After six-foot rise in three days

Officials monitoring Steinhatchee River

Local emergency management officials are asking residents along the Steinhatchee River to closely monitor the river after its waters rose six feet over the weekend due to the continued heavy rains in the region.

According to Taylor County Emergency Management Coordinator Steve Spradley, the river was expected to crest at the Tennille gauge Tuesday after the area did not receive significant rainfall Monday or Tuesday morning.

"It's just about to go over the bank in some areas, and in some low-lying areas it is over the banks," he said. "It would need to rise another foot or two before people would need to start moving their vehicles in Steinhatchee."

"As long as it stays dry, it should crest and start dropping."

The river is not affecting any roadways and the Emergency Management Department and its partners are closely monitoring the situation to ensure a quick and appropriate response should action be required, he added.

"The Taylor County Emergency Response Team would like to encourage Steinhatchee residents to closely monitor the river, report issues to the Emergency Operations Center at 850-838-3575 and take appropriate precautions."

The Florida Forestry Service's rain gauge at its Perry office and the National Weather Service (NWS) station at Perry-Foley Airport both recorded about three and a half inches of rain during the weekend.

The heaviest rain was recorded around 6 p.m. Sunday, with nearly two inches falling in an hour, sparking the NWS to issue a flash flood warning for central Taylor County,

The top photo (above) shows Steinhatchee Falls on Sunday, July 13, while the bottom photo shows the same location one day later on Monday, after the river had risen another two-and-a-half feet. Local emergency management officials are asking residents along the river to monitor water levels, which they hope will begin to recede if the area doesn't receive additional rainfall. Rain gauges in Perry recorded around three-and-a-half inches of rain during the weekend.

Ethics complaint dismissed against former state attorney

The Florida Commission on Ethics has found no probable cause to believe former State Attorney Robert L. "Skip" Jarvis misused his position and resources to run records checks through restricted databases.

Elise Perkins of Jacksonville filed the ethics complaint in August against Jarvis over the record checks.

In a release following the commission's June 7 meeting, the agency stated, "No probable cause was found to believe that Robert J. 'Skip' Jarvis, Jr., state attorney - 3rd Circuit, misused his position and resources to run non-law enforcement records checks through restricted databases. The commission also found no probable cause to believe that Mr. Jarvis disclosed or used information not available

City's lone registered sexual predator moves

The registered sexual predator, whose residence was marked in May by a sign outside his Judson Drive address, no longer resides in Taylor County.

City Manager Bob Brown said he had been told by the Taylor County Sheriff's Office, which monitors those living in the county on the state sexual offender registry, that Charles Leon Tinsley, 59, had moved from the area.

The Perry City Council approved an ordinance in May to post signs in front of the homes of registered sexual predators and at the time, Tinsley was the only registered predator in the city limits.

Responding to the Taco Times following the placement of the sign, Tinsley said in early June he was "getting ready to move out-of-state."

With Tinsley's departure, there are currently no sexual predators living inside the city limits of Perry. There are eight predators registered at addresses in Taylor County out of a total of 60 offenders.

Unemployment rate breaks trend in May

Taylor County's February and then to 7.7 percent in March.

May's rate was still 1.5 percentage points below the May 2012 rate of 9.1 percent.

Taylor had the 18th highest unemployment rate among Florida's 67 counties in April, with 728 people unemployed and 8,806 employed, according to figures released by the Florida Department of

After staying mostly level around 9.2 percent in the last several months of 2012 and into January, the county's unemployment rate dropped almost a full percentage point to 8.3 percent in

Remembering Legislator Angel

Former 4-H Legislator Angel Ketring was recognized posthumously during a banquet held to celebrate the 2013 4-H Legislature Program. Ketring's father, Ward, spoke to those in attendance about his daughter's commitment and love for the program, attributing her knowledge of the event to he brother John, who served on the 4-H Legislature planning committee in 2010. He encouraged teens to be involved in their community and in the 4-H Legislature program. Shown above are (from l to r): Nancy Clark, Makayla Howell, Vicki Howell, Elizabeth Sharp, Ward Ketring, Naomi Sharp, Catherine Weed and Abbey Tharpe, 4-H agent. # Vietnam vets reunite after 44 years

(Special to the Taco Times)

Larry Hodges of Perry, and Wilbert Arrant Jr., of North Carolina, recently reunited for the first time in more than 44 years, along with their families, at Dekle Beach.

Hodges located his old buddy while researching Agent Orange on the Internet three years ago. This was the first time they had seen each other since 1969.

