A spin on Child Abuse Prevention Month

Volunteers from Santa Rosa Kids' House plant a "pin wheel garden" at Walmart in Pea Ridge Friday.

Pinwheels bring back memories of innocence, childhood and fun.

Many victims of child abuse and neglect have an innocence that is lost.

April 1 marks the start of Child Abuse Prevention Month and in Santa Rosa County, lawns at businesses, schools and public offices will be decorated with pinwheel gardens in recognition.

The pinwheels themselves will represent Florida's efforts to prevent child abuse and change the way the state approaches the prevention of child abuse and neglect.

"The most powerful source of social movement is generated by individual action," said Santa Rosa Kids' House facility coordinator Briana Taylor. "We challenge Santa Rosa County to help us move this community in the right direction."

Gardens like the one being set up Friday at Walmart in Pea Ridge will be set up at various locations to help raise awareness to the on-going responsibility to ensure every child has the same opportunity to grow and develop in a healthy environment.

With the advent of the Santa Rosa Kids' House a new level of security has been added to those victimized, especially children.

"A lot of people feel a lot more secure coming forward because of public awareness and places like the Santa Rosa Kids' House," said Santa Rosa County Sheriff Wendell Hall. "People now have a feeling that something will

Some of the sights from recent Santa Rosa County Fairs

The fair is coming to town

It is fair time in Santa Rosa County, but this is now what residents have grown accustomed to in recent years.

This year the Santa Rosa County Fair is going back to its roots; to its horticultural roots.

This year the fair is focusing on horticulture by bringing in more animals and more horticulture acts, which is what the fair is really all about.

"We had a pretty nice livestock exhibit last year ... but we have an even bigger one this year," said Rick Paschall, Chairman of the Santa Rosa County fair board.

This year the fair is putting on a children's

Milton residents zone in on downtown at meeting

By Bill Gamblin
377-4611 | @SRPG_Bill
news@srpressgazette.com

Milton residents turned out Saturday to give their opinion on the city's proposed Milltown Overlay District.

About 35 residents and interested parties voiced what they would like to see for the future of the district, which runs from Broad Street west to the Blackwater Heritage Trail, north to Chumuckla Highway and south to Berryhill Road.

"We missed the first two meetings because we were out of town," said Milton residents John and Debbie Carpenter. "What surprised us is that, after this meeting, the majority rules."

"We like it the way it is and don't want to see a lot of change."

While change is the main concern, Milton Planning and Zoning Director Randy Jorgensen posted a sign for everyone to stress the purpose of the meeting.

Many of those at the meeting, like Teresa Derher, were glad just to have a say in the proposal.

"As long as we have a voice I am happy," Derher said. "I just don't think commercial and residential mix."

"Right now we are a close community on my block and with one piece of property vacant, I don't want people to come in and disrupt what we have."

While residents were being heard at Saturday's meeting at Milton City Hall, not everyone was pleased with the meeting.

"I was hoping for more open discussions," Ted Fraizer said. "I have a lot of questions, but (Jorgensen) never paused.

"There isn't one matter in particular over another, but I do have concerns about historical since there are a lot of 100-year-old houses."

Santa Rosa Historical Society President Wes Meiss was in attendance and he understands where several residents stand.

"I think they would have been happy by expanding the historical district downtown," Meiss said. "The

I wanted to give you some information with so many negative things being said about the sheriff's office.

Last Friday, my mothers home was broken into. Mementos were taken and I did not know what to do. My friends insisted I call the sheriff. I didn't think anything could be done, but my friends pushed me. They sent an officer out to my home to my surprise. He was very thorough and showed a great deal of expertise taking photos, asking questions. I felt bad about calling him, since I did not know the value of what was taken. He assured me they had ways other people do not with investigators on matters like this.

Ask the Preacher

...a weekly column answering your questions with Biblical answers about life.

Dear Pastor Gallups, "Does the passage about the rich young ruler teach that Jesus expects His followers to give up all of their possessions to follow Him?" - J. S., Milton

Dear J.S.,

It's true that Jesus told the rich young ruler to give up his wealth and follow Him. Jesus also said a few short verses later, "It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God". This was not a blanket condemnation of wealth or a statement that somehow the young man could "earn" his salvation.

Consider the other times that Jesus didn't rebuke friends who owned property or command them to sell their homes and businesses. In fact, He often ate with people and stayed at their homes. Friends like Mary and Martha or Lazarus were certainly not poor. He was even buried in the new and extravagant tomb of Joseph of Arimathea, a wealthy member of the Sanhedrin Council.

So what was different about Jesus' statement to this young man? Jesus knew the young man's heart. He knew that he was looking for a way to earn his salvation on his own terms.

He may have thought that Jesus would give him a specific task or good deed to perform that would win eternal life, one that wouldn't require him to humble himself and unconditionally set his life under the authority of Christ. Instead, Jesus set up a requirement that clearly illustrated the basic issue: the man's riches were more important than securing a personal, saving relationship with and through Jesus Christ.

Jesus wasn't implying that salvation could actually be earned by good deeds. Even if the rich young ruler would have given away his riches and followed Jesus, he wouldn't have "earned" his salvation. However, if he had done so, he would have surrendered his desire to be "Lord" of his own life and acknowledged God's authority over his life.

Jesus felt compassion for this young man. But because He knew that the ruler was seeking to manipulate God, He had no choice but to send him away.

Tax time right time for financial planning

Special to the Press Gazette

Tax season is nearly done, but that's no reason to be done with taxes. The tax return is a roadmap to financial planning, giving insight into investment, retirement and estate planning needs.

"Tax season gives us a snapshot to use in framing our financial picture," said Hardy Eubanks, CPA/PFS with Eubanks & Rouse, CPAs. "With W-2s, 1099s and other paperwork handy, it's an important opportunity to assess where we are and to make adjustments that can move us closer to our financial goals."

This year, in particular, the need for financial planning is more urgent. Several federal tax provisions are scheduled to expire at the end of the year or take effect at the beginning of 2013 that could influence financial strategies. The tax rate on capital gains, for instance, is scheduled to rise from 15-20 percent. Qualified dividends are set to be taxed as ordinary income. And a new 3.8 percent Medicare tax will be applied to the investment income of higher income and higher net-worth individuals.

"It's important to understand how these changes could affect your financial situation and to plan now for appropriate investment, retirement and estate strategies," Eubanks added. "Year-end could be too late."

As a CPA with the Personal Financial Planning (PFS) credential, Eubanks has demonstrated robust knowledge in tax, investment, retirement, estate and insurance planning and commitment to ongoing education. His passion is to work closely with his partners and other business professionals in providing comprehensive financial plans that meet or exceed the clients' expectations.

Council on Aging to host support group

OUR VIEW

Even a parent can learn

Last week, the United States Department of Agriculture and the Florida Department of Agriculture were in town, congratulating the schools of Santa Rosa for helping students become healthier. This week, we want to take time to thank the folks that led to that recognition.

The latest numbers from the National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey (NHANES) show the percentage of American children who are deemed overweight has tripled since the 1970s and, today, one in every five students between ages 6 and 17 is said to be overweight.

As our children pack on the pounds, they found their veins getting clogged. For more than a decade, clinical trials have been under way to see if children should be placed on cholesterol-lowering drugs called statins. Suddenly, U.S. children are beginning to see problems (like high blood pressure, Type-2 diabetes and elevated cholesterol levels) not usually seen until later in life.

We certainly have no trouble remembering the school lunches of just a few decades ago. Fried foods were the norm. Sugar was often added to make foods tasty to young palettes, and things like French fries and potato chips often were served as a compliment to the main entre. By the 1970s, most schools were even adding ice cream for children to purchase.

We say all of this to note our local school system has every reason to feel motivated and to do its part to make our children healthy. The system has every reason to show youngsters how to lead a healthy lifestyle. And working in concert with physical education teachers, students can learn there is more to an active life than sitting on a sofa engaged in endless hours of video games.

When it comes to eating and exercise habits, like so many other things, children learn it at home. Our school system is to be applauded for its effort. Staff members are trying to start an education process early. As one student noted, many fried foods have been replaced with baked foods. Ice cream is often jettisoned in favor of low-fat yogurt. Ketchup is not counted as a vegetable.

We wonder how many parents take the time to see what the schools are serving for lunch. (We print that list in this paper every week.) But our responsibility as parents goes beyond keeping an eye on what the schools are feeding our children. We each need to extend the school lesson to the home and the real world.

A healthy lunch does little good if a hurried, work-frazzled parent takes the easy way out and simply pushes fast food burgers and fries at the child for the evening meal. Similarly, we parents must realize that while it is "convenient," high-sugar cereals are far from the ideal thing to serve our youngsters as we send them out the door on their way to learn.

We should all take time to thank our school system for being so forward-thinking when it comes to the health of our children, but we can't let it stop there. In a way, our schools are also teaching us. We're being shown it is possible to be healthy and to get there one step at a time.

If our children accept it at school they can, and will, accept it at home. It's our responsibility to make sure the lesson is repeated when our children get there.

I don't really care where. Just the old one there is part of our county heritage and doesn't need to be destroyed.
Terry Stabler

I would still like to see it built in downtown Milton to keep people going through the town and historical element.
Miranda Burkhead

It needs to go to East Milton by 84 Lumber or the Sheriff's Office. It would be better out of the way so no one would see the bums going in and out.
Joshua Swain

A more central location. Not downtown Milton or Pace, but a more central location for everyone.
Larry Worthington

The current location is the best one. I think a nicer and newer courthouse would help downtown Milton.
Connie Gaudio

I would prefer it to be built by the Navarre exit or somewhere there is a lot of activity so people can see it.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Bullies are a problem

Thirteen million kids are bullies nationwide!

