County considers burn ban

By Mathew Pellegrino
mpellegrino@srpressgazette.com

The county looked at initiating an emergency burn ban amidst the dry weather conditions the region has been experiencing over the past several months. The goal is to avoid starting fires like the ones that started in Arizona. Santa Rosa County commissioners discussed the recent ban Escambia County had placed upon their citizens because of the weather and the recent action taken by the Department of Forestry to deny issuing burn permits until the region saw more rain.

County administrator Hunter Walker said the county has been in constant contact with DOF over the recent burn ban and spoke with them regarding action the county could take to avoid residents from burning without permits. "We need to continue to advise people not to burn given the humidity," Walker said. At the same time, Walker said the county should be cautious as to what they restrict. Farmers could be affected by the ban because they start burn piles on a constant basis, said County Commissioner Don Salter. "There is a citizen perception that the world is burning when you hear on the news that 93 percent of Florida is burning along with 400,000 acres in Arizona," Salter said. "Escambia imposed a no burn ban. This ban is not permitting them to burn." Residents are required to acquire a burn permit from the Department of Forestry to burn anything. On that permit, the resident must specify how much they plan on burning and when they plan on burning. Commission chairman Lane Lynchard said certain

JAY VOLUNTEER FIRE DEPARTMENT

IRS glitch causes local confusion

By Mathew Pellegrino
mpellegrino@srpressgazette.com

The IRS admitted to improperly filing the Jay Volunteer Fire Department tax return and placing them on a list that would have removed their tax exempt status.

A list that was released on June 9 alleged that the volunteer fire department did not file the proper paperwork with the IRS, which would have forced the IRS to take away their tax exempt status. In 2006, the Pension Protection Act was passed through Congress requiring most tax exempt organizations to file an annual report. Additionally, the law stated it would revoke the tax exempt status of any organizations that do not file their returns with the IRS after three consecutive years. According to an official IRS document released by Ann Brooks, Jay Volunteer Fire Department's Certified Public Accountant, the fire department filed its tax exempt status.

District kicks off pilot teacher evaluations

By Mathew Pellegrino
mpellegrino@srpressgazette.com

The Santa Rosa County School District is looking to make headway on the state required teacher assessments that have to be in place by the 2014-15 school year.

All year, administrators and school personnel have been coming up with an evaluation method that will focus on student test scores, student and parent surveys and administrative evaluations of teachers.

Leading up to the 2011-12 school year, all 86 administrators who will be giving the teacher evaluations will be trained on how to give the assessments and will watch training seminar videos on the new method the school is testing.

Lewis Lynn, Jr., the assistant superintendent for human resources for the district, said the district has gotten a head start on looking at how it can extradite the evaluations and, by doing so, can evaluate its own mistakes leading up to when the district must have a final plan of action with the state. "The state is requiring us to do our evaluation methods based on a research model," Lynn said. That model was drawn from the Dr. Robert Marzano evaluation method, a technique that was presented to the district's Race to the Top. The Marzano evaluation looks at ways the teachers can be confident in the material they present to their students and puts student achievements on the forefront. This will be important for teachers as they divvy up points with administrators and dive into the new

Valerie Jean Walker

1959-2011

Valerie Jean Walker passed away Sunday, June 12, 2011, after a long courageous battle with breast cancer. Her last days on earth were spent in Hospice care surrounded by her family and friends.

VALERIE JEAN WALKER

She was born April 27, 1959, in London, Ontario, Canada and although she loved her Canadian heritage she was proud to become an American citizen in 1995.

Her family moved to Rochester, NY in 1965, where she grew up and received her education until moving to Pensacola, FL in 1981. She married Edward Walker, III, and attended PJC and received her Associates Degree. She then proceeded to get her Bachelor of Science Degree in Cellular and Molecular Biology and followed it up with a Masters Degree in Cellular and Molecular Biology at UWF. She has taught Biology and Microbiology at PSC since her graduation until the end of the spring 2011 semester.

Valerie has always been a big friend of the outdoors. She loved plants and animals. She and her family spent many days boating and camping on the Blackwater River. They never passed a state park without stopping to explore and enjoy nature.

She volunteered with the Sea Turtle Monitoring Nesting Program through the National Park Service for 15 years, traveling to Pensacola Beach early every Saturday morning from May to September to look for and mark any new

She received both Silver and Gold Presidential Pins and Award Certificates.

She was preceded in death by her father, Edward Albert Dickerson.

She is survived by her husband, Edward Walker, III, her only son, Michael Walker (US Marines), and her friend for life, Donna Yoder (Gainesville, FL).

She is also survived by her brothers, Michael and Gary Dickerson (Rochester, NY), brother-in-law, William (Lori) Walker (Houston, TX), mother, Muriel Jones (Milton), grandmother, Evelyn Holditch (Canada), uncle, Donald Holditch (Canada), and several nieces, nephews, and cousins.

The family would like to thank the doctors, nurses, and hospital staff at Sacred Heart Hospital and Covenant Hospice for their loving care of Valerie and her family in her last days.

Valerie's wishes were that donations be made to the National Park Service, Jeanne Taylor, Gulf Island National Seashore, 1801 Gulf Breeze Parkway, Gulf Breeze, Fla., 32563.

Yes, my name is Frances, and I was wondering if someone could help me. I had a truck and lost a banquet table and a blue tent from out of the back of the truck. Someone didn't put the tailgate up. I will be happy to come and get the table and tent. Also, I lost my cellphone at Walmart.

Editor's note: If you have found Frances' tent, table or cellphone, call the office, and we will help you get in touch with her.

Friday, 1:08 p.m.

This is Larry. I have a question on the red light cameras when you are approaching Highway 90 on Glover Lane. Is it legal or illegal to turn right from Glover Lane when the light is red onto the acceleration lane if there is no traffic approaching?

Editor's note: You can legally turn right on red if there is no traffic approaching unless there is a sign that indicates it is not allowed at that particular intersection.

Friday, 12:38 p.m.

Hi, this is John. I have a question. We have a dog pound in Santa Rosa County, and they allow us to borrow the catchers. Friday at 12:30, I went to borrow a catcher and they asked me to come back on Monday. They are open on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. I don't understand. We are paying for a dog shelter and we are not able to use the equipment. What is happening with Santa Rosa County?

Thursday, 3 p.m.

Yeah, this is Tony in Pace. I have a daughter who goes to the high school. There was a fire at the high school last night at Pace and no fire alarm. My child was in school, and there was a fire and no fire alarm.

Thursday, 1:20 p.m.

My name is Robert. Does a registered sex offender have the right to fight for custody of their biological child? The law states they are not allowed at county parks, school and not allowed around other children. What gives them the right to fight for their biological children? Aren't the biological children at as much risk as a normal child? We need to make sure that some laws are passed to protect these kids. A registered sex offender should not be near their child.

Thursday, 12:11 p.m.

Good morning, this is Don in Pace. You need to quit complaining about the red light cameras. One might just save your life. It seems the only ones who are complaining are the ones who run red lights. I have a novel idea: Drive the posted speed limit, and you will be able to stop when the light changes without fear of being rear-ended. The department of motor vehicles states that you must have your vehicle under control at all times. This is not about money; it is about safety.

Wednesday, 11:10 p.m.

Hey, I heard a nudist camp is opening in Jay next month. I didn't know what people think about that.

Wednesday, 4:24 p.m.

This is for Joel Miller about Sarah Palin. I am tired of talking about Sarah Palin. She is not doing anything and is not running for any office. She made some mistakes, but she did get some things right as well. Joel Miller, where were you when President Obama was calling our corpsmen "corpsemen." I didn't see you making fun of him at that time. The press is giving him a free ride, and people think he is God's gift to America. You need to start looking at your own side.

Wednesday, 3:54 p.m.

This is George. Looking at your June 15 paper, you mention the soldiers of NAS Pensacola. Those are not soldiers; they are Navy men.

Wednesday, 2:22 p.m.

Yes, I would like to make a comment on the red light cameras. We have so many in the area concerned about these cameras. If you drive the speed limit and obey the law, then you have no reason to be concerned. And to the comment made by Catherine about the bypass, people do shop in downtown Milton, and there are businesses who thrive on the traffic. This is a great little town to live. People need to do their research before they talk. Thank you.

To make a short comment, call the Speak Out line at 623-5887.

CORRECTION

In a Saturday, June 18, article titled "Something you can't take away," Tommy Thurman was misidentified as a retired Naval 2nd Class Petty Officer. He is a disabled veteran but served in the Navy as a 2nd Class Petty Officer. Also, Thurman's sons did not serve in the military and are buried in a cemetery just outside of Whiting Field. Thurman noted that his father served in World War I, not World War II as noted in the story.

How will you celebrate NATIONAL POLLINATOR WEEK?

By Theresa Friday
Extension Faculty-Residential
Horticulture UF/IFAS
Santa Rosa County

Pollinators, such as bees, birds, bats and insects, play a crucial role in the production of most fruits and vegetables. Pollinators are so important that June 20-26, 2011 has been designated National Pollinator Week by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

About 1,000 of all pollinators are vertebrates such as birds, bats, and small mammals. Most pollinators (about 200,000 species) are beneficial insects such as flies, beetles, wasps, ants, butterflies, moths, and bees.

Some U.S. crops are 90 percent or more dependent on pollination. Some of these are almonds, apples, sweet cherries, melons, squash, cucumbers and blueberries. Furthermore, 35 percent of the world's food and beverage production, including chocolate and coffee, depends on pollination.

Threats

Pollinators are facing an increasing number of threats. The main threat is habitat loss, degradation and fragmentation. As native vegetation is replaced by roadways, crops and non-native gardens, pollinators lose the food and nesting sites that are necessary for their survival.

Pollinators that migrate, such as the monarch butterfly, face special challenges. If the distance between suitable habitat patches along their migration route is too great, weaker individuals may die during their journey.

The improper use of pesticides can also negatively impact pollinators and their habitats. Pesticides include products such as weed killers and insecticides, which are designed to prevent, destroy, repel or reduce pests such as insects, mice and other animals.

