Man claims excessive force used in arrest, plans to sue

A Perry man has filed notice he intends to sue the City of Perry in connection to a July 2013 DUI (driving under the influence) arrest he claims involved excessive use of force by responding officers.

City officials received notice of the impending lawsuit less than two weeks after 31-year-old Michael Shelton's jury trial in the case ended in a mistrial; he entered a guilty plea to related felony and misdemeanor charges just a month later.

Tallahassee attorney Marie A. Mattox is representing Shelton in the matter.

Late last week, alleged video footage of Shelton's arrest, captured by a police patrol vehicle dash camera, was posted to YouTube and quickly circulated throughout the community.

In it, two Taylor County Sheriff's deputies and three Perry Police Department officers are seen making the arrest.

Through his attorney, Shelton said he plans to initiate litigation against the city for false arrest, negligence, negligent training, malicious supervision, prosecution, abuse of power and excessive use of force.

The letter further states Shelton claims he was arrested without probable cause and that during the arrest he was Tased numerous times by officers and, as a result of the arrest and actions by the officers, he "suffered medical and other expenses, lost wages, loss of enjoyment of life, pain and suffering, mental anguish and related noneconomic damages, for which he intends to file suit against the City of Perry."

The letter was dated April 15, 2014; just a few weeks earlier, on March 27 and 28, Shelton faced a jury of his peers to answer the charges during a two-day trial.

Those proceedings ended in a mistrial; one month later, May 19, 2014, Shelton and the state attorney's office reached a plea agreement on four felony charges and two misdemeanor charges, including: resisting officer with violence, battery on law enforcement officer,

Commission rejects residents' appeal, moves forward with land use change

After rejecting an appeal made by nearby residents Monday evening, the Taylor County Commission unanimously agreed to transmit a proposed Future Land Use Map amendment to the state for review.

Commissioners held two public hearings during their meeting Monday on the amendment application for a 55-acre parcel located on Foley Road across from the Buckeye mill which landowner Foley Timber & Land Co. hopes could be the future site of a new business here. The proposed amendment is intended to change the property from the Mixed Use Rural Residential land use category to an Industrial land use.

The first hearing Monday was for the appeals and the second was for the transmittal hearing on the amendment. Many of the same people spoke during both hearings, repeating similar objections. The comprehensive plan amendment process, which is established in Florida statutes, calls for the local planning agency to consider proposed amendments and then make a recommendation to the county commission to either approve or deny the application. Regardless of which way the planning agency recommends, the commission then holds a public hearing of its own on the amendment to decide whether or not to forward it on to the Florida Department of Economic Opportunity (DEO) for state review.

The planning board considered Foley's application during its May 1 meeting and voted unanimously to recommend the commission approve the amendment.

The commission was originally set to hold its transmittal hearing on May 20, but prior to the hearing, local resident Brent Burford told the board he had filed an appeal objecting to the planning board decision to make its recommendation for approval. The commission, which serves as the appellate board for appeals made against the planning board, agreed to hear the issue Monday, and continued its transmittal hearing to follow at the same meeting.

During the appeal hearing, Burford called the decision to site a new industry on the parcel in question "ad hoc planning," and

Taylor projects survive the cut

Gov. Rick Scott signed a $77 billion Florida budget Monday, and while he used his line-item veto power to slash $68 million in projects, Taylor County allocations were not among those left on the cutting room floor.

Among the local projects set for funding this coming year are a $215,000 Florida Department of Cultural Facilities grant for renovations to Florida Capital Hall, a $50,000 Florida Recreation

Development Assistance Program grant for improvements at Hodges Park at Keaton Beach, $400,000 for a Steinhatchee septic tank elimination project and $312,000 for the design and construction of box hangars at Perry-Foley Airport.

In total, Taylor County is set to receive some $9.3 million in state projects, the vast majority of which consists of road projects funded through the Florida Department of Transportation.

Several neighboring counties were not as fortunate as Taylor, with two Wakulla County projects

County re-appoints three to hospital board

The Taylor County Commission re-appointed three members of the Doctors' Memorial Hospital (DMH) Board of Directors during its meeting Monday.