Thank God for Lee Hirsch, filmmaker of "Bully."

Mike Huckabee interviewed him (bullied as a child) and the family whose son was punched, shoved and bullied on a school bus.

What a tragedy! I recall television reports of similar incidents in the Panhandle.

Years ago, an area paper printed a lengthy story about a gay student in Gulf Breeze. Tormented, he didn't want to go to school. I think his mother died; his gutsy father reported the bullying. Shame on students, teachers, principals, et al aware but do nothing!

In "Bully" the mother confronts the principal, receiving no response. Disinterested, the latter brags about her grandchild.

Not my nature to physically do so, I would have slapped the principal and any bully observed in the act.

God bless those attempting to remove the "R" rating.

"Bully" should be seen by everyone to motivate those who know situations exist instead of cowardly remaining silent, perpetuating this disgusting practice!

I commend Hirsch for congratulating the school allowing him to videotape actual bullying. Most administrations would be defensive, denying bullying was prevalent in their schools.

As a fifth grader, I was sent to the principal's office for kicking someone in the chins (mocking my brother's name). I admitted doing it; said I'd do it again.

Now a Christian, senior citizen, I'd rethink it, although I would have lost it with that "Bully" principal.

Students, tell your parents if you're being bullied.

God bless us all as only He can and intervene with the heartbreak and suicides bullies cause.

All that money for nothing

My letter is in reference to the courthouse and it costing a little over $205,000 so far, and not laid the first brick.

My question is, do we really need a huge courthouse that would take up about "nine acres of land" for the building and parking area? A building of that size sounds like all functions that are carried on in a courthouse would be in one building.

Milton, with its population growth, lifestyle, drug addicts and increase in crimes such as murder, rape, and etc.

The lottery really was supposed to support and benefit the school system.

Now we are one of those 'wet' counties.

Prayer has been removed from school to the point it is, in many cases, dangerous to send your children off to school.

The system stinks. No rules or regulations will work with humankind other than those, which was made by our Heavenly Father who created us.

The needs of the jail, such as a suitable size courtroom, judge's, etc. should have been built years ago when the jail was built. Think of the money spent, at the taxpayer's expense, transferring prisoners back and forth to the court sessions.

The courthouse issue should not be centered on the needs of the jail, but on the residents of Santa Rosa County who will be paying for it in years to come.

I repeat: Decisions of this magnitude should be placed on a ballot and the branch offices placed in different areas of Santa Rosa, or beneficial, as well as much appreciated.

I really favor keeping the current courthouse in operation for civil cases, etc. and building the large courtroom facility in East Milton with the location decided by the sheriff. He is responsible for transferring prisoners to and from court sessions. Then just upgrade the branch offices in the county.

No more architectural designs please.

Milton does not want to compete with Ponce de Leon. Unless they have changed dramatically, they are, or were, about the size of Bagdad or Jay.

My main request to the Santa Rosa County Commissioners: Stop wasting money. Consider the needs of the people who had confidence in you by voting you in.

Marion Cumbie
Milton, Fla.

Once they get their commerce claws in us...

Our Supreme Court heard three days of oral arguments on the legality of ObamaCare. Neither joint sessions of Congress nor oral arguments are as fun as they sound.

The arguments are nuanced ones, cloaked in unnecessarily technical language that no one really understands — much like the health care bill itself. Even a New York Times poll says that 72 percent of Americans do not want ObamaCare.

The case hinges on the sly wording of what consequence is attached to not complying with the individual mandate, which is the core of this massive intrusion into our daily lives. At first Obama called it a "tax." Later, when he saw that was a legal problem, he called it a "penalty." His administration has flipped on this issue more than a meth-house mattress.

Washington learned long ago that if you name a bill something that no one could argue with, like "The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act," you could put pretty much anything you like in a 2,000-ish page bill and pass it before anyone reads it.

In a stunning act of hubris which defined the first two years of Democrat-controlled, filibuster-proof House, Senate and Presidency, then-House Majority Leader Nancy Pelosi famously said of the contentious ObamaCare bill as it slithered through, "We have to pass the bill so you can find out what is in it."

Much like the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina, Democrats realized they had a narrow window of opportunity, just two years, to loot the U.S. Treasury, knowing full well the police would soon be there. In this case the police arrived with the landslide "shellacking" Democrats took in the 2010 elections. Republicans regained control of the House and took the keys to the liquor cabinet away from the less financially responsible kids.

HART TALK

Since then, Obama appointed reliable liberal Sonia Sotomayor to the Supreme Court. He said he was looking for someone with "empathy," preferably a bi-racial woman with some experience being a judge. At the time I suggested Paula Abdul. She fits Obama's criteria and clearly, given her success in Hollywood with only one hit song, she has spent a lot of time around old men in robes.

Health care in America remains a concern. We live in a country that celebrates overeating. We cheer the reigning Nathan's Hot Dogs eating champion, Joey Chestnut, as he chokes down 60 wieners (beating the record set in the 1980s by Elton John). Why then is the current incentive (dying early from cardiac disease or obesity-induced diabetes) not motivation enough? Throwing everyone into the same insurance risk pool at the same price is not going to help matters.

Just to sum up the simple math on the best health care system the world has ever known, the average family has out-of-pocket expenses for health care (after employer-paid insurance and the like) of $2,853 per year. This is 33 percent of what we spend yearly on our transportation. The same U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics report says we spend $118 on "reading," which goes a long way toward explaining why ObamaCare slipped through.

Obama knows his health care law is a loser, so he does what he normally does: finds someone to blame. As a model, he points to Romney's state health care system in Massachusetts, which is a disaster. He really doesn't need to use such a recent data point when there are older models of socialized medicine he can chart the trajectory of his plan against, like North Korea's. Fellow "Glorious Leaders," from Hitler through most recently Cuba's Castro, have bought the favor of their electorate with generous, socialized medicine meth.

I have a vested interest in this battle, and not only as an advocate for liberty, free markets and limited government. My oldest is in her third year of medical school. Medicine should remain a beacon for our best and brightest, who set out upon their careers to help their patients. They should not become petty bureaucrats in the Obama cradle-to-grave socialist state, bound by political expediencies and not by the best outcomes for their patients.

If we can be forced to buy government-mandated health insurance under duress of a dubious interpretation of the Commerce Clause, with the validation of the Supreme Court and its Due Process Clause, for a health care bill more characteristic of Santa Claus, what is next?

Relish your fleeting freedoms. Liberty was nice while it lasted.

Supreme Court disciplines 22 attorneys

Special to the Press Gazette

The Florida Bar, the state's guardian for the integrity of the legal profession, announces that the Florida Supreme Court in recent court orders disciplined 22 attorneys, which included one from Pensacola, disbarred five and suspending 13. Some attorneys received more than one form of discipline. Two attorneys were placed on probation; four attorneys were publicly reprimanded and one attorney was ordered to pay restitution.

Elizabeth Ann Amond, 811 W. Garden St., Pensacola, publicly reprimanded and placed on probation for three years, following a Feb. 20 court order. (Admitted to practice: 1996) Amond is further directed to attend a trust accounting workshop. Amond improperly commingled funds by placing earned and unearned fees in her trust account, failed to provide monthly bank reconciliations to The Florida Bar's auditor and failed to follow the rule requiring that trust funds held for a specific purpose be applied only to that purpose. (Case No. SC11-1664)

Richard Lawrence Brown, P.O. Box 690282, Vero Beach, permanently disbarred, effective immediately, following a Feb. 20 court order. (Admitted to practice: 1993) Brown engaged in a course of conduct involving the neglect of legal matters and misappropriation of approximately $180,000 of client funds from his trust account. He is incarcerated in county jail pending trial on various criminal charges. (Case Nos. SC11-1030 & SC11-1427)

Mark F. Dickson, 10940 N.W. 15th St., Pembroke Pines, suspended until further order, effective 30 days from a Feb. 14 court order.

