New Sidewalks To Be Added Along Base Street

The intersection at SW Anastasia Way and Base Street will soon have additional sidewalks and a crosswalk.

By Lynette Norris
Greene Publishing, Inc.

As a Part of the Florida DOT's federally funded "Safe Routes to School" program, several streets and intersections will soon have some new sidewalks, with crosswalks at key intersections at Highway 90. The project will improve safety for children who walk to schools located along Base Street/U.S. Hwy 90, and pedestrians walking along Anastasia Way to and from the Recreational Complex.

Work has already begun on the east side of Southwest Anastasia Way between the highway and the rec park. Other sidewalks being constructed include:

- the south side of Base Street from SW Captain Brown Road to SW Anastasia Way
- the north side of Northwest 90th Avenue between Base Street
- the north side of Captain Brown road from Southeast Fifth Avenue to Base Street

Crosswalks will be added at several locations along Base Street, including one at Madison County Central School and Madison County High School.

The project also includes several new school zone flashing signals, new driveways, upgrade drainage pipes and replacing 12 mailboxes to meet current safety requirements.

Jenny Andrews Named Citizen of the Year 2013

By Kristin Finney
Greene Publishing, Inc.

Every year, Madison holds nominations for Citizen of the Year. The Citizen of the Year is a person in the county that exemplifies kindness and helps support Madison County. This year's nominees included Jenny Andrews, Ted Ensminger, Merv Mattair, Gean McCullough and Jerome Wyche. The winner for 2013 was Jenny Andrews.

In order to be nominated, someone in the community must send a letter nominating you and explaining why they feel you would be good for the title. One of the letters written about Jenny Andrews was filled with many reasons why Andrews would make a good choice. Below is a copy of the letter: "As long as I have known Jenny, (more than 30 years) she has served as a spiritual mentor for young and old in her church and in the community. She has led numerous Bible studies, and taught Sunday School for many years, always leading others toward a closer relationship with God, and towards becoming better members of our families, churches, and communities. She has been an active advocate for Madison County, and has always been at the forefront of spurring the community on towards becoming a better community. She has worked with people in all walks of life, from high school students, where she taught and mentored for many years, to people who have found themselves with no resources, to young evolving Christians, to us middle aged, middle classed citizens who need a little guidance and direction. I can think of no other who has influenced so many lives for the better. In addition, she is a talented artist, who uses her talents in so many ways to enhance and beautify our church, the First Methodist Church of Madison." "I nominate Jenny Andrews to be 2013 Citizen of the Year because she is the true meaning of a citizen to all people; whether it's the many students she

School Board Approves New Organization to Run Joann Bridges Academy

By Lynette Norris
Greene Publishing, Inc.

After Just Youth Services announced that it no longer wanted to run Joann Bridges Academy, School Superintendent Doug Brown and District Administrators Davis Barclay, Paula Ginn and Andy Barnes researched other education companies, ultimately choosing G4S Youth Services, LLC, drawing up the contract and presenting it to the school board for a vote. However there were several minutes of discussion first.

School board member VeEtta Hagan, whose Greenville-area district includes the Academy, asked about the organization's track record. Brown replied that the track record looked good for a five-year-old company that was successfully running educational institutions throughout Florida and the U.S., and that their presentation to the school district administrators had been very good. "I would not present this if I did not feel good about it," he said.

"But what about the school board members?" Hagan asked. "We should have been invited to this presentation. What about workshops, where we could ask questions? It seems, you just present us with this contract and make the decision for us. We don't know anything about this company." School Board Attorney Tommy Reeves discussed the contract and explained how it was set up, including an arbitration clause that would be far less expensive for settling disputes than the traditional legal route. However, the one caveat was that the school board would lose much of its right to appeal, since a decision rendered by arbitration was binding, unless it was "way out of line."

Financial Director Andy Barnes said that he'd had a lengthy meeting with the company's representatives and

Put Safety First When Grilling Outdoors

Memorial weekend is here and it marks the beginning of the summer season of backyard grilling. Meals cooked outdoors always increase during the summer months and the variety of food people put on the grill seems to be expanding. With all of the food preparation in summer temperatures, you need to be aware of safe food handling practices.

Backyard chiefs don't think about it, but each year outbreaks of food poisoning increase during the summer months. Bacteria that cause food poisoning are invisible, odorless and tasteless; summer temperatures only increase the potential population explosion. Since it is not appetizing to think about food invaders like E. coli, clostridium perfringens or salmonella, using safe food handling methods will drastically reduce your chances of exposing your family and friends to food borne illness.

First, marinate meats in a glass dish in the refrigerator, not the kitchen countertop. If you plan to use some of the marinade for basting or a dip, reserve a portion before you put raw meat into it. Bacteria from raw meat will contaminate the liquid and it should be discarded after the marinating time is over.

Coals should be very hot before food is placed on the grill for cooking. A hot grill will assure that food is cooked at a high enough temperature to destroy bacteria. It takes 30 minutes or longer before coals are hot enough; they should appear to have a light coating of ash for the highest temperature.

