County work drawn into Duke foundation's $444K gift

Chris Van Ormer

How the Duke Energy Foundation's nearly half-million-dollar award to the county will be spent was outlined Tuesday by the president of the Citrus County Economic Development Council (EDC).

Earlier this month, the foundation gave the EDC $444,000.

"That number wasn't just picked out of a hat," said Joe Meek, EDC president and chairman of the Citrus County Board of County Commissioners, speaking to the Chronicle editorial board. "There's a reason behind that number. Don (Taylor, EDC executive director) has been working with them and the EDC has

Twice a day, the home of Ken and Vera Swade is filled with collages of rainbows.

Twenty-one stained glass windows, all the handiwork of Crystal River glass craftsman Glen Palhof, all depicting Florida scenes, let the sunlight shine through, coloring the walls, the furniture, the counters and floors.

"It started with the front door 12 years ago," Ken Swade said about his collection of window art.

The double front door depicts dolphins.

"I like art, and I love the work that Glen does. So I started coming up with ideas and Glen does the work."

Each custom window in the house took up to six weeks to complete. Several of them, such as the latest one in the kitchen that depicts an alligator and a large bird, are

Prosecutor tries to poke holes in defense

Murder trial continues

A.B. Sidibe
Staff writer

INVERNESS — The prosecution in the first-degree murder trial of Byron Lee Boutin pulled out a "top gun" aimed at punching holes in the defense's narrative about how a slain Brooksville teen got her hands on a lethal dose of morphine.

Byron Boutin
charged with first-degree murder.

Wednesday, prosecutor Pete Magrino also put the man largely regarded as being responsible for the death of DeAnna Stires, 18, in the orbit of the two people accused of killing her.

Boutin and his girlfriend Crystal Brinson, 36, of Brooksville, stand accused of killing the teen by injecting her with an excessive dose of morphine and then dumping her body in a hunting area in Levy County.

Stires was reported missing on New Year's Day to the Hernando County Sheriff's Office. Her body was found Jan. 18 in a wooded area off State Road 24 in the Levy County community of Otter Creek.

Two hunters found Stires' body wrapped in black fabric with her arm hanging out of the wrapping near a dirt road in the hunting area. A circling vulture led the hunters to the body.

The medical examiner has already said Stires died of "acute morphine intoxication."

The prosecution contends Boutin, 42, and Brinson killed Stires after becoming furious with her for stealing methamphetamines worth $1,800 from them and then hatched a plan to dispose of her body. Magrino also accused Boutin of making inconsistent statements to investigators to keep them off his trail.

But the defense team of Charles Vaughn and Clifford Travis said Boutin and Brinson were trying to calm down a disruptive, drug-crazed teen when

State land sale could include Citrus County sites

Pat Faherty
Staff writer

Five parcels of state-owned land in Citrus County are on the proposed surplus list for possible sale.

The statewide list includes three sites in Crystal River Preserve State Park, one site in Ellie Schiller Homosassa Springs Wildlife State Park and one in the Marjorie Harris Carr Cross Florida Greenway State Recreation Area.

The Citrus County sites range in size from half an acre to 7.9 acres.

The list also has a dozen sites in Marion County and several in Levy County. The Marion County list includes a 1.9 acre site in Rainbow Springs State Park.

The Department of Environmental Protection is running all state-owned conservation land through a model to score the sites based on conservation value.

After additional review, the DEP will conduct title and market studies to determine the potential for sale.

The DEP has a webpage and has scheduled two webinars this week to inform the public and take comments about its assessment of state-owned conservation sites.

The purpose of the sessions is to present the process and criteria used to assess the land and

The process follows a state directive to sell up to $50 million of land no longer needed for conservation purposes, which will allow for the purchase of more valuable conservation land.

The list of sites with maps and webinar details are available at www.dep.state.fl.us/lands/assessment. The sessions are also available by telephone access.

The webinars are scheduled for 6 to 8 p.m. today and 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Friday. "The format, is people online can 'raise their hands' to provide comment, which will be recorded," said Patrick Gillespie, DEP spokesperson.

A DEP committee will meet Sept. 12 to discuss the process and scoring of the land. The DEP will then have regional meetings throughout the state for additional comments.

New speed zone signs installed in bay

Special to the Chronicle

As a result of the recently established King's Bay Manatee Refuge, all speed zone signs in the bay are being replaced with new signs containing updated regulatory information for most of the speed zones. The main goal of the project is to provide boaters in King's Bay with full clarity of the latest speed regulations in the bay to keep visitors and manatees safe during the winter and summer months.

The project involves the installation of 36 new signs of four different kinds, with most signs being installed around Buzzard Island. The cost of this project is more than $40,000, all funded by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Installation of the signs is scheduled to be finished early next week. Many of the signs require new pilings, particularly around the 25 mph sport zone area, north of Buzzard Island. This 25 mph sport zone was previously marked by buoys placed last summer.

"The new signs around the sport zone provide improved visibility to boaters from all of its access points, making King's Bay safer to boaters and other visitors," said Jim Valade, with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's North Florida Ecological Services Office, which is responsible for the project. The 25 mph sport zone season ended Aug. 15 and will resume on June 1, 2014.

TRIAL

Brinson administered the fatal dose of morphine to Stires. It is Boutin's contention the morphine was brought on Christmas Day to his Homosassa home by a gay man from Temple Terrace who was to have sex with Stires in exchange for the drug. The plan according to Vaughn, was to have Stires dress up like a male to entertain the man.

However, Wednesday in Judge Ric Howard's courtroom, the prosecution called William Lannert at the end of the day's testimony to refute the assertions.

Lannert said he did go to Boutin's house on Christmas Day — not to trade drugs for sex — but to meet a "special person."

Lannert said he didn't even get to talk to Boutin that day and spent only about 30 minutes in the home before Brinson turned on him and sent him away. Lannert is a self-described military veteran with topflight flying skills, something akin to "Top Gun," he told the court. He said he only briefly met Stires, who was introduced as someone named Monique or Monica and they never talked about sex or drugs.

Vaughn pressed Lannert to explain why he had several morphine pills in his car trunk for a trip that only took about two hours.

Lannert, who said he is disabled from breaking his back in several places, said he needed the morphine to control his pain and that he brought the pills as a contingency if his car broke down and he needed medication within 24 hours.

The first witness, Kevin Shields of Floral City, was reportedly the man who introduced Brinson and Boutin to Stires on that methamphetamine-driven weekend.

In fairly scattered and nervous testimony, Shields told the court Brinson and Boutin did come to him the day after Christmas and that Brinson told him Stires' body was in the trunk of their vehicle. He said he never believed them and never looked in the trunk, but that Boutin was asking about good places to go camping.

"I didn't know. I just told him to just pull anywhere in the woods and camp," Shields said. He said Boutin and Brinson also were talking about how badly Stires trashed Boutin's home and that there was a fight "with a little bit of blood in the kitchen."

Shields said Boutin also told him Stires stole his meth and that "she had to go."

The jury also heard from Citrus County Sheriff's Office forensics team members Ashley Pate and Dave Cannaday about the photographic and videotaped layout of Boutin's home and the fingerprints that were lifted. Two Florida Department of Law Enforcement analysts also testified about the blood evidence, the gun that was purportedly used to pistol-whip Stires and DNA.

Sheriff's Detective Juan Santiago, who sat in on two of Boutin's interrogations, shared what the prosecution considers evolving stories about his role in Stires' death.

The trial continues this morning.

Team gets Inverness kudos

Girls softball team went all the way to state

NANCY KENNEDY
Staff writer

INVERNESS — It was nearly a full house at the Inverness City Council meeting Tuesday as Mayor Bob Plaisted awarded the Senior Girls Inverness All-Stars, the Gunslingers, with the city's highest honor, the Cooter kudo award.

The girls' softball team was the first team from Inverness to make it to the state finals in 15 years.

"They did it by crushing most of their opponents by well over 10 runs per game, delivering an overwhelming 25 shutouts and finishing the season with an impressive 36-4 winning record," Plaisted said.

The team came in third in the state finals.

Plaisted also honored former councilwoman Marti Consuegra with a plaque for her service to the community.

"She served the city faithfully from 2006 when she took office," Plaisted said. "Marti has always been a voice for good. She's always been there for the downtrodden and those in need ... We miss your outspokenness, your candidness and your ability to get your message across."

Consuegra resigned from the council in June to travel with her husband.

In other council news:

■ City of Inverness may swap land with the county, a city-owned piece of land near one of the runways at the Inverness airport in exchange for a piece of property off Forest Drive by Whispering Pines Park.

"We're looking into what is in the best interest of the community," said City Manager Frank DiGiovanni.

■ Bicycle Boulevard — North Apopka Avenue — should be completed in about 10 days.

■ Effective Oct. 1, Florida Senate Bill 50 will modify the way city council meetings are structured in regard to public comments on issues prior to council voting on them. The public will be given time to speak before every vote on an agenda item.

"It's almost like having a mini-public hearing on every item," DiGiovanni said.

DiGiovanni postpones retirement

NANCY KENNEDY
Staff writer

INVERNESS — It's official — plans for a retirement party next month for Inverness City Manager Frank DiGiovanni are on hold.

At the city council meeting Tuesday, DiGiovanni announced he will continue as city manager past his state of Florida September 2013 retirement date.

At an October 2012 city council meeting, the council voted to adopt an agreement with SS Solutions, a staff leasing company based in St. Augustine. The company specializes in providing government agencies with personnel, especially employees in the Florida Deferred Retirement Option Program (DROP) who have reached their mandatory retirement date and desire to keep working in their same position without incurring a financial penalty.

DROP allows employees such as DiGiovanni to "retire" but still continue working for a maximum of five years, simultaneously earning a salary and drawing a retirement pension, which is put into a trust account. After 60 months the employee has to leave.

DiGiovanni will maintain his annual salary of $99,701. However, because of budget adjustments eliminating a cell phone and retirement costs and despite a $3,500 increase in the vehicle allowance, the net change is a $10,802 decrease for the city.

At Tuesday's council meeting DiGiovanni joked, "Looks like we're stuck with each other for another year."

"Thank God," Councilwoman Jacquie Hepfer said Wednesday. "Nobody thinks or does or visions like Frank. We're transitioning, and (manager-in-training) Eric (Williams) is awesome and he's going to be a wonderful manager when he gets some more time and experience under his belt. For now, it's a comfort and a safety net to know that we'll still have Frank with us."

New Publix aims for October opening

Construction is continuing on schedule for the new Publix in Inverness.

Development official says new location will have more signs — but no liquor store

MATTHEW BECK/Chronicle

Because of the odd configuration of the property, the developer received permission to have four signs, including one on U.S. 41 and Davidson Avenue.

MIKE WRIGHT
Staff writer

INVERNESS — Publix expects an Oct. 24 grand opening for its new 46,000-square-foot supermarket being built on State Road 44 in Inverness.

"The project is moving along just great," said Todd Mathes, director of development at Benderson Development LLC of University Park, the property owner.

The store will replace the Publix at the Inverness Regional Shopping Center on U.S. 41.

While city code allows for one road-front sign for commercial businesses, Benderson received a variance to add three more — two on Montgomery Avenue and one on U.S. 41.