(Admitted to practice: 1975) According to a petition for emergency suspension, Dickson appeared to be causing great public harm by misappropriating client trust funds. A Bar audit found that Dickson improperly commingled funds and converted some of the clients' funds for his own personal use. (Case No. SC12-237)

William Lee Durden III, 1834 Starwan Road E, Jacksonville, suspended for six months, effective 30 days from a Feb. 20 court order. (Admitted to practice: 2002) During a series of controlled telephone conversations, which were recorded by the State Attorney's Office investigator, Durden admitted receiving payment for representing at least one criminal defendant while employed as an assistant public defender. The defendant had previously been declared indigent and was represented by the public defender's office at the taxpayers' expense during the time of Durden's employment. (Case No. SC11-2444)

David Nathan Finkelstein, 9000 Blind Pass Road, Apt. B105, Sarasota, suspended for 20 days, effective 30 days from a Feb. 20 court order. Further, upon reinstatement, Finkelstein is placed on probation for one year. (Admitted to practice: 1987) Finkelstein engaged in a pattern of misconduct including: neglect, lack of diligence, and a lack of communication with clients. He also failed to use proper trust accounting procedures. (Case No. SC11-1469)

George Frederick Frank, 5355 Town Center Road, Suite 900, Boca Raton, publicly reprimanded following a Feb. 20 court order. (Admitted to practice: 2009) Frank was arrested and convicted of driving under the influence and careless driving after a traffic accident. (Case No. SC12-231)

Eric P. Gifford, 3807 County Road 826, Anna, Texas, disbarred effective immediately, following a Feb. 20 court order. (Admitted to practice: 2001) Gifford misappropriated $5,000 of client funds held in trust for a client who is mentally disabled and legally blind. He admitted to using to using the funds for personal bills and expenses including private school tuition for his children. (Case No. SC11-1182)

Mary Alice Gwynn, 805 George Bush Blvd., Delray Beach, suspended for 91 days, following a Feb. 16 court order. (Admitted to practice: 1991) In numerous instances, Gwynn acted dishonestly, incompetently and in bad faith in a client's pending litigation. Gwynn failed to expedite litigation in the best interest of the client. She also filed frivolous claims to harass her opponent and opposing counsel, made false allegations in testimony, engaged in willful abuse of the judicial system, and failed to research and verify claims before filing with the court. (Case No. SC08-622)

Jeffrey Martin Hanly, 1312 3rd. Street N., Jacksonville Beach, disbarred effective immediately following a Feb. 20 court order. (Admitted to practice: 2002) An investigation by the Bar as a result of numerous complaints against Hanly found that Hanly abandoned his law practice and misappropriated trust funds. (Case No. SC11-1217)

Mary D. Hansen, 4393 S. Ridgewood Ave., Suite 1, Port Orange, suspended for 91 days effective immediately, following a Feb. 14 court order. (Admitted to practice: 1981) Hansen was found in contempt for failing to comply with the conditions of a Sept. 22, 2011, suspension order. Hansen did not submit to the Bar a sworn affidavit listing the names and addresses of all persons and entities to which she gave notice of her suspension. (Case No. SC11-2498)

Dwayne Bisford Johnson Sr., 733 Cypress Drive, Apt. A, Lake Park, permanently disbarred effective immediately, following a Feb. 23 court order. (Admitted to practice: 1998) Johnson was found in contempt for failing to comply with the conditions of an Aug. 29 disbarment order. Johnson did not submit to the Bar a sworn affidavit listing the names and addresses of all persons and entities to which he gave notice of his disbarment. (Case No. SC11-2499)

Mark Howard Klein, 2263 N.W. Boca Raton Blvd., Suite 209, Boca Raton, suspended for 90 days following a Feb. 20 court order. (Admitted to practice: 1986) Klein was the subject of several disciplinary proceedings. Pending complaints involved loan modifications where an ongoing pattern of ineffective communication coupled with failing to perform meaningful services. Klein also pleaded no contest to two misdemeanor charges of assault and battery. (Case No. SC10-2341)

Petia Dimitrova Knowles, 5110 S.W. 101 st Ave., Cooper City, suspended until further order, effective 30 days from a Jan. 17 court order. (Admitted to practice: 2005) (Case No. SC10-1019).

Anett Lopez, 3140 W.

Kennedy Blvd., Suite 107, Tampa, suspended for 10 days, effective 30 days from a Feb. 20 court order. (Admitted to practice: 2005) Lopez notarized a client's family law pleadings in his absence, completed improper notarial certificates and misapplied funds for payments of costs from the client. Lopez failed to properly supervise her assistant who handled all deposits for the office and was responsible for ensuring the funds were posted to the proper accounts. A review of Lopez' trust account records revealed that she was not maintaining minimum accounting procedures. (Case No. SC11-670)

'Easter egg' eggplant will amaze the kids

By Theresa Friday
Extension Faculty-Residential
Horticulture UF/IFAS
Santa Rosa County

High in fiber, low in calories and cholesterol free, the eggplant is a great edible to add to the summer garden. Although we think of eggplant as a vegetable, botanically it is a fruit.

In Northwest Florida, our long hot growing season is perfect for the eggplant. One of the most common problems encountered in growing eggplants is transplanting them into the spring garden too early. Cold temperatures below 50 degrees F injure this crop. Low temperatures tend to harden eggplants and stunt their growth. Since stunted plants recover very slowly, transplants should be set in the garden after the average daily temperature is above 70 degrees F.

The best temperatures are between 80-90 degrees F during the day and 70-80 degrees F during the night. Plant growth is curtailed at temperatures below 60 degrees F. Gardeners in North Florida can put eggplant into the garden between mid-March and July. If the weather has been continuously warm, most varieties will reach their first harvest in 80-85 days.

Eggplants come in a variety of shapes, sizes and colors. They run from large to lemon size.

They may be long, pear-shaped, oblong, round or cylindrical. Their colors may be purple, yellow, white, ash, variegated, apple green, etc. Seed catalogs are filled with mouth-watering varieties and colorful options.

Varieties that will thrive in Florida include 'Black Beauty', 'Dusky', 'Long', 'Ichiban' and 'Cloud Nine.'

'Black Beauty' is an heirloom variety. Introduced around 1910, this popular variety has rich flavored fruits that hold up well. Plump 4-5 inch diameter fruits are a beautiful, shiny purple-black. This open-pollinated type holds its fruit high above the ground.

'Ichiban' is an oriental type eggplant. This hybrid produces heavy yields 9-inch long by 1.5-inch wide dark purple eggplants. Very flavorful and tender, it is excellent for Oriental dishes and for grilling and roasting.

'Easter Egg' is an unusual variety which produces small, egg-sized white fruit which turns yellow at maturity. This edible ornamental plant makes a fun and interesting addition to a children's garden.

Eggplant requires a deep, rich, well-drained soil. Adding organic matter such as compost or aged-manures will help keep this heavy-feeder healthy. The soil should have a pH between 6.0 and 6.5. Always allow the soil to sit for several weeks prior to planting when adding amendments to the garden.

A constant, rapid growth is important for quality fruit production from young eggplants.

Maintain vigorous growth throughout the growing season by keeping soils uniformly moist. Since eggplants will be in the garden for a long season, supply a sidedressing of a nitrogen-containing fertilizer about once a month.

Normally, eggplants are not staked, but a heavy fruit load may require some support later in the season.

Often, fruit grown in summer taste extremely bitter. The main cause of bitter fruit is lack of soil moisture. To help prevent bitterness, irrigate during dry weather. The green and white fruited varieties are usually less bitter under these growing conditions than the purple varieties.

The fruit may be harvested when they reach at least one-third to two-thirds their fully mature size. High quality fruit will have a high gloss to the skin. If you push in on the side of the fruit with your thumb, it should not spring back. Fruits that are dull, spongy and contain hard or brown seeds are overmature. Overmature fruit are of poor quality and should be cut and discarded to promote longer productivity.

When harvesting, cut the tough fruit stems with a knife or clippers to avoid damaging the plant branches.

Good Friday gospel concert at Olivet Baptist

Special to the Press Gazette

For the past 12 years, residents from Northwest Florida have made their way to Olivet Baptist Church on Good Friday to enjoy the great southern and country gospel music each year.

This year is no different, as many will attend the 13th annual Good Friday Gospel Concert featuring The Hendersons of Milton, Dan Kirkland of Pace, and special guests, New Vision Singers from McKenzie, Ala.

The Hendersons,

ministering in song for over 22 years, consists of Sonny Henderson, of Milton, his daughter, Lydia Henderson, of Pensacola. Joining the Hendersons for this special event will be Brad Atkinson, of Flomaton, Ala., who was recently a member of The Hendersons. Sonny's wife, Marie, travels with them and serves as sound technician in concerts.

The Hendersons recently released their eighth recording on CD, "Something Old, Something New" and will have them available at the concert. They sing primarily southern and traditional gospel. Their newest release to radio is "Just Like That" from this newest project.

Kirkland travels and sings and is well known in this area who has several recorded projects. He is well liked for his "down home" sound and he has a way of making the songs come to life where you will want to join in and sing with him. Kirkland also sings a good mix of southern and traditional music.

Special guest singers, The New Vision Singers, will come to the concert from McKenzie, Ala., and individually and collectively they have been singing gospel music for several years.

The New Vision Singers present a good selection of southern, bluegrass, and traditional gospel music. They are excellent musicians and you will enjoy being in concert with them. This is a very talented family of singers and instrument players.

Pastor Frankie Godsey and the members of Olivet Baptist, along with the host group, The Hendersons, invite everyone to come and enjoy this special event each year. No admission fee will be required at the door, but an offering will be received for the expenses of the evening. Doors will open at 6 p.m. for your convenience.

Everyone is welcome and encouraged to attend this special annual event. For further information or directions, contact 850-232-2421, 850-994-1727 or 850-623-2780.

Faith BRIEFS

Stations of the Cross

On Good Friday, at 5 p.m. April 6, First United Methodist Church in Milton and St. Mary's Episcopal Church will join congregations to walk the Stations of the Cross. The group will depart from First United Methodist Church, 102 Berryhill Road, and walk to St. Mary's Episcopal Church, 6849 Oak St. The Stations of the Cross will be read along the way by participants. Upon arrival

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Escambia Consortium, comprised of Escambia County, the City of Pensacola, Santa Rosa County, Florida, announces initiation of the public participation process that will facilitate the preparation of the Escambia Consortium 2012//2013 Consolidated Plan/Annual Housing and Community Development Plan for the period October 1, 2012 - September 30, 2013. This process serves as a collaborative tool for the community by identifying or updating existing conditions in the Consortium's member jurisdictions with respect to housing and community development needs, goals and objectives.