Pollinator gardens will help

The most obvious need for pollinators is a diversity of nectar and pollen sources. So help pollinators by planting a "pollinator garden." Consider the following when choosing plants for your garden:

- Choose plants that flower at different times of the year to provide nectar and pollen sources throughout the growing season.
- Plant in clumps, rather than single plants, to better attract pollinators.
- Provide a variety of flower colors and shapes to attract different pollinators.
- Whenever possible, choose native plants. Native plants will attract more native pollinators and can serve as larval host plants for some species of pollinators.

Excellent resource material from The Pollinator Partnership™/North American Pollinator Protection Campaign is available to help you design your pollinator garden. Go online to www.pollinator.org/guides.htm and find your ecoregion. Northwest Florida is in the "outer coastal plain mixed province" and our regional guide can be found online at <http://pollinator.org/PDFs/Guides/OuterCoastalrx7FINAL.pdf>. For more information, be sure to contact your local Extension Office.

Value native bees

Another way to help pollinators is to learn to identify and value bees. Apiarists, the professional title for bee scientists, estimate that one out of every three bites of food you eat is directly or indirectly pollinated by honey bees. With honey bee populations imperiled by the mysterious condition called colony collapse disorder, Florida residents should appreciate native bees for their role in the state's environment and economy.

Florida is home to more than 300 bee species, including some found nowhere else. About three-quarters of native species nest in the ground. People can attract native bees to their yards by clearing surface debris from areas with sandy, hard-packed earth. Native bees are particularly suitable for home gardens because they do not sting unless roughly handled.

Final thoughts

Anyone that has been stung by a bee probably remembers the experience. To some people, a sting is a life-threatening situation. Nevertheless, bees are important pollinators and pollinators are crucial to our food supply. So help the plight of the pollinator by allowing them to exist in our landscapes. Better yet, invite them in by planting a pollinator garden.

Lt. Col. Verda takes command of VT-6

Special to the Press Gazette

Cmdr. Sean Maybee turned over command of Training Squadron SIX to Lt. Col. Danny Verda on June 17, at the Naval Air Station Whiting Field auditorium. The guest speaker for the ceremony will be Col. James Grace, deputy commodore Training Air Wing FIVE.

During his fifteen-month tour as commanding officer, VT-6 flew over 20,000 mishap-free hours, and excelled in every area of Primary Flight Training while simultaneously transitioning to the new T-6B Texan II airframe. VT-6 exceeded both FY-09 and FY-10 pilot production goals and produced a total of 401 Student Military Aviators (SMAs). Under his leadership, the squadron reduced its average student time-to-train to less than 31.5 weeks, producing more quality SMAs in less time than any primary training squadron, all the while attaining the lowest advanced pipeline attrition rate in Training Air Wing 5.

Maybee also oversaw the squadron's plan to replace the T-34C Turbo Mentor aircraft with the T-6B Texan II. The unit front loaded 2011 T-34C mission accomplishment while instructor pilots were trained in the new aircraft. VT-6's goals were met or exceeded and the squadron successfully began its transition in earnest in April, with its first class of T-6B students.

A University of Michigan graduate, Maybee was commissioned through the Reserve Officer Training Corps. He earned his wings following flight training in Pensacola and Corpus Christi, Texas. Maybee served overseas tours with Fleet Air Reconnaissance Squadron TWO (VQ-2) in Spain, VQ-1 in Bahrain, as well as working on the staff for Commander United States Naval Forces Europe. Stateside, he also performed tours in Hawaii, Whidbey Island, Wash., and was an Executive Liaison Agent for the Secretary of Defense and Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

His final tour before transferring to Training Squadron SIX was as the Deputy, Military Pay and Compensation Policy Branch for Deputy Chief of Naval Operations.

As the executive officer, Verda helped to oversee the transition of the squadron from the venerable T-34C to the T-6B training aircraft. As the commanding officer, Verda will continue the transition process. He came to TRAWING-5 from the 22nd Marine Expeditionary Unit where he was the executive officer of the II Marine Expeditionary Force. Verda has supported Operation Iraqi Freedom, Operation Unified Response (humanitarian assistance to Haiti), and been forward deployed in the European Command and Central Command areas of operation. He is a CH-46E helicopter pilot with more than 3,000 flight hours. A former instructor pilot in the T-34C from 1997 to 2000 with VT-6, he returned to the squadron in May 2010.

Cmdr. Donald Jamiola will take over for Verda as the executive officer for the squadron.

Judge Swanson, Commissioner Ray appointed to Court of Appeals

Special to the Press Gazette

Governor Rick Scott announced Friday the appointment of Judge Ronald V. Swanson, of Pensacola, and Commissioner Stephanie Williams Ray, of Tallahassee, to the First District Court of Appeal. "The First DCA is one of the State's most important courts, and with these two appointments the Court gains jurists with a deep intellect, an abiding commitment to judicial restraint, and great professional and personal integrity," Governor Scott said.

Judge Swanson, 63, has served on the First Judicial Circuit Court since 2003, and prior to that served on the Santa Rosa County Court from 2000 to 2003. Previously, he was an assistant state attorney from 1995 to 2000. From 1975 to 1995, Judge Swanson served in the United States Navy Judge Advocate General's Corps. He earned a bachelor's degree from Florida State University, a law degree from the University of Florida College of Law and a Master of Laws from George Washington University.

"With eleven years on the bench, and a long and distinguished career as a Navy JAG, Judge Swanson will bring integrity, wisdom, and experience to the First DCA," Governor Scott said. "He has a proven record of judicial conservatism, and a reputation for considering cases with respect and patience, coming to each decision in a firm but fair manner. As a well-respected member of the Pensacola community, Judge Swanson will bring that community's values and perspectives with him to the bench. I am confident he will prove to be a wonderful addition to this important court."

Commissioner Ray, 41, has served as the Chairwoman of the Florida Public Employees Relations Commission since 2008. As Chairwoman, Commissioner Ray has led the panel that issues final orders in the State's labor and employment disputes and has served as the chief executive and administrative officer of the agency. From 2004 to 2007, Commissioner Ray held several leadership roles at the Florida State University College of Law, including Associate Dean for Administration, Assistant Dean for Academic Affairs, and Director of Career Placement. Prior to that, Commissioner Ray was in private practice at Ausley & McMullen P.A. She earned her bachelor's degree from Vanderbilt University and her law degree, with honors, from Florida State University, where she was a member of the Law Review.

"Throughout her career, Commissioner Ray has demonstrated an ability to analyze complex legal issues while also taking on significant management responsibilities," Governor Scott said. "Her record of decisions as a PERC Commissioner is impressive and reflects respect for and adherence to the rule of law. She has an abiding commitment to ensuring that judges say what the law is, rather than what it should be, and I am confident that Commissioner Ray will have a long and distinguished tenure on the First DCA."

Judge Swanson will fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Judge Peter D. Webster, and Commissioner Ray will fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Judge Charles J. Kahn Jr.

Santa Rosa County Emerging Young Professionals

ABIGAIL (ABBY) MORRIS WIGGINS
Business Development Officer, United Bank

Some say leaders are born, while others insist they are simply developed through cultivated training and the influence of their environment.

In the case of young banking executive Abigail (Abby) Morris Wiggins, it seems there's something to be said for both.

A Bachelor of Arts degree in organizational communications from UWF prepared her for a promising career with United Bank where she began as a Branch Specialist in its Milton office. She advanced to Operations Supervisor and is currently serving as Business Development Officer there.

While at UWF she was a member of the Alpha Delta Pi Sorority. In Milton she became a member of the Milton Rotary Club in 2007 and is now serving as its President. The Milton club was recently named the 2010-2011 District Club of the Year out of 50 chapters spanning an area from Lake City to Pensacola. It is with becoming pride that she says, "This would probably go down as my biggest accomplishment thus far!"

Abby is a member of the Santa Rosa Young Professionals and now serves on its Board of Directors. In addition she is a Board member of the Santa Rosa County Chamber of Commerce and currently serves as a Chamber Ambassador, and is on its Golf Classic Committee.

She's a graduate of Leadership Santa Rosa, Class 23, and is affiliated with the Pensacola Alpha Delta Pi Alumni Association. She serves on the Santa Rosa Medical Center's Woman's Advisory Council and the Ronald McDonald House.

"My husband, Curtis, and I (and our lab, Hank) live in Cantonment," she says, "and the family attends First Baptist Church there." Abby is rather versatile in her recreational habits, too. She not only enjoys traveling and cooking, but quail hunting with her family as well! And FSU football rounds out the challenge!"

Observers see her as quite an accomplished young lady to have advanced so far so soon in her career. And by her own assessment, she's committed. "I will always be involved in my community," she says. "I was raised by parents and grandparents that were involved in their community, and I don't know any other way!"

Congratulations to another rising star!

NAS Whiting health clinic moved to temporary spaces

Special to the Press Gazette

The Naval Branch Health Clinic at Naval Air Station Whiting Field moved on June 2 to a temporary location on base while the main clinic building undergoes extensive heating and air conditioning upgrades.

The temporary modular building is across from the Navy Exchange and Commissary onboard NAS Whiting Field. The renovations are expected to take up to 15 months to complete.

"The relocation period may require a partial interruption of some of our medical and dental services," says NBHC Whiting Field Officer-in-Charge, Cmdr. Chris Mino. "However, since the majority of the moves will occur during night-time and weekend hours, the impact on services should be minimal."

The set up for the pharmacy will require additional staging; and access might be unavailable for a period of time. Patrons are advised to plan ahead for all of their prescription needs.

For more information about the clinic's relocation, call 850-623-7508, ext. 34, or 850-623-2505.

Medical care services will be available through the Central Appointments call-in service at 850-505-7171. NBHC Whiting Field will also post schedules and other relocation information on its Facebook page at www.facebook.com/#!/whiting-fieldclinic.

The address of the temporary clinic is Naval Branch Health Clinic, 7151 USS Wasp Street, Building 3155, NAS Whiting Field, Milton, Fla. 32570-6155. Clinic telephone numbers will remain the same. The main number is 850-623-7508.

Portable Electric GENERATORS

Portable electric generators are useful during temporary power outages, but, if used improperly, can be hazardous and even deadly.

Connecting a generator directly to your home's wiring should only be done by a qualified licensed electrician. If done improperly, this can cause back feeding along power lines and electrocute anyone coming in contact with them.

NEVER use a generator in enclosed or partially enclosed spaces. Generators can produce high levels of carbon monoxide very quickly.