In January 1969, Sgt. Larry Hodges and Sgt. Wilbert (Junior) Arrant parted company at Tyndall AFB in Panama City, after spending three years together at seven different air bases. Heading off in different directions, Arrant returned to North Carolina and became a career highway patrolman. Hodges graduated from Florida State University and became a teacher, first in Jefferson County, then in Taylor for a total of 27 years.

During their recent reunion, they had the opportunity to rehash old times and their military service together.

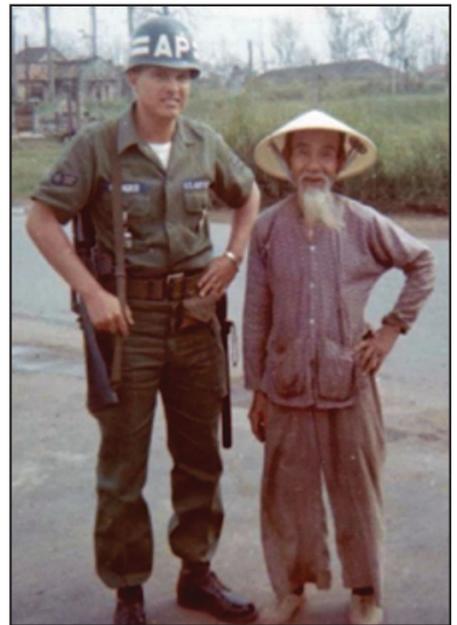

In the summer of 1965, they both volunteered for the U.S. Air Force. Arrant from North Carolina and Hodges from Alabama were shipped off to Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio, Texas, for basic training. Facing two options--security police or cooks--it was an easy decision. No way were they going to cook, so wearing white hats, Air Force Blues, combat boots, badges and a Smith and Wesson on their sides, their military careers began.

Their first duty assignment was near the beautiful town of Columbus, Miss., home to the Strategic Air Command at Columbus AFB and the Mississippi State College for Women.

With the B52s having been sent to Vietnam along with many of the airmen, the base was almost like a ghost town. You might say the duty was pretty good, patrolling base, working the main gate, riding on the Security Alert Team, wearing white hats and badges, and let's not forget the Mississippi State College for Women.

Then the word "volunteer" came up. Minot AFB in Minot, N.D., needed some volunteers.

No more business due to chains' treatment of Deen

Dear Editor:
Just look who is performing a public lynching--none other than the largest retail chain in the world: Walmart. Of course we have some brave tag-a-longs. Sears, CVS, Walgreens and God only knows who else will feel righteous indignation and pile on.
Who is the recipient of such disdain? Paula Deen. A little, old white lady. Southern to the bone with an up and coming business-- small, compared to the humongous and heavy handed bunch after her hide. What is her offense? Some years ago, in a moment of distress, she uttered the "N" word. God forbid! She shouldn't be allowed to breathe the same air all the politically correct people breathe.

Hey Mr. Big Business, do you think you might need to give all your employees a political correctness test to make sure they never said the "N" word? Think you might also want to give your customers a litmus test to determine if they are politically correct? I'm sure you wouldn't want to have their tainted money. Right?

I, my family and friends have shopped the above mentioned stores (including Sam's Club) for years. Can't speak for them, but I will no longer be giving those businesses my money. I'm tired of the political correctness and self righteousness!

Commuter questions gas prices in Taylor County, surrounding locales

Dear Editor:
I have lived in Perry all of my life and have worked in Tallahassee for the last 11 years. I am tired of the citizens of Perry getting robbed. Gas has always been 10 to 15 cents higher in Perry than in Tallahassee, but now it is 30 cents higher.
I have called the attorney general's office and the county commissioners' office to make sure that Taylor County has not increased any taxes; everyone's answer was the same, it is our local gas suppliers.
Well times are hard enough for families to make ends meet and for people that are supposed to be so involved in our town taking advantage of all of us is nothing but pure greed. Just think about an average tank of gas is 16 gallons and at 30 cents higher they are taking an extra $ 4.80 out of everyone's pocket for every tank of gas you buy. If you add that up to all the school buses, law enforcement cars and businesses that have to purchase fuel, like labor trucks, they are making a killing and taking extra money that could be used for something else like giving their employees raises, more money to go to the education of our children, or food on everyone's table instead of gas.

I try not to purchase any fuel in Perry if possible. I hate it when companies act like they help our community all the time and the truth be known is they are taking advantage of the citizens and everyone else that comes to Taylor County fishing, scalloping, hunting or just passing through. There has to be something all of us can do to stop this greed that is taking place in our town.

