QUESTION OF THE WEEK

Contribute! Like us at facebook.com/citruscountychronicle and respond to our Question of the Week.

Do you think racism will ever be eliminated from our nation?

Chris Gangler
I think it will eventually as more generations come and go. IMHO, things are already much different than when I was a teen.

Elizabeth Goodale-Yerian
Yes I do. The next generation is just not as racist as this one. It may take some more time but it will happen! We have finally elected a very intelligent black president to be the leader of the United States — that's a huge step and speaks volumes. Makes me proud to witness that. (History!) when my kids grow up and I'm an old person I will be able to say that I was part of that (smart) generation who elected him — twice!

Laura A. Rhame
Unfortunately we will always have racism. I believe it is based from fear.

Wendy Kalivoda
Only if you can erase ignorance.

Sharon Tvenstrup Concidine
I don't think racism will ever go away as well as ... being bullied because you're overweight, the color of your skin or your sexual preference. It is a shame but I think it is here to stay no matter what. I believe it is handed down from generation to generation. I don't believe in any of it and I have taught my children the same.

POLL

ONLINE POLL:
Your choice?

How should the United States respond to the threat of terrorism at the Winter Olympics in Sochi?

A. Don't over-think the threat. The Russian government will safeguard the athletes and spectators.
B. Sorry, but our athletes should pass on these Olympics. The risk is too great.
C. We shouldn't back out, but the U.S. should be heavily involved in coordinated safety initiatives with the Russians.
D. In light of President Putin's disregard for the U.S. and his stance on social/humanitarian issues, we should boycott these games.

BOCC: Last word on speaking rules

CHRIS VAN ORMER
Staff writer

INVERNESS — Time to speak up or keep silent: The Public Participation Ordinance will be reviewed Tuesday by the Citrus County Board of County Commissioners (BOCC).

The rule, adopted Sept. 24, limits each member of the public speaking as an individual to three minutes of comment at the start of BOCC meetings.

The board will discuss the ordinance again at Tuesday's meeting because many residents have argued for a return to the previous practice of the board taking public comment about each motion after board discussion but before calling for the vote.

The current ordinance also allows for comment time of up to five minutes if the individual is speaking on behalf of an

Monday CONVERSATION

'Pride of ownership'

MATTHEW BECK/Chronicle

Citrus County Sheriff's Office Fire Rescue Division Chief Jim Goodworth has recently been able to purchase what he says is much-needed equipment for the county's fire rescue personnel. Things such as the nozzle he identifies are more modern, high-tech devices that he says perform much better than the older models, such as the ones at right.

Home-grown fire chief explains fruits of his labor: How MSBU used

A.B. SIDIBE
Staff writer

Jim Goodworth took the helm of fire chief in November, which came on the heels of the kickoff of a controversial municipal service business unit (MSBU) for fire services, but today the career Citrus County fire rescue worker is eagerly touting early results of the new revenues.

In a wide-ranging conversation with the Chronicle, Goodworth talked about the range of services and equipment used by his agency and the new structural changes introduced by Sheriff Jeff Dawsy since the beginning of the new year and a little more than two years after the sheriff's office and Fire Rescue merged.

Goodworth started with Fire Rescue in 1983 as an EMT and worked his way to the top. He served as deputy fire chief under Larry Morabito until Morabito retired in 2013.

Goodworth said being fire chief is "a dream come true" and he is excited about leading a group of firefighters who practically "grew up with the department."

"The pride of ownership is tremendous," he said.

CHRONICLE: Chief, you were the lead MSBU numbers person and is the money coming in?

GOODWORTH: Yes, as of Oct. 1 the revenues began to come in from the MSBU. You know we really have to thank the commissioners who supported this, and the citizens, because it wasn't a matter of us having a want, it was truly a need to have this additional revenue source. It is important for our citizens to know where their money is being spent. You know when I was out there pushing for the MSBU, we said what we were going to do with this money and this is important to show the citizens where their money is going.

CHRONICLE: So you guys have the ladder trucks or tower, the engines and the squad vehicles; are there any other things you use?

GOODWORTH: We have only one tower and it is stationed here (at the Kensington Fire Station) and we have the engines with the squads. The purpose of the squads are they respond to most of our structure fires, our EMS responses and wires down and obviously our engines are used for the water source for our structure fires.

CHRONICLE: And, the squads are a jack-of-all-trades-type vehicle, right?

GOODWORTH: Yes, they are equipped with all kinds of equipment and they carry 400 gallons of water, so we are able to do a quick attack if indeed they were first on the scene at a structure fire. At least we are able to contain the fire until we can get additional resources to the scene.

CHRONICLE: And, the squads have been kind of a new concept for the county, right?

GOODWORTH: Yeah, you know when we just had engines, we were sending the engines out on every call we go to, and the fuel and maintenance cost. These are much more efficient when we respond to calls.

CHRONICLE: Don't you guys also have vehicles to bring water to certain areas of the county?

GOODWORTH: Yes, we have to bring water to places in the county because there are no hydrants. That's why in addition to the engines we have tankers, too. We situate and locate our tankers strategically throughout the county. When we have a structure fire, we make sure we have water to tankers to bring a couple of thousand gallons to that area, because

Marine science seen as economic boost

PAT FAHERTY

CRYSTAL RIVER — While the future payout of Restore Act funds remains uncertain, the attention focused on the Gulf of Mexico shoreline could create regional partnerships with future economic benefits for Citrus and other coastal counties.

Thursday, a group of participants from areas affected by the 2010 BP oil spill visited the Marine Science Station, Citrus County School District's education center for marine and environmental sciences.

> "Have the kids really integrated so they can work side-by-side with researchers, so they can be the hands that we need."
> Laura Lange Hill
> Pasco County School District.

It followed a Nature Coast Watershed Planning meeting, organized by the Nature Conservancy and National Wildlife Federation, in Brooksville earlier in the day.

County Commissioner Rebecca Bays, who organized the visit, sees marine science, the involvement of students, links to related organizations and preserving the Gulf, as opportunities for local and regional economic development.

Similar conversations are going on in other Gulf Coast counties with marginal economies and slim prospects for future quality jobs. And since the spill, coastal restoration concerns have broadened into overall water and environmental quality concerns.

"How do we turn this into more economic development?" asked

Land that Job attracts job-seekers

ERYN WORTHINGTON
Staff writer

LECANTO — A good résumé, company knowledge and an enthusiastic personality are sure to spike a potential employer's interest.

"Number one tip when interviewing is to have a good résumé," said Assistant County Administrator Cathy Pearson. "Number two would be to be prepared for the interview. Make sure you know who you are interviewing with, not just the person but the company. Make sure you do some research on the company and be both enthusiastic and positive. That is what is going to make you stand out."

That was a fraction of the advice attendees were offered at the second annual Land that Job workshop Friday at the College of Central Florida in Lecanto.

The workshop offered attendees job-search advice and an opportunity to hone interview skills from workforce professionals and experts from businesses and government.

"The purpose is to help people get tips on how to do a job search or a better interview," said United Way of Citrus County CEO Amy Meek. "Every person here today will get a one-on-one mock interview. We have folks here from the community who hire and fire. They are the ones that you would probably interview with. Through the course of the mock interview, the person will get feedback on how the interview went and what they could possibly do differently."

ERYN WORTHINGTON/Chronicle

Shanda Perry, left, had a mock interview with Assistant County Administrator Cathy Pearson, right, at the annual Land that Job event on Friday. Pearson gave Perry feedback on how the interview went and ways Perry could improve her interview skills for future employment opportunities.

In addition to the one-on-one mock interview participants attended 40-minute classes: Interview Do's and Don'ts, Navigating the Workplace, Résumé Writing 101, and Social Media for Job Seekers.

United Way public relations coordinator Cindi Fein taught Social Media for Job Seekers and emphasized the importance of social networking for employment.

"I want to make sure that the attendees understand that the job market search has changed," she said. "It is now totally involved with the Internet. It is no longer picking up the phone and asking for an interview. They need to be present in the community and actively searching for jobs through social media, as well."

Fein emphasized the need to be truthful on résumés.

"It is so important when you are putting your facts out there not to lie, even if they are facts that you are not proud of," she said. "You need to be honest. There is no shame in that. The only shame that comes is when you lie and cannot make it right with the employer."

Whether a job-seeker is fresh out of college or finding themselves unemployed after 30 years, Meek hopes that attendees left Land that Job with a sense of confidence.

"When you look at people who don't have jobs, you realize that they need help understanding how they can do a better job to land a job," she said. "That way they will get the employment and the income that they need for their families. I want them to have the ability to be able to say, 'I know how to go out there and nail the interview to get the job.'"

All in for service

Darton State College student Kaylin Carter is cheered on by fellow student Janae Ayers at the Hunter Springs "One Rake at a Time" Lyngbya cleanup Saturday. The project brought out approximately 60 local and college volunteers for the ongoing cleanup. The college, in Albany, Ga., sent 34 students plus staff from their Servant Leadership Program to assist in the cleanup.