OUR VIEW

An error in justice

Last week, the Santa Rosa Press Gazette covered the sentencing of a man who was found guilty of, among other things, a DUI Manslaughter charge. During the defense's portion of the sentencing, Defense Attorney Craig Vigodsky took issue with a couple of things that he said seemed alarming. First, Vigodsky entered the driving record of the deceased. Vigodsky then opined the man would be alive today if he had been in a car instead of a motorcycle.

Well, Vigodsky must remember a few things: riding a motorcycle is not illegal and the deceased was not on trial.

The man has a right to a fair trial and an aggressive defense, but even an educated man like Vigodsky should have known better than to take a verbal stab at a dead motorcyclist.

Motorcyclists have just as much right to the road as anyone else.

Riding a motorcycle does not make you less of a citizen.

Our society has allowed justice to try the victim as a defense to the crime.

We're not sure when this new trend began, but it does seem the "thing to do these days." We refer to the increasingly popular trend of attempting to shame people for doing things we don't like ... even though those "things" are currently perfectly legal.

Ever see how people pounce on smokers?

People immediately begin feigning a cough, waving their arms and acting as if they can't breathe. They then make ugly faces at the person lighting up and, sometimes, talk about how rude they are to light up (even though both parties are outside.) On behalf of smokers, we're sorry. We know smoking is not good for anyone's health. We know smoke stinks. We know all of this, but the fact of the matter is smoking is currently 100 percent legal, so these folks are doing nothing wrong.

Step into a pub. Order more than one drink and watch people start

"Our society has allowed justice to try the victim as a defense to the crime... We refer to the increasingly popular trend of attempting to shame people for doing things we don't like."

staring and whispering. They will often chat about the person as if they have no reasoning. Perhaps they don't but, again, there is no law that says these folks can't drink - only that they can't drink to excess.

The latest "evil" is comprised of soft drinks and/or fast food. These are being targeted because, like cigarettes, they are bad for our health. Again, the trouble with this is all are perfectly legal products.

We need to stop and take issue with ourselves. Who appointed us the guardian of the human race?

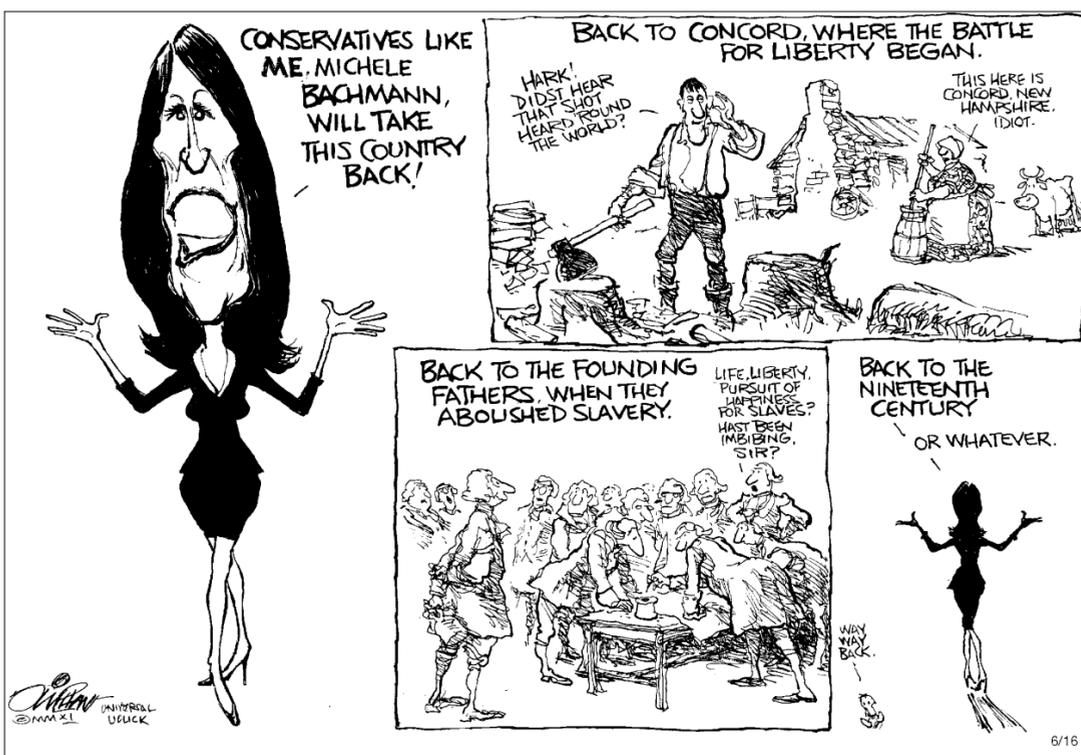

Who suddenly gave us the power to say who should drink, who should smoke?

Who should enjoy a carbonated beverage or a double-decker hamburger with fries?

This logic could be used on a half-dozen more issues in 2011.

We find it increasingly disturbing to see the mob mentality taking over. We know we frequently talk about how the majority should rule, but our main point in this entire dissertation is: if something is so bad as to draw the disdain of the entire public ... shouldn't it be illegal?

Leg's stop trying to guilty people into doing what we want and either change the law or keep our big mouths shut.

Big Coal buys access to 4th graders

Schools shouldn't aid this kind of predatory marketing

By Jim Hightower

If some predator were stalking fourth graders in your community, there'd be a mighty uproar to make the predator get away and stay away from your schools.

But what if the stalker were the coal industry, dressed in an academic outfit in a gambit to brainwash fourth-graders? Unbeknownst to most Americans, grade school kids are being targeted by the American

Coal Foundation with a propaganda package stealthily titled, "The United States of Energy."

It's not mentioned in the materials, but Big Coal paid big bucks to Scholastic Inc. to develop this shamelessly distorted promotion of the dirtiest fuel on Earth. The package fills little minds with the joys of having coal-fueled utilities generating electricity 24 hours a day. Not a peep is made about the toxic waste, air and water pollution, mine explosions, black lung deaths, destructive mountaintop removal mining, greenhouse gas emissions, political corruption, and other decidedly unfriendly aspects of what industry propagandists simply tout as "black gold."

Big Coal distributed this "educational package" to 150,000 fourth grade teachers, potentially putting its perverted view into the heads of more than a million children. Of course, the coal giants couldn't have entered so many schools on their own, so they bought access to our kids through Scholastic, a $2-billion-a-year corporation that places its materials in 90 percent of U.S. classrooms. Indeed Scholastic's InSchool Marketing division brags of its ability to "promote client objectives" by targeting teachers and students with classroom packages that "make a difference by influencing attitudes and behavior."

How sweet. To help stop this kind of predatory marketing, contact the Campaign for a Commercial-Free Childhood: www.commercialfreechildhood.org.

E-Conning the public — bummer of recovery

How is your "summer of recovery" going so far?

To refresh your memory, the Obama administration proclaimed this was going to be the summer when all his economic fixes began to pay off. He even assigned "Sheriff Jumpin' Joe" Biden to oversee it.

The result of his actions: an inelegant demise of an otherwise recovering economy.

Here a few recent economic items that show what a firm control the Community Organizer-in-Chief has over our financial well-being:

1. McKinsey Consulting released a study that found that 30 percent of employers are likely to stop offering their workers health insurance once most of the ObamaCare rules and regulations kick in.

2. J.P. Morgan Bank CEO and lifelong Democrat Jamie Dimon said regulators have gone too far with Dodd-Frank legislation. He said he fears someone will write a book about how government overreaching had hurt the economic recovery.

3. Consumer confidence is falling and Americans are experiencing buyer's remorse. 57percent said they disapproved of Obama's management of the economy. The other 43percent said, "So we still have an economy?"

4. Unemployment is 9.1 percent and rising again, and gas prices are touching $4 per gallon. Here's an inconvenient truth: gas prices were

HART TALK
Ron Hart

$1.65 per gallon the month Obama took office.

Gas went to $5 a gallon in New York, but folks are willing to pay it to get out of New York.

It was interesting what Nancy Pelosi said about Bush's stewardship of the economy on Jan. 4, 2008, when unemployment was 5percent and gas cost $3 per gallon: "This morning's jobs report confirms what most Americans already knew — President Bush's economic policies have failed our country's middle class."

When Obama said he was going to get us back on our feet again, he must have meant us having to power our cars like Fred Flintstone.

The Limousine Liberal has doubled the amount of government luxury cars/limos, most made by his wholly-owned subsidiary, Cadillac. He tells us to inflate our tires and buy smaller cars, but Obama lives large.

5. In fiscal year 2007, the Republicans passed their last budget before Nancy Pelosi and the Democrats took over Congress. It had a deficit of $161 billion. That now looks like the good old days. In their first year with the checkbook, the Democrats ran a $459 billion deficit — and they were just getting started. In 2009 they racked up a record deficit of $1.42 TRILLION. Democrats felt they were on a roll and beat 2010 by putting another $1.6 trillion on our joint credit card — a personal best to date.

"He (Obama) has never even run a lemonade stand; when you have no idea what drives business, that's a problem. His is an envy-based economy."

That figure does not include the $50 trillion in unfunded mandates, the costs of regulation, Bush's prescription drug entitlement, ObamaCare etc.

6. The Dow Jones closed below 12,000 last week after its sixth consecutive weekly decline. This is the longest losing streak for our stock markets since 2002. Stock values dropped so much the E-Trade baby filed for bankruptcy. The U.S.A. has gone from using stock brokers to pawn brokers.

7. USA Today reported last week that the unfunded obligations the politicians have promised folks (welfare, Social Security, government retirement) amount to over $500,000 per household. This compares to only $112,000 in debt the average family has now for its home, car and credit cards.

The Congressional Research Center reported that 77,000 federal employees make more than the average governor.

8. Moody's rating agency said it was considering lowering the U.S.'s credit rating. Obama thinks they were just being moody.

9. It is so bad that Obama's top economic advisor, Austan Goolsbee, stepped down. I hear they are thinking of replacing him with Ashton Kutcher.

The bright spots are McDonald's, which is spending a billion dollars to upgrade its stores, and Dunkin' Donuts, which is contemplating an IPO. This proves that the one growth industry in America is our waistlines.

Obama and his sycophants have next-to-no business experience and profess disdain for those who do. I am pretty sure the young Obama received a government-backed loan to buy his first teleprompter. He has never even run a lemonade stand; when you have no idea what drives business, that's a problem. His is an envy-based economy.

