C., where absolute unaccountability corrupts absolutely, where echoing down the cool, white marble halls of power, hollow men and women trample sovereignty and citizenship in a pathway to American betrayal. And I haven't even gotten to Congress, busy, busy "reforming" the illegal alien crisis they antiseptically refer to as "immigration," while considering passage of a $940 billion "farm bill," 80 percent of which will fund food stamps. These two laws alone can institutionalize the lawlessness of the land and make countless more Americans wards of the state.

Meanwhile, there is in Washington a faceless power-mongery that lives and works in the shadows. City by city, rural state by rural state, its mechanisms of "immigration," "refugee resettlement," and socialist government programs overwhelm a near-impotent citizenry with alien cultures, religions, languages and traditions. There is no "melting pot" out there, nor is there even residual belief in one — particularly not on the part of the state. Most of our new peoples will never embrace American constitutional virtues en masse to perpetuate them because their own sponsor, their own lifeline, is the mega-state that brought them here and supports them.

This goes for newcomers from the Hispano-sphere, 75 percent of whom, Pew reported in 2012, believe the U.S. government isn't big enough and want more government services. It also goes for Muslim "refugee resettlement" populations, willfully deployed by this same power-mongery to displace and erase what we may one day look back on as just another indigenous culture that Washington overlords destroyed.

Then there is the faceless power-mongery that transforms the country, ironically, in the name of "national security." How can "national security" be achievable in an America without borders? It is a post-9/11 fact that more than one million Americans, government employees and contactors, now have "top-secret" access. They monitor our electronic lives, and collect all of our telephone numbers, something we have learned from the completely unauthorized but vital disclosures of Edward Snowden. This mass monitoring, we are told repeatedly, is what it takes to prevent "another 9/11."

Never mind those pinprick jihad attacks in Boston, Arkansas or Fort Hood. In fact, never mind jihad, period. This same Surveillance State has officially eliminated jihad as a subject to be taught or studied by security agencies and the military. In this way, every one of us becomes a suspect.

"Why do you need every telephone number?" NBC's Andrea Mitchell asked Director of National Intelligence James Clapper. "Why is it such a broad vacuum cleaner approach?"

"Well, you have to start somewhere," Clapper replied.

Incredibly, this deaf, dumb and blind vacuum-cleaner approach is touted as effective enough to have prevented 9/11 in the first place. So stresses former CIA and NSA chief Michael Hayden, a booster of the warrantless "data mining" of the PRISM program and the mass collection of all Americans' telephone records.

The mendacity of this rationale is as appalling as the hyper-state it enables. Just ask the airline ticket taker in Boston who, constricted by "political correctness" forced herself to tell the al-Qaida hijackers to "have a nice flight" rather than investigate their strange pre-boarding behavior.

If our leaders really wanted to prevent "another 9/11," they would have long ago admitted the obvious: that the world of Islam, from its terrorists to its kings, is engaged in the latest historical cycle of jihad to extend the reach of Islamic law (sharia). They would have decided that "profiling" isn't worse than terrorism. They would have halted Islamic immigration not only to stop more jihad cells from forming but also to prevent Constitution-endangering, pro-sharia demographics from forming, too. They would have sharply curtailed travel, and particularly return travel from jihad nations such as Chechnya and Pakistan. They would have long ago blocked U.S. institutions, including colleges, media organizations and banks, from accepting millions of dollars from sharia-ruled dictatorships. They would have closed down mosques in America where jihad is preached and supported.

Above all, they would have secured our borders rather than leave them open all these post-9/11 years. Of course, that would mean re-establishing and defending those borders, both literally and figuratively.

That's one thing Washington, D.C., will never tolerate.

Looking for the whole picture

Was today's (June 18th) editorial written by the SEIU? Why not research and report the whole county worker compensation picture and report their wages plus their health care, vacation accrual, sick-day accrual, their pension and all the other goodies they earn outside of the paycheck? And most importantly, how is their health care and pension funded? County worker contributions or fully funded by the taxpayers or a combination of the two? plans and the county worker's retirement plans, too. Many of us have to find part-time work in our retirement, after 40 or more years of working, to make ends meet. Meanwhile, the county worker can start a second career while enjoying full retirement benefits, including health care, or go fishing while we greet people at Walmart to fund the county worker's retirement and ours and hope Medicare stays solvent.

Deaths ELSEWHERE

Richard Matheson, 87 AUTHOR

LOS ANGELES — Richard Matheson, the prolific sci-fi and fantasy writer whose "I Am Legend" and "The Shrinking Man" were transformed into films, has died. He was 87.

A spokesman for the Academy of Science Fiction, Fantasy and Horror Films said Matheson died Sunday in Los Angeles.

No other details were provided.

With a career spanning more than 60 years, Matheson crafted stories that deftly transitioned from the page to both the big and small screens. Several of his works were adapted into films, including 1953's "Hell House," 1956's "The Shrinking Man," 1958's "A Stir of Echoes" and 1978's "What Dreams May Come."

Matheson's 1954 sci-fi vampire novel "I Am Legend" inspired three different film adaptations: 1964's "The Last Man on Earth" starring Vincent Price, 1971's "Omega Man" starring Charlton Heston and 2007's "I Am Legend" starring Will Smith.

Matheson was also responsible for writing several episodes of "The Twilight Zone," as well as editions of "The Alfred Hitchcock Hour," "Rod Serling's Night Gallery," "The Martian Chronicles" and "Amazing Stories." His "Twilight Zone" installments included "Nightmare at 20,000 Feet," which featured William Shatner as an airplane passenger who spots a creature on a plane's wing, as well as "Steel," which inspired the 2011 film "Real Steel" starring Hugh Jackman.

Matheson influenced several generations of storytellers. Among them were Stephen King, who dedicated his 2006 novel "Cell" to Matheson, and Steven Spielberg, whose first feature-length film was the made-for-TV movie "Duel," based on the Matheson short story of the same name.

Matheson was scheduled to receive the visionary award at the Academy of Science Fiction, Horror and Fantasy Films' Saturn Awards on Wednesday. The organization said the award will be presented posthumously and the 39th annual ceremony would be dedicated to Matheson.