Crystal River's Lyngbya cleanup effort aided by visiting students

ERYN WORTHINGTON
Staff writer

Thirty-four Servant Leadership Program students from Darton State College in Albany, Ga., traveled to Crystal River to not only splash with the manatees, but clean up Hunter Springs Park.

For the third year, they joined 30-community members from the Kings Bay Rotary in the One Rake at a Time Lyngbya algae cleanup effort.

Kings Bay Rotary service leader Art Jones explained that Lyngbya is an invasive algae that loves dirty water and hoards nutrients. As it decays, it releases pollution back into the water. Community members have been removing the algae for years; however, Jones said it requires maintenance.

Blake Cook, director of Servant Leadership from Darton State College in Albany, Ga., said they enjoy helping in community projects like One Rake at a Time.

"This morning, we swam with the manatees," Cook said. "Then this afternoon, we started helping with the cleanup. This is just something that is very different and environmental. This fits perfectly within the environmental component of our program."

Art Jones, director of the One Rake at a Time project, shows Carter how to rake Lyngbya from the bottom of the springs. The ongoing project, begun by Jones in 2005, is sponsored by the Kings Bay Rotary Club and Save Crystal River Inc.

Lyngbya is taken from Hunter Springs in King's Bay. According to Jones, Lyngbya is a dominant weed that can rise to 10 to 14 feet from the floor of the bay, wrap around boat propellers and cause rashes on human skin. (And yes, it looks even worse in color — see for yourself online at www.chronicleonline.com.)

Buble, Alpert, Marley, Colbert win early Grammy awards

LOS ANGELES — Michael Buble has won his fourth best traditional pop vocal album Grammy.

Buble was one of the early winners Sunday at the Grammy Awards. Herb Alpert's "Steppin' Out" was named best pop instrumental album, Ziggy Marley won reggae album and Steven Colbert won spoken-word album.

Cyndi Lauper announced some of the early awards during the pre-telecast ceremony, jokingly giving acceptance speeches for the artists who were not present.

The red carpet opened with a crush of people ahead of the show, as most of the nominees in the less mainstream categories were vying for camera time before the big stars flooded in.

Major awards are going to be announced later in the pre-show and Macklemore believes Kendrick Lamar deserves the best rap album Grammy, but if he and his producer were to take home the award, he feels it is justified.

"I think that we made a great album that pushed the genre of hip-hop," the 30-year-old said. "I think that hip-hop can be at times resistant to change and when you see two white dudes from Seattle, Washington, rapping about gay marriage, it's like, 'Hold up, this isn't hip-hop,' when in actuality it is. Hip-hop has always been about expansion, about pushing the genre, about challenging the listener."

Macklemore & Ryan Lewis, like Lamar, were nominated for seven trophies Sunday, and the performers will compete in five of the same categories. The rap duo is up for best new artist, along with Lamar, and their gay acceptance hit, "Same Love," is nominated for song of the year.

The year marks a high note for hip-hop since album of the year and best new artist both feature two rap acts. OutKast and Lauryn Hill are the only two rap performers to win the coveted album of the year; Hill and Arrested Development are the only rap-based stars to take home best new artist.

A rapper has never won song or record of the year.

Jay Z, keeping up the decade-long Grammy tradition of rappers leading in nominations, was the night's front-runner with nine, including nods for best rap album, rap song and rap performance. He's nominated twice for best rap/sung collaboration with "Part II (On the Run)" featuring Beyonce and "Holy Grail" with Justin Timberlake, whose comeback album earned him seven nominations, but none in the major categories.

Tye Tribbett poses in the press room with the awards for best gospel album for "Greater Than [Live]" and best gospel song for "If He Did It Before... Same God [Live]" at the 56th annual Grammy Awards Sunday at Staples Center in Los Angeles.

'Ride Along' runs over 'I, Frankenstein' at box office

NEW YORK — The Kevin Hart comedy "Ride Along" continued to speed through a typically quiet box-office frame, while the monster thriller "I, Frankenstein" couldn't be roused from the dead.

Kevin Hart

Universal's buddy cop comedy "Ride Along," co-starring Ice Cube, cruised to the top of the box office again, taking in $21.2 million in its second weekend, according to studio estimates Sunday. The film last week set a January debut record, with $48.6 million over the three-day holiday weekend.

Hollywood will largely cede next weekend to the Super Bowl, except for new releases "Labor Day," starring Kate Winslet and Josh Brolin, and "That Awkward Moment, with Zac Efron and Michael B. Jordan.

The new face of food stamps: working-age Americans

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a first, working-age people now make up the majority in U.S. households that rely on food stamps — a switch from a few years ago, when children and the elderly were the main recipients.

Some of the change is due to demographics, such as the trend toward having fewer children. But a slow economic recovery with high unemployment, stagnant wages and an increasing gulf between low-wage and high-skill jobs also plays a big role. It suggests that government spending on the $80 billion-a-year food stamp program — twice what it cost five years ago — may not subside significantly anytime soon.

Food stamp participation since 1980 has grown the fastest among workers with some college training, a sign that the safety net has stretched further to cover America's former middle class, according to an analysis of government data for The Associated Press by economists at the University of Kentucky. Formally called Supplemental Nutrition Assistance, or SNAP, the program now covers 1 in 7 Americans.

The findings coincide with the latest economic data showing workers' wages and salaries growing at the lowest rate relative to corporate profits in U.S. history.

President Barack Obama's State of the Union address Tuesday night is expected to focus in part on reducing income inequality, such as by raising the federal minimum wage. Congress, meanwhile, is debating cuts to food stamps, with Republicans including House Majority Leader Eric Cantor, R-Va., wanting a $4 billion-a-year reduction to an anti-poverty program that they say promotes dependency and abuse.

Economists say having a job may no longer be enough for self-sufficiency in today's economy.

"A low-wage job supplemented with food stamps is becoming more common for the working poor," said Timothy Smeeding, an economics professor at the University of Wisconsin-Madison who specializes in income inequality. "Many of the U.S. jobs now being created are low- or minimum-wage — part-time or in areas such as retail or fast food — which means food stamp use will stay high for some time, even after unemployment improves."

Since 2009, more than 50 percent of U.S. households receiving food stamps have been adults ages 18 to 59, according to the Census Bureau's Current Population Survey. The food stamp program defines non-elderly adults as anyone younger than 60.

As recently as 1998, the working-age share of food stamp households was at a low of 44 percent, before the dot-com bust and subsequent recessions in 2001 and 2007 pushed new enrollees into the program, according to the analysis by James Ziliak, director of the Center for Poverty Research at the University of Kentucky.

By education, about 28 percent of food stamp households are headed by a person with at least some college training, up from 8 percent in 1980. Among those with four-year college degrees, the share rose from 3 percent to 7 percent. High-school graduates head the bulk of food stamp households at 37 percent, up from 28 percent. In contrast, food stamp households headed by a high-school dropout have dropped by more than half, to 28 percent.

The shifts in food stamp participation come amid broader changes to the economy such as automation, globalization and outsourcing, which have polarized the job market. Many good-paying jobs in areas such as manufacturing have disappeared, shrinking the American middle class and bumping people with higher levels of education into lower-wage work.

An analysis Ziliak conducted for the AP finds that stagnant wages and income inequality play an increasing role in the growth of food stamp rolls.

Taking into account changing family structure, higher unemployment and policy expansions to the food stamp program, the analysis shows that stagnant wages and income inequality explained just 3.5 percent of the change in food stamp enrollment from 1980 to 2011. But from 2000 to 2011, wages and inequality accounted for 13 percent of the increase.

Several economists say food stamp rolls are likely to remain elevated for some time. Historically, there has been a lag before an improving unemployment rate leads to a substantial decline in food stamp rolls; the Congressional Budget Office has projected it could take 10 years.

"We do not expect income inequality stabilizing or declining in the absence of real wage growth or a significant reduction in unemployment and underemployment problems," said Ishwar Khatiwada, an economist for the Center for Labor Market Studies at Northeastern University who reviewed the Labor and Commerce departments' wage data.

Full- and part-time workers employed year-round saw the fastest growth in food stamp participation since 1980, making up 17 percent and 7 percent of households, respectively. In contrast, the share of food stamp households headed by an unemployed person has remained largely unchanged, at 53 percent. Part-year workers declined in food stamp share.

Donations of pet food needed at shelter

Citrus County Animal Services is asking for the public's help in meeting the needs of financially challenged residents who own pets so they can feed their pets.

Animal Services is asking residents to deliver donations of dog and cat food to their local food bank or to the Animal Services shelter in Inverness to help those residents keep their animals rather than surrender them to the shelter because they don't have the money to feed them.

Concerned citizens have been helping, but the food supplies have gotten low again.

Monetary donations may be mailed to Citrus County Animal Services, 4030 S. Airport Road, Inverness, FL 34450. The shelter is at the end of Airport Road, off U.S. 41 between the Inverness Airport and the county auditorium/fairgrounds, just south of Inverness. For information, call 352-746-8400.

organization. Residents also may comment during public hearings and public workshops, and they may speak about items added to the agenda post publication.