The terms for DMH board members John Hornbuckle, Ken Arnold and Gary Brett expired May 31, and each expressed an interest to stay on the board.

According to a memorandum from DMH to the commission, the positions were advertised by hospital staff.

During their meeting Monday, commissioners voted unanimously to re-appoint all three board members.

Hornbuckle is set to serve as board chairman for the next year while Arnold will driving with a revoked drivers license, giving a false identification to law enforcement, second DUI within five years and depriving a law enforcement officer of means of protection.

Shelton pled guilty to all charges and was sentenced to six months in the county jail and five years of probation.

A review of court records related to the case shows that the entire incident began when 911 dispatch received a call from a woman who said a blue Chevy car had "run her off the road" on Highway 19.

The caller remained on the line with the 911 operator and said the vehicle turned onto Puckett Road.

A police officer responding to the call spied the vehicle ahead of him and witnessed the driver turn onto Potts Still Road "at a high rate of speed."

The officer engaged his blue lights and sirens; the car (driven by Shelton) continued south on Potts

Still, running off the road several times and also crossing the center line.

Additional reports indicate a number of children were in playing in a ditch along the stretch of Potts Still Road where the chase occurred.

Once Shelton pulled over, he initially ignored officers' commands to exit his vehicle, reports stated.

When he did get out of the car, he continued to ignore commands to get on the ground and "began to get belligerent" and when an officer approached him, "it appeared he was going to resist."

At that point, Shelton was approached by an officer who "grabbed him under both arms and placed him on the ground for the safety of myself and the other officer."

Police reports state Shelton continued to resist and at one point "began grabbing" one of the officer's groin area.

Once cuffed and restrained, Shelton gave officers a false name. It was later found his driver's license was revoked for DUI and controlled substance.

At his sentencing, Shelton reportedly apologized "for taking up the court's time" and "thanked everybody there" for "trying to put me on the right road."

Taylor County Sheriff L.E. "Bummy" Williams said Tuesday he was not personally aware of any pending lawsuit (related to this case) against his office.

"This was a city case and our guys were assisting," he said.

Capt. Ron Rice said that neither he nor the sheriff were aware of the use of force incident prior to last Friday.

"Anytime there is a use of force, a 'use of force' report is written and reviewed. If there is a problem, then the issue continues up the chain of command. A 'use of force' report was written in this case and reviewed; there were no violations found.

"When this video came out, we re-looked it and we still see no violations," Rice said. "They followed policy and procedure."

Unemployment rate tumbles to 6-year low

Taylor County's unemployment rate fell to 6.5 percent in April, the lowest rate in nearly six years.

The county's rate was 7.3 in March after spending two straight months at 7.6 percent in January and February. April's rate of 6.5 percent was the lowest rate since June 2008 when it was 6.1 percent.

For April, Taylor had the 15th highest unemployment rate among Florida's 67 counties, with 602 people unemployed and 8,598 employed, according to figures recently released by the Florida Department of Economic Opportunity (DEO).

Among Taylor's neighbors, Madison County had the highest unemployment rate in March with 7.7 percent, followed by Dixie County at 7.1 percent.

Below Taylor were Lafayette at 5.7 percent and Jefferson County at 4.7 percent.

For the month, all of the counties saw significant drops in their unemployment rates.

Meanwhile, Hendry County once again had the highest rate in the state with 8.4 percent, while Walton County boasted the lowest with 3.2 percent.

Florida's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate was 6.2 percent in April, down 0.1 percentage point from the March rate, while down 1.4 percentage points from 7.6 percent a year ago. There were 599,000 jobless Floridians out of a labor force of 9,608,000.

The U.S. unemployment rate was 6.3 percent in April. Florida's unemployment rate was 0.1 percentage point lower than the U.S. rate and was below the national rate for the ninth consecutive month.

Florida's seasonally adjusted total nonagricultural employment was 7,778,500 in April, an increase of 34,000 jobs (+0.4 percent) over the month.