Matheson is survived by his wife and four children.

Brothers Diego, 6, and Daniel Casillas, 14, keep cool Tuesday under a water pipe in Chandler, Ariz.

Texas to execute 500th inmate

HUNTSVILLE, Texas — On Wednesday, barring a reprieve, Kimberly McCarthy will become the 500th convicted killer in Texas to receive a lethal injection.

The number far outpaces the execution total in any other state. But it also reflects the reality of capital punishment in the United States today: While some states have halted the practice in recent years because of concern about wrongful convictions, executions continue at a steady pace in many others.

The death penalty is on the books in 32 states. On average, Texas executes an inmate about every three weeks.

Calif. ordered to evacuate prisons

STOCKTON, Calif. — The head of California's prison system said Tuesday a court order to evacuate thousands of inmates from two Central Valley lockups hit hard by an infectious disease could lead to racial conflicts elsewhere.

Corrections Secretary Jeffrey Beard said officials had been awaiting the results of a U.S. Centers for Disease Control study on the outbreak before deciding how to respond.

U.S. District Judge Thelton Henderson on Monday criticized Gov. Jerry Brown's administration for delaying significant response to the problem for years and for its recent proposal to delay action for several months until the CDC can complete health studies at the prisons.

The judge ordered as many as 3,250 inmates evacuated within 90 days, but he left it up to corrections officials to determine where they should go.

The two prisons are about 10 miles apart and 175 miles southeast of San Francisco.

FBI: $1.2M gone from Swiss jet

NEW YORK — FBI agents were investigating a report that about $1.2 million disappeared from a shipment of cash flown from Switzerland to New York City as part of a banking transaction, authorities said Tuesday.

The U.S. currency — all $100 bills — was reported missing Monday after a count of the money at the Federal Reserve came up short.

The shipment had arrived at John F. Kennedy International Airport on Saturday afternoon aboard a Swiss International Air Lines flight, said FBI spokesman J. Peter Donald. The FBI is investigating whether the cash disappeared from a cargo hold in Zurich, where Flight 17 originated, or sometime after it landed.

Putin: 'Nyet' to US

Associated Press

MOSCOW — Yes, he's at a Moscow airport, and no, you can't have him.

Russian President Vladimir Putin gave the first official acknowledgment of the whereabouts of National Security Agency leaker Edward Snowden on Tuesday and promptly rejected U.S. pleas to turn him over.

Snowden, who is charged with violating American espionage laws, fled Hong Kong over the weekend, touching off a global guessing game over where he went and frustrating U.S. efforts to bring him to justice.

Putin said Snowden is in the transit zone of Sheremetyevo Airport and has not passed through Russian immigration, meaning he technically is not in Russia and thus is free to travel wherever he wants.

After arriving Sunday on a flight from Hong Kong,

Snowden registered for a Havana-bound flight Monday en route to Venezuela and then possible asylum in Ecuador, but he didn't board the plane.

Speculation has been rife that Russian security services have been talking to Snowden and might want to keep him in Russia for a more thorough debriefing, but Putin denied that.

"Our special services never worked with Mr. Snowden and aren't working with him today," Putin said at a news conference during a visit to Finland.

Because Moscow has no extradition agreement with Washington, it cannot meet the U.S. request, he said.

"Mr. Snowden is a free man, and the sooner he chooses his final destination the better it is for us and for him," Putin said. "I hope it will not affect the businesslike character of our relations with the U.S. and I hope that our partners will understand that."

Soldiers from the 10th Mountain Division salute July 28, 2010, during the National Anthem during a welcome-home ceremony in Fort Drum, N.Y. In a massive restructuring, the U.S. Army is slashing the number of active-duty combat brigades from 45 to 33, and shifting thousands of soldiers out of bases around the country as it moves forward with a longtime plan to cut the size of the service by 80,000.

Army to cut brigades

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Army will eliminate at least 12 combat brigades, relocate thousands of soldiers and cancel $400 million in construction projects as the first wave of federal budget cuts takes aim at military communities around the country.

In a massive restructuring, Army leaders said Tuesday they will slash the number of active duty combat brigades from 45 to 33, as the service moves forward with a longtime plan to cut the size of the service by 80,000. And they warned that more cuts — of as many as 100,000 more active duty, National Guard and Reserve soldiers — could be coming if Congress allows billions of dollars in automatic budget cuts to continue next year.

The sweeping changes would eliminate brigades — which number from 3,500 to 5,000 troops — at 10 Army bases in the U.S. by 2017, including those in Texas, Kentucky, Georgia, Colorado, North Carolina, New York, Kansas and Washington. The Army will also cut thousands of other jobs across the service, including soldiers in units that support the brigades, and two brigades in Germany have already been scheduled for elimination.

Gen. Ray Odierno, Army chief of staff, said one additional brigade will likely be cut, but no final decisions have been made.

"I know in the local communities it will have its impact," Odierno told reporters Tuesday. "But we've done our best to reach out to them so they understand what the impacts are. We've tried to make it as small an impact as possible for as many communities as we could."

Members of Congress, meanwhile, expressed concerns about the prospects for greater cuts down the road.

Rep. Howard P. "Buck" McKeon, R-Calif., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, said his panel "will carefully examine the implications of this initial restructuring, but we all must understand that this is only the tip of the iceberg, much deeper cuts are still to come."

The Army is being reduced in size from a high of about 570,000 during the peak of the Iraq war to 490,000 as part of efforts to cut the budget and reflect the country's military needs as the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan end. Odierno said that the potential 100,000 more would be spread out across the active duty, Guard and Reserves, and that there also could be reductions in the Army's 13 aviation brigades.

While the personnel cuts may have less impact at some of the Army's larger bases, such as Fort Hood in Texas and Fort Bragg in North Carolina, they could be more painful for communities around some of the smaller installations such as Fort Knox, where currently only one brigade is based.

