Former Cowboy Suits Up For National Title Game

By Jacob Bembry
Greene Publishing, Inc.

Former Madison County High School Cowboy and fifth year senior defensive lineman for Florida State, Jacobbi McDaniel, will suit up for his last game as a Seminole in the national championship game in Pasadena, Calif. Hailing from Greenville, McDaniel had 26 tackles, including 13 solo tackles and 13 assists. He also had an interception in the game against the Florida Gators.

McDaniel is trying to be one of the elite players in the nation who have won a state championship in high school and a national championship in college. The national championship game against Auburn will be broadcast on ESPN on Monday, Jan. 6, beginning at 8 p.m.

Man Charged With Introduction Of Contraband Into A Jail

Carlton Davis

A man was charged with introduction of contraband into a jail facility after he had been arrested for trespassing on Christmas Eve.

According to a Madison Police Department report, Cpl. Eric Gilbert was leaving a call at Madison Heights when he saw a black male walking in front of one of the buildings.

Gilbert made contact with Carlton Davis, 52, and asked him if he was supposed to be at the complex and Davis answered, "No."

Gilbert then asked Davis' name and date of birth and checked with dispatch about an active trespass warning, which was confirmed.

Gilbert placed Davis under arrest and transported him to the Madison County Jail, where he turned him over to Booking Officer

FHP Actively Seeking Suspect In Hit And Run Death

By Jacob Bembry
Greene Publishing, Inc.

No arrests have been made in the hit and run that claimed the life of 22-year-old Chad O'Quinn on Christmas Eve. O'Quinn was headed north on Highway 53 South riding a motorcycle when a 2002 Ford F-150 pickup hit him. The two people in the car got out and fled on foot. O'Quinn was pronounced dead at the scene. According to Florida Highway Patrol Sgt. Aaron Stephens, one of the suspects has been identified and FHP is actively seeking him.

If you know the whereabouts of the suspect, please call the FHP at (850) 410-3066 or the Madison County Sheriff's Office at (850) 973-4001.

The Florida Highway Patrol is actively seeking a suspect in the hit and run death of 22-year-old Chad O'Quinn, who was killed Christmas Eve on State Road 53 South when his motor scooter was hit by a Ford F150 pickup truck. The suspect and another person fled on foot.

Squabble Causes Crash

A wreck occurred after a man reportedly hit and pushed a woman. Both were seriously injured in the crash.

By Jacob Bembry
Greene Publishing, Inc.

Two people were seriously injured after the driver of a 2004 Ford Mustang reportedly hit and shoved his passenger on Friday, Dec. 27.

According to a

Florida Highway Patrol report, Aaron C. Salinias, 28, was traveling west on Interstate 10, punching, pushing and slapping passenger Brittany C. Ransdeel, 23, of Deming, N.M., with his hands.

Ransdeel advised the driver lost control of the Mustang, traveled northwest across the paved shoulder and onto the grass sloped shoulder.

At the base of the slope, the front of the car collided with a tree, coming to rest at the point of impact facing northwest.

Both Salinias and Ransdeel were taken to Tallahassee Memorial Hospital with serious injuries.

A four-year-old passenger was not injured in the crash.

Pawnshop Owner To Be Sentenced

By Jacob Bembry
Greene Publishing, Inc.

The owner of Gunslingers pawn shop in Madison will be sentenced on Feb. 13 in federal court in Tallahassee.

Chad Jones entered a guilty plea at the end of November 2013 to six different counts, including sell of a firearm to a convicted felon and sell of a firearm to a person under 21 years of age.

On five of the six counts that Jones pled guilty to, he can be sentenced to up to 10 years in prison, be fined $250,000 and be sentenced to up to three years community supervision for each count.

The sentencing will take place at 2 p.m. on Thursday, Feb. 13, at the U.S. Courthouse, located at 110 E. Park Avenue in Tallahassee.

Madison County Extension ServiceSet A New Year's Goal To Increase Your Activity Level*Diann Douglas
Guest Columnist

Dropping a few pounds and getting more exercise is at the top of the resolution list for the New Year. All too often, we start out with a lot of enthusiasm, only to forget about any change by the end of January.