Compared to April a year ago, the number of jobs in the state was up by 246,800, an increase of 3.3 percent.

Nationally, the number of jobs was up 1.7 percent over the year. Florida's annual job growth rate has exceeded the nation's rate since April 2012.

'Nobody wants it in their backyard'

COMMISSIONERS

argued that nearby regional employment centers, which already have the industry land use designation, were more appropriate.

"There is not anyone up here who would want high intensive industry in their backyard," Burford said to the commission. "There has been more time spent discussing siting RVs than siting a high intensive industry in my mother's backyard."

He also questioned whether the amendment followed the county's own comprehensive plan.

Four other nearby residents also voiced their objections during the hearing, many making similar arguments that they were not against new industry in Taylor County, but they did not want it in their backyard.

"I don't feel anyone is truly considering our families," Chastity Gunter said. "Would you want your grandchildren growing up across the street from an intensive industry?"

"I'm not against this plant," another resident said. "I'm against it being in my backyard."

Speaking on behalf of Foley was attorney Gary Hunter, who said he has more than 20 years of experience in comprehensive plan law.

He noted that he had worked on around 200 comprehensive plan amendments and has never been through an appeal process such as this.

"The burden that an error has been made (by the planning board) has not been met," he said, recommending the commission reject the appeal and move forward with the transmittal hearing.

Travis McCoy, also speaking for Foley, said the site in question holds a "convergence" of infrastructure, making it one of their most marketable properties in the county.

He also noted that the site has been used for industrial purposes by his company and is located adjacent to Buckeye, the county's largest industry.

After the public comment portion of the hearing, Commission Chairman Malcolm Page opened the floor for board discussion.

When asked, County Attorney Conrad Bishop said to approve the appeal the commission would need to determine there was "substantial evidence" the planning board made an error in making their recommendation.

"I fail to see where the planning board made an error," Page said.

"I don't see anything the planning board did wrong," Commission Pat Patterson said.

"Every time there's an industry trying to come in, nobody wants it in their backyard," she said.

Following the board's discussion, Commissioner Jim Moody made a motion to reject the appeal, with Commissioner Jody DeVane seconded. The measure passed unanimously.

The board then opened the transmittal hearing, with the same speakers on both sides making public comments.

McCoy again spoke of the site's attributes, adding that if a company purchased the property to site a future plant there, additional hearings would be held on its site plans.

Hunter said many of the concerns raised by the nearby residents would be considered during the site development hearing. He also noted that when the state reviews Foley's amendment application, it will determine if it is consistent with both state law and the local comprehensive plan.

On the other side of the argument, Gunter said, "This isn't about fattening wallets. This is about people."

Following the public comment portion, Page said, "This is a difficult decision. Foley has the right to do what it wants with its property, including paying $5,000 to apply for a land use change."

He then asked for a motion on the amendment.

DeVane made a motion to transmit the application, with Moody seconding. The measure again passed unanimously.

Once DEO completes its review, it will return the application to the county with any recommendations or objections it finds.

The commission will then hold a second public hearing to consider approving the amendment.

Letter about Donaldson Bridge sparks response

Dear Editor:
I contacted the writer of the May 28 Letter to the Editor regarding the Donaldson Bridge and County Commissioner Pam Feagle's vote against its replacement with a two-lane new bridge, and I shared with him the following. I believe that his remarks against Commissioner Pam Feagle were unfounded and incorrect.

There was a petition signed by over 100 people in the Shady Grove area that did not want the Donaldson Bridge to be widened and replaced. There were many people in attendance at the special meeting held at the Community Center in Shady Grove prior to any decisions that were made. This meeting was arranged by Commissioner Pam Feagle to get public input and provide information from her, former County Administrator Jack Brown and two officials from FDOT.

In addition, there were several advertised Board of County Commission meetings where this issue was on the agenda so the public would have an opportunity to be involved regarding this subject. There was only one person who at any time during any of the meetings expressed a desire to see the bridge replaced. One person! And that person was not the writer of the letter.

