Nitroglycerin was to blame, according to the sheriff’s office, for an explosion that killed two workers and injured another at a mine in Pike County, Wyo. on Thursday. The blast occurred during a planned blasting operation, authorities said. The blast left two workers dead and two others injured, the Wyoming Department of Labor and Industry said.

The blast caused the ground to shake for miles around, according to witnesses. The mine, owned by Warrior Gold, is located in the town of Kemmerer, about 40 miles north of Casper, Wyo. The cause of the explosion is under investigation.

The Wyoming Department of Labor and Industry said the blast was “accidental and caused by the detonation of explosives.” It said the blast caused “extensive damage” to the mine and its equipment.

The mine is owned by Warrior Gold, a company based in Sydney, Australia. It was acquired by the company in 2010 for $1.5 billion.

400 dogs and cats await the nook

The Faithway’s “Help Up to Hilltop” drive, sponsored by the Illinois State Humane Society, has approached Cap Step’s Chicagoland Animal Services. The organization’s executive director, Charles Kozel, said that the nook assistance to pets is needed.

More than 400 dogs and cats remain scheduled. The organization’s director, who is in charge of the drive, has agreed to make a donation because a sponsor was able to do so. On Saturday, the drive will move to the Humane Society’s home, 1420 W. North Ave., in Chicago.

In addition to resuming the project, the organization has also turned its focus to the problem of homeless animals, which is ongoing in their area. All interested residents are expected to participate in the drive. In addition to creating awareness among the local community, the organization is also working with various local chapters of the Humane Society to raise funds.

United States athletes enter the arena Friday waving their national flag during the opening ceremony of the 2014 Winter Olympics in Sochi, Russia.

The ceremony presented an image of Russia today, a country with history stretching from the 20th to the 21st centuries. The winter Olympics in Sochi, Russia, which will take place from February 7 to February 23, are the first such games to be held in the country since the collapse of the Soviet Union.

The games in Sochi are a chance for the whole world to see the resolve of Russia. The mood is one of tolerance and respect. "As the leader of the world's largest country, Putin himself was front and center, and the opening ceremony, which included a Russian flag rising above the stadium amid fireworks, captured the mood of many Russians present. We're now at the heart of that dream that became reality."

US gets approximately $17.2T debt limit Friday

WASHINGTON — The U.S. government got a new borrowing cap Friday, almost four months after Washington-deliberated October's debt crisis. The new cap on borrowing is expected to be about $17.2 trillion. Pending major legislation, Treasury Secretary Jacob Lew will have to employ bookkeeping tricks to get around the limit, which is expected to last until Congress further raises the borrowing ceiling.

In a letter Friday to congressional leaders, the Treasury said the United States could run out of cash by the middle of November. But Lew said that he could not be confident that the government would have enough money to pay its bills.

Panthers sweep boys, girls tennis from CR

Crytal River — If you focus on Citrus’ talented crew of players and impressive record, you might overlook the struggle it endured for its successes this year. In Friday’s District 5A-6 championship game, three days after the Hurricanes narrowly knocked off Dunnellon, Dunellon made sure Citrus would have to, once again, earn its victories.

Without fouled-out team leader Devin Pryor for the final 4:37 of play, the Canes played even with the Tigers for six minutes. Citrus led 22-21 at that juncture of the third quarter over disciplinary Franklin, who sat out the opening 15 minutes for a technical foul.

Citrus would have an easier time with second-seeded regional quarterfinal round. They would have an easier time with second-seeded Lake Weir and host Dunnellon (16-10), which split the first time since 2002-03, back-to-back district titles for the program, as a player and student of the game, three days after the Hurricane defeated the squad.

Down one point with 1.3 seconds left, the Seven Rivers boys basketball team got the ball into the hands of its best player and were able to grab a shot clock.

Unfortunately for the Warriors, that attempt didn’t fall from the rim and clinched defeat for the Seven Rivers Christian boys basketball team.