What's at issue is that county residents can't contribute to an active discussion of county business that is before the board. Although residents can express opinions at the start of the meeting, they have no involvement in the topic when it later comes under discussion for a vote.

Residents should be allowed to speak within the context of the discussion, according to Theodora Rusnak, past president of the Citrus County Council, a 30-year, nonprofit consortium of homeowners associations, civic clubs and environmental groups acting as a local government watchdog and advocate for individuals.

"Without the opportunity to speak to a motion, citizens have no appreciable impact on their elected officials," Rusnak stated in a Jan. 4 opinion article. "When discussing this matter with one of our commissioners, I was told that public comment on motions was taking up too much time during the board's business meeting. We would submit that elected officials are doing the citizens' business during those bi-weekly meetings."

Discussion of the ordinance will be introduced by Commissioner Scott Adams, who will offer a motion to amend the ordinance to expand public participation while continuing to adhere to Florida Statutes.

Of course, residents may not be allowed to speak about this motion while it is being discussed. Comments on all topics are taken at 1:05 p.m. The ordinance does not have a time-certain slot on the agenda.

In other business:

■ Adams also will bring forward discussions about the County Road 491/YMCA/U.S. 41 plan and agenda item documentation process procedures.

■ Tobey Phillips, public information officer, will give an update about the electronic newsletter and completion of the County Road 486 project.

■ County Administrator Brad Thorpe will ask the board to approve sending an additional two members of staff, Phillips and Amy Hannell, telecommunications manager, to an emergency management course from March 10 to 13 at the National Emergency Training Center in Emmitsburg, Md., with travel and lodging paid for by the Department of Homeland Security. On Aug. 13, 2013, the board approved sending 10 other staff members.

■ Thorpe will seek approval of revisions to the collective bargaining agreement with the Professional Firefighters of Citrus County Local 4562.

■ Thorpe will seek board approval of staff reclassifications and reorganizations in the Support Services Division, Parks and Recreation Division, Library Services Division and the Water Resources Division.

■ At 5:01 p.m., the board will conduct a public hearing about changing a land use designation on property at 3931 W. Dunnellon Road, Dunnellon, to allow for a mobile home.

■ At 5:10 p.m., the board will conduct a public hearing to adopt the 2013 annual update of the five-year capital improvements schedule for the Capital Improvements Element of the Citrus County Comprehensive Plan. The schedule outlines proposed expenditures to maintain county assets.

■ Under regular business, the board will address revisions of the Neighborhood Stabilization Program Housing Assistance Plan, consider a contract for funding a Low Income Home Emergency Assistance Program and execute a memorandum of understanding with the Community Alliance of Citrus County to pledge in-kind contributions and in-kind fiscal agent services in the amount of $10,000.

we've got some areas that just don't have hydrants.

CHRONICLE: Besides nozzles and the Jaws of Life, what other big purchases are you making this year from the MSBU money?

GOODWORTH: We just purchased two new engines, and they will be replacing two 1994 engines we currently have.

CHRONICLE: When you go to purchase an engine for $450,000 or $500,000, do you guys finance that, or you just pay cash for it?

GOODWORTH: You can finance it, but we didn't do that this time. We actually got a $25,000 discount by making a prepayment. And what we do for an engine is not like going to a car lot; we sit down and (it is) built to our specifications and based on our needs. So, the engines are customized based on what needs we have in Citrus County.

CHRONICLE: And did you buy them at E1 out of Ocala?

GOODWORTH: We actually went off the state's sheriff's contract and chose Pierce (Manufacturing). We brought in several manufacturers and brought them to the training center and had our crews drive the trucks and did a survey, and had them all choose what truck they all felt comfortable with.

CHRONICLE: About the new structural change that Sheriff Jeff Dawsy announced to start the new year, that you would have more autonomy; how are you liking the new setup?

GOODWORTH: It's working out great. Basically, I just report directly to Sheriff Dawsy, who I have the utmost respect for; he is a great leader, a great person, boss and mentor, but it's working out great.

CHRONICLE: What are your hopes about the MSBU money? Do you think the money will go a long way in fixing some of the financial shortfalls?

GOODWORTH: It is fixing a lot of the real problems we were dealing with. It is moving us into the future. We are also, with this, working on accreditation. We plan to be one of 150 departments throughout the world. We have started the accreditation process.

CHRONICLE: Is this the first time the department has attempted accreditation?

GOODWORTH: Yes, it is the first time, and that's pretty exciting for the department.

CHRONICLE: So the emphasis on technology and updating everything and now accreditation should put you in a special fraternity, right?

GOODWORTH: Absolutely. Accreditation shows you are a professional department and that you are following best practices and best standards.

CHRONICLE: And how long is that process?

GOODWORTH: It's about an 18-month process. There is a lot of work we have to do, but it's an 18-month process until we become fully accredited.

And, the other thing we look at is our ISO (Insurance Services Organization) rating; this new equipment and new staffing only helps improve our ISO rating.

CHRONICLE: And how does that work?

GOODWORTH: They come in and evaluate our fire department and then you are given an evaluation number from 1 to 10. One being the best fire department and 10 being not even considered a fire department, and your homeowners insurance and fire insurance are based on that ISO rating.

CHRONICLE: So there could be discounts based on the department on the rating?

GOODWORTH: Yes, and fortunately we had an ISO rating four years ago of 6 and then were rated a 4 and we just finished our evaluation again and are awaiting our results.

We hope we maintain or decrease that 4 rating, which would mean the citizens will have better insurance rates with a better ISO rating.

Inverness wary of joining MSBU

Inverness City Council members recently discussed their big issues for 2014, including the future of fire services within the city. This is not a new issue, but there's still no resolution even after months of meetings among county and city staff and elected officials.

What's the big deal? The city's residents are served by Citrus County Fire Rescue, which starting this fiscal year is funded through a combination of property taxes and a municipal services benefit unit, or MSBU.

THE ISSUE:
The city of Inverness undecided on joining fire services MSBU.

OUR OPINION:
Inverness needs to make a decision and take action.

However, the city of Inverness has not joined the county in the MSBU, total revenues from which account for about 50 percent of Fire Rescue's budget. The city's portion comes to about $349,000.

Since Inverness didn't join the MSBU for the current fiscal year, the rest of the county's residents are funding the city's share (except for residents of the city of Crystal River, which currently has its own fire service). As county officials have said repeatedly, this can't continue.

Inverness City Manager Frank DiGiovanni told the Chronicle editorial board recently that the "the county proceeded unusually" and "not according to protocol" with the fire services MSBU. In contrast, he said, when the countywide MSBU for the landfill was being considered, "they came before the city council well ahead" to talk through any concerns or disagreements. But with fire services, he said, "It didn't happen. They made all the decisions and came to the city to say 'This is the way it is going to be.'"

How did we get here? Over the past few years, the county's budget was squeezed as tax revenues dropped in tandem with property values. It was made worse when Duke Energy disputed its tax liability and made just a partial payment last year. The Board of County Commissioners adopted the flat-fee MSBU for this year's budget as a way to stabilize the funding stream for fire rescue services, which previously relied wholly on property taxes. The county had to move quickly to meet statutory and budgetary deadlines.

There have been missteps all around. Citizens expected the fire service property tax to be significantly reduced when the flat-fee was instituted. That didn't happen because the Citrus County Sheriff's Office, under which Fire Rescue operates, increased spending. It may have been needed, but the timing was absolutely wrong. Then Inverness had the opportunity to join the MSBU for this fiscal year but did not, leaving a gap in the funding and a widening rift in already uneasy relations with the county.

The county says the city can use its own process, from applying general funds to reconfiguring the assessment formula for residential vs. businesses — just so it totals the $349,000. The county also is offering a proposal to help fund city-sponsored cultural and recreational functions, including Whispering Pines Park, because they benefit residents countywide.

Inverness is unwilling to "co-mingle" these considerations. Further, it now says that by Florida law the county can't force it to join the MSBU.

The county says that it may have to sue the city of Inverness to address the unfairness of unincorporated area residents having to subsidize the city's fire service.

Time's running out. The ball is in the city's court. Inverness needs to figure out how to fund its part of the MSBU, or it needs to come up with a less expensive way to provide fire rescue service to Inverness residents.

What we don't need is the spectacle of more lawsuits on the public's dime. There's been too much of that in Citrus County already.

The story A-Rod would love to tell

Carl Hiaasen
OTHER VOICES

An absolutely true news item: New York Yankees slugger Alex Rodriguez was suspended for one season for routinely using banned substances, including injectable growth hormones, skin creams and testosterone lozenges that Rodriguez called "gummies."

As I've said all along, I'm totally innocent. I don't use performance-enhancing drugs, period.

And I would never, ever put a strange-looking lozenge under my tongue before a big game. Anybody who knows me will tell you that I'm terrified of lozenges.

Here's what happened: One day I fly down to Coral Gables to buy some hummus from my favorite hummus shop, and I see this place called "Biogenesis of America."

The sign outside says "anti-aging clinic," so I decide to check it out.

Not because my batting average was slipping, my knees hurt and I was afraid of getting too old to play the game. No way!