Commissioner Feagle's responsibility to her constituents was uppermost in her mind. And if you question her concern for the safety of the bridge, you should know that she met and discussed the safety issue with FDOT and was assured that the bridge as it now stands is safe at the posted weight limit and that it would be regularly inspected and at any time it was deemed unsafe, it would be closed. Again, Commissioner Feagle made sure all the people who were so determined to leave the bridge a one-way were aware of FDOT's stand. "If they did not replace it and it became unsafe, it would be closed." I personally heard her make this statement and in fact I alluded to it in my Shady Grove News article in April.

I have spoken to Commissioner Feagle many times on this subject and I know that she has researched, listened to the people, and talked with FDOT. Hers was not a hasty vote but came after she weighed all the facts and her constituents' desires.

Finally, I have to ask "Why now?" After all the many, many opportunities for opinions to be expressed regarding the future of the bridge, and since the vote was made several weeks ago, why is this being brought up now? Just what is the motive? I am sorry, but if you don't care enough to step up and speak up, then I think you shouldn't complain when the vote is in!

Letters to the Editor

Veterans honored at ceremony

Dear Editor:
The Memorial Day ceremony was well received by the community with a record number of attendees.

I would like to thank everyone who came out and honored our veterans who made the ultimate sacrifice. We paid a special tribute to 25 of our WWII veterans.

I would like to recognize

Horace Knowles, a WWII veteran who was in attendance but was inadvertently left off the list and not formally recognized at the ceremony. I apologize to Mr. Knowles and anyone else who was left off the program.

We appreciate the sacrifice and service of all our veterans and am so thankful that many in our community took time out of their schedules to participate in the ceremony.

I would like to thank our many contributors. Your generous support allowed our program to be successful and comfortable.

It was such an honor and privilege for me to chair this year's program.

God bless our veterans.

Pam Feagle

Remembering T.B. Hunt and his impact on the community

Dear Editor:
I am very pleased the Florida Legislature has decided to honor law enforcement retirees awards for their exemplary work.

It has been just over a year since my husband, T. B. (Thaylon Bobby) Hunt passed away after an extended illness. During this year I have thought many times as I see people in the community who knew him as a state trooper and homicide investigator and his students in the law works program at TCHS that he should have had more recognition from the community.

His program at TCHS was so successful as there is a high percentage of his students in law enforcement related fields today. His program was the first in the state with the help of Mr. Gerald Oliver, Anne Morgan and other core teachers. They set a precedent and many other schools scheduled meetings with them and asked to observe the program.

When Bobby retired in 2004, they ended this excellent program which shaped many young people's lives forever.

I believe Trooper T.B. Hunt should be nominated for one of the upcoming awards.

Thanks to a very supportive community,
Priscilla (Perky) Hunt

Veterinarian clinic set for Saturday

Dear Editor:
Our local veterinarians will be offering their discount vaccination clinic this Saturday, June 7, from 9 a.m. until noon at the Buckeye Credit Union lot. Nail cutting will be available. All fees are discounted and generally there is no waiting. This will be a perfect time to update your pet's vaccination record and to pick up any flea or tick medication you may need.

The veterinarians will also implant micro chips. Animals with micro chips stand a better chance of being returned to their owners when lost or stolen. It is also critical that pet owners notify their veterinarian and/or animal shelter of changes in their address and phone number. Why? Scruffy is an example of why.

Scruffy is a 13-year-old, salt and pepper gray schnauzer picked up as a Taylor County stray. The first thing the animal control officer did when Scruffy arrived at the shelter was to run the wand over him to determine if he has a micro chip. He does. A call to the manufacturer provided a name and several phone numbers. However, none of the phone numbers belonged to the owners, and no one had any forwarding information. A Facebook search for an owner was unsuccessful.

Scruffy was taken home by a Helping Hands of the Shelter volunteer who bathed him and removed many of the mats in his fur. All is turning out well for Scruffy. He went to Bonnie Brinson at Cauzican Rescue. His new guardian was waiting to welcome him to his forever home.