The Consortium's 2012-2013 Annual Plan for Housing and Community Development will identify the community's housing and community development priorities, and target strategies to address priorities established in the 2010-2014 Escambia Consortium Consolidated Plan which will be implemented during the next Federal Fiscal Year. The 2012/2013 Annual Plan, when complete, will denote the Escambia Consortium's action plan for the utilization of resources provided through the FY 2012 Community Development Block Grant, FY 2012 HOME Investment Partnerships Act, FY 2012 Emergency Solutions Grant, and other HUD programs designed to address housing and community development needs.

TWO PUBLIC HEARINGS are being sponsored by the Consortium to afford citizens the opportunity to provide input and recommendations regarding assisted housing, housing related needs/priorities, supportive housing needs, and non-housing community development needs within the Consortium. The TWO public hearings concerning the development of the 2012-2013 Escambia Consortium Annual Plan will be held at 2:00 P.M. on Tuesday, April 24, 2012, at the Pensacola Housing Office, Conference Room, 420 West Chase Street, Pensacola, Florida; and at 9:00 A.M. on Wednesday, April 25, 2012 in the Santa Rosa County Public Services Complex, Housing Office Conference Room, 6051 Old Bagdad Highway, Milton, Florida. The Escambia/Pensacola hearing will also incorporate information regarding the Analysis of Impediments to Fair Housing.

The Escambia Consortium adheres to the Americans with Disabilities Act and will make reasonable modifications for access to services, programs and other activities. Please call 858-0350 (City) or 458-0466 (Escambia County) [or Telecommunications Device for the Deaf (TDD) numbers 595-0102 (City) or 458-0464 (Escambia County)] for further information. Requests must be made at least 48 hours in advance of the event in order to allow time to provide the requested services.

In addition to direct input provided during the public hearings, written comments or input regarding local housing needs or priorities will be accepted through May 4, 2012, and may be submitted to: Escambia Consortium, P.O. Box 18178, Pensacola, Florida 32523. For further information, contact Randy Wilkerson at 458-0466 (Escambia County), Marcie Whitaker at 858-0350 (City of Pensacola), or Janice Boone at 981-7076 (Santa Rosa County).

Bunny Scramble winners announced

Special to the Press Gazette

Congratulations to the 2012 Bunny Scramble winners. Winners of an eight-pound HoneyBaked Ham from the HoneyBaked Ham Company are Berna Faust, Betty Toomey, Tammy Correll, Hollis Kimberl and Nell Allen. "This was an awesome promotion and the response was tremendous," said Santa Rosa Press Gazette editor Bill Gamblin. "It is the responses to contests like this that make a community newspaper. "We appreciate the people with the HoneyBaked Ham Company and all our associate sponsors for the 2012 Bunny Scramble."

thing is if we would have done that, we should have done that around 20 years ago since we now have some ranch houses in the area.

"The thing is, no matter what anyone would want to do in the district, it would have to go before the Milton Historical Board and also approved by the council if they wanted to build a fence, shed, or do any improvements to a home."

Even the matter of how many stories a home should be came into question.

"I am in favor of a lot because what I see is good use of what's available," Mike

Davis said. "I lived in Spain for four years and the buildings were so close the only place to expand was up."

"Many people had their business or shop on the ground level and lived above the business."

Jorgensen took the votes and is expected to compile the information before presenting the information to Milton's ordinance committee for review and approval.

"This would be a new district with standards set from the citizens," Jorgensen said. "This plan could allow more uses for the property, but those uses would be highly regulative."

Current zoning laws in this area of Milton would allow 3.5 homes per acre of land.

According to Jorgensen this plan, if approved by the citizens affected, could allow them to decide what goes into their neighborhood.

"If everybody shows up Saturday and tells me they like things the way they are then I will have a short day," Jorgensen said. "But there has been declining property values in the area for some time and properties are aging."

"This overlay district would not effect current property owners, but it would set a standard for construct if you tear down a building and replace it with another."

The city has had two meetings so far on the plan with one drawing 35 residents and a second meeting drawing 15.

"We have had some who support the concept and others who are against it," Jorgensen said. "What we will do on Saturday is ask a series of questions and give the residents a chance to decide how they want this district."

be done with the addition of services offered by the Kids' House to help those who have been victimized."

Hall says he feels abuse has become more prevalent throughout society as a whole because of negative images on the Internet and in movies, drugs and an increasing divorce rate, which makes children more vulnerable.

Previously, child abuse or neglect was not something many talked about.

"This is not something easily talked about even today," said Adair Cotton, who is heading up the pinwheel campaign for the Santa Rosa Kids' House. "By not talking about it or addressing the problem, it has been allowed to flourish."

"But with efforts like these and the Kids' House, the community has become so driven and so acutely aware of the problem. They are helping more."

livestock show allowing children from the area to show off their prized livestock. The animals will be judged and awarded based on different categories.

"Santa Rosa County Fair has never had a live kids showing of animals before," Paschall said. "That's extremely exciting for us."

Not only is the fair boosting its horticulture shows, but also, bringing back shows that showed off exotic animals to crowds in the past.

Amazing Rainforest is coming back for another year. The exhibit shows off exotic animals and educates crowds on conservation.

"We also have a new act called 'Pets Overboard' that uses animals that have been rescued from pounds and shelters ... those cats and dogs put on an acrobatic show," Paschall said.

Paschall noted that the fair is also bringing back an exhibit that was a huge hit two years ago.

"That's right, Simon Says the hypnotist is coming back. He was heavily requested," Paschall said.

Not only will there be more acts this year, but Paschall said the fair board decided to break the fair up into two weekends, which is another first.

The fair will start on Friday, April 6 and run until East Sunday. Then the fair will be closed Monday, April 9 and Tuesday, April 10. Then it will reopen on Wednesday and conclude Saturday, April 14.

Paschall said that not only will there be more livestock exhibit, but everyone's favorite past time will be coming to the fair. That's right, music is coming to the fair.

Starting Friday, the Blackwater Music Festival will come to life offering something for everyone on a different night. Rock and roll music will be featured on Friday, country music on Saturday and then on Easter Sunday, the fair will bring Christian music to the fairgrounds.

"We're trying to make sure we have a big concert on Sunday for church crowd," Paschall said.

Also this coming Sunday, Paschall said the Easter egg hunt is returning for another year, but this year, it's going to be bigger and better.

"Two years ago, Easter Sunday fell when we were having the fair. We had an Easter egg hunt and had 3500 eggs," Paschall said. "That wasn't enough."

This year, Paschall said he plans on having double that amount of eggs on the fairground.

Of course, all of the favorite fair rides will be returning and the food will be just as good this year. The rodeo will also be returning this year for the bull riding fans.

"Everything is going to be bigger and better than it was last year," Paschall said. "The entertainment is much bigger."

"We are slowly growing."

Locals ready for the real season

By BILL GAMBLIN

377-4611 | @SRPG_Bill
sports@srpressgazette.com

There is some good news and some disappointing news in baseball for local fans.

The good news for former Pace pitcher Bobby Cassevah is that he is looking at his first full season with the Los Angeles Angels of Anaheim as he made the active 25-player roster.

For Caleb Gindl, another Pace grad, the news is mixed.

The No. 15 prospect in the Milwaukee Brewers organization has made the 2011 National League Champions 40-man roster, but will start the season with the team's AAA affiliate Nashville Sounds.

Gindl has now got his average to over .300 for his minor league career and is being prospected as a fourth outfielder in the Brewers near future.

Other prospects to watch include former Pace shortstop Adam Bryant, who finished last season with the Beloit Snappers, the A affiliate of the Minnesota Twins.

Bryant batted .245 in 59 games and could see a promotion to the AA level sometime soon if the Troy University grad continues to show improvement.

Another Pace and Troy grad, pitcher Chris Sorce could see a promotion in his future after his 2011 season with the Seattle Mariners' high A affiliate the High Desert Mavericks.

Sorce finished 2011 with a 5.07 ERA and an 8-12 record after a very slow start.

Another Mariner who signed last summer, former Milton outfielder Charles Jimenez batted .156 in 14 games for the Seattle in the Arizona rookie league, but bounced around some other leagues as a base stealing threat because of his speed.

Fellow Milton grad Brandon Allen finished 2011 with the San Francisco Giants affiliate, the Salem-Keizer Volcanoes.

Allen went 2-8 with a 6.04 ERA, but is expected this season to show a great deal of improvement with another year of experience under his belt.

Blue Wahoos land in Pensacola

By BILL GAMBLIN

377-4611 | @SRPG_Bill
sports@srpressgazette.com

Baseball has returned to Pensacola after a one-year absence. The excitement was evident during the run of the Blue Wahoos on Sunday afternoon.

Pensacola International Airport was full of excited fans who were awaiting the arrival of the Blue Wahoos, the Double-A affiliate of the Cincinnati Reds, from spring training in Arizona.

Fans are waiting for the first pitch on Thursday, when the Blue Wahoos start their season against the Montgomery Biscuits at 7 p.m. at the Blue Wahoos Park.

It was hard to tell who was more excited Sunday, the fans or owner Quint Studer.

"Last season would have been hard on me if I didn't know what to expect this year," said Studer, who sold the Pensacola Pelicans in order to buy the Carolina Mudcats of the Southern League. "It has been a real good year for us to get a staff in place, as well as a strong foundation for what is to come."

The welcome party at the airport Sunday afternoon had a host of individuals and business people.