If this is not true, will someone please explain why we have to pay so much more for our fuel than other places? The store in Lamont has always been higher than anyone and I even could understand that, because it is way out of the way. But it is sometimes 10 cents per gallon cheaper than us.

Red Hat Relay team thanks volunteers, donors for help

Dear Editor:
I would like to take this opportunity to once again thank the wonderful people who helped and supported the Red Hat Ladies Relay Team for the American Cancer Society's Relay For Life Event held on May 17 of this year.
Without the support of these local businesses and individuals, we would not have been able to raise $3,269.81 toward the fight to find a cure.
I would like to name them for their part in the fight against this terrible disease against mankind.
In no particular order, they are: Brenda Wilson of O'Quinn's Pharmacy, Jeff Myers of Winn-Dixie Stores, Tony Schwab of Pepsi Beverages Company, Clinton Wood of Bird Island Fisheries, Sandy Gail of Goodman's Barbeque of Perry, Donna Sprigle of Stampin' Up, Suzette Stephens of Creative Memories, and J & M Feed Store.

Individuals who supported our team by their selfless donations of time and money were Jack Pihl, Vannie Wetherington, Jean Farrill, Iona Walker, Marie Hill, Rita Thomas, John Gmitter, Lynn Williams, and Shasta Williams.
I would also like to thank my team who without their unwavering assistance none of this would have been possible: Co-Captain Cindy Bishop, Alice Brady, Debbie Beach, June Lytle, Cookie Wookman, Norma Collins, Velma Towles, Wendy Johnson, Barbara Patrick, Peggy Williams.

Most importantly, I thank all of you that participated by making and buying baked goods from us, walking in the cake walk and just giving donations because you didn't want to gain weight from our delicious goodies.
We all need to reach around, put one hand on your shoulder, and give it a few good pats. We can be proud of ourselves; everyone says this disease needs to be cured.
Well people, we, all of us are doing something about it. Thank you for your continued support in the past, the present and hopefully the future. We will find a cure.
Sincerely,
Patricia Lindsey, Captain
Red Hat Ladies Relay Team

Sixties on 6

By SUSAN H. LINCOLN

When we traveled to Alabama for a Fourth of July celebration with family, we saw nothing but rain. It rained for six hours and 300 miles on the way there; it rained for two days while we were there; and it continued to rain for six hours and 300 miles as we returned home.
It was while we were traveling home, in the rain, that a question from 40 years ago emerged again, just as compelling as it was in 1967.
Why did Billie Joe McAllister jump off the Tallahatchie Bridge?
Do you know?
I asked the husband that question, confident that he would know the answer.
Instead, he found the inquiry tedious. "You've asked me that before," he said.
"What did you tell me?" I wanted to know.
"I don't know," he said, and that confused me a bit. "I told you I don't know why Billy Joe McAllister jumped off the Tallahatchie Bridge," he re-stated as a full sentence. That seemed to satisfy his curiosity about the matter, but not mine.
The song, "Ode to Billy Joe," had a particularly mournful sound on this rainy Sunday afternoon. I will surely find the strength necessary to move on, but I've also found that there are some questions to which I need answers before I die.
This is one of them.
Written by singer-songwriter, Bobbie Gentry, the ode is rendered in Southern-fried tones by a narrator who laments the demise of Billy Joe in a supper-table surrounding. Daddy's not too concerned about the young man's death--said Billy Joe never had a "lick of sense" anyway, "Pass the biscuits, please." That dismissive comment probably seems unkind by today's politically correct standards, but when I was growing up, you called a spade, a spade. It might seem hurtful or without compassion, but it was usually just unapologetic honesty.
Having said his peace and enjoyed a biscuit, the father mentions that there are five more acres in the lower 40 that he needs to plow, and takes his leave.
Life goes on.
That was another supper table lesson I recall.
But Billy Joe is dead, and the prevailing theory is that he committed suicide. That troubles me much, but I admit that the verse which troubles me more, however, quotes the preacher, Brother Taylor, mentioning that earlier in the morning he had seen Billy Joe with a girl who looked like the narrator of this song, "throwing somethin' off the Tallahatchie Bridge."