The company's variance request states the property's odd configuration — it's more triangular shaped than square or rectangular — means the store is basically surrounded by commercial and office buildings on three sides.

It said the topography makes the site "essentially in the bottom of a bowl," making it difficult to see from adjacent streets.

The company said it needed the extra signage on Montgomery Avenue to direct potential customers who may not see the store.

"A single sign is inadequate to direct customers to the site," the company's variance application stated.

Surrey Inverness LLC, owners of the Inverness Regional Shopping Center, objected to the extra sign on Montgomery, saying it was too close to other signs and also too large.

"The proposed sign of 100 square feet is as large as a double-car garage," Surrey's consultant wrote to city officials.

City officials approved the zoning and sign variance in 2011 and 2012.

The Publix project includes about 14,000 square feet of outparcel store space.

Mathes said the new Publix will not have a liquor store. Told that some in the community thought the company's decision was related to the city's continued ban on alcohol sales on Sunday mornings, Mathes said he never intended to include a liquor store.

He said it's possible people reached that conclusion because city approval of utility easements for the project came during the same Sept. 18, 2012, meeting as when council members debated and then denied a proposed ordinance to allow additional alcohol sales in the central business district.

Democrat files for Fasano's seat

A Raymond James vice president has announced her candidacy for the Pasco County House seat vacated by former GOP Rep. Mike Fasano, who was appointed county tax collector this month.

Democrat Amanda Murphy declared for the election Wednesday morning, a little less than a week before the qualifying period for the Oct. 15 vote. She quickly painted herself as a successor to Fasano, who often tangled with the property-insurance industry and utility companies over rates.

Three Republicans — Bill Gunter, James Mathieu and Jeromy Harding — have already filed paperwork to run for the seat, as has Richard Thomas Sikes, a non-partisan candidate.

Audubon watching DEP land sale list

The Florida Department of Environmental Protection has released a list of 67 state parks and other publicly owned sites from which parcels could be sold in an effort to raise $50 million for future land-conservation efforts.

The list includes a strip of land along the Tallahassee-St. Marks Historic Railroad State Trail and three sites on the north side of Paynes Prairie Preserve State Park in Alachua County. Audubon Florida has announced it will object "strongly" if any of the parcels on the final list has "significant conservation value."

Health plan gives $1M to vouchers

Amid rapid growth in a voucher-like program that pays for low-income students to attend private schools, Tampa-based WellCare Health Plans said Wednesday it is contributing $1 million to the effort.

The money will go to Step Up for Students, an organization that administers the Florida Tax Credit Scholarship program.

Jim Brothers, 72
SCULPTOR

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — A Kansas artist whose bronze sculptures are on display in the nation's capital and at historical monuments around the country has died.

Jim Brothers, 72, died Tuesday at his home in Lawrence. A funeral director at Warren McElwain Mortuary in Lawrence said Brothers had been receiving hospice care.

Gallery owner Paul Dorrell said Brothers is best known for two projects; he created a sculpture of Dwight Eisenhower that's on display at the Capitol in Washington and was the chief sculptor for the National D-Day Memorial in Bedford, Va.

Dorrell said he was immediately drawn to the "raw power" of the artist's work.

Jazz legend Marian McPartland dies at 95

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Marian McPartland, a renowned jazz pianist and host of the National Public Radio show "Piano Jazz," has died, NPR said Wednesday. She was 95.

McPartland died of natural causes Tuesday night at her Port Washington home on Long Island, said Anna Christopher Bross, an NPR spokeswoman.

Over a career that spanned more than six decades, McPartland became a fixture in the jazz world as a talented musician and well-loved radio personality.

In an interview with The Associated Press in 2007, the 89-year-old said she saw no reason to retire.

"Retire? Why retire? I've got a job, I'm making money, and I like what I do. Why retire?" she asked. "I think I'll jump out of a cake, or something."

Born Margaret Marian Turner in England, she began playing classical piano at the age of 3. At 17, she was accepted to the prestigious Guildhall School of Music. She left in her third year to play piano with a touring vaudeville act — to the chagrin of her parents, who she said were "horrified," and a professor who called popular music "rubbish."

During World War II, while playing for Allied troops with the USO and its British equivalent, she met her husband, Chicago cornetist Jimmy McPartland. He died in 1991.

The couple came to live in New York in 1953, and McPartland landed a gig in a trio at the Hickory House, a bustling jazz hub on 52nd Street where she played intermittently for 10 years, brushing elbows with such greats as Duke Ellington and Benny Goodman.

McPartland recorded more than 50 albums for the Concord Jazz label and played in venues across the country. She later founded her own label, Halcyon Records, and her compositions were recorded by the likes of Tony Bennett and Peggy Lee, according to NPR.

Marian McPartland smiles while playing the piano during a celebration of her 90th birthday in New York. McPartland, 95, the legendary jazz pianist and host of the National Public Radio show "Piano Jazz," died of natural causes Tuesday at her Port Washington home on Long Island.

She also turned her keen ears toward her contemporaries, writing articles and essays that immortalized the people and places of the jazz world in the 1950s and '60s.

In one essay, included in McPartland's collected works, "You've Come a Long Way, Baby" (1975), she wrote about her experiences as a woman trying to break into the jazz scene in the '50s, striving to be taken seriously by male musicians unaccustomed to playing with women.

"Once a man stood at the bar watching me intently, and when the set was finished he came over and said with a smile, 'You know, you can't be a respectable woman the way you play piano,'" she wrote. "For some reason or another, this struck me as a great compliment."

In 1978, McPartland brought her talent for composition and status as a jazz insider to radio, and began hosting the Peabody Award-winning "Piano Jazz."

On the air, she and her guests sat at separate pianos, reminiscing, adlibbing, and playing duets and solos. She hosted hundreds of jazz professionals, including Ray Brown, Susannah McCorkle and Eddie Palmieri.

"Marian was of course the brilliant artist and beloved icon of public radio," said Shari Hutchinson, executive producer of "Piano Jazz."

"I was able to work closely with one of the strongest, most successful, vital, creative women of her time, someone who overcame every obstacle and who pushed through every glass ceiling. I am deeply saddened at her passing, and at the same time profoundly joyful she let me into her life," Hutchinson said.

In 2007, she performed in South Carolina at the premiere of her own symphonic work, "A Portrait of Rachel Carson," inspired by the author's 1962 environmental book "Silent Spring."

Sid Bernstein, who brought Beatles to Shea, dies

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Sid Bernstein, the misty-eyed music promoter who booked such top acts as Jimi Hendrix, Judy Garland and the Rolling Stones and hit the highest heights when he masterminded the Beatles' historic concerts at Shea Stadium and Carnegie Hall, died Wednesday. He was 95.

Bernstein's daughter, Casey Deutsch, said that he died in his sleep at Lenox Hill Hospital. She cited no specific illness, and said he died of natural causes.

For decades, the squat, floppy-haired Bernstein excelled like few others at being everywhere and knowing everybody. He worked with Garland, Duke Ellington and Ray Charles, promoted Dion, Bobby Darin and Chubby Checker, and managed Esy Morales, the Rascals and Ornette Coleman. He was an early backer of ABBA, setting up the Swedish group's first American appearances. He was behind one of the first rock benefit shows, the 1970 "Winter Festival for Peace" at Madison Square Garden that featured Hendrix and Peter, Paul and Mary. And he helped revive Tony Bennett's career with a 1962 show at Carnegie Hall.

A master of schmooze and schmaltz in an industry that never quits, Bernstein also had a studious side that led to his biggest break. He took a course on Western civilization at the New School for Social Research that required students to read a British newspaper once a week. It was 1963, and the Beatles were just catching on in their native country.

"This was the right time to be reading an English newspaper," he explained in a 2001 interview with the music publication NY Rock Confidential. "So here I am reading little stories about this group from Liverpool that is causing a lot of 'hysteria.' By the end of the course, I was so Beatle-ized by what I read, even though I did not hear a note, I said, 'gotta get 'em.'"

As Bernstein recalled, he couldn't get his agency interested in the group, so he handled the job himself. He tracked down Brian Epstein and convinced the Beatles' manager that he could line up a gig at Carnegie Hall. The Beatles were still unknown in the U.S. and the price was cheap — $6,500 for two shows, a fraction of what Garland might have commanded. The promoter used his own money to pay Epstein, while officials at the classy Carnegie, where no rock stars had been permitted, apparently thought they had taken on a folk quartet. (The story has varied during the years.) The timing was perfect. By February 1964, Beatlemania had crossed over to the states and the band was set to play on "The Ed Sullivan Show" just three days before the Carnegie concerts, guaranteeing maximum attention at minimum cost.

Dow sinks for sixth day as traders ponder Fed exit

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stocks fell sharply Wednesday after the Federal Reserve disclosed that its top officials were mostly in agreement that the central bank should end its massive bond-buying program.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 105 points. It was the index's sixth straight decline, the longest losing streak since July 2012.

In the minutes from Fed's July policy meeting, board members said it "might soon be time" to slow the purchases. The bond-buying program has been in place in one form or another since late 2008 to keep interest rates low and encourage economic growth.

Traders have been worried about weak earnings and have been looking for clarity on how and when the Fed will wind down its bond purchases. Some investors believe the Fed's bond-buying has inflated stock prices.

Brad McMillan, chief investment officer for Commonwealth Financial, said the market had been overreacting to the possibility that the Fed is going to taper off its bond purchases.

"The market is starting to realize that, yeah, the taper is going to happen and, maybe, it won't be the end of the world," he said.

The Dow fell 105.44 points, or 0.7 percent, to 14,897.55. The Dow has fallen 4.9 percent since hitting a record high on Aug. 2.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 9.55 points, or 0.6 percent, to 1,642.80. The Nasdaq composite lost 13.80 points, or 0.4 percent, to 3,599.79.

Guy Berger, U.S. economist with RBS Securities, said the Fed minutes were mostly in line with what the market had expected.

"The minutes are very consistent with what Fed members have been saying since June," when Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke first laid out the idea of pulling back on bond purchases, Berger said.

The Fed has been purchasing $85 billion in bonds a month since December. Berger expects the Fed may reduce that to $65 billion after the central bank meets in September.

"August's employment report will be very important," he said.

Bond yields have risen dramatically the last few weeks as investors anticipate the end of the Fed's program.

The yield on the benchmark 10-year Treasury note jumped sharply Wednesday, to 2.89 percent from 2.82 percent the day before. The 10-year note is used as a benchmark to determine interest rates on many types of loans, from individual mortgages to borrowing by large corporations.