Meat should be thoroughly cooked. The best way to check for doneness is to use a meat thermometer. Whole cuts of beef, steaks and roasts should be cooked to internal temperature of 145°F, while ground meat needs to reach an internal temperature of 160°F. Poultry needs to reach an internal temperature of 165°F, be sure the thermometer is inserted in the fleshy part of the meat and not touching bone. If you don't have a thermometer, visually check by cutting into the meat to be sure the juices are clear and not pink in color. To avoid flare-ups and charred food, remove visible fat from meat.

Temperatures for cooking pork have changed in recent years; USDA now recommends a cooking temperature of 145°F with a resting time of 3 minutes. Research showed the internal temperature continues to rise during the resting time and reaches 160°F.

Put cooked foods on a clean plate that hasn't been used to hold raw meat or poultry. Cooking food destroys bacteria, but if you put it back on the same plate, you just exposed it to bacteria again. Food safety experts call this cross contamination and it is sure to cause food borne illness.

Perishable foods need to be served hot off the grill. Food safety expert's advise food should be eaten within two hours. If you are eating outdoors, keep in mind warm temperatures reduce that time to one hour. Leftovers should be promptly divided in to small containers and placed in the refrigerator.

Simple changes in the way you prepare and serve your backyard barbecue will greatly reduce your risk for food borne illness. For more information on food safety, contact the Madison County Extension Service.

Stealing From Death

Although I know that it's not true, I feel like I've been stealing from death. The first instance I have no memory of. I know what I was doing one minute and the next thing I remember is waking up five days later in the cardiac intensive care unit in Tallahassee.

The second instance of theft I remember vividly. I had just returned from taking pictures of my niece before her senior prom. I was uploading the photos to Facebook and deleting some when all of a sudden, I felt like I was about to black out. I felt as if I were being hurtled into unconsciousness at 500 miles per hour. A split second later I was wide-awake as I felt a boom and a shock. My internal defibrillator had fired and jolted me out of impending doom.

The first time, in December 2011, in the words of Emergency Medical Services personnel and doctors, I had "coded." That means my heart had stopped and, in medical terms, I had clinically died. I had not really died because God had not said I had died. Hebrews 9:27 says, "It is appointed unto men once to die but after this the judgment." I did not die biologically because my brain was still working and they were able to get me to the hospital, where doctors began a radical treatment called Arctic Sun, where the body is basically put in arctic conditions to preserve brainpower. Doctors and nurses iced me down. The fact that the staff at my office did the job that they did to keep me alive and the fact that EMS showed up when they did and they got me to the hospital when they did saved my life. Doctors had told my father that my prognosis wasn't good but they did what they could and friends all over the world were praying for me. God healed me.

After that miracle, doctors implanted the internal defibrillator. This past Saturday, it worked for the first time and, although I know that God holds the cards when it comes to life and death, but I was told by medical professionals that if I didn't have the defibrillator, I would be dead now. My heart had been racing at 387 beats per minute. I didn't even feel that because as the woman who works for the company who made the defibrillator said, "It's just a flutter" at that point.

Neither time did I hear the heavy footsteps of death stalking me. Neither time did I realize how sick I was. One time ended with a clinical death, from which God rescued me. The next ended with my medical device firing. Once again, God rescued me from death.

I have no doubt that if I had died, I would go to Heaven. Do you know where you will go when you die? Have you accepted Jesus as your personal savior? If

Conservative Corner

Where Have All The Flowers Gone?

On 10/20/1981, Kathy Boudin, a veteran of the long-dormant Weather Underground, was captured, for murder. Boudin was last seen eleven years before that, fleeing naked from the ruins of the Greenwich Village town house she and her comrades were using for a bomb factory.

Early on 3/6/1970, a group of Weathermen inadvertently blew up three of their members along with a townhouse on Eleventh Street. The group was trying to build an anti-personnel bomb, in order to give Americans a taste of the kind of cruel weaponry their government was using in Vietnam.

In an earlier life, Boudin had been a student at Bryn Mawr College, where she had joined the New Left and had become a community organizer. She followed the Rules for Radicals, by Saul Alinsky, in communities like Chester, Pa., and Cleveland.

Caught in Brink's Robbery

The New York Times of 10/22/1981, reported the New York robber netted $1,589,000 in cash, six bags of money. In a wild chase, she and three others, were caught and held without bail on charges second-degree murder in the deaths of a Brink's guard, Peter Paige, 49, and two police officers.

Kathy had grown up in a family steeped in the traditions of the left. Raised to cherish social and racial justice, she explained, "It's about doing what you feel is right."

Collegians in Disgrace

The academic honors are raining down on her now. The Weather Underground terrorist, who already has an adjunct professorship at the Columbia School of Social work, was named by the New York University Law School as Rose Sheinberg Scholar in Residence (for "working on cutting-edge issues of gender, race and class") Her caper with the Brink's robbery, resulting in 22 years in jail, hardly slowed down her community organizer activities. The National Review, of 5/6/2013, p. 8, reports that Kathy wrote letters of apology to the families of her victims but never mailed them.

Crime and Its Results

Another winner of fame, and one never slowed down from his community organizer activity, is Bill Ayers. Ayers is currently a professor of education, who is defiantly unapologetic, both on camera and in the pages of his 2001 memoir "Fugitive Days." "I don't regret setting bombs," he told the New York Times in a profile published, unfortunately for him, on September 11, 2001. "In fact, I don't think we did enough."