The only reason I go into the place was for skin-care products, OK? Because when a player is getting paid $25 million a year and he's missing lots of games (not to mention curve balls), the least he can do for his fans is to show up with a flawless complexion.

So I find my special almond-milk hydrating cream on the shelf and I'm standing in line to pay when some dude walks up and introduces himself as Dr. Tony Bosch. Turns out he's a huge Yankees fan, and we hit it off.

He takes me into his private office and offers to set me up with a comprehensive daily moisturizing program — shots, creams and pills.

"Your skin will be glowing twenty-four-seven!" Dr. Bosch promises, which sounds great to me because when my pores feel good, my whole body feels good.

And when my body feels good, I can hit a slider with my eyes closed.

But still I'm cautious because I'd been burned before.

Back when I played for the Rangers I took a ton of steroids and later I lied about it to everyone, including Katie Couric, who wouldn't even have a drink with me later.

Her loss, by the way.

Still I got in big trouble with the league, and to play ball again I had to promise to stay clean.

That's why I cross-examine Dr. Bosch before buying any of his skin products. "Hey, dude," I say, "this stuff isn't full of hormones or 'roids, is it? Because I am never, ever taking performance-enhancing drugs again!"

"Chill out, A-Rod," he says. "Do I seem like the sort of guy who would peddle banned substances to professional athletes? Does this look like the type of establishment involved in black-market activities?"

And I'm thinking, he's absolutely right. What am I so worried about? After all, this is South Florida, the last place you'd ever expect to find a fake doctor running a fake anti-aging clinic.

Only, guess what. The joint shut down and it turned out Bosch was totally bogus, even his white lab coat.

And now he's telling everyone that I paid him thousands in cash to get all juiced up on testosterone and HGH, which is ridiculous.

(OK, it might be true that in 2012 Bosch and I spoke 53 times on the phone and exchanged 556 text messages, but my skin was super dry that year so I kept running out of his special moisturizer.)

There's way more that I'd love to tell, but for now my lawyers want me to be quiet while they sue people.

If the Yankees think they're finally rid of me and my humongous salary, they're wrong. I fully expect my suspension from baseball to be reversed, and I'm eagerly preparing for spring training and an All-Star, lozenge-free season.

I got a line on some powdered rhino horn, which I grind up and sprinkle in my hummus every day for breakfast.

Next I tape a Viagra pill in each of my armpits and go straight to the gym where I work up an amazing sweat.

Lunch is a shark-fin smoothie followed by a complete transfusion (there's a kid who hit .348 in Triple A last year, a big fan. He swaps blood with me.)

And each night, before bed, I slather myself head-to-toe with a totally organic cream made from aloe leaves, fresh kale, mint shavings and bull testicles.

Anybody asks, you tell them to forget all the bad things they've heard about A-Rod. I'm an all-natural man who leads a clean, all-natural life.

Check out my pores if you don't believe me.

NRC estimate of costs nonsense

The submittal by Duke Energy to Nuclear Regulatory Commission estimates costs approaching $100 million for the next three years. Most of it is labor. What are they working on? The plant has not operated for five years. We are getting hosed if the Public Service Commission approves such nonsense.

Bays. "How do we take facilities like this on the coast line and turn them into economic opportunity along with education?"

"The key is not to work in isolation," said Laura Lange Hill, of the Pasco County School District. She oversees the Energy and Marine Center in Port Richey, which provides similar education activities. "Work with the K-12 system, work with the junior colleges and college researchers, work with your local government agencies, business partners and really build a plan together.

"Have the kids really integrated so they can work side-by-side with researchers, so they can be the hands that we need."

She said this would prepare them for careers and really strengthen the economy. She said they are building university relationships and would like to expand their model across the state.

"The way I see it, if I want my grandkids to stay in Florida and live the life I do, we have to start thinking out of the box," said Darryl Boudreau with The Nature Conservancy. "We have to start being strategic and work together; it can't be a competition every single day. We have to start being more collaborative and being pragmatic."

"I like that we're doing more regional planning," said Hugh Adkins, Marine Science Station supervisor. "It's not just Citrus County standing alone."

Bill Williams, former Gulf County commissioner, said this is as opportunity to expand water research in the state and make Florida the water research capital of the world.

He foresees linking a successful Restore Fund request to linking academics and economic together. "If we can get the school boards involved with this it will give you the bridge you're trying to create, because it is about economics, it is about jobs."

Boudreau proposed using students through this network to do the required water sampling, giving them experience and an opportunity to become part of the solution to the BP oil spill.

Brain-dead Texas woman off life support

FORT WORTH, Texas — A brain-dead, pregnant Texas woman's body was removed from life support Sunday, as the hospital keeping her on machines against her family's wishes acceded to a judge's ruling that it was misapplying state law.

Marlise Munoz's body soon will be buried by her husband and parents, after John Peter Smith Hospital in Fort Worth announced it would not fight Judge R.H. Wallace Jr.'s Friday order to pronounce her dead and return her body to her family. The 23-week-old fetus she was carrying will not have a chance to be born.

The hospital's decision Sunday brings an apparent end to a case that became a touchstone for national debates about the beginning and end of life, and whether a pregnant woman who is considered legally and medically dead should be kept on life support for the sake of a fetus.

First-class stamp now costs 49 cents

WASHINGTON — It's going to cost you a few pennies more to mail a letter.

The cost of a first-class postage stamp is now 49 cents — 3 cents more than before.

Regulators approved the price hike in December, and it went into effect Sunday.

Many people won't feel the increase right away: Forever stamps are good for first-class postage at whatever the future rate.

The last increase for stamps was a year ago, when the cost of sending a letter rose by a penny to 46 cents.

The Postal Service lost $5 billion last year and has been trying to get Congress to let it end Saturday delivery and reduce payments on retiree health benefits.

Two firefighters killed in Toledo building fire

TOLEDO, Ohio — Two firefighters battling a blaze at an apartment complex near downtown Toledo were killed on Sunday, city officials said.

Two firefighter fatalities were reported to the Lucas County coroner's office Sunday, deputy coroner Dr. Maneesha Pandey told the Toledo Blade.

Pandey said autopsies are scheduled for today and that the names of the victims aren't being released pending family notification and identification.

The firefighters were attacking the blaze around 3:30 p.m. in a six-unit apartment building on Magnolia Street near the Huron Market when they became disoriented, a battalion chief told WTOL-TV.

Ray Abou, the building's owner, told the Blade that there were seven tenants in six apartments in the building and all are believed to be OK.

Syria talks yield narrow deal

Associated Press

Associated Press

Haitham al-Maleh, senior member of the Syrian National Coalition (SNC), Syria's main political opposition group, leaves a meeting Sunday with U.N. mediator Lakhdar Brahimi at the United Nations headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland.

GENEVA — Two days of face-to-face peace talks yielded a narrow and tentative agreement Sunday for women and children trapped in a besieged Syrian city, and the government said President Bashar Assad had no intention of giving up "the keys to Damascus."

With little progress to show after months of international pressure for the conference in Geneva, the U.N. mediator hoping to broker an end to Syria's civil war defended their pace.

"I think being too slow is a better way than going too fast," Lakhdar Brahimi said. "If you run, you may gain one hour and lose one week."

The limited agreement to let women and children leave a blockaded part of the old city of Homs, under negotiation for at least two days, fell far short of expectations and was called into question by multiple reports of government shelling.

The talks have yet to touch upon the issue of a possible transitional government — their purpose according to terms laid out when they were first conceived. But the government was unequivocal that Assad's future was assured in the country led by his family since 1970.

"This is a red line. If some people think we are coming here to give them the keys of Damascus they are wrong," said Deputy Foreign Minister Faisal al-Mikdad, echoing the language U.S. President Barack Obama used to describe a chemical weapons attack in Syria.

In Syria, the war continued as if there were no effort to stop it — gunfire and shelling in Homs, between Assad's forces and rebels, and between the al-Qaida-linked militants and Kurdish fighters, according to the Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights.

The blockaded districts of Homs came under intense fire that activists blamed on the government, calling into question how any deals reached in remote Switzerland could be implemented or verified in a chaotic civil war with dozens of players that began as a largely peaceful uprising against Assad. More than 130,000 people have died in less than three years, and millions of Syrians have fled their homes.

Brahimi acknowledged that the agreement for Homs fell short of his hope to send a humanitarian aid convoy to the city. But, he said, "to bring Syria out of the ditch in which it has fallen will take time."

Deep freeze

Brutal cold returns to Midwest for extended stay

Associated Press

CHICAGO — An unusual weather pattern driving bitterly cold air from the Arctic Circle south across a huge swath of the Midwest is expected to send temperatures plummeting Monday from Minneapolis to Louisville, Ky., the latest punch from a winter that is in some areas shaping up as one of the coldest on record.

Temperatures will remain in the grips of the deep freeze for 2 1/2 days, said meteorologist Mike Hudson of the National Weather Service in Kansas City, Mo. It will be similar to what happened earlier this month when temperatures dropped quickly and stayed low for days when a piece of the polar vortex — winds that circulate around the North Pole — "broke off and moved south," Hudson said.