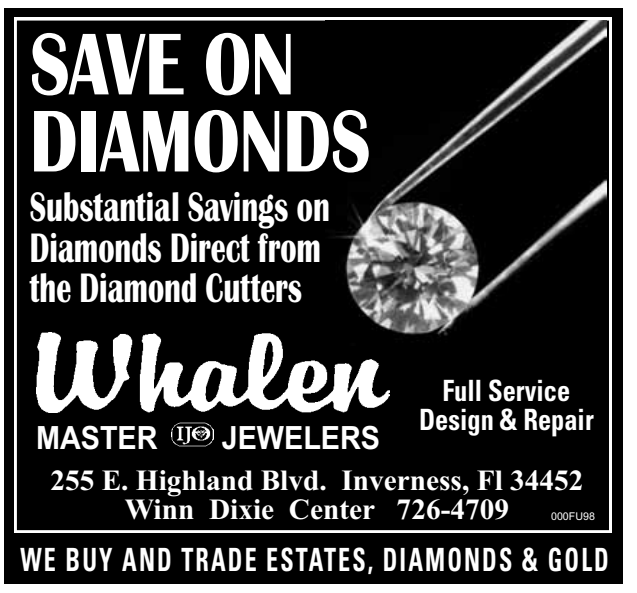
Retail stocks were once again in focus, and not in a good way. Target, like many other retailers in the last two weeks, issued a muted sales outlook for the rest of the year. The stock dropped $2.45, or 3.6 percent, to $65.50.

Staples sank $2.57, or 15.3 percent, to $14.27 after the office supplies chain reported earnings and sales that missed expectations of financial analysts. The company also slashed its full-year profit forecast.

American Eagle Outfitters plunged $1.62, or 10 percent, to $14.27 after reporting that it had to slash prices because shoppers are reluctant to spend. American Eagle is the latest teen-apparel retailer to report disappointing earnings or cut their outlook, following Urban Outfitters and others.

One bright spot in retail was Home Depot competitor Lowe's, which was up 3.9 percent, making it the second-biggest gainer in the S&P 500. The home-improvement retail chain said it earned 88 cents per share in the period ending Aug. 2, ahead of financial analysts' expectations of 79 cents per share. The company also raised its full-year sales and profit forecasts, citing the improving outlook for the U.S. housing market.

In related news, the National Association of Realtors said Wednesday that sales of previously occupied homes jumped to an annual rate of 5.39 million in July from 5.06 million in June. Home sales are at highest level since November 2009.



Interest rate cloud

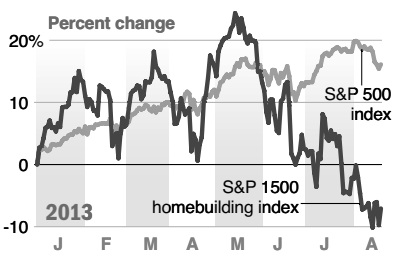
New homes are selling at the fastest pace in five years and home values are rising, but homebuilder stocks are getting clobbered. A broad index of homebuilder stocks has plunged 23 percent in the last three months.

Investors are selling because they're concerned about the impact of rising mortgage rates, which tend to follow the yield of the 10-year Treasury note. Anticipation of an end to the Federal Reserve's bond-buying program, has helped drive the yield on the 10-year note to 2.89 percent, from 1.63 percent in early May.

A steady rise in interest rates can motivate would-be homebuyers to jump into the market to lock in the best rate on a home loan. But more buyers may find a home unaffordable the higher rates climb.

D.R. Horton, the nation's largest homebuilder, said its sales pace began to decline in May, when the uptick in mortgage interest rates started. Deutsche Bank financial analyst Nishu Sood says that rising mortgage rates will likely have a greater impact on the sales price of new homes than on builders' sales volumes. Even so, he expects mortgage rates to influence homebuilder stocks over the next six months to a year.

Have they peaked? Homebuilder stocks began to slide in May as mortgage rates started to climb.



Housing collapse — Interest rate fears hit these homebuilders hard, but many financial analysts continue to stand behind these stocks.

Business HIGHLIGHTS

US household income below end-of-recession

WASHINGTON — The average American household is earning less than when the Great Recession ended four years ago, according to a report released Wednesday.

U.S. median household income, once adjusted for inflation, has fallen 4.4 percent in that time, according to the report from Sentier Research. The report is based on an analysis of Census Bureau data.

The median, or midpoint, income in June 2013 was $52,098. That's down from $54,478 in June 2009, when the recession officially ended. And it's below the $55,480 that the median household took in when the recession began in December 2007.

The report said nearly every group is worse off than four years ago, except for those 65 to 74. Some groups have experienced larger-than-average declines, including blacks, young and upper-middle-aged people and the unemployed.

Hewlett-Packard turns Q3 profit but revenue falls

NEW YORK — Hewlett-Packard made a profit in the latest quarter, reversing a huge loss a year ago that stemmed from an $8 billion charge. But the technology bellwether's revenue declined amid an ongoing weakness in the PC market.

Hewlett-Packard Co. said Wednesday that it earned $1.39 billion, or 29 cents per share, in the fiscal third quarter that ended July 31. That's up from a loss of $8.86 billion, or $4.49 per share, a year ago when the results included a charge to reflect the shrinking value of Electronic Data Systems, a technology consulting service HP bought for $13 billion in 2008.

Revenue fell 8 percent to $27.2 billion from $29.7 billion.

Excluding one-time items, HP earned 86 cents per share in the latest quarter.

Analysts expected earnings of 87 cents per share on revenue of $27.3 billion, according to FactSet.

For the full year, HP said it expects adjusted earnings of $3.53 to $3.57 per share, roughly in line with the $3.56 per share analysts are expecting.

Shares of Palo Alto, Calif.-based Hewlett-Packard slipped 27 cents to $25.11 in after-hours trading. The stock had closed down 46 cents at $25.38.

ONE-TIME OPPORTUNITY

Maximize potential of Duke gift

THE ISSUE:
Duke's $494,000 donation.

OUR OPINION:
Harness the potential economic power of the gift.

Nurturing a workforce, promoting Citrus County and attracting and expanding local industry are the cornerstones and intention of the $494,000 gift the Duke Energy Foundation has bestowed upon Citrus County.

The donation of $444,000 to the Economic Development Council — $10,000 of which will go to CLM Workforce for training and professional development — plus $50,000 to the Chamber of Commerce to market tourism can enable the county to gain its strongest foothold in economic development in recent history.

For decades, county property owners have had the luxury of a power company paying an enormous chunk of the tax bill. With the shuttering of the nuclear plant and the dispute with Duke Energy over the taxable value of its local holdings, Citrus County has entered a new economic era.

While there's a faction of residents opposed to efforts to attract and expand industry, reality is coming into focus, in the form of a big tax hike. The only significant way to balance what each resident and business owner pays is to have more taxpayers — tax-paying businesses that employ tax-paying employees.

Citrus County has historically underfunded economic development efforts. The cash infusion from Duke's recent donation represents opportunity if a sound plan is executed, with every penny being scrutinized for results.

It was consultant Jeanette Goldsmith, brought to Citrus County by power company officials, who told economic development leaders if there aren't site-ready locations for industry to set up shop, we're wasting our money trying to court industries.

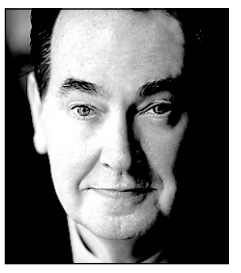
Shortly after being named executive director of the Economic Development Council, Don Taylor said Goldsmith's input provided insight into developing a plan for marketing potential business sites.

"It will help us define how we move forward," Taylor said in March. "The Duke economic team said they will work with us. We need to establish what we have available here, then we can target what kind of industries would be interested in the sites that we do have available. Then we can go out and market to those types of industries."

With word this week that the EDC has contracted with Goldsmith to serve as its consultant on how best to pursue economic development, that initiative is afoot. Out of the $444,000, Goldsmith is initially to be paid $70,000 to help guide a site-inventory readiness plan. Once that is complete, in three or four months, plans are to further employ her expertise in the assessment of industries desirable to target, as well as a marketing plan an then the implementation plan.

These are not easy times in Citrus County. It's imperative that decisions made — and dollars spent — today be viewed as investments in the future. Utilizing expertise and adhering to a sound plan are the best bets for a bright economic future.

The constitutional cure



Cal Thomas
OTHER VOICES

When I studied the U.S. Constitution in school, I learned that for a bill to become law it first had to be introduced in either the House or the Senate. Today, a cynic might say for a bill to become law a member of Congress must first be introduced to a lobbyist.

Much of government's dysfunction, cost and overreach can be traced to the abandonment of the constitutional boundaries the Founders put in place for the purpose of controlling the lust for power.

In his new book, "The Liberty Amendments: Restoring the American Republic," Mark R. Levin asserts the U.S. government isn't performing up to standards established by the Founders because, like a flooding river, politicians have breached their constitutional limits.

Levin, who graduated with honors and a law degree from Temple University and who hosts a popular syndicated radio talk show, believes "The nation has entered an age of post-constitutional tyranny" resulting in this attitude by our leaders: "The public is not to be informed but indoctrinated, manipulated and misled."

Before this is dismissed as the ranting of a far-right extremist, consider the case Levin builds: The executive branch has assumed for itself "broad lawmaking power," creating departments and agencies that contravene the doctrine known as separation of powers; Congress creates monstrosities like Obamacare that have no constitutional origin, spending the country into record debt and making America dependent on foreign governments, especially China; the judiciary consists of men and women who are "no more virtuous than the rest of us and in some cases less so, as they suffer from the usual human imperfections and frailties." And yet they make decisions in the name of the Constitution that cannot be defended according to the words of the Founders, who believed the judiciary should be the least powerful and consequential branch of government. In Federalist No. 78, Alexander Hamilton wrote that the judiciary branch would be the weakest of the three because it had "no influence over either the sword or the purse. ... It may truly be said to have neither FORCE nor WILL, but merely judgment."

Who can credibly disagree with Levin when he writes: "What was to be a relatively innocuous federal government, operating from a defined enumeration of specific grants of power, has become an ever-present and unaccountable force. It is the nation's largest creditor, debtor, lender, employer, consumer, contractor, grantor, property owner, tenant, insurer, health-care provider and pension guarantor."

To return America to its constitutional boundaries, Levin proposes a series of "liberty amendments" to the Constitution, beginning with one limiting the terms of congressmen so they might avoid the bipartisan virus that infects even some who believe in limited government, mutating them into power-hungry influence seekers with little regard for the public good.

Another amendment would establish term limits for Supreme Court justices. "The point is," argues Levin, "that the Framers clearly intended to create intrinsic limitations on the ability of any one branch or level of government to have unanswered authority over the other."

Another amendment would establish spending limits for the government. Another would grant states the authority to check Congress.

Levin admits these amendments are unlikely to win congressional approval because in Washington power is not willingly relinquished. That's why he proposes the states bypass Congress, as the Framers provided, and pass these amendments themselves. As Levin notes, "Article V (of the Constitution) expressly grants state legislatures significant authority to rebalance the constitutional structure for the purpose of restoring our founding principles should the federal government shed its limitations, abandon its original purpose and grow too powerful, as many delegates in Philadelphia and the state conventions had worried it might."

Americans who care about the health and future of their country have the power through the states to force the federal government to abide by its founding document. Mark Levin's book is a serious work that can serve as an action plan for curing what ails us.

What's needed is less focus on Washington and more on state capitals where legislators are more likely to be responsive to the demands of "we the people."

Meek: Do the math

Commissioner Meek should run for federal office based on his commentaries in the Chronicle on Aug. 15.