Taken By Surprise?

Where have all the flowers gone? To teach! Bill Ayers, Kathy Boudin, and other community organizers, are in positions of authority, and are all paid from taxes extracted from people like us. What a disgrace!

Does any of this matter to an academic establishment that's still starry-eyed about 1960's radicals?

No one should be surprised. These "community organizers" have populated the academy that I have known. As a matter of fact, to make this personal, I can state categorically, that I have never had one teacher that I recognized as a "conservative." What a disgrace!

Hagan protested that Barnes was the district's financial expert, not necessarily the educational services expert. "We must remember that numbers are different from education," she said.

Brown, who added that he was still certified in all levels of education, even though his most recent work experience was in higher education, and that he also had an extensive background in juvenile justice, said that he had spoken to several counties that used G4S's services, and also spoken at length to DJJ (Department of Juvenile Justice) about them. "They come highly recommended. I didn't just pull them out of thin air."

Hagan pointed out that she had a legitimate concern for the Academy and had a right to ask questions; Brown acknowledged that she did.

"I was elected by the people and I'm trying to serve the people," she added.

The board voted 3/2 to approve G4S Youth Services, LLC., with Hagan and fellow school board member Karen Pickles dissenting.

Tina DeMotsis: Identity Theft Still A Major Concern, PART I

By Lynette Norris
Greene Publishing, Inc.

Tina DeMotsis heads up its Fraud Division of the Madison County Sheriff's Office. Recently, she addressed the 55 Plus Club about the topic of identity theft and provided club members with a wealth of information. Over the next three weeks, this report will look at the problem in three parts: How Identity Thieves Get Your Information, How to Protect Yourself From Identity Thieves, and What To Do If Your Identity is Stolen

PART I: How Identity Thieves Get Your Information

While identity thieves still resort to old-fashioned legwork, i.e., dumpster diving, staking out curbside mailboxes and so forth, the digital age of the Internet means that their "loot" – personal information they can use to defraud people and rob them blind – is often just a few mouse clicks away.

"Technology is scary," said Tina DeMotsis of the Madison County Sheriff's Office, who does not use ATMs, pays in cash only at restaurants, and advises against using debit cards at all, because they can be too easily compromised. All an identity thief needs is the PIN number to completely clean out a debit card account. When it comes to credit cards, the toughest one for thieves to crack is American Express for some reason, and when it comes to telephone conversations, a land line beats a cell phone, and a landline phone where the handset is attached to the phone body with a cord beats a wireless, walk-around handset, especially if you are discussing sensitive information with your bank, credit card company or financial advisor. Also, if you must relay personal information over a cell phone outside your home, beware of who is standing behind you or who is lingering close enough to overhear what you are saying.

Along with the dizzying advances in technology that make an identity thief's job easier, the massive popularity of social media like Facebook and Twitter can be a gold mine.

"Be careful what you put out there (on the social media)," she said.

DeMotsis has been with the MCSO since 2005 and now heads up its fraud division, works constantly on stacks and stacks of fraud and identity theft cases. She recently spoke to the 55 Plus Club about the threats and scams that are out there and what people can do to safeguard their financial assets from digital burglars and pickpockets.

Identity theft, in a nutshell, is a criminal action of obtaining enough personal identification to impersonate the victim and then obtain credit and loans, or make purchases in the victim's name. Then, the perps don't pay the bill, leaving the victim holding the bag...in this case, a bag full of unpaid invoices and creditors trying to collect the money.

Often, the only pieces of information thieves need are someone's Social Security Number, date of birth and telephone number – sometimes, resourceful thieves can manage with less than that – one piece of information will often help them get another and another.

other. They can use vacant lots as drop zones for items purchased on someone else's credit.

Where do they get this information?

"I could go on all day about that," said DeMotsis.

They can get it from the hospital, if you've ever been hospitalized; from the doctor's office or dentist's office; from your or your child's school; from your place of employment; from your health insurance carrier; even from your bank. The list goes on and on, and includes anywhere you're required to provide personal identifying information.

There could be a criminal-minded individual employed at any of these locations, gleaning your information from any files or records he or she may have access to – such individuals can sell stolen identities over the internet for as little as $2 to shady companies in foreign countries, where it is virtually impossible to trace the perpetrator. Two dollars a pop may not sound like much, but if the individual in question has access to hundreds of identities each day, it can add up.

A larcenous individual sitting in any waiting room may overhear you providing personal information to a receptionist or other employee who is asking you the questions and filling out the form for you.

If the establishments you use don't shred or destroy old documents before disposal, identity thieves can go dumpster diving to retrieve valuable information.

If you yourself do not shred or destroy old utility bills, credit card slips, ATM receipts, and other kinds of sensitive financial documents, thieves need only to sift through your garbage to retrieve your most personal financial information.