In cities where temperatures reached the 40s, 50s and even higher Sunday, people will wake up today to temperatures ranging from the teens to well below zero. And with the wind chill, cities throughout the Midwest will feel far colder than the minus 4 that Hudson said was expected in Barrow, Alaska, the nation's northernmost city.

The weather service said city after city will face wind chills well below zero today: minus 43 in Minneapolis, minus 23 in both Milwaukee and Chicago, minus 14 in Kansas City, minus 10 in St. Louis, and minus 3 in Louisville.

In the Chicago area, residents were bracing for a historic deep freeze. today's high was expected to be minus 4 degrees and drop as low as 17 below zero downtown, with wind chills as low as 40 below zero.

Temperatures could remain below zero Tuesday as well and remain below zero for a total of 60 hours — the longest stretch since temperatures stayed below zero for a record 98 hours in 1983 and the third longest stretch in 80 years. It also would easily eclipse the 36 straight hours temperatures stayed below zero earlier this month, when the frigid weather prompted the city's public schools to close for two days.

"This is definitely the most widespread event we've had this year," said Adam Jones, a weather service meteorologist in Grand Forks, N.D.

Gunman had no criminal record

Motive unknown in mall shooting

Associated Press

COLUMBIA, Md. — The gunman who shot two people to death at a Maryland shopping mall had no criminal record, police said Sunday, but little else was known about the 19-year-old and whether he knew his victims.

Darion Marcus Aguilar of College Park, Md., carried out Saturday's attack with a 12-gauge shotgun at a skateboard shop at the Mall in Columbia in suburban Baltimore before killing himself, police said.

Howard County Police Chief William McMahon said investigators are trying to determine whether Aguilar knew either of the victims, who were both employees of a shop called Zumiez, which sells skateboards, clothing and accessories.

Police identified the victims as 21-year-old Brianna Benlolo of College Park, Md., and 25-year-old Tyler Johnson of Mount Airy, Md. McMahon offered no motive for the shooting.

"There are a lot of unanswered questions," McMahon said at a news conference. Aguilar purchased the shotgun legally last month at a store in neighboring Montgomery County.

It took hours to identify the gunman since he was carrying ammunition and a backpack containing homemade explosives, McMahon said. Officers searched Aguilar's home Saturday night, recovering more ammunition, computers and documents, police said.

The home is a two-story wood-frame house in a middle-income neighborhood called Hollywood, just off U.S. Route 1 and near the Capital Beltway. No one answered the door Sunday morning at the house, which had a Christmas wreath on the front door, signs that read "Beware of Dog" and warnings about an alarm system.

Aguilar graduated in 2013 from James Hubert Blake High School in Silver Spring, said Dana Tofig, a Montgomery County schools spokesman.

A person who attended the high school with Aguilar told The Associated Press that he was an avid skateboarder.

Police searched the mall with dogs overnight, and stores were to remain closed through Tuesday.

A dove, which was freed by children flanked by Pope Francis during the Angelus prayer, is chased Sunday by a black crow in St. Peter's Square, at the Vatican.

Birds attack doves freed from pope's window

VATICAN CITY — Two white doves that were released by children standing alongside Pope Francis as a peace gesture have been attacked by other birds.

As tens of thousands of people watched in St. Peter's Square on Sunday, a seagull and a large black crow swept down on the doves right after they were set free from an open window of the Apostolic Palace.

One dove lost some feathers as it broke free from the gull. But the crow pecked repeatedly at the other dove.

It was not clear what happened to the doves as they flew off.

While speaking at the window beforehand, Francis had appealed for peace in Ukraine, where anti-government protesters have died.

Snowden says NSA also spies on industry

BERLIN — Former NSA contractor Edward Snowden claimed in a new interview that the U.S. agency is involved in industrial espionage.

In the interview aired Sunday night on German public television broadcaster ARD, Snowden said if German engineering company Siemens had information that would benefit the U.S., but had nothing to do with national security needs, the National Security Agency would still use it.

Snowden also told ARD television that he was no longer in possession of any NSA documents, because he had passed them all on to a few selected journalists and that he had no further influence on the release of the files.

Attacks kill 13 in Iraq, militants seize soldiers

BAGHDAD — Car bombings and shootings killed 13 people across Iraq on Sunday, authorities said, as militants kidnapped soldiers in an embattled province where al-Qaida-linked fighters hold portions of two major cities.

Kirkuk deputy police chief Maj. Gen. Torhan Abdul-Rahman Youssef said three car bombs exploded Sunday afternoon simultaneously in separate residential neighborhoods. Youssef said the blasts killed four people and wounded 14.

In Baghdad, police and medical officials said gunmen shot dead a former army officer and his wife in a drive-by shooting in Baghdad's northeastern suburbs. Police officers also found three bodies around the capital, their hands and feet tied, all killed by what appeared to be close-range gunshots to the head, officials said.

Sunday night, a car bomb went off near a Sunni mosque in Mishahda area, killing three people and wounding 13 others, said police and hospital officials.

Later on, police said gunmen attacked a security checkpoint in Baghdad's western suburbs of Abu Ghraib, killing four soldiers.

Rangers top Devils on cold, historic day

First hockey game contested at Yankee Stadium

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Too much sun forced the boys of winter to wait to play at the ballpark in the Bronx.

Once clouds filled the skies over Yankee Stadium and snow began to fall — hockey weather for sure — Henrik Lundqvist and the New York Rangers got the best of the New Jersey Devils.

Rick Nash scored for the fifth straight game during New York's four-goal middle period, and the Rangers rallied for a 7-3 victory over the Devils on Sunday.

Sun reflecting off the ice delayed the start of the first hockey game at Yankee Stadium for about an hour. The wait was expected to be longer, so Lundqvist took a nap. Cloud cover took care of that problem more quickly than expected.

Suddenly the All-Star goalie was awakened and told warm-ups would take place in 30 minutes. He put on his pinstripe pads, but still looked groggy in the first period when New Jersey took a 3-1 lead.

"I was half asleep, mentally somewhere else, but then I regrouped and I am happy with how I finished," Lundqvist said.

"I'm not going to lie, when they scored the third one, I had a bad feeling about it. My first thought was, 'Am I going to be able to finish this game? Then you kind of regroup and tell yourself, 'I need to stop the next shot. That's it. There is no other way to do this.'"

Devils counterpart Martin Brodeur had no such luck. He allowed six goals on 21 shots and was replaced by Cory Schneider at the start of the third.

"You rely a lot on instinct, and poise, and I

Clutch shot

Stallings rallies from 3 behind to win title at Torrey Pines

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — In a tournament that was up for grabs, Scott Stallings hit a 4-iron worthy of a winner Sunday in the Farmers Insurance Open.

Stallings was in a five-way tie for the lead when he hit his second shot on the par-5 18th hole as hard as he could. It was enough to barely clear the water, and he took two putts from 40 feet for birdie and a 4-under 68 at Torrey Pines.

That was enough for a one-shot victory when no one could catch him.

It was the third career PGA Tour victory for Stallings, who earned a return trip to the Masters and should move high enough in the world ranking to qualify for the Match Play Championship next month in Arizona.

K.J. Choi had the best score of the week on the South Course with a 66 and was among those who tied for second. The pins were set up in favorable positions for birdies, making the course play the easiest it had all week.

But that didn't make it easy — not for Gary Woodland, Jordan Spieth, Pat Perez and so many others who squandered a good chance to win.

Woodland appeared to have the best chance to catch Stallings. He was one shot behind — with plenty of length to reach the 18th in two — until he chose fairway metal off the tee on No. 17 and hooked it into the canyon. He felt he had to make his 45-foot par putt to have any chance, and three-putted for double bogey. Woodland, who had a one-shot lead going into the final round, missed an easy birdie attempt on the 18th and closed with a 74.

"This will be hard to swallow," Woodland said. "I felt like I kind of gave one away today."

Marc Leishman of Australia had the last chance to force a playoff, but his drive on the 18th went well right and bounced off the cart path and a fan. He had no shot at the green in two, and his wedge for an eagle stopped a few feet to the side of the hole. His tap-in birdie gave him a 71 and a share of second.

Stallings finished at 9-under 279.

Jason Day (68) and Graham DeLaet of Canada (68) each made birdie on the last hole to tie for second. So did Perez, the San Diego native who grew up at Torrey Pines and whose father is the longtime starter on the first tee at the Farmers Insurance Open. Perez missed a 10-foot birdie chance on the 17th. He closed with a 70.

Spieth didn't make a birdie over the last 15 holes, and he fell back with back-to-back birdies late in the round. The 20-year-old Texan made a meaningless bogey on the last hole that only cost him a spot in the top 10. By then, his day was over. He closed with a 75.

"I just lost control of the golf ball," Spieth said.

He also revealed that he tweaked his ankle Friday and felt it kept him from getting into the right position on his back swing.

Woodland went from a chance to win to a tie for 10th.