I want to know what it was.
"Don't you?" I asked the husband.
"It was 1967," he said, as if that should settle me down. "Let it go."
In an interview as old as Billy Joe's death, Gentry is quoted as saying this was the most-asked question of her life. Speculation, she added, had the two throwing a ring off the bridge, or flowers, or Billie Joe's draft card, maybe a bottle of LSD pills or even even an aborted baby. However, she admitted that while she definitely knew what the item was, she would not reveal it, saying only, "Suppose it was a wedding ring."
After all these years, I'm wondering if she would reconsider...as her swan song gift to the rest of us.
Why? Because she wrote music when you could understand the lyrics, so the story stays with you for 40 years (maybe more). None of this a-word, b-word, c-word trash, with jack hammers and construction noise in the background.
Of course, a few English majors have taken "Ode to Billy Joe" to levels from which neither Billy Joe nor Bobbie Gentry would have ever been comfortable jumping.
"The real theme," some say is "callous cruelty" or "complete indifference"--pointing to the father's casual acceptance of the young man's death;
"It is a study in people's reactions to life and death," other psychologists note, adding that those reactions have changed dramatically since 1967.
Or there's my personal favorite which puts a homosexual slant on the song because the oh-so-original people in Hollywood believe everything must now have a homosexual sub-plot.
Given this tripe, I think Bobbie Gentry needs to say, "People, it was none of that: it was a silly little ole ring.... or a bottle of Lydia Pinkham's vegetable compound for female misery."
Just a good relationship gone bad.
Which surely might parallel with good music gone bad.
Poor Billy Joe, and those of us left to mourn.

Seven local youth take part in 4-H Legislature

By ABBEY L. THARPE
4-H Extension Agent I

When the 2013 Florida 4-H Legislature convened in Tallahassee, more than 200 teen members in the 4-H House and Senate were sworn in. Youth attendees representing Taylor County were: representatives Rohan Patel, Catherine Weed and Jessica Welch, and lobbyists Haley Osteen, Douglas Bethea and William Blue.

With both a House and Senate in session, teen legislators' lobbyists and reporters debated a variety of issues and learned how the government works.

Florida 4-H Legislature conducts business with an acting governor, lieutenant governor and cabinet. Following Tuesday's opening session, 4-H legislators broke into committee meetings before debating the bills which made it past committees on Wednesday and Thursday. Bills successful in both chambers were to be signed or vetoed by the elected "4-H Governor."

The co-ed, hands-on experience in how government works was organized by University of Florida, IFAS 4-H. A youth organizing committee has worked steadily on bills and logistics with UF advisors since last September.

Youth played key roles throughout the event, helping with registration, running meetings, leading charges to kill or support bills and setting up an experimental party system. Partnering with young people to plan programs was very important to 4-H. Throughout the planning, bill writing and debates, teens were learning to be engaged citizens.

Many "4-H legislators take their responsibilities seriously and some go on to careers in government. Adam Putnam, who participated in the 4-H Legislature program in his teens, now serves as the Commissioner of Agriculture for the State of Florida.

Angel Ketring, a former 4-H Legislature participant, was recognized for her passion and commitment to the 4-H Legislature program at Thursday night's banquet held at Leon County Civic Center. Members of the Ketring family were recognized on her behalf.

Angel's father (Ward Ketring) spoke to the teens about Angel's commitment

Duo: 'Would we do it all again? Raise that hand!'

VIETNAM

The two airmen's hands shot skyward. World travel... here they come. They didn't see that the senior airmen were rolling their eyes.

Leaving Mississippi on a typical January day of 60 degrees, they headed north on their new adventure. The Minot temperature was hovering around zero, and when they stepped out of the C-47 onto the tarmac, those southern boys realized something was amiss. Their reward for volunteering was guarding armed B52 bombers in the dead of winter.

Ninety days later, they returned to Columbus to the smell and sight of dogwood and azalea blossoms, crimson clover in the highway median, and the Mississippi State College for Women...paradise!

The summer of 1966 is memorable because of Officers Lake (outside of Columbus) with a white sandy beach, Coppertone, a 1957 two-tone red and white Ford with a Thunderbird engine, "When A Man Loves A Woman" playing on the radio and no worries in the world.

Then, they hear, "We need volunteers. Who wants to go to Vietnam?" Hands shot skyward again. Eyes rolled again. These two young airmen mused, "What is wrong with these older airmen; don't they like to travel?"

Their fourth and fifth bases were Camp Bullis and Lackland (again) for some combat training. Hodges remembers a former Special security for Tan Son Nhut.

Hodges recounts that particular attack of the base: "I'll never forget that eerie feeling, the sounds, the explosions, the flares, the darkness, whistles blowing, sirens, grabbing M-16s, mortars and more mortars, loading up on trucks and jeeps heading to who knew where.