"This is great for Pensacola," said Jim Hill, who owns Alternative Health and Foods in Milton. "No one realizes the economic boost this will have to Pensacola and the surrounding area."

Hill bought season tickets and picked his own seats at Blue Wahoos

Blue Wahoos Manager Jim Riggleman shares a moment with fan Terry Williams after arriving at Pensacola International Airport.

Park as soon as he heard the Blue Wahoos were coming to the area.

The biggest surprise on Sunday was to Blue Wahoos skipper Jim Riggleman.

"This is neat for the players to see," said Riggleman who has managed the San Diego Padres, Chicago Cubs, Seattle Mariners, and the Montreal Expos/Washington Nationals during his career. "This speaks to the interest Pensacola has in baseball and how much they love the game."

"This is just an example of what I think we will see at the park, with great crowds, with a lot of emotions the players can connect with."

Being a first year franchise the Blue Wahoos might come in with a lot of expectations, but Riggleman is very realistic with his goals for 2012.

"I think in the end all minor league players want to make progress and work together to develop as a team," Riggleman said. "They all have a goal to play hard and look to advance to the next level."

Students and parents alike got a fun-filled day on Saturday thanks to the inaugural Bagdad Bulldog Bash. The event was held at Bagdad Recreational Park and invited Bagdad Elementary School students and their families to join into a handful of activities. The sky cleared up for the start of the festival, but the heat didn't stop the fun.

Students paid a cheap rate to acquire tickets they could use at a number of booths.

Pie the principal was one of the more popular booths. Bagdad Elementary School children were able to practice using their throwing arms by throwing a pie at their principal Linda Gooch.

There were also inflatable rides, a coconut toss and face painting to fuel the day.

The Santa Rosa Clean Community System has announced the upcoming April schedule for the Great American Clean-Up, part of a nation-wide effort of Keep America Beautiful. On April 4 and 5 there will be a Paint Your Heart Out by the "One Love" group. This group is a effort by area churches to come together and complete community projects in the first week of April.

On April 14, there will be a community wide clean-up in Navarre. Groups and Individuals will meet at the Navarre Park on Highway 98 at the foot of the Navarre Beach bridge. The event will last from 8 a.m. to noon, and will be sponsored by Waste Management.

Through out the month, the focus of the Milton and Pace area will be targeted clean-ups and working on the Rivenbark House and Fireman's Recycling Station at the corner of Stewart Street and Berryhill Road. This project will be done in partnership with United Way, with a Paint Your Heart Out scheduled for Saturday, April 21. Groups and individuals interested in participating should contact the Clean Community System at 623-1930.

Green-Up Celebrates Spring with Sale

Green-Up Santa Rosa will kick-off spring with a month long 10 percent off sale on all plants in the nursery. The sale will run through the month of April. There is a wide variety of trees, shrubs, perennials, annuals and hanging baskets at the two acre nursery, which is located at 6758 Park Ave. in Milton.

Green-Up is a program of the Santa Rosa Clean Community System, and all proceeds go back into the community in support of its programs. Currently, the system is working on the Fireman's Recycling Station in Milton and educational gardens at the new Sonnier Education Center. Hours of operation are Tuesday through Saturday, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. For more information, call 623-1930.

National Active and Retired Federal Employees

The National Active and Retired Federal Employees (NARFE), Chapter 917, will hold their regular monthly meeting Thursday, April 5, at 10:45 a.m. at Ryan's Restaurant in Pace. All active or retired federal employees are invited to attend. The speaker will be announced later. After a short business meeting there will be a Dutch-treat lunch. For more information call 626 2569.

Healthy State Coalition of Santa Rosa County

The Healthy Start Coalition of Santa Rosa County, Inc., will meet at 4 p.m. April 9. This will be a general board meeting at its office at 5907 Berryhill Road, in Milton. For more information call 626-6751.

Santa Rosa Tea Party Patriots to Meet

Monday, April 9 at 6 p.m., Pastor Carl Gallups, host of Freedom Friday on WEBY AM Radio, will speak to the Santa Rosa Tea Party Patriots. The meeting will be held at The Milton Community Center on Byrom St. Pastor Gallups will speak on "The Obama Fraud" and will cover Sheriff Arapaio's information, Obama's false birth certificate, the Constitutional and Law Enforcement ramifications, and what we can do as patriots and citizens. Come hear the facts before you form an opinion about this subject. Pastor Gallups has well documented his information; you will want to hear it. There will be an opportunity for questions and answers. Invite a friend to attend this special meeting. If you have any questions, please call 994-7548.

Wacky Dog Show

Primarica Milton will host it's first ever Wacky Dog Show. This event is a fundraiser for the Milton Relay for Life with three divisions of competition — best in show, most talented, and two peas in a pod (pet and animal look-a-like contest). The show will be April 14 at 2 p.m. at the Primarica Offices on Highway 90. Early registration is $8, day of event $12, and pet photos are $6. For more information call 626-7188.

Rock Holiness Cemetery Board Meeting

Family members and friends of loved ones buried at the Rock Holiness Cemetery are invited to attend the annual meeting on Saturday, April 14 at 10 a.m. at the church located on Upper Creek Road in Flomaton, Ala. The Rock Church is located on the cemetery grounds about one half mile from Highway 31 on the right side of Upper Creek Road, up a steep hill. Look for the sign to the private driveway. Please come. This is an important meeting. We need to elect a new board member.

Navarre Spring Fling Call to Vendors

The Navarre Garden Club will host our annual Spring Fling on Friday, April 20, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. held at the Navarre Conference Center. We are actively seeking vendors for outside booths. The fee for a space is $40 and will accommodate a 10-foot-by-10-foot tent. Space is limited; please call to reserve your. Please contact, Margaret Russell 850-382-1671 or mvrussell@gmail.com.

Purple Heart meeting

The Military Order of the Purple will be holding its monthly meeting Saturday, April 21 at 11 a.m., at the West Milton Church of Christ in Pace. A meal will be served following the meeting for a donation. All Purple Heart Recipients and their spouses are welcome and encouraged to attend. Call Eustice Shiver, Commander of Military Order of the Purple Heart Chapter 566 at 994-3880, cell 791-1175 or for the Ladies Auxiliary Military Order of the Purple Heart, President Judy Shiver at 791-1176.

Bagdad Village Preservation Association to host Spring Music Gala

Following the success of our sold-out Christmas Gala, the Bagdad Village Preservation Association is proud to announce our Spring Music Gala featuring music from the era of "Casablanca." Mark your calendars for April 28, an event that promises to be both elegant and delightful. The gala will honor the 70th Anniversary of the Academy Award winning film starring Humphrey Bogart and Ingrid Bergman. The Bagdad Village Museum will be transformed and you will be welcomed into "Rick's Café Americain." There will only be one performance on the evening of Saturday, April 28, beginning at 7 p.m.

The evening will begin with a champagne and hor d'oeuver reception with a Moroccan flair. Jazz vocalist Kathy Lyons will take you back in time with great music of the 1930s and 40s from Cole Porter, Jerome Kern, Irving Berlin, and other greats. The evening will end with a dessert extravaganza.

Tickets for this black tie optional event are $35 per person and will be limited to sixty guests. All proceeds will benefit the Bagdad Village Preservation Association. To reserve your tickets contact Elaine Willis at 850-623-3288. For more information visit www.bagdadvillage.org.

Navarre Beach in running for Best of the Best Restored Beaches

To celebrate 10 years of honoring Best Restored Beaches Across America, the American Shore & Beach Preservation Association is asking anyone who loves the beach to pick the Best of the Best Restored Beaches from a list of past restored beach award winners.

Santa Rosa County is urging everyone to vote for Navarre Beach as Best Community Beach by casting your vote every day from now until April 27 at www.asbpa.org/about_us/about_us_best_restored_beach_2012_community.htm. Voters also can visit www.santarosa.fl.gov for a link to the voting site.

For more than 40 years, beach restoration has been the preferred method of shore protection in coastal communities on the east, west and Gulf coasts. Beach restoration is the process of placing beach-quality sand on dwindling beaches to reverse or offset the effects of erosion. Navarre Beach was one of four beaches nationwide selected for 2010. For this "best of the best" competition, nominees are placed in one of three categories and compete by region:

• Urban beaches: This includes highly developed beaches, including intensely developed areas with high-rise condos and resorts.

• Community beaches: This includes less densely developed beaches backed by low-rise or single-family dwellings.

• Park/habitat beaches: This includes areas that undertake beach nourishment solely for habitat restoration and park projects. These can be in remote regions or in the middle of a city.

Starting March 30, everyone can vote for Navarre Beach online. You can even leave a comment about what makes your favorite beach so special to you.

You can vote once every 24 hours, all the way to April 27, and you can even see how your favorite beach is doing every time you visit.

Once voting closes, we will tally up the results and name a Best-of-the-Best Beach in each of the three categories, as well as the top vote-getter in each of seven geographic regions.

Winners will be announced in mid-May, and they all will be honored at a special ceremony next spring during the ASBPA's annual Coastal Summit in Washington, D.C.

Complete descriptions of each of the beaches in the running for Best-of-the-Best Beach are available at www.asbpa.org.

The three main reasons for restoration are:

• Storm protection: a wide sandy beach helps separate storm waves from upland structures and infrastructure.

• Habitat restoration: numerous species rely on wide, healthy beaches as a place to live, feed and nest.