The other seven U.S. bases that will lose a brigade are: Fort Bliss in Texas, Fort Campbell in Kentucky, Fort Carson in Colorado, Fort Drum in New York, Fort Riley in Kansas, Fort Stewart in Georgia, and Joint Base Lewis-McChord in Washington. Soldiers in the deactivated brigades would be transferred to other units.

Odierno said the Army tried to spread out the cuts geographically.

Coding camps for kids rise in popularity

Associated Press

ATLANTA — The video game Jacob Asofsky is creating is simple: "Someone who is trying to take over the world and you try to stop them."

The 12-year-old from Florida is spending two weeks at a summer camp that teaches programming skills to young people.

"It's about having fun, but it also gives them the tools to be able to do this at home because they don't have this in school," said Taylor Jones, director of the iD Tech Camp at Atlanta's Emory University.

So-called coding camps for children are becoming more popular amid a growing effort to expand access to computer programming and inspire more youths to seek computer science degrees and careers in technology. Their rise underscores a seeming mismatch in the U.S. economy: people like Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg and Tumblr founder David Karp illustrate the opportunities programming skills can create, yet universities are not graduating enough code-savvy students to meet employers' demands.

The iD Tech Camps, which have grown from 200 students in 1999 to 28,000 enrolled this year in courses at dozens of locations nationwide, use interest in gaming to build bridges to computer programming and, hopefully, careers in Web developing, film animation and app creation for smart phones. Courses start at $829 for a one-week course during the day with overnight students paying $1,348.

Early courses for children starting at age 7 use the photo and illustration software Adobe Photoshop and the gaming software Multimedia Fusion to create a simple arcade-style game.

Courses for older children include designing apps, creating sophisticated, 3-D, first-person shooter games using the Unreal Developer's Kit — also known as UDK — and learning programming languages like Java and C+++. The idea is to build self-confidence and spark interest in learning how computers work, all to perhaps plant the seed of a future career in programming.

JOHANNESBURG — Members of Nelson Mandela's family and tribal elders gathered Tuesday at the former president's rural hometown in eastern South Africa, as concern grew for the 94-year-old leader who spent a third day in critical condition in a hospital, local media reported.

The office of President Jacob Zuma said Mandela's condition remained unchanged after reporting late Sunday that his health had deteriorated to critical, alarming many South Africans as well as people around the world who regard the former president as a symbol of sacrifice and reconciliation.

Mandela's family members held a meeting at his home in Qunu village in the Eastern Cape province, 600 miles south of Johannesburg, where the anti-apartheid leader grew up. No details on what was discussed in the meeting were announced. Those at the gathering included Mandela's grandsons Mandla and Ndaba Mandela, according to press reports.

Report: Delays hit Haiti housing

WASHINGTON — The U.S. government had ambitious plans to help earthquake-ravaged Haiti where more than three-fourths of the population lives on less than $2 a day — construction of 15,000 homes in the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere.

Disputes over land rights, inaccurate estimates and higher costs have forced the U.S. Agency for International Development to drastically scale back those plans and left members of Congress questioning whether American tax dollars are delivering the help first promised after the Jan. 12, 2010, earthquake.

The Government Accountability Office, in a report released Tuesday, found as of March 2013 the agency had disbursed only 31 percent of $651 million despite the government's insistence that it was committed to Haiti's reconstruction. The GAO also found that "a substantial amount of progress on project activities remains to be completed."

Instead of 15,000 homes for 75,000 to 90,000 beneficiaries, the agency plans to build 2,649 homes for some 13,200 to 15,900 beneficiaries. In fact, the agency is expected to build 906 houses and non-government agencies and other partners are on tap to construct 1,743 homes.

Moore gets 10th win, Rays beat Blue Jays

Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG — Matt Moore overcame control problems to allow one run over six innings and the Tampa Bay Rays beat the Toronto Blue Jays 5-1 on Tuesday night.

Moore (10-3) tied career highs with six walks and 11 strikeouts en route to his 10th win this season and second straight after a three-game skid. The left-hander gave up four hits.

Tampa Bay rookie Wil Myers had an RBI single during a three-run fourth. Considered one of baseball's top prospects, the outfielder has eight RBIs in nine games since being called up June 18 from Triple-A Durham.

Mark Buehrle (4-5) gave up four runs, eight hits and four walks in five innings for the Blue Jays, who have lost two in a row since arriving at Tropicana Field after tying a franchise record with 11 consecutive wins.

Toronto, by dropping the first two games of the three-game set, has not won a series at Tampa Bay since April 2007, a stretch of 19 series.

The Blue Jays loaded the bases with one out in the third, but failed to score when Moore struck out Rajai Davis and Colby Rasmus. Toronto entered hitting .194 this season with the bases loaded.

Rays relievers Jake McGee, Kyle Farnsworth and Jamey Wright completed the six-hitter.

Tampa Bay went ahead 4-1 in the fourth on consecutive sacrifice flies by Sean Rodriguez and Ben Zobrist, and an RBI single from Myers.

No charges filed against MJD in alleged bar fight

JACKSONVILLE — Jacksonville Jaguars running back Maurice Jones-Drew will not be charged in connection with an alleged bar fight last month.

Jones-Drew had been accused of punching a bouncer at a restaurant/bar in St. Augustine over Memorial Day weekend.

The State Attorney's Office filed an "announcement of no information" Tuesday, saying "based on the facts and the law, the state cannot establish the charge beyond and to the exclusion of all reasonable doubt."

Jones-Drew declined to answer questions about the incident at a news conference this month. His agent insisted his client was not involved in an altercation with a bouncer at the Conch House on May 26. The bouncer's attorney, meanwhile, called it an "unprovoked attack."

Jones-Drew said he is pleased with the result and looks "forward to focusing on football."

Canucks hire fired Rangers coach John Tortorella

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — The Vancouver Canucks hired John Tortorella to be their new coach on Tuesday.

Tortorella was recently fired by the New York Rangers after they lost to the Boston Bruins in the playoffs in five games.

The 55-year-old Tortorella replaces former Canucks coach Alain Vigneault, who took over as the Rangers coach last week.