"During the attack, I ended up somewhere in a

I'll never forget that eerie feeling, the sounds, the explosions, the flares, the darkness, whistles...

Forces instructor telling them they would learn just enough hand-to-hand combat to get their asses kicked. Camp Bullis (Army base) for weapons training was fun and was the first time they had ever seen an armadillo.

Their sixth base together was at Tan Son Nhut Air Base outside Saigon in South Vietnam. Less than a month after arrival, the base was attacked. The explosion of mortars and automatic weapons fire broke the silence of the night on Dec. 4, 1966. The 377th Security Police Squadron provided dark building with another Security Police guarding Air Force pilots. Junior, on the other hand, ended up on the perimeter of the flight line in a vicious firefight. The Viet Cong had penetrated the base perimeter. Three Security Police lost their lives and 15 were wounded in the attack that night, and 28 Viet Cong were killed.

"Junior was wounded by a V.C. grenade. He received the Purple Heart and the Vietnam Gallantry Cross with a Bronze Star for valor. He was my hero, but I never told him. To this day I can't enjoy a fireworks show, hearing the thud and waiting for that explosion."

The 377th was awarded the Air Force Outstanding Unit Award. Tan Son Nhut was attacked again during the 1968 TET Offensive, two months after the pair had departed.

After Vietnam, they both volunteered for duty at Tyndall AFB in Panama City. This was not a hard decision for them to make. They needed some time at the beach. This was a pretty good place to be stationed, though for some reason they never got along with the Panama City boys.

A short while after arriving at Tyndall, their squadron commander called them to his office. He was bound for Vietnam, and they thought he wanted some advice from some seasoned "troops."

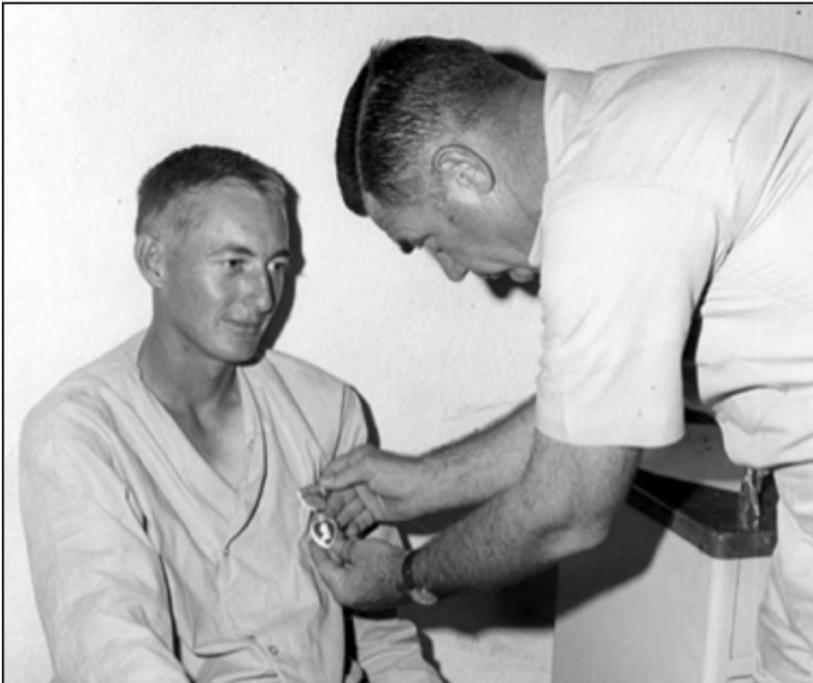

"Want to go back to Nam with me?" he asked. "What?" Larry said he thought he was through with the dumb and dumber team. Arrant had his hand up. This time, Hodges rolled his eyes.

"Junior and the colonel first headed to Hawaii for some combat training and Ranger stuff before their Nam trip. Junior drove a Jeep for an officer for six months in Saigon and got to live in a downtown hotel, then returned to P.C. I wished I'd volunteered. I also turned down a TDY in Key West while Junior was gone. Dumb decision."

Revisiting their decisions to join the Air Force and their various volunteer assignments, they both proclaim, "Would we do it all again? Damn right, raise that hand!"

Two months after leaving the Panama City base, Hodges, then a Troy State student, returned for Spring Break 1969 and met his future bride at the Old Dutch Tavern, 44 years ago. Would he do it again? "Raise that hand!"

Hodges said he and Arrant plan on meeting at Dekle Beach this fall for "some fishing and maybe watching FSU beat up on one of those Carolina teams."