• Recreation: America's beaches have twice as many visitors annually as all of America's national parks combined. Every year, there are more than 2 billion visitors to America's beaches. In 2007, beaches contributed $322 billion to the America's economy. More importantly, for every dollar the federal government spends on beach nourishment, it gets an estimated $320 back in tax revenues.

During times of economic hardship, the beach can be an even more desirable vacation destination than other domestic and foreign alternatives, offering families and visitors an accessible and affordable getaway. It is also an employment and tax generator:

• More than twice as many people visit America's coasts as visit our state and national parks, all of them combined.

• Each year, governments take in $320 in taxes from beach tourists for every dollar it spends on beach restoration.

• Well over half of the nation's gross domestic product ($7.9 trillion) is generated in 673 counties along the oceans and Great Lakes, according to NOAA's National Ocean Economics Program.

UWF plants cherry trees

By MATHEW PELLEGRINO
393-3669 | @SRPG_Mat
mpellegrino@srpressgazette.com

The University of West Florida could be the cherry tree capital of the south.

UWF is now home to 100 rare trees that are iconic to the nation's capital.

To celebrate the centennial of the planting of the first cherry tree in Washington, D.C., 36 cities across the nation, including Pensacola, were given the opportunity to do some planting of their own. Pensacola was chosen as the state location for the 2012 Japan-U.S. Cherry Blossom Centennial celebration by the Japanese consulate general in Miami, Eiichi Kawahara.

One-hundred cherry trees were donated to the school to be planted. They were planted near the main entrance to the campus in front of the Japan House.

Kawahara, the consul general at Miami's Japanese consulate, said the location for the trees was chosen because of the weather in the area. Kawahara said the trees don't tend to flourish in the lower part of the state where it's much more humid and hot.

"UWF has been chosen as the only place in the state to mark the anniversary," said UWF President Judy Bense.

The anniversary comes

100 years after President William Howard Taft and first lady Helen Taft helped plant the first cherry trees to touch U.S. soil in Washington, D.C.

A ceremony was held at the school's music hall to commemorate the 100-year celebration and to mark the planting of the trees.

"I can think of no better place to put these trees than on the campus of the University of West Florida," Congressman Jeff Miller said.

The trees are not expected to bloom this year, but will bloom in the spring of 2013, said Bart Hudson, CEO and president of the Florida House.

The university in Pensacola has been known to open its arms to the Japanese community. Bense said this is an even stronger symbol that the bond between the two communities is getting stronger.

"We must prepare our students to live in a global environment," Bense said.

The university has already opened its arms up to its Japanese friends. It has been home to a foreign exchange program that helps bring Japanese college students to the campus to experience life in Florida.

bration inside the school's music hall, local representatives and nationally recognized individuals spoke about the cherry trees they had seen so many times before in Washington, D.C.

During the spring when they bloom, the trees flourish their pink and white flowers that look similar to the blooms on a Dogwood tree, Bense said.

"I remember watching the Dogwood trees blossom ... it almost looks like it's snowing," Bense said.

Shelly Bolton, a UWF junior, attended the ceremony inside the music hall. She said she once visited Washington, D.C., to see the cherry trees bloom.

"I know that once these bloom, this campus is going to look beautiful," Bolton said. "You don't see these trees every day."

"That's why people go to Washington, D.C., to see them."

Milton native Jessica Marie Sunday was chosen as Florida's 2011 Cherry Blossom Princess. Sunday lives in Washington, D.C., and came to UWF for the tree planting ceremony.

THE ONLY LITTER YOUR CAT SHOULD EVER HAVE

That's the litter you pour into her litter box. It's something every cat needs. But a litter of kittens—that's something else again. The fact is, there are already millions of surplus cats and kittens, literally dying for want of good homes. Cats may be our most popular animal companions, but they're being abandoned and turned in to shelters in greater numbers than ever before. If you care about your feline friend, put kitty litter on your shopping list—skip the litters of kitties. If you want to know more about cats, write to us.

RESOLUTION

WHEREAS, Richard Jette, PETITIONED the Board of County Commissioners of Santa Rosa County, Florida, to vacate, abandon, discontinue and renounce any interest and right of the public in and to the following described property to-wit:

The west end of Cooley's Drive in Pace Heights Subdivision lying between lots 9 and 10 as described in Plat Book B, page 14

AND WHEREAS, The Board of County Commissioners determined to have a public hearing for the purpose of considering the advisability of vacating and abandoning said rights-of-way, and

WHEREAS, the Board of County Commissioners have on this the 22nd day of March, 2012, conducted said public hearing in conformity to the said publication of their intent, and

WHEREAS, after hearing all comments concerning said vacation of the above described rights-of-way, the Board, being fully advised, and it being determined that the public interest will be best served and protected by vacating and abandoning said rights-of-way, therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED by the Board of County Commissioners of Santa Rosa County, Florida, that the said rights-of-way as herein set out and described are hereby vacated and any and all interest to the public shall revert to and be vested in the proper owners thereof.

APPROVED AND ADOPTED by a vote of 5 yeas, 0 nays, and 0 absent, of the Board of County Commissioners of Santa Rosa County, Florida, this 22nd day of March, 2012.

Seattle plans for a harvestable 'food forest'

SEATTLE (AP) — A plot of grass sits in the middle of Seattle, feet from a busy road and on a hill that overlooks the city's skyline. But it's no ordinary patch of green. Residents hope it will become one of the country's largest "food forests."

The park, which will start at 2 acres and grow to 7, will offer city dwellers a chance to pick apples, plums and other crops right from the branch.

"I think it's a great opportunity for the people of Seattle to be able to connect to the environment," said Maureen Erbe, who walked her two dogs next to the plot on a recent overcast day.

Would she pluck some fruits from the forest?

"Heck yes, I love a good blueberry. You're not from Seattle if you don't like a good blueberry," she said.

For health-conscious and locally-grown-food-loving Seattle, the park is a new step into urban agriculture. Cities from Portland, Ore., to Syracuse, N.Y., already have their own versions. In Syracuse, for example, vacant lots were turned into vegetable gardens to be tended by local teens.

Seattle already is dotted with community gardens the city helps maintain. Farmers markets also flourish in many neighborhoods, bringing in vendors from around the state to sell everything from tulips to farm-fresh duck eggs to pricey loaves of bread.

Residents raise chickens in backyards and plant their own vegetables. The more dedicated ones have goats and forage around the city — one woman even eats neighborhood squirrels.

When a group of people interested in sustainable gardening brought the idea of a food forest for the Beacon Hill neighborhood to city officials in 2010, the city-volunteer effort began. That year, city officials had declared it the "year of urban agriculture."

The plot is in one of the city's oldest neighborhoods. Next to it is a sports park, a driving range and a lawn bowling club. The food forest would be next to a heavily used road and near many apartment complexes.

"Seattle gets the big picture and so the focus on local food actions is a collaborative one," said Laura Raymond of the city's community garden program.

The department has allocated $100,000 for the first phase of the park, roughly a 2-acre plot. The land is owned by the city's utility and through an inter-agency agreement will be developed at no land cost.

Raymond said the city hasn't verified it, but the forest might become the biggest one in the country. Glenn Herlihy, who helped create the park's initial designs, believes it can grow to that size.

Succulent gifts

Hardy plants make long-lasting bouquets and centerpieces, then can go into the garden

By CINDY McNATT

Freedom News Service

There is more than one way to roll with succulents. You don't need to plant them in the ground directly. Succulents can tolerate all kinds of situations in gift arrangements and bouquets where they'll be happy for weeks before the fresh flowers fade or the plant outgrows its gifty environment.

In fact, the fleshier succulents with fat stems can live for months in floral foam. I made succulent centerpieces for a wedding a few years back, and the echeverias not only rooted in the foam, they lived a long time with water and an occasional feed.

Use succulents like cut flowers in all kinds of arrangements from big juicy bouquets, tinier candlestick arrangements, mixed with cut flowers in water or floral foam, or planted as singles in unique containers.

They're fine gifts for your favorite hostess, soon-to-be bride, new mother in your life or for the mother you have always had. The recipient needs only to plant the succulent at a later time.

BOUQUET

We found a rustic urn we liked and filled it with mixed silver succulents and pale pink roses. Saturated floral foam went in the urn first. Then we tucked in rooted echeveria rosettes, removing them from their pots and poking them in front of the urn. Pink roses went in next. We used silver kalanchoe stems as filler.

Once the flowers fade, the succulents can be planted in the garden with roots, or in the case of the kalanchoe stems, without roots. The bonus gift: The urn can be reused forever.

CANDLESTICKS

On close inspection, you'll notice these aren't candlesticks at all, but champagne flutes. We filled them with water, added blue echeveria stems, pale green viburnum flowers and miniature agave striata. To finish, we poked white tapers into the narrow neck of the flutes.

TEACUP

This was too easy. We placed saturated floral foam in a small teacup, poked in plump cotyledon stems and filled with white flowers. It's a twofer: The teacup keeps on giving and so do the succulents, when planted in the garden.

REFRIGERATOR MAGNET

Drill the center of a wine cork. Glue a magnet on the backside. Poke a bit of potting soil in the cork and a sprig of your favorite succulent. Needs to be watered at least once a week, and the succulent should be planted outside after a few months.

QUICK GIFTS

Use candle votives as small containers for succulent gifts. A teaspoon or two of potting soil will keep a succulent cutting happy for a month or two. Longer-stem succulents are happy in water with cut flower companions. The succulents can be planted in pots or the garden after the flowers fade.

Titanic a magnet for kids, fine line for educators

NEW YORK (AP) — Eleven-year-old John Payne has been a student of the Titanic since kindergarten.