Tortorella has been an NHL coach since 2001. He led the Tampa Bay Lightning to the Stanley Cup championship in 2004.

As coach of the Rangers the past five seasons, Tortorella led New York to the playoffs three times.

The Boston native has reached the playoffs eight times and won the Jack Adams Award as NHL coach of the year in 2004. Known for a fiery and often abrasive style, he was let go four days after the Rangers' season ended with a second-round loss to the Bruins.

Tortorella is the career leader in wins by a U.S.-born coach with 410.

Serena Williams plays a return Tuesday to Mandy Minella during their women's first round singles match at the All England Lawn Tennis Championships in Wimbledon, London. The top-seeded Williams cruised to a 6-1, 6-3 victory.

Top seeds Williams, Djokovic coast in Wimbledon openers

Associated Press

LONDON — Back in her comfort zone on Centre Court, Serena Williams delivered an overpowering statement: When her serve is steaming, she's the woman to beat at Wimbledon.

Putting aside her recent comments that led to a couple of apologies and a brief spat with Maria Sharapova, Williams looked every bit the five-time champion. She began her Wimbledon title defense with a 6-1, 6-3 victory over Mandy Minella of Luxembourg.

"For me, it's the greatest moment for a tennis player; to walk out on Centre Court," Williams said after her first match at Wimbledon since winning the Olympic gold medal there last year. "That was such a great moment, too. So many great memories on this court."

Top-ranked Novak Djokovic also opened with a straight-sets victory, beating Florian Mayer of Germany 6-3, 7-5, 6-4. Mayer is a two-time Wimbledon quarterfinalist, losing to Djokovic at that stage last year. But he was never in danger of springing another stunner following Rafael Nadal's first-round exit a day earlier.

Djokovic took a 3-0 lead in the first set and broke for a 6-5 lead in the second to take control. He served out the match to love before saluting the crowd with a fist pump.

"It was a big pleasure again performing here on Centre Court in front of the packed crowd," Djokovic said. "For the first round, it was tricky. ... I think (Mayer's) game is really well suited for grass, so it took a lot of effort."

For Williams, this was a chance to put the focus back on tennis following the verbal jousting with Sharapova over their private lives — and comments about an Ohio rape case for which she had to apologize — and she took full advantage.

As usual on grass, the top-ranked Williams dominated with her hard serve, winning the first set without dropping a point on her service game. Her main weapon let her down only at the start of the second set, when Minella took a 2-0 lead after Williams double-faulted on break point.

She was one point from going down 3-0 but then won 15 of the next 18 points to take a 4-2 lead, and broke again to wrap up the victory.

"I feel like I was a little rusty for some reason today," Williams said. "I don't feel like I played my best. I felt really upset when I lost my serve in the second set. With that being said, I think Mandy played really well."

Much of the pre-tournament talk was about Williams and Sharapova, the two top players in the game who are on opposite sides of the draw and can't meet before the final.

"It hasn't been a distraction. Like I said, I'm just here to focus on the tennis," Williams said. "I'm just here to play Wimbledon. It's the premier tournament in the world, of the year, so that's what's most important."

Williams improved her career record to 68-8 at the All England Club and extended her career-best winning streak to 32 matches, which included her second French Open title.

Kimiko Date-Krumm, the 42-year-old Japanese veteran, had an even easier time. She needed just 44 minutes to complete a romp over Carina Witthoef, an 18-year-old German less than half her age and making her Grand Slam debut.

Date-Krumm is the second-oldest player to win a match at Wimbledon after Martina Navratilova, who was 47 when she reached the second round in 2004.

Nadal, a two-time Wimbledon champion, was knocked out in straight sets by 135th-ranked Steve Darcis of Belgium on CRYSTAL RIVER — The Inverness 10 and 11 Baseball All Stars exploded for eight runs in the third inning and won the Little League District 15 title with a 14-1, four-inning win over West Hernando on Tuesday at Bicentennial Park.

Inverness moves on to the Section 7 tournament, which begins in July.

Jarred Daigle was the winning pitcher and doubled, going 3-for-3 with two runs. He allowed two hits and struck out four.

West Hernando's Tommy Meese took the pitching loss.

The game took two days to complete. Monday night, the game was postponed due to rain and lightning. Inverness led 3-0 in the bottom of the second inning when the game was stopped.

Mikey McSherry had a two-run double and was 3-for-3. Vann Crawley was 3-for-3 with three runs.

The Inverness defense made only one error.

"I'm very proud of all the boys," Inverness manager Pat Daigle said. "The bench came alive today. Our bats are explosive."

Both teams finished district play with 2-1 marks.

Central Citrus 9-10 moves into title game

CRYSTAL RIVER — What a difference a day made for the Inverness Minor All-Star softball team.

The 9- and 10-year-old girls from the east side of Citrus County were down 2-0 in the top of the second inning to Crystal River when rain and lightning postponed the contest Monday night at Bicentennial Park in Crystal River.

Play resumed Tuesday from the point it was stopped at, with Crystal River batting in the top of the second with runners on first and third with two outs.

Monday — the Spaniard's first loss in the opening round of any Grand Slam event.

The only top player Tuesday who had any difficulty advancing was French Open runner-up David Ferrer. He overcame a second-set slump and a scary late fall to beat Martin Alund of Argentina 6-1, 4-6, 7-5, 6-2.

Coming off his first Grand Slam final, the fourth-seeded Spaniard looked as if he could follow Nadal out of the tournament. Alund won the second set and pushed hard in the third. But Ferrer broke for a 6-5 lead and then went 5-1 up in the fourth. At 3-1, however, he fell and grimaced after his left foot slid backward. Ferrer went on to break Alund again. He served out the match with an ace, and afterward said his foot was fine.

Most other matches went according to plan.
Former U.S. Open champion Juan Martin Del Potro made a winning return to Grand Slam competition, defeating Albert Ramos of Spain 6-2, 7-5,

After a walk to load the bases, Inverness got the final out of the inning to prevent further damage and pushed across 12 runs in the bottom of the second en route to a 14-4 victory in five innings over Crystal River.