Japan is falling into recession after experiencing natural disasters like a tsunami, nuclear meltdowns and earthquakes. This differs from the U.S., which is falling back into recession due to unnatural disasters like Dodd-Frank, the stimulus bill, Cap and Trade and ObamaCare.

Ride for a cause

Photos and story by Mathew Pellegrino
mpellegrino@spressgazette.com

Big hogs and sport bikes alike came out to raise awareness for the Ride for Ramps Poker Run Saturday morning in Pace.

Ray of Hope, a ramp ministry builds ramps for people who find it hard, or are unable to get out of their house because they do not have a handicap accessible ramp.

Ray of Hope is an organization that has been around for nine years according to Woodbine Outreach Riding Disciples vice president Stan Holmes, who helped put on the first annual Ray of Hope Ride.

"We've been building ramps now for anyone that needs one built," Holmes said.

This is the first time WORD, Woodbine United Methodist Church's Christian motorcycle riding team had held a motorcycle ride for the ramp ministry.

WORD works in conglomeration with Ray church and community that supports us," for the organization.

About 40 riders came out to partake in the 45-mile ride that went around the scenic parts of Santa Rosa County, with five stops along the way.

"We tried to make this a nice ride for them," Holmes said. "We tried to stop at a couple of places that have helped us (WORD) out, so we're trying to help them out."

Most of the ramps that the ministry helps build come from donations from Woodbine United Methodist Church. Others come to the nonprofit organization in the form of volunteerism. The projects are volunteer-built. The supplies are paid for through money raised.

The ramp ministry is currently working to go for the gold as they work towards their 300th ramp built. Holmes said the ministry just built their 298th ramp for a woman who was wheelchair bound.

"We have a very generous of Hope to raise money and build the ramps Holmes said.

Dear Pastor Gallups, "I heard you on the radio declare that President Obama's involvement in Libya was an impeachable and unconstitutional offense. How can you say such things and why would a preacher even make statements like these?" James - Milton

Dear James,

The reason that I claim that the U.S. involvement in Libya, at Obama's command, is unconstitutional and impeachable is because Obama, Hillary Clinton and Joe Biden all said this! Let me explain.

In 2008, when George Bush was the President, he was considering going into Iran with military action. The liberals panicked. Joe Biden appeared on public television and declared that Bush went into Iran without congressional approval as the constitution demands, that he would "personally initiate impeachment proceedings."

Likewise, Hillary Clinton, at the time a Senator, declared that if Bush did this that it would be "blatantly unconstitutional." Obama was also a Senator then. He was running for president when the question was asked of him regarding Bush's possible attack on Iran. Obama declared that if Bush did that "it would be unconstitutional."

There is not one iota of difference in what Obama, Clinton and Biden have now engaged in - except that now - THEY are in power and don't see a problem with the war in Libya. Obama has YET to take the matter before congress. Just the other day he declared, in effect, that he didn't need congressional approval. Obama, should, by his own words and the US constitution - be impeached. It really is a simple matter of constitutional law. It seems that we have no Congressmen or courts with intestinal fortitude in this matter.

As for your second question: Why shouldn't a preacher ask these questions? I am a pastor, a tax-payer, a natural born citizen, a radio talk show host and a voter. Under the first amendment I have the right and duty to ask the questions. It is a shame that no one will answer them and apparently, no one with authority cares to answer them.

I am anxiously awaiting 2012. In the meantime, I trust the Lord with each day of life.

Sheriff seeks help in Radio Shack theft

Special to the Press Gazette

Santa Rosa County Sheriff's Office deputies took a theft complaint (shoplifting) at Radio Shack, 8222 Navarre Parkway back on June 8 and they are now seeking the public's help.

The owner of the business stated a male subject entered his store and had taken a four channel DVR, valued at $379.99.

The owner, who was at the front register, stated the male subject entered the store, talking on his cell phone, and walked around the store.

The owner's son, who also works at the business, started to walk towards the back of the store to see if the male subject needed any help finding anything.

The owner stated the male subject walked out of the store and the owner's son advised him of the DVR missing from the shelf. The owner ran outside to speak with the male subject, but the male subject had already left the area.

Deputies looked at the video surveillance and observed a white male subject in his 40's, in a red long sleeve shirt, and a dark colored ball cap enter the store. The male subject was observed picking up the item off of the shelf, bringing it to the back of the store. The male subject then hid the item under his shirt and walked out of the business.

Anyone with information concerning the identity of the suspect is asked to contact the Santa Rosa County Sheriff's Office at 981-2255 or Santa Rosa County Crime Stoppers at 437-STOP.

Teen loses cancer battle

Paton gave up treatment to live out his life

By Katie Tammen

Florida Freedom Newspapers

A teenager who was battling an aggressive form of bone cancer has passed away.

Michael "McShane" Paton died at 10:48 a.m. June 1 with his mother and father by his side.

"He fought a three-and-a-half year battle," said his mother, Hope Gibbons. "He's out of pain."

The 15-year-old was diagnosed with osteosarcoma, a type of cancer that tends to appear as children approach puberty, in February 2009 after he went to the doctor for leg pain.

After the diagnosis, he spent 18 months at St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, Tenn., and endured chemotherapy and upper thoracotomies. He also had part of a leg amputated.

The cancer returned three months after he finished the treatments. But McShane asked that he be allowed to live out his life rather than return to the hospital.

Doctors gave him three to nine months to live and McShane accepted his fate with grace, Gibbons said.

Up until the last five days of his life, he was living with his parents in a mobile home in Laurel Hill obtained by a Destin United Methodist Church, which had been helping the family since they moved to the area about a year ago.

McShane was in frequent pain over his last few days, so his parents moved with him to a hospice facility to help make him more comfortable.

"He passed away peacefully," Gibbons said.

In the weeks since McShane's death, church members have stepped forward again to plan a memorial service.

On Wednesday — McShane's 16th birthday — his friends and family will gather in Destin United Methodist's sanctuary to celebrate his life.

The church's youth group, in which McShane was a member until his illness became too severe, will play a large role in the service.

"The service is going to be absolutely beautiful," Gibbons said. "They've gone above and beyond anything that I would have expected, and it's really hard to even do this, and their help has been overwhelmingly kind."

The service will be at 4 p.m. at the church at 200 Beach Drive. The public is invited.

Milton man charged with homicide

By Bill Gamblin
news@srpressgazette.com

A Milton man was charged with homicide June 16 that occurred on Christmas Eve of 2010.

Michael Duane Sanford, 45, of Bullard Road, was charged with homicide in connection with the death of Patsy Wright. Sanford remains lodged in the Santa Rosa County Jail with a bond of $50,000.

According to the Santa Rosa County Sheriff's Office, emergency medical services and the Santa Rosa County Sheriff's Office were summoned to the Bullard Road home of Sanford Dec. 24, 2010, in response to a possible overdose.

The victim was identified as Wright, 55, who was pronounced deceased at Jay Hospital by the attending physician.

Dr. Minyard listed Wright's cause of death as combined effects of acute morphine intoxication, acute pneumonia, and morbid obesity with a manner of death as homicide.

Deputies interviewed

Wright's son on Dec. 29 of last year and he told investigators that after taking his mother to her appointment with Dr. David Smith at Jay Hospital, he took her to get her prescription medication filled. The prescription was indicated to be 100mg morphine tablets.

Wright's son then said he drove her to Sanford's home on Bullard Rd., so she "could get 'shot up' with her morphine."

Wright's son told investigators that Sanford got a black tackle box where he kept drug paraphernalia.

He was to have injected Wright in the veins on the top of her hand according to the report, where she immediately went to sleep in a kitchen chair.

Wright's son said she was still asleep and unable to talk at 5:30 p.m. when he observed that Sanford was preparing another syringe.

When this injection occurred, the report indicated that Wright's arms were tied to the legs of the chair with white cloth straps.

Sanford's father told Wright's son that he had seen Sanford inject Wright three other times between 1:30 p.m. and 9 p.m.

At 4 a.m. Christmas morning Wright was still breathing when her son went to get something to eat according to the report, but when he returned Sanford told Wright's son she had been taken to Jay Hospital.

When Wright's son arrived at the hospital his mother had been pronounced dead.

On Dec. 30 a search was conducted of the Bullard Road residence and witnesses gave statements to officers.

One witness informed officers, according to the report, that Sanford took all of the syringes, spoons, pill bottles, and related paraphernalia and burned them in a burn barrel in the back yard.

Officers spoke with Sanford who told officers that he believed Wright took too much of her own medication and overdosed.

According to the report, when he was told of the statements by other witnesses, Sanford admitted that he did in fact inject her.

evaluation method. The new premature evaluation scheme the district is testing uses a scale that will take administrator, student and parent surveys and also count student test scores into the final evaluation score.

Fifty percent of the evaluation will be based on end-of-course exams and FCAT test scores. Those tests will vary depending on the grade level. For example, a fourth grade teacher will be graded based on 20 percent of their students' test scores on the FCAT reading, 20 percent on FCAT math and 10 percent on FCAT writing. The total will be averaged.

For high school, an Algebra One teacher will have his or her student scores based on 10 percent of students' FCAT reading scores and 40 percent of their students' Algebra end-of-course exams.

Parents and students will be given a survey to evaluate the teacher, and each grade level will receive a survey that fits his or her grade level. For example, elementary school children will have an easy-to-read survey that asks questions such as: "Is learning fun at this school?" and "Do I like going to this school each day?" and "Is the school clean?" Those questions are followed by a scale with facial expressions that

HOW ARE TEACHERS' GRADES CALCULATED?

- 30 percent administrative evaluation
- 10 percent a teacher developed professional development plan
- 5 percent parent survey
- 5 percent student survey

make it easy for children to indicate whether they agree or disagree with the statement.

Middle school and high school students would answer a list of 16 questions, such as:

- Is my family treated with respect at this school?
- Do I have opportunities to be successful at this school?
- Would I recommend this school to others?
- Do I regularly receive feedback from school staff about my academic progress?

Those questions will also be answered based on a scale from 1-5, where 1 is deemed as "strongly disagree" and 5 is "strongly agree."

The student and parent surveys will be administered in September and May of the school year. In September the surveys will only be used to gather information and see where the teacher needs to improve in certain areas, Lynn said.