He has scrupulously researched the ship, built a model out of Lego freehand and successfully lobbied his fifth-grade teacher in suburban Chicago to let him mark the disaster's centennial with a multimedia presentation for his class.

What's not to like? There's mystery, high technology and heroes. Sunken treasure, conspiracy theories and jarring tales of rich vs. poor.

But there's also death, lots of it, and that has some parents, teachers and writers of children's books balancing potentially scary details with more palatable, inspirational fare focused on survivors, animals on board or the mechanics of shipbuilding.

John "doesn't ask questions about the dead and other darker aspects" of what went on that moonless night in the North Atlantic, said his mother, Virginia Tobin Payne.

"He's a sensitive kid. We try to temper all of it so it doesn't become an obsession," she said. "After the anniversary passes, I hope we can sort of close the book on him looking for more information about it."

Barry Denenberg struggled with how to depict the horror in his new book "Titanic Sinks!" The sepia-tone hardcover, written as a mock magazine, was released ahead of the April 14 anniversary and already has made it into schools. The book, from Viking, is intended for kids 9 and older and doesn't hold back much as it blends fact and fiction for a meticulous, realistic feel that draws on the official record.

"There's only one little line in the book about how most of the people froze to death. They did not drown," Denenberg said. "Hypothermia is a much longer death. I had to make a decision about what's accurate and what's ghoulish."

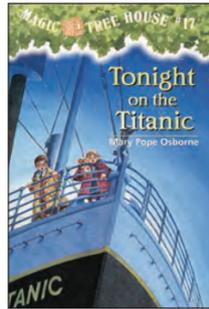

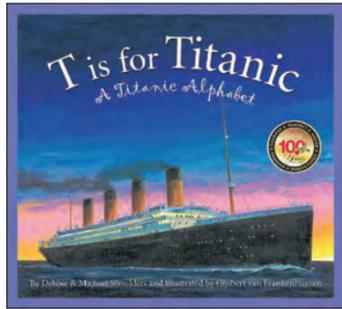

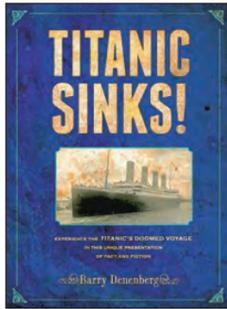

Debbie Shoulders teaches eighth-grade English in Clarksville, Tenn., but her new "T is for Titanic" alphabet book from Sleeping Bear Press is intended for far younger children.

"The word 'died' doesn't appear often in the book," she said. "We softened it with 'perished' or 'did not live.' The goal was to remember what the people on board contributed, not so much what happened to them."

Tracey Friedlander in Bethesda, Md., has a Titanic-obsessed 9-year-old, but she doesn't shy away from the rough stuff. She thinks the story offers teachers and parents perfect real-life lessons on perseverance, loyalty, the dangers of arrogance and the shortcomings of technology as kids learn to sort out the complexities of their own lives.

He has scrupulously researched the ship, built a model out of Lego freehand and successfully lobbied his fifth-grade teacher in suburban Chicago to let him mark the disaster's centennial with a multimedia presentation for his class. Below, children's book authors have taken a variety of approaches to telling the Titanic's story, from leaving out disturbing statistics to softening their language.

"Kids like Kade have grown up in the shadows of 9/11, the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq, and a red, yellow, green terrorist alert color code system," Friedlander said. "Like most of us, he's trying to make sense of the world around him and the accompanying human tragedies. The Titanic happens to present an incredible learning opportunity for curious minds."

Considered a marvel of shipbuilding, for instance, the luxury liner went down anyway after striking the iceberg on her maiden voyage, offering kids a solid and exciting look at the marriage between technology and human decision-making, she said.

What of human error? Was the ship traveling too fast? Why, though in line with regulations of the time — 1912 — did the Titanic set off with only 20 lifeboats for more than 2,200 people. Were poor immigrants in steerage prevented at gunpoint and by locked gates from boarding lifeboats, in favor of the wealthy?

The Titanic, Friedlander said, touches on "precarious circumstances and how someone's socioeconomic class can potentially affect the way their life is valued by others and why that's inappropriate and immoral."

John Payne's mom was nervous about him seeing James Cameron's 1997 blockbuster, "Titanic," when a 3-D version hits theaters in April. He's seen the edited-for-TV version over and over again.

"The people who died, who sacrificed, I think they were really brave to die like that," he said. "I really liked the movie, but the parts I found scary were the parts where Jack (Leonardo DiCaprio) and Rose (Kate Winslet) were trapped in the sinking parts."

Karen Heafer, a second-grade teacher in Lincoln, Neb., has been in the classroom for 31 years. She read a fictionalized account of a mascot cat on the Titanic to her students a couple of years ago and considers the story valuable, even half told.

"I use generalities. We don't go into a specific number of people killed," Heafer said. "A lot of them are curious about how the people survived, how long did they have to stay on the water, who found them? They're more drawn to the survivors than the ones who drowned."

Not so for Will Bousquette III, a 9-year-old at The Browning School in Manhattan. Assistant librarian Susan Levine invited Denenberg to the private Upper East Side prep school for boys after choosing his book for her third-grade reading group for fathers and sons.

Will was especially touched by the story of Isidor and Ida Straus. The co-owner of Macy's department store and his wife of 40 years went down with the ship together after she refused a spot in a lifeboat. "It was heart-touching," Will said. "It made me sad, then it felt sweet. I was greatly surprised. I also didn't realize how cold the water was. I could feel the emotions but I wasn't freaked out."

Lucy Sullivan spares no detail during a Titanic unit for her seventh-grade language arts students in Brookfield, Conn. For seven years, she has assigned each real-life Titanic character as she slowly lets the tragedy play out in class over a week or so.

She arranges their desks by type of ticket she issues them at the beginning, with first-class passengers assigned prime spots. They journal about the story throughout, learn of the mysterious missing locker key that left a lookout without binoculars and watch as she rolls a cardboard model of the ship around the classroom on a cart to demonstrate the crash itself.

At the end, her students discover whether their characters lived or died.

"When you're replaying something for 12-year-olds, the amount of information that allows you to put this puzzle together minute by minute is very powerful," Sullivan said. "Those students who never really liked fiction find this to be delicious and those who hate fiction and love nonfiction find this to be delicious."

Why? "It's a combination of gaudy details and tragic events. It doesn't get any better than that. You own the kids if you use even a small percentage of what's available on this to teach," she said.

The effort wasn't lost on her groups this year. Sam Petriccione, 12, calls the Titanic "a day that will always live in infamy."

He added, "It shows me that being cocky and arrogant doesn't really pay off. The people in the cockpit were so positive that the ship couldn't sink that they refused to shut down the ship and stop because of the icebergs."

Jasmine Davis in Pittsburgh wasn't one of Sullivan's students, but she was definitely a Titanic-obsessed kid. She's 23 now but at 9 couldn't get enough of the subject, including Robert Ballard's 1985 discovery of the wreck strewn half a mile across the ocean floor. The oceanographer and marine biologist's video and photos ignited interest in the wreck among a new generation of kids.

In fourth grade, Davis wasn't allowed to bring school library books to recess, "but I convinced my teacher to let me take this massive novel about the Titanic outside. It was such a big book. How else was I going to finish it?"

For 20 years, Ballard's JASON Project has offered middle school teachers materials and expertise for deeper exploration of the sciences in a variety of disciplines, including his own. More than 10 million students have participated, Davis among them.

"It's hard for a kid to grasp the scope of the Titanic," she said. "I remember seeing the images of the wreck taken by Ballard when I did the JASON Project. That was really haunting."

Children's writer Mary Pope Osborne began her popular fiction series "Magic Tree House," along with nonfiction companions, around the time the JASON Project began.

"I spent the first 10 years asking kids all over the country what they wanted me to write about. They wanted me to write about the Titanic, but I kept saying, 'No, it's too sad. It's too depressing.'"

She finally took it on in 1999 with "Tonight on the Titanic," her 17th book for 6- to 10-year-olds featuring her kid characters Jack and his sister, Annie.

"It has a mythic power. It's not right next to their lives," Osborne said. "I've had very few children ask me to write about 9/11, for instance. I think 100 years from now they would."

DC's Vertigo readies 4 new series, dedicated app

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Vertigo, the decidedly more sophisticated and adult imprint of DC Entertainment, kept its mix of the weird, wild and outright fantastic going in March with four series and a new application that lets readers buy comic books online.

The dedicated app serves as a gateway for the imprint's series of titles that have stretched the boundaries of comic book storytelling with work from Neil Gaiman ("Sandman") and Brian Wood ("DMZ"), along with new titles available digitally the same day they're on sale in comic shops.

The first is "Fairest," a new title from Bill Willingham. It's a spinoff from his popular and ongoing "Fables" series, which focuses on characters from folklore that have been forced to live in New York City among regular humans.

"'Fairest' itself ... is taking each of these 'fairest' in all the land' characters that so heavily populate 'Fables' and giving each one of them a turn to shine on their own and show what they're made of in their own adventures and accomplishments and failings," Willingham said of the title, which is illustrated by Phil Jimenez.

That's part of Vertigo's goal, to proffer stories that are a step, or five, ahead of traditional capes and villains.

Paul Cornell, whose series "Saucer Country" debuted in March with art by the salt of the earth," he said of the title illustrated by Denys Cowan and John Floyd. "We're going to be delving deeper into the grit and grime of the city; the people, the music, the mythology."