Wilbert Arrant Jr., of North Carolina, received the Purple Heart (shown above) and the Vietnam Gallantry Cross with a Bronze Star for valor for heroic actions in Vietnam.

Molly Wilson

After graduation Taylor's 'Distinguished Young Woman' eyes Flagler College next

Barry and Carla Wilson announce the graduation of their daughter, Molly Elisabeth, who has been homeschooled since first grade.

In addition to her academic studies, Molly has "a true passion for acting" and appeared as Juliet in "Romeo and Juliet" with the Capital City Shakespeare Company and as Elizabeth in "Pride and Prejudice." This September she will be appearing as Ophelia in "Hamlet," also presented by the Capital City Shakespeare Company.

Beyond acting, Molly has also competed for three years with the National Christian Forensics and Communications Association speech and debate league, where she is a regionally recognized debater and a nationally recognized speaker.

She is also a member of the Junior Classical League Latin Honor Society and the Eta Sigma Alpha National Homeschool Honor Society.

Last October Molly was chosen the 2012/2013 Distinguished Young Woman of Taylor County.

She plans to attend Flagler College, majoring in English and philosophy.

49 years of marriage

Les and Donna Ansell will be honored on the occasion of their 49th wedding anniversary with a reception at the First United Methodist Church in Perry. Friends and family members are encouraged to gather at 1 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 3 to celebrate with the couple.

Blimey! Pirates needed

Children are urged to come dressed as pirates for Thursday's summer reading program at the Taylor County Public Library.

The "Dig Into Reading" program will begin at 10 a.m. with Pirate Mark Petty as the guest performer.

Petty has toured the USA, Canada and the Caribbean for close to 40 years performing a unique blend of magic and puppets to delight young and old alike. His pirate character is based on the actual family history of his great, great, great uncle William Marsh--the English pirate--once a privateer, eventually a scallywag.

Parents or caregivers are required to stay with the children. For more information, call the library at 838-3512.

Caregivers: no July meeting, come Aug. 22

The Alzheimer's Project, Inc., reminds friends in the Perry community about the support group offered the caregivers who have loved ones with life-limiting illnesses.

No July meeting is planned, but in August and the months to follow, this group will meet on the fourth Thursday of each month from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. in the First Presbyterian Church, located at 310 Plantation Road.

"Our next meeting for caregivers will be on Aug. 22," said Angel Mendoza who serves as rural outreach coordinator. "This support group provides information and education to caregivers. Please reserve in advance for respite care," she urges. If you have questions or comments, feel free to contact Mendoza at 850-386-2778.

Fiddler on the roof?

Doyle Lundy's top-to-bottom transformation of the old Bloodworth building is beginning with the top. Roofers (not fiddlers) have been silhouetted against the sun and clouds, as they work above the downtown street lamps and banners which declare, "Welcome to Our Town." Lundy, who owns Johnson's Bakery, said his goal is to restore the building to its original condition, with retail space available on the bottom floor.

Extension Workshops Learning to can

Canning classes were recently taught at the Taylor County Extension Service by Extension Agent Lori Wiggins who instructed participants on canning jams, pickles and tomatoes. Participants learned up-to-date methods on how to preserve the foods using the waterbath method as well as food safety issues related to canning. For more information on canning or future canning classes, contact the extension office at 838-3508 or visit taylor.ifas.ufl.edu.

Hall talks to Kiwanians about community's history

Foley lives on in residents' memories

By SUSAN H. LINCOLN
Managing Editor

"Sixty-three years ago, Charlie Willis cut the last log, and they let the whistle blow until the steam ran out."

That, as Harry Hall recalls it, was a sad and mournful sound which signaled the beginning of the end for the thriving community of Foley which had surrounded the mill.

But in his memories—and in those of other neighbors, the community of Foley lives on. On Wednesday of last week, Hall walked members of the Perry Kiwanis Club through the town that J.S. Foley built.

"We had a drycleaners we called 'The Pressing Club,'" Hall said, beginning his list. "A movie theatre, a barber shop, a ladies beauty salon, a library, a commissary and a large grocery store." At the grocery store, everybody had an open charge account. "And free delivery," he added.

Founded in the early 1920s, the mill paid day laborers about 22.5 cents per hour and managers earned about 45-50 cents an hour. Pay came in the form of "Babbit" which could be spent at the company store. Hall's father was paymaster for the company.

"We had 24-hour medical service," Hall continued, remembering that Dr. Walter Baker made house calls day and night. "He might be 10 o'clock at night getting there, but he'd just walk in the front door—because nobody locked their doors—and ask, 'Where's the patient?'"