Deep into tournament, nearly 20 players were separated by only two shots. It was similar to when Jimmy Walker won the Sony Open two weeks ago in

Long trip to Victory Lane

Action Express takes win in Rolex 24 at Daytona

Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH — After more than 2,400 miles and 23 1/2 hours of racing, the most prestigious North American sports car race came down to eight minutes and a final five-lap sprint.

The first race of the unified United SportsCar Championship — the NASCAR-owned and IMSA-sanctioned series born from the merger between American Le Mans and Grand-AM — ended with a NASCAR flair. A late, full-course caution swallowed Joao Barbosa's 13-seccond lead and gave Max Angelelli a last-ditch chance to win the Rolex 24 at Daytona.

Barbosa never gave him a chance, pulling away on the restart with 8:23 to race Sunday to give Action Express Racing its second victory in four years.

It gave Barbosa his second overall win and third in class. Co-driver Sebastien Bourdais won the Rolex for the first time, while Christian Fittipaldi won for the second time.

Action Express' second entry finished third — and Chevrolet's new Corvette swept the podium — in an outstanding day for the Bob Johnson-owned organization. Action won its first Rolex in 2010, and Barbosa was part of that team.

"This one wasn't unexpected," Johnson said. "This one we expected to win."

It wasn't easy. Barbosa was black-flagged for avoidable contact while running second Sunday morning, a penalty he called "really harsh" at the time. But the team worked its way back into contention.

The caution nearly unraveled the comeback. While Angelelli thought there was enough debris to warrant the caution, Barbosa disagreed.

"Max, he said he saw a lot of debris that I really didn't see," Barbosa said. "I was really surprised by that caution, but it's racing, and we just had to deal with it. But we're here, we won the race."

Wayne Taylor Racing finished second for the second consecutive year.

Co-owner Wayne Taylor came out of retirement to drive for the first time since 2010, seeking a chance to share the seat with Angelelli and

Wawrinka wins Aussie Open

Tops injured Nadal for first Grand Slam title

Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — Stan Wawrinka added a win over Rafael Nadal to his list of firsts in a stunning run to his maiden Grand Slam title, extending his rival's injury-cursed run at the Australian Open with a 6-3, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3 upset in Sunday's final.

The 28-year-old Wawrinka had never taken a set off Nadal in 12 previous meetings, but attacked from the start against the 13-time major winner and regained his nerve after dropping the third set against the injured Spaniard.

Nadal appeared to be on the verge of retiring in the second set, when he hurt his back and needed a medical time out, but he refused to quit.

"It's really not the way you want to win a tennis match, but in a Grand Slam final I'll take it," said Wawrinka, the first man in 21 years to beat the No. 1 and No. 2 ranked players en route to a Grand Slam title.

Tolbert conversion gives Rice Pro Bowl win

Late two-pointer gives Team Rice 22-21 victory

Associated Press

Associated Press

Dallas running back DeMarco Murray of Team Rice is tackled Sunday by Washington Redskins linebacker Brian Orakpo of Team Sanders, but Murray managed to score a touchdown late in the fourth quarter of the NFL Pro Bowl in Honolulu. Team Rice won 22-21.

HONOLULU (AP) — Dallas running back DeMarco Murray caught a 20-yard pass for a touchdown and Carolina running back Mike Tolbert plunged into the end zone for a 2-point conversion with less than 1 minute remaining to give Jerry Rice a win over Deion Sanders in the first schoolyard-style Pro Bowl on Sunday.

Baltimore's Justin Tucker missed a 67-yard field goal on the game's final play after missing a 66-yarder earlier in the game.

The touchdown and conversion gave Rice a comeback after Philadelphia quarterback Nick Foles threw a 12-yard touchdown to Cleveland tight end Jordan Cameron with less than 5 minutes to play to give Sanders a 21-14 lead.

The touchdowns by Cameron and Murray were the only scores of the second half in a game that had eight turnovers — including six interceptions — and nine sacks.

Foles was the only quarterback of six in the game to not throw an interception. He was named offensive MVP.

Philadelphia wide receiver DeSean Jackson and Carolina quarterback Cam Newton also had touchdowns for Team Sanders. New Orleans tight end Jimmy Graham and Cleveland wide receiver Josh Gordon caught touchdowns for Team Rice.

The Pro Bowlers were split up by the NFL greats in a new draft format meant to improve the game. The picks made earlier in the week created matchups that pitted usual teammates against each other and challenged Rice and Sanders to compare the all-stars against one another.

The result was a game that appeared more competitive than in years past, with some big hits and fewer shenanigans.

Jackson caught the game's first touchdown pass from Indianapolis quarterback Andrew Luck. Luck threw the ball 36 yards into double coverage in the end zone on a flea flicker, where Jackson wrestled it away from Titans cornerback Alterraun Verner.

Graham caught an 8-yard fade in the second quarter from teammate Drew Brees, turning around Brees' slow start. Graham dunked the ball over the crossbar in celebration, but San Diego safety Eric Weddle jokingly defended the attempt.

Newton scored on 1-yard run up the middle for a touchdown, making up for an earlier interception on a ball Cleveland cornerback Joe Haden wrestled away from Jackson.

Kansas City's Derrick Johnson — who had a big hit in the first half on Chiefs teammate Jamaal Charles — was selected as the game's defensive MVP for Team Rice.

Best Served Cold

Associated Press

Denver Broncos cornerback Champ Bailey talks Sunday with reporters during a news conference in Jersey City, N.J. The Broncos are scheduled to play the Seattle Seahawks in Super Bowl XLVIII on Sunday, Feb. 2, in East Rutherford, N.J.

Frozen Big Apple on menu for Broncos, Seahawks

Associated Press

JERSEY CITY, N.J. — An icy wind made its way through the Meadowlands, cut across the Hudson River and into frigid Manhattan. Looks like Mother Nature is taking seriously the NFL's slogan for the upcoming Super Bowl: Best Served Cold.

One week before kickoff, on the day the Broncos and Seahawks arrived in the frozen Big Apple, Sunday brought a bit of a thaw. Temperatures actually reached the low 20s.

Hardly balmy.

Not that the guys who will take the field at MetLife Stadium have any complaints or concerns. They'd play this one on the New Jersey tundra or in Death Valley.

"My team is excited," Peyton Manning said after the Broncos' flight landed in New Jersey. "We worked hard to earn this opportunity. We couldn't be more excited.

"We were excited getting on that plane and excited getting off that plane."

What the Broncos and Seahawks must understand is that the upcoming week is unlike anything else they experienced during the season. Or during any season.

More media, for sure. A glaring spotlight on everything. Spending a week away from home. Practicing in another team's facility: the Seahawks at the Giants' complex across the parking lots from MetLife Stadium, the Broncos at the Jets' place in Florham Park, about 30 minutes from the Meadowlands.

Both coaches, Denver's John Fox and Seattle's Pete Carroll, expressed concern about the outdoor practice fields being covered with snow or frozen. Neither sounded eager about working indoors the entire week.

Just another inconvenience that goes along with the Super Bowl, although the NFL said the outdoor fields will be available for practices.

"Our mentality is strong," Seahawks coach Pete Carroll said. "I think we know how to play in games like this. Hopefully we will be able to maintain that mentality that allows us to do the things we do."

Not one regular Seahawks player has been this far, giving Denver something of an edge in experience. The Broncos have four: receiver Wes Welker, tight end Jacob Tamme, cornerback Dominique Rodgers-Cromartie and some quarterback named Peyton.

Manning, of course, is the only current Bronco to have won a ring, with Indianapolis in 2007. He also lost the Super Bowl in 2010 with the Colts.

"The Super Bowl is a big deal," he said. "I know how hard it is to get here. I know the sacrifice the team made."

That they will sacrifice the comfort of playing in a dome, or in a warm climate, in this Super Bowl doesn't seem to be fazing them a bit. Instead, the Broncos want to embrace the cold, the winds, the snow — and everything else that comes along this week in the first Super Bowl ever played outdoors in a cold-weather city.

"We'd love to play in 70-degree weather," said Denver 15-year veteran cornerback Champ Bailey, who has reached his first title game. "But if you tell me it's 20 degrees and I am playing in the Super Bowl, I'm going to take it."

Welker, who lost both of his trips to the Super Bowl with the Patriots before joining the Broncos this season as a free agent, fully understands the issues that can arise this week. He and Manning, in particular, have counseled teammates on those pitfalls.

"It's knowing what to expect, trying to get rid of all the nonsense that goes with the Super Bowl," Welker said.

The Seahawks certainly didn't find their send-off in Seattle to be nonsensical, even if it got a little "extraordinary," as Carroll dubbed it.

"At the airport, what usually takes us about one minute to get through took 20 minutes," defensive end Cliff Avril said about the "thousands and thousands" of fans lining the bus route. "They were pretty close and we were hitting the windows inside. It was a blast."

That's a lot of 12th Men saluting their team.

"The 12s were out there in full force," Carroll said. "The bus could go 2 miles per hour because they kind of scurried into the streets. They were not just waving, but jumping up and down and going crazy. It was kind of collegiate-like."

Today, with the long travel out of the way and the introductory news conferences behind them, each team gets down to the main strokes. They can't wait.