Dan Abnett takes on Edwardian England, where zombie outbreaks caused the upper crust to embrace vampirism, spawning "The New Deadwardians."

"Although I love stories about vampires and zombies, I had, as a professional writer, felt that they'd been done to death," he said. "When the Deadwardians popped in my head I just had this vision of this world and knew that unfortunately, I was going to have to pitch someone a vampire story."

Ryan Kelly, said it was why he pitched his idea about a New Mexico governor running for president who is abducted by aliens.

"It's 'X-Files' meets 'The West Wing.' It's a political thriller with added aliens," he said. "Obviously Vertigo is its ideal home."

Another title is "Dominique Laveau: Voodoo Child," written by author Selwyn Seyfu Hinds, which focuses on New Orleans and its mythology.

"I wanted the book and the characters to feel grounded and rooted in

Celebs brew coffee for a cause

The Associated Press

You know you like your cup of Joe in the morning. But are you ready for a cup of Hugh?

We are, of course, talking about actor Hugh Jackman, who recently launched a coffee and tea company that raises money for charity.

Philanthropy is the driving force behind Jackman's involvement in the coffee world. In a telephone interview he talked about being inspired by the late Paul Newman and his company, Newman's Own, which has donated millions to charity. But it's not the only reason.

The other factor? Taste. "Hey, I'm a coffee snob," said Jackman, who could drink coffee "all day, because I just love it," but limits himself to one or two cups. "If I'm buying it, I want a great cup of coffee. If you can have a great cup of coffee and the profits of that company are actually going back to different charities, I think it's a win-win for everybody."

Jackman's interest in creating a coffee company was sparked during a tour he took as an ambassador for World Vision, an organization that works with children and families. In Ethiopia, he met Dukale, a local coffee farmer, and was struck by how hard he worked to look after his family and by how a little help could make a big difference in the lives of coffee farmers.

In a piece of synchronicity, he discovered that a friend, Barry Steingard, who has 25 years experience in the coffee and restaurant industry, was planning on getting back in the coffee business. "I said, 'Well, do you need a partner?'" Jackman said.

So far Laughing Man Coffee & Tea — chocolates were also recently added — is the first subsidiary under Jackman's umbrella company, Laughing Man Worldwide. The way it works is 50 percent of the subsidiary profits go to the parent company, which then donates 100 percent of its profits. Educational initiatives are the focus of the coffee company, which has partnered with Harlem Village Academies, the well-regarded charter schools in New York, and WorldVision.

AP

A variety of products from Hugh Jackman's Laughing Man Coffee & Tea company is available.

And Jackman's not the only java star.

Leonardo DiCaprio is partnering with the La Colombe Torrefaction coffee company to create a special blend, LYON, with net profits earmarked for environmental projects supported by the actor's foundation.

Meanwhile, Newman's daughter, Nell Newman, partnered with Vermont's Green Mountain Coffee Roasters, Inc. to source, roast, package and distribute fair trade organic coffee under the Newman's Own Organics label. Green Mountain allocates at least 5 percent of pre-tax profits to social and environmental projects in the communities where it does business.

Celebrity coffees are just a fraction of the overall market. Still, the trend of celebrities working with high-quality roasters to make coffee for a cause "can only be a good thing," said Miles Small, owner and editor-in-chief of CoffeeTalk magazine, based in Vashon, Wash.

"Coffee is, and has always been, an instrumental tool in bringing disparate folks together for a common cause," he said. "Buying celebrity coffee with a donation element helps toward achieving the charitable goals of the celebrity and also helps the over 25 million families worldwide whose survival is dependent on the growing of this 'not so simple' beverage called coffee."

In some ways, the coffee-celebrity connection seems a natural. Who hasn't seen umpteen paparazzi shots of stars clutching their Starbucks?

But Jackman laughs when asked if Hollywood has a corner on caffeine.

"Coffee is the world over," he said. "It's one of the oldest products known to man, and it's one of the greatest crops ever. Traditionally, coffee is part of ritual and part of unity and community."

In Ethiopia, the families Jackman met roasted, ground, brewed and drank coffee together. "It's all part of community and being together," he said. "I think it's kind of a great product and underlines what our company is about."

Developers use edible trees, shrubs, perennials and annuals. Fruit and nut trees are on the upper level, while berry shrubs, edible perennials and annuals are on the lower levels. Plants to attract insects are also planted for natural pest management.

"All of these plants work together like a forest ecosystem, but they are edible," Herlihy said.

In Pittsburgh, a food forest a quarter of an acre big is in its second year of existence. So far, only a berry bush and a pear tree have yielded fruits.

"We tell people it's not a food forest, it's aspiring to be a food forest," said organizer Juliette Jones. "I really do believe the longer that we're there, once you start to see the trees producing and see the site develop more, it will attract people to get involved."

In Seattle, the park will have an area for the food forest, and another area for the smaller community gardens that can be used by families or community groups. One of the goals is to provide affordable healthy food at a time when such items can be too costly for low-income residents.

community gardens will happen in spring 2013. The fruit trees and shrubs will take a while to grow. Herlihy expects those harvests to come in about two years.

Ultimately, Herlihy envisions thick plots of nut trees, such as walnuts and hazelnuts, next to apple, pears and plum trees. Underneath, there will be huckleberries, salmon berries and even salal, a native shrub. Herbs like rosemary will also be planted. The group plans to install beehives to aid with pollination.

Organizers say that they will use the honor system when it comes to how much food people can take.

"It's simply just good ethics," he said. "Help yourself, don't take it all, and save some for anybody else."

NBC's 'The Voice' adds Facebook app for voting

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC's talent show "The Voice" is jumping on Facebook's "timeline" app bandwagon to give fans another way to vote for their favorite contestants.

The new application allows viewers to cast votes for "Voice" singers and connect with friends and others watching the show, NBC and Facebook said Friday. Voting on live performances began Monday.

The Facebook app for "The Voice" is intended to create "a fully social online voting experience," said Vivi Zigler, president of NBC Universal Digital Entertainment.

"We have been working very closely with Facebook to really build a social voting app that takes advantage of every whiz-bang, bell and whistle that Facebook has built for timeline," Zigler said.

In addition to serving as a ballot box and a bridge between viewers, the "Voice" app will lead users to new content, including performance videos and blogs, NBC said.

In January, when Facebook unveiled about 60 new apps that let people share the smallest details of their lives on their profile, now known as their timeline, the company said it expected developers to create thousands more.

Dubbed "frictionless sharing" by Facebook, the apps allow a user's activity to be automatically shared through Facebook — although people can limit who's able to see this activity when they sign up for the apps.

Nearly 3,000 apps have been launched in two months for websites ranging from The Onion to Nike to foodie site Foodily, Facebook said.

Making use of a timeline app for voting is innovative, said Justin Osofsky, director of platform partnerships at Facebook.

"The Voice" features Christina Aguilera, Cee Lo Green, Adam Levine and Blake Shelton as coaches.

THE ONLY LITTER YOUR CAT SHOULD EVER HAVE

That's the litter you pour into her litter box. It's something every cat needs. But a litter of kittens—that's something else again. The fact is, there are already millions of surplus cats and kittens, literally dying for want of good homes. Cats may be our most popular animal companions, but they're being abandoned and turned in to shelters in greater numbers than ever before. If you care about your feline friend, put kitty litter on your shopping list—skip the litters of kitties. If you want to know more about cats, write to us.

RESOLUTION

WHEREAS, Richard Jette, PETITIONED the Board of County Commissioners of Santa Rosa County, Florida, to vacate, abandon, discontinue and renounce any interest and right of the public in and to the following described property to-wit:

The west end of Cooley's Drive in Pace Heights Subdivision lying between lots 9 and 10 as described in Plat Book B, page 14

AND WHEREAS, The Board of County Commissioners determined to have a public hearing for the purpose of considering the advisability of vacating and abandoning said rights-of-way, and

WHEREAS, the Board of County Commissioners have on this the 22nd day of March, 2012, conducted said public hearing in conformity to the said publication of their intent, and

WHEREAS, after hearing all comments concerning said vacation of the above described rights-of-way, the Board, being fully advised, and it being determined that the public interest will be best served and protected by vacating and abandoning said rights-of-way, therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED by the Board of County Commissioners of Santa Rosa County, Florida, that the said rights-of-way as herein set out and described are hereby vacated and any and all interest to the public shall revert to and be vested in the proper owners thereof.

APPROVED AND ADOPTED by a vote of 5 yeas, 0 nays, and 0 absent, of the Board of County Commissioners of Santa Rosa County, Florida, this 22nd day of March, 2012.

Incorrect Insertion Policy

For Classified In-column Advertisers

All ads placed by phone are read back to the advertiser to insure correctness. The newspaper will assume correctness at the time of the read-back procedure unless otherwise informed.

Please your ad.

Advertisers are requested to check the advertisement on the first insertion for correctness. Errors should be reported immediately.

Your Florida Freedom newspaper will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion, nor will it be liable for any error in advertisements to a greater extent than the cost of the space occupied by the error.

Any copy change, during an ordered schedule constitutes a new ad and new charges.

We do not guarantee position of ANY ad under any classification.

THE ONLY LITTER YOUR CAT SHOULD EVER HAVE

Every cat needs the kind of litter you pour in a litter box. So put it on your shopping list. But with so many surplus cans already in need of homes, please skip the liners of litter!