"In May the scores will actually count on the teachers' evaluation," Lynn said. Another 10 percent of the teacher's evaluation will be based on the teacher's own Professional Development Plan, which they must complete.

"The teachers must write a plan on how they plan to develop throughout the year, and what changes they plan to make to better themselves," Lynn said.

Administrators will be trained throughout the next three months on how to evaluate teachers effectively using the new iPads that the district purchased using Microsoft settlement funds.

Lynn said that at first teachers were concerned about test scores but that now they seem to be worrying about how some struggling students will affect their evaluations.

"A lot of anxiety that I hear coming from the teachers is how they are going to make certain students count based on their ability level," Lynn said.

He said the state has a system to weigh how much a student's test scores or surveys could affect a teacher's evaluation.

"The state uses the Value Added Model, which uses factors such as the student's GPA, their attendance record and any disabilities they may have," Lynn said.

Right now, the district is focusing on training administrators, who will also undergo a new evaluation system this year, to administer fair evaluations to each teacher, and how to use the software that will come equipped with their iPads that they will use to administer the in class evaluations on.

Teachers who score unsatisfactory (the lowest score) on their evaluation will be asked to make a Professional Improvement Plan, which would outline to the district how they plan to correct their low score.

If a teacher receives unsatisfactory scores two years in a row, new state law says they will not be allowed be rehired through the school system.

Right before the start of the 2011-12 school year, teachers will be taught the new method.

agricultural burn piles do not have to be permitted through DOF. Lynchard said he is worried that by initiating a burn ban, farmers would not be able to do their job.

"It isn't that there is no agricultural burn piles that are being burned, there just aren't any permits being given," Lynchard said.

Salter said certain agricultural burn piles do not have to be permitted.

Over the controversy of agricultural burns, Walker said he was concerned about whether residents should be allowed to shoot off fireworks during the upcoming Fourth of July, even so much as a sparkler.

The county said they would discuss the matter more at Thursday's regular commission meeting and would have to come up with a decision by then. Their next meeting is not until after July 4.

Commissioner Bob Cole said that right now, the county would work on a way to keep residents from burning until the area sees more rain.

"Our original worries were for the farmers that needed to burn," Cole said. "Right now our deputies can't do anything because there's no ordinance to ban on it."

annual report on Oct. 11, 2010.

"The IRS did make a mistake," Brooks, an independent CPA based out of Century said. "They said they didn't know what happened ... right now they're working to fix the mistake."

Brooks said if an organization were to lose its tax exempt status or did not file the proper paperwork, the organization or its CPA would have been notified. Both the volunteer fire department and the CPA never received such a notice. "I received no notification that the status would have been revoked," Brooks said.

Jay Volunteer Fire Chief Tony Simmons told the Press Gazette he had no idea that the IRS had made the mistake but contacted them Wednesday about it.

If a corporate organization were to lose its tax exempt status, Brooks said they would have to pay taxes on any profit, and any contributions would not be deductible.

Pier has visitors hooked during 1st year

BILL GAMBLIN | Press Gazette

Fishing is just one of the many reasons for the banner year since the Navarre Beach Fishing Pier reopened a year ago after it was destroyed by Hurricane Ivan in 2004.

By Mathew Pellegrino
mpellegrino@
srpressgazette.com

The Navarre Beach Fishing Pier exceeded expectations during its first year as it served as the longest pier in the Gulf of Mexico.

Dorothy Slye, the pier's manager, came to the Santa Rosa County commission meeting Monday to express the good news to commissioners.

"We had a banner year at the Navarre Fishing Pier," Slye said.

The pier raised more than $316,000 for the county over the course of a year from ticket sales from walking and fishing visitors.

Slye came to commissioners to review what customers had been saying about the pier and about the pricing, an issue that came up last year before the opening of the pier.

Slye said the board should look into annual family passes and charge $100-$120 per person.

"If we reduce the pass to $100 person, we will lose $1,850," Slye said. "But if we increase walk-on to $1.25, we would actually cover any loss in pass income."

The pier made $32,310 in individual annual passes last year.

Slye said lowering the fee may increase the number of passes sold because the rate would be more appealing to families.

Almost 75 percent of the pier's revenue over the past year has been from walkers and not from fishermen.

But Slye said she wanted to see a spike in the number of anglers.

"I would like to see more kids out there fishing. We had 88,775 walk on the pier last year," Slye said.

Commissioner Bob Cole warned that the county should come up with a way to keep track of family members in case people decide to misuse their passes and cheat the county out of money.

"We need to look at the family passes and identify members of the family, so families don't bring in others who may not be part of the family," Cole said.

Slye also considered looking at acquiring a handicap discount rate.

Commissioner Lane Lynchard said he would look into a discount rate and also portable toilets for the pier.

"Pensacola has them; Panama City has them too. And people are asking for them," Slye said.

Three percent of pier visitors are seniors, while only two percent are children.

Commissioner Don Salter said he would like to see a customer service survey sheet made for pier visitors, so the county could get more input on what should or shouldn't be added to the pier.

"I feel we need to find a way to get more families out there," Salter said.

The rebuilding of the pier was completed during the aftermath of the Deepwater Horizon oil spill last year. Even with the bad publicity, Slye said the pier saw more than expected.

"I was really amazed at how much we made over the course of a year, and I hope that continues," Slye said.

FWC REPORT

This report represents some events the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission Northwest Region handled from June 10-16; however, it does not include all actions taken by the Division of Law Enforcement.

SANTA ROSA COUNTY

Officers Ben Pineda and David Jernigan were on water patrol near the Pensacola Pass area conducting fishery inspections on vessels returning from the Gulf of Mexico and individuals fishing from shore. During a check of several fishermen from shore, one was found to be in possession of one undersized red drum. The subject stated he knew the size limits and had measured it but decided to keep it because he thought he would not get checked.

After dark, Officer Ben Pineda and Department of Environmental Protection Officer Jim Hughes were on patrol in Blackwater State Forest when they observed several individuals attempting to break into a state park pay station. After investigation, the subjects admitted to trying to get the money out of the pay station. Officers recovered two bolt cutters, a rifle and a box of ammunition. A computer check revealed one subject to be a runaway juvenile with an active outstanding warrant. Additionally, the computer check revealed the owner/possessor of the rifle had a court-ordered domestic violence injunction with special provisions against possessing ammunition and/or firearms. Both individuals were arrested and transported to the Santa Rosa County Jail.

Officer Royce Johnson completed a derelict vessel investigation involving a 28-foot derelict vessel submerged in the Blackwater Bay area. Over the course of the investigation, Johnson located the last registered owner and gave him ample time to remove the vessel. The vessel remained submerged, and Johnson cited the owner with the violation. Johnson is working with a local volunteer group to have the vessel removed from the water.

Friends, families walk to remember

Mathew Pellegrino
mpellegrino@srpressgazette.com

Despite the time since his passing, Pam Langley remembers her son like she did three years ago when he was a sparkle in her eyes.

Chad "Chadillac" Langley worked at a custom car shop, and among the tears during his wake, Langley remembers walking outside to see a line of custom cars lined up to follow the hearse that would eventually lead her son to his final resting space.

"They had their hydraulics on ... there was a long line of them," Langley said about the procession for her 26-year-old son.

Langley was one of nearly 200 people who came out Saturday morning to Pensacola State College in Milton to remember their late family members and friends as part of the first annual Walk to Remember put on by nonprofit Compassionate Friends.

Board members Connie Griffin and Marie Harris, who also had deaths in their family, like Langley, remembered their grief like it happened yesterday.

The two helped put on the walk after establishing the national organization locally in Santa Rosa County.

The organization offers advice and help for family members who are dealing with the loss of a family member or friend.

The organization is the first of its kind in Santa Rosa County.

The group of about 25 members meets on the fourth Tuesday of every month at 7 p.m. at the Chumuckla Community Church.

Chumucklan Don Salter, who has supported the organization since he first heard about it months ago, said he was glad to see the support shown by the community Saturday morning. His speech was followed by the reading of a poem and then the start of the walk.

The organization has 600 chapters across the United States and offers phone calls, free reading material and a monthly newsletter to those who are dealing with a death.

SPECIAL PET

SPECIAL TO THE PRESS GAZETTE

I am a 5-year-old Jack Russell named Jack or J.R. I have been with my new Papa for a couple of months but feel very much at home. We have a big garden and Papa lets me dig holes to round up any small creatures such as moles. My favorite activity, which can last many hours a day, is "chasing shadows." I'm not sure where these funny shapes come from but sometimes I think they chase me back. I'm a very happy dog and enjoy my new found life. I have a sister named Precious who is a Jack Russell and Chihuahua mix. We are either playing together or growling to see who gets the most attention.

FWC prohibits campfires on public lands

Special to the Press Gazette

In light of significant drought conditions and the increased threat of wildfires, the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC), in cooperation with the state Division of Forestry and other partner agencies, issued an executive order June 16 prohibiting campfires in wildlife management areas, wildlife and environmental areas and all other lands it manages.

The order went into effect at 12:01 a.m. June 17 and remains in effect until rescinded by a subsequent order. The FWC joins the DOF, the Department of Environmental Protection and Florida water management districts in this effort.

"Special regulations are necessary to mitigate risk to public safety and to minimize the likelihood of igniting fires that will adversely impact wildlife and wildlife habitat," said the order, signed by Nick Wiley, FWC executive director.

In its executive order, the FWC notes that Florida is experiencing inordinately dry conditions for this time of year. "As a result, DOF and FWC have been fighting multiple wildfires within wildlife management areas, wildlife and environmental areas and other lands managed by FWC."

If placed openly on the ground, the fire is considered a campfire, and therefore barred. Only cooking fires contained in commercially designed apparatuses are allowed.

Any violation is considered a second-degree misdemeanor, punishable by up to a $500 fine and 60 days in jail. Law enforcement agencies on each respective state property are responsible for enforcing violations.

Bay scallop season to open early, close late this year

The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC) reminds people that the recreational harvest season for bay scallops in Florida will begin June 25 and extend through Sept. 25. The FWC, in support of Gov. Rick Scott and Cabinet, added three weeks to this year's season to help relieve Florida fishing communities suffering from possible economic hardships due to the 2010 Deepwater Horizon oil spill.