Sincerely,
Lois Padgett

Midweek Muddle

Aiyah, captain

By SUSAN H. LINCOLN

It was a thousand nautical miles ago when the daughter and I rode in circles in our little, family boat, just beyond the boat ramp at Dekle Beach.

That's not what we were trying to do.

We were trying to help the husband retrieve the boat from the Gulf of Mexico, but we became amused by the situation, reduced to a pile of giggles in a couple of swimsuits.

The husband, who prefers a trained first mate, surely regretted that he only had the assistance of his lifetime mate and his firstborn child, who enjoy the water immensely but aren't particularly helpful in getting into it or out of it. "Throw me the rope," he said from shore.

With all my strength, I threw him the rope.

Then in an almost angry voice, he added, "But hold on to one end of it."

It was too late. I would have been composed if she hadn't laughed, and if the people who gathered hadn't laughed. (People always gather when you're in distress, rarely to help, but to point and jeer. It's so rude.)

He threw the rope back and voiced his directions more clearly this time. "Throw me the rope but hold on to the other end of it."

Aiyah, captain.

That trip, which he tried to block from his memory, was only seared more deeply into mine when another boating opportunity arose, and it was just the husband and me taking the excursion.

He had backed the boat down the ramp halfway, waded through the water to take the wheel, and all I had to do was continue the reverse position of the truck, never veering to the left or the right.

It sounds so easy on paper.

It sounds so easy in conversation. But, trust me, it isn't easy to back a boat into a canal. Just the tiniest mili-fraction of movement is translated into three feet by the time the boat responds and suddenly, you're jack-knifing or your husband is shooting himself in the foot.

All these memories flooded my brain on Memorial Day weekend when the husband conceded to take me on the boat again. (He clearly has forgotten our previous outings, thank God.) I am seldom offered the opportunity to go boating because the men in my family see no reason for taking the boat out if you aren't going to fish.

"You can fish," I insist.

"No," they say with the enthusiasm of the grim reaper. "We'll just go for a ride."

"No, you can fish," I insist again. "Yeah, that never works," they murmur to each other while sharing looks of disdain and incredulity.

For this trip, the husband took his rod just to silence the argument but he never wet a hook. And I didn't mind, really I didn't.

But I have finally figured it out: fishing with a woman is a lot like shopping with a man. That rule, I realize, doesn't translate for dyed-in-the-deer's-wool women around here who clean a carcass and drink the blood, but it does for those of us who like cute shoes.

Shopping with a man is a whole other experience. They say things like, "It looks just like the last one you tried on," or "How much is that?"

I'd rather stay home. So I've come to understand his reluctance to boat with me and I appreciate any offer. Thus, it was imperative on Memorial Day weekend that I be on my best behavior.

The launching went smoothly. I gently nudged the boat into the water and then parked the truck. The reverse-procedure was a little more tricky. A mile away from the dock, he began explaining what I should do. "I want you to leave the emergency brake on in the truck, and shift to drive. Then take the brake off and ease the boat out of the water."

Aiyah, captain.

I didn't have my reading glasses on, and didn't want to shout out the window, "Where is the release for the emergency brake?," so I just lifted the lever which seemed to be in the appropriate position.

That opened the hood, but I didn't know it.

So I started spinning the wheels of the truck as I tried to drive forward with the brake engaged.

I could see that look--the look which said another five years may pass before I get to ride in the boat again. He was turning a lighter shade of pale when I removed my sunglasses and realized the brake was still activated.

I quickly took care of that, about the time the husband was standing up to come help me.

Fortunately, he's agile and has good balance, thus resisting being thrown onto the paved boat launch.

"I never drive this truck," I said to him as we were headed home. "I wasn't sure about the emergency brake."

He just shook his head. He said nothing else for about five miles, and I'm pretty sure he was revisiting that memory about "Throw me the rope" or the one about "just ease it down straight into the water."

Or maybe the one about, "Do you take this woman for better or for worse?"