"I don't believe in such a thing called distractions," Broncos linebacker Wesley Woodyard said. "This is the moment we have got to be in. It's what you wanted your whole life."

Bucs executive Hickey hired as Dolphins' GM

Associated Press

MIAMI — In their fitful, laborious search for a general manager, the Miami Dolphins finally found someone to say yes: Dennis Hickey.

The longtime Tampa Bay Buccaneers executive accepted the job Sunday, ending a search that lasted nearly three weeks.

Hickey's hiring came after the Dolphins were rejected by several candidates. New England Patriots director of player personnel Nick Caserio and Tennessee Titans vice president of player personnel Lake Dawson turned down job offers only hours before Miami reached out to Hickey, while Cleveland Browns assistant general manager Ray Farmer withdrew from consideration Thursday.

Several others declined invitations to interview as a replacement for Jeff Ireland, whose six-year stint as general manager ended Jan. 7 when he and owner Stephen Ross agreed to part ways.

Hickey has been with the Buccaneers for 18 seasons, including the past three as director of player personnel. He was their director of college scouting for six years.

He was not interviewed for Tampa Bay's GM job when it became open after this season. The Bucs won four division titles and one Super Bowl championship during his time with them, but went 28-52 over the past five years and had spotty draft results during that span.

Hickey was among eight candidates interviewed by Miami, with Ross aide Matt Higgins and executive vice president of football administration Dawn Aponte helping the owner with the screening process. The other finalist was Dolphins assistant general manager Brian Gaine, who worked under Ireland.

Some candidates and potential candidates expressed concern about the Dolphins' power structure, including the role of Aponte, who clashed with Ireland.

In a news release to announce the hiring, the Dolphins said Hickey will oversee all aspects of football operations and report directly to Ross. Coach Joe Philbin will continue to report directly to Ross as well, while Aponte's place in the chain of command wasn't spelled out.

Ross' loyalty to Philbin, who is 15-17 in two seasons with Miami, may have been a stumbling block for some candidates. In a statement, Ross cited Hickey's willingness to work with Philbin as a factor in the hiring.

"When we started the search, I outlined qualities that I was looking for in this position," Ross said. "These included a collaborative team-first person who can work with Joe, demonstrated player evaluation expertise, and someone who is open-minded and creative. Dennis fit all of these criteria."

The Titans' Dawson released a statement saying he had declined Miami's job offer.

"I felt Stephen is a great owner, passionate and wants to win, but the details of the offer didn't align with my vision," Dawson said. "I turned it down because it wasn't an ideal fit for my family and me."

So Ross turned to Hickey, who was interviewed for the first time 10 days into the search.

The protracted process reinforced Ross' reputation for having difficulty closing deals with the Dolphins. In the past, the New York real estate billionaire has unsuccessfully courted Peyton Manning, Jim Harbaugh and Jeff Fisher.

Hickey's task will be to upgrade the roster after Miami collapsed late in the season to blow a playoff berth and finish 8-8. The Dolphins haven't been above .500 since 2008, the longest such stretch in franchise history.

The tumultuous 2013 season included a locker-room bullying scandal that drew national scrutiny, and a report on the NFL investigation into the case will be released after the Super Bowl.

"The Dolphins certainly have talented players," Hickey said in a statement, "and I am eager to hit the ground running with our personnel and coaching staffs. We will all work together to construct a team that will make our organization and fans proud."

Hickey will be introduced at a news conference Tuesday.

Former FSU QB Coker signs with Alabama

Associated Press

Jake Coker is going from backing up Jameis Winston to trying to replace AJ McCarron. The former Florida State quarterback is transferring to Alabama and will be eligible to play next season.

Coach Nick Saban announced Sunday that Coker has signed with the Crimson Tide.

"We think a lot of Jake and we are excited to have him join our team," Saban said in a statement. "He is not only an outstanding football player, but he is also a fine young man who we feel will be a great fit with our program at Alabama."

Coker, who will be a junior next season, is on target to graduate in May. NCAA rules allow graduate students to transfer without sitting out a season, as usually required.

Coker competed with Winston for the starting job at Florida State last the spring and preseason, and by all accounts put up a good fight. Winston was just too good. He went on to win the Heisman Trophy as a redshirt freshman and Coker played sparingly for the Seminoles.

The 6-foot-5, 230-pound Coker completed 18-of-36 passes for 250 yards and an interception. He tore cartilage in his knee on Nov. 9 against Wake Forest and missed the rest of the season.

sons Ricky and Jordan. The 58-year-old Taylor drove one stint Saturday and then retreated to the pit stand to strategize for what he hoped would be a third — and most memorable — victory.

"It was a great result, and to have my family and my kids drive with me and Max, it's been an emotional roller-coaster," Wayne Taylor said.

Action Express' second car, with drivers Brian Frisselle, Burt Frisselle, John Martin and Fabien Giroix, was third.

Ford was shut out in its debut of its new EcoBoost engine. The No. 01 car of Chip Ganassi Racing team wasn't able to defend its race win because of a series of problems that plagued the car starting very early in the race.

Ganassi's No. 02 entry was taken out of contention when it developed a flat rear tire while Scott Dixon was running second with roughly five hours remaining. The car went to the garage with 48 minutes remaining when the floor of the Ford Riley began to unravel and Dixon could see the pavement under his feet.

Michael Shank Racing's entry, the 2012 race winning team, was halted by a broken gearbox.

CORE autosport finished a lap ahead of 8Star Motorsport to win the Prototype Challenge class.

Porsche North America claimed the GT Le Mans class with its No. 911 RSR entry.

The crowded GT Daytona class had the most thrilling — and controversial — finish of the race. The victory initially went to Flying Lizard Motorsports when IMSA officials penalized Level 5 Motorsports for avoidable contact on the last lap. But hours after the race ended, IMSA reversed its decision and gave the victory to Level 5.

Alessandro Pier Guidi in the Level 5 Ferrari traded the lead in the final laps with FLM's Markus Winkelhock, who was driving an Audi. With the Audi mounting a challenge heading into the kink portion of the course, the two cars battled side-by-side through the tight corner. The Audi ran off course, and although replays showed no contact between the two cars, the Ferrari was penalized.

Level 5's drivers and team personnel charged toward Victory Lane to argue their case. They eventually got what they wanted, a reversal.

Honolulu, emerging from the pack with a late burst of birdies.

Stallings made six birdies over his last 11 holes, along with a pair of bogeys. Most remarkable is that he managed to hit only four fairways in the final round. But one that he did was important — the 537-yard closing hole, giving him a chance to get home in two for a birdie at worst.

PARADISE ISLAND, Bahamas — Jessica Korda won the season-opening Bahamas LPGA Classic on Sunday for her second tour title, holing a 6-foot birdie putt on the final hole to beat Stacy Lewis by a stroke.

Pierce and Garnett scored just six points each.

Miami's LeBron James defends San Antonio's Tim Duncan during the second half Sunday in Miami. The Heat won 113-101.

Suns 99, Cavaliers 90

CLEVELAND — Markieff Morris scored 27 points and the Phoenix Suns rallied from an 18-point halftime deficit to defeat the Cleveland Cavaliers 99-90.

Channing Frye finished with 16 points, including four 3-pointers after halftime, and Goran Dragic scored 15 to help Phoenix pull off the comeback on the first stop of a four-game road trip.

Kyrie Irving scored 24 points and Luol Deng added 18 for Cleveland.

Mavericks 116, Pistons 106

DALLAS — Dirk Nowitzki scored 28 points, Devin Harris had a season-high 14 for the second straight game and the Dallas Mavericks beat the Detroit Pistons 116-106.

Nowitzki was 10 of 16 from the field in his second straight game wearing a sleeve on his sore left knee after sitting out a loss in Toronto. It's not the knee that required surgery and sidelined him the first 27 games last season.

Harris scored five straight points in the final minute of the third quarter to break a 79-all tie. His 3-pointer early in the fourth capped a 15-2 run for a 94-81 Dallas lead.

Brandon Jennings had 26 points and seven assists to lead the Pistons, who lost their fourth straight. Josh Smith had 25 points and eight rebounds.

Panthers edge Red Wings 5-4

Associated Press

DETROIT — Nick Bjugstad scored in a shootout and Tim Thomas denied Detroit three times, lifting the Florida Panthers to a 5-4 win over the Red Wings after trailing by two goals twice in regulation.

The Red Wings blew a chance to win a season-high third straight game at home, allowing Brad Boyes to score a game-tying, short-handed goal with 3:46 left in the third period a couple minutes after teammate Drew Shore scored.

Jonas Gustavsson, filling in for the injured Jimmy Howard, had 33 saves in his third straight start for the Red Wings.

Thomas stopped 26 shots.

Jets 3, Blackhawks 1

CHICAGO — Al Montoya made 34 saves, Andrew Ladd scored his 150th goal and the Winnipeg Jets rallied to beat the slumping Chicago Blackhawks 3-1.

Blake Wheeler had two third-period goals as Winnipeg won for the second straight day and improved to 6-1 under new coach Paul Maurice.

Chicago dominated the first two periods, but still went on to its third three-game losing streak of the season.