Hall remembered that Dr. Baker loved to fish and hunt, so he traveled with his fishing rod and gun. "If he saw a ditch full of water, he might just pull over and fish a bit. If you needed transportation to a hospital, then Dr. Baker hauled you to Archbold Hospital in Thomasville, Ga. It was said that if you survived the car ride with Dr. Baker, you'd have no problems with the hospital stay.

"I don't believe the doctor slept all night in his 92 years of life," Hall stated.

"At Christmas," he said,

"a big, decorated tree was put in the center of town and each child had a wrapped gift from the company.

"There was only one church, and although nearly everybody was Baptist, you went to that church, no matter your denomination."

He did note that the managers for Foley were predominantly Catholic from Minnesota. "They were very family-oriented and made sure the community was too. No business was transacted on Sundays. No liquor was sold within the community. And another rule was, 'No rowdy behavior.' If you assaulted your wife, you'd be visited by a manager warning you that another offense could lead to your dismissal."

If you didn't heed that warning, Hall said the managers were true to their word. "You lost your job, they packed up your belongings and moved you out."

And he emphasized, "And nobody wanted to lose their job because this was during the Great Depression and the jobs at Foley were good jobs."

The mill ran three, eight-hour shifts, despite the financial worries of the time, but Hall said very often the workers were only allowed to work five or six hours of the eight-hour shift, to save money without letting workers go.

After Foley survived the Depression, World War II became the dominant worry...and the dominant customer. "Every board foot of lumber was obligated to the federal government. People in Foley said you could hear the rejoicing all the way from Minnesota. The company made a lot of money during the war."

The town continued to manufacture lumber until the 1950s when Procter and Gamble arrived. "That's when Lester Foley leased and moved the old mill

J.S. Foley: 'He decided to take the mill to the forest'

"J.S. Foley was an exceptional entrepreneur," Harry Hall told Kiwanians last week. When the mill Foley founded at Eastport was "hijacked" by extraordinary freight charges, he found a way around it.

"He decided to take the mill to the forest."

That's how Foley became a mill community. "It took almost two years to build the town, but the housing units—which neared 200—were constructed of first run yellow pine from the mill. Arndt Larson, a Swede, designed all the buildings in Foley and J.P. Garver was in charge of construction. He once admitted that he laid every brick pier for all the houses in the community. Foley was his favorite place," Hall said.

"All houses were connected to a central water system, and to a central treated sewer system. It was modern for those times," he said.

Monthly rent ranged from $2.50 to $6 depending on the size of the house and the number of bedrooms. There was also a "boarding house" and a hotel.

"When I think of J.S. Foley, I think of the graduation speech I heard at Florida State. I don't remember the name of the speaker but he emphasized the importance of a lamp-lighter. That stayed with me. And that's what J.S. Foley was. His influence inspired so many other people."

Faye Medlin Peltier of Perry died on July 12, 2013. Born on Feb. 1, 1922, Mrs. Peltier was 91 years old. Her parents were Buren Medlin and Lemmer Bennett Medlin in Fairmount, Ga. She was a faithful and devoted member of Southside Baptist Church.

Mrs. Peltier was preceded in death by her husband, Gene Peltier; two brothers, Doyle Medlin and Loye Hayes Medlin; and two sisters, Lona Mae Thomas and Marie Underwood. She was the last surviving member of her immediate family.

Memorial services will be held next Saturday, July 27, at 11 a.m. at Southside Baptist Church with Pastor Gary French officiating.

Joe P. Burns Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Milton A. Waddell

Milton A. Waddell, 87, of Salem, died Saturday, July 13, 2013, at Doctors' Memorial Hospital in Perry. Mr. Waddell was born Sept. 22, 1925, in Miami, to Paul and Lois Waddell.

Mr. Waddell was of the Church of God faith. He was a veteran of the United States Army and served in World War II.

Mr. Waddell was preceded in death by his parents; his wife of 51 years, Mary Imogene Waddell; and a son Steve Waddell.

Survivors include: his wife, Renee Waddell of Salem; one son, Dewey Waddell of Leesburg; two brothers, Jimmy Waddell and Verle Waddell; a sister, Nelene; five grandchildren; a host of great grandchildren; many nieces and nephews.

Memorial services will be held at 2 p.m. on Saturday, July 27, at Joe P. Burns Funeral Home with the Rev. James Taylor officiating. Interment will follow in Florida National Cemetery in Bushnell at a later date. The family will receive friends from 1 p.m. until time of service on July 27, at Joe P. Burns Funeral Home which is in charge of arrangements.