"The girls actually came to play today," Inverness manager David Sowell said. "Every one of these girls played hard and brought their bats today."

In the deciding inning, Inverness sent 18 batters to the plate with Shyanne Waller and Jade Larisy each delivering a two-run single and combining for four hits. Larisy and Bekkah Adams each scored twice during the onslaught as well.

Other Inverness players to cross home plate in the second included Miranda Wilson, Alanna Sloan, Ashton Lewis, Waller, Jalena Alexander, Madelyn Linhart, Brianna Kiernan and Stacy Naugler.

Arnold Palmer has 62 wins on the PGA Tour, seven major championships and the 1954 U.S. Amateur. Along with all those trophies, one of his most prized possessions from his career in golf is a Vicuna top coat from Frank Stranahan.

Of course, it's the story that makes the coat.

It belonged to Frank Stranahan, the amateur great who died Sunday at age 90. Of their many practice rounds, one that stands out was Palmer and Dow Finsterwald against Stranahan and Al Besselink in 1957.

"We played 18 holes and we beat him for a couple hundred bucks," Palmer said Tuesday. "Frank said, 'Are you going to give us a chance to get even?'" And I said, "Sure, what do you want to play for?" We were hassling over that and I said, "Frank, you have a top coat that I really love. I'll put up whatever dollars I have and play you for it."

And they did. Palmer said Finsterwald shot 29 over nine holes, and the King shot in the neighborhood of 31. They won the match, and Palmer got the coat.

"I still have it," Palmer said. "I've had it redone and remodeled. It's in my dresser. It's one of my favorite things in my golfing career — the coat I couldn't afford."

Koepka gets major upgrade in Europe

Brooks Koepka played six straight weeks in six countries, knowing only that he would be flying home to Florida on Tuesday for a break he desperately needed.

He just didn't realize how much different the road map would be when he gets back to work.

Koepka is another young American who's taking the European route, and the payoff was measured in more than euros. The 23-year-old from Florida State won a Challenge Tour event in Scotland on Sunday, his third win of the season that gave him an instant promotion to the European Tour. Still running on fumes, he took an early morning flight Monday from Scotland to London, drove straight to Sunningdale Golf Club and shot rounds of 69-65 for the low score among nine players who qualified for the British Open at Muirfield.

"Scotland was awesome. There was a lot of motivation there to get that third win before I headed back to the States," Koepka said Monday night. "And then the qualifier, I honestly don't know how I did it. I was running on two or three hours of sleep. I was thoroughly exhausted. Adrenaline or something took over. But as soon as I got off the golf course, I was done."

Instead of returning to a Challenge Tour event in Switzerland or Italy, he will play alongside Phil Mickelson and a host of other stars at Castle Stuart for the Scottish Open, his first event as a full European Tour member. Then, he will drive south to Muirfield for his second major championship.

One item on the agenda while he's home is to sit down with agent Blake Smith at Hambric Sports and figure out a schedule the rest of the year.

"Just getting on the European Tour is big in itself," Koepka said. "I get to play with some of the best players in the world, and it will be nice to have some feedback with Peter, who's someone I really enjoy being around."

That would be Peter Uihlein, his roommate in south Florida, and someone who knows these ropes. Uihlein also started his pro career on the smaller Challenge Tour in Europe, and he won the Madeira Island Open last month to secure his European Tour card.

One of the house rules in Florida is that whoever wins a tournament has to buy a jet ski. Koepka and Uihlein won two weeks apart in May, and Koepka has added two more titles since.

"We're going to have a whole fleet," Koepka said.

Koepka and Uihlein have known each other since junior golf. Both failed to make it through Q-school in America and Europe — "Struggled at the wrong time," Koepka said — and thought the best way to improve was playing a steady diet of tournaments on the Challenge Tour instead of trying to Monday qualify on the Web.com Tour in America or get lucky with a sponsor exemption.

"I think guys get caught up trying to do Monday qualifiers, and there's a lot of disappointment," Koepka said. "You can shoot 66 and go home, and you don't build on the rounds. Anybody can have four good days. I thought my best option was to come over here. I think it will make me a more well-rounded player. ... I don't think Europe is for everyone. But it's worked well for me."

Depending on how the next month goes, they are closing in on the top 100 in the world and would have a shot at the PGA Championship. Uihlein is at No. 121. Koepka is at No. 122.

"Yeah, I know," Koepka said with a laugh when asked about the world ranking. "I already heard about it from him on the range."

Sun City

It began in 1981 as an exhibition called the "Million Dollar Challenge" back when $1 million meant something. Now, the Nedbank Golf Challenge in South Africa will become part of the European Tour scheduled for the 2013-14 season.

It will be played Dec. 5-8 at the Gary Player Country Club, and the field will increase to 30 players. The winner will get $1.25 million, with last place paying $100,000. It will count toward the money list on the European Tour and Sunshine Tour.

The leading 10 players from the top 30 on the Race to Dubai and the FedEx Cup will be eligible, along with the winners of the Asian Tour, Japan Golf Tour and Australasian Tour money lists. Players also can qualify through the South African Open and Alfred Dunhill Championship in the weeks before the Nedbank.

summer in CITRUS

CITRUS COUNTY CHRONICLE

School is out, the heat is on and the waves are splashing. It might be oh-so tempting to lay out on a big beach blanket to soak up golden rays. After-all, summer fashions say bronzed and glowing skin is in. A sun-kissed body could come at a costly price to your health, though. Here are suggestions to enjoy the water while keeping your body safe.