Mr. Meek seeks to justify an "about 30 percent increase in the tentative millage rate" for 2013 by indicating that the actual tax hike is much lower than 30 percent. While true, it is mostly due to a decrease in assessed value of properties. When we evaluate the millage rate for the general fund which comprises the largest portion of county expenditures, the actual increase is 36.7 percent (5.1871 for 2012 vs. 7.0922 for 2013). This does not even include the already-decided $54 non-ad valorem assessment for the fire district. So if we consider both above items, the tax hike is closer to 40 percent.

Since taxes are calculated based on the components of millage and assessed value, citizens of Citrus County should be more concerned with future years when their taxes rise at an elevated level as a result of an increase in the assessed value of their property. At that point, what happened in 2013 would have become somewhat hazy, which seems to be the modus operandi for all levels of government.

Mr. Meek's second commentary gives reference to Commissioner Adams' "political cheap talk."

Some taxpayers might consider Scott Adams' "political cheap talk" as an effort to uncover and remedy inefficiencies in Citrus County government.

It is time for Mr. Meek and the other commissioners to consider some of Mr. Adams' recommendations for reducing county expenditures. While the citizens of Citrus County may not be able to control the bloated federal government, they can certainly influence which commissioners come to work in the future.

In God's country

I couldn't stand what I read in the Chronicle. Why would anyone let a horse suffer?

I was born and raised in God's Country, Wyoming. A horse was your best friend; you watered and fed him before you had your supper.

What is wrong with these people? Why didn't someone take control of the situation?

This is horrible, unheard off and beyond my thoughts.

If you can not take care and afford an animal, don't have one.

And a $500 bond is unheard of.

Don't let this happen again.

Fattening alcohol

For you people that are looking for alcohol, what's causing people to gain weight when they drink it: It's obvious. Check the ingredients. You've got a lot of sugar in alcohol. I found that out when I had apricot brandy. I was amazed at how much sugar was in it and I stopped drinking it.

Sam's Club

Someone called in to suggest that the Crystal River Mall be used as a Sam's Club or a Costco. I think that is a brilliant idea. We have wanted a Sam's Club in this area for a long time. There seems to be a Walmart on every corner, but we have to go all the way to Ocala to go to Sam's. Great idea, caller.

Hang up and drive

This is for all drivers: Please pull over while you're talking to people on cell phones. You're not paying attention. There's a lot of people from Beverly Hills (who) are doing that. I wish the sheriff (would) give them a ticket and take their cell phones aways.

Casino solution

I'm reading today in Saturday's Chronicle now Belk closed. The only one that will be left is Kmart. I'm telling you, the only idea to make money for this county and put people to work is to make that a casino. It will bring millions and millions of dollars into Citrus County and put hundreds and hundreds of people to work. ... Change it into a casino and millions and millions of dollars will come into Citrus County, including all the buses that go to Hard Rock in Tampa will now come to Crystal River. My answer is the only answer.

Editor's note: Casinos are illegal in Florida without approval by the Legislature.

three-dimensional. The alligator's teeth are real alligator teeth.

"I used to have a construction business in Ohio for 35 years in addition to teaching and I'd go into people's homes, people who had lots and lots of money, and I'd look at their beautiful things and hope that I could some day have beautiful things, too," Swade said. "I grew up in poverty in inner-city Cleveland and worked for all this."

The windows in his home are imbedded with Swarovski crystals. They are what catch the light and make the rainbows.

The window in the home office depicts a Spanish galleon ship with three-dimensional sails, and a treasure chest full of gold coins.

"Glen made a mold and melted the glass into the mold to give it that three-dimensional look," Swade said. "And all of the lines on it, including the gun ports and siding on the ship, are all lasered."

The bedroom doors show an underwater coral reef. The window in the dining room is inspired by a painting in the room of a tropical beach and waterfall.

"I love water," Swade said. "If you notice, over the front door is the name of our house, Shangri la. That's from a 1930s movie called 'Lost Horizons' and it means a place of peace and contentment where you could go and get away from the turmoil of the world.

"That's what my home is for me," he said. "I don't have to go anywhere; I can just sit here at home and be surrounded by these beautiful windows. It's Shangri la for us, a place of real comfort and happiness."

Swade added that he wants to give all the credit to Palhof, who has been doing stained glass in Citrus County since 1985.

"These were my ideas, but Glen made it happen," he said.

Palhof said when it comes to windows, he likes using textures of clear glass, which enables light to shine through.

"When we teach students, we show them how to use clear textures and show their animation in color," he said. "That way it pops out."

EDC

developed a strategic plan. That plan has four primary components and obviously it costs money to move forward on that plan."

Meek said Taylor, who retired as chief financial officer at the Crystal River nuclear power station when it was owned by Progress Energy before the corporation was merged with Duke Energy, opened communication with foundation staff to gain the award.

After soliciting firms for requests for proposals, the EDC chose to start its four-part plan by hiring Jeannette Goldsmith, president of J. Goldsmith and Co., an adviser in economic development who initially came to the county in March, sponsored by Progress Energy, to provide strategic input on economic development opportunities in the county after the utility announced it would not reopen the nuclear power plant.

Goldsmith's background is concentrated in site-location consulting and site evaluation/certification efforts. Her experience in site-location consulting includes projects in both the manufacturing — specifically aerospace, advanced materials and energy sectors — and office sectors.

Meek said the EDC contracted with Goldsmith initially for $70,000 to start the four-part plan that will be funded by the foundation's $444,000.

"What we're going to do with that money is first and foremost we will conduct a very detailed specific site inventory readiness plan, which we've been talking about for years," Meek said.

> "We're actually going to have an individual that goes with the data and visits and contacts and recruits business and industry that fits the site readiness."
> Joe Meek
> EDC president and chairman of the county commission.

Goldsmith will identify parcels for potential new industry to specifically describe what infrastructure is present or needs to be present and how much it would cost to put that infrastructure in place.

"We'll work with the county as well," Meek said, when asked the source of funding for the infrastructure.

"Depending on the property, depending on the project, it could come from our utility and waste reserves we have built in," Meek said. "We have bond proceeds in place right now."

County Administrator Brad Thorpe concurred: "We have about $28 million in utilities that we could use for expansion."

Meek explained that the county's water resources department currently is forming a master plan for utilities.

"This will tie in with that master plan," Meek said. "The EDC will work with the county. We've got $28 million from bond proceeds to invest in the systems in different ways. Certain things we know have to be done. Sugarmill Woods' wastewater system needs to be done and there are certain things that are identified."

The inventory would be the first part of the plan for Goldsmith's work.

The second part would be the assessment and identification of targeted industries that match the site assessment.

"So on this piece of property, you have this zoning, this infrastructure and here's the industry that would match that, not just a guess but specific," Meek explained.

The third part of the plan would be marketing.

"We have this data, how we are going to do it, market it and those monies go towards that marketing plan and the fourth part is implementation component," Meek continued. "We're not just going to do the plan and have it sit on the shelf. We're actually going to have an individual that goes with the data and visits and contacts and recruits the type of business and industry that fits the site readiness that fits the targeted industry and that you can market to."

The EDC's targeted industries include marine-based activities, light manufacturing, agriculture, recycling, technological development, medical and biomedical industries.

"We have a targeted industry list right now loosely based on Stanford Research Institute coming in with the Tampa Bay Partnership," Meek said. "Medical is No. 1 on that, with growth expansion and development of health care in medical operations in the community and the potential for it."

The $444,000 would fund the four components of the strategic plan.

"Obviously, it's going to take a lot more money than that with regards to the infrastructures of the specific properties and that will be dealt with pending on the property and different things," Meek said. "But that will give us a blueprint or a road map, if you will, to move forward with those things."

Goldsmith will spend about three and a half months in the county and will not receive the entire $444,000 award, Meek said. Taylor has structured different break points in implementation.

"With Jeannette Goldsmith's help, some of those funds will go toward a marketing plan that will pay for specific marketing activities," Meek said. "That's kind of down the road to be determined. She will not be receiving the full amount."

When asked if any of the foundation award would pay for infrastructure, Meek replied: "To actual hard-dollar infrastructure costs, most likely not. I don't mean to downplay $400,000, but it's not going to be enough to address it."

Murder-for-hire plot gets nurse 12 years in prison

CLEVELAND — A federal judge has sentenced a former Cleveland Clinic nurse to 12 years in prison after he admitted trying to get a patient to act as a hit man.

Andrew Martin went before the judge Wednesday in Cleveland.

Martin had pleaded guilty in April to using a phone to further the plot. Authorities said he offered $10,000 to an ER patient to kill a woman in a dispute over ownership of her deceased brother's home.

Martin also admitted to conspiracy to commit wire fraud and trying to obtain private medical records.

Investigators said the patient tipped off police he had been asked by a nurse if he "ever killed anyone."

The intended victim wasn't harmed.

Wildfire burns out of control near Yosemite

FRESNO, Calif. — An out-of-control wildfire threatening more than 2,000 structures near Yosemite National Park is one of more than 50 active, large blazes dotting the western U.S.

The remote blaze in Stanislaus National Forest west of Yosemite has grown to more than 25 square miles and is only 5 percent contained Wednesday, threatening homes, hotels and camp buildings.

Across California, over 7,000 firefighters are battling a dozen major wildfires that have charred more than 100,000 acres.

In Montana, a wildfire burning west of Missoula has surpassed 13 square miles and destroyed five homes.

In Oregon, a fire in the Columbia Gorge has grown to 13 square miles, forcing evacuations and burning a third home.

And in Idaho, progress is reported in the fight against the nearly 169-square-mile Beaver Creek fire.

Former South Texas judge sentenced

BROWNSVILLE, Texas — A former South Texas judge who turned his courtroom into a money-making operation has been sentenced to six years in prison.

U.S. District Judge Andrew Hanen on Wednesday sentenced former state district Judge Abel Limas on one count of racketeering in Brownsville, on the Mexico border.

Limas attracted the FBI's attention in late 2007 as he neared the end of his second term in office. Investigators collected some 40,000 phone calls, as well as surveillance photos documenting how Limas had converted his courtroom into a criminal enterprise, collecting bribes and kickbacks totaling $257,000.

Limas pleaded guilty in 2011 and became the government's star witness in four related trials that shook Cameron County's justice system. He could have faced up to 20 years in prison but received credit for cooperation.

Manning receives stiff punishment

Sentenced to up to 35 years for leaking

Associated Press

FORT MEADE, Md. — Army Pfc. Bradley Manning stood at attention in his crisp dress uniform Wednesday and learned the price he will pay for spilling an unprecedented trove of government secrets: up to 35 years in prison, the stiffest punishment ever handed out in the U.S. for leaking to the media.

Flanked by his lawyers, Manning, 25, showed no reaction as military judge Col. Denise Lind announced the sentence without explanation in a proceeding that lasted just a few minutes.

A gasp could be heard among the spectators, and one woman buried her face in her hands. Then, as guards hurried Manning out of the courtroom, about a half-dozen supporters shouted from the back: "We'll keep fighting for you, Bradley!" and "You're our hero!"

With good behavior and credit for the more than three years he has been held, Manning could be out in as little as seven years, said his lawyer, David Coombs. The soldier was also demoted and will be dishonorably discharged.