Then, there is the technology angle that evolves at a dizzying pace. Conventional wisdom of only a short time ago was to never let your credit card out of your sight if you used it in a restaurant. Use it only if you were allowed to "check out" at a cash register when you had finished eating and could watch the transaction with your card. Now, there are card reader devices known as "spider devices" that are so small they can be concealed in the palm of a hand, and these devices can store information from hundreds of cards. Even if the restaurant employee never leaves your sight with your card, it can be compromised.

Thieves can also simply Google someone's name and go on a data-mining expedition throughout the Internet – and find out enough to allow them to hack into credit and bank accounts.

They can also illegally obtain your credit report or simply file a public records request at the courthouse.

The threat is out there and it is quite formidable. A person doesn't have to lose a purse or wallet to have his or her identity stolen. Just a few pieces of misplaced information will do.

There are undoubtedly many other ways someone can find such information, and when they do, they can wreak havoc.

NEXT WEEK: Part II, How to Protect Yourself From Identity Thieves, will address some the things you can do to thwart them.

LEGISLATION UPDATES

With the closing of the legislative session and the passage of (HB 7013 or the Election Reform bill), I am pleased to report several positive changes effecting voters in the 2014 election cycle and beyond.

Effective January 1, 2014, voters who make election day address changes from other Florida counties will no longer be required to vote a provisional ballot in counties which use electronic poll books. The bill also provides for flexibility in the hours, dates and locations of early voting which allows supervisors to customize early voting to the needs of their county voters. Early voting is still required to be 8 hours a day and no more than 12 hours, but the bill provides more options in securing early voting sites which are more centrally located to populated areas and convenient for voters. With regards to vote-by-mail ballots, a voter who forgets to sign their ballot will have until 5:00 p.m. the day prior to the election to "cure" their ballot by completing an affidavit. Prior to this, a vote-by-mail ballot with an unsigned certificate was not tabulated. The new law also permits signatures to be updated from precinct registers so that recent signatures are available for verification of vote-by-mail ballots during the canvassing process.

Additionally, HB 249 allows for sample ballots to be sent via e-mail at great savings to taxpayers. Sample ballots will still be published and mailed for those who don't have e-mail addresses. The new law also amends Section 97.0585, Florida Statutes, by exempting e-mail addresses on voter registration records from public disclosure, thus securing voter confidentiality with respect to registration correspondence and emailed sample ballots. Voters have a reasonable expectation of privacy when dealing with my office in these areas.

There was additional legislation passed, HB 569, which proposes changes to Florida Statutes 106, Campaign Finance, and SB 2, which amends Florida Statutes 112 on Ethics. As the Legislative Chairman for the Florida State Association of Supervisors of Elections (FSASE), I am pleased that the committee's hard work paid off in an elections' bill that is purposeful in improving the election process.

Rev. David DeLaughter Proclaimed "Unsung Hero"

By Lynette Norris
Greene Publishing, Inc.

In the northwest corner of Four Freedoms Park, a tall, slender monument stands in a square of ground, surrounded with liriopie plantings. The pedestal beneath the tall obelisk reads: "DEDICATED TO THE FORMER SLAVES OF MADISON COUNTY AND THEIR SUPPORTERS AND THE UNSUNG HEROES WHO GAVE THEIR PRAYERS, BLOOD, SWEAT AND TEARS TO MAKE OUR COMMUNITY WHAT IT IS TODAY. MAY 20, 1996."

One of those Unsung Heroes is Rev. David DeLaughter, former pastor of the Damascus Missionary Baptist Church and St. James Missionary Baptist Church.

Rev. DeLaughter was formally recognized as such during the 20th of May Jubilee Celebration at Four Freedoms Park, Monday, May 20, at 5:00 p.m.

May 20, 1865 is the date when the news of the Emancipation finally reached Florida, over two years after slavery officially ended for the entire country Jan. 1, 1863. The 20th of May Jubilee Celebrations are held in several towns throughout Florida in honor of that day.

In Madison, one of the major events in that celebration is recognizing the official "Unsung Hero" Of Madison County.

Rev. DeLaughter, who in addition to being pastor of Damascus and St. James Missionary Baptist Churches for 36 years, also worked as a technician in the audio visual section of the library and North Florida Community College. Widowed several years ago, he retired last year and moved to South Carolina to live with one of his sons.

"Unsung Hero" seems a most fitting description for DeLaughter, according to those who remember him.

"He was basically a quiet leader...a quiet man," Rev. Oliver Bradley of Genesis Missionary Baptist Church, who presided over the ceremony, said afterward.

Members of the DeLaughter family and Ann Waring, whose late husband Howell Waring worked with Rev. DeLaughter to have the Unsung Heroes Monument placed in the park, stand beside it with the wreath presented in his honor. Left to right: Betty DeLaughter (sister-in-law), Naomi Anderson (sister), Donald DeLaughter (son) and Waring.

In addition to his duties as pastor and video technician at NFCC, DeLaughter also served as president of the Madison County Training Union. In 1990, DeLaughter and others in the Ministerial Association founded the annual Holy Week services that are now a solid tradition in Madison's observance of the Easter season.

He also worked Howell Waring to have the Unsung Heroes monument erected in Four Freedoms Park.

After a ceremony at the Gazebo that included selections from the Madison Boys Choir and a keynote address by Julius Hackett, Ann Waring, widow of Howell Waring, presented a wreath to members of the DeLaughter family, who carried it over to the Unsung Heroes Monument.