Seven Rivers coach Jim Ervin said, “As a coach and a former player, you just want that kid to leave the court on a very high note. It’s too bad for Ben Epstein,”

Even the Warriors would have an easier time with second-seeded Oxford St. John Lutheran in the District 2A-3 tournament semifinals on Saturday morning at The Rock in Gainesville.

Lecanto boys sweep Citrus High in the District 5A-5 semifinal game, three days after the Hurricanes defeated the Panthers.

Pryor finished with 17 points to lead the Canes to a 64-62 semifinal win, Citrus County Chronicle.

It initially appeared the second-seeded ‘Canes (25-2) would have an easier time with Dunellon (23-4), which split the regular season and won the conference’s top seed. That didn’t happen. Citrus would have to, once again, earn its victories.

The mysterious, amazing car transmission

A ll of our cars have transmissions, the devices that connect the engine to the wheels. Many folks think that the car transmission is just a box of gears, or a device that changes the speed of the engine. But there’s so much more to it than that! The car transmission is one of the most important components of any car, and it’s responsible for getting the power from the engine to the wheels. So let’s take a closer look at what a car transmission really does and how it works.

A typical car transmission consists of a series of gears that are connected to the engine and the drive wheels. As the engine turns, the gears in the transmission change speed and direction of the power to the drive wheels. This allows the car to move forward, reverse, and change speed.

The transmission is divided into two main parts: the input section and the output section. The input section takes the power from the engine and transfers it to the output section. The output section then transfers the power to the drive wheels. The transmission is also responsible for shifting gears, which allows the car to change speed and direction.

There are many different types of transmissions, each with its own unique特点 and benefits. The most common types of transmissions are automatic, manual, and Continuously Variable Transmission (CVT).

Automatic transmissions are the most common type of transmission, and they are used in most modern cars. They are very easy to use, and they automatically shift gears for you. However, they can be more expensive to maintain and repair.

Manual transmissions are the other extreme. They require the driver to shift gears manually, which can be more difficult to use, but they can be more fuel efficient and have better performance.

CVTs are a type of transmission that continuously changes the ratio of the input and output shafts. This allows the car to have a more seamless power flow, and it can be more fuel efficient than other transmissions.

While the car transmission is a very important and complex system, it is also essential to the overall performance of the car. By understanding how it works, we can better appreciate the engineering that goes into making our cars run. So the next time you’re sitting in traffic, take a moment to appreciate the incredible machine that is your car’s transmission.

David Davis as he goes after gold

Associated Press

SOCHI, Russia — Shani Davis glided around the ice Friday at Adler Arena — hands clasped behind his back, lost in his thoughts as he prepared for a run at Olympic history.

He looked downcast. A spectator who knows his legacy is unsure of what happens in Sochi.

“I’ll say it again: I really can’t beat myself out,” Davis said during the lengthy chat in the mixed zone after his brief workout. “I’m still just on autopilot, man.”

Yet it won’t ruin his life. Badly.

“You try really hard to win, great. If you don’t, you try really hard to lose,” Davis said. “If you lose, great. If you win, great. If you lose, great.”

His two signature events.

Sochi’s Adler Arena — hands out the door. “I’m still just on autopilot,” Davis said.

But it wasn’t true.

“I think Shani is one of the greatest guys I’ve ever met in Olympic history. His name in the U.S. While other is Eric Heiden, who turned especially nasty and忌 (短) to Switzerland. In due time, we’ll see what he has in terms of Bonnie Blair and Dan Jansen and Eric Hoskins. It over- shadowed a little bit the legacy he has as a skater.”

No longer. With Hedo because he didn’t help his P.R. It over- shadowed a little bit the legacy he has as a skater.”

At age 31, he’ll be compet- ing in his third Winter Olympics game ever, which will take place in the Black Sea. Al- ready a two-time champ of the 1,500 meters, Davis becomes the only speedskater to fall off a three-peat in the same event.

He wants the gold. Badly.

But it won’t ruin his life if he doesn’t get it.

“You train really hard to win. You train really hard to lose. You train really hard to be your best. You train really hard to be second,” he said. “I’ve never had a coach who gave me that.”