The key to success is to start out small and try a variety of activities to keep you active and moving. Short bursts of activity throughout the day have proven to be an effective way to get physical activity into your daily routine and help with weight control. Here are a few strategies to consider:

Walk or ride a bike to work if possible, or park your car as far as possible from the door.

During the day at work, take exercise breaks instead of coffee breaks. Take the stairs up and down a few flights or take a short walk outside.

If you are a morning person, get up a little earlier in the morning to fit in a 30-minute brisk walk in your neighborhood. You may want to ask a friend, neighbor or spouse to join you. Evening walkers may find it easier during the winter months to walk during the lunch time hour for daylight.

Lift weights. Resistance training is critical for maintaining lean body mass throughout our lives. Since muscle tissue is more metabolically active than fat tissue, the leaner you are, the more calories you burn at rest, or sitting at a desk. Start with two or three exercises and don't overdo it. If you are a beginner, use one to two-pound weights. Don't have weights? One-pound cans of food can be used and will spare you the cost of purchasing equipment.

Turn off the TV. There is a direct relationship between hours of television watched and percent body fat. When you do watch TV, work on an exercise and stretching routine.

Make your calories count. If you snack during the day, choose foods that are low in calories and high in nutrients. Instead of candy and chips, munch on apples and baby carrots. As we get older, and especially if we are physically inactive, we really can't afford to eat foods that deliver a lot of calories, but few nutrients. Make sure the majority of the foods you eat are contributing to your health and fitness.

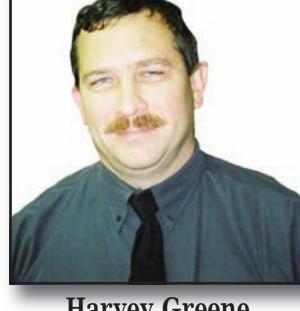

Enjoy dessert on occasion, just serve yourself smaller portions. You'll be satisfied with less if you eat from smaller, but attractive dishes.

Think your drink. Most people add a lot of extra calories each day drinking soda and sweetened drinks. Try drinking more water; consume fewer soft drinks and sweet tea. Choose unsweetened beverages and add a non-calorie sweetener. Go easy on alcoholic beverages too – they are loaded with calories.

Give yourself time. Schedule regular physical activity into your life just as you would any important meeting. Think of healthy habits as an investment in your life and a contribution to your productive, healthy future.

Small changes add up to big health benefits over the entire year. Adopt one or two of these strategies and when they become a habit, add one or two more. You will be pleased with the results.

Something To Think About
By Harvey GreeneTalk The Talk Then Walk The Walk*Harvey Greene
Guest Columnist

When I was a young lad, we used to have a saying that said, "If you're gonna talk the talk, you need to walk the walk." Obviously, it means that if you believe in something enough to speak out about it, you should act the part as well. If you say you believe a certain way, then your actions should exemplify that belief.

We all like to think we do this. Everyone believes they are "Walking their Walk," But how close are we really? How close does our everyday life match up with our beliefs?

So many times I've heard, "Well I don't mind helping out people really in need; I just don't want to support lazy people." I don't have a problem with that, but my question is -- How many times HAVE you helped out someone in need? When was the last time you donated money or items to something like the Boy Scouts or the Shriners? How much did you actually donate to the victims in the Philippines, or Katrina, or 9/11? When was the last time that you for real, took money out of your own pocket and gave it to someone else simply to help them?

Poverty is wrong. We all know this. The big corporations get richer and richer every day while the common worker gets poorer and poorer. We all say this is wrong, and we believe it, and justly so. But yet we turn around and walk right back into Walmart, and we help them to keep it going. "But they're the cheapest." Of course they are. They are one of the worst employers in the nation. That's why their prices are so low; they pay jack squat for salary and benefits. And every single dollar you spend there says, "Great job! Keep it up!"

Our government is no longer running this country the way it should. We know it; we say it all the time. But what are we doing about it? If you truly believe in your party, Democrats or Republicans, whichever it may be -- I don't mean that you think they are the least bad of the two -- I mean you honestly believe your team is correct, then that's fine; that's your talk.