"If my father were here," said son Donald DeLaughter, "He'd give all the praise and honor to the Lord."

MEMORIAL DAY

WHEN OLD FLAGS RETIRE: FLAG BURNING CEREMONY MEMORIAL DAY

By Lynette Norris
Greene Publishing, Inc.

There's a saying, made popular by Gen. Douglas McArthur, that "old soldiers never die, they simply fade away."

Like old soldiers, old American flags flown in their honor also fade. They become worn-out and tattered. Once they can no longer be repaired, and are no longer serviceable, they should be retired in a dignified and respectful manner.

Since Memorial Day is often observed by placing American flags on the graves of U.S. Veterans, and that often means replacing worn-out flags that have been there awhile – perhaps since the previous Memorial Day – the problem becomes what to do with the flags that are faded, tattered and worn...flags that need to be retired.

According to the U.S. Flag Code, the preferred method is to burn the old one in a discreet and respectful manner, after checking with local officials about fire codes and ordinances in the area. If outdoor burning is allowed, then the U.S. Flag Code guidelines include making sure that the fire is large and intense enough to consume the flag completely; the flag should be properly folded, and placed – not thrown – on the fire. Those gathered around the fire may salute the flag, recite the Pledge of Allegiance, or simply observe a period of silent reflection.

The key is to show respect and dignity during the burning, which signifies purification and re-birth.

Afterward, the fire should be safely extinguished and the ashes buried.

People can burn their own flags, or take them to a civic or veterans' organization that will handle it for them.

This Memorial Day, May 27, the American Legion Post #195, Commander Al Alexander, assisted by the Madison Fire Department, will conduct a burning ceremony for old flags in Four Freedoms Park, beginning at 11 a.m. Anyone who has an old, tattered, worn-out flag they would like to see burned in a proper patriotic ceremony can bring it to Four Freedoms Park that morning, preferably by 10:45.

The ceremony will include Jim Jenkins playing patriotic music, the Madison County Sheriff's Office presenting the colors in an honor guard, an invocation, a recognition of all veterans present in the audience, and Jerry Chandler, USAF (retired) and vice-commander of American Legion Post of Cherry Lake, as the keynote speaker.

Other Options:

It is also acceptable to seal the old flag in a box or bag and bury it, since some locations may not allow outdoor burning, and flags constructed of modern fabrics like nylon release toxic gases when burned. Again, the most important thing is showing respect during the burial process.

Yet another alternative for nylon flags is recycling, where the old nylon is remade into new nylon material for new flags.

If, however, your flag is merely dirty, but otherwise in good repair, there is nothing in the U.S. Flag Code that forbids washing. Most outdoor type flags can be hand-washed in a mild laundry detergent, or taken to a dry-cleaner, if the material is not washable.

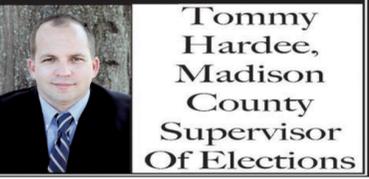

It is also perfectly acceptable to do some small repairs yourself. The criteria is that the repairs must be done well enough so that they are not noticeable when the flag is flying, and they must not alter the dimensions of the flag in any way.

For a more in-depth look at the U.S. Flag Code, go to the website www.united-states-flag.com.

A POW's Story: Ed Sheffield

By Lynette Norris
Greene Publishing, Inc.

Korean War Veteran Ed Sheffield doesn't often speak publicly about the things he endured at the hands of enemy soldiers, after his capture by the North Korean army in 1950, but when he does, the story he tells is compelling. It is the story of someone who lost many friends and comrades. It is a story of survival, almost by sheer force of will, under horrific circumstances most people can only try to imagine.

"I am very, very lucky to be here," he recently told the Rotary Club. "After three years in the hands of an enemy who did not regard human life the same way we did."

While he speaks of the things he and fellow POWs endured, his voice is calm, quiet, matter-of-fact. There are pauses here and there, as if he is searching for words adequate to describe the horrors, some of which are given in detail, others only alluded to.

Sheffield was stationed in Japan when the Korean War broke out, June 25, 1950. Communist North Korea was attempting to overrun democratic South Korea. Sheffield's division was quickly sent to the front lines and ordered to "hold off the enemy at all costs."

His division (a typical army division could be anywhere from 10,000 to 30,000 men) was the first to encounter the North Korean army. Unfortunately the U.S. soldiers were outnumbered 100 to one. Within the first few days of conflict, the enemy advanced so fast that, at times, the American troops were shooting them at point-blank range, with heavy artillery that would normally be used from as much as a mile away. Some of their heavy guns were burned up from the constant firing at the enemy.

As they fell back under the onslaught for days on end, the enemy finally stopped advancing quite so fast, but the narrow dirt roads bordered on either side by rice paddies or mountains offered the Americans no place to set up their heavy artillery. To make matters worse, the roads were often filled with throngs of refugees, carrying everything they owned on their backs, fleeing south to escape the fighting as the Americans were trying once again to press northward.