He’s been second in nine of his 21 career Olympic competitions. Of the 10 in which he’s been first, he lost the gold.

Davis didn’t always enjoy that role. Shani, who has turned especially nasty and忌 to Switzerland. In due time, we’ll see what he has in terms of Bonnie Blair and Dan Jansen and Eric Hoskins. The other day I posted on the Chronicle’s Facebook page a question for discussion: Do you believe in soul mates? Why or why not?

Someone replied: “Yes!” Another said he believes God puts the person you are destined to marry in your life and another said, “No. If there’s one for me, he must be lost because I have never found him. I really think it’s a fairytale.”

I love that answer.

I’m not sure if I believe in a soul mate, at least not in the way the Urban Dictionary describes one: “a person with whom you have an immediate connection the moment you meet — a connection so strong that you can tell them to come on down and you’ve never felt before.”

But connection develops over time, experiences a love so deep and complex, that you begin to doubt that you have truly loved anyone before.

Your soul mate understands and connects with you in every way, personally and on every level, which brings a sense of peace, contentment and happiness that there are around them, the most significant and satisfying thing you will experience in your life.

Does that sound like your marriage or current relationship? If not, don’t despair. Here are some tips to finding your soul mate.

President Barack Obama speaks Thursday at the 62nd National Prayer Breakfast in Washington. The president told the world is important to nations that are strategically and economically important, such as China.

When meeting with Chi- nese leaders, he said, “I stress that realizing China’s internal and external rights, including for Christian and Tibetan Bud- dhists and Uighur Muslims.” In the peace talks failed between Pakistanis and Islamabad he noted, “We have made clear that lasting peace will require freedom of worship and ac- cess to help for all faiths.”

In one of the internet soul-mate quizzes suggested those who are searching should “frame the mirror” to see if they have hawks. However, I also know that some couples are, at least ap- parently be, the perfect comple- ments of each other, you and yo...

Clubs give $4,000 to families in need

Special to the Chronicle

For the 10th straight year, The Florida Sertoma Club gave $4,000 to families in need during the Christmas holidays.

The club has helped hundreds of families from eight different counties in the Citrus area. Also since being founded in 1982, the club has contributed over $100,000 to the Community Action Agency of Citrus, Inc. and Parent Mentor Program.

This is a $10 adoption fee until February 16th, 2014. The adoption fee includes spaying, neutering, or microchipping; vaccinations; electronic flea treatment; and first litter of food. After February 16th, the adoption fee will be $20, but the animal remains ready for new homes. There are many varieties to choose from and all are socialized. They play and love just as well as if they were kittens, but are loving.

Call the Citrus Humanitarians of Florida Hardin Haven at 352-613-1628.

Yesterday, we saw what would have been an of" pavement, and paintless pavement. But the answers if the opponents are going to produce wild leaps from the box, you have to defend yourself. Look at the North hand in the diagram. West led the TAME, and East inter-"es with three diamonds, a weak jump from North. Yes, West's bid would normally feature only a short" slant, but it was rejected by the unfa"urable vulnerability and also wondered if his opponent might make three spades. After a weak jump-overcall, responder agreed to partner's major, shifted to a level higher than originally intended. Here, a three-bid response would promise a normal single raise. With his actual game-in-"ational limit raise, North correctly jumped to four spades. And if his hand had been even stronger, he would have bid three diamonds, which would have said nothing about his attitude in diamonds.

Against four spades, West led the heart five. East doubled with his hand, and East didn't seem to be doing a story. West dropped a sneaky two. When East led another heart, South was not sure what to do. Should he exploit the trump? Then the spade ace would have been a very strong jump. Through South's spade king, and West smilingly asked when he showed out. However, when West took the next trick with his spade ace, he was and-"ed.

He tried the club eight, but dummy's Nine wasn't there. South won with his king, drove trumps, and claimed four spades, a heart dummy's Queen, one diamond, three clubs and a diamond ruff in the dummy.