But if you think they are both screwed up, and yet you keep voting on them anyways, then it is no longer their fault, it is yours.

But voting on a third party candidate or joining the "No one gets reelected until it's fixed" won't help unless everyone does it. Well, duh!

But one person boycotting shopping at those places won't make a dent unless a lot of people do it. Well, duh!

But I can't save everyone in the Philippines or Jamaica or fund a whole Shriners hospital; it takes a lot of people.

And at the risk of sounding redundant -- Well, duh!

Everything has to start small. One person CAN make a difference.

Did you know that 20 percent of people in America are worried about whether they will have a next meal? 20 percent! Really? That is horrendous.

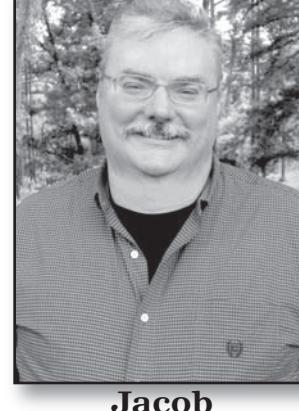

I challenge you to drive down to Tampa and walk into the waiting room of the Shriners Hospital. Just sit in the waiting room for a while and watch the children that are going in and out of that place. Did you know that Shriners Hospitals are run ENTIRELY by donations from people like you?

Did you know that a mere five dollars can buy several meals for someone in the Philippines? Or a box of bandages for a nursing home in Jamaica? Twenty-five dollars can buy the postage to mail a box of donated clothes to a whole family.

All of these things need more than just you. Assuredly. But none of them can ever happen without people stepping up and saying, "I don't care if I'm the only one. This is what I believe, and I'm going to do it."

I'm not asking you to change your beliefs. They are yours; you know what you really believe. I'm merely asking that if you Talk the Talk, then "Walk the Walk."

"Think About It."

Jacob's LadderThe Rain Of Jesus' Grace*Jacob Bembry
Columnist

You couldn't say it rained the morning after Christmas last week. Instead of rain, it was a mist that fell. When the mist fell on the bald patches on my head though, I was reminded that it was indeed rain – cold rain. The misty rain broadcast hints of colder days and frigid nights that lay ahead.

In the winter months, rain can turn into ice and, on rare occasions in north Florida, it can turn into snow. Most of the time, if it comes, it will just be in flurries which melt at the touch of a warm human hand or it melts as it falls on the ground. Sometimes, and this is the rarest of all in north Florida, it can become fine powdery snow which shows up like an uninvited guest at your house, takes your favorite easy chair and remote control, and makes himself at home. You welcome the guest anyway, though, like your favorite uncle and you welcome the snow because it offers a change of scenery for the bleak, barren landscape outside your windows.

In the spring and summer, rain can have a positive effect as it pours down, watering crops, helping the water level rise and offering flowers a chance to get their gulf of liquid sunshine.

Rain can also have an adverse effect, though. It can cause floods and storms can cause damages and loss of lives.

Rain can be bad and it can be good. The Bible tells us that it "rains on the just and the unjust alike." What that tells me is that bad things are going to happen to good people, and to bad people, and that good things are going to happen to bad people, and to good people. That's life.

The one thing that God promises the just person, who is saved by the blood of Jesus Christ, is eternal life. The unjust person – the one who is not saved by the blood of Jesus – is promised eternal damnation. God doesn't want anyone to be damned. If you repent of your sins and ask Jesus into your heart, He is faithful and just to forgive you of your sins. That goes for everyone, whether they are good-hearted people or just plain rotten to the core.

Come experience the rain of Jesus'

Essay From 1965, Credited To Radio Commentator Paul Harvey

If I Were The Devil

If I were the devil ... if I were the prince of darkness, I would want to engulf the whole world in darkness.

I'd have a third of its real estate and four-fifths of its population; I would not be happy until I had seized the ripest apple on the tree — thee!

I would set about, however necessary, to take over the United States. I'd subvert the churches first, and I would begin with a campaign of whispers.

With the wisdom of a serpent, I would whisper to you as I whispered to Eve: "Do as you please." To the young, I would whisper that the Bible is a myth. I would convince the children that man created God instead of the other way around. I'd confide that what's bad is good and what's good is "square."