Open scalloping areas on Florida's Gulf coast extend from the west bank of the Mexico Beach Canal in Bay County to the Pasco-Hernando county line near Aripeka. It is illegal to possess bay scallops while you're in or on state waters outside the open harvest areas, or to land bay scallops outside the open areas.

There is a daily limit of 2 gallons of whole bay scallops in the shell or 1 pint of bay scallop meat per person. In addition, no more than 10 gallons of whole bay scallops in the shell or one-half gallon of bay scallop meat may be possessed aboard any vessel at any time. You are allowed to harvest bay scallops only by hand or with a landing or dip net. Bay scallops may not be harvested for commercial purposes.

Unless otherwise exempt, you will need a regular Florida saltwater fishing license when you use a boat to harvest scallops. If you wade from shore, you will need a regular Florida saltwater fishing license or a free resident shore-based license.

Divers and snorkelers are required to display a "divers-down" flag (red with a white diagonal stripe) while in the water. Boaters must stay at least 100 feet away from a divers-down flag in a river, inlet or channel. In open waters, boaters must stay 300 feet away from a divers-down flag.

During the season, scallop harvesters can assist FWC's scallop researchers by completing an online survey at <http://svy.mk/bayscallops>. Harvesters can indicate where they harvest scallops, how many they collect and how long it takes to harvest them. Participants can also email BayScallops@MyFWC.com to ask questions or send additional information.

How modern men craft

Journals, beer, 'geekery' among men's creative works

(AP) Crafts for men have come a long way since the days when Popular Mechanics advised returning World War II soldiers in the rustic arts of whittling and leather tooling.

A compendium from the magazine's postwar archives, "Man Crafts" (Hearst Books, 2009), celebrates male-gear hobbies of yesteryear. It reads like last year's cheeky book by Amy Sedaris, "Simple Times: Crafts for Poor People" (Grand Central Publishing).

"It's meant more as an amusement and a fond look back, more than anything else," says Jacqueline Deval, a Hearst Books vice president, although the instructions in "Man Crafts" are legitimate.

The book throws into contrast how different things are today. Some of its nostalgic hobbies remain popular among women and men, although there might no longer be a market for tin-can candleholders and tin serving trays.

But a quick glance at Etsy.com, an online avenue where people sell handmade goods and old-timey collectibles, also turns up men making soap, glass works and knitwear. Men designing T-shirts and other clothing. Men creating electrical gadgets and making art journals.

And men brewing beer. According to the American Homebrewers Association, based in Boulder, Colo., nearly 750,000 people brew beer at home at least once a year in the U.S.

One of them is Mitch Larsen, of Lincoln, Neb., who likes the challenge of crafting a great-tasting beer.

"It's science-y," says Larsen, 41. "There's a lot that goes into making good beer.

This undated image courtesy of Brian Kasstle shows a piece by him titled "My Personal Maps." Kasstle, of Long Beach, Calif., dabbled in scrapbooking and card-making before he hit upon art journaling, which uses mostly collage, painting and image transfers. Each page tells a story about his life, family or feelings, and he shares much of this at Brian Kasstle's Blog. At top, this undated photo courtesy of Joe Bagley shows Bagley's "Holding Couple Riding Bikes." Bagley, of Boston, painstakingly hand-cuts intricate paper art, which he sells at his Etsy shop, Papercuts by Joe. An archaeologist by training, he juggles what have become twin careers.

You can make beer with a kit at the store, but it's not going to be good beer."

Good beer, according to Larsen, requires reading and research, talking with other home brewers, lots of taste testing and making unfortunate mistakes.

"It's a creative outlet for me because I formulate my own recipes," Larsen says.

Joshua Zimmerman's creative outlet is tinkering with small electrical projects. The 28-year-old fourth-grade teacher in Milwaukee makes Altoid tin USB chargers and flashlights, and small robots from toothbrush heads and solar battery chargers. His creations usually can be made with a few bucks and a few parts, often from recycling old electronics.

"I spend way too much time on researching this stuff for my own amusement," Zimmerman says.

He simplifies ideas he finds online, assembles them in kits and sells them from his online shop, Brown Dog Gadgets, and at Etsy. He also posts the instructions for all of his projects, most of which take less than an hour for a novice and require a little metal soldering.

Many of the men who sell handmade wares on Etsy gravitate to the site's "geekery" category, which includes practical jokes and quirky crafts, says Emily Bidwell, who works in merchandising for the online site, based in Brooklyn, N.Y. A recent perusal found more than 72,000 "geekery" items for sale, including "zombie gnomes" and a "Tera Energy Superconducting Linear Accelerator" ray gun (both made by men).

Men's crafts often fall into that comical, playful category, says Bidwell, or can be more traditional and serious: metal, wood, leather, ceramics, glass.

And though men might share the same crafts as women, they often put a male spin on it, Bidwell says. For example, men are more likely to make leather and canvas courier bags, bicycle accessories and luggage.

"It's not like a pretty purse for a lady," Bidwell says. "They're making things that they want for themselves."

That explains the artwork of both Brian Kasstle, 50, and Joe Bagley, 26.

Kasstle, of Long Beach, Calif., dabbled in scrapbooking and card-making before he hit upon art journaling, using mostly collage, painting and image transfers. Each page tells a story about his life, family or feelings, and he shares much of this at Brian Kasstle's Blog.

"I notice when I don't (journal), I get cranky," Kasstle says. "It's just opened the world of art to me. I love it as a form of expression."

Bagley, of Boston, painstakingly hand-cuts intricate paper art, which he sells at his Etsy shop, Papercuts by Joe. An archaeologist by training, he juggles what have become twin careers.

His paper-cutting skills were honed at a young age.

"I think the biggest reason I fell in love with it is that I was 10 and using an X-Acto knife," Bagley says. "The draw of that, of getting away with that."

Years of practice have led him to a photorealistic look with his art form. A large, highly detailed piece that takes a lot of time can fetch $4,000.

"Once I felt like I was doing something new and different, it started to feel exciting," he says.

Livability trend puts walking expert in demand

REDONDO BEACH, Calif. (AP) — When Dan Burden started approaching bureaucrats about making streets more pedestrian-friendly 16 years ago, he could hardly get them to look up from their desks.

That was a lot of miles ago.

Today, with the health, environmental and quality-of-life benefits of walkable neighborhoods, they can't get enough of Burden. Even in car-dependent Southern California, where he spent a few of his roughly 340 days a year on the road this spring, city planners are literally walking the talk alongside him.

Burden, 67, doesn't own a car and conducts so-called walking audits by foot.

"He is the Johnny Appleseed of walkable communities, a true modern nomad," said Ryan Snyder, a transportation planning consultant who brought Burden aboard to create a plan to improve streets in Los Angeles County. "I am guessing there's been nobody who has gotten to know as many American communities as he has."

Dressed in a khaki vest and armed with a binocular, camera, stopwatch, speed radar gun and measuring tape, Burden appears more like a man on a safari than a folk hero as he flies from city to city and leads mobile workshops pointing out poorly planned streets, intersections and sidewalks and suggesting improvements.

For the past century, city streets have been designed to ease automobile traffic flow. But in recent years, sustainability and livability have become buzzwords as policymakers seek ways to reduce congestion and pollution and improve the health of residents. They have become increasingly aware that getting more people on the street boosts public safety, raises property value and brings in more businesses.

In and around Los Angeles, where cars outnumber people on the streets and freeways and multilane roads divide neighborhoods, efforts are under way to reverse the refrain "Nobody Walks In LA" that was sung by the 1980s band Missing Persons. They include a plan to make over Figueroa Street, a major downtown artery for vehicle traffic, for pedestrians, cyclists and transit riders.

Burden has made several visits to Southern California, including stops in San Diego and Santa Monica, to conduct walk audits. The concept is simple, and the former National Geographic photographer from Port Walking guru Dan Burden, an internationally recognized authority on walkability, talks about the walkability of streets in Redondo Beach, Calif., on Jan. 21. Today, with the health, environmental and quality-of-life benefits of walkable neighborhoods, public officials can't get enough of Burden.

Townsend, Wash., makes it known he has no special training in street design.

"I'm not a traffic engineer, I'm not a planner, I'm not an architect, but I'm trained in how to see and observe, and so I sometimes see things that nobody else sees," Burden said during a February visit to assess this Southern California beach city.

At a busy corner on Pacific Coast Highway, he points out cars zooming by at 45 mph, traffic signals that force pedestrians to hurry across the wide boulevard and trash cans and utility boxes that block walkers on the sidewalk. With his measuring tape, he showed that traffic lanes could be slimmed down to accommodate vehicles and add more space for cyclists and pedestrians. Trees could be planted for shade and as a safety buffer from cars. Benches could give the elderly a place to rest during a stroll.

Redondo Beach, along with two neighboring cities, are participating in a program that encourages residents to adopt healthier habits. Burden has recommended putting in a bike lane on a heavily used road that leads to Pacific Coast Highway and adding traffic circles and replacing a car lane with a bike lane in several places to slow down vehicles.

Some of these ideas, presented by Burden at a statewide workshop several years ago, were adopted by Lancaster, a sprawling suburb of 156,000 north of Los Angeles. The city saw remarkable change last year when its main drag, Lancaster Boulevard, was put on a "road diet."

The city narrowed the four-lane, nearly mile-long boulevard to two lanes, put in diagonal parking and landscaping in the middle of the street and widened the sidewalks to add trees and outdoor dining areas.

Mayor R. Rex Parris came up with the idea of installing speaker systems playing the soothing sounds of bird songs and trickling water to enhance the ambience.

Cars that used to speed through the boulevard at 40 to 50 mph now slow down to 15 and 20 mph, making it safer for people to cross the street and patronize the 30 new businesses that have moved downtown, city planning director Brian Ludicke said.

"It was a ghost town down here," said Maria Elena Grado, who opened her Lemon Leaf Cafe on the boulevard five years ago. "Now people drive down here just to walk their dogs."

Lancaster is developing a plan that calls for redesigning its streets to accommodate walkers and cyclists by putting in protected bike lanes, roundabouts and other measures to reduce car speeds and improve safety overall.

"While these things benefit people who want to bike and walk, it has a lot of benefits for the community beyond that," Ludicke said. "It does a lot for the aesthetic value of the community. It creates a better place to live; it increases property value."