The sentencing fired up the long-running debate about whether Manning was a whistleblower or a traitor for giving more than 700,000 classified military and diplomatic documents, plus battlefield footage, to the anti-secrecy website WikiLeaks. By volume alone, it was the biggest leak of classified material in U.S. history, bigger even than the Pentagon Papers a generation ago.

In a statement from London, WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange decried Manning's trial and conviction as "an affront to basic concepts of Western justice." But he called the sentence a "significant tactical victory" because the soldier could be paroled so quickly.

Associated Press

Army Pfc. Bradley Manning is escorted Tuesday to a security vehicle outside a courthouse in Fort Meade, Md., after a hearing in his court martial. On Wednesday, Manning was sentenced to 35 years in prison for leaking a trove of classified information to the anti-secrecy website WikiLeaks.

Manning could have gotten 90 years behind bars. Prosecutors asked for at least 60 as a warning to other soldiers, while Manning's lawyer suggested he get no more than 25, because some of the documents he leaked will be declassified by then.

Military prosecutors had no immediate comment on the sentence, and the White House said only that any request for a presidential pardon would be considered "like any other application."

Manning, an Army intelligence analyst from Crescent, Okla., digitally copied and released Iraq and Afghanistan battlefield reports and State Department cables while working in 2010 in Iraq. He also leaked video of a 2007 Apache helicopter attack in Baghdad that mistakenly killed at least nine people, including a Reuters photographer.

Manning said he did it to expose the U.S. military's "bloodlust" and generate debate over the wars and U.S. policy.

He was found guilty by the judge last month of 20 crimes, including six violations of the Espionage Act, but was acquitted of the most serious charge, aiding the enemy, which carried a potential life in prison without parole.

Syrian activists claim deadly toxic gas attack

Associated Press

BEIRUT — Syrian anti-government activists accused the regime of carrying out a toxic gas attack that killed at least 100 people, including many children as they slept, during intense artillery and rocket barrages Wednesday on the eastern suburbs of Damascus that are part of a fierce government offensive in the area.

The attack coincided with the visit by a 20-member U.N. chemical weapons team to Syria to investigate three sites where attacks allegedly occurred during the past year. Their presence raises questions about why the regime — which called the claims of the attack Wednesday "absolutely baseless" — would use chemical agents at this time.

Shocking images emerged from the purported attack, showing pale, lifeless bodies of children lined up on floors of makeshift hospitals and others with oxygen masks on their faces as they were attended to by paramedics. One appeared to be a toddler clad in diapers. There was no visible blood or wounds on their skin.

The reported death toll Wednesday would make it the deadliest alleged chemical attack in Syria's civil war. There were conflicting reports, however, as to what exactly transpired and the death toll ranged from a hundred to 1,300. Syria's Information Minister called the activists' claim a "disillusioned and fabricated one whose objective is to deviate and mislead" the U.N. mission.

France's president demanded the United Nations be granted access to the site of Wednesday's alleged attack, while Britain's foreign secretary said if the claims are verified it would mark "a shocking escalation of the use of chemical weapons in Syria."

The White House said the U.S. was "deeply concerned" by the reports. Spokesman Josh Earnest said the White House had requested that the U.N. "urgently investigate this new allegation."

"If the Syrian government has nothing to hide and is truly committed to an impartial and credible investigation of chemical weapons use in Syria, it will facilitate the U.N. team's immediate and unfettered access to this site," Earnest said.

Syria's ally Russia, however, described the reports as "alarmist."

The heavy shelling starting around 3 a.m. local time pounded the capital's eastern suburbs of Zamalka, Arbeen and Ein Tarma, according to the Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights monitoring group. The bombardment, as well as the sound of fighter jets, could be heard by residents of the Syrian capital throughout the night and early Wednesday. Gray smoke hung over towns in the eastern suburbs.

House arrest for ex-leader Mubarak

Court orders release from prison

Associated Press

CAIRO — Egypt's prime minister ordered Wednesday that deposed autocrat Hosni Mubarak be placed under house arrest after he's released from prison following more than two years in detention.

The announcement came hours after a court ordered Mubarak be released for the first time since he was first detained in April 2011, a move threatening to further stoke tension in a deeply divided Egypt. Many feared Mubarak's release would amplify Islamist allegations that last month's military coup was a step toward restoring the old regime.

Prime Minister Hazem el-Beblawi said in a statement that he ordered Mubarak be put under house arrest as part of the emergency measures put in place this month. The decision appeared designed to ease some of the criticism over Mubarak being freed from prison and ensure he appears in court next week for a separate trial.

Prison officials said Mubarak may be released as early as today. It is not clear where Mubarak will be held under house arrest, whether in one of his residences or in a hospital considering his frail health. Since his ouster, Mubarak's supporters have released conflicting details about his health, including that the 85 year old suffered a stroke, a heart attack and at times went into a coma. His critics called these an attempt to gain public sympathy and court leniency.

His wife, Suzanne, has been living in Cairo and keeping a low profile, occasionally visiting Mubarak and their two sons in prison. But security officials said Mubarak was more likely to be moved to a military hospital because of his ailing health.

The order for Mubarak's release followed an appeal by his lawyers in one of his corruption cases. He is also on trial on charges of complicity in the killing of protesters in the 2011 uprising against him that could put him back behind bars. He faces investigation into at least two other corruption cases as well.

Bare chests add color to Austrian election race

VIENNA — As the campaign for Austrian general elections enters its grueling final phase, two high-profile contenders have gone beyond rolling up their shirt sleeves: They've taken off their shirts.

Posing bare-chested is the newest twist on the rivalry between populist candidate Frank Stronach and Heinz-Christian Strache, who heads the anti-immigrant and EU-skeptic Freedom Party, as the two compete for the protest vote ahead of the Sept. 29 elections.

Stronach was first to doff his shirt, revealing a trim 80-year-old upper body in photos showing him wearing only jeans and a smile during weekend interviews with Austrian dailies.

Heads roll after inmates escape Argentine prison

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — Argentina has replaced its prisons chief and offered a reward worth about $89,000 for help capturing 11 dangerous inmates who tunneled their way out of a maximum-security prison in a Buenos Aires' suburb.

Thirteen inmates escaped from the federal prison in Ezeiza early Tuesday by digging through solid concrete, and then cutting through four rows of fencing, officials said. By late Wednesday, two had been captured.

Prison system director Victor Hortel announced his resignation Tuesday, and 19 other prison guards and supervisors were put on leave pending an investigation.

The full golf swing, simplified for you

Wayne Larsen
LINKS WITH LARSEN

There is no denying that the golf swing, and resulting golf shot , is a very complicated move to execute properly. It can be made even more complicated by the terms used to describe the actions of the body, hands, arms and club during that movement.

While reading golf publications or watching The Golf Channel, the beginner or novice golfer's head can be filled with mind-numbing terms like pronation, supination, hinge, plane, angle of approach, rotation and release. Although the information received is correct, it can also be a bit overwhelming.

I would like to offer beginners or novices a simple drill that will help increase the feel of what parts of the body should be doing what during the golf swing. Most players who struggle with the game use their hands and arms too much in the backswing and their bodies too much in the forward swing. The proper sequence should be more body on the backswing and more hands and arms on the forward swing. The beauty of this drill is that you can do it anywhere.

Step 1: Make sure your chest is pointed toward the ground, pretend to take your stance at an imaginary ball and fold your arms around your chest.

Step 2: Again making sure to keep your chest pointed downward and at an imaginary ball, turn your shoulders back as far as possible.

Step 3: From this turned position, extend your arms back and somewhat behind you (not directly in front of your chest).

Step 4: Let your arms swing freely past your chest.

Please note this is an oversimplification of the sequence of how the body and arms work in a proper golf swing. In an actual golf swing, this sequence will not produce good golf shots if it is not executed with any speed.

But before trying to speed things up, make sure you have the sequence down cold. Once you can make this move with some speed, you will be pronating, suppinating, hinging, getting back to the ball on the correct plane, with the correct angle of approach, rotating and releasing the club, all without your mind going numb!

BALTIMORE — Chris Davis hit his major league leading 46th home run, Adam Jones also homered, and the Baltimore Orioles beat the Tampa Bay Rays 4-2 Wednesday night to avoid a three-game sweep.

Davis connected against Jeremy Hellickson (10-7) leading off the fifth inning. The drive landed on Eutaw Street beyond the 25-foot wall in right field and gave the Orioles a 4-2 lead.

Wei-Yin Chen (7-6) gave up two runs and six hits in seven innings to help Baltimore win for only the third time in nine games. The left-hander was backed by three double plays, two of which he started.

Darren O'Day worked a perfect eighth and gave up a leadoff single to Wil Myers in the ninth before Brian Matusz walked pinch-hitter James Loney. Tommy Hunter then got two straight outs, and with runners on the corners, Kelly Johnson was thrown out trying to steal second.

It was Hunter's fourth save.

Baltimore's usual closer, Jim Johnson, didn't get up in the bullpen. Johnson had blown three straight save opportunities and surrendered three hits in a non-save situation Tuesday.

Jason Bourgeois and Sean Rodriguez hit solo homers for the Rays, whose second loss in eight games left them a game behind first-place Boston in the AL East.

Bucs sign veteran kicker Rian Lindell

TAMPA — The Tampa Bay Buccaneers have signed veteran kicker Rian Lindell and waived linebacker Joe Holland.

Lindell spent the past 10 seasons with the Buffalo Bills, where he ranked second in franchise history with 225 field goals made and 980 points scored.

The Bucs signed the veteran of 13 seasons because pretraining camp acquisition Lawrence Tynes has a toe injury that has prevented him from kicking this preseason.

With Tynes out, Derek Dimke has handled the kicking duties in practice and is five for five on field goal attempts through two exhibition games.

Lindell has also played for the Seattle Seahawks. He's made 81 percent of his field goal attempts and 401 of 402 extra points during his NFL career.

Kyle Busch wins Truck race, 14th Bristol victory

BRISTOL, Tenn. — Kyle Busch won the NASCAR Truck Series race Wednesday night at Bristol Motor Speedway for his record 14th overall victory on the high-banked 0.533-mile oval.

The Sprint Cup driver took fresh tires with 16 laps to go, passed Ryan Blaney for the lead with six laps left and held off Timothy Peters in a race to the finish that ended with Peters crashing on the frontstretch.

Busch broke a tie with Darrell Waltrip for the NASCAR track victory record. Busch has four victories at the track in the Truck Series, five in Sprint Cup and five in the Nationwide Series.

The victory was his third in eight Truck starts this season and pushed his career total to 33.

Busch started 10th in the No. 51 Toyota and worked his way up to second early in the race.

Chase Elliott, the 17-year-old son of former NASCAR champion Bill Elliott, won the pole with a lap of 15.328 seconds in his Chevrolet. He led the first 63 laps before Peters took the top spot. Elliott finished fifth.

Ben Kennedy, the great-grandson of NASCAR founder Bill France Sr., finished 20th, one lap down in his series debut.

Earlier, Mike Stefanik won the NASCAR Whelen Modified Series race. The seven-time series champion passed Todd Szegedy with 10 laps remaining for his series-record 74th career win.