And I would tell teachers to let those students run wild. And before you knew it, you'd have drug-sniffing dogs and metal detectors at every schoolhouse door.

Within a decade, I'd have prisons overflowing and judges promoting pornography.

Soon, I would evict God from the courthouse and the schoolhouse and then from the houses of Congress.

Then, I'd get organized. I'd educate authors on how to make lurid literature exciting so that anything else would appear dull and uninteresting.

I'd peddle narcotics to whom I could. I'd sell alcohol to ladies and gentlemen of distinction. I'd tranquilize the rest with pills.

If I were the devil, I'd soon have families at war with themselves, churches at war with themselves, and nations at war with themselves until each, in its turn, was consumed. And with promises of higher ratings, I'd have mesmerizing media fanning the flames.

If I were the devil, I'd make the symbol of Easter an egg and the symbol of Christmas a bottle. If I were the devil, I'd take from those who have and give to those who wanted until I had killed the incentive of the ambitious. What do you bet I could get whole states to promote gambling as a way to get rich?

I would caution against "extremes" in hard work, in patriotism and in moral conduct. I'd convince the young that marriage is old-fashioned, that swinging is more fun, and that what you see on television is the way to be and gambling as the way to get rich. And, thus, I could undress you in public and lure you into bed with diseases for which there are no cures.

In other words, if I were the devil, I'd just keep right on doing what he's doing.

Thank You

Thank you for allowing me to serve as a city commissioner for District 3. You have my continued commitment to be a faithful public servant.

My vision is for Madison to be recognized as a community, which demonstrates compassion and justice for all. We can achieve this vision by working together for the people and businesses of the community.

I encourage each of us to remember that relationships are important. We can disagree without being disagreeable. Public service is a public trust. The people who are government's "customers" are knowledgeable, eloquent and discerning in their views on priorities and service delivery. Listening to the public is not only a responsibility but a valuable, illuminating and productive exercise.

Father And Son
Escape Death
From Crocodile

In Zimbabwe, Africa, a father and his 11-year-old son were injured, but escaped death from a crocodile while attempting to cross the Nyaitengwa River. Tafadzwa Kachere said he and his son, Tapiwa were crossing the river when he heard his son scream for help. Tafadzwa jumped into the river and jumped onto the back of the crocodile and began poking reeds into the croc's mouth until it released the boy. The crocodile then turned to the father who fought with the croc until they were out of the water and the crocodile released his hold on the father's hand. Tapiwa's left leg had to be amputated and his father is seeking help to buy an artificial limb for his son. "I appeal to well-wishers for assistance in the purchase of an artificial leg for my son. He still wants to go to school and up to now he still thinks he will get his leg back," Tafadzwa said. "We lied to him that the leg was temporarily being removed for treatment purposes and I do not know how to break the news to him."

Cast Off Christmas Trees Recycled Into Beer

In Canada, a brewery company has figured out a way to turn Christmas trees into profit. Garrison Brewing Company in Halifax has started producing spruce beer using castaway Christmas trees. Garrison brew master Daniel Girard said he grew up hearing tales about his grandfather's spruce beer and decided to work on it and see how a spruce beer would be made by settlers' years ago. Brian Titus, the president of Garrison Brewing said, "You know, just some wonderful aromas come off it. It feels like you're out in a winter evening, walking through the woods." The spruce beer is potent and is traditionally made with spruce sprigs, fir twigs, malt, blackstrap molasses, dates and hops. Demand for the beer is high.

Botched Circumcision Results In Surgery And Lawsuit

In Pittsburgh, a botched Bris ceremony results in Rabbi Mordechai Rosenberg, being sued for severing a newborn during the baby's circumcision at the Tree of Life Synagogue. An emergency microsurgery that took eight hours was needed for the baby along with six blood transfusions. Attorney David Llewellyn said, "There's virtually no regulation of this any place in the U.S. that I know of. I think the government probably should require some sort of training if this is going to be done." Rabbi Rosenberg said he is trained in the art of circumcision and that the incident was "a tragic accident" and a "horrible situation." The American Academy of Pediatrics reports that one in every 500 newborn boys experience complications as a result

Besides New Year's resolutions, taxes are likely the subject many people are starting to think about this time of year. The New Year probably has a lot of people thinking about taxes. When it comes to property taxes, this is the time period when residential and business property is appraised, and assessed at a certain value subject to taxation.