Then, too late, they discovered that North Korean soldiers had been slipping through with the crowds of fleeing civilians. Disguised as civilians themselves, with their weapons and uniforms hidden in backpacks, they were getting behind the American troops and cutting them off. Sheffield remembers seeing his commander with a loudspeaker telling everyone that they had been surrounded.

"I watched him get shot," he recalls quietly. The bridges behind them had been blown up, cutting off any escape.

They were trapped as the enemy opened fire and wiped out their front-line men. Well-camouflaged North Korean troops looked like little bushes moving around in the rice paddies and hillsides.

Looking to his left, he saw five North Koreans with weapons aimed at him. Another ran up behind him and pushed a bayonet against his back.

The North Koreans disarmed Sheffield and other prisoners, bound their hands with communication wire, and began moving them up through the line as the fighting continued. Along the way, Sheffield was shot in the leg by a sniper.

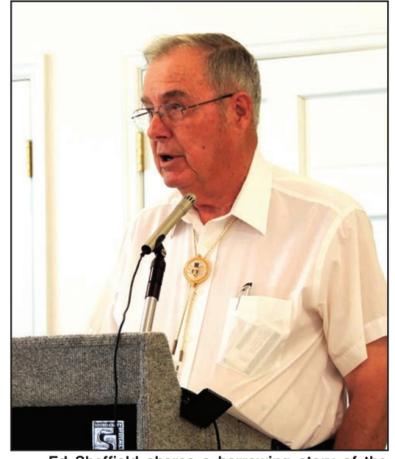

Out of Sheffield's entire division – thousands of soldiers – only about 700 were still alive. The North Koreans took them, along with several captured civilians – missionaries, diplomats, war correspondents and priests – and began moving north, toward Seoul, the capital of South Korea. The North Korean Army had penetrated that far into South Korea.

The next 11 days were a steady march north. That October 30, he recalls being in a cornfield by the Yalu River and seeing the bodies of 300 American soldiers who had been executed in a tunnel several days earlier.

As weeks passed into November, the weather grew colder, with temperature plummeting to 20 degrees at night. The men huddled together in tiny stick-mud huts to keep from freezing to death, but some died during the night, succumbing to the bitter cold. Those who died were taken outside the huts and left on the ground. Their bodies would be frozen solid by morning.

Yet to come was the 100-mile death march. The North Koreans announced that any prisoners who fell behind would be shot. When one of the prisoners, Lt. Thornton, protested, he was summarily blindfolded and shot in the back of the head. After the Koreans machine-gunned everyone who was in the makeshift sick-bay, the march commenced.

Sheffield learned which weeds he could eat. He also ate grass, cornstalks and anything he could find as they marched over icy roads through mountainous country. Inevitably, many became too sick to walk. Their friends carried them as far as possible, until an enemy soldier would decide it was time to shoot them. The dead men were left on the side of the road and covered over with snow.

Ed Sheffield shares a harrowing story of the three years he spent as a POW of the North Korean Army.

To Sheffield, it wasn't so much the possibility of dying that haunted him, as the thought of being tossed aside and left by the side of a road in the middle of a godforsaken no-mans-land.

Before the march ended, another 105 men had died.

The remaining men were crammed into tiny shacks to endure a bitter winter of below-zero temperatures. As many as 20 to 30 would be crammed into a room so small they could not all lie down at the same time. Some had to remain standing. About once a day they were given one tennis-ball-sized clump of rice or millet to be passed around to the whole room. Those unfortunate enough to be at the back of the room got none.

Throughout the bitter winter, another 300 men died of dysentery, starvation, exposure, or beriberi, a neural condition resulting from severe thiamine deficiency with symptoms including extreme muscle weakness and swelling of the legs. Sheffield saw men with legs swollen to three or four times their normal size. Once the swelling advanced up to the torso, it was usually fatal.

Disease from contaminated food or water also claimed its share.

Sheffield made up his mind to survive. He would stay in as good a shape as possible under the circumstances and he would live.

When spring finally came, signaling the end of the deadly bitter cold and snow, and then the summer; there was heavy work detail involving pickaxes and shovels, but it kept Sheffield in better shape. He learned that it was imperative to quickly adjust to his surroundings. He learned to forget about the comfortable things back home and the good things to eat. He learned that a person could endure a great deal of punishment over extensive periods of time, if he kept his will to live and kept his nerve.

He adjusted, he endured, he lived through three years of starvation, sleeping on hard rock floors in bitterly cold winters, and watching more and more of his friends and companions die.

Upon his release three years later, his weight had dwindled from 170 pounds to less than 70. When an American General asked him if there was anything he wanted, he replied, "Yes, sir. I would like to sleep in a bed one night and have an American meal."

He is grateful to be one of the few who survived the three years of captivity, to be able to come home again and see the familiar sights of American airports and cities as he made his way to the familiar sights of his hometown, and finally, the faces of his family and friends that he had left behind.

He still has scars from sleeping on rocky prison floors and bad memories that will never leave him. There are also memories of many, many friends and fellow soldiers who never made it home.

On Memorial Day, we gather to honor those who didn't make it back, the ones who died in wars close at hand and halfway around the world, a long way from home.