2 Eyes

“The ultraviolet light is what you want to worry about with your eyes. Most over the counter sunglasses do give pretty good protection from UV light. Blue-blocker sunglasses, amber, colored, yellow, brown type sunglasses filter out the most UV. This is especially most important in younger people as they will be more exposed to UV over their life.”
— Dr. Victor Nothnagel

Hair

“Always wet hair with non-chlorinated water before you enter the pool. Applying a leave-in conditioner with SPF in your hair is a great conditioning treatment while sitting in the sun. If you get out and hair dries, rewetting hair is pertinent. Before you leave the pool for the day, shampoo immediately with a clarifying shampoo. Sulfate-free shampoo will help prevent color fading from washing or sunlight. Whenever possible, wear a hat. If your hair is not in the sunlight or chlorine it cannot damage it.”
— Annette Fuqua, owner/stylist of Annette’s Wild Hair

Body

5 “Children and adults have different water intake requirements to prevent dehydration. The first sign people are dehydrated is becoming thirsty and children become irritable. Also, the color of a person’s urine will indicate if they are dehydrated and need more water. Avoid sweet foods, beer or soda, as these are natural diuretics and cause the body to lose water. Drink fluids with electrolytes like Gatorade that will help restore lost nutrients.”
— Dr. Dacelin St. Martin

1 Sunscreen

“Men and women should use a good sunscreen that is broad spectrum — blocking both A rays and B rays — and they are not sensitive too. You can buy name-brand sunscreen or generic, just ensure that the SPF is relatively high. The sun tends to be dehydrating. When you are in the sun, hydrate yourself with fluids. That actually improves your skin care. Also, when bathing you should use mild soaps and then apply moisturizer afterwards.”

3 Nails

“For natural nails, you always want to keep sunscreen all over your hands and nails. Also, keep a base coat and top coat over top of them for protection. They make top coats with UV shield. For acrylics, I also recommend a UV shield coat on top of your nails. On top of that you can spray sunscreen.”
– Rachel Powalish, Nail Technician at M Hair Studio

Healthy swimming tips:

- Awareness
- Keep excrement, germs and urine out of the water.
 - Shower with soap before you start swimming.
 - Take a rinse shower before you get back into the water.
 - Take bathroom breaks every 60 minutes.
 - Wash your hands after using the toilet or changing diapers.
 - Don't swallow the water you swim in.
 - Take children on bathroom breaks every 60 minutes or check diapers every 30 to 60 minutes.
 - Change diapers in the bathroom or diaper-changing area and not at poolside where germs can rinse into the water.
- Action
- Check the free- chlorine level and pH before getting into the water.
 - Pools: Proper free chlorine level (1-3 mg/L or parts per million [ppm] and pH (7.2-7.8) maximize germ-killing power. Most superstores, hardware stores, and pool-supply stores sell pool test strips.
- Advocacy
- Encourage pool operators to take steps known to kill germs.
 - Add ultraviolet or ozone disinfection technology to pool water treatment.
 - Hyperchlorinate regularly; not even some of the toughest germs can tolerate free-chlorine levels at 20 ppm for 12.75 hours.
- Information from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention

U.S. education spending tops global list

Students still trail rivals on international tests

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States spends more than other developed nations on its students' education each year, with parents and private foundations picking up more of the costs, an international survey released Tuesday found.

Despite the spending, U.S. students still trail their rivals on international tests.

The Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development — which groups the world's most developed countries — writes in its annual report that brand-new and experienced teachers alike in the United States out-earn most of their counterparts around the globe. But U.S. salaries have not risen at the same pace as other nations.

The findings, part of a 440-page tome of statistics, put the United States' spending on its young people in context.

The United States spent more than $11,000 per elementary student in 2010 and more than $12,000 per high school student. When researchers factored in the cost for programs after high school education such as college or vocational training, the United States spent $15,171 on each young person in the system — more than any other nation covered in the report.

The United States spent more than $11,000 per elementary school student in 2010 and more than $12,000 per high school student.

That sum inched past some developed countries and far surpassed others. Switzerland's total spending per student was $14,922 while Mexico averaged $2,993 in 2010. The average OECD nation spent $9,313 per young person.

As a share of its economy, the United States spent more than the average country in the survey. In 2010, the United States spent 7.3 percent of its gross domestic product on education, compared with the 6.3 percent average of other OECD countries. Denmark topped the list on that measure with 8 percent of its gross domestic product going toward education.

Spending, of course, only tells part of the story and does not guarantee students' success. The United States routinely trails its rival countries in performances on international exams despite being among the heaviest spenders on education. U.S. fourth-graders are 11th in the world in math in the Trends in International Mathematics and Science Study, a separate measure of nations against each other. U.S. eighth-graders ranked ninth in math, according to those 2011 results.

The Program for International Student Assessment measurement found the United States ranked 31st in math literacy among 15-year-old students and below the international average. The same 2009 tests found the United States ranked 23rd in science among the same students, but posting an average score.

And it's not as though all spending on education is public, the OECD report found. Public spending accounts for just 70 cents of every education dollar in the United States. Parents picked up another 25 cents and private sources paid for the remainder in 2010.

A decade earlier, the public's share of education spending was 72 cents on every dollar.

The average OECD nation spent 84 cents of every education dollar, down from 88 cents a decade earlier.

For post-high school programs, the United States is far outspent in public dollars. U.S. taxpayers picked up 36 cents of every dollar spent on college and vocational training programs. Families and private sources picked up the balance.

In other OECD nations, it was roughly reversed: The public picked up 68 cents of every dollar in advanced training and private sources picked up the other 32 cents.

"When people talk about other countries out-educating the United States, it needs to be remembered that those other nations are out-investing us in education as well," said Randi Weingarten, president of the American Federation of Teachers, a labor union.

Still, teachers in the United States fare fine.

The average first-year high school teacher in the United States earns about $38,000. OECD nations pay their comparable educators about $31,000.

Study: Minority, poor students gain from charter schools

Associated Press

Charter schools benefit students from poor families, black students and Hispanic English-language learners more than their peers in other groups, a study shows.

Overall, charter school students are faring better than they were four years ago, surpassing those in traditional public schools in reading gains and keeping pace in math, according to the National Charter School Study by the Center for Research on Education Outcomes at Stanford University.

The study, released Tuesday, updated and expanded upon 2009 findings comparing student performance on standardized reading and math tests. The 2013 study included 25 states, the District of Columbia and New York City, the nation's biggest city, which was considered separately from upstate New York because of its huge number of students. Together, the studied places enroll 95 percent of the nation's 2.3 million charter school students.