Kicking off the New Year with some helpful information in this area, the Madison County Property Appraiser's Office will be the guest speaker at the 55 Plus Club's January meeting, Jan. 8, noon, at the United Methodist Cooperative Ministries Center.

The presentation will focus on appraisal issues and explain how the property appraiser's office determines the value of your home or business, as well as discussing some new legislation that might benefit homeowners.

The 55 Plus Club is free and open to all seniors 55 and older. It meets the second Wednesday of each month at noon at the UMCM Center on the corner of NE Dill St. and Colin Kelly Highway, about five miles north of town, near Hanson. Lunch is provided by one of the Methodist Churches on a rotating basis, and everything is free. Just show up, bring friends and enjoy a good lunch and a guest presentation each month on topics of interest to seniors.

For more information about the 55 Plus Club or any other UMCM outreach ministry, or for directions to the UMCM center, contact Deborah Brown at (850) 929-4938.

Keeping Your New Year's Resolutions

By Lynette Norris
Greene Publishing, Inc.

Here it is again, in the words of John Lennon,

"another year's over, and a new one's just begun."

New Year's Day is a time of taking stock, of looking around and resolving to make changes, to better ourselves, improve our circumstances, or maybe just be nicer people.

We start out with the best of intentions, but by Ground Hog Day, most of those good intentions have bitten the dust.

We could give up and quit trying, or maybe, with a little help from our friends, a support system and some expert advice, give our resolutions a fighting chance of working out.

Here are some of the most popular resolutions in the United States, grouped together by subject, along with the web sites offering help and advice on sticking to them.

HEALTH

<http://rethinkingdrinking.niaaa.nih.gov/default.asp>

The National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism's "Rethinking Drinking" site offers information on the actual alcohol content of many popular "light" beers, a cocktail content calculator for determining the strength of your drink, a list of warning signs of risky drinking behavior, strategies for cutting down, support for quitting and more. You can find help, whether you want to go the tee-totaler route or simply manage your alcohol consumption more wisely.

Quit smoking:
<http://smokefree.gov/>

Smokefree.gov offers strategies for quitting, whether you are ready to quit today, or just preparing to quit in stages. It also offers tips on how to deal with cravings and slip-ups, as well as support through live chat instant messaging, texting, or 1-800 QUIT NOW (784-8669). Madison also offers smoking cessation support through the health department and smoking cessation classes taught by Preston Matthews.

Eat healthy:
<http://www.choosemyplate.gov/>

Sample menus and recipes, a Supertracker to help you keep track of what you eat, a series on nutrition education, meal plans tailored to different age groups and demographics, and much more.

Get fit/ Lose weight:
http://www.cdc.gov/physicalactivity/everyone/get_active/index.html and http://www.win.niddk.nih.gov/publications/for_life.htm

Getting fit and losing weight are closely related subjects, and these two websites, one from the Center for Disease Control and the other from the National Institute of Health WIN (Weight Information Network) program, offer sample physical activity calendars, fitness videos and discussions on various physical activity topics.

The WIN website discusses how to calculate body mass index, how obesity affects overall health as well as plans and strategies for not only losing weight but keeping it off for life.

Managing stress:
<http://healthfinder.gov/HealthTopics/Category/health-conditions-and-diseases/heart-health/managing-stress>

Stress is unavoidable, and in the words of a recent guest speaker at a local Madison civic club, "Stress will eat you up." if it isn't managed properly. This U.S. Department of Health and Human Services website, part of the Healthfinder.gov series, discusses ways to get a handle on stress before it gets a handle on us, as well as offering information on available resources in your area.

PERSONAL GOALS

Reduce, re-use, recycle:
<http://www2.epa.gov/recycle>

Learn how to be more environmentally friendly through your individual choices/actions and how those choices affect the environment and help your community.