We also honor veterans like Ed Sheffield, who fought against an overwhelming enemy, survived against overwhelming odds, and lived to tell the story. It is a story of courage, loyalty and survival, and it is a story of unimaginable loss.

It is one of many stories of why we observe Memorial Day.

"All Gave Some, Some Gave All."

Thank You

City of Madison, Florida 2012 Annual Drinking Water Quality Report

We're pleased to present to you this year's Annual Water Quality Report. This report is designed to inform you about the quality water and services we deliver to you every day. Our constant goal is to provide you with a safe and dependable supply of drinking water. We want you to understand the efforts we make to continually improve the water treatment process and protect our water resources. We are committed to ensuring the quality of your water. The city's water is secured from three wells located around the City. Your water is drawn from the prestigious Floridan Aquifer and is chlorinated for disinfection purposes then fluoridated for dental health purposes; a sequestering agent is also added for the purpose of corrosion control.

If you have any questions about this report or concerning your water utility, please contact Mr. Johnny Webb, Water Superintendent for the City of Madison at (850) 973-5081. If you want to learn more, please attend any of our regularly scheduled meetings. They are held on the second Tuesday of each month at 5:30 p.m. at City Hall, 321 SW Rutledge St., Madison, FL.

The City of Madison routinely monitors for contaminants in your drinking water according to Federal and State laws, rules, and regulations. Except where indicated otherwise, this report is based on the results of our monitoring for the period of January 1 to December 31, 2012. Data obtained before January 1, 2012, and presented in this report are from the most recent testing done in accordance with the laws, rules, and regulations.

The Department of Environmental Protection has performed a Source Water Assessment on our system in 2012. These assessments were conducted to provide information about any potential sources of contamination in the vicinity of our wells. One (1) potential source of contamination was identified with low susceptibility to city wells. The assessment results are available on the FDEP Source Water Assessment and Protection Program website at www.dep.state.fl.us/swapp.

Thank you for allowing us to continue providing your family with clean, quality water this year. In order to maintain a safe and dependable water supply we sometimes need to make improvements that will benefit all of our customers. These improvements are sometimes reflected as rate structure adjustments. Thank you for understanding.

The sources of drinking water (both tap water and bottled water) include rivers, lakes, streams, ponds, reservoirs, springs and wells. As water travels over the surface of the land or through the ground, it dissolves naturally occurring minerals and, in some cases, radioactive material, and can pick up substances resulting from the presence of animals or from human activity.

Contaminants that may be present in source water include:

- (A) Microbial contaminants, such as viruses and bacteria, which may come from sewage treatment plants, septic systems, agricultural livestock operations, and wildlife.
- (B) Inorganic contaminants, such as salts and metals, which can be naturally-occurring or result from urban stormwater runoff, industrial or domestic wastewater discharges, oil and gas production, mining, or farming.
- (C) Pesticides and herbicides, which may come from a variety of sources such as agriculture, urban stormwater runoff, and residential uses.
- (D) Organic chemical contaminants, including synthetic and volatile organic chemicals, which are by-products of industrial processes and petroleum production, and can also come from gas stations, urban stormwater runoff, and septic systems.
- (E) Radioactive contaminants, which can be naturally occurring or be the result of oil and gas production and mining activities.

In order to ensure that tap water is safe to drink, the USEPA prescribes regulations which limit the amount of certain contaminants in water provided by public water systems. The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) regulations establish limits for contaminants in bottled water, which must provide the same protection for public health.

If present, elevated levels of lead can cause serious health problems, especially for pregnant women and young children. Lead in drinking water is primarily from components associated with service lines and home plumbing. Madison Water Department is responsible for providing high quality drinking water, but cannot control the variety of materials used in plumbing components. When your water has been sitting for several hours, you can minimize the potential for lead exposure by flushing your tap for 30 seconds to 2 minutes before using water for drinking and cooking. If you are concerned about lead in your water, you may wish to have your water tested. Information on lead in drinking water, testing methods, and steps you can take to minimize exposure is available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline or at <http://www.epa.gov/safewater/lead>.

All drinking water, including bottled water, may reasonably be expected to contain at least small amounts of some contaminants. The presence of contaminants does not necessarily indicate that the water poses a health risk. More information about contaminants and potential health effects can be obtained by calling the Environmental Protection Agency's Safe Drinking Water Hotline at 1-800-426-4791.

Some people may be more vulnerable to contaminants in drinking water than the general population. Immuno-compromised persons such as persons with cancer undergoing chemotherapy, persons who have undergone organ transplants, people with HIV/AIDS or other immune system disorders, some elderly, and infants can be particularly at risk from infections. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. EPA/CDC guidelines on appropriate means to lessen the risk of infection by Cryptosporidium and other microbiological contaminants are available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline (800-426-4791).

In the table below, you may find unfamiliar terms and abbreviations. To help you better understand these terms we've provided the following definitions:

Maximum Contaminant Level or MCL: The highest level of a contaminant that is allowed in drinking water. MCLs are set as close to the MCLGs as feasible using the best available treatment technology.

Maximum Contaminant Level Goal or MCLG: The level of a contaminant in drinking water below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MCLGs allow for a margin of safety.