Tigers host South Sumter in preseason tilt

Dunnellon sophomore quarterback makes his first career start at the position tonight at home against South Sumter in a preseason game.

Football is in the air and the first action in the area begins tonight at Dunnellon High School.

The Tigers host Class 4A South Sumter, from Bushnell, at 7:30 p.m. and expect to face a stout challenge in both teams' fall preseason classic.

The Raiders were a playoff team in 2012, losing a narrow contest in the regional semifinal to Jacksonville Bolles.

"We open with South Sumter and they're obviously tough," Dunnellon coach Frank Beasley, beginning his 10th season leading the Tigers. "We have a big rival in West Port, then Citrus, who Rayburn (Greene, Hurricanes head coach) is doing a great job with.

"We want to open our first three weeks strong."

Dunnellon moves back to the Wing-T offense, which will feature multiple running backs, and debut a new signal-caller in sophomore Kobie Jones. Beasley said Jones is a dual threat from behind center and wants the young face of his offense to be efficient.

Beasley noted that a potent rushing attack and formidable defense have been constants during his most successful campaigns, which included back-to-back district titles in 2009 and 2010, and is pushing his team back in that direction.

The game is at Ned Love Field at Tiger Stadium.

Braves win, at a cost

Heyward's jaw broken in Atlanta's extra-inning game

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Chris Johnson hit a three-run homer in the 10th inning and Atlanta beat the New York Mets 4-1 on Wednesday after Braves outfielder Jason Heyward was hit in the right jaw by a pitch.

Heyward went down in a heap during a scary scene at Citi Field in the sixth. X-rays later revealed a broken jaw expected to keep the player out four to six weeks.

Atlanta, with the best record in baseball and a huge lead in the NL East, got an RBI single from Freddie Freeman and another impressive start by rookie Alex Wood in splitting the two-game series for its 20th victory in 24 games.

National League

Cardinals 8, Brewers 6

MILWAUKEE — Carlos Beltran and Allen Craig hit towering home runs in St. Louis' six-run second inning, and the Cardinals held off the Milwaukee Brewers 8-6.

Matt Holliday also homered and Shane Robinson had three hits for the Cardinals, who have a slight lead over the Pittsburgh Pirates in the NL Central race.

After taking a one-run lead in the first inning on a double by Craig, the Cardinals went ahead 7-0 in the second off Brewers starter Tom Gorzelanny (3-5). Starting pitcher Jake Westbrook hit a bases-loaded double into the left-center field gap that scored two runs.

Reds 10, D'backs 7

CINCINNATI — Shin-Soo Choo went 4 for 5 with a homer and three RBIs to spark Cincinnati's offensive outburst in a 10-7 win over the Arizona Diamondbacks.

Mike Leake allowed four runs in the fifth inning, but was dominant in his other five innings for first win in his past five starts.

Leake (11-5) allowed six hits and four runs with no walks and three strikeouts while the Reds were building an 8-0 lead.

Aroldis Chapman pitched the final two innings for his 32nd save.

Phillies 4, Rockies 3

PHILADELPHIA — Michael Young hit the winning single with one out in the ninth inning after Carlos Ruiz tied the game with a double, pushing the Philadelphia Phillies past the Colorado Rockies 4-3.

Erik Kratz opened the ninth with a double off Rockies closer Rafael Betancourt (2-4). Pinch runner Casper Wells advanced to third on a grounder and scored the tying run on Ruiz's pinch-hit double to left. Jimmy Rollins was walked intentionally and Young followed with the winning single to left.

Jake Diekman (1-3) tossed a scoreless ninth for the win.

Padres 2, Pirates 1

SAN DIEGO — Ian Kennedy pitched seven strong innings, combining with two relievers on a four-hitter, and Yonder Alonso drove in two runs as the San Diego Padres beat the NL Central-leading Pittsburgh Pirates 2-1 to avoid a three-game sweep.

Kennedy, who played at Southern Cal, outpitched Gerrit Cole, who pitched at UCLA before the Pirates made him the first pick overall in the June 2011 draft.

Kennedy (5-9) won for the second time in four starts since being obtained from the NL West-rival Arizona Diamondbacks on July 31. He held Pittsburgh to four hits, struck out eight and walked three.

Dodgers 4, Marlins 1

MIAMI — Zack Greinke allowed one run in eight innings to win his fourth start in a row, and the Los Angeles Dodgers took advantage of sloppy defense by the Miami Marlins for the second consecutive night to beat them, 4-1.

Greinke (12-3) allowed six hits, walked none and lowered his ERA to 2.91.

The Marlins' lone run came on a first-inning homer by Giancarlo Stanton.

American League

Mariners 5, Athletics 3

OAKLAND, Calif. — Brendan Ryan hit a two-run double in the sixth and added an RBI single in the eighth, and the Seattle Mariners beat the Oakland Athletics 5-3.

Michael Morse and Brad Miller homered for Seattle, which overcame an uneven start by Hisashi Iwakuma to beat the A's for the fourth time in the past five games between the division rivals.

Iwakuma (12-6) gave up a pair of home runs and pitched with runners in scoring position most of the afternoon, but limited the damage to win his second straight.

Yankees 4, Blue Jays 2

NEW YORK — Alfonso Soriano hit a tiebreaking two-run homer with two outs in the eighth inning, Ichiro Suzuki got his 4,000th hit between the major leagues and Japan, and the Yankees handed the Toronto Blue Jays their 12th straight loss in New York, 4-2.

David Huff (1-0) pitched one-hit ball in five innings of relief to shut down the Blue Jays before New York finally got to Toronto's R.A. Dickey.

The 39-year-old Suzuki hit a liner off Dickey (9-12) that bounced just beyond diving third baseman Brett Lawrie for the milestone hit in the first inning. Suzuki broke a tie with Lou Gehrig when he got his 2,722nd major league hit in his 13th season.

Indians 3, Angels 1

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Justin Masterson pitched effectively into the seventh inning, Nick Swisher hit a two-run homer and the Cleveland Indians completed a three-game sweep of the Los Angeles Angels with a 3-1 victory.

Masterson (14-9) allowed a run and five hits over 6 2/3 innings, tied a season high with five walks and struck out seven.

Cody Allen pitched a scoreless eighth for Cleveland and Chris Perez got three outs for his 20th save in 24 attempts.

Tigers 7, Twins 1

DETROIT — Torii Hunter hit a go-ahead, two-run double in the seventh inning and scored from second base on a passed ball to help the Detroit Tigers beat the Minnesota Twins 7-1.

Drew Smyly (5-0) struck out two in a perfect inning in relief of Anibal Sanchez.

Jose Veras entered with two outs in the eighth inning and closed the game for his first save with the Tigers.

Interleague

Red Sox 12, Giants 1

SAN FRANCISCO — Stephen Drew and Will Middlebrooks each hit a home run, Jonny Gomes and Jarrod Saltalamacchia drove in two runs apiece and the Boston Red Sox beat the San Francisco Giants 12-1.

Felix Doubront (9-6) rebounded from a tough outing to pitch eight strong innings for the Red Sox.

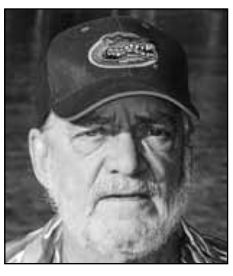
The whys and hows of chasing snook

Last week, I promised to tell you two things: Where and how to catch snook, and why you'd want to. I'll take the easy one first: why. There are two reasons to catch snook; they're great fighters, with strikes on artificial baits that are often spectacular and the power to strip many yards of line from a reel, to start. Secondly, they're delicious table fare, although early European settlers, who eventually gave them their current name (from the Dutch, snoek, for pike) didn't think so. In fact, they were considered trash fish, to be discarded because their flesh had a distinctive soapy flavor, and were called, appropriately enough, "soapfish."



RG Schmidt
TIGHT LINES

Finally, someone noticed those foolish Native Americans who ate those things had a secret. Knowing the soapy taste of the flesh came from the thick, oily skin, they removed it, leaving firm, white flesh with a delicate flavor. Once that little secret got out, snook jumped from the trash fish category to the desirable category mighty quick. Snook are best filleted, and those slabs of meat can be baked, broiled, grilled or fried, but that's strictly do it yourself; a game fish, snook cannot be served in restaurants.

As for the other reason, snook are ambush predators, and as such will hide behind or in nearly anything, waiting for a meal to wander into range. That point is important; while you don't have to cast your bait into the open maw (and it is a maw, a genuine bucket) of a snook, you should try to get it within a few yards of a fish if you're sight casting, as snook won't generally move far from cover to snatch a meal. Snook aren't fussy about bait, readily gulping a range of animals from crabs to shrimp and just about every baitfish in between. Pinfish are among the favorites along the Gulf coast, because of the grunting sound they make while on your hook, alerting predators to an easy meal.

My favorite method with artificials is to cast topwater plugs along mangrove or salt marsh shorelines at first light, just before the sun peeks over the horizon. Snook hang back in the mangrove roots, so you'll want that plug working no more than a couple of feet out from the trees. The rule of thumb for snook fishing is if you don't drop your plug in reeds, or snag a mangrove branch, on every tenth cast or so, you aren't getting close enough. My favorite for decades was the Zara Spook, and it's still on a rod any time I'm snook fishing, but I have to admit the Skimmer, from ima lures has kept up with the Spook in recent years.

Snook will also pounce on swimming plugs such as MirrOlures in any number of colors, depending on water conditions, and jigs, either bucktail or tipped with shrimp or plastic tails. The slot limit for Gulf snook is 28 to 33 inches (32 inches on the Atlantic coast), and the current bag limit is one per day per angler. The season opens September 1, and runs through Nov. 30.

I said last week the mystery of the "kelp" beds has been solved, and it has, for the most part. The vegetation many anglers and guides are calling kelp is not true kelp, but a close relative, a member of the Sargassum family, probably S. polyceratium or S. filipendula, in either case commonly known as "rockweed," and that, gentle readers, is how I shall refer to it in the future. I'm out of space, now, but I'll go into more detail on this seaweed soon.

On Chassahowitzka time

KEVIN MIMS/For the Chronicle

Fishing and kayaking are just two of the things you can do on the Chassahowitzka River, located in the southernmost part of Citrus County.

Citrus County waterway is a hidden gem among outdoorsmen

Earlier this week, I didn't start out my day with a kayaking trip in mind, but it's hard to resist the lure of the Chass while standing at the boat ramp. I'm sure many of you would agree.

Kevin Mims
PATH LESS TRAVELED

I've paddled the Chassahowitzka tons of times before — and surely will paddle it on many more occasions — but this is one river trip that never gets old. It's Old Florida at its finest, and I'm sure I'm probably on a Chassahowitzka area hit list for talking about how great it is.

On a YouTube video that I posted a few years back, a commenter gave me one of my favorite accolades of all time. The comment simply said, "Stop talking about Chassahowitzka, Big Mouth." These few words let me know that I was doing a job well done.