"The results reveal that the charter school sector is getting better on average and that charter schools are benefiting low-income, disadvantaged and special-education students," CREDO Director Margaret Raymond said.

Margaret Raymond
CREDO director.

“ We think that the level of improvement is really noteworthy given that it's only been a few years. ”

Margaret Raymond

director of Center for Research on Education Outcomes.

Researchers did not look into why specific groups benefited more, but charter schools' greater freedom to direct resources toward specific needs was seen as a factor.

The average charter school student showed reading gains equivalent to those that would be expected from an extra eight days of school compared to traditional school students, the study said. Math gains were about equal among the two groups. The results were much improved from the 2009 study, when charter students lost the equivalent of seven days of learning in English and 22 days in math.

"We think that the level of improvement is really noteworthy given that it's only been a few years," Raymond said.

The gains were helped by the closure of 8 percent of the schools included in the 2009 analysis because they were underperforming, she said.

The report calls closing low-performing schools "the strongest tool available to ensure quality across the sector."

American Federation of Teachers president Randi Weingarten said the findings show that charter schools have failed to live up to "the leaps and bounds that were promised" in student performance.

"We should use the CREDO findings as an opportunity to pause and ask ourselves why we keep pitting charter schools against neighborhood public schools — a strategy that has created little more than a disruptive churn," Weingarten said.

When broken down into groups, the study showed that black students gained the equivalent of 14 days of learning by attending charter schools but that black students living in poverty saw even greater benefits, the equivalent of 29 days in reading and 36 days in math. Hispanic English-language learners saw even higher gains, though Hispanics in general scored similarly to Hispanics in traditional public schools.

The study analyzed student data from Arkansas, Arizona, California, Colorado, D.C., Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nevada, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, New York City, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Texas and Utah.

Hidden Planet

Exploring Caves

Millions of small, mysterious worlds lie hidden from most of the planet. Most of these places, Earth's caves, have never been explored.

To learn more about these special areas, The Mini Page talked with an expert on caves.

The dissolving land

A cave is a hole in the ground that people can enter. (Of course, there are caves just the right size for bats, salamanders or one-celled organisms, too.)

Caves can be created from many substances, including rock, salt, ice or lava. Most caves are formed when rock or salt is dissolved.

Weak acids, usually about as strong as a cola, are made from water and carbon dioxide from the air. Over time, these acids dissolve the rock.

Some materials, such as rock salt and gypsum (JIP-sum), can be dissolved by water.

A bat roosts in Mammoth Cave in Kentucky. Bats have lived there for millions of years.

A scientist climbs inside an ice cave in Antarctica. This cave formed when melting glacier ice flowed off the slopes of Mount Erebus, an active volcano on Ross Island. It is the most southern active volcano in the world.

Cave material

Dissolving land is called karst. Most caves are formed in karst landforms, and so are sinkholes, those weird holes that can suck in houses or cars.

Caves and karst landforms are fragile and easily damaged. Cave visitors should not touch cave decorations, cave animals or things left by ancient humans.

Carving out caves

Forces of nature other than acid also create caves. Along coastlines, tides carve out caves by wearing away rock such as sandstone or limestone.

In deserts, winds blast away layers of rock, creating small caves. In the Atacama Desert in Chile, for example, wind and water form salt caves. This is the driest place on Earth. When a bit of water appears, it is only enough to dissolve the salt partway, which can create caves.

In Antarctica, volcanic activity and periods of thawing carve out caves from thick ice.

Lava tubes are caves created by molten, or hot liquid, lava from volcanoes. As rivers of lava flow from the volcano, the outside layers cool and harden first, forming a kind of tube. When the volcano eruptions stop, the last of the molten lava drains from the tube or turns solid at the exit, leaving an empty cave behind.

Molten lava constructed this lava tube in El Malpais National Monument in New Mexico.

Meet Beyoncé

Beyoncé Knowles is the voice of Queen Tara in the movie "Epic." She also composed and sang the song "Rise Up" for the movie. Beyoncé, 31, is known by just her first name. Besides singing and composing, she also acts and dances. She has appeared in several movies. She grew up in Houston. She began singing and dancing in talent show competitions when she was a child. She sang in her school choir in elementary school. She joined a singing group when she was 9; it later became known as Destiny's Child. She went to a special high school for the performing arts and sang in her church choir. Beyoncé supports several charities, including those that help people in Haiti, fight against childhood obesity, and help widows and families of New York firefighters and police. She also helps the Goodwill charity and charities that help girls around the world.

Gus Goodsport's Report Supersport: Mariano Rivera

Height: 6-2 Birthdate: 11/29/69 Weight: 195 Hometown: Panama City, Panama

When the New York Yankees are trying to protect a lead in the ninth inning, Mariano Rivera is the man they want on the mound. The reliable Rivera is baseball's best-known closer, with a career record of more than 625 saves. (To record a save, a pitcher must hold a lead of 3 runs or fewer.) At age 43, the right-hander is still throwing smoke. He had 16 saves in his first 17 opportunities this year, tops in the major leagues. He just keeps on giving the Yankees stellar relief performances. In 19-plus seasons — all with the Yankees — he's a 12-time All-Star and has contributed to five World Series titles. Rivera also has been a major contributor to various charities in the U.S. and Latin America.

Cave sculptures

Water mixes with chemicals from the ground and seeps into the earth. When there is a cave under the ground, the mixture drips into the cave.

Sometimes, the mixture hardens as it drips, forming structures that look like icicles made of rock. These awesome hanging structures are called stalactites (stuh-LAK-tites). They start out tiny and can grow to 30 feet long.

Sometimes, the water and chemical mix drops onto the floor of the cave. The mixture hardens on the ground. As more of the mixture drops down over the years, layers build up, forming taller and taller structures. When these structures grow up from the ground, they are called stalagmites (stuh-LAG-mites).

A tip to help remember the names is that stalacTites form from the Top. StalagMites rise up from the ground, like Mountains.