The shift toward building "complete streets" reflects a broader change in federal government policy. Last year, the U.S. Department of Transportation issued new guidelines that moved to end "favoring motorized transportation at the expense of non-motorized" by including cyclist and pedestrian needs in new road projects.

Snyder said it's the skyrocketing rate of obesity that has also propelled governments to create better places to walk so people can conveniently get some exercise without having to drive to the gym. He is leading an effort funded by a $32 million obesity prevention initiative by the Los Angeles County Department of Public Health to create a street design manual for cities to reshape what he calls their "35 mph architecture."

"They're places where grandmothers can't cross the street or kids can't get to schools; they're trapped in their neighborhoods because the streets are ... used as conduits for flushing out large volumes of vehicles," he said.

Burden said he developed the walk audits as a way to train traffic engineers to see the effects of their designs on walkers when he worked as a bicycle and pedestrian coordinator for the Florida Department of Transportation more than two decades ago.

Today, the audits he leads also involve civic leaders and average citizens. He said the exchanges that occur during the walks put people at ease and open up many ideas for ways people want to better their communities.

He said people can lead themselves when it comes to redesigning their neighborhoods.

"My goal before I leave the planet is to have a thousand walks being led per day to see towns differently than what we see today," Burden said, "and to do it through the eyes of different people who become practiced at seeing and observing."

Searching for airfares doesn't have to be a gamble

NEW YORK (AP) — Searching for airfares often seems like a game passengers are set up to lose.

Prices change from day to day, even minute to minute. Scouring multiple websites for the best deal can be overwhelming. And after you book, there's no guarantee you got the best price.

"You just don't know when to pull the trigger. It's not like buying anything else I can think of," said George Hobbica, founder of Airfarewatchdog.com.

Harriet Levy paid $179 for a recent round-trip flight on American Airlines between New York and Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Sitting just one row behind her, Shirley Harrison paid $215. A few rows back, Ellis and Diane Traub paid $317 each. There were at least 12 fares on the flight, ranging from $169 to $360.

"There's no rhyme or reason to it," Harrison said.

Fares can fluctuate significantly in just a few hours. One Delta flight from New York to Los Angeles jumped from $755 to $1,143 from a Friday to Saturday in late April, then fell to $718 on Sunday.

The flight was one of a dozen The Associated Press tracked over three months for a July 16-22 vacation. The No. 1 finding: Avoid booking tickets on weekends. It's the most expensive time to buy.

There's no way to guarantee the best fare. But before booking, travelers should heed this additional advice:

- Book on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. That's when airlines most often offer sales.

- Buy in advance, but not too early. The best time is four to six weeks before traveling. In general, prices for any given flight are highest eight to 10 weeks and two to three weeks in advance.

- Embrace social media. Airlines are giving more benefits, like exclusive sales, to travelers who interact with them on Twitter and Facebook. Those specials are often gone within hours.

- The so-called discount airlines — JetBlue, AirTran, Southwest and Frontier — adjust their fares less

In this file photo taken Oct. 11, 2010, an American Airlines airplane takes off at Miami International Airport in Miami. Searching for airfares often seems like a game passengers are set up to lose. Prices change from day to day, even minute to minute. Scouring multiple websites for the best deal can be overwhelming. And after you book, there's no guarantee you got the best price.

frequently than other airlines, so you can feel more confident locking in a price. But their prices aren't always the lowest. Researching multiple airlines' fares is the only way to get a good deal.

It wasn't always this complicated. Before the airlines were deregulated in 1978, airfares were approved by the government. Prices were consistent and printed in timetables. But because air travel hadn't been embraced by Americans and was something of a luxury, planes were often less than half full.

Deregulation allowed airlines to set fares and routes on their own. In the early '80s, American Airlines started selling empty seats at a steep discount. The aim was to fill up planes and compete with new discount airlines such as PeopleExpress.

To prevent business travelers from trading down to cheaper tickets, the airlines required that fliers buy two to three weeks in advance and spend a Saturday night at their destination. The discount airline ticket was born.

Today, sophisticated computer programs analyze travel data and set a range of ticket prices so airlines can get the most money out of each flight. Prices are generally higher for seats sold at the last minute, which are usually bought by business travelers. Refundable tickets tend to be the most expensive, and cheap fares come with lots of restrictions.

Other factors go into the price, too: How fast are tickets selling compared with previous years? Is there a conference or special event in the destination city? Fares are often adjusted to match other airlines' prices.

But there's still a great deal of human intervention.

"To a degree, it's trial and error," said Greg Aretakis, vice president of revenue production at Frontier Airlines.

There can be as many as 20 prices on any given flight. Airline executives say that all that helps them boost revenue by 3 to 6 percent. If they price tickets too low, the airline can lose money. If prices are too high, seats go unsold.

"If that seat goes out empty, we can't put it on the shelf and sell it the next day," said American Airlines spokesman Tim Smith. "A seat that goes unfilled is like a banana that instantly spoils on takeoff."

Museum dishes the history of Vidalia onions

VIDALIA, Ga. (AP) — They've started fistfights and court battles, been romanticized in country songs and counterfeited by bootleggers. Their trademark sweetness has made them a coveted ingredient in recipes from salads and relishes to cookies and muffins.

If a museum dedicated to onions sounds rooted in folly, the history behind the famous Vidalia onion can likely hold its own with other veggie shrines such as the Idaho Potato Museum, the Red River Valley Sugarbeet Museum in Minnesota and the tiny Carrot Museum tucked in a Rhode Island bed-and-breakfast.

The freshly opened Vidalia Onion Museum digs fairly deep to dish the good, the bad and the yummy on Georgia's official state vegetable — including the unearthed origin of Vidalias' reputation for being so sweet they can be eaten like apples.

"You go anywhere in the country and you get these crazy, random museums. So naturally people expected we had an onion museum," said Wendy Brannen, who oversaw creation of the museum in her job as executive director of the Vidalia Onion Committee, which handles marketing of the crop.

It took five years and $250,000. But the onion museum, which shares space with Brannen's committee offices and the local tourism bureau, opened its doors April 29 to coincide with the celebration of the spring harvest.

The museum has exhibits on the science behind why onions grown in rural southern Georgia turn out so mild (low-sulfur soil, for starters). There's a foodie section with recipes for Vidalia onion muffins and congealed salad with chopped onions, lemon gelatin and cottage cheese.

One corner is dedicated to TV clips and other pop-culture curios. There's Sammy Kershaw's country song about a girl with a funky name: "Sweet Vidalia/You always gotta make me cry." And who'd have thought knowing that Vidalias come from Georgia was an answer worth $25,000 on "Who Wants To Be A Millionaire?"

Mark Labat of Sidell, La., tours the Vidalia Onion Museum in Vidalia, Ga., on June 14. The museum chronicles the Vidalia onion's Depression-era origins to its rise as a gourmet crop worth $150 million annually.

For the uninitiated, the museum handily breaks down the basics: Only 20 counties in Georgia can grow and sell onions under the Vidalia name, by order of state and federal law. Each year, onion farmers ship about 200 million pounds of Vidalias, valued at $150 million.

Still, the museum's juicy centerpiece is a collection of photos, newspaper clippings and videotaped interviews that tell the story of how Georgia's prized cash crop grew from a few Depression-era farmers who randomly started growing onions to supplement their cotton and tobacco harvests.

One of those early stories features a firsthand account from farmer Mose Coleman, who grew his first onions from mail-ordered seeds in the 1930s and sold them out of a trailer made from the back of a Model T Ford. Coleman tells of how he sold his crop to a grocery chain's buyer by biting into a raw, ripe onion and eating it like a piece of fruit.

"I pulled out my onion, and I ate it there in front of him," Coleman recalled in a speech years ago in Vidalia. "He'd never seen anything like it. There wasn't any tears coming out of my eyes, and I wasn't making no face."

The Vidalia onion's reputation rippled outward over the decades. A state farmers market established here in 1949 sold onions to consumers traveling in from Macon, Savannah and Augusta. In the 1960s, Vidalia-headquartered Piggly Wiggly supermarkets began buying the onions by the truckload and selling them across the South.

It took a while for farmers to settle on the Vidalia name. Grower Pinky McRae insisted on calling his onions "Toombs County Sweets." Others stood by "Glennville Sweets," named for a neighboring farming town. Disputes over what to call the onions grew so heated they sometimes erupted into fistfights.

By the 1980s, Vidalia farmers put aside their infighting to face a common foe: bootleggers who were shipping onions from Texas into Georgia and bagging them with Vidalia labels to fetch premium prices.

Newspaper clippings chronicle tales of onion intrigue. One farmer hired a private investigator to go undercover and spy on a suspicious competitor. Another grower was reported to have borrowed a gadget from Coca-Cola, so he could sneak into a neighbor's fields and test the sugar content of his onions.

By 1985, one farmer accused of selling bogus Vidalias got hauled into court, but growers couldn't make fraud charges stick. Nothing in state law defined what made an onion a Vidalia.

Farmers began lobbying state lawmakers and Congress. In 1986, the 20-county Vidalia onion growing area was defined in Georgia law. It won federal protection in 1989.

The onion battles made headlines across America, and the crop's legend grew. Vidalia Mayor Ronnie Dixon says he realized his city's namesake onions had become downright famous soon after he took office in 1994.

"People started calling city hall and asking how they could get onions mailed to them," Dixon said.

Even though the town's a bit off the beaten path, about 15 miles south of Interstate 16 between Macon and Savannah, plenty of pilgrims have been finding their way to the museum. There, onions grow in patches planted on either side of the front door. In less than two months, more than 250 visitors have signed the museum's guest book.

Mark Labat and Barbara Ouder of Slidell, La., wandered in on a recent Tuesday. After vacationing in Savannah, they opted to make a special detour through Vidalia rather than head to Plains, Georgia's peanut capital and home to former President Jimmy Carter — who made sure the White House kitchen stocked Vidalia onions.

"We were looking at a map, wondering where could we go," said Labat, an auto mechanic. "I said I'd rather go to Vidalia. You can't do Louisiana cooking without onions."

A not-so-sinful take on deviled eggs

The Associated Press
Deviled eggs are a classic accompaniment to summer picnics and barbecue. But they generally are loaded with fat and calories from the egg yolks and mayonnaise.