Paul Allen Klopfer

Paul Allen Klopfer, 78, of Perry, died Monday, July

15, 2013, at his residence. Mr. Klopfer was born Aug. 11, 1934, in Piqua, Ohio, to Paul and Mary (Windland) Klopfer. He was preceded in death by a brother. Mr. Klopfer was a member of First Church of God in Perry.

Survivors include: his wife of 20-plus years, Cennie Mae (Thomas) Klopfer of Perry; five sons; three daughters; several grandchildren; one sister; and a host of nieces and nephews.

Memorial services will be held at 11 a.m. on Thursday, July 18, at Burns Funeral Home which is in charge of arrangements. Justin Webb will officiate.

The family will receive friends from 5-7 p.m. today, July 17, at their residence.

Down on the farm...

First Presbyterian Church and First United Methodist Church combined forces for a 2013 Vacation Bible School with the theme, "HayDay—Growing in Friendship with Jesus." Many friends from the community participated and enjoyed the petting zoo which added fun and to the week. Presbyterian Pastor Larry Neal and Methodist Pastor J.T. Taylor were "down on the farm," too, and report a great week for the combined congregations.

including Perry. City Manager Bob Brown said they had some mild washouts on Page Street and several low lying areas experienced some flooding, but there was no significant damage to roadways.

A flood warning remains in effect for the Aucilla River at Lamont, where the river was above its floodstage (9.0 feet) and was forecast to remain so through at least Saturday.

According to the NWS, minor flooding is occurring in the area and is forecast to continue for the time being.

The river level was 9.4 feet Tuesday and was expected to rise to 9.8 feet by this afternoon (Wednesday).

The weather forecast for the rest of the week is calling for slight to moderate chances for thunderstorms, with a 20 percent chance today, rising to 50 percent by Friday.

Jarvis withdrew his bid for re-election in August to the general public for the benefit of himself or another person."

Last August, Jarvis withdrew his bid for re-election as state attorney for the Third Judicial Circuit.

At the time, he was the target of a Florida Department of Law Enforcement (FDLE) investigation spurred by allegations from a former state attorney's office employee stating that Jarvis had improperly accessed confidential records regarding the employee's wife.

Days before a grand jury was to hear the matter, however, an agreement reached with State Attorney Brad King of the Fifth Judicial Circuit overseeing the case rendered the need for a grand jury hearing moot. In a letter to Gov. Rick Scott, King related that Jarvis agreed to withdraw his bid for re-election as state attorney, leave office at the end of his current term and have his certifications for searching secure databases revoked by the FDLE.

In return, King said he agreed not to present the matter to the grand jury or take any other action. He also agreed to recommend that no other action be taken against Jarvis.

King—who was appointed by Scott to present the matter to a grand jury—issued a report detailing the investigation and the following conclusion: "We have found no evidence that Mr. Jarvis used the information he obtained in any search in a way that harmed the person searched, or that benefited himself. However, it is clear that Mr. Jarvis made repeated searches of various persons in clear violation of the user agreements he signed."

Economic Opportunity (DEO).

Among Taylor's neighbors, Dixie County had the highest unemployment rate at 8.7 percent, followed by Madison County at 8.5 percent. Below Taylor were Lafayette at 6.0 percent and Jefferson County at 5.4 percent. Like Taylor, all four counties saw slight increases in their rates in May.

For the month, Hendry County had the highest rate in the state with 11.1 percent while Monroe County once again boasted the lowest with 4.0 percent.

equipment to Shamrock (near Cross City), and many of the mill people went too,"

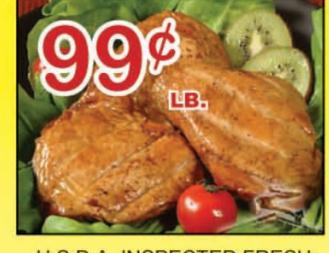

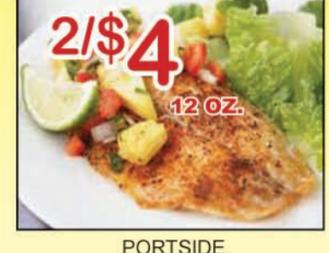

Hall said, adding that his father went as part of the accounting department.

If you look at the grounds of Buckeye Cellulose now, little remains of the community of Foley. "But the camphor trees and the old oaks," he said. "However, the spirit of Foley lives on in those who called this community home."