A fishing story

Alivia Fuquay, 7, from Trenton was recently visiting her Papa (Danny Everett) at Dark Island when she hooked this fine speckled trout, the first large trout she had ever caught. While winding in the big fish, her line broke and the trout appeared to get away. Quick action by her Papa (he and Alivia jumped in the boat and retrieved the green cork with the fish still attached) resulted in the fishing story of a lifetime.

Celebrate 'Great Outdoors Month'

By SUSAN SMITH

Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission

What better time to highlight all the public access points to outdoor recreation provided by the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC) than June, Great Outdoors Month.

FWC works closely with other agencies and Florida outdoor businesses to offer safe and exciting adventures on wildlife management areas, lakes and waterways. These partnerships make outdoor experiences special and memorable for families by delivering fun activities like hiking, boating, fishing, hunting, shooting sports and wildlife viewing

There is no better month than June for enjoying the freedom to play in Florida.

For starters, the FWC is offering license-free saltwater fishing June 7 and 8 so people have the weekend to try the sport or introduce a friend to fishing. To keep the momentum going, the FWC's freshwater license-free fishing weekend is June 14 and 15. Then there is an early, weekend start to bay scallop season on June 28, 29 and 30.

Gov. Rick Scott has proclaimed June to be Great Outdoors Month and noted that the FWC offers Floridians and visitors 159 wildlife management areas in addition to the other public lands totaling 12 million acres.

"We applaud Gov. Scott's efforts to promote the great

Baseball camps nearing

Taylor County High baseball Coach Reggie Wentworth will be conducting two summer baseball camps for youngsters during the month of June.

The first camp will be held June 9-13 and the second camp will take place June 16-20. Both camps are for kids ages 6-13 and will meet daily from 9 a.m. until 12 noon.

The camps will focus on the fundamentals of pitching, hitting, defense and base running. The cost is $50 per participants with discounts available for parents with more than one child.

Registration forms are available at the front office of each of Taylor County's schools. For more information contact Coach Wentworth at 842-3203.

FWC considers 5-fish bag limit for largemouth bass in Florida

The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC) will hold a public meeting to discuss a proposed management change for largemouth bass.

The meeting will be June 11 at the Clay County Headquarters Library, 1895 Town Center Blvd., Orange Park, just south of State Road 220 on Fleming Island. The meeting begins at 6 p.m.

Participants will be encouraged to provide input on the proposal for a statewide five-fish daily bag limit, only one of which could be 16 inches total length or longer.

The meeting will offer the public a chance to hear from freshwater fisheries biologists about the science behind managing bass fisheries. Biologists will give a presentation and then open up a discussion and a question-and-answer session.

The meeting is open to everyone, and largemouth bass anglers are especially encouraged to attend, officials said.

To learn more about largemouth bass and the FWC's current regulations, go to MyFWC.com/Fishing, and visit the "Black Bass Management" and "Regulations" links under "Freshwater Fishing."

REVITALIZING PERRY'S DOWNTOWN

Brenda Wilson, left, and Vivian Sheffield were two of the nominees honored by Main Street Perry. Wilson is being nominated for the Business of the Year award and Sheffield is nominated as the Main Street program supporter of the year.

Main Street Perry Program Director Tracey Smith, right, presented Doyle Lundy his certificate of nomination. He is being recognized for his rehabilitation of the historic Bloodworth building.

7 nominees vie for state awards with Florida Main Street Program

For the first time in its 23-year history, Main Street Perry has seven local projects vying for awards at state level with Florida Main Street.

The group recently recognized the nominees during a reception held at Java Connection, located in the Historic Perry Station (formerly The Old Depot).

Program Director Tracey Smith spotlighted the seven nominees and their strides toward the restoration and rejuvenation of downtown Perry:

- Business of the Year: Brenda Wilson/O'Quinn Pharmacy.
- Main Street Program Supporter: Vivian Sheffield.

- Outstanding Main Street Sign/Display: Perry Police Department.
 - Outstanding Main Street Rehabilitation Project: Doyle Lundy/Bloodworth's building.
 - Outstanding Florida Main Street Public Improvement: City of Perry/Rosehead Park, Phase I.
 - Outstanding Economic Restructuring Program or Project: Historic Perry Station renovation/small business incubator.
 - Outstanding New Construction Project: City of Perry/The Grand Pavilion at Rosehead Park.