We set out to remake the filling to be flavorful, yet pack significantly less guilt. Egg yolks do have great nutritional value; the majority of an egg's vitamins and minerals are actually found in the yolk. But along with those nutrients are plenty of fat and cholesterol.

To lower the fat and cholesterol but keep the luscious flavor, we opted to use just some of the yolks. For the creaminess associated with mayonnaise, we used a combination of low-fat mayonnaise and pureed low-fat cottage cheese.

The cottage cheese may sound a little off-putting, but it's a great trick for when you need thick, creamy and low-fat. With a relatively neutral flavor, it can be combined with other ingredients, such as fresh herbs, to be used in place of mayonnaise, even as a sandwich spread.

NOT-SO-SINFUL DEVILED EGGS

Start to finish: 45 minutes
Makes 24 halves

- 12 large eggs
- Ice
- 1/2 cup low-fat cottage cheese
- 3 tablespoons low-fat mayonnaise
- 1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
- 2 teaspoons cider vinegar
- 1 tablespoon prepared horseradish
- 1 tablespoon sweet pickle relish
- Salt and ground black pepper, to taste
- Fresh chives, to garnish
- Smoked paprika, to garnish

Place the eggs in a large saucepan and fill with cool water. Cover the pan and bring to a boil over medium-high heat. Remove the pan from the heat and let sit for 15 minutes. Drain the hot water, leaving the eggs in the pan. Fill the pan with cold water and a cup of ice. Allow the eggs to cool completely.

Meanwhile, in a food processor, combine the cottage cheese, mayonnaise, mustard, vinegar and horseradish. Puree until smooth. Set aside.

Peel the eggs but keep them intact. Slice the eggs in half lengthwise. Retain the egg whites. Discard half of the yolks.

In a medium bowl, mash the remaining yolks. Add the pureed dressing mixture and the relish. Stir to combine; then season with salt and black pepper. Using a pastry bag or a zip-close bag with the corner cut off, or using a spoon, refill the wells in the egg whites. Garnish the tops with a little sprinkle of smoked paprika and some chopped chives.

An apple pie fit for the road

The Associated Press

Hand pies with apple filling provide the all-American comfort of apple pie, minus the need for fork and plate.

While not a new concept, hand pies turn apple pie into a convenient, easy and mess-free treat for Fourth of July celebrations. The term hand pie has been around a long time; farming cultures used to make them for workers to eat in the field. And they're different from tarts, which lack top crusts and are cooked in a shallow pan.

If apple pie isn't your favorite, you can make a filling from fresh berries instead. You will need to increase the amount of cornstarch, depending on how juicy your berries are. You want the filling to be thick so it doesn't ooze out.

To add visual appeal, small cookie cutters can be used to create the steam vents in the top rounds of dough. Be sure to do so before placing the dough over the filling.

APPLE HAND PIES

Start to finish: 1 hour
Makes 18 hand pies

- 2/3 cup sugar
- 2 teaspoons cinnamon
- 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 3 small baking apples, such as Granny Smith, peeled, cored and diced (about 2 cups)
- 2 teaspoons cornstarch
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- 1 tablespoon water
- Two 14.1-ounce packages refrigerated pie dough (each package contains 2 rounds of dough)
- 1 egg
- 1 tablespoon milk

In a small bowl, combine the sugar, cinnamon and nutmeg. Set aside.

In a deep skillet over medium-high heat, melt the butter. Add the apples and 1/3 cup of the sugar mixture. Saute for 3 to 4 minutes, or until just tender.

In a small bowl, stir together the cornstarch, lemon juice and water; then add to the apples and stir. Cook until the juices thicken and bubble, about 1 minute. Set the filling aside to cool.

Heat the oven to 350 F. Line 2 baking sheets with parchment paper.

One at a time, on a lightly floured surface, unroll each of the 4 rounds of pie dough. Using a 3-inch circular cookie cutter, cut out 9 rounds from each piece of dough for a total of 36 rounds.

In a small bowl, beat together the egg and the milk.

To assemble the hand pies, place 1 dough round in front of you. Lightly brush around the edges of the round with the egg mixture. Place 2 teaspoons of apple filling in the center of the dough. Gently press down so that the filling is enclosed and the edges of the top round meet the edges of the bottom round. Use a fork to crimp and seal all around the edges. Brush the top with more of the egg mixture and sprinkle with the reserved cinnamon sugar. Use a paring knife to poke a hole in the top to vent steam. Repeat with the remaining dough rounds and filling.

Place the hand pies on the baking sheets, leaving 1 inch between them. Bake for 18 to 20 minutes, or until the crust is golden brown. Let cool for 5 minutes; then transfer to a wire rack to finish cooling.

Nutrition information per pie (values are rounded to the nearest whole number): 241 calories; 111 calories from fat (45 percent of total calories); 12 g fat (5 g saturated; 0 g trans fats); 16 mg cholesterol; 32 g carbohydrate; 2 g protein; 1 g fiber; 167 mg sodium.

The flavor of lasagna, the substance of chicken

The Associated Press

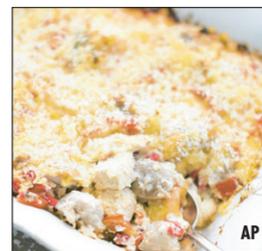

The goal was a simple chicken casserole that had the rich, satisfying flavor of a lasagna.

Actually, that's a lie. The goal was a chicken roulade — a dish in which chicken breasts are pounded flat, then slathered or layered with some sort of filling, then rolled into a log and roasted or braised.

Except this batch of roulade didn't cooperate. During roasting, the cheesy innards oozed out all over the baking sheet, then promptly burned. The result was an inedible, ugly mess.

Attempt No. 2 wasn't much better. The pounding and rolling was ditched in favor of cutting slits into chicken breasts, then they were stuffed with a cheese and roasted red pepper filling, pinching them shut and roasting. Nice try. Simply put, they looked like roadkill.

If the cheese wanted so badly to ooze out of the chicken, why not reverse the dish and start it that way? Done. And thus was born this simple chicken casserole that tastes like a lasagna. The chicken can be served over a bed of noodles or rice. It also could be spooned into a sub roll.

CHICKEN LASAGNA CASSEROLE

Start to finish: 45 minutes (20 minutes active)
Servings: 8

- 1 cup ricotta cheese
- 1 cup shredded mozzarella
- 16-ounce jar roasted red peppers, drained, patted dry and diced (about 2 cups)
- 1 egg
- 1/2 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1/2 teaspoon dried oregano
- 1/2 teaspoon dried basil
- 3/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1 1/4 pounds boneless, skinless chicken breasts, cut into 1-inch chunks
- 1 1/4 pounds boneless, skinless chicken thighs, cut into 1-inch chunks
- 3/4 cup panko breadcrumbs
- 2 tablespoons butter, melted

Heat the oven to 400 F. Coat an 8-by-11-inch baking pan with cooking spray.

In a medium bowl, mix together the ricotta cheese, mozzarella, red peppers, egg, lemon juice, garlic, oregano, basil, salt and pepper. Set aside.

In a large skillet over medium-high, heat the oil. Add all of the chicken and cook, stirring occasionally, until lightly browned, about 6 to 8 minutes. It does not need to cook through. Transfer the chicken to the prepared baking pan. Pour the cheese mixture over the chicken; then stir gently to combine.

In a small bowl, mix together the panko and butter. Sprinkle the panko over the chicken; then bake for 20 to 25 minutes, or until the breadcrumbs are browned and the chicken is cooked through.

SPECIAL TO FLORIDA FREEDOM NEWSPAPERS

FRESH COAT: Careful paint selection for your walls, ceiling and cabinets can brighten up your kitchen without spending a fortune on new cabinets or appliances.

KITCHEN COLOR CONFIDENTIAL

Fresh paint a great recipe for affordable kitchen remodeling

Special to Florida Freedom Newspapers

A remodeled kitchen is the fondest dream of many homeowners. But at an average cost of $56,000 for a "mid-range" upgrade according to Remodeling magazine, the price is simply too steep for most. That said, if you're on a budget, there's a great alternative: spending $100 or so to give your kitchen a whole new look with paint.

"Many people underestimate the dramatic change you can make in a kitchen with a little imagination and a couple of cans of paint," said Debbie Zimmer, color expert for the Paint Quality Institute. "But actually, you can use paint not only to freshen the wall color, but also to totally change the appearance of your kitchen cabinets."

The only ingredients you'll need to cook up a whole new look for your culinary center are some careful planning, a good eye for color and a willingness to spend time in your kitchen with some paint cans as your companions.

Where to begin? Zimmer recommends you visit the websites of major paint companies. On many, you'll find idea centers with paint palettes designed by professional colorists and visualizing tools that allow you to pre-test your color choices online.

Once you've settled on a color scheme, it's time to paint. Assuming you're going to do a top-to-bottom makeover, start by removing the cabinet doors, as well as the hinges and knobs. If you're going to re-use the hardware, put these items in a plastic bag so they don't get lost.

After placing drop cloths to protect the floors, paint the ceiling first, then the walls and finally, the trim. For easy maintenance, use top-quality 100 percent acrylic latex semi-gloss paint. It will resist stains and stand up to scrubbing better than a flat paint. Now turn your attention to the cabinets again.

Scrub the kitchen cabinets and doors with a degreasing solution to remove dirt and grime. When they've dried, sand the cabinets to remove any loose paint and to provide better "tack" for the new coating. Use a wet cloth to wipe off any dust created by the sanding.

Next, apply a top-quality latex primer to the cabinets. Use a roller wherever possible and a small brush where necessary. Let the primer dry overnight.

Finish the cabinets in the same way by applying a coat of top-quality 100 percent acrylic latex paint. Here, too, it's best to use a gloss or semi-gloss finish, because they are more stain-resistant and easier to clean. Don't re-install the cabinet doors quite yet. Wait until the paint is totally dry.

To put a perfect finishing touch on your kitchen remodeling, consider purchasing new knobs or handles for your cabinets either online or at your local home center. They're readily available in a wide range of shapes, styles, sizes, colors and materials. One of them is sure to strike your fancy.

When your cabinets are restored and everything is done, stand back and take pride in your new kitchen ... and in the thousands of dollars you saved by doing your own remodeling.

For more how-to information on home painting, as well as color and design ideas, visit www.paintquality.com or blog.paintquality.com.