Canucks 5, Coyotes 4 OT

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — Kevin Bieksa scored his second goal of the game at 2:15 of overtime, lifting the Vancouver Canucks to a 5-4 victory over the Phoenix Coyotes.

Zac Dalpe and Chris Higgins each had goal and an assist for Vancouver. Roberto Luongo made 29 saves for the Canucks.

Antoine Vermette had a hat trick for Phoenix.

Oilers 5, Predators 1

EDMONTON, Alberta — Ryan Smyth had a goal and an assist, and the Edmonton Oilers snapped a season-high six-game losing streak with a 5-1 victory over the Nashville Predators.

Justin Schultz, Jordan Eberle and Ryan Nugent Hopkins each had a goal and an assist and Nail Yakupov also scored for the Oilers (16-32-7).

David Legwand scored for the Predators (23-23-8).

RANGERS

couldn't close my glove, it was so cold," said Brodeur, who along with Rangers coach Alain Vigneault criticized the chippy ice that required repairs.

New York got within one before the first intermission and then swarmed Brodeur.

Dominic Moore and Marc Staal had goals in the first for the Rangers, then Mats Zuccarello scored two straight to put New York ahead for the first time. Carl Hagelin and Nash found the net, too, behind the beleaguered Brodeur, who angrily swatted the puck away after one of the tallies.

"Most of their goals went in off our players, or a stick or skate, and that happens. It was just one of those nights," Brodeur said.

Nash has seven goals in his streak and 18 this season.

A day after the Los Angeles Kings and Anaheim Ducks played in 60-degree weather at Dodger Stadium, the NHL returned to conditions more fitting for hockey.

Lundqvist settled down and made 19 saves. He hadn't allowed more than two goals in his previous seven outings.

The Devils took care of that in the first.

Patrik Elias scored twice, Travis Zajac once and Jaromir Jagr had two assists in the first to excite the large number of New Jersey fans who made the trek to the Bronx for what was a Devils home game.

WAWRINKA

Nadal was a hot favorite to win at Melbourne Park and become the first man to win each of the four Grand Slam tournaments twice in the Open era — instead, his injury curse struck again. It remains the only major he's hasn't won at least two times.

"Rafa, I'm really sorry for you, I hope your back is going to be fine, you're a really great guy, good friend and really amazing champion," Wawrinka said as he accepted his first major trophy. "Last year I had a crazy match, I lost it. I was crying a lot after the match. But in one year a lot happened — I still don't know if I'm dreaming or not but we'll see tomorrow morning."

Wawrinka lost in five sets to Novak Djokovic in the fourth round of the 2013 Australian Open, in the longest Grand Slam match of the season. Djokovic went on to win his third consecutive title at Melbourne Park, and then beat Wawrinka again in five sets in the U.S. Open semifinals.

But Wawrinka avenged those losses this time, beating Djokovic in five sets in the quarterfinals — ending a run of 14 straight losses to the Serbian player.

Now he'll move from No. 8 to No. 3. In doing so, he'll surpass Federer, a 17-time Grand Slam winner who lost to Nadal in the semifinals — to become the highest-ranked Swiss player for the first time in his career.

A constant supporter of his countryman, Federer was one of the first people to call and congratulate Wawrinka after his win.

Wawrinka also broke up a sequence of wins for the Big Four — with 34 of the previous 35 majors going to either Nadal, Djokovic, Roger Federer or Andy Murray.

"Stan, you really deserve it," Nadal said. "Luck was against me today but you really deserve it.

"Last thing that I wanted to do was retire. I hate to do that, especially in a final. Same time, is tough to see yourself during the whole year you are working for a moment like this, and arrives the moment and you feel that you are not able to play at your best. "

Nadal has had a terrible stretch with injuries at the Australian Open, and has described it as his unluckiest Grand Slam. He won the title in 2009, and lost an epic five-set final to Djokovic in 2012. But he missed the 2013 edition during a seven-month layoff with knee injuries and illness, and his quarterfinal losses in 2010 and 2011 were affected by injuries.

"It has been a very emotional two weeks — I'm sorry to finish this way," he told the Rod Laver Arena crowd. "I tried very, very hard — this year was one of the more emotional tournaments in my career."

A possible retirement was looming when Nadal was serving at 0-2 in the second set. He bent over at the waist to stretch his back and then grabbed his lower back with his hand and grimaced in pain. His serve immediately dipped to 87 mph.

When Nadal took a medical timeout after falling behind a set and a break, and returned to a chorus of boos without a shirt after 7 minutes, it seemed that an early finish was on the cards.

Wawrinka was aggravated during the time out, demanding that officials tell him why Nadal needed the break. And he came out aggressively to finish off the second set.

By the end of the third set, Nadal's serve was back up to 108 mph and Wawrinka's error count was escalating.

Wawrinka composed himself after an exchange of breaks in the fourth set to serve it out in 2 hours, 21 minutes. After a muted celebration, he consoled Nadal in the courtside chairs before getting a chance to hold up and kiss his first big trophy.

Bridge

PHILLIP ALDER
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Jim Rohn, an entrepreneur and a motivational speaker who died in 2009, said, "If you are not willing to risk the unusual, you will have to settle for the ordinary."

It is true that at the bridge table, producing an unusual bid might not be a good idea if it is going to flummox partner into making an error. But if you have discussed the situation before, you can safely produce the unusual.

Look at today's North hand. You deal and open three hearts. With the opponents retaining a respectful silence, your partner responds four diamonds. Assuming this is natural and forcing, what would you rebid?

What does four diamonds promise? Many teachers use the expression "six and 16" — at least a six-card suit and 16 high-card points. Also, typically, responder is very short in opener's suit, especially when that is a major.

How should opener react? With no support for responder's suit, he may rebid his own suit or three no-trump (if legal, of course). With moderate support, like a low doubleton (or perhaps honor-doubleton with an unappealing hand), he raises responder's suit. But with good support (any three cards, or honor-doubleton and an appealing hand), he shows a side-suit singleton (or void).

In this deal, North should rebid four spades. And that is just what South wants to hear. He can now leap majestically to six diamonds.

Note that even after a club lead and trump shift, the contract is laydown. South takes one spade, one heart, eight diamonds and two spade ruffs on the board.

ANNIE'S MAILBOX

Dear Annie: A year ago, I found out that my husband had been cheating on me at his brother's house. He was having an affair with "Charlie's" wife's sister. My husband cheated more than 30 years ago with a friend of Charlie's, and we divorced over it. We got back together two years later.

I have forgiven my husband for his most recent affair, and we renewed our wedding vows six months ago, but I cannot forgive his brother. Over the years, Charlie has tried his best to split us up. I no longer allow my husband to visit Charlie unless I am with him. Dealing with this relationship causes me severe headaches, and I've lost 50 pounds. My doctor says the stress is killing me.

I know Charlie will continue trying to break up my marriage. What should I do to stop this nightmare? — Brokenhearted in Indiana

Dear Brokenhearted: Charlie may have encouraged the cheating, but your husband had to cooperate. This is now your husband's responsibility. He needs to tell his brother to knock it off, that he isn't interested in having an affair, and that if Charlie tries to break up his marriage, the relationship is over. Charlie has to understand that there are consequences to interfering in your lives, but his brother is the one who must make it stick.

Dear Annie: We have a friend who asks for help almost every day with repairs, assistance with his computer, a ride (he never offers to pay for gas) and on and on. This man is 75 years old, doesn't do much, lives alone and probably needs the companionship.

My husband is a kind man and would never say no. Please advise people to have some consideration for their neighbors and do things for themselves so they don't intrude. My husband and I enjoy our time together, and too often, this "friend" stops by needing something. — No Private Time

Dear Private: The man is 75 and lives alone. Perhaps he is not capable of doing for himself those things he asks of you. And he seems lonely. We know that stopping by too often is a nuisance, but we're going to ask you to think about this differently.

Welcome him as an act of kindness, instead of resenting the time he takes from you. Introduce him to others in your neighborhood so they, too, can keep him company. Set a few boundaries: It's OK to tell him you are busy when he drops in unexpectedly, and to ask him to fill the tank once in a while, provided he can afford it. Schedule one day a week for him, letting him know you are available only on that day. If you and your husband stick to that schedule, he will eventually adapt, and you will feel less resentful.

Dear Annie: I had to write after reading the letter from "Joining the Letting Go Club," whose adult children have cut them out of their lives.

I worked in a long-term care facility for 10 years. I've seen adult children drive up to the door, unload the parent and take off — forever. I saw an adult son berate his mother until she signed a power of attorney. He then pillaged all of her assets and refused to spend any money on her care or provide documentation so she could qualify for Medicaid. One Christmas, a son and daughter-in-law came for their annual visit and brought gifts, but took them home because Mom was asleep. They said she wouldn't know the difference. Usually the parental rejection involves money. Sometimes, the kids know they are not in the will, or the parents refused to appoint one of them power of attorney. Sometimes, the parents have gifted their children so much that they have nothing left.

Your advice to this couple was solid. Enjoy each other and fill it with people who expect nothing in return except friendship. — Know in New York