Take a trip:
<http://www.usa.gov/Citizen/Topics/Travel.shtml>

Whether you've always wanted to see the great American West, or travel abroad, this website can help you with information on air travel, rail travel, travel safety and historical sites. If you're going out of the country, there is information on passport requirements, tourist safety and services offered by American embassies abroad.

Good luck, and have a Happy New Year.

The Bush Wealth Advantage

Our column, "The Bush Wealth Advantage" is our way of giving back to the community with all sorts of insights, relevant news, and practical wealth planning strategies.

Beyond Retirement: What About Your Other Goals?

In addition to saving for retirement, there may be several other major financial goals you'll need to juggle in a lifetime.

Let's say that at the age of 25 you earned $35,000. If your salary increased at the average historical rate, you'd have earned nearly $2 million in total by the time you were 65. That might sound like a lot -- until you begin thinking about all the financial goals you'll need to juggle in a lifetime, including buying a home and paying for your child's education, while funding your own retirement.

If managed wisely, your money could potentially go a long way. It's really all about putting a plan in place and sticking to it. These tips may help get you started.

Get a jump on all your goals
You've read in these pages before about the value of starting early on retirement savings, even if you can only invest a little each month. The same goes for college savings and other goals. Even a $100 a month investment for college could potentially leave you with about $36,000 in 10 years, assuming an average annual return of 8% -- a good start that you can build on as your income grows.

Set aside a slice of pay hikes
As your income rises over the course of your career, it's easy to slip into a pattern of "living up" to your means; that is, spending that extra pay you didn't have before on daily living expenses. Instead, consider setting a quota for yourself: earmark a predetermined portion of every pay hike for your savings goals. You may want to apply the same rule to other windfalls, like an unexpected bonus or tax return.

Use the right tools for the job
Just as your employer-sponsored retirement plan offers a tax-advantaged opportunity to set aside money for your later years, certain vehicles, such as 529 college savings plans, provide potentially attractive tax breaks for college savers. Minimizing the taxes you have to pay up front on investments and earnings gives you the chance to make the most of compounding over time.

Finally, whatever your particular financial goals may be, keep in mind that minimizing debt is a timeless, indispensable strategy for establishing personal financial balance.

Barrington Irving Comes To MCCS

Barrington Irving, youngest pilot to fly solo around the globe, stands in front of a painting of the world, created by MCCS students.

Greene Publishing, Inc.

Madison County Central School was privileged to host a very special guest this month. Barrington Irving, who spoke to the middle schoolers, earned a spot in Guinness World records, June of 2007, by becoming the youngest person, as well as the first African American, time working with students, earning him a "Trailblazer Award" from the organization. Irving graduated magna cum laude from an aeronautical science program and founded an educational non-profit organization. All this, Irving accomplished by the time he was 28 years old. In 2012, Irving was named as one of National Geographic's "Emerging Explorers."

Barrington Irving came, along with all his achievements and recognitions, to talk to Madison students about seizing opportunities within the STEM (science, technology, engineering and math) disciplines. He used his inspirational story of how he rose above obstacles in his life to accomplish his dreams through academics and how every student there could realize their potential and become financially successful if that was their desire. Students were attentive as Irving made his presentation relevant by using success stories of kids in his programs. When he spoke of a super car built by middle school students, the auditorium began buzzing with excitement, which principal Dr. Willie Miles was attentive to and later revisited by asking Irving to come back to MCCS so that Madison students could also build a super car.

Irving's story begins in Jamaica, where he was born, but at six years of age moved with his family to Miami, into the inner city where he was surrounded by crime and poverty and relentlessly teased for his accent. As he became older, playing football became a strong positive in Irving's life; so much so that he thought it would be his avenue to success. When he was 15 years old, he was working inside his parent's bookstore when one of their customers, Captain Gary Robinson (a professional pilot) asked Irving if he had ever considered becoming a pilot. Irving's response was that he didn't think he was smart enough. The next day, Robinson gave Irving the opportunity to sit in the cockpit of the airplane he flew, and Irving said he was immediately hooked and it was the beginning of his inspiration.