NJHS inducts 36 new members

Taylor County Middle School (TCMS) inducted 36 new members into the National Junior Honor Society (NJHS) during ceremonies held Monday, May 19, in the school's auditorium.

"NJHS is the nation's premier organization established to recognize outstanding middle school students. More than just an honor roll, NJHS serves to recognize those students who have demonstrated excellence in the areas of scholarship, leadership, service and character. These characteristics have been associated with membership in the organization since its beginning. The National Association of Secondary School Principals (NASSP) officially established NJHS in 1921." TCMS guidance counselor and honor society sponsor William J. Tripp said.

Four main purposes have guided chapters of NJHS from the beginning: to create enthusiasm for scholarship; to stimulate a desire to render service; to promote leadership; and to develop character in the students of secondary schools. These purposes also translate into the criteria used for membership selection in each local chapter.

"The NJHS inductees have all shown academic excellence since beginning their career at Taylor County Middle School. Each of the students has maintained at least a 3.5 grade point average since the beginning of their sixth grade year at TCMS."

The inspirational speaker for the evening was

Circuit Judge Greg Parker, "whose thoughtful words will help to guide these students in their future endeavors. TCMS is proud of these students' history of academic progress, and hopes they will continue their efforts as they move on to great success at Taylor County High School."

Stewart Memorial's Summer Food Program begins June 9

Stewart Memorial will participate in the Summer Food Service program this year, June 9 through Aug. 8.

Through this program, nutritionally-balanced meals are provided to all children regardless of race, color, sex, disability, age or national origin during the summer vacation when school breakfasts and lunches are not available.

"All children 18 years old and younger are eligible for the meals at no charge and there will be no discrimination in the course of the meal service," said a spokesperson for the program.

Programs, such as this one, are approved for geographical areas of need where 50 percent of more of the children qualify for free and reduced meals during the school year.

Meals will be served at the church (1113 W. Hampton Springs Avenue) from 11 a.m. until 1:30 p.m. Monday through Friday except for Friday, July 4. Those who need transportation may contact the church by calling 584-7194.

Fish, wildlife activities add $40 billion to state economy all Floridians and to get kids, our next generation of conservationists, outside," said FWC Chairman Richard Corbett.

The FWC offers:

- The Florida Youth Conservation Centers Network – Provides residential and day camp programs where youth can participate in outdoor activities and expand their understanding of conservation and natural Florida. Some camps are in state lands, others in community parks.

- Expanded hunting opportunities on WMAs – Created by public input and scientific research, taking into account wildlife populations and reproductive differences in specific areas of the state. Hog hunting, for instance, is available some June weekends in five WMAs.
- Birding, wildlife viewing and paddling trails.
- Boat ramps and waterway markers to keep boaters and manatees safe.
- License-free freshwater and saltwater fishing events to expose people to the pleasures and rewards of fishing.

- Expanded scallop season, opening harvest opportunities.

Fish, wildlife and related activities and businesses contribute over $40 billion and nearly 294,000 jobs to Florida's economy annually. The "value added" economic impact of the seafood industry contributes another $4.7 billion.

For more information on the FWC's many outdoors offerings, go to MyFWC.com and select "Fishing," "Boating," "Hunting,"

"Wildlife Viewing," "Education" and other topics to plot outdoor activities for June and months to come, on its wildlife management areas and on the state's rivers, beaches and lands.

the fishery for the future, officials said.

Snook can be caught and released during the closed season, but anglers should use proper handling methods to ensure the species' abundance for anglers today and generations to come, officials continued. To learn more and see a video about catch-and-release, visit MyFWC.com/Fishing and click on "Saltwater" then "Recreational Regulations" and "Fish Handling."

Anglers can report their catch on the Snook and Gamefish Foundation's website at Snookfoundation.org by clicking on the Angler Action link in the bar at the top of the page.