Luckily, the good folks at the Chassahowitzka Campground offer up kayaks for rent, so I was able to soothe the itch to get out on the water. And just like that, I was in the water and paddling into some of the best scenery found anywhere. Birders and wildlife lovers, I don't think there's another river where so many species can be seen in a short amount of time. Kingfishers, all manner of herons — greens, big blues, little blues, yellow-crowned — they are all very common. Add in manatees, jumping mullet, anhingas and otters and you've got one action-packed paddling trip.

While the main river is incredibly beautiful, the creeks are where the real magic of the Chass is found. All it takes is one glance of those incredible bubbling springs, and you are in love with Florida forever. It's at these spots where you see what the fuss is about.

Along the way, I passed local paddling guide Tracy Colson from Nature Coast Kayak Tours leading a trip along the river. With a calm personality while leading groups and a true passion for the area's waterways and wildlife, she's the perfect ambassador for what's right about the area's professional kayak guides.

Other than Tracy's group, I only came across three or four motorized boats. During the weekends, expect to encounter more. I tend to spend more time exploring the creeks, so the boat traffic isn't something that bothers me too much.

People often ask me what I saw while out on the water. My usual reply is something along the lines of "oh, the usual." For me, a lot of short paddling trips are about what I don't see and hear. Time doesn't stop in Chassahowitzka, but it sure slows down. And that's a good thing.

Bowhunting class at end of month

Citrus County archers will have an opportunity to attend a National Bowhunter Education Foundation-certified bowhunter education course this summer, offered by the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission's (FWC) Hunter Safety Section and the Florida Bowhunters Council.

The class is on Aug. 31 at the Citrus Wildlife Management Area near Inverness from 8 a.m. to 12 p.m.

The course will be conducted using a new, online, distance-learning format prior to the field day. Bowhunting enthusiasts are required to complete the online portion of the program first, to prepare for the field day portion; it is available now at MyFWC.com/Bowhunt by selecting "NBEF website."

Once you have completed the online portion, you must then register for and attend one of the two shortened, interactive field days.

Tickets to the jamboree range from $20 (youth) to $50 (families) and include a one-year membership in the Florida Bowhunters Council, sponsor of the event.

Previous jamborees have attracted approximately 600 archers, who test their skills with broadhead-tipped hunting arrows in a shooting competition.

Participants must bring their own equipment, including bow and field-tipped arrows. At the jamboree, they should bring a lawn chair for their comfort.

Students should register for the either course in advance by calling the FWC's North Central Regional Office at 386-754-1654.

For more information, visit www.floridabowhunters.net.

Sign up for safe boating

Classes are held in the flotilla building at 148 N.E. Fifth St. in Crystal River.

Bulldogs hope to overcome inexperience on defense

Associated Press

ATHENS, Ga. — Garrison Smith and Jordan Jenkins say that nobody is irreplaceable on Georgia's defense.

Jenkins is confident the Bulldogs will overcome the loss of first-round draft picks like Jarvis Jones and Alec Ogletree and five other defenders who left for the NFL in April.

Their voids are being filled by less established players.

"That's definitely going to be a lot of people's reactions this year because they don't even know what we've got under the bush," Jenkins, a sophomore linebacker, said this week. "They just know the guys who played last year. We've got a lot of guys who are going to shock the world this year."

Injuries, though, have affected three starters in the secondary, and even junior cornerback Damian Swann, the undisputed leader of the defensive backfield, has missed reps recently.

> "As time goes on, players are just going to continue to get better..."
> Garrison Smith
> University of Georgia senior defensive end said of Bulldogs' defense.

When they open the season Aug. 31 at No. 8 Clemson, the fifth-ranked Bulldogs also will be without starting strong safety Josh Harvey-Clemons, a sophomore whom coach Mark Richt suspended one game for violating unspecified team rules.

"As time goes on, players are just going to continue to get better and better, so sometimes it's good to be thrown in the fire," said Smith, a senior defensive end.

Richt is hoping that Wednesday night's practice at Sanford Stadium — Georgia's third and final preseason scrimmage — will help the coaching staff choose starters.

"There's probably some starting positions on the line," Richt said. "I know there are some guys who could possibly turn a coach's head to say, 'This kid is ready to play. Maybe we ought to get these guys some reps,' and that can happen on special teams — we're going live on our special teams — and it can happen on an offensive or defensive play."

Those decisions might not come easily in the secondary, which needs to determine who will start at both safety positions and the other cornerback spot opposite Swann.

8.06 ERA in five starts since July 26.

The Orioles used a two-run first inning to take their first lead in the series. After Nate McLouth led off with a single to snap an 0-for-17 skid, Manny Machado singled and Davis walked to load the bases. Jones drove in a run with a fielder's choice grounder, and Matt Wieters hit a sacrifice fly following a double steal.

Bourgeois hit a solo shot in second. It was his third career homer, the first since 2011 with Houston.

In the bottom half, the Orioles loaded the bases with two outs for Davis, who hit a routine fly to left.

Jones made it 3-1 in the third with his 26th home run, a drive to dead center that traveled an estimated 446 feet. Rodriguez answered in the fourth with his third homer, the first since May 26.

NOTES: The Orioles had lost five straight to Tampa Bay at Camden Yards, including the first two games of this series by a combined 11-5 score. ... Rays LHP Matt Moore, who has been on the DL since July 31 with a sore elbow, threw 59 pitches during a bullpen session Wednesday. He is slated to pitch a simulated game on Saturday. ... Both teams are off Thursday. Tampa Bay resumes play Friday at home against the Yankees and the Orioles host Oakland, one of the teams they are chasing for a wild-card spot. Rays manager Joe Maddon declined to reveal his starting rotation for the series against New York. ... Davis has 25 homers at Camden Yards this season, tied with Rafael Palmeiro for most in one year at the 22-year-old ballpark. The single-season record for homers in Baltimore is 27, by Frank Robinson at Memorial Stadium in 1966.

Suzuki gets 4,000th hit between MLB and Japan

NEW YORK — Ichiro Suzuki singled for his 4,000th career hit between Japan and the major leagues.

The 39-year-old Suzuki slashed a line drive the opposite way to left field off Toronto's R.A. Dickey in the first inning Wednesday night for the milestone hit.

He has 2,722 hits in a 13-year major league career and amassed 1,278 hits in nine seasons with Orix of Japan's Pacific League.

His Yankees teammates streamed out of the dugout and surrounded him at first base. A grinning Suzuki then faced the cheering fans and bowed.

Pete Rose with 4,256 hits and Ty Cobb with 4,191 are the only two players that have reached the number solely in the major leagues.

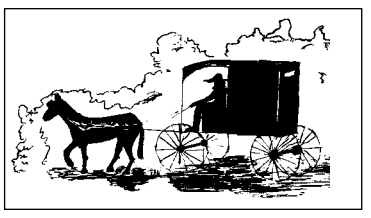
Early morning pony escape leads to excitement



Lovina Eicher
THE AMISH COOK

This week, my husband Joe and the boys have been busy in the evenings trimming the fence rows. We have the posts, gates and fence wire here to fence in the hay field. The horses and ponies will be glad to be back on pasture again. We put our pasture field into beans this year. Eventually, we will want to put it back into a hayfield. We were going to put corn in that field, but the farmer has seed corn across the road. Field corn has to be a certain distance away from seed corn. The farmer offered to trade us corn for beans.

We had quite a rude awakening around 2:30 one morning. A guy knocked at our door, telling us our horses and ponies were out on the road. Everyone got dressed and grabbed flashlights. The men in the truck helped by driving down the road to shine their headlights for us. We had them all headed for the barn when the leader of the pack, Stormy the pony, decided we needed more exercise. He headed past the house and, of course, the horses followed. We were able to head off the rest of the ponies and got them in the barn. It did look funny seeing the little Prancer (the miniature colt) coming down the road with all the big horses. The horses went around our neighbor Joe's house and Elizabeth ran that way to head them back. When they headed back, they ran across the road and around neighbor Irene's barn and into the bean field across the road. We finally had every way blocked off and Elizabeth headed them towards the barn again. That time was successful. It was past 3 a.m. and Joe was glad he had the next day off. Someone forgot to shut a gate, which was a good lesson for us to check all gates before going to bed.

Elizabeth tripped and fell while running after the horses. She has badly bruised and scratched her knees and hands.

Two mornings after that, the horses popped the hinges on the gate and were happily eating in the hayfield. It's like they are telling us to hurry with that fence so they can eat the fresh grass. This time it was daylight and we were able to round them up and head them right through the gates by the hayfield. And, of course, we tried to bribe Stormy with a scoop of feed so he wouldn't be a trouble-maker again.

Our neighbors have been helping evenings to get the holes dug for the new posts. Saturday we will have more help in hopes of getting everything enclosed for the horse and ponies.

We will have everyone that helped and their families over for a chicken barbecue Saturday evening.

Meanwhile, the garden is still producing a lot of cucumbers and tomatoes. We have been canning more dill pickles and salsa. I pulled the red beets last night.

Detasseling is done now. Verena and Loretta are still leaving around 3 p.m. to stay with 93-year-old Vivian. They come home around 12:30 a.m. They want to bake cookies for her today when they are there. She said she would like sugar cookies.

We have a bushel of peaches here waiting to be worked up. Have two more bushels on order.

Lovina Eicher and her husband, Joe, are raising eight children on their rural Michigan homestead. Lovina inherited the Amish Cook column from her mother, Elizabeth Coblentz. Meat-and-potato pies a Montana city favorite

MATT VOLZ
Associated Press

BUTTE, Mont. — First things first: Pasties, pronounced PASS'-tees, are the meat and potato pies introduced to Butte by immigrant miners more than a century ago. Pasties, pronounced PASTE-tees, are the nipple-concealing patches that one might have found in the city's notorious red-light district during its heyday.

Like its racier homograph, the pasty has stuck.

The adopted Cornish and Welsh pasty has come to be identified with this blue-collar Montana city as much as native son Evel Knievel and the Berkeley Pit, the abandoned open-pit mine that once killed a flock of 342 migrating snow geese that landed in its toxic waters.

The mix of nationalities drawn to Butte during the mining boom of the late 1800s and early 1900s spurred an eclectic array of cheap eats tailored for the poor workers, from the proliferation of Chinese noodle parlors to the invention of the pork-chop sandwich.

But no culinary experience is as intertwined in the mining history of the Copper City as the simple pasty.

Its meat, onions and potatoes are enveloped in a golden-baked pie that resembles a brick in both shape and weight. They come dry, smothered or injected with gravy and even covered with chili. A shot of whiskey or a pint of beer is optional.

The perfectly cooked pasty will have tender chunks of beef, sauteed onions and diced potatoes spilling out of its flaky enclosure with the first bite. It was standard fare of the Cornish and Welsh immigrant miners, who brought the recipe with them and toted them in lunchboxes thousands of feet below the Earth's surface.

Other miners saw the convenience and nourishment the packed pies provided, so they adopted them. Some added their own ingredients, such as the Finns spicing up their pasties with rutabaga, according to Montana Historical Society researcher Brian Shovers.

The boom times when Butte was the largest city between Minneapolis and Seattle are gone, but its rich history and raucous reputation draw droves each year for the Montana Folk Festival, daredevils gathering for Evel Knievel Days and the street-spilling parties of St. Patrick's Day.