After high school, Irving was offered a full football scholarship from the University of Florida, and to the discontent of his family, turned it down to follow his dream of becoming a pilot. Irving continued with his dream by eventually winning a scholarship to study aviation and inspiration for another dream took hold: flying solo around the world. When requesting sponsorship for the flight, he received over 50 rejection letters before convincing several aircraft manufacturers for donations of plane components. With sponsorship, Irving was able to build a single-engine Cessna 400; he appropriately named "Inspiration." With 30 dollars in his pocket, no weather radar and no de-icing system, but with the support of 300,000 kids who followed his flight around the world, Irving took off on his dream. After 97 days and 26 stops, Irving accomplished his flight around the world. He said what changed his life was when he stepped from the plane and saw so many young people watching and listening to him that it made him determined to give back using his time, knowledge and experience.

After the flight, Irving created a nonprofit, "Experience Aviation," in order to boost the numbers of youth in aviation and other science and math related careers. Middle and high school students attend summer and after-school programs where they work on hands-on-robotics projects and flight simulator challenges and also take field trips to major industries and corporations. In one of his programs, 60 students from failing schools built an airplane from scratch in just ten weeks and then watched Irving pilot the plane. Another project saw middle school students build a "super car" that Irving says goes faster than a Ferrari. "We want to create a one-of-a-kind opportunity for students to take ownership and accomplish something amazing," says Irving of his nonprofit. "Meaningful, real-world learning experiences fire up the neurons in kids' minds. If you don't do that, you've lost them. Purposeful, inspiring activities increase the chance they'll stay on that learning and career path. We've had one young lady receive a full scholarship to Duke University as a math major and several young men are now pilots, engineers and aircraft mechanics."

The next dream for Irving, in an attempt to reach even more students, is to transform a jet into a flying classroom that will circle the globe in three two-month trips that will be equipped with a web-based system to help instruct students in science, technology, engineering, math, geography, culture and history. During the nine-week journey, kids will be able to compete in solving problems that will range from protecting the environment to discovering a career path in STEM. Irving plans to call classrooms from the cockpit and broadcast live video from 45,000 feet; blog with students; collect atmospheric data; communicate with the International Space Station and wear a NASA body suit that transmits his heart rate, blood pressure and other vital signs.

In one of Irving's popular quotes, he says that kids want to be challenged and today too many of them are bored and uninspired. He wants to use aviation to "excite and empower a new generation to become scientists, engineers and explorers." Along with this goal, Barrington Irving gives kids some great advice to help them in finding their own inspiration. "Believe in yourself. Believe that you are talented, powerful and important and can make a difference in the world."

One of the many groups of students that flanked Irving after his presentation includes, from left to right, Ahyaua Jackson, Katherine Newsome, Octavius Davis and Tyrone Turner.

This week our time of praise included "Away in Manger" and "We Three Kings of Orient Are." The carols were "O Come, All Ye Faithful" and "Joy to the World." Shelly Smith sang, "Mary, Did You Know?" as our special and did a fabulous job. The worship choir did a selection, "Ding Dong Merrily on High," from the Christmas Cantata. Bro. Gabe's sermon, entitled, "Jesus as a Boy" was based on Luke 2:40-52: "So when they had performed all things according to the law of the Lord, they returned to Galilee, to their own city, Nazareth. And the Child grew and became strong in spirit, filled with wisdom; and the grace of God was upon Him. His parents went to Jerusalem every year at the Feast of the Passover. And when He was twelve years old, they went up to Jerusalem according to the custom of the feast. When they had finished the days, as they returned, the Boy Jesus lingered behind in Jerusalem. And Joseph and His mother did not know it; but supposing Him to have been in the company, they went a day's journey, and sought Him among their relatives and acquaintances. So when they did not find Him, they returned to Jerusalem, seeking Him. Now so it was that after three days they found Him in the temple, sitting in the midst of the teachers, both listening to them and asking them questions. And all who heard Him were astonished at His understanding and answers. So when they saw Him, they were amazed; and His mother said to Him, "Son, why have You done this to us? Look, Your father and I have sought You anxiously." And He said to them, "Why did you seek Me? Did you not know that I must be about My Father's business?" But they did not understand the statement, which He spoke to them. Then He went down with them and came to Nazareth, and was subject to them,