Stalactites and stalagmites decorate the Queen's Chamber in Carlsbad Caverns in New Mexico. These structures are not active at the moment because of the dry climate. In Carlsbad, they have been growing for at least 350,000 years.

A look back in time

Stalactites and stalagmites are like cave fossils. Experts can learn what the Earth was like when these decorations were formed, much like studying dinosaur fossils can tell us about dinosaurs.

By studying these structures, experts learn what the Earth's climate and atmosphere were like, the temperature of the Earth during the growth of the structures, and whether there was life in the area.

Stalactites and stalagmites decorate the Doll's Theater in Carlsbad Caverns.

Treasure Troves

Exploring caves

Going into caves can be dangerous. Never go into a cave without an adult. But with the right training, the right equipment and with adult supervision, cave exploration can be fun. Many youth groups have cave clubs. Park guides often take groups into caves. Exploring caves is called spelunking (speh-LUNG-king).

Many people also explore caves to seek important knowledge. Because cave organisms are often so different, they could help us develop new medicines or technology.

Worlds apart

Each cave is a separate world with its own special environment. Because caves are often cut off from much of the planet, they can form unique (u-NEEK), or one-of-a-kind, habitats. Organisms inside a cave might live nowhere else on Earth.

Explorers keep finding organisms we've never known about before. Most of these newly discovered organisms are microbes (MI-krobes), or tiny creatures that we need a microscope to see. But experts are discovering brand-new animals too.

Passages into caves can be so narrow that people may be surrounded by rock on all sides. Caving takes special training.

A cave cricket in Mammoth Cave shows special adaptations to cave life. Its antennae and legs are extra-long, and it has lost its color.

Special animals

Because cave animals can be shut off from the rest of the world, each type develops differently. Food supplies are scarce underground. Cave animals save resources by losing anything they don't need, such as sight.

In a place with little or no light, there is no need for eyes. Other senses may grow stronger instead.

For example, cave crickets and cave scorpions grow extra-long antennae and legs. They depend on touch rather than sight.

Cave dwellers often lose their coloring too. Since they are hidden in the dark, there is no need for colors that might be used to attract a mate or hide from enemies above ground.

The Mini Page thanks Dr. Penelope J. Boston, associate director, National Cave and Karst Research Institute, for help with this issue.

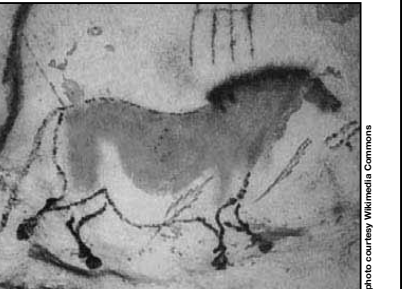

Look through your newspaper for stories about unusual places.

Shelters

We call early humans "cavemen" because we have found their tools, art and supplies preserved, or saved, in caves. We have discovered cave paintings that are thousands of years old on every continent except Antarctica.

Many modern humans still live in caves, especially in lands away from cities, such as in parts of Afghanistan. Caves keep out winds, ultraviolet radiation from the sun and stormwater. Most caves are dry. Even if they were formed by water, by the time humans moved in, the water was probably long gone.

People have discovered cloth made 12,000 years ago in a cave in Peru. Caves have even preserved Neanderthal bones so well that we have been able to gather their DNA.

This horse art from the Lascaux caves in France is one of thousands of paintings in these caves. They were painted about 17,300 years ago. Elsewhere, cave paintings have been found that are at least 30,000 years old.

Next week, The Mini Page celebrates the Fourth of July.

Attention Consumers! Please make sure you are using a licensed and insured service professional. Many service advertisers are required by state law to include their license number in all advertisements. If you don't see a license number in the ad, you should inquire about it and be suspicious that you may be contacting an unlicensed business. PUBLIC NOTICE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Board of County Commissioners of Citrus County, Florida, certifies that the corrective assessment roll for the 2012 Inverness Village Unit 4 Road Paving Special Assessment District Plan B has been examined and approved by the Board of County Commissioners.
The Board of County Commissioners will hold a public hearing for the purpose of hearing objections to such corrective assessment roll on Tuesday, July 9, 2013, at 2:00 p.m. at the Board of County Commissioners' Meeting Room, Citrus County Courthouse, 110 North Apopka Avenue, Inverness, Florida. A copy of the corrective assessment roll, as examined and approved by the Board, is available for examination by the public in the office of the Assessment Coordinator in the Citrus County Lecanto Government Building, 3600 W. Sovereign Path, Suite #205, Lecanto, Florida, beginning June 26, 2013 and shall remain so available until the day for hearing objections to such corrective assessment roll. At said hearing the Board will meet and hear comments from all interested persons as to the assessments, the accuracy and the amount thereof against any lot or parcel of land owned by such interested persons, and as to the confirmation of the corrective assessment roll. The Board will also equalize and either annul, sustain or modify, in whole or in part the corrective special assessment roll according to the special benefits that the Board determines that each assessment unit (AU) will receive as a result of such improvements. All interested persons may appear and file written objections to the confirmation of such roll.
The nature of the improvements made consisted of the construction of paved roads, drainage improvements and other pertinent facilities as necessary within said area described in Exhibit "A" which is attached hereto and made a part hereof.
If and when the corrective assessment roll becomes final by the confirmation and approval of the Board, the corrective assessment roll and the Resolution confirming and approving the same shall be recorded in the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court, and delivered to the County Property Appraiser. From the date of such recording the assessment shall constitute liens upon the properties assessed co-equal with the lien of general County and district taxes, including ad valorem taxes, and shall be superior in rank and priority to all other liens, titles and claims.
If a person decides to appeal any decision made by the Board of County Commissioners with respect to any matter considered at this public hearing, they will need to ensure that a verbatim record of the proceedings is made, which record shall include the testimony and evidence upon which the appeal is to be based.
Any person requiring reasonable accommodation at this meeting because of a disability or physical impairment should contact the County Administrator's Office, 110 North Apopka Avenue, Inverness, Florida 34450, (352) 341-6560, at least two days before the meeting.