Maximum residual disinfectant level or MRDL: The highest level of a disinfectant allowed in drinking water. There is convincing evidence that addition of a disinfectant is necessary for control of microbial contaminants.

Maximum residual disinfectant level goal or MRDLG: The level of a drinking water disinfectant below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MRDLGs do not reflect the benefits of the use of disinfectants to control microbial contaminants.

Action Level (AL): The concentration of a contaminant that, if exceeded, triggers treatment or other requirements that a water system must follow.

Parts per million (ppm) or Milligrams per liter (mg/l) – one part by weight of analyte to 1 million parts by weight of the water sample.

Parts per billion (ppb) or Micrograms per liter (µg/l) – one part by weight of analyte to 1 billion parts by weight of the water sample.

Picocurie per liter (pCi/L) – measure of the radioactivity in water.

The state allows us to monitor for some contaminants less than once per year because the concentration of these contaminants does not change frequently. Some of our data, though representative, are more than one year old.

The church office hours are 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m., Monday - Friday. The office phone number is 973-2547 or you can reach the church secretary by email at 1stbaptistoffice@gmail.com. We also have a website, madisonfbc.net, that is regularly updated. Our pastor can be reached at gabekrell@yahoo.com. Jim Carey, our music minister can be reached at muzicman123@gmail.com.

After the prelude, welcome and prayer, Bro. Jim led us in a time of praise and worship. We honored our graduates during this time. Honorees included Mikeshia Arnold, Connor Ginn, Bud Hall, Alisann Parks all from Madison County High School; Brooke Kinsley and Josh Woods from Aucilla Christian Academy; Kelsey McGriff, FSU; Chelstie Kinsley, NFCC; and Kristin Finney, Valdosta State University. CONGRATULATIONS to all of these GRADUATES!

The children, preschool-grade 2, were dismissed to children's worship. We appreciate the faithfulness of those volunteers who lead this group each week. The worship choir sang a song, "Whispering Hope, Wonderful Peace Medley," in memory of Bro. Jim's Grandmother. It was a fitting tribute. The title for this week's sermon was "The Fire." Bro. Gabe challenged the graduates and congregation with verses from 2 Timothy 2:14-15 NKJV "Remind them of these things, charging them before the Lord not to strive about words to no profit, to the ruin of the hearers. Be diligent to present yourself approved to God, a worker who does not need to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." We need to remember that Paul was writing to his son in the faith and wanting to remind him of some important truths. Bro. Gabe compared out lives to being a torch. Each life is a solitary flame from God to parents and then to us. Set a fire in your life. Burn down self. Keep the main thing, the main thing! Don't get caught up in meaningless debates. Be a diligent worker for God so you won't have to be ashamed when presenting yourself before God. Study so you can rightly divide or accurately interpret the Word of God.

Fish Fry to honor the Senior Men/Ladies Sunday school classes...The Outdoorsmen SS Class is hosting a fish fry for the senior men/ladies Sunday school classes. The event will be held at the church fellowship hall on Thursday, May 30th at noon. Please respond to the church office or to Archie & Patsy Davis at 971-5779, if you are going to attend.

Disciple Now Weekend ~ June 28-30...The Disciple Now Retreat will be held at Cherry Lake for students grade 6 through college. Guest speakers and lots of wonderful activities for those attending are in the making. Cost and further information will be announced at a later date. Mark your calendars.

Mother's Day Offering... The Florida Baptist Children's Homes have worked since 1904 to provide safe, stable Christian homes for boys and girls who have been neglected, abandoned, orphaned and abused. Please join in our goal to create a world where no child is left alone. Throughout the month of May you will have the opportunity to give beyond your local tithe to support this fine organization.

Thank you...from Les Parks for all the support he and the team have received from First Baptist. It is with this support that they are able to help get the camp ready for the children in Alaska. It is a great opportunity for which he is grateful. Please keep this group in your prayers that they may have God's hand of protection over them and lives may be changed. When you read this, the team still has another week in Alaska. Do your part daily through prayer support. As a side note, David and Christy Bass Adams and Carter are serving with this group. Christy grew up in First Baptist.

First Baptist Choirs ~ Yard Sale ~ Saturday, June 29th...The Sanctuary and JOY choirs are holding a large yard sale from 8:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. for the purpose of raising money for the purchase of new music. We need items to be donated for the yard sale. Now's a good time to clean out some of your gently used clutter and put these items to good use. Remember, "One man's trash is another man's treasure."

Bro. Gabe issued a challenge to the graduates and the rest of us to "read the Bible" through. Here's the plan: First, get a good study Bible and one that you don't mind highlighting. Begin reading five chapters a week in the New Testament and whenever your study Bible refers back to an Old Testament book, highlight that verse in the New and Old Testaments. By doing this highlighting, you will have referenced the most Old Testament books quoted: Genesis, Deuteronomy, Psalms, and Isaiah. Finish reading the New Testament then read the Old Testament through the lens of the New Testament. Will you take the challenge? See you Sunday morning for Sunday school at 9:45 a.m. where we have classes for nursery through senior adults. Worship begins at 11:00 a.m. when we will honor the Lord with songs of praise, prayers, offerings, and the spoken word.