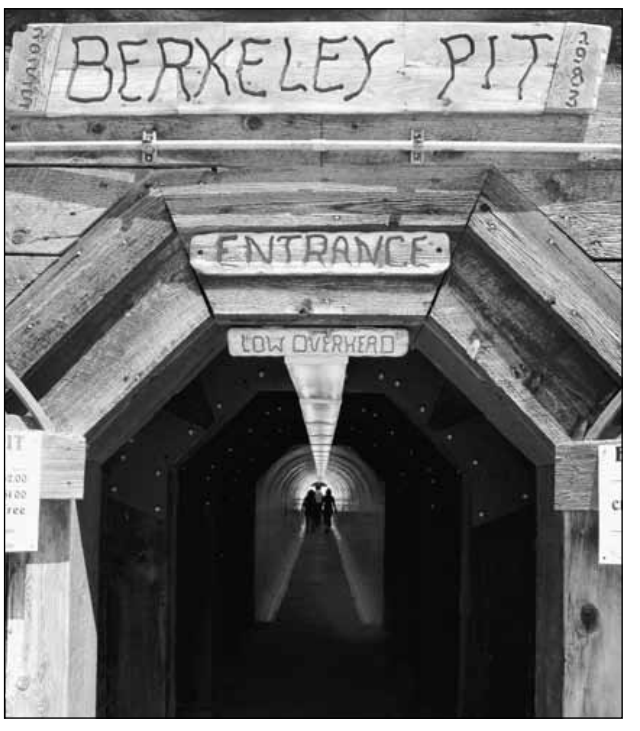
No small number of visitors arrive in pursuit of an authentic Butte pasty. The city known as the Richest Hill on Earth is happy to oblige, with pasty shops dotted across the city like the giant steel head frames that mark the old mine shafts and define the skyline today.

One of the most popular spots is Joe's Pasty Shop on Grand Avenue, which has been operating since 1947. The pasty with gravy is by far the most popular choice, and one will set you back a mere $6.50 at a size that is enough to feed two people.

Another favorite is Nancy McLaughlin's Pasty Shop on the edge of town near the Berkeley Pit. Nancy's has a walk-up window for a quick pasty to go and a small dining area for those who want to savor the savory meal.

Other pasty purveyors across town include the old-time soda fountain Gamer's Cafe and Park Street Pasties.

But a visitor is best advised to pace himself when sampling Butte's gastronomic delights. As the old miner's saying still popular in Butte goes, "Tap 'er light."



ABOVE: A meat-filled pasty is topped with gravy at Joe's Pasty Shop in Butte, Mont. The shop is one of a handful that serve the meat-and-potato pie that sustained immigrant miners a century ago and has remained a part of Butte's culinary culture.

RIGHT: Visitors walk through the tunnel to the viewing stand of the abandoned Berkeley Pit mine in Butte, Mont. Immigrant miners introduced the pasty to Butte, and it has remained a part of Butte's culinary culture even as the mining heyday of the early 1900s has waned.

Munchies from festival fetch $50

Associated Press

SEATTLE — A few eBay users are seeing a money-making opportunity in the free bags of chips that were given out by police over the weekend at Seattle's pot festival known as Hempfest.

An unopened Doritos bag from Hempfest had drawn eight bids by Monday afternoon, pushing the price to $58. One bag listed as "used" was fetching $50.

The nacho-cheese-flavored Doritos were a popular topic surrounding the event because Seattle police distributed them for free along with stickers designed to inform pot consumers about the state's legal pot law.

Sure, you can pay $7 for a gourmet hot dog, but why not make your own? From top: the Italian, the Sweet Peach and the Hawaiian.

Do up your dog

ALISON LADMAN
Associated Press

Remember when all it took to dress a dog was a squiggle of neon yellow mustard and a splash of ketchup? We've come a long way.

These days, dogs are dressed to the nines. Never mind all the geographic differences (it seems like every major city now has to claim its own distinct way of doing up a hot dog). Chefs and food trucks are getting in on pushing limits, too, topping hot dogs with everything from kimchee to mango chutney.

It's an exciting time to eat a hot dog. To help you create your own delicious masterpiece, we came up with some creative ways to adorn your dog.

THE REUBEN
Sauerkraut, Thousand Island dressing, Swiss cheese, caraway seeds.

THE HAWAIIAN
Thin slices of fresh pineapple, jalapeno peppers, bacon.

THE FRENCH PICNIC
Whole-grain mustard, chopped cornichons, aioli (garlic mayonnaise), served on baguette

THE GREEN GARDEN
Scallion mayonnaise, thinly sliced cucumber, fresh tarragon, arugula.

THE LUMBERJACK
Baked beans, bacon, caramelized onions

THE MIDWESTERN
Pepper jack cheese, fresh corn kernels, pickled jalapenos, diced red bell pepper.

THE BETTY
Grape jelly mixed with brown mustard, topped with crushed potato chips.

THE ITALIAN

THE SWEET PEACH

THE CAPRESE
Sliced tomatoes, miniature fresh mozzarella balls, torn fresh basil, drizzle of balsamic glaze.

What to do when 'organic' won't do?

Farmers devise their own label

Associated Press

SCHAGHTICOKE, N.Y. — Justine and Brian Denison say they adhere to all the growing practices required for organic certification, yet if they label their beans and tomatoes "organic" at the farmer's market, they could face federal charges and $20,000 or more in fines.

Because the Denisons chose not to seek organic certification by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the Denison Farm, which has been under organic management for more than 20 years, is banned from using that term. So they and hundreds of other small direct-marketing farms across the country have adopted an alternative label: Certified Naturally Grown.

Started by a group of organic farmers in New York's mid-Hudson Valley as a backlash against federal takeover of the organic program in 2002, Certified Naturally Grown has expanded over the past decade to include more than 700 farms in 47 states, executive director Alice Varon said.

"Certified Naturally Grown is tailored for direct-market farmers producing food without any synthetic chemicals specifically for their local communities," Varon said.

Many small farmers previously certified organic by an independent organization have declined to participate in the federal program. They voice a variety of objections: extensive record-keeping requirements; fees that can amount to 6 percent of a small farm's gross sales; and philosophical objections to joining a monolithic government-run program that also certifies huge operations that ship produce across the country.

"We have noticed over time that more and more farmers — often, younger farmers — who appear to be following organic practices don't bother to get certified," said Jack Kittredge, co-owner of a certified organic farm in Barre, Mass., and editor of "The Natural Farmer," journal of the Northeast Organic Farming Association.

Farmers who participate in Certified Naturally Grown rely on peer inspection by other farmers to ensure they follow organic practices, such as avoiding synthetic pesticides and fertilizers and using cover crops and rotation for healthy soil.

Bridge

PHILLIP ALDER
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

It is a fact of modern bridge that pairs try to steal deals. They sound strong when their hands are not, hoping to dissuade their opponents from bidding the full value of their cards.

Sometimes, though, the logic of the auction makes it clear which side is sacrificing. Then the other pair, if not bidding higher, must extract as much as possible by doubling for penalty.

What do you think about the auction in today's deal? North's pass and East's one club were clear-cut. Then South was wimpy in not bidding three diamonds. Yes, her partner was a passed hand and she was vulnerable — so what?

West's two-spade response promised 10-plus points. Then North compensated for his partner, leaping to five diamonds. This, in theory, contravened the Law of Total Tricks, because he could assume only a 10-card fit, so should have settled for four diamonds. But he thought the opponents could make at least four spades and wanted to be as big a nuisance as possible. He was pleasantly surprised when there were three passes.

East passed because he was happy to hear his partner bid five spades. But West should not have passed. She knew her side had the balance of points and should have doubled or bid higher.

Five diamonds went the obvious down two. But minus 200 was very cheap when compared with the easy game available the other way. And with great guessing, East-West could make six clubs or six spades.

As Zia Mahmood says, "If you never double a making contract, you are not doubling often enough." Do not let the opponents steal the pot.

ANNIE'S MAILBOX

Dear Annie: I am the manager of a small business with one co-worker. For the past eight years, "Sheila" and I have gotten along fairly well. Last year, not so much. Sheila has become lazy, obnoxious and surly. She seems to have a chip on her shoulder, and her teenage kids are a nightmare (drugs, shoplifting, alcohol, sexual activities, theft, you name it). She brings all of this baggage to work and talks about it. I just try to get through the day without too much drama.

When it was time for Sheila's end-of-year evaluation, I could not bring myself to give her a better grade than the previous year. Not only had the evaluation criteria become stricter, but Sheila had changed. When she saw her score, she became angry and upset. I asked whether she had any ideas for her development and improvement for the coming year, and she said to increase her alcohol consumption.

I am close to retirement. Should I put the hard feelings behind me or find someone to replace her? Sheila is a single mom, and I know she needs the job. I am torn. I have referred her and her family to our EAP counseling several times, but it falls on deaf ears. — Need Less Drama

Dear Drama: We feel sorry for Sheila. She has her hands full at home and is probably stressed beyond measure. When she comes to work, she feels secure enough to vent, and it relieves the pressure and is therapeutic for her. Unfortunately, it's not therapeutic for you.

Please be compassionate, as well as honest. Tell Sheila that you understand she is under a great deal of pressure, but when she takes out her frustrations at work, it makes it difficult to be around her. Say that talking about her troubles will help, but she should utilize the EAP services so that her problems won't spill over onto her job.

Dear Annie: My heart breaks for all of these grandparents who write to you saying they have no contact with their grandchildren. I had the same issue.

After two years of sleepless nights, daily crying and grieving, I realized my life was passing me by. The three of my five children who decided we are not good enough to participate in their lives never grieved the loss at all. In fact, they are thriving and happy, and now there are four grandchildren we do not know.

My oldest and youngest daughters sat back patiently wondering whether I would stop mourning long enough to remember that they never left me, and that their kids are excited and happy to be part of our lives. They call me often, and we visit frequently. While I am deeply saddened that I no longer know my other children, we should not forget those who do appreciate and respect us.

My advice to all who are suffering is to take charge of your life. Give yourself permission to be happy, strong and creative. Parenting has no recipe. Other factors helped shape each of my children. I have no idea why some act like we don't deserve to live. But I do know that I am stronger, more humble, more forgiving and closer to those who want to share my life. I am grateful beyond measure. — Finally at Peace

Dear Finally: Thank you for your sage advice. We cannot always change the things that bring us grief, but we can change how we respond. We hope your words bring comfort and encouragement to others.

Dear Annie: I want to respond to "Frustrated in Louisville," whose husband interrupts her constantly.

My husband does the same thing and also believes he is doing nothing wrong. I don't think he is intentionally being mean. I believe it's related to his other symptoms of dementia. Perhaps that lady's husband is also experiencing early signs of dementia. — Anonymous

Attention Consumers!
Please make sure you are using a licensed and insured service professional. Many service advertisers are required by state law to include their state license number in all advertisements. If you don't see a license number in the ad, you should inquire about it and be suspicious that you may be contacting an unlicensed business. The Citrus County Chronicle wants to ensure that our ads meet the requirements of the law. Beware of any service advertiser that can not provide proof that they are licensed to do business. For questions about business licensing, please call your city or county government offices.
